LONDON

PUBLISHED BY WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, STRAND.

1847.

INDEX TO ENGRAVINGS IN VOL. XI.

NUMBERS 270 (JULY 3, 1847) TO 296 (JANUARY 1, 1848), BOTH INCLUSIVE.

No. 270, July 3, 1847.

Aphides on Apple, Hop, and Potato, 4
Arms: Lieut.-Gen. Sir H. Askew; Mr. Rawlinson; Adm. Sir R. Stopford, 4, 11
British Association Meeting at Oxford:
—— Convocation House, (Geological Section), 9
——Radcliffe Library (Evening Meeting), 9
——Randolph Gallery (Mathematical Section), 9
"English Merry-Making a Hundred Years Ago," by Frith, 8
Fashions, Paris, for July, 13
French Folly Fort, Canton River, 4
Gibraltar, Siege of, at the Surrey Zoological Gardens, 13
Jamar presented by the Queen to the Zoological Society, 5
July, by Kenny Meadows, 12
Oxford Castle, 13
Pheasants, Impeyan, 5
Plate presented to Sir H. Smith, 16
Pleasure Boats on the Serpentine, 1
"Presbyterian Catechism," 8
Rawlinson, The late Mr., the Police Magistrate, 4
St. Mark's New Church, St. John's Wood, 16
Swallow, White, shot in Suffolk, 5
"Washington," Steam-ship, 12

No. 271, July 10.

Arms: Earl of Lanesborough; Gen. Sir F. Maclean, 30
Balloon Descent, Perilous, 29
"Christian Church during the Pagan Persecution," by Pickersgill, 29
Installation, The, at Cambridge:
——Cambridge Railway Station, 21
——Duke of Wellington, arrival of, 24
——Fête at St. John's, 28
——Peel, Sir R., the Bishop of Oxford, &c., 24
——Prince-Chancellor entering Trinity Hall, 24
——Prince-Chancellor reading the Address to her Majesty, 25
——Prince Waldemar and Suite, 24
——Queen's Reception in Trinity Great Court, 21
——Queen entering Railway Carriage, 28
——Tottenham Green; Railway Pavilion, Interior and Exterior, 20
——St. John's, View from, at the Joint fête, 24
——Trinity College Gardens, 17
Pas de: Elèmens, by Rosati, Carlotta Grisi, and Cerito, 32
Smith, Sir Harry, his entrance into Whittlesea, 32

No. 272, July 17.

Cactus, New, from Real del Monte, 48
"Canopus," H.M.S., off Lisbon, 33
Colours, Old and New, Queen's Royals, 37
Crown Piece, The New, 48
Gibson's Statue of the Queen, 48
Holland House, South Front, 36
Installation at Cambridge:
—— Bridge, Trinity and St. John's, 45
—— Breakfast in Neville's Court, 44
—— Horticultural Fête at Downing, 45
—— Ode, Performance of, 44
—— Prince-Chancellor presenting Medal for Poem, 41
—— Royal Procession in the Senate House, 41
—— Royal Party on the Lawn of Catherine Hall, 45
—— Sketch at the Master of Trinity's, 45
Mirage, Extraordinary, at Ramsgate, 48
Pine-Apples, Great Sale of, 33
Presentation of New Colours to the Queen's Royals, at Gosport, 37
Westminster Hall Exhibition:
—— "Alfred inciting the Saxons," 40
—— "Burial of Harold at Waltham Abbey," 40

No. 273, July 24.

Blight on Wheat, Pea, Bean, and Potato Crops, 60
Coutts, Miss Burdett, Founding a New Church at Westminster, 49
—— Ibn Church, 56
—— Portrait of, 56
Gun-Cotton Explosion, Scene of, at Faversham, 54
Lough's Statue of Prince Albert, Royal Exchange, 61
Northampton Cross: Castle, 60
—— Railway Station; St. Sepulchre's Church; St. John's Hospital, 56
Oak Screen, by Lightning in Wimbledon Park, 61
Portrait of Miss Burdett Coutts, 56
Royal Agricultural Society of England: Emblematic Border, 57
Saturn, the Planet, 54
Warwick Castle, from the Avon, 52
—— Entrance, 53
—— Guy's Tower, 53
—— Beauchamp Chapel, 52, 53
—— Guy's Cliff, 52, 53
—— Statue, 53

No. 274, July 31.

Arms: Admiral Sir G. Martin: O'Connor Don; 71
Betlmal-green, New Church at, 77
City of London Election: the Liberal Candidates; the Conservative Candidates; 65
Fashions, Paris, for August, 80
Goodwood Prize Plate, 80
Humours of an Election:
——Candidates Canvassing, and Committee-room (6 Cuts), 73
Candidates, "Wooer," and Boardman (3 Cuts), 73
"I Masnadieri," Two Scenes from, 77
Lind, Mdlle. Jenny, in "I Masnadieri," 77
O'Connell's Remains at Havre, 76
Portraits:
—— Bevan, Mr.; Freshfield, Mr.; Johnson, Alderman; Larpent, Sir G.; Masterman, Mr.; Pattison, Mr.; Payne, Mr.; Rothschild, Baron; Russell. Lord John, 65
—— Rothschild, Baron, 76
Royal Agricultural Society of England Prizes:
—— Mares and Foals, 69
—— Oxen, Short-horns, Hereford, and Devon, 68
—— Southdowns; Stallion, 69
Starling Telegraph, The, 80
Tussaud Grass at Kew, 76

No. 275, August 7.

Archæological Institute, Meeting at Norwich:
—— Bellows in Museum, 85
—— Bishop of Norwich, 85
—— Bishop's Palace, Kitchen, and Wine Cellar, 83
—— Corporation Ewer, 85
Arms, Passage of, at Willis's Room, 93
Bearwood, near Reading, 84
Lumley Testimonial, The, 85, 95
"Macedonian," United States Frigate, 84
Metropolitan Election Sketches, by Kenny Meadows:
—— Middlesex Election: the Hustings at Brentford, 81
—— Cab Orator; Crowd at Hustings; Lady Canvasser; Show of Hands, 84
—— Marrow-bones and Cleavers; Popular Candidate; Unpopular Candidate; Thanking the Electors; Too late for the Poll, 89
Oyster-dredging in Whitstable Bay (2 Cuts), 93
Prize Poultry, Zoological Society: Ducks, Fowls, Geese, Partridges, Pigeons, 92
Walter, The late John, Bust of, 84

No. 276, August 14.

Archæological Institute, Meeting at Norwich:
—— Chain Mail, 100
—— Excursion to Burgh, 100
—— Norwich Castle, 100
—— Norwich Cathedral, 100
August, by Kenny Meadows, 109
Boat Race on the Thames, 109
Frascati; les Baines de Mer, 101
Napier's (Sir C.) Squadron in Plymouth Sound, 101
O'Connell's Funeral:
—— Burial in Glasnevin Cemetery, 108
—— Hearse, The, 97
—— Medallion Portrait, 104
—— Obsequies in Marlborough-street Chapel, 104
—— Procession at Dublin, 105
—— Passing Merrion-square, 108
—— Sea Chapel, 105
—— Sea-Chapel, Interior of, 105
—— Portraits of the Coombesses, 110
Westminster-Hall Exhibition:
—— "Reconciliation of Oberon with Titania," 112
—— Statues of Hampden, Clarendon, and Lord Falkland, 112

No. 277, August 21.

Arms: Col. Sir A. Christie; Lady E. Fortescue, 115
Ball Feat at Vauxhall, 128
Cobden, Mr., his Birth-place near Midhurst, 127
"Great Britain," Steam-ship:
—— Beginning to rise, 124
—— Bows, 124
—— Breakfaster's Breakwater, 124
—— Claxton's Breakwater, 124
—— Cutting Trench, 125
—— Shoot and Sluices, 125
—— Wedges and Sand-boxes, 125
"La Donna del Lago," Scene from, 128
Mexico, Sketches in: Guerillas; Travelling; Priests, 116
Pigeon's Wing Feathers, 126
"Pilgrim at the Obelisk of Sixtus V., at Rome," by Delaroche, 121
Planet, The New, 126
Queen's Marine Excursion:
—— Alisa Craig, 120
—— Carnarvon Castle, 120
—— Crwnad Vanni Boat, 121
—— Dartmouth Harbour, 113
—— Douglas Bay Tower of Refuge, 121
—— Scilly, Royal Squadron at, 120
Westminster Hall Exhibition: "Edward's Generosity at the Siege of Calais, 1346," 117

No. 278, August 28.

Arms: G. A. Fullerton, Esq.; General Sir G. Cockburn; 139
Brett and Little's Electric Telegraph (2 Cuts), 133
Fashions, Paris, for September, 140
Ferrara—the Castle, 132
Fire in Francis-street, Tottenham-court-road, 141
Keeley, Mr. and Mrs., in "The Dustman's Bells," 140
Nimrood Marbles at the British Museum; Second Arrival (5 Cuts), 144
Queen's Visit to Scotland: —— Arrival at Fort William, 129
—— Crinan Canal, 135
—— Dumbarton Castle, 136
—— Bromielaw, Glasgow, 133
—— Fingal's Cave, Royal Visit to, 137
—— Yachts, Royal, passing Dunally Castle, 133
—— Yachts, Royal, saluting off Tobermory, 133
—— Yachts, Royal, off Staffa, 137
Westminster Hall Exhibition: "The Parable of Forgiveness," 141

No. 279, September 4.

Balloon and Fireworks, from Vauxhall Gardens, 149
"Cricket," Steamer, The, 147
—— Explosion of, 148
—— Search for the Bodies, 148
—— Wreck of, 148
Praslin Tragedy, at Paris:
—— Ground Plan of Hotel, 152
—— Hotel Sebastiani—Garden front, 152
—— Hotel Sebastiani, Gate, 151
—— Hotel Sebastiani, Window, 151
—— Luxembourg Prison, 153
—— Plan of Duchess' Bed-chamber, 153
Queen in the Highlands:
—— Ardverekie Lodge, 156
—— Glennoe Pass, 159
—— Laggan Games (4 Cuts), 157
—— Scotch Bard before the Royal Family, 160
—— Young Macpherson, Prince of Wales, and Princess Royal, 156
Sheffield Athenæum and Mechanics' Institute, 149

No. 280, September 11.

Arms: Rev. Sir W. N. Gresley; Viscount Kenmure, 163
"Cymbeline," Scene from, 173
"Ganges," Steamer, The, 176
Kaffirland War: Caps Mounted Rifles, 161
Lobster-fishing (2 Cuts), 172
Lind, Jenny, Testimonial presented to, 176
"Melancholy," by Landelle, 189
New Zealand: Wellington—Te Aro Flat; Banks of the Hutt, 168
Pope Blessing the People, 164
—— borne in procession, 164
Portrait of Lieut. Munro, 173
Queen's Excursion to Scotland: Iona; Lady Rook and Druart Castle; 165
Smith, Sir H., Bust of, by Park, 165
Welton Church Struck by Lightning, 185

No. 281, September 18.

"Cricket" Steamer, after the Explosion, 187
Doncaster Prize Cup, 192
Shakspere and Stratford-upon-Avon:
—— Chamber in the House in Henley-street, 180
—— Charlecote Hall, 184
—— Grammar-School Room (two Views), 181
—— House in Henley-street, 180
—— Hathaway's Cottage at Shottery, 183
—— Holy Trinity Church (two Views), 185
—— "New Place," site, and the Guild Chapel, 185
—— Old Font, Holy Trinity Church, 184
—— School and Guildhall, 181
—— Tomb in Holy Trinity Chancel, 189
—— Tomb of Sir Thomas Lucy, 189
Stratford-upon-Avon from the Warwick-road, 177

No. 282, September 25.

Arms: Sir J. Burke, 199
Autumn, drawn by Harvey, 201
Caledonian Railway: Carlisle Central Station; Drye Sands Viaduct; Esk Viaduct; Woodhouse Tower, 205
Fashions, Paris, for October, 208
Lanercost Priory, from Elvan, 205
Langton, St. Andrew's Church at, 205
Queen's Return from Scotland; Reception at Fleetwood (2 Views), 200
—— Royal Yacht entering Fleetwood Harbour, 193
Shakspere's House, Sale of, 208
September, by Kenny Meadows, 205
Spain, Sketches in: Queen passing la Puerta del Sol; the Road to the Bull-fight, 196
Westminster Hall Exhibition: Prince of Wales (Henry V.) Trying on the Crown, 197

No. 283, October 2.

Altitude and Azimuth Instrument, New, at Greenwich Observatory, 221
Arms: Sir J. B. Rosamond, 211
Crabbe, the Poet, Monument to, 220
Eclipse of the Sun, October 9 (3 Cuts), 224
Florence, Political Demonstration at, 209
Font, New, at St. John's Church, Westminster, 220
Knowsley, Festivities at: Rustic Sport; Grand Ball, 216
Mexico, War in: Cavalry Escort; Gentleman; Muleteer; Public-house, 217
Milan, Emeute in, 212
Portrait of Charles Albert, King of Sardinia, 212
—— Ferdinand, Emperor of Austria, 212
Prince Albert founding the Portsmouth Hospital, 220
Prince Albert landing at the Albert Pier, Portsea, 220
Shrimping, off the Bligh, 213
Smith, Sir Harry, Departure for the Cape, 213

No. 284, October 9.

Arms: Sir G. Phillips; Sir R. Robinson, 231
Borneo, Natives of, 233
—— Hoisting the British Flag at Labuan, 233
—— Weapons, 233
"Girl and the Lamb," by Backer, 232
Harvest Hymn, 1847, 240
Marlborough-street Police-office, 236
Portrait of Mr. Brooke, Governor of Labuan, 233
Railway Carriages, Improved (4 Cuts), 237-238
Rabbit Netting, in Epping Forest, 236
Russian Courier, 225
Swinehead, Lincolnshire, 237
—— Danish Encampment at, 237
Suez Canal: French Engineers' Survey, 235
Wall Painting, Ancient, at Leicester, 231
Windsor Castle: Grand Chamber, 229
—— North-west View, 228
—— Queen's Private Dining-room, 229
—— State Aparte ent—Vandyck Room, 228

No. 285, October 16.

Arms: W. Coulthart, Esq., Sir Robert Gordon, 243
Aurochs presented to the Zoological Society by the Emperor of Russia, 241
"Banshee," mail-steamer, 252
Beacon, New Safety, on the Goodwin Sands, 253
Bride Cake at Trentham, 249
Canoe found in the Clyde, 233
Chantilly: the Hippodrome; the Race, 244
Dorothea, a Statuette, by Bell, 253
Drury-lane Theatre re-decorated, 253
Eclipse, the Great -olar, 250
Munich, Volkes Fasts at, 254
Panic, The: Bill Discounter; City Lawyer; Corn Speculator; Deputation to the Minister; "More Railway Calls," 256
Trentham, the seat of the Duke of Sutherland, Gardens at, 248
—— Church, Marriage Procession, 249
Trevose Head Lighthouse, 252
Tyrolean and Bavarian Costumes, 246

No. 286, October 23.

Arms: Sir T. Pigott, 259
Bombay Races at Aboo, 272
"Britannia" Steam-ship leaving Boston, 273
Clearing-house in Lombard-street, 264
Going to Church, by Bendeman, 265
Helmet, New, for the Heavy Dragoons, 269
Lyceum Theatre, re-decorated, 268
Madrid: Arrival of Queen Christina at the Palace, 257
Malta and the Port of Valetta, 260
"Numa in the Grotto of Egeria," by Howard, 265
Portrait of Cardinal Ferretti, 260
—— Gibson, the Sculptor, 261
—— Vestris, Madame, in the "Pride of the Market," 264
—— Worth, Major-General, 260
"Pride of the Market," Scene from, 269
Rome: Palace of the Prince of Canino, 261
Royal Exchange: Merchants' Walk, 259
Statue of Mr. Hutchinson, in the Liverpool Exchange, 251
Walsall Church, Gas Explosion in, 269

No. 287, October 30.

Aurora Borealis on Oct. 24; 288
Bustard, Great, at the Zoological Society's Gardens, 284
East Anglian Railway: Port of Lynn and Harbour Branch; Ouse Viaduct, 276
Ely, View of: Ely Station, 277
Fashions, Paris, for November, 288
Fretherne New Church, 285
Gutta Percha Plant, The, 288
Lillipitian Locomotive Engine, 285
Mosquito: Ring in Council; Family of Wolwa Indians, 281
November Country Scenes (2 Cuts), 284
Prince of Wales and Princess Royal at Windsor, 289
Princess Helena at Windsor, 280
Railway Chapel on the South Wales Line, 285
Stock Exchange, Interior of, 273
Sutton Courtney Abbey, 285
—— Church, 285
Tapir at the Zoological Gardens, 284

No. 288, November 6.

Berne, Political Demonstration at, 289
Fribourg; Panoramic View of, 296
Hartlepool Lighthouse, 301
Jones, Sir John, Statue of, 301
Meet of her Majesty's Buckhounds at Salt Hill, 300
Military Mass before the Sonderbund Troops, 296
Money Pressure, The: Bank Restriction; Bill for Payment; Noting a Bill; Run upon a Bank; Three Million Relief, 304
New Zealand: Putikiwaranui Pah, 293
—— Wanganui, the scene of the late conflict, 293
Nottingham New General Post-Office, 309
Rome: Benediction of the Municipal Banners, 292
—— Reading of the Motu Proprio, 292
Walker's Patent Hydraulic Engine, 301
Wombwell's Menagerie, Royal Visit to, 297
—— at Windsor Castle, 297

No. 289, November 13.

Allan Fot, Settle, Yorkshire, 315
Arms: Archbishop of York; Countess Cornwallis; Denis Mahon, Esq.; Sir N. L. Peacock, 315
Liverpool Exchange Buildings, 320
Lord Mayor's Day: Bringing the Baron of Beef into Guildhall, 308
—— Carving "the Baron," 308
—— City Arms, 308
Lord Mayor's Feast: Roasting the Baron of Beef, 305
—— Portrait of, 309
Portrait of the late Dr. Mendelssohn, 316
Portraits of the Prince of Wales, 313
Portrait of Right Hon. J. K. Hooper, Lord Mayor, 309
—— Sandilla, the Kaffir Chief, 320
"Prince of Wales' Lady," illustrated, 317
"Saville of Haysted," Scene from, 316
Shield, Baptismal, presented to the Prince of Wales, 319

No. 290, November 20.

"Camp of Silesia," Scene from the, 333
Punchau, Madeira, 325
—— Governor's House at, 325
Funeral of the Archbishop of York, 324
—— Mendelssohn, at Leipsig, 324
Galloway's Rotary Steam-Engine (2 Cuts), 336
Plate presented to the Secretary of the Lincolnshire Agricultural Society, 333
Portrait, Parliamentary: Mr. G. C. Glyn, 325
"Professor's Lady," illustrated, 332
Public Record Office Site, 336
Reception of the King of Sardinia at Genoa, 321
Schwantaler's Statue, at Bavaria, 332
Sisters, The, by a German Artist, 329
South Sea Whale-fishing, 329
South Sea Islanders at Sydney, 333
Suspension Bridge at Perth, 328
Typhoon in the China Seas, 323

No. 291, November 27.

Amiens Station, Paris and Boulogne Railway, 341
Church, New Congregational, Kentish Town, 341
—St. Mary Orrele, Remains, 349
Epsom New Clock Tower, 348
Fashions, Paris, for December, 349
Fribourg, from an original sketch, 340
Lucerne, Panorama of, 340
Parliament, The New:
—Commons Members at the Bar of Lords, 337
—Commons taking the Oaths, 344
—Introduction to the Speaker, 344
—Peers taking the Oaths, 345
—Reading of the Speech, 345
Portraits, Parliamentary: Mr. Shafto Adair, 341; Mr. Heywood, 344; Earl of Yarborough, 345
"Professor's Lady," illustrated, 349
Siamese Boat on the Serpentine, 348
Simpson's Submerged Propeller (3 Cuts), 352
Tidal Mill (2 Cuts), 353

No. 292, December 4.

Fashions, Winter (9 Cuts), 372
"George's Farm," Grendon Underwood, Bucks (2 Views), 369
Grand Procession of the Consulta, at Rome, 369
North-Western Railway: the Great Circular Engine-House at Camden Town, 370
"Philip Van Artevelde," Scene from, 373
Portrait, Parliamentary: Mr. James Wilson, 369
—— Sicilian Insurgents, 376
"Professor's Lady," illustrated, 370
Strata Florida Abbey, 372
Trent Valley Railway: Avon Viaduct; Rugeley Station; Shugborough Park, Tunnel; Tamworth Station, 368
War in Switzerland:
Fribourg, from the Ralkhans, 364
Fribourg, from the Grand Place, 364
——Federal Troops entering, 364
Winter Fashions (9 Cuts), 372

No. 293, December 11.

Archbishop of York's Election (2 Cuts), 384
"Bride of Lammermoor," Scene from, 388
Electro-Magnetic Heat and Cold Detector, 379
Foreign Cattle (Spanish and German), 381
Foreign Sheep (Spanish and German), 380
Lincolnshire Grass-fed Oxen, 381
——Sheep, 381
Portrait: Dorus Gras, Madame, as "Lucia," 388
——Reeves, Mr., as "Edgardo," 388
"Professor's Lady," illustrated, 387
Shakspere Groups: "Falstaff and Shallow;" "Henry IV., Death of;" "Launce and Speed;" Story of Prospero," 389
Smithfield Club Prize Cattle Show:
Polleine's Scaindewp, 385
——Hereford Ox, 385
——Hitchman's Sheep, 385
——Lord Radnor's Ox, 377
——Leicester Sheep, 385
——Manning's Ox, 385
——Prince Albert's Ox, 377
——Smith's Ox, 385
——Southdown Sheep, 385
——Agricultural Implements: Busby's Plough; Coleman's Harrow; Corner's Chaffcutter; Gilbert's Sackholder; Hedge's Threshing Machine; Henhall's Plough; Mealworth's Steaming Apparatus; Prady's Crimotinrator, 393

No. 294, December 18.

American Vessel on fire off Weymouth, 397
Arms: Burton, Judge, 403; Duncombe, T., Esq., 404; Gardiner, Lady, 404; Montfort, Lady, 404; Rogers, Sir J. L., 403
Civic Guard-house at Rome, 396
Coal-whipping, 400
Commercial Travellers' Schools, Wanstead, 397
Health of Towns Association Meeting, 393
Hussite Sermon, by Lessing, 401
Indian Lock, 397
Ipswich New Museum, 408
"Lady Kennaway," towed by Danish Ships, 401
"Professor's Lady," illustrated, 405
Portrait, Parliamentary: Mr. J. Reynolds, 397
——Dalbiac, The late Sir C., 405
——Liston, The late Mr., 404
——Rajah of Sattara, 404
"Revolution House," Whittington, 408
Rotary Steam-engine (2 Cuts), 408
Royal Academy Prize:
—— Painting: Prize of Benjamin Sebting their Brides, 400
—— Sculpture: Murder of the Innocents, 400
Soyer's Miniature Kitchen (2 Cuts), 405
St. George's Brewery, Whitechapel, 408
Zurich, Panorama of, 396

No. 295, December 25.

"Adoration of the Shepherds," after Rembrandt, 420
Arms: Mentzath, Sir G., 411
Christmas Carol, 413
—— Children's Party, 412
—— Crackers and Picture Jokes, 424
—— Family Party, 409
—— Initial, 409
—— Merry, by Meadows, 417
—— Old, by Harvey, 416
—— Return Home—"Good Night," 413
—— Snap-Dragon, 412
"Professor's Lady," illustrated, 424

No. 296, January 1, 1848.

"A Happy New Year!" by Kenny Meadows, 429
Arms: Dudley, Earl of Harrowby, 435
Country Dance, The, 432
Fashions, Paris, for January, 438
Frescoes in the New House of Lords:
Edward III. Conferring the Order of the Garter on Edward the Black Prince, 425; Spirit of Religion, 425
"Friar Rush; or, Harlequin and King Gold," Scene from, 433
"Golden Branch," Scene from, 433
"Professor's Lady," illustrated, 437
"Ringing the Old Year Out and the "New Year In," 434
Song, A New Year's, illustrated, 440
Twelfth Night Characters—1848: Alderman Gobble; Beau Whippersnapper; Captain Blunderbuss; Duchess of Daffodils; Farmer Mangelwurtzel; King; Lady Blunderstocking; Lord Goldlace; Miss Caroline Coquette; Mons. François Parlez-vous; Nelly Violet; Queen; Peter Pumpwat-r; Patrick O'Tater; Royal Beefeater, 436, 437
Westminster Play—the Epilogue, 428
"World Underground," Scene from, 433

THE GETTY CENTER LIBRARY

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 270.—Vol. XI.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JULY 3, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE FRENCH MINISTRY.

DURING the last few weeks, and at the present moment, France is filled with rumours respecting its Government, that appear to be every day sinking "the system" of Louis Philippe lower and lower in the estimation of the people. The dynasty of 1830 has hitherto been supported by a general impression among the monied and trading classes that it was a "safe Government"—prudent, cautious; as tyrannical, perhaps, as the régime it superseded, but disguising its oppressions with more tact and cleverness. Charles the Tenth signed his mad ordinances without knowing how many troops there were in the neighbourhood of Paris to back them: he committed a blunder. Louis Philippe signs no ordinances; but he has encircled Paris with forts, imprisons more editors, mulcts the journals in heavier fines, and sets public opinion as much at defiance as any of the old Bourbons in the most palmy days of their power. His whole reign, from its beginning to the present hour, has exhibited too much cleverness and trick to be respected: it has been the supremacy of cunning. For nearly twenty years has a great nation, and all its interests, material and moral, been sacrificed to a miserable, almost morbid, and, in a Monarch, contemptible nepotism. To see policy, treaties, sacrifices of treasure, all directed to the mean purpose of "providing for my family," is enough to disgust those who believe that the Ruler of a State has higher duties, and should have higher aims, than a plebeian tuft-hunter fishing for a good connection, or a stock-jobber speculating "for the rise," that his balance at his banker's may show a cipher the more. Paternal love is a beautiful feeling; but, in common life, it is not admitted as a plea in defence of crime and breach of trust. The trust undertaken by a Monarch is the greatest of all; and it is the highest of crimes in him to abuse it, even though it be done that "his children may be Kings." The historian of the reign of Louis Philippe will have to record a long application of great resources to the gaining of petty ends; to speak of France depressed, that Princes might be dowered at home, or wedded abroad at the risk of the peace of the world, and with certain injury to the well-being of millions.

It could not but come to pass that the example of the Monarch—self-seeking, avaricious even to sordidness, and unscrupulous in word and act, when a point was to be gained—should operate upon his Ministers; it is not too bold an assertion to say that no great statesman could hold power under the King of the French; he has never had a Minister who held his place a day beyond the period at which he could not or would not be a mere instrument of the King's family and pecuniary aggrandisement. The King's safety, the King's interest, were the first things to be secured; the welfare of the people might be neglected, if that was done. The moment Thiers compromised the Government abroad, he was dismissed; the moment Guizot becomes useless at home, he will be dismissed; and neither Thiers nor Guizot has ever ventured to originate any great measures of internal improvement. The post of Minister has been little more than an agency for the "head of the house" in the Tuileries, who was not to be disturbed by changes in the policy of the firm: the agent had only to keep things as they were in the home department, and be ready to defend any questionable stroke of trade on the part of his principal, and he might waste the capital, and mortgage the resources of the concern, almost at pleasure, provided a due share of the loans and credits went into the Royal strong box, or was paid to the account of "the family." The consequence has been, that the clerks and servants, as a body, have become demoralised; and it is only by a quarrel among the bribe payers and bribe receivers, that a part of the corruptions have come to light.

We shall not plunge into all the maze of venality, to which even those on the spot do not seem to have a perfect clue. Honours bought and sold—titles bartered for political and literary support—privileges, commercial and theatrical, bargained for, and bestowed for a price—all these things inspire as much contempt for those who buy, as those who sell them; they are exposed more from anger than honesty; if the mean traffic had succeeded, the world would have heard nothing about it. But the affectation of the political virtues, the cant about freedom, and liberty, and progress, under which servility, and oppression, and fraud are concealed—that is what disgusts: and it is afflicting, too, when we consider that a great and high-spirited nation is weighed down by the "system," and is placed between two necessities—that of bearing it, or shaking it off by a national convulsion; involving perils that make present evils preferred.

PLEASURE-BOATS ON THE SERPENTINE.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

We do not suspect Guizot, the somewhat austere Genevese, of the vulgar vices of inferior minds, that are unable to resist the opportunities of office. But all his severe political morality cannot exempt him from the influence of the means by which a French Minister can alone sustain himself. First, he must serve the King; next, he has a Chamber elected by a constituency, which, for a population of thirty-five millions, is the mere mockery of a representation. The King is powerful; the people is legally and constitutionally weak: between the King and the people are the two Chambers almost entirely governed and swayed by the immense number of offices and places in the gift of the Crown. Under these circumstances, a Minister may affect political purity, and "praise the lean and sallow abstinence" from official gains, as much as he will; individually, he may practice what he preaches; but he must connive at corruption in others: he must subdue his nature to the element he works in, and rule by the influences nearest his hand. He cannot appeal to free principles; it would not suit "the system;" he can seek no support from great masses of public opinion; its expression is proscribed and forbidden; he must lackey the power above him as the first condition of his official existence, and he must buy support from those who have it to sell, as the second. If he is very scrupulous, like Guizot, he may permit it to be bought for him, and use the article without recognising the purchase of it. The age, even in France, seems to require a little hypocrisy. When our close borough system was in its fullest vigour, and the House of Lords nominated the majority of the House of Commons as certainly as the Peers appointed their own footmen, Walpole openly governed by money and offices; he bought votes with Crown patronage, and acknowledged it. In England, the Aristocracy was all-powerful; the Crown, scarce settled after a revolution, and not safe from a rebellion, was weak; in France, at the present day, the Crown is predominant, the Aristocracy weak, the Constituencies small, servile, and dependent; they are bribed by petty offices to elect, the elected are bribed by larger offices to vote, and their votes keep the Ministers in power with all the forms of a free and Constitutional Government: the arrangement is perfectly understood, and the spirit of the representative system has as little to do with it as it had with the power of Walpole in England in the first half of the last century. The one check in France is that vast mass of public opinion existing outside the narrow circle of the Franchise; and as political agitation is not permitted, that opinion, when it is roused to action, has only one mode of expressing itself—it loads muskets and builds barricades.

It did so seventeen years ago, changed a dynasty, and got a Citizen King. Louis Philippe has never forgot the lesson he learned from his own success; he no sooner rose on the violence of Republicanism, than he began to repress it. Those who placed him on the Throne with so little ceremony, thought they could shake him from it with still less; and while he was settling himself in his seat, the King favoured the delusion. He played the Bourgeoise, and acted the part to perfection; with his broad hat and his large umbrella he paced the Boulevards, and shook hands with patriotic bankers and "free and independent" grocers; he was all smiles and humility, the thorough good citizen, the perfect family man. The greetings in the market place were part of his rôle; and who would have dreamed that in the brain covered by that commonplace beaver, there lurked even then the idea of fourteen "detached forts," and an enceinte continuée? Little by little he showed what was in him; the Republicans found they had got a master, not a servant, and their rage was intense in proportion to the degree to which they had duped themselves. Fighting would not undo what fighting had done; so satires, songs, epigrams, caricatures showered, with all the spirit of wit sharpened by hatred. Never was King so libelled; the walls of Paris were covered with grotesque drawings of the "old Pear," which men swore they would eat; but they did not—on the contrary, the old Pear eat them! He has sucked and sucked millions on millions out of them; the nation has physically sunk since the Revolution of July; all its material interests are neglected; the navy is decreasing, stores are purloined, misapplied, or rotting; railways are more backward than even among the Germans, that slowest and most divided of people. Postal reform, commercial reform—nothing is done in them; the public revenues are anticipated, the annual deficit is great and increasing; nothing seems to prosper but the King and his family; he heaps up gold in all the banks, and marries his children among all the Royalties of Europe. There is scarcely a State from which he has not drawn large dividends, and sent it a son or a daughter. Is he avenging on the French people the execution of his father and the exile of his race, by making them pay for its re-establishment in more than its former splendour? Certainly of the great duty of a ruler—the sacrifice of private feelings and advantages, for the good of all, that consciousness of the obligations of the kingly office, which was felt by a Frederick the Great, and even by a Louis the Eleventh—he has no idea. His purse and his family are his first thoughts; his kingdom is but the means by which the one may be filled and the other aggrandised. As the master is, so are the servants; the Cubières, and Testes, and Girardins are the natural produce of "the system," which perhaps they may help to destroy by exposing its rottenness.

PLEASURE-BOATS ON THE SERPENTINE.

THE formation of the sheet of water, known as "the Serpentine River," originated in the tasteful consideration of a Queen for the recreation of the people; and this in times when concessions were not so frequently made as in our day. In the reign of George the Second, Queen Caroline threw a string of ponds in Hyde Park into one, so as to form what is called "the Serpentine River," from its being not exactly straight, as all ponds and canals were before. "The Serpentine" is, indeed, in the form of a pig's alleligram, and was formed between 1730 and 1733, under the direction of Messrs. Withers and Kimberly, by order of the Queen. Of late years, the bank has been much improved: the road on the north side is now the fashionable afternoon drive; and the station of the Humane Society here is an architectural ornament; the boat-house, too, is a bit of the picturesque. The east end has not been neglected; and, at the west end, some twenty years since, an elegant and costly stone bridge was erected from the designs of the Messrs. Rennie. The ready communication by this means with Kensington Gardens is, likewise, a well planned accommodation.

"The Serpentine," as the reader well knows, has been a favourite resort, both in summer and winter. But, within the past month, a Minister, who is known to have the recreations of the people at heart, has consented to "the Serpentine" being made the medium of popular gratification, in a novel fashion. Lord Morpeth (as Chief Commissioner of the "Woods and Forests"), in the present dearth of employment for watermen on the Thames, has granted permission to some of them to ply and let boats on the Serpentine, on every day during the week, except Sunday, but not during the hours set apart for bathing. Regulations have been issued, with the Lordship's signature, which provide that no party shall exceed six, including children. Each boat to be provided with a life-buoy or cork cushion. The fares are to be 2s. an hour, and no hiring for less than an hour, except to cross the river, for which the fare is to be 6d. for three persons, or 1s. for more than three.

Our Illustration shows "the River," with the new appointments; as well as some of the late improvements upon its banks.

LOSS OF AN EMIGRANT SHIP AND NEARLY TWO HUNDRED PASSENGERS.—The Caroline, of Sunderland, Captain Thomson, master, was chartered for Irish emigrants by Lord Palmerston, early in April last, and sailed from Cork towards the close of the month with nearly 200 on board. In so far as wind and weather were concerned, the voyage was at first prosperous, but there was much fever among the passengers. The vessel encountered a strong gale on the night of the 19th of May, and was driven about two o'clock next morning on a dangerous shoal about sixty miles east of Cape Rosaire, and went to pieces in the course of two hours. Not more than twenty-two of the two hundred passengers escaped; the crew were saved. The vessel is stated to have been fully insured.

ACCIDENT TO THE MARQUIS OF LONDONDERRY.—The Marquis of Londonderry was thrown from his horse on Saturday last in Chesham-place, and received some severe bruises. We are happy to learn, however, that the noble Marquis is gradually recovering from the effects of the accident.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

Paris has been excited this week with another scandale. M. de Girardin now accuses M. Cunin Gridaine, Minister of Commerce, of having corruptly accepted 500 definitive shares from one of the candidate companies for the concession of the Great Northern Railway, and various indiscretions are suspected in the matter on the subject. Messrs. Cubières, Teste, Parmentier, and Pellapra were interrogated, on Monday, by President Legagneur, one of the members of the commission of the Peers, appointed to assist the Chancellor. The accused, it appears, indulge in unmeasured attacks and recriminations against each other.

The Chamber of Deputies has been occupied in discussing the usual grants to the Royal Theatres of Paris, and some amusing parliamentaries were made in reference to the subject. In spite of some opposition, the Académie Royale de Musique secured its 620,000f.; the Théâtre Français was favoured with 100,000f., in addition to its 200,000f.; and the Odéon retained possession of 100,000f. M. de Lavalette reckoned at about 9,000,000f. the annual receipts of the Paris theatres, which, whatever may have been the number of the theatres (and there are now near twenty), would appear for many years past to have averaged about the same amount.

The following is the value of the assistance afforded to their theatres by the principal cities of France:—Marseilles, with an ordinary revenue of 3,700,000f., gives 100,000f. to its theatre; Bordeaux, with a revenue of 2,500,000f., gives 90,000f.; Lyons, with 3,700,000f., gives 83,000f.; Toulouse, with 1,650,000f., gives 60,000f.; Rouen, with 2,200,000f., gives 60,000f.; and Strasbourg, with 1,100,000f., 40,000f.

Among the casuries of Paris may be mentioned a report of a resolve of the young and beautiful Princess La Tremouille to appear on the stage! Every effort it is said has been used to dissuade her—but in vain. She persists in her determination to make a début at the Théâtre Français, in one of Rachel's parts, on the day that she becomes of age.

The Paris papers contain long reports of the proceedings in the Court of Peers against General Cubières and MM. Teste, Parmentier, and Pellapra.

The Court has decided that they will proceed to judgment, and the trial is to commence on Monday next.

There was some fool-hardy of an alarming character last Saturday at Mulhouse, an important town in the Department of the Upper Rhine, the pretext of which was the high price of bread. The crowd visited successively the bakers' shops and the wine shops, which they pillaged. During the pillage of a baker's shop, after reiterated summons to disperse had been given without result, the Lieutenant-Colonel of the 48th Light Infantry, who commanded the detachment, finding himself assailed by stones, ordered his troops to fire. Three or four persons were killed. The Lieutenant-Colonel was seriously wounded in the face. Numerous arrests were made.

A serious accident occurred, at half-past five in the morning of yesterday week, on the St. Etienne and Lyons Railway, by the want of foresight of one of the keepers in the tunnel of Couzon, near Rive de Gier. Two trains of waggons, one of which was drawn by a locomotive, were descending the incline, ran into each other in the middle of the tunnel. The shock was terrible, and two men who directed the locomotive were killed instantaneously. Another man was thrown to the roof of the tunnel, and killed. A great number of waggons, and the tender of the locomotive, were smashed.

THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO.

The Hibernia arrived at Liverpool on Monday with New York papers to the 15th ult. There is no domestic news of interest from the United States, but the commercial advices are said to be very favourable. One of the papers states that money was abundant, business active, and everything flourishing. Nothing of consequence has taken place in Mexico. The latest advices from the seat of war, which come down to the 29th of May, state that Santa Anna entered the capital, and assumed the duties of President on the 19th. The populace immediately assembled, and showered curses, and even stones, upon him. He escaped with difficulty, protected by his friends, seeking an asylum in the palace. The people were only prevented by an armed force and the police from dragging him through the streets. Subsequent to this, we learn that he had resigned the Presidentship; but it was not known whether Congress had accepted his resignation or not.

THE OVERLAND MAIL.

The Bombay Mail of the 20th May has arrived. It does not bring any additional news from China, and in regard to India, the chief intelligence is that matters have at length reached a crisis in the Nizam's dominions. The Nizam's regular troops (Line Wallahs) have been thrown into open mutiny, to the number of 19,000 or 13,000, and it has been necessary, though much against the inclination of the infatuated Prince, to march a British force into Hyderabad, and occupy the palace of the Minister Seraj-ool-Mookk.

The mutineers at first thought of resistance at one of the gates, but they, after some parleying, were safe to be disposed to accept all the arrears due to them, and to submit to be disbanded.

From Scinde, there is no remarkable intelligence. Sir Charles Napier was at Kurrachee. The troops throughout the whole of that country are healthy.

The Governor-General remains at Simla; and would, it was calculated, paralyse all political movements for a few months. It had begun in the south of India.

Chief Justice Sir David Pollock was in a very dangerous condition.

Commercial matters, at Bombay and Calcutta, present no feature of particular importance: in fact, little or no change had taken place since the previous mails were dispatched from those Presidencies.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

PRIVATE BUSINESS.—The House was almost entirely occupied with a motion of Lord BROUGHAM, for the appointment of a Commission, founded on certain resolutions he had propounded on the 4th of May of last year, with the view of remodelling the system pursued in private bills, regarding which his apprehension, that, after having had a Lack-learning, a Habeas Corpus, and a Long, they were now about to have a Railway Parliament.—After some observations from Lord REDESDALE, in defence of the purity of the Committees appointed on railway bills in that house, the Duke of RICHMOND, followed by the Marquis of LANSDOWNE, suggested the withdrawal of the motion; but it was ultimately put and negatived without a division.

The Bishopric of Manchester Bill was read a third time and passed.

The House then adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

MR. MACGREGOR.—Lord J. RUSSELL, in answer to Mr. DUNCOMBE, stated that Mr. Macgregor had intimated his intention of resigning his office at the Board of Trade if he succeeded in carrying his election for Glasgow.

THE WELLINGTON STATUE.—In answer to numerous questions from Lord G. BENTINCK, Lord J. RUSSELL said the vote for the cost of the Wellington Statue would not be taken till the correspondence was in the hands of members; but he could not agree with the noble Lord that the vote of £6000 for that pedestal should be taken out of its order. Of course, if it was brought forward at an unreasonably late period of the evening, that would be a good ground for delay. For the rest, he thought that the admirers of the Duke of Wellington ought to wish that this Statue should be placed in a position that was not so out of all taste as at present.

THE RAILWAYS IRELAND (No. 2) BILL.

On the motion that the Railways (Ireland) (No. 2) Bill be read a second time,

Sir W. MOLESWORTH objected, and moved as an amendment that it be read a second time that day three months. The bill proposed to give a positive premium to certain Irish railways, to the exclusion of all others, not only in Ireland, but throughout the empire, equal in amount to the difference between the rate of interest the Government paid from that by the proposed bill, and that which they would have been compelled to pay had they gone into the Money Market and raised there what they required. Besides, why should any favour be shown at the expense of the public to Irish railways, which was not to be equally extended to railways in England and Scotland?

MR. WILLIAMS seconded the amendment, and

Lord J. RUSSELL said that the proposition put forward by Sir W. Molesworth, grounded on the opposition of the Government to the proposition of Lord George Bentinck, at the commencement of the session, was at best but superficial. That bill was opposed because the Government did not think it right in the then state of the public finances to pledge the House to an expenditure of no less a sum than £16,000,000. That, however, did not pledge the Government or the House that they would open and keep open the doors of the Treasury under circumstances, and advance money for the encouragement of Irish railways. It could not be denied that there was great peril to the potato crop in Ireland this year, and, should it fail, it was requisite to make some preparation to meet the evil.

MR. ROEBUCK opposed the bill, and maintained that we might as well encourage the construction of railways in New Zealand as in Ireland. He asserted that the growing crops of potatoes gave conspicuous signs of disease; and said that the speech of the noble Lord quite alarmed him, for it now appeared that his plan was much more extensive than that proposed by Lord George Bentinck.

Lord G. BENTINCK said that the speech of the hon. and learned gentleman and the noble Lord which created most alarm in the mind of Mr. Roebuck, was precisely the portion of that speech which he hailed with the greatest pleasure. He was in a great measure dissuaded from proposing any amendment to the effect that particular advances should be made to other railways in Ireland, believing the speech of the noble Lord to be a pledge that as soon as other railways should have placed themselves in a similar position to the Great Southern and Western they would be similarly entitled to the aid of the Government. He was quite prepared to defend the plan of the Government, and to stand or fall by the economy of the scheme, which rested on the assumption that the immigration of Irish labourers, and the consequent competition in the labour market, leading to a general reduction of the wages of the agriculturist. From all the accounts he received from Ireland he had no fear of the failure of the potato crop this year, and was not, therefore, alarmed by the picture drawn by Mr. Roebuck of the gloomy prospects before us.

The discussion upon the bill was carried on for a considerable time, but it did not present any remarkable point.

Upon a division, the numbers were—

For the second reading of the Bill	..	..	175
Against it ..	..	..	62
Majority ..	..	..	—113

The bill was, therefore, read a second time.

The House was "counted out" at one o'clock in the morning, by Colonel SIBTHORP.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

THE POOR LAW ADMINISTRATION BILL.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE moved the second reading of this bill.

Lord BROUGHAM admitted that the New Poor Law had failed in some respects, but said it was highly important that it should not go out to the country that the House had in any way indicated any desire not to hold by the main principles of the New Poor Law.

The second reading was agreed to.

BATHS AND WASH-HOUSES BILL.

The House having gone into Committee on this bill, and a new clause having been proposed,

Lord CAMPBELL stated the object of the clause in this bill which was objected to. The clause proposed the establishment of baths for persons superior to the lowest class of poor, who would have to pay sixpence for each bath, and thus he believed in almost every parish the baths might be made remunerative. He thought those owners of baths who had petitioned the House were under a false alarm, as it was not at all intended that those who now paid two shillings and sixpence for a hot bath, and one shilling for a cold one, would enter public baths of the description proposed to be erected by this bill. There would be no sort of competition between them. The price for a hot bath under this bill would be sixpence, and that for a cold, threepence.

After some opposition from Lord MONTEAGLE, the clause was agreed to, and at seven o'clock the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

There not being forty members present at four o'clock, an adjournment, of course, took place till Wednesday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

SUSPENSION OF THE NAVIGATION LAWS.—When the House met at twelve o'clock, Lord G. BENTINCK complained of the inaccuracy of certain returns presented relative to the quantity of corn imported from foreign ports since the suspension of the Navigation Laws.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER and Lord J. RUSSELL defended the general correctness of the returns, the noble Lord stating that even should it appear that the amount of corn imported was overstated, he should still consider it necessary to propose the further Suspension of the Navigation Laws until the 1st of March, 1848.

A conversation then arose upon the subject of the Report of the Relief Commissioners for Ireland, which condemned the conduct of many of the Relief Committees, who were charged with impropriety in the administration of the funds for the relief of the destitute poor.—Mr. LABOUCHERE said it was true that the Commissioners had been thwarted in the performance of their duties but, under the peculiar circumstances, he did not advise the House to enter upon an inquiry which would lead to disastrous results.

Mr. T. DUNCOMBE, at the suggestion of Sir G. GREY, who stated that inquiries were already going on with a view to the prevention of accidents, withdrew the Mines and Collieries Bill, as also the Lunatics Bill, which stood for a second reading.

THE WELLINGTON STATUE.

An interesting conversation ensued relative to the Wellington Statue. We, therefore, give it entire.

Lord G. BENTINCK: I wish to ask a question of the noble Lord, which will interest every man, from the peer to the peasant, respecting the Wellington memorial. It is, whether the noble Lord and her Majesty's Government have not strong reason for knowing that the removal of the statue from the arch, and the erection of it in front of her Majesty's grant of the site for it, will be in a high degree distasteful to, if it be not felt as an indignity by, that illustrious personage, whose great military deeds it was intended by those who subscribed to that memorial to commemorate.

Lord J. RUSSELL: I certainly received information from a gentleman, who called on me in Downing-street, that the Duke had strongly expressed to him by letter, that the removal of the statue would be considered by others as injurious to his reputation. That letter was written a considerable time ago—I believe in February. Since that time her Majesty has been pleased to order not only that a more fitting pedestal should be erected for the statue, whenever this House shall grant the funds for it, but also that the arch, wherever it shall be erected, shall be ornamented after the more approved manner in which triumphal arches are now formerly ornamented. I think these ornaments shall be in honour of the Duke of Wellington, whose triumphs it is intended to commemorate. That being the case, I cannot suppose that the Duke of Wellington entertains any longer those feelings which he entertained in February. (Hear.)

Lord G. BENTINCK: I beg leave to ask the noble Lord whether, since the letter of the noble Duke, to which the noble Lord referred, was written, he had reason to know that the feelings of that illustrious individual remained unchanged?

Lord J. RUSSELL: Since the communication made by my noble friend, I have had no intimation of what the feelings of the Duke of Wellington on the subject are, and, in fact, I do not myself believe them to be such as the noble Lord states. However, it is always in the power of any one to ask the Duke of Wellington a question on any subject, and he always answers it with candour. My belief is, that his wish is that her Majesty and Parliament should consider what they think would be most in honour of the Duke of Wellington. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. WAKLEY said that he had considerable intercourse with the public, and he believed that the public wish was, that the statue should remain where it was. ("Hear, hear," and "No, no.") He entertained no doubt at all that the wish of the public was almost universal in favour of the statue remaining where it was. It was offensive, he believed, to the classical taste of some persons, but if it was the desire of the Duke of Wellington, in whose honour it was erected, that the statue should remain where it was, it would be more offensive to public feeling than to have it removed. (Hear, hear.) He trusted, therefore, that if it was desired by that illustrious individual to have the statue remain where it was, his wish would be conclusive in the minds of all persons on the subject.

Mr. HUME concurred in what had been said by his hon. friend. He believed that the desire of the public was that the statue having remained so long where it was, it should remain there now. (Hear.) Such, he believed, was the strong and general feeling of the public on the subject. (Hear).

Mr. NEWDEGATE hoped, after the strong opinion expressed on this subject by hon. members who differed widely on political opinion from the illustrious individual who had been referred to, that the Duke of Wellington would not be questioned as to what his desires might be; for he (Mr. Newdegate), was sure that so strong were the noble Duke's feelings of loyalty that he would be most anxious not to act contrary to the wishes of her Majesty. He (Mr. Newdegate) was, however, satisfied that it was the general wish of all classes of society that the statue should remain where it was, and that it should no longer be tampered with. (Hear, hear.)

The House adjourned at six o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

THE QUALIFICATION OF PEERS (SCOTLAND) BILL.—Some discussion arose upon the question of agreeing to the report on this bill. The report, however, was adopted, and the bill ordered to be read a third time on Monday.

The Juvenile Offenders Bill, and the Baths and Washhouses Bill, were read a third time and passed; and their Lordships then adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

HEALTH OF TOWNS.

Lord MORPETH moved the order of the day for the House going into Committee on this bill.

Mr. GISBORNE opposed the bill on the ground that it contained clauses which were unconstitutional, and which would deprive certain corporations and public bodies of rights which they had possessed from time immemorial. He trusted that the bill would not proceed further in the present imperfect state, and he should therefore move that it be committed that day three months.

Colonel SIBTHORP said that he had paid some attention to this bill, and he did not think that there was any person in the House more thoroughly acquainted with the dangerous power which it placed in the hands of the Government.

Mr. W. BROWN said that this was the most important bill which had been introduced into the House during the session. Nothing in the present moment was most deplorable, for want of proper sanatory regulations. There were not less than from six thousand to seven thousand people ill of fever at the present time in the metropolis of this country, and if proper preventive measures were taken, the most incalculable evils would be entailed upon society. A medical gentleman told him that, during last week no less than £100 had been spent in providing coffins for the poor.

Mr. MACKINNON said, that the principle of the bill was good, but there were some things omitted which he believed were calculated to effect much good, and which he would wish to see introduced into it.

After a long debate, the motion to go into Committee was carried by 117 to 26, and the rest of the night was occupied in discussing the first seven clauses of the bill.

RAILWAY COMMITTEES.—On Tuesday, in the Lords, the preamble of the Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Stour Valley was declared not proved.——The preamble of the Mold Railway (Cowlairs Branch).——On Wednesday, Railway bills were passed in the Standing Orders of the Lords:—Wear Valley; Edinburgh and Northern, and Edinburgh, Leith, and Granton Amalgamation; Chester and Holyhead (Extension at Holyhead); Edinburgh and Northern (Branch from Burntisland to Dunfermline Branch, &c.), No. 2.——On Wednesday, the preamble of the Hertford, Hatfield, and St. Alban's branch of the Great Northern was declared proved.——The preamble of the Liverpool, Manchester, and Newcastle-upon-Tyne was declared proved.——Also, the preamble of the Caledonian and Glasgow, Paisley and Greenock Railways Amalgamation; and the Glasgow, Airdrie, and Monkland's Junction Railway (Cowlairs Branch).——On Thursday, in Group 3, the Committee decided that the preamble of the Great Northern (Isle of Axholme Extension) was proved; and that the preamble of the Axholme Joint Line (Extension at Holyhead) was not proved.——Yesterday, in Group 6, the Committee came to the following important decisions:—That the preamble of the Exeter, Yeovil, and Dorchester Railway and Branches Bill, with the exception of the branch to Sidmouth, the preamble of the Liverpool, Manchester, and the Exeter branch to Bridport, was proved; that the preamble of the Salisbury and Yeovil Railway Bill, with the exception of the branch to Wincanton, was proved; that the preamble of the Blandford and Burton Railway was not proved: the above three bills are promoted by the South-Western Company. That the preamble of the Yeovil, Bridport, and Exeter Railway (with branches) Bill; and the preamble of the Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth Railway Act Amendment (No. II.) Bill were not proved: these two bills are promoted by the Great Western Company. That the preamble of the Bristol and Exeter (Taunton and Castle Cary Branch), and the preamble of the Bristol and Exeter (branch from Bleadon to Wells and Glastonbury, &c.) Bills were proved: these two last bills are promoted by the Bristol and Exeter Company.

COUNTRY NEWS.

THE INSTALLATION AT CAMBRIDGE.

Great preparations are in progress for the ceremony of the Installation of his Royal Highness Prince Albert as Chancellor of the University of Cambridge.

It has been arranged that the University Address to her Majesty shall be received in great state, at one o'clock on Monday, in the hall of Trinity College. His Royal Highness the Chancellor, will present the address. His Royal Highness will afterwards confer honorary degrees in the Senate House. On Tuesday, July 6, the degree of Doctor in the several faculties will be conferred in the Law Schools, commencing at eight o'clock, and the degree of Master of Arts in the Arts School, commencing at half-past six in the morning. At ten o'clock of the same day his Royal Highness will proceed to the Senate House, where the installation ode and the prize exercises. Her Majesty will hold a reception at Trinity Lodge on Tuesday evening, at nine o'clock, of noblemen members of the University, heads of colleges, professors, officers of the University, vice-chancellors, and ladies of their families resident in Cambridge. Gentlemen and ladies in full dress, the latter without feathers or trains. His Royal Highness will hold a levee at Trinity Lodge on Wednesday morning, July 7, at nine o'clock, for members of the Senate.

The Vice Chancellor's dinner will take place at St. Catherine Hall, on Monday. In the evening, there will be a Concert at the Senate House, at which the Queen and Prince Albert will be present. There will also be a grand horticultural fête, and a public breakfast.

The following distinguished personages have accepted invitations to be present at the Installation of Prince Albert:—

The Queen, Chancellor, and suite; Chevalier Bunsen and lady; Belgian Ambassador and lady; Marquis and Lady Northampton; Lord and Lady Montegle; Bishop of London; Prince Waldemar of Prussia; Bishops of Gloucester and Bristol, St. David's, and Norwich; Earl Nelson; Lord Lyttelton; Lord Ernest Bruce; Sir Harry Smith, Bart.; the Dean of Canterbury; Dr. John Bacon, Bart.; Sir T. Buxton, Bart.; Right Hon. H. Goulburn, M.P.; Mr. J. Shaw Lefevre; Marquis of Lansdowne; Lord William Russell; Bishop of Tasmania; Bishop of Oxford; Sir Robert and Lady Peel; Viscount Palmerston; Duke of Buccleuch; Vice-Chancellor of England; Hon. C. E. Law, M.P.; Right Hon. W. Yates Peel; Duke of St. Albans; Marquis of Bute; the Attorney-General; the Duke of Wellington; Lord John Russell; General and Lady Thackeray; the Earl of Hardwicke; Lady Bexley; Sir T. G. Cullum, Bart.; The Bishop of Durham and lady; the Hon. and Rev. H. Pakenham; Dean of St. Patrick's, Dublin; Sir E. H., Lady, and Miss Alderson; the Chancellor of the Exchequer and lady; Lord De Lisle; Hon. Monckton Milnes, M.P.; Lord and Lady Waldegrave; Sir J. Lowther, Bart.; Sir John Enstace, Bart.; Lord Godolphin; the High Sheriff. The Bishops of Lincoln and Ely are also expected.

THE ELECTIONS.

BURY ST. EDMUNDS.—Earl Jermyn and Mr. Horace Twiss will contest this borough on the Conservative interest, as they did at the last election.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—The four candidates, Mr. Goulburn and Mr. Law, (the two existing candidates), and Lord Fielding and Mr. Challoner, (the two new candidates), are still in the field, and are severally, in person or by proxy, engaged in an active canvass.

CARLISLE.—Mr. Ferrand, it is said, has consented to come forward for the representation of this city, and has every prospect of success.

HULL.—It is understood that Sir James Graham will be brought before the electors as a candidate for this borough.

LINCOLN.—Sir E. B. Lytton addressed the electors of Lincoln, a few days ago. A long discussion followed, after which Sir Edward Lytton declared his intention to go to the poll.

LIVERPOOL.—The Conservative Association have at length made choice of their candidates. They have resolved to invite and support the claims of Sir Digby Mackworth and Sir Howard Douglas. Sir Digby Mackworth has addressed the electors, and pledges himself to support the principles of the Protestant Reformation, and resist any attempt at tampering with the Navigation Laws.

LYME REGIS.—Sir Fitzroy Kelly is in the field as a candidate.

SOUTH HAMPSHIRE.—Lord Palmerston has declined to comply with a requisition to stand for South Hampshire, on the ground of his being desirous to continue to represent Tiverton, which he has done for twelve years, with the confidence of the electors.

OPENING OF THE TRENT VALLEY RAILWAY.

THE Trent Valley Railway, by means of which the distance between London and Manchester and the north will be shortened by one hour in time, while it will give a double outlet for the immense traffic pressing on the London and North-Western line between Manchester and Birmingham, was opened with considerable éclat last Saturday, when a remarkable speech was made by Sir Robert Peel.

At two o'clock, the assembled guests, at Tamworth, amounting in the whole (including those from the immediate neighbourhood) to some 1200 or 1400, and the coup-d'œil being much enhanced by the presence of a number of elegantly-dressed ladies, sat down to a cold collation.

The chair was taken by Mr. Edward Tootal, Chairman of the Company; supported by the Right Hon. Sir Robert Peel, Bart. M.P.; George Hudson, Esq. M.P. (Chairman of the Eastern Counties and other Railway Companies); Viscount Ingestre, M.P.; Viscount Sandon, M.P.; Viscount Anson; the Hon. Col. Anson, M.P.; Sir Charles Shakerley, Bart.; Sir Robert Gerard, M.P.; Lord Talbot; Hon. Captain A'Court, M.P.; the Hon. Captain Carnegie, M.P.; Mr. G. C. Legh, M.P.; Mr. Alderman Copeland, M.P.; Mr. Cardwell, M.P.; Mr. T. D. Egerton, M.P.; Mr. Collins, M.P.; Mr. Ricardo, M.P.; Mr. George Carr Glyn, M.P., Chairman of the North-Western Company; Mr. Houldsworth, Chairman of the Manchester and Leeds Company; Mr. Edmund Peel, late Chairman; Mr. Yates Peel, Archdeacon Sandars, &c.

After the accustomed toasts to Royalty, the Chairman, in appropriate terms, proposed the health of Sir Robert Peel, which was given very enthusiastically.

Sir Robert Peel returned thanks for the cordial reception of the toast, and proceeded to say—"This is an occasion on which there ought to be peace between the advocates of the broad gauge and the narrow gauge; and on this head, at least, the memory of all former grievances ought to be forgotten, even if, unfortunately, they are doomed to be again revived to-morrow. Gentlemen, we have met this day to congratulate one another on the completion of this important undertaking. And, I submit, for no other purpose. (Cheers.) We have met to celebrate the completion of this great work, which confers honour on all who have been concerned in it—on the Company under whose auspices it was commenced, and by the energy of whose proprietary it has been completed—on the contractor who has constructed it, and, let me add, on all those by whose sinews and strength this great work has been successfully carried out. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, without having any personal interest in any railway, I have given to this line a constant, undivided, and zealous support. (Cheers.) I have given it that support because I felt convinced that the line must be ultimately completed. I felt that, though there might be a long struggle and fierce battles before the Committees of Parliament, though the landowners might be kept in suspense, and though large sums might be required to the completion of those whose genius and talent have so powerfully contributed to the success of the undertaking, while we have no personal sympathy with their gains—(laughter)—that the time must come when the Trent Valley Line would be completed." (Cheers.) The right honourable Baronet then remarked that the Romans, two thousand years ago, traversed the same course as this line, and proceeded thus:—"Gentlemen, on the east of our town stands a monument to Ethelfrida, the daughter of Alfred the Great; and, on the west, we have the inauguration a monument of the reign of Queen Victoria. (Cheers.) That mound was raised by Ethelfrida for the purpose of protecting the town from the incursions of pagan barbarians, who were in the habit of laying it waste, and perpetrating acts of barbarian customs, civil wars, and a divided kingdom; while, this day, we are met to celebrate the completion of a work which presents to us the triumph of science, of knowledge, and of civilisation. (Cheers.) The interval which has passed between the period when Ethelfrida flourished and the reign of Victoria is not less than ten centuries—

A thousand years their cloudy wings expand.

And, gentlemen, we cannot contemplate without admiration the wonderful contrast presented to us. (Cheers.) The age we are met to celebrate the completion of a work as part of a system which is, probably, destined to effect a great social revolution than any invention since the art of printing was discovered. (Cheers.) Without wishing to over-estimate the effects which railways will have, or to say one word of disrespect to science, I believe that they will be for our good, and that they will promote the moral and social welfare, and advance the political security of this kingdom. (Cheers.) Within a few months, our persons will be carried on this railway; our bodies with the fleetness of the wind, and our thoughts, by the agency of the telegraph, with the fleetness of lightning. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, let us hope that these combined influences will be for our good, by drawing closer family affections and facilitating the intercourse of life—(Cheers),—while they tend to promote civilisation and the advancement of knowledge. (Cheers.) As regards our political security, I believe that we shall have cause to rejoice at their construction. In a country like this, it is impossible to do more than support a limited army; and, in the event of war—which may God in his mercy avert—we might be exposed to the most fatal consequences, for it is difficult yet to say what effect steam navigation may have on maritime warfare. Of this, however, I am sure, that railways would enable us to concentrate our limited forces on any point that might be required; and I have no doubt, then, that the spirit of Englishmen would enable them to combat successfully against any enemy, even if numerically superior, by being conveyed by this new element of transport without fatigue, and well provided with necessaries. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, it is only by drawing closer the great metropolis of the empire with the great towns, each of which may be said to form a metropolis of their districts, and by getting cheap conveyance, if we are exposed to the armary of other countries, that we shall be enabled successfully to compete with them; but I have no fear but by means of railways, and increased facilities of intercourse, that we shall continue successfully to compete with them and add to the prosperity of agriculture and manufactures. (Cheers.) I also hope that the result of bringing closer the sister country to us by railways will be to increase its prosperity, and unite us in bonds of mutual good feeling, and strengthen in us all the loyalty and affection to our gracious Sovereign, who, if zeal for the interests of her country and examples of domestic virtue constitute claims upon the affections of her subjects, has at least as strong a claim on those affections as any Sovereign that ever sat upon the throne."

Sir Robert Peel's speech was received with great cordiality. He subsequently proposed "Success to the Trent Valley Railway," associating with the toast the names of George Carr Glyn, Esq., the Chairman; Charles Lawrence, Esq., the Deputy Chairman; and the rest of the Directors of the London and North-Western Company.

Mr. Glyn returned thanks.

The Chairman afterwards proposed "The Directors of other Railway Companies who have honoured us with their presence."

Mr. Hudson, in acknowledging the toast, expressed his satisfaction at the remarks of Sir R. Peel in regard to the interference of Parliament with railways. "I trust," said Mr. Hudson, "we shall hear no more of such a bill as that lately before Parliament. (Cheers.) Our endeavour is, while acting as trustees for others, to endeavour to do them as much justice as possible, and to bring the benefits derived from railways within the reach of the great mass of our fellow-countrymen. The labourer, I consider, is worthy of his hire; and that those who have united with us in carrying out railways, are entitled to reap the reward of their enterprise and courage, and, being entitled to the public gratitude for what they have done. I hope they will combine in one body to prevent invasions of their rights." (Cheers.)

The health of the Chairman, the Engineer, and other officers of the Company were then proposed, and properly responded to.

The following engineers employed in the construction of the Railway were present:—T. L. Gooch, Esq., Chief Engineer; and Messrs. Berkeley, Twining, Cawley, Bartlett, Peacock, and Graham.

EXTENSION OF THE SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY.—On Wednesday a branch of this railway, about 9 miles in length, and extending from Minster to Deal, was opened by the Chairman and Directors of the company with the usual ceremonies. The stations along the new line were handsomely decorated. The whole population of the neighbourhood assembled to celebrate the event; huge flags were seen fluttering in every direction; shops were shut and business suspended; and it was a complete holiday.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The gentleman got up betimes to shoot,
Or hare,
Ah, not-known partridges! ah, brilliant pheasants!
And ah, ye poachers! "tis no sport for peasants.
BYRON.

THE present week was without any features of popular sporting interest, especially as regarded the metropolitan districts. The racing was of inferior account, and very far afield: there was no cricketing, and but one trifling rowing match on the river; angling there was—for those who love solitude; and cricket, on a grand scale, for those who frequent Lord's—but it is not a place of popular resort. In this absence of matter for Vice-Chancellors, it may not be out of season to speak of the canine as well as the feline species.

About half a century ago, Joseph Strutt composed a goodly quarto volume on the sports and pastimes of the people of England. This he illustrated with one hundred and forty engravings, representing most of the diversions known to the recreative annals of this country. Surely "merrie England" was no misnomer for a speck of the globe so lavishly endowed with resources against the blue devils. Philologists now repudiate the phrase, and the philosophers of the sombre school declare that merrie is the growth of an indigenous root, and insist that, although the expression is foreign, we retort

The fact is words, and let the French translate
The awful yawn which sleep can not abate.

It will be readily conceded that our social position is considerably improved since Mr. Strutt wrote his book; but is not our social character liable to be drawn in less bright colours by the modern historian than it was wont to be painted by his predecessors. Pleasure—it may be more refined in practice, if not in principle; but still, pleasure, in its abstract elements merely, is as much the end and aim of the higher classes now as ever: it is "the badge of all the tribe."... Gentlemen, we are told by Byron—a most competent authority—rise up to shoot, but that sport is "caviare to the million." Hunting and yachting are national sports, and open to all persons indiscriminately, and so is Long's Hotel—if they can pay for it. What is the deduction from these premises—that we are becoming too exclusive in our national pastimes, or that a vitiated taste has grown up; whereby the sale of a cast-made ice seems of more estimation than the instruments of wholesome recreation?

The catalogues of our sports and pastimes fall very short of those which the earlier times furnished. Our list of those resources of a manly and becoming spirit contain a dozen, or thereabouts; and how many of these are adopted simply for the results which—"delight in them sets forth?" Still every year latterly has advanced the liberal character of our woodcraft: our rural life is a very different thing from what it was even fifty seasons ago. The repeal of the Game Laws too is as certain as if it had already passed both Houses of Parliament—and soon, there may be a more unexceptionable resort to the moor and the stubble than heretofore.

But contemporary with these boon reforms, we would see a more extended countenance and patronage of those hale and characteristic exercises in which our forefathers sped their leisure, and which still mark the natural instinct wherever Englishmen are found. Exclusiveness is passing fast from the polite vocabulary; but it is not so generally replaced by a healthy bias in our popular pastimes as we would fain note. Drunkenness is no longer a common vice—"in our streets"—why should moral intoxication be allowed to spring up in its stead? Men (countrymen, and brothers) of the same blue hills are on all sides to catch you—at unawares. There is a thirst for gambling abroad—and watchful caterers to compound "devils" that shall augment the droughts. Let not your native relish for the sports of food and field be turned into a morbid seeking after fierce excitement. . . .

'Tis fares the land where healthful tastes decay,
And lust of luxre eats men's hearts away.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—There was a very fair attendance this afternoon, and lots of horses were backed; the general business, however, was flat, not above five or six being really in favour, viz., Sizaire, Van Tromp, Flower (an iron mag and a tremendous "go"), and Milliner for the Goodwood Stakes, and The Hero and Dulcet for the Cup; apart from this lot, the movements were of little interest.

JULY STAKES.

2 to 1 agst Tontotum	4 to 1 agst Indian	10 to 1 agst Sister to Æglé

GOODWOOD STAKES.

9 to 1 agst Stultz (t)	25 to 1 agst Van Tromp	33 to 1 agst Miss Ellis (t)
11 to 1 — Vampyre (t)	25 to 1 — Burgundy (t)	33 to 1 — Tommy Moore
15 to 1 — Milliner	30 to 1 — Glitch	40 to 1 — Glory (t)
15 to 1 — Flower (t)	30 to 1 — Hydrangea	50 to 1 — Morpeth (t)

GOODWOOD CUP.

2 to 1 agst The Hero	10 to 1 agst Dulcet	13 to 1 agst Woldtag
8 to 1 — Eryx	11 to 1 — Fitz Emilius	18 to 1 — Halo
	Mendicant is scratched.

ST. LEGER.

5 to 2 agst Cossack	12 to 1 agst Red Hart (t)	16 to 1 agst The Farmer's Daughter
6 to 1 — Van Tromp	12 to 1 — Mr. Martin (t)
	20 to 1 agst Black Dwarf

DERBY.

25 to 1 agst Firestother (t)	40 to 1 agst Beverlac (t)	2000 to 30 agst The Sheriff (t)
33 to 1 — Surplice (t)	40 to 1 — Sir Hercules (t)	100 to 1 — The Fowler (t)
33 to 1 — Surplice (t)	50 to 1 — The Stinger (t)

THURSDAY.—A very slack afternoon, and the betting noticeable only from the altered position of two of the Irish nags, Flower and Burgundy—the former dropping five points, and the latter thirty! Miss Ellis was in good favour, at an improved figure, and Stultz was very firm, at 9 to 1; Foreclosure, Farmer's Daughter, and Black Dwarf, on the totter, but yet no marked alteration in their prices.

GOODWOOD STAKES.

9 to 1 agst Stultz (t)	20 to 1 agst Hover	40 to 1 agst Glory
12 to 1 — Vampyre	25 to 1 — Hydrangea	40 to 1 — Morpeth
14 to 1 — Milliner	30 to 1 — Meteor	40 to 1 — Tantivy (t)
14 to 1 — The Questionable	40 to 1 — Burgundy (t)	40 to 1 — Lethargic (t)
18 to 1 — Miss Ellis (t)	40 to 1 — Glitch	40 to 1 — Lethargic (t)
		40 to 1 — Miller's Boy

GOODWOOD CUP.

5 to 2 agst The Hero	10 to 1 agst Dulcet (t)	25 to 1 agst Mentor (t)
8 to 1 — Eryx	10 to 1 — Halo	25 to 1 — Ash Ash (t)
10 to 1 — Fitz Emilius (t)	20 to 1 — Burgundy	25 to 1 — Monarch

Miss Sarah and Conspiracy do not go to Goodwood.

ST. LEGER.

11 to 4 agst Cossack (t)	12 to 1 agst Red Hart (t)	14 to 1 agst Mr. Martin (t)
6 to 1 — Van Tromp	12 to 1 — Foreclosure	18 to 1 — The Farmer's Daught.

DERBY.

33 to 1 agst Surplice (t)	40 to 1 agst Bonarts (t)	40 to 1 agst Glendower (t)

WINCHESTER RACES.—TUESDAY.

The Great Produce Stakes of 50 sovs each, h ft. New Mile.

Mr. Gully's Tantivy, 8st 9lb	.. .. ..	.. (A. Day) 1
Sir J. Hawley's Miami, 8st 9lb	.. .. ..	.. (Sly) 2

6 to 4 on Miami. Won by half a length.

The Original Hampshire Stakes of 20 sovs each, 15 ft, and 5 only if declared. Two miles and a dib.

Sir R. Pigot nd Miss Ellis, 5 yrs, 8st 7lb	.. ..	..(A. Day) 1
Mr. Etwall's Buscot Buck, 6 yrs, 7st 7lb	.. ..	(J. Cleary) 2
Mr. Isaac Day's Hamlet, 4 yrs, 7st 5lb	.. ..	(Wakefield) 3

Won easy by two lengths.

The Queen's Plate of 100 guineas. Heats, two miles.

Mr. John Day's grey colt, 4 yrs, 9st 10lb	.. ..	..(A. Day) 1
Mr. Elwes's Bourton, 4 yrs, 9st 10lb	.. ..	(S. Mann) 2
Captain Delme's Silver Eel, 3 yrs, 7st 5lb	.. ..	(Wakefield) 3

10 to 1 on The Hero. Won in a canter.

WEDNESDAY.

Handicap Sweepstakes of Five Sovereigns each, with 25 added. Three-quarters of a mile. Gentlemen riders; jockies allowed to ride by carrying 6 lb. extra. Seven subs.

Mr. Elwes's Messenger, 4 yrs, 10st 7lb..	..	(Mr. Oshaldeston) 1
Mr. Pryse's Buscot Buck, 6 yrs, 10st 10lb	..	(J. Sharpe) 2

The Two-Year Old Stakes of Five Sovereigns each, and 25 added, for colts, 8st 9lb, fillies and geldings, 8st 6lb. T. Y. C. Fourteen subs.

Mr. Dixon's Doll-again, 8st 6lb	.. .. ..	(A. Day) 1
Mr. Grevill 's Milo, 8st 9lb	.. .. ..	(Sly) 2
Mr. Bristow's Sponge, 8st 9lb	.. .. ..	(Wakefield) 3

Post Match, Fifty Sovereigns, 8st 7lb each. Three-quarters of a mile—Capt. Delme's Panic received it from Sir J. B. Mills's Black Doe.

CRICKET.—The match, Kent v. England, was concluded on Wednesday: Kent carried an easy victory by a majority of 95 runs.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

A Government pension of £200 a year has been conferred on the widow and family of Dr. Chalmers. Lord J. Russell, in notifying this gratifying fact to Mrs. Chalmers, expresses a hope that this act of the Queen may render the remainder of the life of Mrs. Chalmers as tolerable as the loss of so eminent and excellent a partner will permit.

On Monday, 4000 pine-apples from New Providence, West Indies, were sold by Keeling and Hunt. They were put up in lots of twenty, selling from 10s. to 30s. the lot.

A letter from Miramichi states that the ship Loosthauk, Captain Thorn, bound from Liverpool to Quebec, with 380 passengers, out forty-nine days, put in there in distress, 117 passengers having died on the passage, and the crew not able to work the ship. She was to proceed on her voyage as soon as the crew recovered.

Letters from Harlingen, in Friesland, state that riots broke out at that place last week, in consequence of the shipment of potatoes to England. Several houses were assailed. The two packets Magnet and Lord John Russell, were attacked with stones, which were showered upon them to the amount of several thousands. The captain of the latter vessel was injured. The damage to property was estimated at £8500 sterling. Disturbances have also taken place at Leeuwarden, the capital, where the military are reported to have fired upon the people.

Mr. Feargus O'Connor a few days since purchased the estate of the late John Walker, Esq., at Minster Lovell, Oxon. It was sold by auction at Witney. The property, which consists of 300 acres, was knocked down at £9000. It is intended to form another of Mr. O'Connor's "happy homes for the industrious."

The betrothment of the Reigning Duke of Brunswick with the Princess Louisa of Mecklenburg Schwerin, took place at Potsdam on the 15th ult. The bride was born on the 17th of May, 1824, being the daughter of the Grand Duchess Alexandrina, sister of the King of Prussia.

Advices from Canada develop a melancholy picture of the sufferings of the emigrants from Ireland, who had arrived there. Famine (suffered ere they had left their native land) had naturally predisposed large numbers of those unfortunate people to disease. Fever and dysentery had, therefore, seized upon and were decimating the hapless multitude.

It is stated that the Dunford property near Midhurst, where Mr. Cobden was born, has been purchased either by or for that gentleman.

The works in the tunnel of the Rochester and Gravesend Railway are nearly completed, and it is expected the line to Gravesend will be reopened in the course of a month.

On Tuesday the remains of Dr. Lynch were deposited in the cemetery, Lower Norwood. The funeral was strictly private; the melancholy cortège consisted only of the hearse and two mourning coaches, containing six of the immediate relatives of the deceased.

Last Saturday the pleasure grounds in connection with the Royal Gardens at Kew, were, according to annual custom, thrown open to the public, and will remain so until the end of September, when they will be again closed until the Midsummer of 1848.

By a decree of the King of Sweden, dated the 11th ult., the importation of corn duty free is authorised in that country.

The India Mail was brought to Dover from Boulogne on Tuesday by the General Steam Navigation Company's steam-ship Star, in one hour and 55 minutes.

The Breslau Gazette states that a great many persons have lately been arrested in Poland, and the estates of several landowners confiscated by the Imperial Government.

According to a Vienna letter of the 15th ult., the house in which Mozart lived and composed most of his works, and where he died in 1791, is about to be pulled down by its proprietor, M. Gelvigno, a rich Italian, together with the houses adjoining, with the intention of erecting upon the site a very large hotel, in the centre of the court-yard of which is to be placed a colossal bust of Mozart, in bronze, on a marble pedestal. Mozart's house is called "The Eye of God," because there was anciently upon the same spot an hospital bearing that name.

Her Majesty has conferred upon Father Mathew a pension of £300 a-year, in consideration of the sacrifices he has made for the promotion of morals, and the services he has rendered thereby to all classes of his fellow-countrymen.

The reply of the King of Prussia to the Diet has been published. His Majesty frankly pledges himself not to impose taxes for the future without the consent of the Diet; but he does not consider the present request to the consent of the Diet for a fixed periodical meeting, leaving that point open for consideration; and he continues, notwithstanding the remonstrances of the petitioners, the old intermediate committees of the provinces, whose action had been absolved from the moment of the Diet.

Letters from St. Petersburg state that the Emperor Nicholas has not yet entirely recovered from the indisposition under which he has been suffering for some time, and that it is believed he will not make this year the journey to Germany which he had projected.

Forty-seven persons have been arrested for having been concerned in the recent riots at Hamburg. Among them are a doctor and a young man of distinguished manners, and exceedingly well dressed. The latter distributed money to the people who pillaged the shops.

A quantity of potatoes has recently been imported from Russia.

Mr. Chilton, Q.C., of the South Wales Circuit, is appointed to succeed the late Mr. David Leahy as Judge of the Lambeth and Greenwich District County Court.

The official return, for the week ending June 27, of the passenger movement at Calais and Boulogne, shows a total of 1863 passengers between England and Boulogne, against 1948 in the corresponding week of last year, and 498 between England and Calais, against 664.

On Tuesday morning, the female elephant, so long a favourite with the visitors of the Surrey Gardens, expired, after a comparatively short illness, from disease of the lungs.

Mr. William Joseph Eastwick has been elected as a Director o the East India House, in the room of Major-General Archibald Robertson, deceased.

Mr. William Scrope Ayrton, Registrar of the Court of Review, has been appointed Commissioner of the District Court of Bankruptcy at Leeds, vacant by the resignation of the late Commissioner.

A preliminary meeting of the Ironmasters of South Staffordshire took place on Wednesday, when the appearance of the trade was represented as from bad to worse, and the supply of orders abundant. It was unanimously resolved to maintain the present prices during the ensuing quarter.

The Liverpool letters received on Thursday morning, state that 18,000 bales of cotton wool were sold in that market on Wednesday, at an average increase of ¼d. per lb. on the prices at the close of last week, rather more than one-third of which is stated to be taken by speculators.

The Queen Dowager has presented a donation towards the erection of a new church in the grounds attached to the asylum premises for the reception of poor, aged, decayed, and maimed free watermen and lightermen of the river Thames, their wives, or widows, situate at Penge, near Sydenham, Surrey, for the use of the inmates, and the inhabitants of the neighbourhood.

Prince Oscar of Sweden has had a narrow escape from being drowned, the frigate Eugenie, in which he returned home having had a collision in the Sound with a Norwegian ship, the Glommen. Some steamers belonging to the Russian fleet afforded assistance, and thus averted the calamity.

The French Government has awarded a gold medal to Mr. James Peter, captain and proprietor of the brig Mercury, of Arbroath, for assistance rendered to the crew of the French brig La Jeune Elise, of Granville.

It is stated, in a private letter from Clonmel, that the merchants of that town, who have realised such immense profits by hoarding up the r stocks of meal, &c., are now obliged to destroy great quantities of it, through its becoming heated in their stores The river Suir now receives in its placid bosom what would have subsisted many who have gone off this stage for ever.

There was an affray at Kensington Park, Notting Hill, on Tuesday, arising out of an attempt to revive the old field in Hyde Park in 1838, on occasion of the Queen's Coronation. The police were called in, as the showmen seemed determined to resist any effort to prevent the fair, but ultimately a compromise was effected, and the showmen were allowed to hold the ground for one day, on the promise to vacate it next morning.

The Great Britain steamer is now perfectly water-tight. Mr. Brunner, the eminent engineer, is constantly employed, superintending the operations. All is expected to be ready for the final effort by the end of this month.

The King of Sweden on the 18th ult. returned to Stockholm, from his tour in the provinces, and immediately dissolved the Council of Regency which he had appointed to direct the government during his absence.

The Newcastle and Berwick Railway was on Thursday opened throughout for traffic. Persons may now book throughout from London to Edinburgh in the day; at half-past nine and half-past ten in the morning, and at nine at night.

The Manchester papers notice that, in spite of the statements about disease, potatoes have declined in price in an extraordinary manner On the first of June they realised from 72s. to 120s. per load; but on Monday last, the luxury of early potatoes no longer existing, they were offered at from 20s. to 25s. No doubt, ere another week, prices will range still lower.

The Committee of the British Ladies' Clothing Association for Scotland and Ireland, which numbers among its members many ladies connected with the higher circles of society, have recently received a munificent donation of £500 from her Majesty.

The exhibition of Winterhalter's pictures of the Queen and Royal Family, at St. James's Palace, closed on Wednesday. Upwards of 100,000 persons viewed them. On Tuesday there attended 7000, and on Wednesday more than 10,000 people.

THE FRENCH FOLLY FORT, CANTON RIVER.

FRENCH FOLLY FORT.

WE present our readers with an Engraving of the French Folly Fort, on the Canton River; which, by reference to the News from China, in our Journal of last week, it will be seen, was blown up, on April 5, by Colonel Phillpotts, and the Engineers, covered by a strong party, in the armed boats of the Vulture. The Fort stood at the commencement of the south-eastern suburb of Canton: it was very strong, and was, both from position and construction, one of the most formidable defences of the river, the reach of which it completely commanded. The account states:—

"It was, therefore, absolutely necessary for the safety of our communications that the Fort should be disarmed. The troops were, accordingly, landed, the gate blown in, the magazine destroyed, and the guns spiked. Here, again, the rapidity of our movements saved us. Every preparation was making and was nearly completed for the defence of this Fort when we entered it, and even half an hour's delay would have cost us dear; for the small island upon which the Fort stands, connected only with the bank by a bridge, is so covered by the works, that only a few feet of mud is available whereon to place an attacking party, and even that is commanded by the Fort itself and the houses on the bank of the river."

THE LATE SIR COLIN CAMPBELL, BART.—Lieutenant-General Sir Colin Campbell, K.C.B., Colonel of the 72nd Highlanders, late Governor of Ceylon, whose death occurred on the 13th of June, made his will at Colombo in the year 1842, in his own handwriting. His personal property in this country has been estimated at £100,000. He was possessed of East India Stock, Dutch Stock, and Belgian Bonds, which he has directed to be divided into nine equal parts, leaving two shares to his eldest son, and one share to each of his other children, and a share to be laid out in providing annuities for his sisters; to his brother, Colonel Campbell, Royal Artillery, £500; and the residue of his property to his eldest son, Lieutenant-Colonel Patrick Fitzroy Wellesley Campbell, of the Scots Fusilier Guards.

MR. COBDEN AT VENICE.—We learn, by a letter from Venice of the 22nd ult. that Mr. Cobden, who arrived there on the 12th, was invited to a grand banquet for the 21st in honour of his visit, given by the most distinguished inhabitants o the city on the island of La Giudecca. Among the guests, who amounted in number to eighty, were M. Sparks, Consul of the United States, and the Marquis de Serpose, Consul for the Sublime Porte. After dinner, M. Locatelli, chief editor of the Venice Gazette, upon the call of Count Priuli, the President of the day, read an address to Mr. Cobden, thanking him for honouring Venice with a visit, and expressing the favour with which his ideas and opinions were received in that city and throughout Italy. Mr. Cobden replied in French. He briefly exposed the great principles of his theory, and the difficulties they had to contend with before they could be comprehended and adopted. After these two speeches, which were frequently interrupted by long and enthusiastic cheers, the company broke up, and returned to the city in gondolas, headed by a band of music. Mr. Cobden was to leave Venice on the 23rd for Trieste.

DEATH OF MR. RAWLINSON, THE POLICE MAGISTRATE.

THIS lamented gentleman expired at his residence, in Upper Wimpole-street, Cavendish-square, on Friday morning, the 26th ultimo, after a three days' illness, resulting from chronic disease of the liver. He presided at Marylebone Police Court on Tuesday, the 22nd ult., and appeared in his usual health; but towards evening felt himself indisposed, and returned to his house, when his medical attendants were sent for, and continued in unceasing but fruitless efforts until Friday morning. Mr. Rawlinson was the oldest Magistrate on the Metropolitan Bench, and was much respected both in public and private. In early life he was an active Magistrate of the County of Hants, in which he was a considerable landed proprietor—being possessor of the estates of New Place, Arlesford, and Clatford, and was likewise a Deputy-Lieutenant for the shire, where he was held in the highest esteem by his numerous tenants.

The deceased gentleman, in whom society has lost one of its best ornaments, and a large circle of friends one of its most valued members, was born on the 3rd of June, 1777—the only son of John Rawlinson, Esq., M.D., by Elizabeth, his wife, daughter of the Rev. Robert Hingeston—and married, on the 8th of October, 1799, Alicia, daughter of Thomas Watson, Esq., of Haydon Hall, in the county of Middlesex, by whom he has left a very large family to mourn his loss. His son Christopher, the Recorder of Portsmouth, who headed the deputation to receive Louis Philippe on his Majesty's visit to that port, recently received the appointment of Recorder to Prince Edward's Island, Singapore, and Malacca; and shortly after had the honour of Knighthood conferred on him.

THE LATE MR. RAWLINSON, THE POLICE MAGISTRATE.

POTATO DISEASE, AND PLAGUE OF APHIDES.

IN the present anxiety for the state of the crops we have endeavoured to afford the most accurate information, and we refer our readers to Nos. 246 and 267, where the subject has been already discussed. The Potato Disease comes within our notice under two heads: Firstly—The effects which occur from repetition of the mischief caused by antecedent damage to the plant; Secondly—The effects produced by the direct damage of the Vastator.

FIG. 2.—HOP LEAF ATTACKED BY APHIDES.

At the earlier part of the year we have the first condition mostly to notice, and it is highly important that the bearing of this part of the subject should be rightly considered.

In Mr. Smee's 13th law of the ravages of Aphides, he states that plants having their tissues damaged by Aphides, are apt to propagate debilitated tissue in all its future growths. Last year nearly every potato plant was more or less damaged, and, in consequence thereof, nearly every potato plant this year evinces a repetition of the malady in its growth. This disease may be seen in various parts of the plant, but it is most commonly evinced at the underground stem. Upon taking a root, the part between the old set and the ground should be of a silvery whiteness if it be healthy; but this year the majority of the plants, instead of presenting this appearance, are discoloured and of a dirty brown colour, which, on exposure to the atmosphere, soon dries and becomes crackly (Fig. 1). The amount of this discolouration varies in different instances, sometimes it runs through the surface of the entire underground stem; at others it is more partial or local. This phenomenon may be witnessed in almost every potato field round London; and the writer of this article has seen it in four different counties, and received specimens from so many parts of England as to afford no doubt of its universal existence. In some instances, conjoined with this damage underground, the upper stems may be found to show mischief, either by the occasional discolouration of various parts, or by a curling of the leaves. This curl is very common this year in most situations; and in one case we have observed fifty acres to show a curl so exaggerated that we much fear that the produce will be lessened.

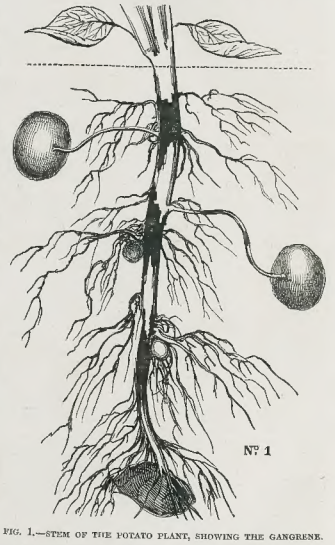

FIG. 1.—STEM OF THE POTATO PLANT, SHOWING THE GANGRENE.

FIG. 3.—APPLE LEAF, ATTACKED BY APHIDES.

Such are the characteristics of the Disease, produced by injury to the plant last year; and the nature of this repeated disease is death, mortification, or gangrene of the part. It may run two courses: firstly, the mortification may run on and separate the root from the leaves of the stalk, and cause the plant totally to perish; or secondly, sound tissue may be produced underneath, and the gap may be healed up.

IMPEYAN PHEASANTS, AT THE SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.

These effects of repeated disease appear, in some cases, to have been lessened in ground where wood ashes have been strewed; but there is no known method for curing the malady in its present state. In many districts cabbages have been planted between the rows, to insure a crop should the potatoes fail; though, probably, as the haulm will grow freely, their growth will be much impeded. One man, thinking his potatoes had got the cholera, actually pulled them up, and planted haricot beans—a plan to be deprecated in the highest degree, as, in this case, in all human probability, he will get no crop at all. Upon the whole, there is unquestionably something to fear from the underground canker, yet there is still reason to hope that it will heal up and abate; and, therefore, we must wait patiently the result.

The Aphis Vastator, the primary source of the mischief, is much on the increase. We counted 110 on a small leaflet last evening, and this morning, upon inspecting one particular field, we found at least a thousand upon every leaf. Their effect is to destroy leaf after leaf; and, unless means be speedily employed for their destruction, they will again cut down the plant. Although existing in large quantities, careless observers easily overlook them; but they may be detected in nearly every potato field, upon the under surface of the largest leaves next the ground. The presence of a single Aphis, even amongst a dozen Plants is now of great consequence; because, as soon as the plant has come to its full growth, the insect will multiply so rapidly as completely to cover the field.

Analogous with the Potato Disease are the ravages produced by the Aphis of the Hop. Our readers are constantly perusing accounts of the state of the fly, which is an all-important subject to the farmer at the present moment. For this reason we have figured a leaf of the Hop plant, as it appears, covered with the young and winged Aphides. Amongst the Aphides are seen ladybirds, in all their stages, preying upon them. (See No. 246.) The hop-bines this year are much covered with these creatures in some localities; and, unless they speedily become cleared away by their parasites, there is fear that they will be damaged.

Mr. Smee has this week called attention to the injury inflicted on the Apple by the Aphis of that tree, and in some of the market gardens at Enfield two-thirds of the crop are destroyed. We have thought it right to figure an apple-leaf thus damaged, to show the similarity of its gangrene to that produced in the Potato plant by the Vastator.

It is in vain to attempt to foretell the damage which is likely to ensue this year from these estructive creatures, because their parasites may come in abundance, and clear them entirely from the plant, and thus abundance may supersede the threatened scarcity.

Fig. 1. Underground stem of Potato plant, showing the gangrene.

Fig. 2. Hop-leaf.
(a) Hop fly
(b) Lice, &c., covering the leaf
(c) Lady-bird
(d) Ladybird Larva
(e) Ditto Pupa
(f) Ditto Egg

Fig. 3. Apple-leaf, showing the gangrene produced by the Apple Aphis.

Letter from Queen Victoria.—A letter from Berlin of the 24th says:—"Baron de Cornelius, author of the designs of the bas-reliefs which ornament the silver and gold shield which King Frederick William lately sent as a baptismal present to his godson the Prince of Wales, has received an autograph letter of thanks in the German language from Queen Victoria. Among other things her Majesty says:—'I hope that one day my son, in whose name I write, because he is not yet able to write himself, will prove, by his intelligence and by his love of the fine arts, that he is worthy of the chef d'œuvre which his Royal godfather has presented to him.'"

IMPEYAN PHEASANTS AT THE SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.

These fine specimens of that rare and beautiful bird, the Impeyan Pheasant (Lophophorus Impeyanus) stated to be the only living examples ever seen in Europe, have lately been added to the menagerie at the Surrey Zoological Gardens. The present specimens, male and female, were brought from India by Captain Watts, of the Bengal Cavalry, and purchased of him by Mr. Tyler, for the above Establishment.

The Impeyan Pheasant is a native of the Himmalaya Mountains, and is never found in the plains. Its size is double that of the well-known Pheasant of the British Isles. In the male, the head and throat glisten with metallic green; the feathers of the lower part of the neck and top of the back are lancet-shaped, and of an intense metallic purple; the wings and general plumage are steel-blue, with a white band across the lower part of the back; the tail is rufous brown. The female is smaller than the male, and differs greatly in colour, being of a dull brown, and having a white throat. The male has a most beautiful crest, formed of long slender shafts, spreading into a spatuiate form at the extremities. In the female, the crest is very trifling. These pheasants derive their European cognomen from Sir Elijah Impey, the first English naturalist by whom they were noticed.

JAGUAR PRESENTED TO THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY BY THE QUEEN.

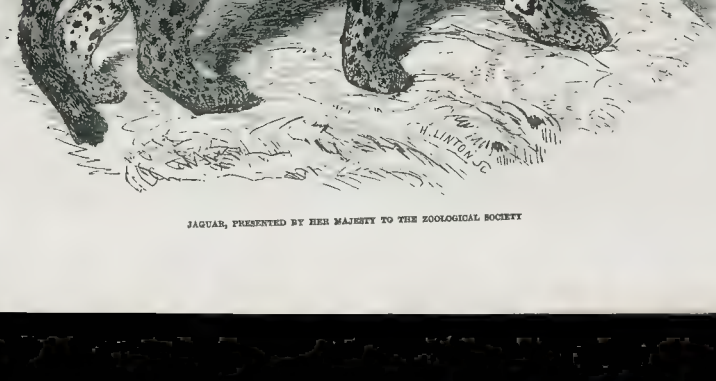
Her Majesty the Queen has just presented to the Zoological Society of London a specimen of the Jaguar, perhaps finer than any which has arrived in England since the celebrated animal formerly in the Royal collection at the Tower.

The numerous and valuable donations which the Zoological Society has lately received from its Royal Patroness, are a welcome proof of the favour with which she regards an Institution calculated not only to assist the more accomplished students of Nature in their investigations, but also to afford instruction and enjoyment to the masses of the people.

The Jaguar (Felis onca) is the most formidable of the cat tribe which inhabit the New World. He is considerably larger than the leopard of Africa and Asia, and more beautifully marked with larger spots, or rather rosea, which nearly unite in a continuous line along the back. He climbs and swims with the most perfect facility, and is sufficiently powerful to carry off horses and oxen, although he seldom ventures to attack man. As population advances, the Jaguar is now more rarely met with, although formerly he ranged in numbers from Paraguay to Guiana.

The splendid animal, which arrived at the Regent's Park a few days since, has been placed next to the Black Leopard, in one of the Terrace dens; and forms a most important addition to the magnificent collection of large carnivora, so characteristic of this menagerie, which probably was never in finer general condition than at the present moment. It consists of nearly a thousand animals, many of them of great rarity, and some now exhibited for the first time in Europe.

The Saturday afternoon Promenades at the Gardens continue to be brilliantly attended: the last of this season will take place on the 10th.



JAGUAR, PRESENTED BY HER MAJESTY TO THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY

LITERATURE.

Soyer's Cookery—The Gastronomic Regenerator. Fourth Edition. Simpkin, Marshall, and Co.

All that we augured of the success of this new System of Cookery has been realised in the sale of three large editions in less than nine months. The secret of this success principally lay in M. Soyer having introduced into the kitchen more method than either of his predecessors; and that in an art which had, hitherto, partaken too much of the harum-scarum. Long ago Dr. Kitchiner exposed the fallacy of "a pinch of this," "a bit of that," and "a dust of 'other"—but with little practical effect upon subsequent writers of cookery-books. M. Soyer has carried this reform into effect throughout his "System," as his work is properly entitled. There is no badinage or nonsense in it. There are a few glorifying names for special dishes—pour l'occasion; otherwise the "great big book" is all practice. We are glad of this; seeing that Cookery, like Angling, has long been beset with fine madness about such magnates as Luculius, Heliogabalus, Spartan broth, and other classical antiquities. M. Soyer almost disregards such stock-lumber, and at once comes to the business of the book; though he has constantly an eye to elegant embellishment and refined association—the characteristics of the gourmet; and the result is a work of sound utility and correct taste.

In the edition before us are several improvements. First, we have an abbreviated and translated Table of Contents, very useful for making out bills of fare. The "New Mode of Carving" is improved by a "Tendon Separator," an instrument for the use of cooks and poulterers, in disjointing birds, "the volatile species," as M. Soyer calls them, previous to trussing, roasting, or boiling, so as to prevent contretemps in carving at table. There are, likewise, several new receipts; and the general improvement of the work proves that the author has not slept upon his bays.

SNOW-WHITE SWALLOW.
(HIRUNDO NIVALIS.)

This beautiful bird, of the swift kind, was lately shot in the park of George St. Vincent Wilson, Esq., at Redgrave, in the county of Suffolk.

It had been seen skimming over the lake for many days, and, at last was shot by the park-keeper. It is perfectly white. The specimen is stuffed, and is in the possession of the Rev. Richard Cobbold, Rector of Wortham, who has favoured us with the sketch for the above Engraving.

WHITE SWALLOW SHOT IN SUFFOLK.

Sale of Autographs.—On Tuesday, there was a very interesting sale of autograph letters of Royal and distinguished personages, by Messrs. Puttick and Simpson, in Piccadilly. The collection consists of 277 lots, of which the following are deserving of notice:—An autograph letter of Lord Bacon, dated August 4, 1626, addressed to Sir Thomas Roby, sold for 18 guineas. The signature of Anne Boleyn to a wardrobe warrant, dated Hampton Court, March 8, 1534, sold for £6 10s. A letter of John Calvin, dated Geneva, May 15, 1550, in French, sold for £10. The signature of Charles I. to a letter addressed to the Duke of Orleans, August 30, 1643, sold for 31s. 6d. Two signatures of Oliver Cromwell, to orders for payment of the Parliamentary forces, sold for £4 6s. Subscription and signature to a letter in the autograph of Sir Francis Drake, dated "on board the goode shippe Elizabeth Bonaventure, April 27, 1587," sold for £6 10s. A letter of Francis I., King of France, addressed to the Pope, sold for £3. A letter of Galileo, dated "Villa d'Arcetic, Maggio 12, 1635," and which alludes to his recent persecution by the Inquisition, sold for £14 5s.

Counting a Billion.—What is a billion? The reply is very simple: a million times a million. This is quickly written, and quicker still pronounced. But no man is able to count it. You count 150 or 170 a minute; but let us even suppose that you go as far as 200, then an hour will produce 12,000; a day, 288,000; and a year, or 365 days (for every four years you may reat from counting, during leap-year), 105,120,000. Let us suppose, now, that Adam, at the beginning of his existence, had begun to count, had continued to do so, and was counting still—he would not even now, according to the usually supposed age of our globe, have counted near enough. For, to count a billion, he would require 9512 years, 34 days, 5 hours, and 20 minutes, according to the above rule. Now, supposing we were to allow the poor counter 12 hours daily for rest, eating, and sleeping—he would need 19,024 years, 68 days, 10 hours, and 40 minutes!—American Literary Gazette.

Aristocratic Christening.—The christening of the infant Earl of Glamorgan, son of the Marquis and Marchioness of Worcester, took place on Monday, at St. George's Church, Hanover-square. The Duke of Wellington and the Duke of Beaufort were, with her Majesty the Queen Dowager, sponsors to the infant, which received the names of Henry Adelbert Wellington Fitzroy. In the evening, the Duke and Duchess of Beaufort gave a grand banquet at Beaufort House, in celebration of the event.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, July 4. Fifth Sunday after Trinity.—Translation.—St. Martin.
MONDAY, 5 The Moon enters her Last Quarter at 5h. 42m. a.m.
TUESDAY, 6.—Old Midsummer Day.—Oxford Act and Cambridge Commencement
WEDNESDAY, 7.—St. Thomas à Becket.—The Sun rises at 3h. 54m.
THURSDAY, 8 Saturn rises at 10h. 33m. p.m.—The Sun is due E. at 7h. 21m.
FRIDAY, 9.—Bonrbons restored, 1815 Cambridge Term ends.
SATURDAY, 10. Oxford Term ends.—The Sun sets at 8h. 13m.

THE MOON IS NEAR MARS ON the 9th On this day also, Venus and Regulus are near to each other, during the night, the planet is about 1° N. of the star, and, after this time, she will pass eastward of the star, and moving towards Spica Virginis.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 10.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.	M. h. m. / A. h. m.
9 0 / 9 21	9 46 / 10 7	10 32 / 10 53	11 18 / 11 39	11 56 / * *	0 22 / 0 42	1 8 / 1 28

* * On Saturday the 10th, there will be no high tide during the morning

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Byra."—Sylvan's "Guide to the Lakes," just published.
"A Subscriber" should apply to the Painter of No. 367.
"An Outsider" is thanked; but we have not room for the proposed Illustration.
"Sara," Fox-street, had better take a walk to the Park, and inquire of one of the Keepers.
"Gus."—The term "navie" has been applied to a railway labourer from much of his work resembling that requisite for canal navigation. The German motto "Ich Diene" is generally rendered "I serve." Camden states Edward, Prince of Wales, to have "adjoined" to the feathers "the old English word 'ic dien' (iheen), that is, 'I serve;' according to that of the apostle, 'the heir, while he is a child, differing nothing from a servant.'"—(See Planché's "Hist. British Costume," p. 140.) We cannot spare time or space to reply to the three other questions; possibly, the Treatise on Glass, in "Lardner's Cyclopædia," may solve one of the doubts
"M. R.," Birmingham. Sabbath (from a Hebrew word, signifying rest,) is the seventh day, or Saturday, kept by the Jews as a day of rest. The Apostles transferred this religious rest to Sunday, or the first day of the week, because Christ rose on that day (See Hallam's "Constitutional History of England," vol. 1., pp. 41, 47.)
"H. X. Y." We cannot reprint the Chess Enigma.
"S. S.," Chelsea, is thanked; but we have not room.
"F. C."—St. James's Park contains 87 acres: we do not know the precise area of the landscape garden.
"Jack Anchor" should apply to a Chain-Cable Maker.
"A Subscriber" should register his invention for preventing Accidents on Railways
"A Country Reader," (Domestic Column.) We will see.
"C. E. W. B." Mrs. Butler, the Shakspearean reader, and Mrs. Butler, the tragic actress, are distinct persons
"A New Subscriber," Colchester.—In slight acquaintance, the gentleman should be first recognised by the lady. Address, Madam
"W. G. C." Hoxton; and "Prior." June 23 was the longest day this year. The reason of this day being the longest, is, because on this day the Sun attains its greatest Northern declination; and, therefore, he rises somewhat earlier and sets somewhat later than on any other day in the year.
"Inquirer." See a Memoir on the Naturalisation of the Alpaca, by Mr. W. Walton, published in 1841; or the "Polytechnic Journal," No. 18.
"R. E. B.," Edinburgh. Uncertain.
"A Subscriber," Rowley Regis. Your letter has been referred to the Editor.
"F. J. S." is thanked for the hint
"T. T." We have already illustrated "Leamington, Past and Present."
"J. P. H."—The Opera.
"D. H. D." is correct as both respects.
"G. T."—It would not be in good taste to engrave either of the three Portraits, as complementary suggested
"A Constant Reader," Milton-street.—Apply, by letter, to Mr. T. Cooke, Great Portland-street
"C. M. G.," Studley.—We regret that we cannot relieve our Correspondent's anxiety as to the fate of the packet ship "Ann."
"G. L.," Ware. Neither book nor print is of much value.
"Chemist" will find much information as to the processes for making Gun Cotton, in the "Year-book of Facts—1847." We intend to illustrate the matter very shortly
"G. C.," Norfolk The validity of the Marriage is very questionable.
"Big Block Joe" will find the Origin of Valentines explained in No. 199 of our Journal (Feb. 21, 1846.)
"G. B.," South Mims. We repudiate all Lotteries whatever.—Foreign or British.
"T. J. L."—The Drawing can be substantiated as Morland's, if it is of some value.
"An Inquirer," Sutterton.—The Eggs of the Silkworm may be purchased in Covent Garden Market, and sent by post
"R. C. S. B." —Apply to a Shop broker.
"Catholicus," Sheffield.—We have not room for the Illustration.
"Arthur" See the Memoir of Mdlle. Jenny Lind, in No. 261 of our Journal.
"Wexford" had better employ a Navy Agent.
"W. Hunter," Cuy.—The Royal Agricultural Society of England will hold their Annual Meeting, at Northampton, on the 20th, 21st, and 22nd instant.
"J. C.," Leek. Omit "have."
"Verax."—The offence is not actionable.
"W. S.," co. Wicklow.—The print has been received.
"G. A. M.," Westminster. Declined.
"S. C." We regret that we have not room.
"Cortocavi."—Take any of Byron's heroines of Oriental descent—or, indeed, any Eastern proper name of the softer cast.
"W. M. K."—The blight on the currant tree is produced by the Currant Aphis; that of the gooseberry, by the Gooseberry Aphis; that of the plum, either by the Vestator or Aphis Prunii. The apple tree is injured this year by the Aphis Mali, but we have not seen the blight on the pear.
"A Constant Subscriber."—The widow of an officer has a right, we think, to mount a cockade in her servant's hat.
"A Lay Herald."—The children of a bastard, having no paternal coat, cannot quarter their mother's arms, although she was a co-heiress; unless either the bastard himself, or his children, become entitled to coat armour by grant from the Earl Marshal.
"A Subscriber."—The address of the Ulster King-at-Arms is "Sir William Betha, Kni., Casile, Dublin." A fee is required for information supplied.
"W. R. H."—Hurvel is the name of one of Milton's angels; he bears a spear, at whose touch evil spirits who have assumed brute or human forms are compelled to take their real shape. See the 4th Book of "Paradise Lost." The allusions to "Hurvel's spear" are frequent in religious and moral writings; it is, in fact, an allegory of the power of devine truth over falsehood
"A Subscriber," Alabama The law referred to as use at Campbell gives it; but it is, no doubt, a plagiarism from Blair, very slightly disguised
"A Subscriber" —No change is made in a widower's shield, the lozenge shape being used by widows only.
"A Constant Reader," Trowbridge.—The late Duchess of Sutherland, inheriting, in her own right, the Earldom of Sutherland, was called the Duchess-Countess, but the style was more one of adoption than right.
"H. R. T." Although a person may be entitled to quarter an arms, he has no right to bear a second crest. There is no necessity to give notice at the Heralds Office
"M. B. W."—The Chief Magistrates of London, York, and Dublin, possess the title of Lord, and are addressed "The Right Honourable."
"A Subscriber," Penzance "Ad eundem" is applied to a Member of one University admitted to another, and meant that the party so received is "of the same degree" that he held in his Alma Mater.
"A Constant Subscriber" —Miss Jones is not entitled to bear his mother's arms, unless she has been an heiress or coheress, and he then bears them quarterly with his paternal coat, and not impaled.
"J. G."—The connection that existed between General Washington and the noble family of Ferrers was very distant. From a very full and elaborate account of "General Washington and his Ancestry," which appeared some months since in Mr. Burke's "Patrician," we find that Lawrence Washington, of Sulgrave, Mayor of Northampton 1532—1545, left two sons, Robert (ancestor of the American Patriot), and Laurence, of Garsdon, Wilts, whose granddaughter and heiress, Elizabeth Washington, married Robert Shirley, Earl Ferrers, progenitor of the present Peer.
"E. S." The Duke of Portland, Lord George Bentinck's father, is still alive, aged seventy-three.
"P. O."—The qualification for a vote for a Borough Member is a rating of £10 annual value. The Municipal Franchise differs in different towns
"Admarsha," Salop —See the Portrait and Memoir of Mdlle. Lind, in No. 180 of our Journal; and the Memoir, in No. 261.
"D. E. F., a Subscriber and Farmer and Grazier."—A Portrait of Earl de Grey appeared in No. 43 of our Journal.
"E. P. S." The oft-quoted line,

"Men are but children of a larger growth,"

is from Dryden's play of "All for Love."
"Entomologus."—Address, Entomological Society of London.
"Sigma."—The Illustration in question cannot appear.

A fine Engraving of the "Pas des Elemens," at Her Majesty's Theatre, will appear in our next

THE INSTALLATION AT CAMBRIDGE.—In our Journal of Saturday next, July 10, will appear a Series of TWELVE highly finished ENGRAVINGS of the chief incidents of the INSTALLATION of His Royal Highness PRINCE ALBERT, as Chancellor of the University of Cambridge and the Visit of HER MAJESTY, upon that interesting occasion.

BACK NUMBERS.

All Numbers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, one month old, will, in future, be considered "Back Numbers," and be charged each sixpence extra.

The Volumes and Parts will be charged the same as usual, viz.: Volumes, 18s.; Parts, 2s. 6d.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JULY 3, 1847.

THE reaction of the Government measures of relief in Ireland is beginning to show itself. Under the pressure of the famine, and the consequent alarm, presentments were made for works with very little regard to their cost or utility when executed. Now the pinch of the danger is passing away under the prospect of an abundant harvest, the expenses are beginning to look alarming. They, moreover, appear to indicate a great deal of abuse in the management; the enormous army of pay clerks and officials of all kinds who were employed in superintending the works, and the avidity with which the members of families in a good position in life fastened on the public expenditure, has been spoken of in Parliament more than once; the only reply was, that such is the want of local organisation in Ireland, that the abuses was unavoidable. How much of the relief funds was absorbed by these intermediaries will never be exactly known, but it must have been immense. It now appears that another kind of expense has to be provided for; land was extensively taken for roads during the employment on public works, and that land has to be paid for; the sum required is stated at two millions sterling; half of it must be met by the localities. We do not believe that the authorities or proprietors themselves know exactly what liabilities they have incurred. Certainly the burdens on some of the districts in Ireland will be very heavy for years to come. In fact, the support of the poor, which in England has been distributed over the country gradually and through a long series of years, it may be said centuries, has fallen on Ireland at once, and the shock will nearly crush the resources of the country, as well as burden England with millions of debt. Thus it is that neglect of duties and precaution always avenges itself: the slightest approach to a poor-law was resisted as long as possible; when enacted it was made as useless as possible; and, in one year, the whole population became paupers, and had to be fed by every kind of expedient, presentments, local rates, poor-rates, subscriptions, in every form in which money could be raised or spent. The neglect and denial of years was crowded into the briefest space: everything had to be done hastily, and was, therefore, accompanied by waste, mismanagement, and loss. Yet the probability of such a calamity had been pointed out for at least half a century: partially it had happened before. When it fell on the whole land it was impossible to neglect it: then came loans of millions, which England had to provide; and in Ireland, where a poor-rate of a few pence was dreaded, that rate is at present, in some places, nearly forty shillings in the pound! It is bad policy to let difficulties run up an arrear by continually shrinking from dealing with them. It is a formidable thing to have to contend with the heaped up evils of a century, which have come to their crisis in a single year.

The difficulty of at once stopping the aid that has been given, seems to be the motive of the Government advancing £620,000 as a loan to certain Irish Railway Companies. It is a fragment of the "great plan" of Lord George Bentinck, the principle of which is clearly adopted. It will furnish employment to a limited extent; but, unless the Government has made conditions that it shall only be applied to the earth-works, and the operations that employ unskilled labour, the limit will be still narrower. Yet, compared with what has yet to be done with regard to the social state of Ireland, it will be as nothing. Calamity seems to pursue even those who have fled from the country; the emigrants have been destroyed on board the ships, by fever, in great numbers, and an unusual proportion of disasters have occurred in the shape of wrecks. It is impossible not to suspect there is gross mismanagement, and that the Government inspection of these vessels is evaded.

THE Prussian Diet has closed, after a sitting of eleven weeks, in which it has shown much more spirit and independence than was anticipated. It has refused to concur in a Loan till accounts are given of the public expenditure; it has rejected a proposition for advancing money to a Railway Company, for the same reason; it has laid before the King a demand for a periodical assembling. The King exhibited some degree of ill-temper with his faithful Orders, as if he thought men would be called into political existence, and do nothing; but, on the whole, he seems to accept the policy of progress, be it ever so slow, as a necessity; still, he excludes the Opposition, as disobedient subjects, from the Banquet to which he has invited the more tractable. The Diet will develop itself into a national body; it cannot remain the mere representative of orders and ranks. Already it has created political names: Beckerath, Hauseman, Sanckeu, are regarded as popular champions; there is already another greatness and influence besides office and kingly favour. But, till they obtain a free publication of their proceedings, they will be deprived of the lever by which the public mind can alone be moved.

IN Spain there is an increase of Carlist movements, but it is not believed they will come to anything formidable; indeed, the Government can afford to be merciful, and three prisoners, taken in arms, have been pardoned, contrary to Spanish practice in such cases. A person named La Riva has been condemned to death by the garotte, for firing a pistol at the Queen some time ago; the depositions of the witnesses are full of contradictions and confusion. In addition to the usual gossip of Madrid, it is said that the father of the Queen's husband, old Don Francisco, has had the inconceivable folly to become a member of several secret societies of republican and regicidal principles! He was summoned before the Council, and questioned about it; and he seems not to have known there was anything wrong in a person in his position presiding at secret meetings of Communists, and others of the same stamp! The Bourbons have certainly attained, in the person of the Don, the lowest depth of stupidity; he is the stock joke of the Spanish capital.

CAPTURE OF A SLAVER.

Extract of a letter from Reginald Levinge, commanding Her Majesty's steam ship Devastation, on the coast of Africa.

"Devastation, 31st March, 1847.

"I wrote you a few hurried lines the other day, to tell you I had destroyed the celebrated slave brig, Tres-Amigos. I suspected another brig lying at anchor off Porto Novo; and told them in a careless manner that I was sorry I was obliged to go off for water, in place of which I hove to in the offing out of sight of land, 'the bait took' he took in 520 slaves, and I had him the next day

"Poor wretches! they jumped for joy; rolling themselves about the decks, kissing our feet. I never saw anything like their caresses. The poor women were mad with joy there were 200 of them, all huddled together in a state of nature. Two prizes in five days; and my share will be £1040.

"The Tres-Amigos went to pieces, the crew having run her on shore; as we got her measurement, we shall be paid just the same, without the trouble of sending her to Sierra Leone. She was the fastest and most notorious vessel on the coast, and took 1200 slaves to Bahia a few months ago."

THE WEATHER.

The temperature of each day, except Monday, during the past week, has been from 4° to 5° below the averages; that of Monday was very nearly that of the averages of the season There has been no rain, and but little wind. The sky has been generally covered by cloud. The following are some particulars of each day: Friday, the sky was occasionally covered with large dark clouds, but the sun shone frequently, at an interval, for a considerable length of time. The wind was light, and principally from the west, but the direction was variable. The average temperature of the day was 59°. Saturday, the sky was principally covered, but the sun shone frequently through breaks in the clouds, till the afternoon, which was generally fine: and the evening was clear for a short time. The wind was light, and from the W.N.W The average temperature of the day was 60°. Sunday was dull and cloudy during the morning; the afternoon was rather fine, but the sky was not bright. The evening was clear The wind was from the W. The average temperature of the day was 61°. Monday, the sky was generally covered by thin fleecy clouds; the day was fine, and the temperature was very uniform through the day, its average was 58°. The wind from the N. Tuesday was uniformly cloudy throughout: the wind was from the N The average temperature was 61°. Wednesday, the sky was uniformly cloudy till noon; after this time, the day was variable. The average temperature of the day was 62°. Thursday, the sky was principally cloudy, but the sun shone frequently through breaks in the clouds, till the afternoon, which was generally fine: and the evening was clear for a short time. The wind was light, and from the W.N.W The average temperature of the day was 60°. Sunday was dull and cloudy during the morning; the afternoon was rather fine, but the sky was not bright. The evening was clear The wind was from the W. The average temperature of the day was 61°. Monday, the sky was generally covered by thin fleecy clouds; the day was fine, and the temperature was very uniform through the day, its average was 58°. The wind from the N. Tuesday was uniformly cloudy throughout: the wind was from the N The average temperature was 61°. Wednesday, the sky was uniformly cloudy till noon; after this time, the day was variable. The average temperature of the day was 62°. Thursday, the sky was principally cloudy, but the sun shone frequently through breaks in the clouds, till the afternoon, which was generally fine: and the evening was clear for a short time. The wind was light, and from the N.N.W. The average temperature of the day was 62°, and that of the six preceding days was also 62°

The extreme thermometrical readings each day were:—

		June 3's the highest during the day was 68; deg. and the lowest was 50 deg.
Friday,	June 25	67	53
Saturday,	June 26	67	50
Sunday,	June 27	68	50
Monday,	June 28	73	56
Tuesday,	June 29	73	56
Wednesday,	June 30	73	56
		68	50

There was a great difference in the temperature of Monday from that of the preceding and following days.

J. G.

Uffington, near Stamford, July 1, 1847.

N.B. The appearance of the grain crops, so far as I have seen and heard, is most satisfactory, and no appearance whatever of the potatoe disease as yet, in this part of the country.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

On Sunday morning, the Queen and Prince Albert, the King of the Belgians, the Duke of Brabant, and the gentlemen of the household, attended divine service in the private chapel in Buckingham Palace. Prayers were read by the Hon. and Rev. C. Leslie Courtenay. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Liddell.

On Monday, the Queen and their Majesties the King and Queen of the Belgians walked in the garden of Buckingham Palace. Prince Albert paid a visit to the Belgians, his Excellency M. Van de Weyer, the Duke of Wellington, the Marquis and Marchioness of Douglas, the Countess Vanderstraten, the Earl and Countess of Clarendon, Viscount Melbourne, Lady Beauvale, Lord and Lady John Russell, and the Right Hon. Sir Robert Adair.

On Tuesday morning the Queen held a Court. Their Imperial Highnesses Prince Peter and the Princess of Oldenburg had an audience of the Queen. In the evening her Majesty and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Queen of the Belgians, honoured her Majesty's Theatre with their presence

On Wednesday the Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by the King and Queen of the Belgians, took an airing, in an open barouche and four. Their Imperial Highnesses Prince Peter and the Princess of Oldenburg visited their Majesties the King and Queen of the Belgians, at Buckingham Palace. The Queen had a dinner party, at Buckingham Palace, and afterwards, an evening party.

PRINCE WALDEMAR OF PRUSSIA.—His Royal Highness Prince Waldemar of Prussia arrived in London on Thursday. This illustrious Prince, accompanied by his suite, shared the dangers and privations of the British army on the fields of Buddiee and Ferozshah, during the late occasion Dr. Hoffman, the physician of his Royal Highness, fell mortally wounded. His Royal Highness was also present at the battle of Sobraon, a. d. thus witnessed the total overthrow of the turbulent Sikhleaders The occasion of the visit of his Royal Highness is to receive at the hands of her Majesty the Grand Cross of the Bath, in commemoration of the share which he had in the glorious victories in question.

THE DUCHESS OF PALMELLA.—The Duchess of Palmella, accompanied by her daughters, the Countess das Galveas, the Countess de Oreckromins, and Donna Anna, has arrived in England. The pre-ent is the first time since the coronation of her Majesty that the Duchess has visited England, the Duke de Palmella having, on that occasion, attended the British Court as Ambassador Extraordinary from the Queen of Portugal.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL'S PARLIAMENTAL BANQUET.—Lord John Russell gave a grand banquet on Wednesday evening to a circle of members of the Lower House, including Mr Lascelles, Mr. Carew, Mr. Pusey, Mr Morris, Sir Horace Seymour, Mr J Hall, &c. Mr. Dashwood, Sir John Owen, Major Layard, Mr. Roebuck, Mr J Martin, &c.

DINNER AT APSLEY HOUSE.—The Duke of Wellington gave a grand dinner on Wednesday evening at Apsley House, at which their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge honoured the noble and gallant Duke by their company, and among the guests were the Archbishop of York, the Earl and Countess of Wilton, the Earl of Cawdor, the Countess Grosvenor, Westmoreland, Lord and Lady Charles Wellesley, the right hon. Charles Arbuthnot, Col. and Mrs. Maxwell, Miss Burdett Coutts, Sir Henry Bishop, and Lady Augusta Cadogan.

ENTERTAINMENT BY MAJOR-GENERAL AND LADY SMYTH.—Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Willams gave an elegant entertainment to the gallant hero of Aliwal and his amiable lady. In the evening Mrs. Williams gave a ball, which was numerously and fashionably attended, and kept up with great spirit till a very late hour.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

CITY OF LONDON ELECTION.—Lord John Russell has issued an address to the electors of the City of London, stating that he shall again offer himself. His Lordship alludes to the declaration of his political opinions, on the ground that they are well known to the electors. There are now no less than seven candidates for the representation of the City:—Lord John Russell, Mr. Masterman, Mr. Pattison, Baron Rothschild, Sir George Larpent, Alderman Johnson, and Mr. Payne. On Tuesday a meeting of members of the Liberal Registration Association was held at the London Tavern, which was much crowded. The chair was taken by M. Foster, Esq., M.P. The meeting was called by the requisition of the City of London at the ensuing election. The Committee, in their Report, state that at the present time, there is a majority of 1889 electors in the Whig interest, and they express a hope that Lord J. Russell Mr. Pattison, Sir G. Larpent, and Baron Rothschild would be returned Sir G Larpent and Baron Rothschild addressed the meeting, which was crowded with persons of rank and fashion. The meeting unanimously agreed that the Registration Association should resolve itself into a General Election Committee, to secure the return of the above-mentioned candidates, and that the gentlemen present pledge themselves to support the interests of the joint return of the four candidates The City of London Conservative Association met at the Crown and Anchor Tavern on Wednesday. The statements of the Reform party were taken into consideration, and declared to be correct in their accuracy. On the contrary, the report of the Committee stated that the Association had never been so successful as during the past year. Mr. T. Baring urged the Conservatives to take up the gauntlet of defiance, and assured his audience that they would be able to fight the four Liberal candidates with four Conservatives. A resolution was then passed, ordering the books and papers of the Association to be placed at the disposal of Aldermen Masterman and John on, the two Conservative candidates, who returned thanks; and several gentlemen expressed a hope that two other candidates would be found to come forward in the same interest.

MARYLEBONE ELECTION.—At a meeting of electors of this borough, held on Monday, a letter was read from Sir Charles Napier, finally renouncing his claims to the representation, on account of his appointment to the command of the Channel fleet. A vote of confidence in Sir Benjamin Hall was afterwards passed.

DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES AT KING'S COLLEGE. The annual distribution of prizes to the department of General Literature and Science took place on Wednesday, in the theatre of King's College, London, which was crowded with persons of rank and fashion The Prince Consort, the Archbishop of Canterbury presided, and was supported by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, the Bishops of Oxford and Lichfield, Lord Kenyon, &c.

THE BRITISH MUSEUM.—The following are the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the affairs of the British Museum:—The Earl of Ellesmere, Lords Langdale and Wrottesley, the Bishop of Norwich, the Lord Advocate of Scotland, Sir Roderick Impey Murchison, Sir Charles Lemon, Sir Philip Egerton, Mr. Hume, Mr. Ewart, and Mr. Monckton Milnes.

MODEL LODGING-HOUSE IN GEORGE-STREET The Interior arrangements and fittings of the new model lodging-house in George-street, Bloomsbury, built upon the plan and under the superintendance of the Society for Improving the Condition of the Working Classes, have been completed, and it is about to be opened for the reception of lodgers. None but working men will be admitted

METROPOLITAN IMPROVEMENTS.—A plan is exhibited at the Mansion House for the formation of a new street, from Victoria-street, through King-street, into West Smithfield, obviating the necessity for vehicles descending the dangerous declivity of Holborn-hill, and opening a direct line of communication from New Oxford street to the Eastern Counties Railway.

REDUCTION IN THE PRICE OF BREAD.—On Tuesday, there was a general reduction of two halfpenny in the price of the 4lb. loaf throughout the different metropolitan districts, the high-priced bakers charging 11d, second quality, 9½d, household 9d and 8½d. the 4lb. loaf. Rye bread is 7d. the loaf, and Indian corn 7d. the round.

CHEAPNESS OF VEGETABLES IN LONDON.—The supply of vegetables to the London markets is very abundant. On Tuesday morning, at Covent Garden, good new potatoes, not the least diseased, were selling as low as 2s. per cwt., with a good supply. Lettuces were selling at 3d. per score; cabbage plants, from 2s. to 3s. 6d. per dozen bunches; cabbages, from 9d. to 1s. 6d. per dozen, and other commodities equally cheap. So great has been the supply of haulboys and strawberries, that the hawkers of the metropolis were selling them about the streets on Thursday morning at the low price of 2d per lb.

HEALTH OF THE METROPOLIS.—The deaths registered in the week ending June 26, were:—Males, 471; females, 450; total, 921. Births:—Males, 676, females, 679; total, 1355.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS FRIDAY.

ROYAL ASSENT.—The Royal Assent was given by Commission to the Marine Forces Enlistment Bill, the Master in Chancery Bill, the Baths and Washhouses Bill, and about 70 other bills, the greater part of which were railway and other private bills.

The House was then occupied with the Poor Laws Administration Bill, which went through Committee, and an adjournment then took place.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

THE NAVIGATION LAWS.

The House met to-day at noon.

Lord J. Russell moved the order of the day for the second reading of the Navigation (No 2) Bill.

Lord G. Bentinck opposed the bill, and gave his opinion that, if agreed to, it would be most injurious to the shipping interest, and also to the navy. He did not think, if the Navigation Laws were abolished, it would be possible in a few years to man the navy. The noble Lord read extracts from a number of documents with respect to the naval and commercial interests of the empire, and concluded by moving as an amendment that this bill be read a second time that day three months.

Lord J. Russell said the question before the House was whether or not the Navigation Laws should be abolished altogether; and, if not, whether they should be suspended during the unsettled period that they bear. He was surprised at the speech to which he had listened. He had agreed to the suspension of the Corn Laws until March next. He Lord J. Russell) believed that the Corn Laws until March next. He Lord J. Russell) believed that the Corn Laws until March next. He Lord J. Russell) believed that

F I N E A R T S.

"AN ENGLISH MERRY-MAKING, A HUNDRED YEARS AGO."—PAINTED BY W. P. FRITH A.—IN THE ROYAL ACADEMY EXHIBITION.

We have this week engraved one of the most successful pictures in the Exhibition, "An English Merry-Making, a Hundred Years Ago," painted by W. P. Frith, A., and bearing, in the Catalogue, the text, or epigraph, from the Allegro of Milton:—

> When the merry bells ring round,
> And the jocund rebecks sound,
> To many a youth, and many a maid,
> Dancing in the chequered shade;
> And young and old come forth to play
> On a sunshine holiday.

How happily has the painter depicted this truly poetic scene! What character in the episodal groups—as the fortune-teller on the left, feeding the fond hopes of the handsome lass by the side of her swain. Next, the maiden, with her lover, seated beneath the spreading oak-tree, contemptuously repelling the clown who seeks to lead her out to the dance: the discomfort and stern purpose of the lass, the vexation of the wooer, and the jealousy of the successful lover, are alike characteristically portrayed. Then the vigorous group of musicians is excellent. And next, a merry girl is pulling forward to the dance an old man, whose "dancing days are over," and the frolicsome children join in the compulsion.

Another characteristic group is the old lady at the tea-table, enjoying the gay scene in her way. The picture is full of natural sunshine, the mid-distance being the Sir Roger de Coverley dance in the avenue by villagers, whose figures and attitudes are the picturesque gracefulness of nature—to be seen only in such al fresco ball-rooms as this. The entire picture tells of the simple pleasures of rural life,

> When, loose to festive joy, the country round,
> Laughs with the loud sincerity of mirth.

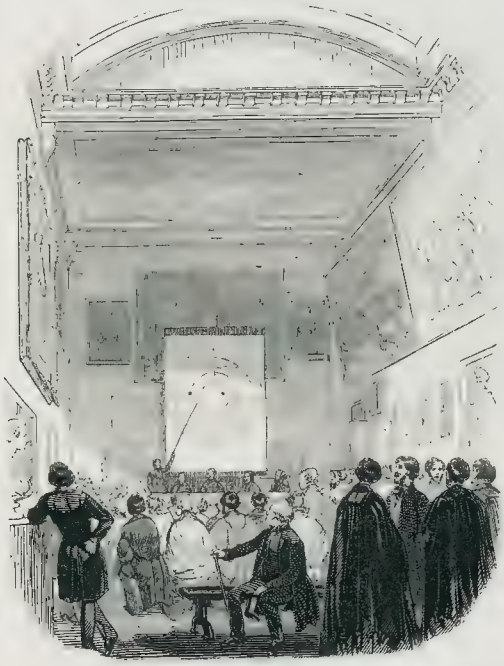
The composition has the charm of variety: its merriment is real and hearty, without extravagance; the colouring is rich and bright as befits the scene; and the picture, altogether, is one of the gems of the collection and gathers many a crowd of admirers.

The other work engraved is "Presbyterian Catechising," excellently painted by J. Philip. The figure of the Presbyterian is admirable; the catechumens are variously characteristic and life-like; and the entire work evinces the success of painstaking, as well as high promise.

THE ARCTIC EXPEDITION.—Mr. C. R. Weld, a connexion of Sir J. Franklin states that all the alarm which has been created respecting the Arctic adventurers, is groundless. "Sir John," he says, "was provisioned for the summer of 1848, and when he sailed no one contemplated hearing from him earlier than October or November, 1847, unless some unforeseen accident should compel his earlier return. If he succeed in passing Behring's Straits at the end of August, or in September or October, 1847, we shall not learn his success earlier than January or February, 1848. There is, therefore, no cause as yet for flying to his rescue. His absence has not yet equalled that of Sir E. Parry on his second voyage; and there does not, in fact, exist at the present moment more reason for apprehension than there was when the expedition sailed.

"PRESBYTERIAN CATECHISING."—PAINTED BY J. PHILIP.—IN THE ROYAL ACADEMY EXHIBITION.

MEETING OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION, AT OXFORD.



INTERIOR OF THE RANDOLPH GALLERY.—(MATHEMATICAL SECTION.)

INTERIOR OF THE CONVOCATION-HOUSE.—(GEOLOGICAL SECTION.)

LAST week we illustrated and reported the Proceedings of the above Institution, at the General Meeting, in the University Theatre, on Wednesday. We now resume our illustrated record with

THURSDAY.

The Meetings of the Sections commenced this morning; but, the Communications made are, for the most part, of too technical a nature to interest the general reader.

We must here enumerate the locations of the Sections: Randolph Gallery: Section A., Mathematical and Physical Science. Taylor Building: Sect. B., Chemical Science, including its application to Agriculture and the Arts; and Sect. G., Mechanical Science. Convocation House. Sect. C., Geology and Physical Geography. Ashmolean Museum: Sect. D., Zoology and Botany. Writing School: Sect. E., Physiology. Natural Philosophy School: Sect. F., Statistics. The several rooms were not without attentive and numerous audiences. The Section for Geology and Physical Geography, which was presided over by the Dean of Westminster, and had the advantage of the presence of Sir H. De La Beche Sir R. Murchison, Professor Sedgwick, and other eminent geologists, was crowded throughout the sitting ladies; forming, in point of numbers, by no means an unimportant proportion of the assembly.

In the evening, Professor Baden Powell delivered a discourse on Falling Stars, which attracted a very full audience. During the two hours occupied in its delivery, the area and gallery of the Radcliffe Library, which was fitted up for the occasion, were crowded. The Vice-Chancellor of Oxford, the Bishop of Oxford, and the Prince of Canino, were with the President on the platform. Of course the paper was theoretical, but the views differed much from previous authors on the subject. It also embraced the consideration of comets and cosmical matter the Learned Professor considering that the former were not possessed of a density or attraction which caused them to be injurious to other celestial bodies. The subject of falling stars was still involved in much obscurity, but electrical experiments threw much light upon it, the appearances being produced as it were from the fusion or condensation of the particles. With regard to comets, that of 1556, which had caused such universal terror in Europe, might be expected next year, 292 years being the period of its revolution round its orbit. Great advantage would result from simultaneous observations, and their communication which he suggested could be most appropriately made through the medium of the Association.

INTERIOR OF THE RADCLIFFE LIBRARY.—(EVENING MEETING.)

Amongst the arrivals to-day were M. Le Verrier from Paris; Professors—Ehrenberg, from Berlin; Ekmar, from Gottenburg; Macaire, from Geneva, and Dr. Gibson, Professor of Surgery to the University at Pennsylvania; and Dr. Levick, from Philadelphia.

FRIDAY.

There was a very large accession of members by each successive railway train this morning; and, not the least interesting circumstance of the day was the presence of M. Le Verrier and Mr. Adams at the Mathematical Section. The papers in the several Sections were of a very technical character, and few were susceptible of popular demonstration.

In the Mathematical Section, Sir W. Snow Harris gave an account of some new examples of the protection afforded by metallic conductors against heavy charges of lightning; and, Mr. J. C. Adams gave some results of a new calculation of the perturbations of Uranus by the planet Neptune, in connection with those which caused the discovery of this new World to inhabitants.

To the Chemical Section, Dr. Arnott made a communication on the regulation of combustion, particularly explanatory of some new facts and circumstances connected with its economical application to heating. M. Claudet read a paper on different properties of the solar radiation which have permeated coloured media in influencing the condition of Daguerreotype plates, so as to receive or reject mercurial vapours.

Sir J. W. Lubbock gave an account of a New Method of computing the Perturbation of a Comet. Professor Chevalier described a graphical method of computing Occultations with a new instrument of a Prism ball. Professor Rev. Symyth described some changes in the Level and Azimuth of a Transit Instrument from the temperature of the earth. Professor Baden Powell, Dr. Forster, and the Rev Dr Rankin, each made communications on Meteors.

In the Geological Section, the most attractive paper read was a communication from Lady Hastings, on the Fresh-water Eocene bed of the Hordle Cliffs, in Hampshire. The paper announced the discovery of a new Crocodile in the new sandstone; and a discussion ensued, in which the Marquis of Northampton, the Dean of Westminster, Professor Owen, and many others took part. Prof. Owen then gave a further description of the Fossils from Hordle. Professor Henslow described some Detritus from the London clay which was deposited in the Red Crag. Sir T. D. Acland, M.P., gave an account of some remarkable movements of the Saltern Glacier under the side of the Order-Berg, relatively, in the years 1815 and 1817, as also in 1845 and 1846. A paper by Professor Edward Forbes concluded the lengthened meeting of the Section, relating to the natural order of the Cystoïde.

The Papers read to the Section of Zoology and Botany were very numerous. The Prince of Canino described a new genus and three new species of Bats. Mr. Ward gave an account of the growth of Plants in Moist Places. Captain Widdrington explained some interesting novelties connected with Botanical growths, as shown in the forests of Spain. Prof. Edwards Milne described some newly conjectured points in the economy of Crustacea. Prof. Allman described the larva of the Asaridans. And, Dr. Acland gave an account of a new species of Provena, which was illustrated by a living specimen.

To the Section of Physiology, a paper was read from Mr. Humpage, of Bristol, on Hydropathy, as a means for the preservation of health and the prevention of disease. He contended in many points, in contradistinction to previous writers, that the effects of water depended chiefly on its purity as well as its mechanical powers. Hydropa his treatment of chronic disease was concerned with one out of four varieties:—1, the tonic; 2, the reductive; 3, the alterative; and 4, the sedative. The discussion on the subject and consideration of the paper was postponed until Monday, when Mr. Cotton, the Chairman of the Bank of England, announced his intention to exhibit a model of the baths and washhouses at Whitechapel, which was placed in the Model Room in the morning.

In the Statistical Section, a paper in the result of a scheme by Mr. Vandeleur for improving the condition of labourers, tried in the county of Clare, in Ireland, excited a very interesting conversation in the room of which Mr. Hall, M.P., began gave the results of his experience on the real merits and utility of the Irish labourer in England. These showed that they were useful on an emergency, coming over to labour when their services were required, and returning home without becoming a burden upon the poor-rates. Their conduct was also on the average much better than was that of the Englishman of a similar humble position.

The great attraction of the evening was Dr. Faraday's discourse in the Theatre, on some new properties lately developed in Magnetical Science. In these, he exhibited, in a most demonstrative manner, that this fluid might be transmitted through many substances, and even organic bodies. Thus, it was shown that most of the metals, and even animal and vegetable bodies, might be kept in suspension by the means of magnetic influence.

SATURDAY.

Only two Sections met to-day, and the papers read were of a technical character. Three distinct Excursions had been planned for the day, and they were well attended. One was to the Great Western Railway Works at Swindon, by which conveyance, free of expense, was liberally provided by the Directors. About 300 persons formed the party; and an equal number visited Blenheim Palace and Gardens, where everything that could affora gratification was thrown open for inspection. The Dean of Westminster went, at the head of a large party, to Shut Power, where he gave a lengthened and very interesting discourse on the Geological peculiarities of that vicinity, which also proved an extremely interesting Antiquarian Vestige.

In the evening, a Soirée was given at the Radcliffe Library, at which many objects of interest were exhibited; amongst the most conspicuous of which was a series of Daguerreotype portraits from M. Claudet; and the latest results of some important Electrical Developments, and Telegraphic Automatic communication of time throughout the kingdom, by Mr. Alexander Bain.

SUNDAY.

This morning the Bishop of Oxford preached a sermon on the necessity of humility in connection with literary scientific pursuits, at St. Mary's Church, which was crowded to suffocation.

MONDAY.

The great event of to-day was the visit of His Royal Highness Prince Albert, who, accompanied by Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar, arrived by special train at eleven minutes to eleven o'clock his Royal Highness was received at the station by the rector of Exeter, and conducted to that college, whence the Royal visitors proceeded to visit the several Sections, in which they were received with respectful enthusiasm. In the Geological Section his Royal Highness arrived just as Sir Roderick Murchison was calling the attention of the audience to several very elaborate maps, executed by the hand of the Crown Prince of Sweden, in which the sciences of statistics and geography were combined, each map being painted in different colours to distinguish the several districts of Sweden in which the various productions of the country are derived. In connexion with this subject, Professor Nilleo, from Stockholm, read his geological researches in Sweden, developing the existence of many new species of Fossil Remains, hitherto unknown in those regions. Amongst these were the remains of the Rhinoceros, and of the Oxus, the only living representative of the Mammoth, a living specimen of Sweden in the interior of those regions they were now found to exist, had promised to send over to this country. His Royal Highness next proceeded to the Ethnological Sub-Section, at the Music School, and arrived at the moment when his Excellency Chevalier Bunsen was about to commence a most elaborate paper on the relation of the Ancient Egyptian language, to the other great divisions of language. The Prince listened throughout with great attention to the able discourse of the distinguished diplomatist, and after its conclusion took his departure for some of the other Sections. Among these was the Chemical Section, where Mr. R. Hunt read a paper on the Principles upon which the Glass is selected for the Crystal Palace at Sydenham-Kew. From experiments which he had made, under the direction of Sir W. J Hooker, he had found that decomposition in plants always proceeded under the red rays; therefore the glass in that portion of the roof of London had at once given their approbation. It was necessary, however, that no manganese should be used in its composition, as its introduction had a tendency to make a pink colour, which possessed one of those injurious attributes which were to be avoided. Mr John Chanter than, on the part of Baron Charles Wedderstedt, read a paper on the Protection of Ships' Bottoms from destruction by chemical or injury from mechanical agency; which he demonstrated could only be effectively done by the application of the per-oxide of some metal, that which had proved the most effective being copper.

From the Sections, Prince Albert went to the Horticultural Fête, held in Trinity Gardens, where the collection of plants was very fine.

From Trinity, the Royal visitors returned to a dejeûner at Exeter College, at which many of the distinguished foreigners who adorn the various Sections of the Association were presented to his Royal Highness. Among these we may specify Professor Struve, Imperial Astronomer to the Emperor of Russia, and M. Le Verrier.

His Royal Highness returned to London by special train at half-past four o'clock, and seemed to have been much gratified by his visit.

Among the Sectional proceedings of the day, Mr. Ward gave to the "Chemical" some curious and well-defined results of experiments on Crystallization, produced under High pressure, which was caused by the great condensation of caloric, caused by chemical affinity. In the Geological Section, Sir Roderick Murchison gave an account of Count Keyserling's geological explorations of North-Eastern Russia; and in the Section of Zoology and Botany, Mr. J. O. Westwood showed the existence of the Potato Disease to a considerable extent in many parts of Oxfordshire which must have been unconnected totally with aphides. In confirmation were some remarks made by Mr. Pringle on the Potato Disease in Canada

In the evening, Mr. E. H. Strickland read a paper on Dodo, and other species of Extinct Gigantic Birds. There was little new in the discourse, the subject of which has been embraced at different meetings of the Geological Society of London, by Professor Owen and other leading geologists and naturalists

TUESDAY.

There were very many papers announced for reading to-day, but they were of necessity considerably abridged.

In the Mathematical Section, the list of papers comprised no less than 31, of which six were from Sir David Brewster, all relating to different Properties in the quality or actions of Light. Amongst other contributors were Major-General Sir Charles Pasley, on simplifying and improving our National Measures, Weights, and Money; Dr. Scoresby, on the Defects of and Danger arising from the use of Corrective Magnets for local attraction on the compasses of iron-built vessels; Sir R. Graves Haughton, who gave some new proofs of the Antagonism of Heat and Electricity; and Professor Barlow, with a Report on Anemometrical Observations made at Oxford for two years.

In the Chemical Section, an account of a peculiar formation of Permanganic Acid was read from Mr. Thomas Cole. Mr. J. Spiller described some of the results of the Potassium Battery, by which effects in many respects identical and even superior to those produced by electric agency are induced. Dr. Danbeny detailed some facts connected with the relative Nutritive Value of different kinds of Food. The Chevalier Langberg described the specific gravity of sulphuric acid at different degrees of dilution, and the existence which it fated between development of heat and coincident contraction of volume in sulphuric acid when mixed with water. And Mr. C. Brook detailed some new phenomena of Photogenic Action.

In the Geological Section Mr. Hopkins and Mr. W. J. Hamilton read papers on Earthquakes. Sir Robert Schomburgck described the geological structure of Barbadoes, and their infusoria, with their relations to existing animals described by Professor Ehrenberg; and Mr. Lowndes described some sections in the Lancashire and Cheshire coal-field, which contained some singular geological peculiarities.

Thirteen papers and communications were made to the Section of Zoology and Botany, all of which were on some of the more abstruse points of research.

To the Ethnological Sub-section were read fourteen papers, connected chiefly with the Aboriginal Tribes of the Colonies.

In the Statistical Section, the best timed papers were on the Moral and Educational Statistics of England and Wales, by Mr. J. Fletcher; and a Comparative Statement of the Prices of Cerealia, and other articles, of India and England, by Colonel Sykes.

A paper on Clarke and Varley's Resilient Atmospheric Railway Tube (engraved in our Journal of May 15), was read to the Mechanical Section; also, Mr. G Rennie gave a description of some Iron Lock Gates, and Mr. J. Glynn a description of the Turbine.

In the evening there was a Conversazione at the Radcliffe Library, which was chiefly devoted to the illustrations of microscope and microscopical objects. A sumptuous entertainment was provided for the members and the ladies, of whom there was a considerable attendance.

WEDNESDAY

This morning, at eight o'clock, the authorities of Christ Church gave a sumptuous breakfast in the splendid hall of their college. The tickets were issued to 200, all of whom were members composing the General Committee. Parties also visited the Archbishop of York's seat at Nuneham, (six miles by water,) where the most liberal accommodation was provided for the members during the week. There was also an excursion to Blenheim Palace.

The Sectional Proceedings included the reading of seventeen Mathematical communications; seven (Zoology and Botany,) including one by the Prince of Canino on the physiology and varieties of Tortoises; at the Statistical Section there was one by Dr. Arnott, on the Famine of 1846 and 1847 in the Highlands; whilst nine were read at the Sub-section of Ethnology, which has been annually increasing in the interest of its papers as well as the attendance of members, since its first formation at Cork.

Several members who were not occupied in the Excursions, visited the different Colleges and Halls, and their gardens, amongst which the most attractive was Worcester, with its capacious fish ponds; with those of St John's, Trinity, and New College. The Model-Room, which had escaped observation amongst the active business of the week, also came in for some share of attention; but the objects were fewer than for some years past.

CONCLUDING MEETING OF THE GENERAL COMMITTEE.

This important Meeting was held pursuant to adjournment at the Council Chamber at the Town Hall. The chair was taken at one o'clock precisely, by Sir R. H. Inglis. After the re-election of the Treasurer and Secretaries, Col. Sabine read the Report of the General Committee, which recommended the Amalgamation of the Sections of Zoology and Botany with that of Physiology; and application to Government for a vessel for conducting the important Tidal Observations which have been made under the superintendence of the Association, and the re-formation of the Committee for making Meteorological and Magnetical Observations and the [illegible] were agreed [illegible] had forwarded, [illegible] Association; and [illegible] yearly or half-yearly, should be left to the discretion of the Council. Various grants of money were then voted; but, their amount was much smaller than hitherto.

CONCLUDING GENERAL MEETING.

This was held in the afternoon, at the Theatre, when Sir R. H. Inglis, M.P. (the President), took the chair at three o'clock, amidst great applause. In the course of his address, the President took a review of the considerable accessions of foreigners present, the great proportion of whom spoke English, not in common conversation alone, but who trusted themselves to it in the delivery of their sentiments in large assemblies. The visit of Baron Humboldt, the first of the modern discoverers of the planet Neptune, M. Le Verrier and Mr. Adams, in friendly acquaintance—a circumstance as creditable to themselves as it was to science and their common nation—the visit of Baron Bunsen, the envoy of honour; our brother, Prince Albert, to several of their sectional meetings; and the attendance of the Prince of Canino, who was almost constantly at the Zoological Lecture, and who, in his pursuits of science, had shown a taste quite distinct from that of an individual with whom his name was identified. They had, also, a Royal contribution, in which the Royal Highness the Crown Prince of Sweden, whose maps, exhibited by Count Rosen, had excited the admiration of the hearts of his father, had shown his merits as a philosopher. Especial thanks were due to them, and they would carry back recollections of sentiments which would show that higher principles and feelings existed in England than those of class and politics The Chairman then called upon

Mr. J. Taylor, F.R.S., the General Treasurer, who stated that, during the present meeting, 1229 tickets had been issued. Of these 460 had been to the members and associates, 18 to new life members, and 40 to new annual members; 201 to new associates, 314 to life members, and 203 to ladies.

After the passing of votes of thanks to the University and City authorities, and some official routine business, Sir Robert Inglis adjourned the meeting, till the 9th of August, 1848, at Swansea, when the chair will be taken by the Marquis of Northampton, who will be supported, as Vice-Presidents, by the Marquis of Bute, Viscount Adare, M.P.; the Dean of Llandaff; Mr. Grove, F.R.S; and Mr Vivian.

From the Meeting, the great majority of the members left for the terminus of the Great Western Railway, where a special train was in waiting to convey them to London

The Meeting, from first to last, was a most agreeable reunion: the scientific results have been important; as well as agreeable. Among its pleasantest features was the report given by Dr. Buckland, at the Botanic Gardens, at which was witnessed the first interview between M. Le Verrier and Mr. Adams, the contemporaneous discoverers of the new planet Neptune

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

THE RADCLIFFE LIBRARY

The appearance of the Radcliffe Library, during the Evening Meetings held therein, was exceedingly splendid. To light the building, gas was specially laid on; and branches were carried out from the arches above the pillars into the Ionic pilasters, on the great piers, to light the gallery; whilst similar branches were affixed to the piers below the gallery. Huge vase-shaped glasses were placed at the top of the two exquisite candelabra, which are opposite the entrance doorway; and large jets of gas within them, shed a flood of light on the whole scene. From the number of grass-plots which disposed, the whole architectural features of the Library were illuminated; and brilliant lights at the extreme was the effect of the wide spanning arches, and the fanciful adornments in their spandrils, and the richly-decorated and paneled frieze above them. The elegant ornaments of the dome were detailed by the bright glow from the gas-lights; and when, at the windows, and by their gradual darkening, that it was eventide, it would have been impossible to imagine, from so bright a scene, otherwise than that daylight of extreme brilliancy disclosed pillar, and arch, and festoon, and fret.

A kind of desk was placed on each side of the room, near the doorway, for the President and Lecturer, &c., and in front of the rows, facing the desk, were chairs for the convenience of those who were in the body of the building. Large screens were affixed to the piers, and, on the wall behind the desk, for the convenient display of diagrams referred to in the discourses. Our illustration of the Interior of the Radcliffe Library shows the general arrangement of the interior; the desk, screens for diagrams, &c., precisely as we have described it; and, also, the gallery, filled with visitors.

THE RANDOLPH GALLERY

In the large pile called the Taylor and Randolph Buildings erected from the designs of C. R. Cockerell, Esq., R.A., is a very neat apartment decorated in a chaste style, and lighted from a coved ceiling. Upon its walls hang many pictures, and amongst them are those from the celebrated cartoons of Raffaele, in Hampton Court Palace. At one end of the Gallery a large screen was erected, as shown in our view, on which diagrams were exhibited. Forms were placed for the convenience of visitors, the President of the Section assembled in the gallery, sitting at a table, the Lecturer being on his right hand.

THE CONVOCATION HOUSE.

The Convocation House is a beautiful apartment, with a ceiling of exquisite fan-groining. The President, the Dean of Westminster, sat in the rostrum; and in the circular stalls, on either hand, some ladies and gentlemen. At the table, in front, were the Lecturers, and many geological specimens; somewhat lower was another table, a temporary one, on which other specimens were also displayed.

Screens of black linen were placed on either hand of the President, and on them were geological maps.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

One of the great attractions of the past week at this theatre has been the production of a new pas d'ensemble for the three charming danseuses, Cerito, Carlotta Grisi, and Rosati, rivalling, in the interest and excitement it creates, and in its beauty as a composition, the famous pas of the two past years. It would hardly have been possible to have assembled together three dancers whose styles were more admirably contrasted with each other than those of this fair trio. So far, the substitution of Rosati for Grahn is an advantage; as the latter, with her vigorous and intellectual style, belongs to the same school as Carlotta Grisi; whereas, the new favourite, Rosati, has a manner one distinct and peculiar manner of dancing, differing totally from that of both her sisters in art.

"Les Elémens" is most poetically conceived and executed: some of the effects presented by this personification of the elements are admirable. Such is especially that of Fire. The sudden opening of the volcano, and discharge of the Daughters of Fire, of which Carlotta Grisi is one, in their flame-coloured dresses, and trains of flame, has a very striking effect, which is increased when they advance two and two, with a quick, restless movement, resembling that of flames bursting out in several places at once. Rosati, who personifies Water, comes on with a step at first timid, but presently resembling the undulating movements of the waves, and then the act of swimming, which is extremely graceful, and has only the faults of being too short. Cerito, in a dress resembling, in its light aerial texture, its whiteness, and its flowers, some light summer cloud, as she bounds down from her well-known ease and activity, is an admirable personification of Air. This is followed by a pas, in which Water and Fire, the two discordant elements, are parted, and harmony restored, and brought between them by grace and various evolutions follow; but the grand trial of strength is the pas seul, which all three execute one after another, and in which all surpass themselves. The highest compliments were due to Rosati for the perfect resemblance to

EXHIBITION OF WORKS OF ART IN WESTMINSTER HALL.

THE inhabitants of Westminster have heard the sound of the carpenter's hammer in Westminster Hall, for the last few years, without exhibiting any alarm for the fate of a fellow-being. It was not so with our forefathers. We live in the mild times of peace; and brag Artists to their trial in the very Hall in which the Earl of Strafford and King Charles the First, Lord Lovat and the Rebel Lords, were condemned to perish on the scaffold. Strange events have occurred in this Hall: here, the Earl and Countess of Essex were tried for the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury; here, the Seven Bishops were tried; here, Sacheverel was tried for a sermon; and Byron for killing Mr. Chaworth; the Duchess of Kingston, for bigamy; Warren Hastings, for plunder and misrule; and Lord Melville, in our own time, for petty peculation. The present generation has ceased to witness such scenes. Here, George the Fourth gave his grand Coronation Dinner, with Dymock, on horseback, as the Champion of his cause; and here, since the destruction of the old Houses of Parliament, we bring Artists to trial, and distribute premiums for Frescoes, Oil Pictures, and Cartoons, with all the grave air of a judge passing sentence upon a criminal.

This, the fourth, and, from what we hear, the last, Exhibition in the Hall, is a very interesting one. But, before we describe the present Exhibition, it will be as well, perhaps, to remind our Readers what the three previous Exhibitions were like. The first, consisting entirely of Cartoons—140 in number—was opened to the public on the 3rd of July, 1843. Ten premiums were awarded on this occasion: three of £500 each, to Messrs. Armitage, Watts, and Cope; three of £200 each, to Messrs. Horsley, Bell, and Townshend; and four of £100 each, to Messrs. Frost, Parris, Selous, Bridges, and Severn. The Exhibition made what booksellers call a great sensation, and the Messrs. Longman were induced to pay a very large sum for the copyright of the prizes, and to expend a still larger sum in preparing them for publication—though the book they were promised in is still unpublished. The second Exhibition, consisting almost entirely of Frescos and Sculpture, was opened to the public on the 1st of July 1844; but on this occasion no premiums were either promised or awarded. In this Exhibition Mr. Armitage made a very indifferent appearance: nor was there, in the whole range of the Hall, much that remains upon the memory, beyond Mr. Maclise's "Knight," and "The Meeting of Jacob and Rachel," by Mr. C. W. Cope. The third Exhibition was opened to the public on the 30th June, 1845; and on this occasion three premiums of £200 each were awarded to Messrs. Paton, Armitage, and Tenniel, for the best personifications, or abstract representations, of Religion, Justice, and the Spirit of Chivalry. In the meantime, several commissions were given: six in Fresco—to Messrs. Maclise, Dyce, Cope, Redgrave, Horsley, and Thomas; three in Sculpture—to Messrs. Marshall, Foley, and Bell; and three trial commissions (for such we believe we must call them)—to Messrs. Paton, Armitage, and Tenniel. Mr. Dyce's Fresco is the only one of the six Frescoes finished; it is immediately over the throne in the House of Lords, and has been already engraved in this paper. The subject our readers will remember is "The Baptism of Ethelbert." How the others are advancing, we are not aware; but the Sculpture is at least progressing, for here, in the fourth Exhibition, we find the unfinished marble of Mr. Marshall's "Lord Clarendon," and the finished models of Mr. Foley's "Hampden," and Mr. Bell's "Lord Falkland;" three of the statues intended for St. Stephen's Hall, where the Commissioners design to place a series, beginning with the founders of English liberty in the reign of Charles I., and ending with Burke and Grattan in the reign of King George III.

The "Royal Commission of Fine Arts," under whose superintendence these Westminster Hall Exhibitions have been made, were appointed to enquire whether, on the re-building of the Houses of Parliament, advantage might not be taken of the opportunity thereby afforded of encouraging and promoting the Fine Arts in the United Kingdom; and, secondly, in what manner an object of so much importance might be most effectually promoted. As this is the last of the Exhibitions, the Commission is now in a state to report to the House of Commons what kind of Art should be introduced into the New Houses of Parliament, what artists should be employed, and how much money they would recommend to be expended. In making this Report, the Commissioners will, no doubt, bear in mind that there are artists in this country, of the highest excellence, who have abstained from competing on the four occasions—that the excellent Secretary of the Commission, Mr. Eastlake, the best-educated artist in the country, has abstained from competition—that Mr. Etty, the best colourist in the three kingdoms, has also abstained—that Mr. Mulready, the best designer in Great Britain, and Mr. Edwin Landseer, the best animal painter in the world, have been absent on all four occasions. There cannot, surely, be even a solitary reason for excluding men of acknowledged reputation, who have not competed, from working for the New Houses. We should be sorry to see very many of the prize-holders selected for permanent employment; and men like Eastlake, Etty, Mulready, and Landseer, permanently excluded. We want trial-pieces from the young and the unknown—not from the known and the admired; and we have the public feeling with us in this matter: for that will be an ill-judged Temple of Art in the Present Day, in which Eastlake, Etty, Mulready, and Landseer are strangers to its steps.

In our paper of last week we were only enabled to give the names of the gentlemen to whom the premiums had been awarded. For the sake, therefore, of supplying the fullest information, we subjoin the subjects selected by the artists successful on this occasion:—

"Burial of Harold at Waltham Abbey" F. R. Pickersgill	£500
"Alfred inciting the Saxons to Prevent the Landing of the Danes, by Encountering them at Sea"—G. F. Watts	500
"The Battle of Meanee" Edw. Armitage	500
"Richard Cœur de Lion forgiving Bertrand de Gourdon" John Cross	300
"Edward's Generosity to the People of Calais during the Siege of 1346" P. F. Poole, A.R.A.	300
"Christ Bearing the Cross," and "Reconciliation of Oberon and Titania"—J. Noe. Paton	300
"Parable of Forgiveness," and "Wisdom"—James E. Lauder ..	200
"The Departure of the 'Primitive Puritans,' or 'Pilgrim Fathers,' to the Coast of America, A.D. 1620" Charles Lucy	200
"Henry V., when Prince of Wales, Believing the King to be Dead, Takes the Crown from the Cushion"—J. Calcott Horsley ..	200

In a list of 103 exhibitors 9 have been rewarded and 94 left unrewarded.

Among the unrewarded ones we find the names of two Royal Academicians, Sir William Allan, R.A., and Henry Howard, R.A.; of one Associate of the Academy, T. Sidney Cooper, A.R.A.; one nobleman, Ear. Compton, the eldest son of the Marquis of Northampton; and the following artists without the pale of the Academy, but already favourably known to the public:—Augustine Aglio, E. H. Baily, James and George Foggo, J. Francis Gilbert, Edward A. Goodall, William Havell, the late B. R. Haydon, Frank Howard, T. M. Joy, R. S. Lauder (the elder brother of the prize-holder), William Linton (the classic landscape painter), Henry O'Neil, E. V. Rippingille, Joseph Severn, of Rome, and Henry J. Townshend, a second-class prize-holder on the first occasion.

It is easy to understand, from a list like this, that the race cannot have been won very easily. Nor has it. With the judges it would be impossible to find fault, nor could six better judges have been selected. Let us see who they are—three connoisseurs and three Royal Academicians—the connoisseurs being the Marquis of Lansdowne, Sir Robert Peel, and Mr. Rogers, the poet: all three liberal patrons of art, possessing fine collections; and the Royal Academicians being Sir Richard Westmacott, a sculptor, Mr. Etty a painter, and Mr. Cook, a painter, who has given up painting. We believe the selection has met with almost universal approbation—a few dissentients there must necessarily be—but, for our own parts, we can see little to find fault with in the general selection. We should differ, perhaps, in the particular classification of certain names, but surely would never exclude an artist admitted by the Commissioners, to include even one artist excluded by such competent authorities as the judges on this occasion.

The visitor who remembers the former Exhibitions will be agreeably disappointed on entering the Hall, to find an animated wall of glowing oil colours, where he remembers to have seen a collection of cold cartoons and still colder statues. The change is pleasing; nor would it be easy to find any exhibition in the metropolis more interesting at the present moment than this, the fourth, and last of the Artists competing for employment in the New Houses of Parliament.

We shall return to this subject in our next week's paper; but recommend, in the meantime, more than one visit to an Exhibition extremely interesting, in whatever light it may chance to be viewed.

CONGRATULATORY LINES ON THE INSTALLATION OF H.R.H. PRINCE ALBERT AT CAMBRIDGE, JULY, 1847.

BY THE REV. J. PEAT, M.A.

Time-honour'd Granta! let a child of song
Bid welcome reign thy ancient halls among: -
Reign, Joy supreme, in Granta's ancient halls,
When to her classic throne the Prince she calls.

Hail, honour'd sire of Britain's future king!
Heir of a princely race! thy praise I sing:
Active in mind, as amiable in mien,
Hail, much-loved Consort of a much-loved Queen!

Fair Albion smiled when first the nuptial vow
Was breath'd 'twixt thee and her who rules as now
The nation shouted forth its joy to heaven,
When to its Sovereign's arms a child was given.

Nor less does Granta's Senate now rejoice,
When Albert comes—responsive to its voice—
Comes to preside, to foster, and command,
With Learning and Religion hand in hand:
Comes to those groves, with classic mem'ries fraught,
Where Milton sang, and sterner Newton thought.

Albert, we greet thee well:—around thee press
Admiring crowds of England's old noblesse;
Nor men alone thy features fixing to view,
But England's daughters fain would greet thee too:
Lo! bright-eyed virgins lift their heads and smile—
Those fairest rose-buds of our Native Isle:
Lo! honour'd matrons wave their hands this morn
Mothers, whose rising sons our courts adorn;
One common prayer from ALL ascends above,
"To Albert and our QUEEN -long life, long love!"

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"E. B.," Melbourne -The required solution is as follows:—1. Kt from K 6th to B 8th; 2. P to K 4th; 3. K to Kt 7th; 4. Kt to K R 7th (ch); 5. Kt to K B 6th (ch); 6. P to K R 4th mate.

"G. H. M."—We are unacquainted with the game.

"F. B." "X. Y. Z." The author of 177 requests us to state that, in his original diagram of this Problem, a Black Kt stood at K Kt 3rd, which was subsequently removed as useless, but which appears to be necessary for the integrity of the position.

"T. W."—They shall be carefully examined.

"C. D. F."—Try G.ode's Divan, on Ludgate Hill; you will generally find some competitors there

"A. B.," Copar, Syle.—The Laws of Chess which are adopted by all players in England are those given at page 257, Vol. II., of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle;" and page 35 of Mr. Staunton's new "Handbook," just published.

"S. B." Hull.—They shall be given shortly.

"J. M T." See the elaborate Analysis of the Scotch Game, in the "Chess-Player's Handbook."

"Brunswician." -One of the positions shall be given in our Enigma column by-and-by.

"G. D. P." Stanley's "American Chess Magazine" can be got at Wiley and Putnam's, Paternoster-row.

"Subscriber," Hamburg.—If the Chess Players of Hamburg, and in Germany generally, who complain of the difficulty experienced in obtaining our Chess Periodicals with regularity, would be at the trouble to order them through Messrs. Williams and Norgate, the Foreign Booksellers, they might depend on receiving them punctually.

"W. F."—See the Notice above to "F. B." and "X. Y. Z"

"J. F."—In Enigma 174, Black is to move, and mate in four moves.

"A. D.," Berkenhead.—A King can Castle under the circumstances stated. Give an order to any Bookseller for the new "Handbook."

"Problem Mender."—Quite wrong: look again

"Ignoramus."—You are in error: try once more.

"G. A. H."—Enigma No. 169 can clearly be solved in three moves. In playing, we look upon the speediest mate as the best.

"Geo." We are unacquainted with the Game named.

"F. B. J.," Manchester.—Your solution will not do. Black has a better defence than you give him.

Solutions by "E. G. B.," "G. A. H.," "Soprazatta," "W. F.," "Brunswician," "M. P." "Query," "Admirer," "Phiz," "Post-Captain," "W. L. M.," and "Geo," are correct.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, No. 179.

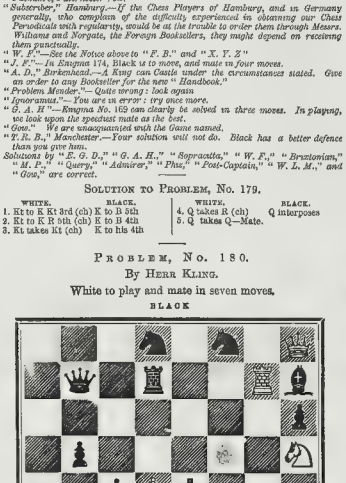
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to K Kt 3rd (ch)	K to B 5th	4. Q takes R (ch)	Q interposes
2. Kt to K R 4th (ch)	K to B 4th	5. Q takes Q—Mate.
3. Kt takes Kt (ch)	K to his 4th

PROBLEM, No. 180.

By HERR KLING.

White to play and mate in seven moves.

BLACK



WHITE.

CHESS MATCH.

The sensonable dulness of the Metropolitan Chess Circles at this period has been agreeably enlivened by the prospect of three or four contests now on the tapis between our leading players. For one of these, to be played by Mr. Harrwitz, giving odds, against Mr. G. Medley, preliminaries were settled last week, and we have been favoured with the moves in the opening Game, which came off on Monday, before a numerous assemblage of amateurs, at the London Chess Club.

GAME IN A MATCH BETWEEN MR. HARRWITZ AND MR. MEDLEY,

The former giving the odds of Pawn and two moves.

(Remove White's K B P from the board.)

BLACK. (Mr. M.)	WHITE. (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. M.)	WHITE (Mr. H.)
1. K P two		15. Q R to Q Kt sq	Q Kt takes P
2. Q P two	K P one	16. Kt takes Kt	P takes Kt
3. Q B P two	Q B P two	17. R takes P	Q to Q 4th
4. Q P one	Q P one	18. Q R P one	Q R to Q Kt sq
5. K P two	K Kt to R 3rd	19 Castles	Q takes Q R P
6. K B to Q 3rd	Q Kt to R 3rd	20. K R to Q Kt sq	Q Kt P one
7. Q Kt to B 3rd	K B to K 2nd	21. Q B P one (b)	K to K B sq
8. Q P takes P	B takes P	22. Kt to K B 4th (c)	Q P takes P
9. K B P one	B to K B 2nd	23. Kt to K 6th (ch)	B takes Kt
10. Q B takes Kt	P takes B	24. P takes B	K to Kt 2nd
11. Q Kt to B 3rd	K R to K Kt sq	25. P to K 6th. (d)	Q R to K B sq
12. Q to K B 3rd	h. B to K B 3rd	26. Q to K B 5th	K R to K R sq
13 K Kt to K 2nd	Q to Q R 4th (ch)	27. P takes B (ch)	R takes P
14. Q Kt P two (a)	Q to Q sq	28. R to K Kt 4th (ch)	And White resigns

(a) Very well played. White dare not take the Pawn.
(b) Threatening to win the adverse Queen by checking with the Bishop.
(c) This is cleverly conceived. Most players would have been content to take the Queen's Pawn.
(d) The attack is uncommonly well sustained. If Mr. Medley prosecutes the remaining games in the same vigorous style, the contest is likely to be one of the most severe that has been seen for some time.

GAME BETWEEN MESSRS. HARRWITZ AND WIEL,

The former giving his K Kt, and both playing without seeing the Chess-board.

(Remove White's K Kt from the board.)

WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. W.)	WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. W.
1. K P two	K P two	10. Q to Q 3rd	K R to K sq
2. Q P two	P takes P	11. Q Kt to Q 2nd	Kt takes K P
3. K B to Q B 4th	Q Kt to Q B 3rd	12. Kt takes Kt	Q B to K B 4th
4. K B P two	K B to Q B 4th	13. K Kt P two	B takes Kt
5. B takes K B P (ch)	K takes B	14. Q to K R 3rd	It takes Q B P
6. Q to K R 5th (ch)	K Kt P one	15. K B P one	B to K 5th
7. Q takes B	Q P one	16. Q to K R 6th (ch)	K to Kt sq
8. Q to her B 4th (ch)	K to Kt 2nd	17. K B P one	Q to her 2nd
9. Castles	K Kt to B 3rd	18. P to K B 7th (ch)	K to R sq

And White mated in three moves.

CHESS IN THE PROVINCES.

This hardly contested game was played the other day, by Mr. S. Boden against Messrs. B. and C, two of the best players in Hull, in consultation.

WHITE (B. & C.).	BLACK (S. B.).	WHITE (B. & C.).	BLACK (S. B.).
1. K P two	K P two	30. K R to K B sq	R to K B sq
2. K P two	Q P two	31. Q Kt to his 6th	P takes Kt
3. P takes Q P	K B to Q B 4th	32. Q R takes Q R P	R takes Kt
4. K Kt to B 3rd	Q B to Kt 5th	33. Q R takes R P	Kt to Q B 2nd
5. K P takes P	Q takes P	34. Q R to Q Kt 6th	B takes K R P (g)
6. Q Kt to B 3rd	B takes K Kt	35. K R to K Kt sq	B to Q 4th
7. Kt takes Q	B takes Q	36. R takes K R P	B takes Q R P
8. K takes Q B P (ch) (a)	K to Q sq	37. K R takes K B P	R to K Kt sq (h)
9. Kt takes Q R	Q B takes Q B P	38. K to Q 3rd	B to K 3rd
10. Q P one (b)	Q B to Q R 5th (c)	39 K B to his 6th	R to Q B sq (i)
11. Q B to K B 4th (d)	Q Kt to K 2d	40. K R P two	Kt to Q 4th
12. Q R to Q B sq	K B to Kt 5th(ch)	41. Q R to Q 6th (ch)	K to his 2d
13. Q B to Q 3d (e)	B takes Q B (ch)	42. R to Q 4th (k)	R to Q B 8th (l)
14. K takes B	B to his 3d	43. R to his 8th(m)	Kt to K B 3d (ch)
15. Q Kt P two	Q Kt to K 3d	34. K to his 3d (n)	Kt to Q 4th (ch)
16. Q Kt P one (f)	B takes q Kt P	35. K to Q 2nd	R to Q B 5th
17. Q R to Q Kt sq	Q B to his 3rd	36. K to Q 3rd	R to Q B 6th (ch)
18. Q P one	K to Q 2nd	37. K to K 2nd (o)	R to Q B 7th (ch)
19. K B takes Q Kt	P takes B	38. K to K B 3rd (p)	R to Q B 6th (ch)

And R. gave perpetual check, as White could not make up their minds to abandon the Q P, which, as often as White play K to Q or to Q 2nd, B will always attack at Q B 5th, threatening to take it checking.

(a) This move the allies deemed better than taking B with K.
(b) Their best move—preventing the B going to the corner.
(c) Perhaps his best move, as the K would gain time by attacking his B.
(d) To let out the Kt by moving K P one.
(e) Bad—losing time at least.
(f) A hasty slip, apparently
(g) It would have been better play in Black to preserve his Ps, and let White keep thus.
(h) A lost move.
(i) Originally played with intent to ch with B at K B 4th, and then move the Kt.
(k) Intending to give up Q R for the Kt and B
(l) Playing R anywhere else we did better the game
(m) Intending to play the other R to Q 6th, threatening Mate.
(n) A vague fear of the B prevented them from playing K to Q 3d
(o) If they play K to K 4th they are mated
(p) If they play K to Q 3d, Black B would mate prettily enough.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

(HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.)

No. 176.—By W. H. C.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at K Kt 7th	K at Q 4q	B at Q B 6th
B at K B 4th		P at Q 7th

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 177.—By S. Boden.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q B 3rd	K at K R 7th	Q at K B 2nd	P at K Kt 7th
Q at K B 2nd

White to play, and mate in three moves.

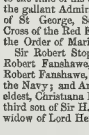
No. 178.—By A. L——n, of Holkham.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q R 6th	K at Q B 4th	Ps at K 4th, Q 3rd,
B at K R 4th	Ps at Q 6th, Q B 3rd,	and Q Kt 2nd
Kt at Q 6th	and Q Kt 4th

White to play, and mate in three moves.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

ADMIRAL THE HON SIR ROBERT STOPFORD, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., &c.



This distinguished officer, Governor of Greenwich Hospital, died on Friday morning, the 25th ultimo, at Richmond, Surrey, whither he had removed for change of air. He was third son of James, second Earl of Courtown, and uncle to the present Peer. The deceased Admiral was born in 1768. Entering the navy at an early age, he served as midshipman in the Prince George in Rodney's actions, and obtained his commission as Lieutenant in 1785. He subsequently commanded successively the Lowestoffe, the Aquilon, and the Phaeton, under Lords Howe and Cornwallis, and performed many gallant and important services to his country. In 1803, he was appointed to the Spencer, and was employed off Ferrol and Corunna; the following year he was nominated Colonel of Marines; and, in 1806, participated in Sir John Duckworth's brilliant action off St. Domingo, where he was severely wounded.

Captain Stopford's next service was in the Exhibition against Copenhagen, under Admiral Parker and Lord Nelson. Having been advanced to the rank of Rear-Admiral, in 1808, he was appointed to command the Channel Fleet, during which he blockaded a French squadron in Aix Roads; for which exploit, and his conduct in an attack upon the enemy, he received the thanks of Parliament. In 1810, Admiral Stopford was nominated to the command of the Squadron at the Cape. Subsequently, he commanded the naval forces at the capture of Java. In 1813, the gallant officer returned to England—was made a K.C.B. in 1815—and became Full Admiral in 1825, and a G.C.B. in 1831. Admiral Stopford continued to serve his country in the Mediterranean, where he held the naval command for some time, and was engaged at the capture of St. Jean d'Acre, in 1840. For his services on this occasion he was a second time honoured with the thanks of Parliament.

After retiring from the command in the Mediterranean, Sir Robert was appointed Governor of Greenwich Hospital, which office he held up to the time of his decease. Besides the British honours conferred upon the gallant Admiral, he received from the Emperor Nicholas the Order of St George, Second Class; from the King of Prussia, the Grand Cross of the Red Eagle; and was nominated a Knight Commander of the Order of Maria Theresa, in 1841.

Sir Robert Stopford married, 29th June, 1809, Mary, daughter of Robert Fanshawe, Esq., by which lady he leaves three sons, viz.—Robert Fanshawe, Captain in the Navy; James John, also a Captain in the Navy; and Arthur Fanshawe; and several daughters, of whom the eldest, Christiana Fanshawe, is married to the Rev. William F. Douglas, third son of Sir H. Douglas, Bart.; and the third, Henrietta Maria, is widow of Lord Henry Russell, R.N., who died in 1842.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SIR HENRY ASKEW, K.C.B.

This gallant officer died on the 25th June, at Cologne, in his 73rd year, having been born 7th May, 1775. He was third son, by Bridget, his wife, daughter and heiress of John Watson, Esq., of Goswick, co. Durham, of the late John Askew, Esq., of Pallinsburn, fourth son of Dr. Adam Askew, of Storrs Hall, and succeeded to the representation of this branch of the Askews at Redheugh, co. Durham, on the decease of his elder brother, in 1838.

Sir Henry entered the army, as Ensign in the 1st Foot, in 1793, and served in Holland and Flanders, Sicily, the Mediterranean, the Expedition to Walcheren, in 1809; and in the Peninsula and South of France, from 1812 to 1814. He participated in the brilliant operations of 1815; was wounded at Quatre Bras, and received a Waterloo Medal, as well as one for his services at Nive. He was knighted in 1821, and attained the rank of Lieutenant-General in 1837.

HEADS OF THE MONTHS.—DRAWN BY KENNY MEADOWS.

JULY.

THE month of Julius with solstitial fire,
Red as the garment which the Cæsar wore,
When smote the blade of Brutus in his sire
Ingratitude, and Pompey's statue bore
The rubric of revenge—July comes o'er
The ripening plain with Ceres' blessings rife,
Earth feels the sunshine in her bosom's core,
And every germ receives redoubled life.
Slumbers the toil'd Sun in his glorious car,
Now that the summit of his path is won,
And genially shines out the Evening Star,
As pouring on our sphere her benizon!
There may it fall from Heaven's all-bounteous cope,
As Seraph's smile upon the wings of Hope.

Hail to thee, glowing month! whose swarty brow
Views with anxiety the surging plain
Whence spring the golden treasures of the plough,
The waving gold of Nature's fair domain.
Honour'd thou art for trophies of the main,
Of flood and field: yet nobler burns the crown
Wreath'd by the hands of Peace without a stain,
And never blighted by a tyrant's frown.
The dark clouds vanish from our suffering isles,
The smile of Plenty mantles o'er the earth.
No speck of shame our peaceful flag defiles.
Brave Month! fill up the measure of our mirth!
Let Ceres' sickle, rusted late by grief,
Reap her fair recompence—th' abundant sheaf.

L.

THE AMERICAN STEAM-SHIP, "WASHINGTON."

THIS is the first of a new line of steam-vessels to run between New York and Bremen. Her first passage was a race with the Britannia; respecting which we find the following unfortunate anticipation in the New York Herald:—

"We have to say, that if the Britannia beats the Washington over (and they both, we understand, start the same day), she will have to run by the deep nines, and put in more coal. We shall have, in two years' time, a system of Atlantic, Gulf, and Pacific steamers in operation, that will tell a brilliant story for the enterprise of Brother Jonathan. We are bound to go ahead, and steam is the agent of the age. We expect yet to see the day when a traveller will be able to leave New York, and, going eastward all the time, will be enabled to make the circuit of the earth, coming in by Husscualco, in the summer interval between two sessions of Congress, spending a month or two in the Mediterranean on the way."

The race was won by the Britannia by two full days. The delay on the passage is stated to have been occasioned by the steam-machinery of the Washington giving way; besides which, she proved a slow goer, and is pronounced by our nautical critics anything but a handsome steamer.

A Correspondent of the Mechanic's Magazine has drawn the following comparison between this vessel and the Britannia:—

"The Washington is stated to be of 2000 horses' power, and is 1750 tons, Government measure, or 2000 tons carpenters' measure; so, her steam power is to her tonnage as 1 to 1, while the Britannia has only 1 horse power to 2¼ tons. To go a little, however, more into detail: both vessels have two cylinders, I believe, of the same diameter, viz., 72 inches, and both have side beam-engines; the stroke of the Washington is 10 feet, her boilers are able to carry (they say) 30lbs. of steam; but, if we allow her only 28lbs. ⋈ 13 vacuum, she will be still double the power of the Britannia with 5lbs ⋈ 13lbs., i.e., = 900 horses' power (450 ⋈ 2). I am now speaking of full steam, or at least both cutting off at the same point. The Herald (New York) says the Washington's wheels are 39 feet diameter, and 7½ feet dip; but the latter is of course an error, and probably means 7½ feet face; she has two boilers 36 feet ⋈ 15 feet on the plan: there are three furnaces, each 7 feet ⋈ 4 feet 6 inches ⋈ 6 = 189 feet. Well then, there you have data from which you may calculate how many horses' power can be got off that great surface with anthracite and blowers. Her recipient heating surface may be large; she has flues, perhaps, 12 inches in diameter."

We now give some details of the passage of the Washington, Frederick Hewit, commander. The vessel arrived in Southampton Water on the 15th ult., after a passage of fourteen days from New York; she experienced fine weather, and brought 127 passengers. The Britannia, which left New York on the same day as the Washington, reached Liverpool on the 13th.

The Washington left Southampton on the 16th, and of her passage through Spithead, the Times Correspondent remarks:—"In point of size she looked like an elongated three-decker, with only one streak round her; but about as ugly a specimen of steam-ship building as ever went through this anchorage. She did not appear to make much use of her 2000 horse power either, but seemed rather to roll along than steam through the water. She excited considerable curiosity, although her performance, as compared with the Britannia, had evidently taken the edge off the feeling with which the vessel would have been viewed had a different result been obtained in her favour."

She arrived, at six o'clock on the morning of the 18th, at the port of Bremershafen, near Bremen. The intelligence was remitted by telegraph to Bremen, and, as soon as it was known, all the houses displayed the flags of the United States, Germany, and Bremen. The Burgomaster went on board the Washington to congratulate the Captain on his arrival, and on the commencement of regular steam communication between Bremen and New York. He then conducted the Captain to Bremen, where a banquet was given him by the Senate in the Town Hall. Other rejoicings also took place. The Washington brought 84 passengers, and about 3000 letters destined for Bremen and the north of Germany.

On Sunday morning last, the Washington arrived in the Southampton Docks, in forty-six hours from Bremen, against a head wind. Her voyage out occupied forty-four hours. She brought four passengers for England, and forty-six en route to New York, for which city the Washington will not leave till the 10th of July, being detained here to be fitted with new and larger hot wells, which are already cast for her, by arrangements made previous to her leaving for Bremen. The passengers from Bremen are to be boarded at the different hotels during their detention. In order to enable the public to view this fine steamer, Mr. Croskey, the American Consul, has very liberally presented the Mayor of Southampton, Mr. Le Feuvre, with an unlimited number of tickets of admission, the proceeds of which are to be presented to the local institutions.

ANOTHER ROBBER DISCOVERED BY THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—On Monday, a person entered the Wolverton Station of the London and North-Western Railway, and took a third-class ticket for Birmingham. The train started, and had nearly arrived at Blisworth, a distance of ten miles, when a police-officer inquired of the station-master at Wolverton what parties had taken tickets at that station by the last train. On the information being afforded him, the officer was led to believe that a person suspected of a robbery that was committed in the neighbourhood the previous evening had proceeded with his booty by that train. The electric telegraph from Wolverton to Blisworth was immediately put into use, and the necessary information sent thither. On the arrival of the train at Blisworth, the carriages were inspected, and a person answering the description found. He was apprehended, and the stolen goods were found in his luggage. The prisoner was brought back by the next train to Wolverton, and safely lodged the same evening in the Aylesbury Gaol.

THE UNITED STATES STEAM-SHIP "WASHINGTON."

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

OXFORD CASTLE.

THE picturesque relic shown in our Illustration is one of the towers which erewhile added to the strength of the walls of Oxford Castle. The fortress itself, though once a place of great strength, has long since been demolished; some of the western towers having been pulled down by the Parliamentarians, when they took Oxford, and buildings more in accordance with the improved mode of warfare erected in their stead; but these erections were destroyed by Charles II. in 1652 when he came from Worcester to Oxford.

OXFORD CASTLE.

The Castle was begun in 1071, by order of William the Conqueror, by Robert D'Oilli, and finished in 1072. D'Oilli was the first Constable of the Castle; and, on his death in 1091, was succeeded by his son Robert, who, in 1141, delivered it to the Empress Maud, and within its walls she kept the festival of Easter with great pomp. In the autumn of 1142, King Stephen, having taken the city of Oxford, immediately invested the Castle, and declared he would not raise its siege till he had the Empress Maud in his power. The siege lasted for three months, and the garrison in the fortress were reduced to the greatest privations, through famine, and the repeated assaults of Stephen's army, when one night the Empress made her escape, in a manner as remarkable as it was romantic. It being the depth of winter, the river frozen over, and the ground covered with snow; the Empress, accompanied by three trusty knights—herself and followers being all clad in white, that their figures might not be observed—left the Castle by a postern, passed all the sentinels of the investing army unobserved, travelled on foot to Abingdon, and thence proceeded to Wallingford on horseback, where she was soon after joined by her brother, the Earl of Gloucester, who was marching with a powerful army to her relief. The day after this singular escape of the Empress, Oxford Castle was surrendered to the King.

The prison of this Castle was given by Henry III. to the peculiar jurisdiction of the Chancellor of the University, as a place of confinement for rebellious clerks; and, by statute of the third year of the same King's reign, it was appointed as the common gaol of the county.

The Castle has long been the property of Christ Church, and is held by the county, of the Chapter of Christ Church, as a prison; and after the demolition of the City Gaol, in the North Gate, or Bocardo, the city prisoners were confined within its walls also. The Tower represented in our Engraving was long used as a gaol, but a new building has, within the last few years, been erected, so that its tapering walls do not now contain criminals.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR JULY.

The old mill and the mill-stream greatly enhance the picturesque appearance of the grey walls of the Tower; indeed, the whole "bit" is as "effective" as if arranged by a painter.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR JULY.

THE Summer Costumes are now in all their freshness and novelty; and the Tuileries, the Champs Elysées, and the Bois de Boulogne, are spangled, like parterres of flowers, with the most varied and brilliant toilettes. We have remarked taffetas, of white, rose, bright green, straw, pearl-grey, and cendre de rose, as very recherché materials; but those most in request are the Vert d'Italy, and the Bleu de Syrie; the latter with seven small volants, pinked. The robes are made long, and with the sleeves highly trimmed. At the waist is worn a ribbon, which terminates in a cockade and two ends, which are fringed. The volants remain decidedly the most favourite trimming of the skirt.

Upon the corsages of the most elegant robes are worn Spanish aiguillettes of which carnelian, studded with buttons to the taste, of marcasite, opal, turquoise, pearl, agate, and mosaic; and buttons of mother-of-pearl and ivory, highly carved, are in high favour.

The Chapeaux of crape are most generally worn nearly all white; and these will continue the favourites throughout the summer, since they harmonise better with the toilettes, whatever may be their material. Italian or rice-straw are also in great repute.

Mantelets are worn of varied hues; but white muslin is much in request, trimmed with three volants, festoons, &c.

Among the favourites for the month are chapeaux of Italian straw, with one flower; robe of white taffetas, trimmed with three volants; white muslin mantelets, trimmed with lace, &c. Or, robes of striped taffetas, and mantelet of black taffetas, trimmed with black lace, are the favourite costumes on what may be termed, for the season, "dull days."

SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.

THE evening spectacle of the Siege of Gibraltar, at this popular resort is very good, if we take into consideration the terrific realities sought to be represented. The action commences about dusk, when the French and Spanish ships begin to take their positions before the town, upon which they commence a brisk fire: this is as sharply returned by the besieged; the red hot shot from the town cause many of the vessels to take fire, when a very beautiful effect is produced; some are burnt to the water's edge, the sailors clinging to the masts and rigging of the vessel; while others explode. That represented in the centre of the Engraving is blowing up, and discharging into the air an immense quantity of crackers and other fireworks, which, although they have nothing to do with the Siege, afford great delight to the spectators.

"THE SIEGE OF GIBRALTAR," AT THE SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—

FASHONS FOR JULY.

(From Berger's " Gazette of Fashion.")

SIMPLICITY is the order of the day in every description of the toilette, but it is a simplicity of the most tasteful and elegant description; and, we must own also, at a very expensive kind: for lace and embroidery are very general accessories to the majority of summer dresses. Indeed, lace is employed in every way in which it can be used.

Chapeaux of fancy straw will be much worn; but, to be in good taste, they must be of a quiet kind, and very simply trimmed. Silk capotes, either drawn or bouillonnés, and worn in general with veils, are also fashionable. Barege shawls, black moire manicles, and taffeta visites of quiet colours, are in general request.

Manicles, visites, &c., there is but little change in the form of. Many manicles composed of silk, muslin, and lace, are made smaller than usual, a mode which seems likely to increase in favour.

The most novel Pardessus is one between the visite and the paletot; it is somewhat larger than the first, and more gracefully adapted to the shape than the other: they are made both in muslin and taffeta; they are cut in such a manner that the short sleeve may almost be termed an invisible one, both from its size, and being cut in the pardessus.. This corsage is very high at the back, but open half-way to the waist in front; the remaining part is closed by fancy silk ornaments, if the cloak is silk,—or knots of ribbon, if muslin. The garnitures to this former case is composed of passementerie dentelle, or of one of those very rich flat fancy silk trimmings, so strongly resembling embroidery, that they can hardly be distinguished from it. The latter kind of trimming is exceedingly rich and very broad border of embroidery, which encircles the whole of the pardessus, and is edged with lace.

We have noticed lately, in open carriages, very pretty Parasols of light-coloured silks, as pink, and lilac lined with white, and trimmed with two rows of fringe, the top row narrower than the second; the first row is of the colour of the parasol, the second that of the lining: the effect is equally pretty and novel.

Muslin Robes, of the paliese form, lined with silk, are now in especial favour; and, we think, are likely to continue so all the summer. These dresses are all made with high corsages, full on the shoulders, and confined at the waist by a broad ceinture with long floating ends.

The Peignoir maintains its vogue in home dress, both for complete deshabille and elegant morning costume.

Caps are indispensable in morning negligé, they are also in favour for social parties.

There is considerable variety in the forms of Sleeves: Their size depends on the material of which they are composed. Tight ones still predominate for silk robes. They may be either quite long, with lace or embroidered muslin ruffles or cuffs, or a three-quarter length. Those that are only sufficiently long to display the bouillonnés of the under-sleeve are more in request, and so are those of the horse-shoe form. If the robe is of a light material, the sleeve is always demi large. Sometimes it is demi-long over a full one of muslin bouillonnés, the bouillons formed by entre-deux of lace or embroidery.

White Robes are now generally in evening dress; muslin, tarlatane, and mous*seline de soie* are most in request, but not to the exclusion of summer silks, though the latter are in a minority. The corsages of these robes, though cut low, are very moderately and becomingly so. Double skirts are still fashionable, but less numerous than they were.

Fashionable colours have not changed since our last.

MUSIC.

CONCERTS OF ANCIENT MUSIC. The eighth and concluding concert of the season was given on Wednesday night, his Grace the Duke of Wellington being the Director, in the absence of the Earl of Westmoreland, on his diplomatic duties at Berlin. The noble Lord is a staunch supporter of the musical interests, and has done much for the promotion of art in this country. His Lordship having been the founder of the Royal Academy of Music, and having been the first to improve the programmes of the Ancient Concerts. His uncle, "the Duke," did the honours gracefully on Wednesday, at a grand dinner at Apsley House, at which the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, the Archbishop of York, the Countess of Westmoreland, the Earl and Countess of Wilton, Lord and Lady Charles Wellesley, Sir H. R. Bishop, &c., were present; and, to the Hanover-square Rooms with his guests; an excellent selection being provided, comprising choral pieces from the works of Handel, Beethoven, Mozart, &c. The novelties were Haydn's duo, "Sappi, amor mio," by Miss Dolby and Mr. Allan and Miss Birch; and an air from Zingarelli's "Romeo e Giulietta," sung by the first-mentioned vocalist. A fine duo from Mehul's "Joseph" was sumptuously sung by Frechkai and Madame Caradori Allan, in this concert, is considerable impression by her powerful singing in Vinci's air, "Vo solcando;" it is some time since this artiste presented herself under such favourable circumstances. With her natural qualities, if she could overcome the dramatic mannerism of Italy, she might be one of the greatest of European singers. We did not admire Miss Dolby's treatment of Clarchetti's air, "Ombre Amate;" it lacked impressiveness. M. Kogier's French mode of disposing of Cimarosa's "Pria che spunti," out of Mehul's romance, "A peine au sortir de l'enfance," known by the English version, "E'er infancy's bud," proves that a very clever singer on the school may be very inferior when he changes it for another style. Roger, at the Opera Comique, in Paris, is unrivalled. Mr. Sterndale Bennett performed on the pianoforte a movement from S. Bach's Concerto in D minor, to perfection.

MDLLE. VERA AND SIGNOR EMILIANI.—These artists—the former an Italian vocalist of ability, and the latter an accomplished violinist:—gave a Concert on Monday, at the Beethoven Rooms, aided by Madame Heselle, Madame Barone, Miss Dolby, Signori Rizzi, Chabatta, Piatti, Puzzi, and Herr Pischek; Benedict and Signor Vera being the accompanyists.

MR. ROBERT GREEN.—This pianist has had the advantage of having been a pupil of Benedict and Leopold de Meyer, and has profited by their instructions. He possesses considerable attainments, and ably played in the Concertante Duo for piano and violin, by Osborne and De Beriot, with Willy The Concert was altogether a very agreeable one. Its vocalists there were Madame Caradori Allan, Madame Hennelle, Mdlle. Molina de Mendi, Miss Steele, Miss Dolby, Madame Mortier de Fontaine, the Misses Williams, Signori Ciabatta, Montesi, Brizzi, Herr Brahm, Mr. Frank Cooke, Mr. H. Phillips, and Mr. John Parry; and as solo players, M. Godefroid, the harpist; Benedict, piano; and Willy, violin; Benedict, H. Green, and Jules de Glimes being the conductors.

MADAME AND HERR GOFFRIE.—The Matinee Musicale of Herr Goffrie, the violinist, and Madame Goffrie, the pianiste, at the Beethoven Rooms, on Tuesday, contained a judicious selection. The Kreutzer Sonata of Beethoven, for piano and violin, was executed by the concert-giver and Mr. Blagrove; and Beethoven's Quartett in E minor, one of the Rasoumofsky set, was executed by Jeachim, Goffrie, Hill, and Hausmann; and one of Mayseder's Trios, for piano, violin, and violoncello, by Madame Goffrie, Herr Goffrie, and Piatti. Spohr and Beniedict were the conductors, and Miss Messent and Weiss the vocalists. Mr. J. B. Chatterton played a harp fantasia.

MISS S. CHARLTON.—Mrs Stephens will, perhaps, the pianiste, gave a Matinee Musicale, on Tuesday, at No. 16, Berners-street, assisted by Gerhard Taylor, the harpist, Mr H Gear, Mr. Weisbrober, Miss E. Lyon, &c.

MR. R. BLAGROVE.—This concert-giver gave his annual Concert, on Monday, at the Mortimer-street Rooms; and, with Messrs. G. and J. Case, played a trio for three concertinas effectively. H. Blagrove, violin, Herr Hausmann, violoncello; Miss Williams, the Misses Williams, Mr. Lockey, John Parry, &c., were the principal vocalists.

MR. GEORGE PERRY'S ORATORIO OF "HEZEKIAH."—Mr. Perry, the organist of Quebec Chapel, and the leader of the Sacred Harmonic Society, is a painstaking musician; but, industry is not genius, and the latter figuratively, in the composition of an oratorio, is a sine qua non. As we cannot conscientiously attribute to Mr. Perry any pretensions to the latter quality, we must be pardoned for not entering into any criticism of his new work of "Hezekiah," produced, on Monday night, at the Hanover-square Rooms, with the aid of a full band and chorus, and with Miss Birch, Miss Dolby, Messrs. Lockey and Phillips, as leading vocalists.

MUSICAL CHIT-CHAT.

The eight and last meeting of the Beethoven Quartet Society took place on Monday, the executants being Joachim, Sainton, Hill, and Rousseau.

We are glad to learn that a performance will be given in the Beethoven Rooms, in Harley-street, for the benefit of M. Meissonier, who has so ably managed the affairs of the Society. The selection will take place on the 14th instant, when Joachim, Sainton, Hill, W. Thomas, Cioccani, Barret, Baumann, Jarrett, and Lindsay Sloper, will assist.

Of the Grand Morning Performance, yesterday, at the Royal Italian Opera, we must defer a notice until the evening week: as also of Mr. Muller's Concert last night (Friday), at the Music Hall, Store-street, when Beethoven's music to "Egmont," with Goethe's tragedy, recited by Mr. Wills, was performed.

This morning (Saturday) will be celebrated, at the Hanover-square Rooms, "The Ode," written by Wordsworth, and composed by Professor Walmisley, to be performed on Tuesday morning, at the Cambridge Installation. There will be a Concert on Monday evening, at which her Majesty will be present. The artists engaged for "The Ode," are Misses Birch and Dolby, Messrs Lockey and Phillips. Alboni, Salvi, and Labiache, con., will sing in addition at the Concert. There will be a chorus of 150 voices, and the band will be composed of the principals of the Royal Italian Opera orchestra.

The Ethiopian serenaders close a long and profitable engagement this evening at the St. James's Theatre, and will appear in white faces for the first time.

On Tuesday will be the Eighth and Last Meeting of the Musical Union.

On Friday next, the management of the Royal Italian Opera has kindly consented that the great singers of that establishment may sing at a concert in aid of the funds for the Italian Gratuitous School.

Spohr, on the same evening, will conduct, at Exeter Hall, his oratorio of "The Fall of Babylon."

On Saturday morning will be the Fourth and Last Concert of the Royal Academy of Music

Mr. W. H. Seguin has been appointed principal bass singer at the Temple Church

Verdi's "Macbeth" has been played at Florence with a new cast; Madame Boccabadati appearing as Lady Macbeth, and De Bassini as Macbeth. It will be produced at Naples, Milan, Venice, Rome, with Grisi and Bonconi in these characters.

A Musical Festival is to take place at Ghent, with a chorus of 1479 voices, composed of forty-one German Societies and fifty Belgian Choral Societies. The band, in proportion to this chorus, is equally large, being only 100 players.

MM. Duponchel and Roqueplan are to be the Directors of the Académie Royale de Musique in Paris, in place of M. Leon Pillet.

Donizetti, since he has been removed to a House in Paris, in the Champs Elysées, has improved slightly in his health, but his imbecility is a hopeless case.

At the Musical Festival given in the Circus of the Champs Elysées, there were 800 musicians taken from the military bands, and a chorus of 400 voices of the Orphean Society.

Madame Malibran Garcia has played Norma and Valentine in the "Huguenots" (both in German), at the Frankfort Opera, with signal success.

Madame Thillon has been singing lately in the south of France with her customary success. Kalkbrenner, Osborne, and Smith, are the principal artistes on the eve of his departure for London, by a fall on the pavement.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—Very limited supplies of English wheat have been received up to our market this week, yet several of Monday's enquid samples were on offer to-day. Owing to the extreme dearness of foreign the demand for all kinds of wheat, of home produce, was excessively dull, and scarcely any sales were effected, notwithstanding the factors offered 2s/ quarter less money. The top price of fine red wheat is fully 8s per quarter dearer than a week ago. The arrivals of foreign wheat into London, since Monday last, have been very moderate, viz.:—

	Qrs.	Flour.
Dantzic	1,200	1,000
Pomerania	1,000	—
Prussia	1,000	—
Holland	1,000	—
Belgium	1,000	—
Total	5,200	1,000

Of barley, 1,000 quarters have arrived from Dantzic, and 1,000 from Belgium. Of oats, 1,000 quarters have arrived from Holland, and 1,000 from Belgium. Of beans, 1,000 quarters have arrived from Dantzic, and 1,000 from Belgium. Of peas, 1,000 quarters have arrived from Belgium.

ARRIVALS.—English: Wheat, 2,750 quarters; barley, 20; malt, 2950; oats, 320 British: Wheat, —; barley, —; malt, —; oats, —. Foreign: Wheat, 21,870; barley, 6810; malt, —; oats, 48,150. Flour: 1230 sacks 2960 barrels

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 72s to 84s; ditto white, 80s to 90s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 72s to 84s; ditto white, 80s to 88s; rye, 52s to 56s; grinding barley, 30s to 32s; distilling, 34s to 36s; malting ditto, 40s to 42s; Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 74s to 78s; brown do., 70s to 80s; Kingston and Ware, 78s to 82s; Chevalier 80s to 82s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire malt, 70s to 74s; Scotch, 68s to 72s; Peterboro', 68s to 70s; Fenland and Cole Brook, 68s to 72s; ditto white, 70s to 72s; tick beans, new, 36s to 38s; ditto old, 40s to 42s; grey peas, 34s to 36s; maple, 36s to 38s; white, 35s to —; harlings, 32s to 36s, per quarter. Town-made flour, 62s to 70s. Seconds, 50s to 56s. Essex and Yorkshire, 46s to 50s per 280lbs. Linseed cakes, London, new, 7l to —; old, —l to —. Rapeseed, —l to —. Rape cakes are quite as dear. Coriander, 15s to 20s per cwt. Canaryseed, 44s to 48s per quarter. Tares, 6s to 8s per bushel. English Rapeseed (new) £31 to £33 per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes, English, £18 to £19 per 2000 lbs. Foreign, £8 10s to £10 per 1000. Rapeseed cakes £7 10s to £9 0s per ton. Canary, new, 44s per quarter. English Clover-seed, red, —s to —s; extra, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; extra, up to —s. Foreign, red, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; extra, —s per cwt.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the Metropolis are from 10d to 11½d; of household ditto, 8d to 9½d per 4lbs loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 91s 4d; barley, 35s 6d; oats, 32s 11d; rye, 54s 11d, beans, 57s 8d; peas, 57s 9d.

The Last Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 94s 10d; barley, 34s 0d; oats, 34s 6d; rye, 70s 8d; beans, 58s 5d; peas, 59s 9d

TEA.—On Wednesday 2,000 packages of Tea were offered at public sale. About 1800 found buyers, at an advance in the value of Gunpowder and Young Hyson, of from 2d to 4d per lb.; but all other kinds were lower. Bohea, 1s 2d to 1s 3d; Congou, 1s 3d to 1s 5d.

Sugar.—The transactions in raw sugar have been large this week, yet prices are still leaden-sovereign. Refined goods are heavy, at 36s to 38s 6d for Scotch, and 39s per cwt for standard lumps

Coffee.—We have no material alteration to notice in the value of coffee. The transactions are only in detail, with a slow sa e

Rice.—The article is very dull, and from 1s to 2s per cwt cheaper.

Provisions.—A very extensive business has been transacted in Irish butter this week, at full prices. Cork, firsts, is selling at 92s to 94s; Waterford 86s to 88s; Carlow 90s to 92s, and Limerick, 86s per cwt. Foreign qualities are unchanged. Bacon is in limited demand, but rather, though in good supply to quite fix per cwt dearer. The best qualities are producing 72s to 74s, and middling and inferior sorts, 70s to 72s per cwt. The supply of hams is large, and heavy. Fine new Dorset is selling at 92s to 96s; middling do., 86s to 90s; and Waterford, 80s per cwt. Prime lard is in good request, at 86s to 88s per cwt. English cheese supports the late improvement in value, while American is held on higher terms. Bacon is steady, at very full prices. Hams and tongues are in limited request, at former quotations. Beef is at 75s to 77s per mess money. Hams move off readily, but we can notice no improvement in value. Lard is in steady demand, at 80s to 82s per cwt. Pork is in fair request, at 75s to 77s per barrel for new.

Tallow.—This market is quiet, at 50s on the spot, and 47s 3d for arrival. Town tallow is 6s to 10s 3d net cash.

Oils.—On the whole the oil market is steady, yet the business doing is only moderate, at late rates

Rum.—We have to report a very heavy sale for rum, at a decline of from 1d to 2d per gallon. The 10 per cent proof, 1s 2d per gallon; and 25 per cent, 1s 4d.

Wool.—Very few transactions have taken place in wool this week, but prices have not given way.

Potatoes.—The supplies of new potatoes are on the increase, yet the demand is active, at from 8s to 9s per cwt.

Hay and straw.—Meadow hay, £3 3s to £3 18s; clover ditto, £5 5s to £4 18s; and straw, £1 16s to £1 18s per load.

Coals (Friday).—Adair's Ins, Chester Main, 16s 9d, Holywell Main, 16s 6d; New Tanfield, 15s 3d; Russell's Hetton, 15s 6d; Wylam, 15s 6d; Lambton, 15s 6d; Hetton, 15s 6d per ton.

Hops (Friday).—Notwithstanding the pre-vailing easterly winds, the accounts received from the plantations are highly favourable to the growth of the bine, and the demand for hops is exceedingly heavy, and last week's quotations are with difficulty supported. In the duty next to nothing is doing.

Kent pockets, £4 4s to £4 16s; Weald of Kent ditto, £4 12s to £5 5s; Mid and East Kent ditto, £5 5s to £7 7s per cwt.

SMITHFIELD.—The beef market, to-day, being but moderately supplied with beasts (the quality of which was very inferior), and the attendance of buyers somewhat numerous, the trade was very firm at fully the currency of this day se'nnight. The primest Scots, &c., did not offer 350 beasts, 780 sheep and lambs, and 83 calves from Holland and the country; as also, 40 Scots direct. The primest Scots, &c., were in request, at 4s 2d to 4s 4d; large ditto ditto, 4s to 4s 2d; ordinary ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; prime Devon ditto 3s 8d to 3s 10d; large ditto ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; second quality ditto, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; coarse and inferior sheep, 4s 8d to 4s 6d; second quality ditto, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; prime coarse-woolled ditto, 4s 10d to 5s 0d, prime Southdown ditto 5s 2d to 5s 4d; large coarse calves, 4s 0d to 4s 6d; prime small ditto, 4s 8d to 5s 0d; large hogs, 4s 0d to 4s 6d; neat small porkers, 4s 8d to 5s 0d; lambs, 5s 8d to 6s 0d.

NEWGATE AND LEADENHALL.—Beef, 3s 6d to 4s 4d; mutton, 3s 8d to 4s 8d; veal, 3s 6d to 4s 6d; pork, 3s 6d to 4s 4d per 8lbs.

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday). We had a slow trade here this morning, at our quotations.

PORK MARKET.—Inferior beef, 2s 8d to 3s 10d; middling ditto, 4s 0 l to 4s 2d; prime large ditto, 4s 3d to 4s 4d; prime small ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; large pork, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; inferior mutton, 3s 10d to 4s 2d; middling ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 8d; prime ditto, 4s 10d to 5s 0d; veal, 3s 10d to 5s 0d; small pork, 4s 8d to 5s 0d; lamb, 5s 0d to 6s 10d.

ROBERT HERBERT

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

A fall in the Corn Market, and the fine weather, combined to raise the price of Consols on Monday as high as 89¾ for an dividend for the account. This advance continued until noon on Tuesday, when several large sales being made for the purpose of closing accounts, the price receded to 89. A better feeling prevailed on Wednesday, and prices rallied to 89¾, at which they remained until the end of the closes of business. The Market on Thursday was rather flat, and 89¾ was the quotation during the day. Exchequer Bills have slightly advanced, quoting about as better than on Monday last. Bank Stock remains at 179. The most important existing between the price of Exc' quer Bills and Consols is somewhat remarkable. Consols at 89, pay about £3 7s. per cent.; while Exchequer Bills pay nearer £4 per cent. Exchequer Bills, therefore, have advanced £1 per cent., or nearly 3s per cent., and Exchequer Bills only 10s. This tends to prove that speculation is the cause of this advance in Consols, and proves its exhaustence in an extraordinary degree. Nor is the speculation confined exclusively to Consols: the Share Market has already displayed symptoms of the same tendency. At Liverpool, prices have advanced considerably, but not so largely as in London. This is natural, it must be admitted, that the financial position of affairs is improving, it is rather too early to consider ourselves safe from a check in our present advances to a settled state. The Exchanges are at present highly in our favour, but the imports that the corn daily arriving would suffice to turn them against us, and then gold must be exported. At present the demand for goods is not so extensive as to render this at all improbable. Stock Exchange speculators, however, judge of these matters highly; and in the Share Market there are so many reasons for forcing price that any pretext to induce the public to purchase, would be vigorously supported by those parties who are overloaded with Scrip and new shares. Money, however, will be generally too scarce for some time for this "rigg," to be worked to any profit, although a few wealthy but inexperienced persons may find ere long that the time has arrived for that improvement in the Stock Markets, which results from returning confidence, extended trade, and improved revenue. Sudden advances may prove the greatest check to that steady reaction which we cannot but anticipate as the result of the present depression of that day of emancipation from our difficulties, which at present appears to be at no very distant day.

The number of Securities at the close of the week was heavy, at the following rates:—Three per Cent. Reduced, 89¾; New Three and-a-Quarter per Cent., 91¼; Long Annuities, 3 1-16; India Bonds, 1l pm.; Consols for Opening, July 16, 89¾; Exchequer Bills, £1000, 4 pm.; £500, 14 pm.; Ditto, Small, 18 pm.

The Foreign Market continues nearly deserted. Portuguese Four per Cents., on Wednesday, declined to 30, per Money, in consequence of the agreement announcing the necessary postponement of the dividend due on the 1st of July. Some weeks since, the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS furnished the bondholders with the earliest intelligence. Mexican Six per Cents. have likewise been done at 19¾. The closing prices are, for Brazilian Bonds, 84; Buenos Ayres Bonds, Six per Cent., 85; Danish, Three per Cent., 80; Mexican Bonds, 19¾; Portuguese Bonds, Four per Cent., 31¾; Spanish Bonds, Five per Cent., 21, Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cent., 58¾; Ditto, for the Account, 57¾.

The settlement in the Share Market passed off without difficulty, prices rather improving, the jobbers being short of stocks, &c. At the close of the week, however, a slight reaction occurred which left quotations as follows:—Ambergate, Nottingham, Boston, and Eastern Junction, 1¼; Birmingham and Oxford Junction, 17¾; Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Dudley, 14¾; Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Stour Valley, 8¾; Buckinghamshire, 8 dis.; Caledonian, 30; Ditto, Half Shares, 9¼; Eastern Counties, York Extension, 7¼; East Lancashire, New Scrip, 1¼; Great Northern, 42; Ditto, London and York Extension, 1¾; Great Southern and Western (Ireland), 20¾ x.l.; Great North of England, 237¼; Great Western, Half Shares, 74; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 18; Ditto, New, 8¾; Lancaster and Carlisle, New, 19½; Leeds and Bradford, 83; Liverpool, Manchester, and Newcastle Junction, 1¾; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 86¾; Ditto, Consol. English, 14; Ditto, Pref. Convert. 5 per Cent., 55; London and Blackwall, 9; London and North Western, 184; Ditto ditto, New Shares, 13¾; Ditto, Fifths, 1¾; Ditto, £10 Shares 8 and B. (A.), 14¾; Ditto, £10 Shares M. and B. (C.), 7¾; London and South Western, 66¾; Ditto, New, 22¾; Ditto, Scrip, 5; Manchester and Leeds, 103½; Ditto, Shares, 46¾; Manchester, Buxton, and Matlock, par.; Midland, 130; Ditto, New, 45; Ditto, New, 10¾; Newcastle and Berwick, 29¾; Ditto, New, 8¾; Norfolk Extension, 10¾; North British, Half Shares, 15¾; Ditto, Thirds, 2¾; North Staffordshire, 10¾; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 19¾; Preston and Wyre, 3¾; Ditto, Half Shares (A), 13; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 5¾; Shrewsbury and Birmingham (B), 9¾; Shropshire Union, 7¾; South Staffordshire, 6 dis.; South Eastern and Dover, 37¾; Ditto New (issued at £32), No. 1, 2¾; South Yorkshire, Doncaster, and Goole, 1¾; West Riding Union, ¾ premium; Windsor, Staines, and South Western, ¾ pm.; Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth, 11¾; York and Newcastle, New, 17¾; Ditto, Preferences, 12¾; York and North Midland, 38¾; Ditto, Extension, 43¾; Ditto, Preference, 16¾; Ditto, East and West Riding Extension, 14¾; Central (France), 10¾; Orleans and Vierzon, 17¾; Ceylon, ¾; Dutch Rhenish, 4¾; East Indian, ¾; Great Western Bengal, 4¾; Namur and Liege, 4; Northern of France, 10¾; Rouen and Havre, 25¾; Sambre and Meuse, 7¾.

SATURDAY MORNING.—Consols were heavy yesterday, with little business doing; the closing price was 88¾ 89 for the July Account. In the Foreign House, the closing price was flat, closing at 30¾, and Mexican 19¾ to ¾. Shares partook of the heaviness with other markets.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, JUNE 29.

INSOLVENT PETITIONER.

J. FLETCHER, son, Peckham New Town, cabinet-maker

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

T. STOCKDALE and J. STOCKDALE, liverpool, soap-boilers.

FRIDAY, JUNE 2.

BANKRUPTCY.

W HOWLETT, Albany-road, Old Kent-road, Surrey, builder. I. TOWNEND, Sheerness, journeyman. E. HEATHFIELD, Bermondsey, Cumberland Town, bookseller. W H TREACHER, Regent-street, Quadrant, furrier and hatter. J. KAY, Kent-st. Borough, Kent-st. Deptford, baker. W. KAY, W MORTIMER, and E FLETCHER, Bury, Lancashire, brass and iron-founders. H. S. COX, Manchester, Hide-market, merchant. J. Hall, Liverpool, Lancashire, draper. J. TEMMS, Gloucester, plumber

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.

W. WILSON, Glasgow, merchant. R. TUACH, Inverness, druggist. P. C. KENNEDY Edinburgh, shawl-merchant.

FRIDAY, JULY 2

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

16th Light Dragoons: Regimental Sergeant Major J Tennent to be Quart rmaster vice M'Mahon, 11th. Lieut. Sewell, 38th, to be Lieutenant, vice Bellingham, 31st. Lieut. Y Lidge to be Lieutenant, vice Morant, 15th. Ensigns and Lieut D Davidson to be Cornet, vice Hartman, W. Maxwell to be Cornet, vice Bellingham, 31st. Cornet A. C. Seymour, 4th Dragoon Guards, to be Lieut vice Major E B Bere. Lieut R A Yate to be Captain, vice Skynner, Cornet T. C. Dimsdale to be Lieutenant, vice Yate. J W Grant to be Cornet, vice Dimsdale

Coldstream Foot Guards. Ensign and Lieutenant Sir J Hallett to have the rank of Lieutenant and Captain, Ensign and Lieutenant Sir J. E Harington, Bart., to be Lieutenant and Captain, vice the Hon. E. Bligh, promoted in the Grenadier Guards. Ensign C. Baring to be Ensign and Lieutenant, vice Harington.

1 st or Royals. W J Gilbum to be Lieutenant, vice Reader; J A. Chrystie to be Ensign, vice Gilburn. 90th: R D Vaughton to be Ensign, vice Nayer

Royal Horse Artillery. Capt H. Fisher, Assistant Adjutant General at Walpole, Capt. J. H. Vincent to be Captain, vice Frederbert. Lieut. W. H. Hart of Ord to be Captain, vice Vincent. Second Lieut. Sir Thos. W. D'M Best to be First Lieutenant, vice the Hon. Lieut. Lord Ed Pcrcy to be Second Lieutenant, vice Best

Royal Engineers. Lieut. O. J. C. Bridgeman to be Lieutenant, vice Ling.

3rd West India Regiment.—Major T Abbott to be Major vice Maclean; Capt. W W. Powell to be Captain, vice F Murray. Lieut W Reader to be Adjutant, vice Powell

STAFF. Major R Walpole to be Deputy Quartermaster Gene al in the Ionian Islands, with the rank of Lieut Colonel in the Army, vice Col F H. Dawkins

HOSPITAL STAFF.—Lieut. Col Inspector Gener. of Hospitals Sir J. Fi calrn, M D., to be Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals; Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals, Sir J. Pitcairn, M.D., to be Inspector General of Hospitals, with local rank.

1 CATTACHED.—Brevet-Maj.or T. Abbott to be Major

BREVET.—Capt. J. R. Vincent, 3rd Foot, to be Major. Capt. A. C. Seymour, to be Majors in the Army.

ADMIRALTY, JUNE 26.

The following promotions have this day taken place, consequent upon the death of Admiral the Hon. Sir Robert Stopford, G C B., G.C.H. Vice-Admiral of the United Kingdom

Admiral of the Whitelsir Charles Ogle, Bart., to be Admiral of the Red

Admiral of the Blue Sir Edward Thornbrough, K.C.B., to be Admiral of the White.

Vice Admiral of the Red Richard Matson to be Admiral of the Blue.

Vice Admiral of the White Sir Graham Eden Hamond, G.C.B., to be Vice Admiral of the Red.

Vice Admiral of the Blue John Acton (2) to be Vice Admiral of the White.

Rear Admiral of the Red Sir Philip Charles Durham, K.C.B., to be Vice Admiral of the Blue

Rear Admiral of the White Sir Thomas John Cochrane, Kat., C.B., to be Rear Admiral of the Red

Rear admiral of the Blue Sir Edward Thomas Troubridge, Bart., C.B., to be Rear Admiral of the White.

Captain John Coope, C.B., to be Rear Admiral of the Blue.

ADMIRALTY, JUNE 29.

Corps of Royal Marines: Gent. Cadet R. G Hall to be Second Lieutenant

BIRTHS.

G. B. TAYLOR, Whitstable Kent, saddler, W. WRIGHT, Holland-road, Brixton, builder H. HEMMINGS, Cambridge-terrace, Hyde Park, gentleman. J. ROBERTSON, Dorset-square, Regent's park, merchant. S. NICOL, Fenchurch-street, grocer. S. BECK, Ipswich, shipowner. I. BOYD and H. BARNES, Bishopsgate-street, stationers. CLARKE and CO., Cornhill, silk mercers. C. COMAY, Tiverton, Devonshire, woolstapler. A. WEBB, Wakefield, Yorkshire, seed-merchant. J. BELLAMY, Bath, grocer. J. HUGHES, Toxteth Park, Liverpool, builder. H. ALLEN, Birmingham, draper.

BIRTHS.

At Paris, the lady of George Henry Smith, Esq., of a daughter.—At Hastings, Mrs. George Rivington, of a son.—At Bath, the lady of Lieut.-Colonel Hamilton, C.B., of a son.—In St. John's-lane, the wife of George de Rosen Attwood, Esq., of a son.—At Clifton-place, Hyde Park, Mrs John Hamilton Hall, of a son.—At Bromley, Kent, the lady of Augustus Frederick Phillips Miller, Esq., of twin boys, still-born.—At Calverley Park, Tunbridge Wells, the wife of Neville Lee Harris, Esq., of a son.—At Ealing, the wife of Charles Bell Tate, Esq., of a daughter.—On the 30th ult., at the Rectory, Hurst, Chamberlayer, Somerset, the lady of the Rev. Thomas Hill Bickell, of a daughter.—At Wycombe Abbey, Buckinghamshire, the lady of R. P. Best, Esq., of a son.—At Standen Rectory, Staff rdshire, the lady of the Rev. Charles Lane, of a son.—On the 30th inst., at Pooley-street, Southwark, the widow of Mr George Allen, recently deceased, of a daughter

MARRIAGES.

At Twickenham, James Temple Somerville, Esq., to Elizabeth, third daughter of Sir William Clay, Bart., M.P.—At St Andrew's Church, Guernsey, John Moore Naylor, only son of Major-General William Naylor, C.B., to Bessie Beatrice, youngest daughter of Major Charles Alexander, R.E.—At St. George's, Hanover-square, John Walter Maxwell Lyte, to Emily Anne Maxwell, second daughter of the late Admiral Sir Charles Ekins, K.C.B.—On the 30th ult., at Pimlico, Jaughter of Philip Seamen, Esq.—At St. Pancras Church, Cornelius William Hemmings, Esq., to Caroline, second daughter of the late Rev. F. F. Roberts, Rector.—On the 1st, at St. George's, Bloomsbury, by the Rev. H. Hughes, incumbent of All Saints, Cordingham-square, John Keller, Esq., of Regent's Park, to Eliza, youngest daughter of the late John Bellamy, Esq., of Woburn-square.

DEATHS.

On the 28th ult., Edwin John Quekett, Esq., M.R.C.S. and F.L.S.—At Whitby, Thomas Lowman, Esq., aged 85.—At Pimlico, Major-J Gaff late of the 76th Regiment.—On Tuesday, the 16th ult., at Kensington, Lieut. Col. Thomas Hall, aged 82, second son of Thomas Theobald, Esq., late of Upper Brook-street, Grosvenor-square.—At Government House, Sandy Point, Straits of Magellan, the Rev. Henry Clarke Lay, R.N., chaplain to her Majesty's ship Cormorant.—On the 30th ult., late Lieutenant Colonel, in the 46th Regiment.—At Fareham, Hampshire, in the year of his age, Admiral Sir Thomas Byam Martin, G.C.B.—At Bentinck-square, Mrs E. —, wife Heron, in the 85th year of her age.—At Islington, Amelia, wife of John Jeffreson, Esq.—At Cheltenham, on the 28th ult., Master H J Cooke, aged 12, second son of Mr. Cooke, surgeon, second son of Dr. Cooke.—On the 29th ult., at his residence, Tooley-street, Southwark, of fever, brought on by over exertion in his professional duties, Mr George Allen, Architect and Surveyor, aged 45.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—The Nobility, Subscribers and the Opera, and the Public are respectfully informed that there will be an EXTRA NIGHT on THURSDAY NEXT, JULY 8, 1847, on which occasion Mdlle JENNY LIND will appear for the SECOND TIME in the favourite Opera of "LA SONNAMBULA," and the Divertissements, in the Ballet Department, combining the talents of Mdlle. Carlotta Grisi, Mdlle. Carolina Rosati, Mademoiselle Petipa Soulgina, and Monsieur Perrot. The Box Office, Livepool, Lonsdale, and Viersen, 17½; Ceylon, ¾; Dutch Rhenish, 4¾; East Indian, ¾; Great Western Bengal, 4¾; Namur and Liege, 4; Northern of France, 10¾; Rouen and Havre, 25¾; Sambre and Meuse, 7¾.

SATURDAY MORNING.—Consols were heavy yesterday, with little business doing; the closing price was 88¾ 89 for the July Account. In the Foreign House, the closing price was flat, closing at 30¾, and Mexican 19¾ to ¾. Shares partook of the heaviness with other markets.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, JUNE 29.

INSOLVENT PETITIONER.

J. FLETCHER, son, Peckham New Town, cabinet-maker

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

T. STOCKDALE and J. STOCKDALE, liverpool, soap-boilers.

FRIDAY, JULY 2

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

16th Light Dragoons: Regimental Sergeant Major J Tennent to be Quart rmaster vice M'Mahon, 11th. Lieut. Sewell, 38th, to be Lieutenant, vice Bellingham, 31st. Lieut. Y Lidge to be Lieutenant, vice Morant, 15th. Ensigns and Lieut D Davidson to be Cornet, vice Hartman, W. Maxwell to be Cornet, vice Bellingham, 31st. Cornet A. C. Seymour, 4th Dragoon Guards, to be Lieut vice Major E B Bere. Lieut R A Yate to be Captain, vice Skynner, Cornet T. C. Dimsdale to be Lieutenant, vice Yate. J W Grant to be Cornet, vice Dimsdale

Coldstream Foot Guards. Ensign and Lieutenant Sir J Hallett to have the rank of Lieutenant and Captain, Ensign and Lieutenant Sir J. E Harington, Bart., to be Lieutenant and Captain, vice the Hon. E. Bligh, promoted in the Grenadier Guards. Ensign C. Baring to be Ensign and Lieutenant, vice Harington.

1 st or Royals. W J Gilbum to be Lieutenant, vice Reader; J A. Chrystie to be Ensign, vice Gilburn. 90th: R D Vaughton to be Ensign, vice Nayer

Royal Horse Artillery. Capt H. Fisher, Assistant

MUSICAL UNION.—THE EIGHTH and LAST MEETING TUESDAY, July 6, at Half-past Three o'Clock.—Quartet in G, Beethoven; Quintet, Op. 23 Mozart; Trio—Sonata, Quintet, G Minor, Mozart; Executants—Joachim, Sainton, and George Hollmandel; Piano, Mr. Charles Halle. Vocalist, Miss Dolby. Tickets, 7s. each, to be had at Cramer, Beale, and Co.'s, and Olivier's, Musical Library, 38, Old Bond-street; and of the Director, Ella, at the door.

ELLA Director

ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY, REGENT'S PARK.—The FIRST EXHIBITION this season will take place on WEDNESDAY NEXT, JULY 7th, and will include Collections of FRUIT as well as PLANTS and FLOWERS. Tickets may be obtained at the Gardens by orders from Fellows or Members. Price 5s. each, or on the day, 7s. 6d. each. Office open from Nine to six o'Clock.

SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—The TWENTY-THIRD ANNUAL EXHIBITION NOW OPEN, at the Gallery, 5, PALL-MALL EAST, next to, but from Nine till Dusk. WILL CLOSE JULY 17th. Admittance One Shilling. Catalogue, Sixpence.

J. W. WRIGHT, Secretary.

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS. THE FIRST ANNUAL EXHIBITION NOW OPEN at their New Gallery, 53, Pall-mall, near St. James's Palace, from Nine o'Clock till Dusk.—Admission, 1s.; Catalogue, 6d.

JAMES FAHEY, Secretary.

ONEIROMANCIE ARISTIQUE.—LAST WEEK.—The Extraordinary SOMNAMBULIST, Mdlle ISA PRUDENCE, under the influence of Mdlle HERMINIE LAURENT, who has excited the utmost admiration and astonishment by the wonderful and unprecedented Performance of Magnetic Phenomena, will, through the transmission of ideas by the agency of the will alone, before their departure for Manchester, DAILY, at Half-past Eight, Evening, at No. 20, MORTIMER-STREET, THIS DAY, JULY 3, at Half-past Eight, Evening; WEDNESDAY, 7th; THURSDAY, 8th; at Two; and on FRIDAY, 9th, and SATURDAY, 10th, at Half-past Eight, Evening.—Admission, 2s.; Reserved Seats, 3s.

BRUNETTI'S MODEL OF ANCIENT JERUSALEM, as it is in the days of our Redeemer, Model Room, No. 22, Piccadilly, near Regent-circus, Open from Seven till Nine, on each Sunday purchasing the Instructive Book and Map, price 6d. Two additional Rooms added for the Book. Lectures every hour by the gentleman in charge. The counterpart Model at Blackheath on and after Monday, July 5th.

SOLICITORS' AND GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—Eighty per Cent of the Profits given to the Assured.—Apply to any respectable Solicitor, or at the Office, 57, Chancery-Lane, London.

CHARLES JOHN GILL, Secretary.

COUNTY FIRE OFFICE, 50, REGENT-STREET. ESTABLISHED 1807.

It is respectfully notified to parties holding Policies in this Office, the renewals of which fall due at Midsummer, that the same should be paid within Fifteen days after the Midsummer-day. The Receipts are lying at the H ad Office, and in the hands of the several Agents.

The Terms of the County Fire Office are highly advantageous to the Insured, and have secured to it a large share of public confidence. All claims are settled with prompt ude and liberality. Full Particulars will be furnished to parties applying personally, or by post, to the Head Office, or to any of its Agents, who are appointed in all the principal towns of the United Kingdom.

JOHN A. BEAUMONT, Managing Director

ABERGATE, NOTTINGHAM, BOSTON, and EASTERN JUNCTION RAILWAY.

In pursuance of a Resolution passed at a Meeting of Shareho ders held at the George and Vulture Tavern, George-yard, Lombard-street, London, on Fr day, 25th June, 1847, Messrs. Badger, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, of Cambridge-terrace, Hyde Park, in the chair, the Committee then appointed do hereby convene a Meet ng of the Shareholders generally, to be held on Tuesday, the 13th July, 1847, at the George and Vulture, George-yard, Lombard-street, at One o Clock precisely, in order to determine what measures shall be adopted with reference to the general position of the undertaking, whether to the next Half Yearly Meeting of the Company for Election of Directors and for other purposes.

Copies of the Report presented at the Meeting of the 25th June, may be had on application at the offices of Joseph Davis, Esq., 74, Old Broad-street, London, or to the Secretaries of the Stock Exchanges of Liverpool, Manchester, Leeds, Nottingham, and Sheffield

BENJAMIN BADGER, Chairman.
J. BROUGH, Hon. Secretary.

Committee Room, George and Vulture, George-yard, London.

NEWCASTLE and BERWICK RAILWAY.—OPENING of the LINE THROUGHOUT between NEWCASTLE and BERWICK.

On and after TUESDAY, 6th JULY, the Line will be open throughout for Passenger Traffic, and TRAINS will leave LONDON and EDINBURGH at the following hours, by which Passengers can be booked through:

Leave London	..	9 35 a.m.	10 30 a.m.	and	9 0 p.m.
Arriving at Edinburgh	..	11 0 p.m.	6 30 a.m.	and	5 0 p.m.
Leave Edinburgh	..	7 0 a.m.	9 0 a.m.	and	4 0 p.m.
Arrive in London	..	8 0 p.m.	10 0 a.m.	and	4 0 p.m.

By Order,

JAMES ALLPORT, Manager.

Newcastle, June 28th, 1847.

EDUCATION.—YOUTH are PREPARED for the UNIVERSITIES, EAST INDIA COLLEGES, and PROFESSIONAL LIFE, by Mr. E. POOCOCK, assisted by Masters of Eminence in the different departments, comprising the Oriental, Classical, and Oriental Modern—the Greek and Latin classics, Mathematics, and Natural Philosophy. Ready access is granted to a well-selected library. Pupils under ten years of age are under the more immediate superintendence of Mrs. Poocock. A Prospectus, containing full particulars, and a view of the Establishment, may be had by application to the Principal, Mr. E. POOCOCK, Arne's-Court, Bensington, between Bath and Bristol.

PARIS, PROTESTANT ESTABLISHMENT.—MADAME MARTIN, No. 1, Rue de Beaune, Faubourg St. Germain, receives a Limited Number of YOUNG LADIES on the plan of Home Education. The studies are conducted by the most Eminent Professors of the Capital, under the immediate superintendence of Madame Martin, who, during a residence of 15 years at Paris, has been engaged in the education of young ladies. Terms, 80 guineas per annum. Address as above, and on the Continent. Ladies wishing to repair a neglected education, and at the same time to have the advantage of introduction in society, can be received. If required, the Pupils may be sent for either to the Coast or England.

MUSIC EASILY ACQUIRED.—Those Ladies and Gentlemen who have taste and a good ear for Music but who have not the time necessary to learn to play, will find SIMPSON'S DULCET ACCORDION a most melodious Musical Instrument, and may be deeply, fascinating with but little practice. Every description of Accordion is supplied, and the Instruments, price 3s., any persons, although utterly unacquainted with Music, are enabled to teach themselves to play correctly in a few hours. Simpson's Instruments are from 3s. to 25s. each, and are warranted. Country orders punctually executed. N.B. None are genuine unless they have "Simpson, 76, Regent-street," stamped on them. Accordions repaired and exchanged.

LADIES WHO KNIT are respectfully requested to peruse the Advertising Pages of "Dombey and Son" for July, where will be found an announcement of a novel character, combining profit with pleasure. This Advertisement will not be repeated.

LESSONS in MILLINERY and DRESS-MAKING.—MRS. HOWELL, of 304, Regent-street, two doors from Margaret-street, Sole Inventress of Teaching the Art of Dress-making in a Series of Lessons, Mathematics and Natural Philosophy. Ready access is granted to a well-selected

NEW CHURCH OF ST. MARK, HAMILTON-TERRACE, ST. JOHN'S WOOD.

THIS structure is a very neat specimen of modern church-building in the Early English style of architecture. In plan, the Church is divided into a nave and chancel; and it has north and south porches; but the chief entrance is in the tower at the west.

The exterior of the Church presents buttresses between the windows, and angle-buttresses at the ends of the Church, each finished by crocketted pinnacles. The windows are of very elegant design, and the tower is divided into three stories; in the lowest, is the chief entrance, recessed; in the next, is a large window of four lights, having a circular head, containing exceedingly well-designed tracery, and a clock, within a lozange-shaped compartment, is above the window; in the upper story, are the belfry windows on each face of the tower. These windows are of two lights each, trefoiled, and having quatrefoils in their headings. Around the top of the tower, is a pierced battlement; and, at the corners, tall octagonal pillars rise from the angle-buttresses. An octagonal spire, having windows on its several sides, and enriched by crocketting at its angles, surmounts the whole, and will, when finished, be 165 feet in height. The porches are alike in style, and have recessed doorways, with double-light windows above them. The iron-work to the doors is of exceedingly good design.

The interior of the Church is very spacious, and from their being no arches to divide it into nave and aisles, the span of the open-timber roof is very great. The roof is of good arrangement, and stained in imitation of oak. The roof of the chancel is panelled in plain style. The chancel window is very good, and beneath it are decorated arches, within which the Sacred Monogram, Creed, Commandments, and Lord's Prayer are richly illuminated. The communion table and chairs are well designed, and in excellent taste. Encaustic tiles add to the decoration of the chancel, and produce a pleasing effect. The pulpit and reading-desk are placed at the south and north sides of the chancel arch respectively, and are of stained wood. The seats are all low, with tall ends wrought into trafoil heads, and are all of stained wood. Galleries run round three sides of the Church, supported by iron pillars and girders, the latter neatly ornamented in characteristic style. The organ, which will be erected in the west gallery, is not yet finished for use. A very elegant font, of octagonal form, and enriched with tracery and carved work, stands near the west door. This font is the gift of the architects of the Church (Messrs. T. Cundy and T. Cundy, jun.), and the Church plate, and all the fittings-up of the chancel, chairs, table, velvet, &c., are the munificent gifts of two friends of the Church.

At present, the Church has a plainer aspect than our Engraving; but as soon as sufficient money can be obtained, the tower and spire will be completed, and the pinnacles added to the buttresses. The interior roof, &c., is also so built that additional decorations may be added at a future period; but this will be the last to finish.

The entire cost of the Church, (including the site, £800,) has been £9820. This sum has been partly raised by subscriptions, and the loan of the Committee, viz., £1500. The latter sum has to be repaid; and, in addition, to complete the tower, spire, &c., a further sum of about £1800 required, which, it is hoped, will, in a few years, be received.

The local acts of the parish do not allow any rate to be made towards the building of St. Mark's Church: yet, each ratepayer of St. John's Wood is obliged to pay rate towards the five district churches, where, from the distance, only those who reside near can obtain the benefit.

When the whole is completed, a district will be fixed by the Bishop—the division being intended to commence at St. John's Wood-road to Kilburn; thence, down the west of the Abbey-road, to Circus-road, Cavendish-road, and the north side of St. John's Wood-road, to the Edgware-road—population of about 2500.

The Church contains 1400 sittings, 400 of which are free: the latter, assigned by the Bishop of London, are excellent—some are close to the pulpit and reading-desk, and others in the gallery, with a full view of the Church.

The Church was consecrated by the Bishop of London, on Thursday week, when the collection amounted to £144; there has since been received £25; and many additional seats have been taken.

NEW CHURCH OF ST. MARK, HAMILTON-TERRACE, ST. JOHN'S WOOD.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES.

CONSECRATION OF THE COLONIAL BISHOPS.

The ceremony of the consecration of the four newly-appointed Colonial Bishops took place on Tuesday morning, in Westminster Abbey. The Bishops were Dr. Gray, consecrated to the diocese of Cape Town; Dr. Tyrrell, to the diocese of Newcastle, South Australia; Dr. Short, to the diocese of Adelaide; and Dr. Perry, to the diocese of Melbourne.

The ceremony was commenced at eleven o'clock, by which time all the seats set apart for the congregation and those who assisted at the ceremony were occupied. The morning prayer having terminated, the communion service was read by the Archbishop, and the responses and Nicene Creed sung. After which, a sermon appropriate to the occasion was preached by the Bishop of London. At the conclusion of the sermon, the anthem, "Lord, for Thy tender mercies' sake" (Tarrant), was sung, during which the canon's verger conducted the Bishops designate to the chapel appointed, where they put on the rochets; and, having returned to the entrance of the sacrarium, were received by the two presenting Bishops, viz., the Bishops of Winchester and Gloucester, and by them led to the rails of the communion table. The consecration service was then commenced, the Litany (Tallis) being chanted by two of the minor canons. The legal official having read the documents of appointment to the several colonial sees, and the necessary forms having been gone through, the Archbishop put the questions set forth in the consecration service to the Bishops designate, who then retired to put on their robes.

On their return, they were admitted within the rails, and took their places with the other Prelates, the anthem "The Lord gave the word" (Handel), and the Veni Creator (Tallis), being sung by the whole choir.

The ceremony was conducted with more than usual solemnity, and lasted upwards of four hours; at the conclusion of it, the Dean, preceded by the Verger, conducted the Archbishop and the whole of the Bishops present to the Jerusalem Chamber.

OXFORD. June 28.

In a Convocation holden this day for the purpose of admitting members of the University of Cambridge ad eundem, the following gentlemen were admitted:

The Rev. J. Bosworth, D.D., Trinity College; J. Wray, Esq., M.A., Trinity College; Rev. W. H. Stokes, M.A., Gonville and Caius College; C. C. Babington, Esq., M.A., St. John's College; W. Hopkins, Esq., M.A., Peterhouse; Rev. T. Jarrett, M.A., Catherine Hall; Rev. J. H. Henderson, M.A., Trinity College.

June 30.

EXETER COLLEGE.—Messrs. Ince, of Lincoln; Palgrave, of Balliol; and Curtis, of University, were this day elected to Fellowships at Exeter College.

WADHAM COLLEGE. George Everleigh Saunders, B.A., of kin to the founder, and Samuel Joseph Hulme, B.A., were this day elected Probationary Fellows of Wadham College. At the same time Walter Waddington Shirley, Commoner of University; Stirling W. Day, Commoner of Wadham; and James Davenport Kelly, were elected Scholars of Wadham College.

PLATE PRESENTED TO SIR HARRY SMITH, ON THURSDAY.

CAMBRIDGE. June 29.

At a Congregation held at St. Catherine's Hall Lodge, the following grace passed the Senate: "To present an address to her Majesty the Queen upon the occasion of her Majesty's gracious visit to the University."

At the same Congregation, the following degree was conferred:

M.A.—G. F. Snowball, St. John's College.

THE NEW CHURCH AT WEST DERBY. The Bishop of Chester consecrated the new church at West Derby on Saturday, and preached a sermon appropriate to the occasion.

THE NEW COLONIAL BISHOPRICS.—On Wednesday, a meeting of the friends of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Dependencies, was held at the Hanover-square Rooms, for the purpose of raising funds to provide additional clergymen to aid and assist the four Bishops recently appointed and consecrated—three for Australia and one for the Cape of Good Hope. Lord Eldon, who has subscribed £1000 in furtherance of the object of the meeting, was voted to the chair, and was supported by the Bishops of Norwich, Oxford, St. Asaph, Salisbury, and Antigua; Lord Ellesmere, the Hon. E. Gladstone, &c. Resolutions were adopted in support of the objects contemplated, and much interest in the subject was manifested.

MR. AND MRS. HUDSON'S PARTY.—Mr. and Mrs. Hudson entertained the Duke of Buckingham, the Earl and Countess of Eldon, the Earl of Ripon, the Countess (Dowager) of Essex and Miss Johnstone, Viscount Morpeth and Lady Mary Howard, Lord Brooke, Lord John Manners, Lady Frederick Bentinck, Baron and Lady Parke and Miss Parke, Hon. Mr and Lady Elizabeth Lawley, Hon. James and Hon. Mrs. Stuart Wortley, Hon. C. Howard, Captain and Miss L. Harcourt, and Mr. and Mrs. Meynell Ingram, at dinner on Wednesday evening, at their residence at Albert Gate. Mrs. Hudson had a soirée after the dinner.

THE QUEEN'S CORONATION.—The anniversary of the Queen's Coronation was observed on Monday, both in the metropolis and in the country, with the usual rejoicings.

PLATE PRESENTED TO SIR HARRY SMITH.

THIS splendid Testimonial was, on Thursday, presented to Sir Harry Smith, by the inhabitants of the town of Whittlesea and its neighbourhood, Sir Harry's native place. The speech of the gallant soldier on the occasion will be found at page 7.

The Plate is a superb "centre ornament." In the design the principal group of figures represents Britannia, defended by Valour from Anarchy and Rebellion. On the side not seen in the sketch stands a figure of Peace, surrounded by subjects illustrative of its blessings. At the angles of the base (which is triangular) are groups of arms and other military devices; and, on the three sides, are contained the inscription (subjoined); Sir Harry Smith's arms and supporters, in bas-relief; and an engraving of Whittlesea Church, justly an object of pride to the gentlemen presenting the Testimonial. The height is thirty-three and a half inches; weight, four hundred and fifty ounces; and value, three hundred guineas.

INSCRIPTION.

PRESENTED TO MAJOR GENERAL SIR H. G. W. SMITH, BART., OF ALIWAL ON THE SUTLEJ, G.C.B.; COLONEL OF THE RIFLE BRIGADE,

By Parties resident, or interested, in the Isle of Ely, in testimony of their esteem for the eminent services rendered by him, as an Officer of the British Army, during a period of Forty-two Years; and more particularly for the distinguished ability shown by him in gaining a decisive victory over the Sikhs, in India, when in Command of the British Forces, at the Battle of Aliwal, on the 28th January 1846.

Presented, 1st July, 1847.

The Testimonial has been designed and manufactured by Mr. B. Smith, of Duke-street, Lincoln's Inn. It is, certainly, a chastely elegant work.

The information of an intention on the part of Sir Harry Smith's fellow townsmen at Whittlesea, his native place, to present him with a Testimonial of his long and brilliant services abroad having reached Ely, a meeting was convened on Saturday last, at which it was unanimously determined to invite the gallant General and his lady to a public entertainment on their way to Whittlesea. The invitation having been accepted, preparations were immediately set on foot to do every honour to the occasion; and, notwithstanding the shortness of the notice, by Wednesday morning, the day of his arrival, the whole city presented a holiday aspect. The leading streets were spanned with tastefully ornamented arches, and the majority of the houses decorated with flags and garlands. Sir Harry and Lady Smith were met at the railway station by a procession of the chief inhabitants, and conducted to the Corn Market, where a breakfast upon a scale of magnificence, not often seen, had been prepared under the experienced superintendence of Messrs. Youngmanband, of Gerard's Hall, London, at which about 250 ladies and gentlemen sat down.

We have not space to enter upon a detailed account of the many admirable speeches which enlivened the ceremony, and the heartfelt and enthusiastic reception which greeted the illustrious visitor; but, in our next paper we purpose giving a full description of the proceedings at this assembly, and the subsequent one at Whittlesea on Thursday.

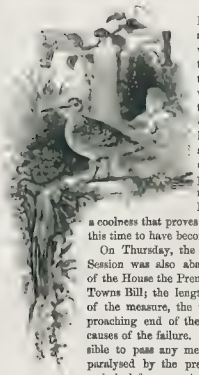
SHIPWRECKS.—The ship Miranda, Eliot master, from Liverpool, bound for Quebec, 34 days out, with 408 passengers, was wrecked on the Magdalen Islands on the 19th ult. Sixty-four were drowned and thirty died of fever.—Two other English vessels were lost on the same night.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex; by WILLIAM LITTLER, 198, Strand aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JULY 3, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 271.—Vol. XI.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JULY 10, 1847. [Sixpence. WITH SUPPLEMENT GRATIS.

THE ABANDONED BILLS.



THE close of the Session has set in with "its usual severity." It is a period fatal to all the mass of Legislation left unmature, and which in that state is overtaken by the epidemic that consigns them to the Limbo lying between one Session and another. On Monday evening, Lord John Russell played the Ministerial Herod to some half-score of Legislative innocents, with a coolness that proves the massacre of bills about this time to have become an ordinary custom.

On Thursday, the one great measure of the Session was also abandoned; at the day sitting of the House the Premier withdrew the Health of Towns Bill; the length of the act, the intricacy of the measure, the time of year, and the approaching end of the Parliament itself, are the causes of the failure. But it begins to be impossible to pass any measure at all. All action is paralysed by the pressure of private business, technical forms, and interminable debate. Bills to pass, must belong to two specific classes; they must either be questions that concentrate the political feelings of the whole nation, when they absorb all attention and force their way through by their own magnitude, like the Reform Bill, and the Repeal of the Corn-Laws; or they must come in the shape of private acts, which with the aid of agents and attornies are pushed on with even a mischievous celerity, and in inconvenient number. All others that have not yet excited a mass of popular opinion in their favour, and cannot, from their nature, be carried by private influence, are overborne and thrust aside, till the "advanced period of the Session" falls upon them, and they wither and fade like leaves in autumn; then some sunny July evening, the Prime Minister comes down, and shakes them at once and finally to the earth, to the unspeakable relief of all honourable members; but, if the measures are needed, not to the public advantage. Parliament is technically summoned for "the dispatch of public business:" if the phrase means the most summary mode of doing it, the end is accomplished, for "divers urgent affairs" are annually knocked on the head and put out of the way, with singular readiness and regularity.

Many measures of secondary, but still of great importance, are thus lost: one of the remedies required for Ireland—the releasing the land from a few links of that net-work of legal obstruction to improvements which have grown up through many years of confused and inexplicable tenures—must remain unapplied; the Encumbered Estates Bill is given up; it was not understood out of doors, and was disliked by a class of men who have great influence in the House—the legal profession, and possibly by some of the landowners, who were threatened, it is said, with an inconvenient calling in of mortgages; so, in deference to dislikes and suspicions, the measure is strangled. So has it been with the Prisons Bill; the Parliamentary Electors Bill; a greater measure than either—the Railway Act—had expired before. Nor is the list yet complete; there will be a further weeding out as August approaches; the hot weather, the Monday sittings, the imprisonment and hard labour in Committee Rooms, and the debates prolonged till daybreak, begin about this time to make the members fierce and slightly rabid when business is spoken of; you may know them as they go down Whitehall by their pale, jaded look and the dignity of despair with which they walk towards their Inferno, like tormented spirits let out on parole; they contrast singularly with the crowd of railway witnesses fresh from the country, in the ruddiest and most insulting state of health, great breadth of shoulders, equal to any quantity of sight-seeing, and wearing an unmistakeable air of determination to make the most of opportunity, and the agent who pays the bill. The meeting of such a constituent with such a representative is a sight to see; if you are lucky enough to catch both in their highest development, they are what the French call "types" of two states of being; one is all indifference and ease, the other toil-worn and anxious; one is a mere atom of the great weight, the bulk of society; the other is a portion of the machine which that weight moves, and keeps in such continual motion, that there is danger of its breaking down under the work demanded of it.

The simple fact is, that the business of Parliament has so increased, that, with the utmost strain on its powers, the Legislature is not equal to its task. Within the last forty years every branch of commerce and enterprise has been developed to an extraordinary degree; our Indian Empire has widened in territory and population; the Colonies, increasing in commerce and importance, claim more attention than a Colonial Office, with a staff of clerks and a system of little more than routine, can secure to them. Foreign Affairs were always a prominent feature of the debates, and the tendency to censure a Government at home in its policy abroad has by no means diminished. Ireland, the third part of the kingdom, is bringing on us an appalling retribution for ages of neglect of its social condition, and will occupy more time and thought with every coming year. Scotland is more settled, and has happily been left, for the most part, to be civil and religious liberty we found established at th Union : it sends little more business to Parliament than its quota of railway bills. When we thus survey the whole surface of our Empire, and merely think of the question that crowd from every quarter for decision, the mind sinks in contemplating them as it does when looking as the Alps, or the ocean — it is broug ht in contact with infinity and the illimitable. In one branch of business alone—the construction of railways—we are doing more in a year than the Romans attempted in centuries ; the system of communication which sufficed for the wants of the world during thousands of years, is passing away ; and all the complicated rights of property which have grown up through ages of civilisation have to be adjusted to our modern requirements. Not an acre of land can be taken without the consent of Parliament ; that consent makes inquiry necessary, for the settlement of the most intricate claims. The railway business of late years would, in each session, have alone fully occupied the time of Parliament. But to this is added all the Imperial Legislation which time, change, and growing opinion, make necessary : the Parliament is the Court of Appeal against all abuses of power, the place of complaint for all grievances, real or imagined. From the death of a neglected pauper in a Union to the deposition of a Viceroy—every case is brought there, debated, explained, voted on ; not a despatch arrives from the most distant part of the world, on which the Minister is not questioned as to what has been done, or what he means to do. The days have passed when the Council Chamber was the sole centre of knowledge, and the masses, being in ignorance, had no check on their rulers. Now, the people know as soon—frequently know sooner and more correctly the events of the time ; they have their "Intelligences" abroad, in every colony and capital ; the Ambassadors of the Press represent a degree of political power and information—and, we may add, social wealth – of which the world till within this century had no example ; the people can say of all nations

THE ROYAL VISIT TO CAMBRIDGE.—SKETCH IN THE GARDENS OF TRINITY COLLEGE.—(SEE PAGE 29.)

> We have our eyes upon them, and their deeds
> Come to us on the wind.

How this reacts on the Legislature we see exemplified daily. The duties of the ruler are becoming more arduous every year. In the age of Walpole it was mere play in comparison : the memoirs of the time show it. A stirring party debate or two between the rival sections of the Aristocracy, in a House that was almost as independent of its constituents as the hereditary Chamber; a few measures soon disposed of, and sessions closing in May or June—all this must be regarded by modern Premiers with wonder not unmingled with envy. The post of representative was then a sort of appendage to a man of family and wealth : he entered Parliament as he entered College, as a matter of course—frequently before he was of age; he took office as a matter of course, when his side, by Court intrigue, got uppermost; and he succeeded almost equally as a matter of course. If the Aristocracy chose to unlock the door to a clever plebeian, he got in—as a retainer; but intrusion without their aid was difficult. Profligate wars and enormous debts were the natural consequences of this state of things.

How are all things changed? The wigged and ruffled members of the Parliaments of the first Georges would stand aghast at the work exacted from their successors of the reign of Victoria, and declare it degrading to a gentleman. To sit from eleven in the morning in a close crowded room, deafened by counsel talking against time, with a fee-inspired zeal, of the inconceivable advantages to the human race of the Little Pedlington Branch of some Universal Grand Junction Line; to be made dizzy with traffic tables and scales of gradients till the cry of the " Speaker at prayers !" summons him at four o'clock to the House, there to abide till the day sinks into night, and the night brightens into day again ; and this not, as of old, on one or two occasions during a session, but every day almost as regularly as it comes. That is labour indeed. Add to this the attention required to the " local interests" of his county or borough, and it will be seen that the easy times of Legislators are gone they must work, and honourably, for attendance on committees is compulsory, and few men dare encounter the ridicule that fell on Smith O'Brien, " Kept in," like a bad boy, for not doing his task. The change that has come over things is beginning to tell: men of fortune are less eager to get into Parliament: it costs much money; it entails severe labour; and the social rank is not thought so highly of as formerly. Every era brings forth the men best able to do it service: the business of Parliament will more and more fall into the hands of business men: politics will cease to be a mere excitement for nobles and their connections: it will follow the way that the pursuit of war has gone before it : war was the occupation and delight—a higher kind of hunting of the feudal baron science and a changed world made it a separate profession: the soldier must be a soldier and nothing else. So, when states reach the point England has attained, the work of Governing can no longer be done by amateurs, like those who brought it a good diversion from the gaming-table or the drawing-room. The same cause will, at some as yet distant day, modify the whole system of Legislation: Parliament will have to divide itself, each part, like a polype, preserving an independent life. At present the rush of business chokes the channel it must pass through. Something must be left undone. Knowing this it would be better not to attempt so much to provide such a harvest of measures in January to be mowed down and cast out in the dog-days.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE

THE GOVERNORSHIP OF GREENWICH HOSPITAL.—The Governorship of this institution, vacant by the decease of the Hon. Sir Robert Stopford, has, it is understood, been conferred on Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Adam, Senior Lord of the Admiralty. It is thought that the vacant seat at the Admiralty Board, which the appointment will of course create, will be given to Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, now Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean. The salary of the Governor is £1800 per annum, with handsome house, stores, &c.

THE LATE.—The Guernsey Star states that a soldier of the 46th Regiment, a few days since, died at Jersey, leaving behind him a wife and two children to lament his loss.

THE LATE FROST.—This gallant and dashing officer, which took so conspicuous a share in the victories of the Sutlej, was buried, shortly after he had presented with new colours, with commemoratives of the latter dangers he ran. The regiment is at present at Walmer.

ARRIVAL OF THE NEW FRENCH AMBASSADOR.—His Excellency the Duc de Harcourt, the new French Ambassador, accompanied by the Comte and Comtesse de Jarnac, has arrived in London, and took possession of the splendid mansion in Albert-gate, Hyde-park, lately occupied by Prince Esterhazy. The Duc de Harcourt has been appointed to succeed Count Sainte Aulaire, at Paris, on Saturday night, the 26th inst., when a grand banquet will be given at the Embassy, between the constellation Orion and the Great Bear. It is composed of a glorious coloured diplomatic display, and is distinguished by a nobleness, extending on one side like a bar. The position of this constellation on Saturday, May 4, 1847, at 10h. 30m. 30s., mean time ; right ascension, 22h. 30m. 0s. ; declination, 10 deg. 30m. 0s. north.

THE HUMM'S MARRIAGE.—Tom Thumb is now in Boston, United States, making a great deal of money. The Boston Transcript says " The report appears true, General Tom Thumb has united matrimonially upon the common lot of humanity, and, following other illustrious examples, has 'wooed a maid,' who has agreed to 'wed, wed, wed,' and in a short time they are to be married. She is in her sixteenth year, weighs 15lbs., and is 30 inches high, no inconsiderable weight of the couple."

THE LATE MR. BAYNE, OF MILE-END.—The late William Bayne, Esq., formerly of Cornhill, but late of New Grove, Mile-end, who died on the 11th of June, has left in personality £200,000. He executed his will in 1846, with three codicils, and has bequeathed to his daughter, Mrs. Hargreaves, £500 a year, in addition to £20,000 settled upon her ; to Miss Brownlow, the sister of his late wife, £300 a year, the whole of his address ; £200 a year ; and £100 a year for life (subject to the payment of £200 to Robert B. Clarke and distributed among the poor) to be applied by Robert B. Clarke and distributed among such persons and in such manner as he shall think proper. He also bequeaths to his said wife the residence of his personal property, to be disposed of as she may think proper.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE

The chief topic of interest noticed in the Paris papers seems to have been the [illegible] M. Pellapra[illegible] M. [illegible]ste, and General [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Lord Palmerston concluded his speech by an emphatic warning to Governments inclined to treat England with contempt. "Although," said the noble Lord, "I entreat the House on grounds of public policy not to impeach at present on her Majesty's Government the obligation which this Address would throw on it, yet I would take this opportunity of warning those foreign Governments who are debtors to British subjects, that the time may come when this House will no longer sit patient under wrongs and injustice inflicted on the nefarious acts of this country (cheers)—that the time may come when the British nation will not see with tranquillity a sum of 150 millions due to British subjects remain with even the interest unpaid, and that if they do not make proper efforts to fulfil their engagements, the Government of this country, no matter what men compose it, may be compelled by public opinion, and the votes of Parliament to depart from the hitherto established practice of England, and to insist on the payment of these sums. (Loud cheers.) That we have the means to do it, I am not the person for one moment to doubt. It is not because we are afraid of these states, one or all of them put together, that we should hesitate to adopt the steps which my noble friend urges. England will always have means to obtain justice for her subjects from any country on the face of the earth. (Hear.) It is a question of expediency, not of power, and therefore we must in any foreign country which may have done us a wrong, deceive itself by a false impression that either the British nation or Parliament will for ever remain in passive acquiescence, or that when the British Government is called upon to enforce the rights of the people of England, that Government will not have ample means to procure them justice." (This declaration of Lord Palmerston met with enthusiastic cheers from all sides.)

Lord G. Bentinck expressed himself satisfied with it, and withdrew the motion.

The Rajah of Sattara. The adjourned debate on Mr. Hume's motion for an inquiry into the conduct of the East India Company towards Prataub Sing, the Rajah of Sattara, was then resumed; and, on a division, the proposition was negatived by 44 to 23.

The House sat till a quarter past one o'clock in the morning.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Wednesday.

The House met to-day at noon, and sat nearly six hours, but the business was rather uninteresting. Upon a division, the second reading of the Parliamentary Electors Bill was rejected by 73 to 57.

The Poor Removal Act Amendment Bill was read a second time.

A discussion arose upon the amendments made by the House of Lords to the Juvenile Offenders Bill, which were agreed to with the exception of two, with respect to which reasons were to be given to their Lordships why these amendments should not be persevered with.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Thursday.

THE WELLINGTON STATUE.

Lord Brougham said that, on the 18th of June, 1847, a day for ever memorable in the history of the world, as being the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo a number of persons, feeling grateful to the noble Duke, and considering themselves bound to testify it, collected money to the amount of between 2000 and 3000*l*, for the purpose of making a testimonial to the illustrious Commander. What that testimonial should be was left open for discussion, and when the Committee went to his late Majesty, William IV., and represented that there was no precedent for erecting a memorial to a private individual upon the palace property, he answered that they should make one; and her present Majesty, under the advice of Lord Melbourne, confirmed that decision, and was graciously pleased to authorise the erection of the statue upon the very arch it now adorned. It was on the distinct and express statement that the statue should be placed upon the arch that the Committee again appealed to the public, and £12,000 more was subscribed; and, if it was removed, there would be a direct breach of contract and faith with the public. He understood that the more persons of taste examined the statue, the more they were impressed with the fullness of thought that it was well placed in point of beauty and effect. His opinion on a matter of taste was valueless, and, although he considered that the horse was not like one of the Elgin marbles, and was too real in its position, and not sufficiently heroic, yet he considered that the statue ought to remain where it was. And he was the more impressed with this opinion, when he was aware that it would give great and lasting offence to the noble Duke to remove it. The noble Lord then went on to observe how justly such a compliment was due, and observed that the statue was not the property of the Government, but of the subscribers; and concluded by saying, "And now, remove it if you dare." (Cheers.)

Lord Lansdowne Am I to understand that the noble Lord makes a motion?

Lord Brougham—No; I reserve for all the papers and correspondence connected with the Wellington statue.

Lord Lansdowne said he had reason to complain of the line of conduct adopted by the noble and learned Lord. He had not given notice of his motion, and while he agreed to the motion, he could not but take an opportunity of entering his protest against such a course.

A discussion then took place on the boundary rewards to be given to the Army; the bills on the table were forwarded a stage; and the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Thursday.

WITHDRAWAL OF THE HEALTH OF TOWNS BILL.

The House met at noon, when

Lord John Russell announced the intention of the Government to withdraw this bill. The noble Lord then stated the reasons which induced him to do so. The bill, he said, had been introduced at rather an early period of the Session; but that was not a second time with the concurrence of a majority of the House. Therefore, the principle of the measure had been approved of (hear); but when he considered the lengthened debates which had taken place on some of the clauses, and, at the same sitting, those to which cause, out of a bill containing 85, had been considered, he thought it advisable not to proceed further with the measure this Session. (Hear, hear.) It was evident that long discussions must arise upon many points which would not have been given, and, consequently, the bill must occupy a lengthened time whatever might be the ultimate result. Another circumstance also suggested itself, which was that the present Parliament could not be looked upon as a permanent body after the year 1936. It had sat six years, and there was a general expectation of an early dissolution, therefore there must be considerable excitement in the public mind, rendering its proceedings not advisable in connection with the bill. (Hear, hear.) He trusted, however, that he had not dropped one word which could be supposed that he entertained the least objection to the principle of the bill. It related to a question which no one could deny required the serious attention of the Legislature (hear, hear); and sooner or later, whatever Government might be in power, the subject must be fully considered. (Hear, hear)

Several hon. members having expressed their opinions upon the course taken by the Government,

Lord Morpeth said, it was with great reluctance that he gave his consent to the withdrawal of the bill; but, after what had taken place, he was convinced it would have been impossible to carry it through both Houses of Parliament this session; and, therefore, to have gone on further would only have been wasting the public time. He trusted a similar measure would be brought forward early next session, and under better auspices. (Hear.) He was convinced, sooner or later, the principle of what he contended for must prevail.

The order of the day was then read and discharged

The Compensation for Damages (Ireland) Bill, and the Poling at Elections (Ireland) Bill, went through Committee.

At four o'clock, the House adjourned till five.

At the latter hour, the House proceeded with miscellaneous business.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer explained the details of the expenditure for the Relief of Ireland. An additional sum of £300,000 was voted, without discussion or opposition, upon the security of the relief funds for affording relief to the people of Ireland during the present summer.

The House rose at ten o'clock.

RAILWAY COMMITTEES.—In the House of Lords, on Monday, the Committee declared the preamble of the Great Western (Amendment and Extensions) Bill; the Eastern Counties (Wisbeach to Spalding); the Great Northern (Branch to King's Lynn); and the Glasgow, Airdrie, and Monkbands Junction (Cowlairs Branch) Bills, to be proved.—On Wednesday, the preambles of the Liverpool, Manchester, and Newcastle-upon-Tyne (Alteration of Main Line) Bill, and the Northern Counties Union Railway Bill, were declared to be proved, and the clauses of both bills were agreed to.—On Thursday the Lords declared the preambles of the following bills to be proved: Edinburgh and Northern Railway (Improvement of the Ferry between Ferry-Port-on-Craigh, Edinburgh, and Northen Railway (Branch from Burntisland to Dunfermline Branch, &c., No. 2); Edinburgh and Northern and Edinburgh, Leith, and Granton Railways Amalgamation.

BUST OF SIR HARRY SMITH. Mr. Park, the sculptor, has just completed the Model of a beautiful Bust of Sir Harry Smith, to be executed in marble for a number of his friends at Glasgow.

THE STATE OF TRADE. The trade at Manchester is improving. It appears from a return made up to Monday last, that there is an increase on the number of mills working full time of 24, a decrease of those working short time of 18, and of the mills stopped altogether of 12, an increase of the number of bands fully employed of 6744, a decrease of bands working short time of 3509, and of those mills out of employment of 3065.—At the weekly quarterly meeting of the ironmasters of South Staffordshire, and Shropshire, held on Wednesday, the attendance was numerous, and everything seemed to indicate an improved state of trade. The demand for pig iron, and heavy goods orders were plentiful to have been entered for quick delivery. Exclusive of the demand for railway iron, it is now believed that we may look forward to a return of much of that home consumption of heavy goods, which to a certain extent has been stopped by the late monetary pressure and enormous high price of provisions.

A RUNAWAY ENGINE.—On Sunday afternoon, one of the supplementary engines that are kept in readiness at the railway station at Brighton, was set in motion by the stoker, for the purpose of proceeding to the water tanks, and while the man had got down to shift the points, the engine went forward too rapidly for him to remount to turn off the steam, and it ran into the parcel office, breaking down the wall, and destroying everything in the office. The damage done is estimated at £200; and three pictures, said to be worth £100, which had been placed in the office for the purpose of being conveyed away, were destroyed. The foreman, Thomas Harrison, was taken before the magistrates on Monday, and fined £10 for acting against regulations. Three persons had left the parcel office just before, or their lives would probably have been sacrificed.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Pratch." It is usually pronounced as spelt.

"A. L."—You do right to reserve your Problems for re-investigation: the best we retain of yours shall appear in due season.

"T. L. Y."—It is, properly speaking, a distinction without a difference.

"Palmam qui Meruit Ferat." We quite agree with you in thanking Mr. Klug entitled to the highest rank among the Inventors of Problems in the present day: nothing, certainly, can surpass the ingenuity and beauty of some of his latter efforts.

"Esmeralda." The "Handbook" is a Treatise on the Game of Chess, and not merely a collection of Games and Problems.

"Philo Chess." You will readily obtain the Chess work mentioned through Mr. Hastings, of Carey-street, Lincoln's-inn.

"Rhos."—Thanks. He will improve if goes on most prosperously; and, there is little doubt, will have the largest circulation of any elementary book on Chess ever published.

"G. S." Liverpool.—The games sent, and those promised, shall have an early appearance in our Chess column.

"Miranda."—A good idea, but faithy carried out. Submit it to some experienced friend for revision, before you make it public.

"C. H. S." New York. The long-delayed packet will be forwarded this week, through Messrs. Wiley and Co.

"M." Nepaulgan.—Very acceptable indeed; and we shall await impatiently the promised second budget.

Solutions by "Sopracitta," "A. B. S.," "A. Z.," "A. D. A.," "Palmam, &c.," "D. C." Glasgow, "G. P. W." "Dr. P." "Miles," "Sigma," and "Harlequin," are correct.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM NO. 180.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to K 3d	B takes R	5. B takes B (ch)	K takes B
2. Q to K 1 6th	R to K B 2d or (a)	6. Kt takes B (ch)	K to Q 4th
3. A to his b.	K to Q 4th, best	7. P mates
4. B to K Kt 2d (ch)	B to K 5th

(a) 2. K takes P

3. Q takes P (ch)	3. B to K 5th	4. Q takes B (ch)	K to his 6th
4. Q to K B 6th (ch)	4. B to K B 4th	5. Q to K Kt 5th (ch)	K is moved
		7. B mates

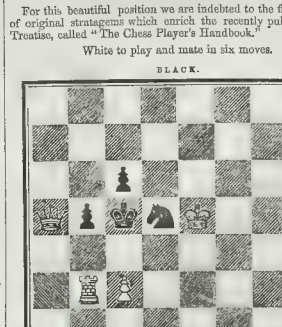
PROBLEM, NO. 181.

By the Rev. H. Bolton.

For this beautiful position we are indebted to the fine collection of original stratagems which enrich the recently published Chess Treatise, called "The Chess Player's Handbook."

White to play and mate in six moves.

BLACK.



WHITE.

GAME IN THE PENDING MATCH BETWEEN MR. HARRWITZ AND MR. MEDLEY;

The former giving the odds of Pawn and two moves.

(White's K B P must be removed.)

BLACK (Medley).	WHITE (Harrwitz).	BLACK (Medley).	WHITE (Harrwitz).
1. K P two		31. R to K 7th (g)	Q R to Kt sq
2. Q P two	Q Kt to B 3rd	32. Q to K B 7th	Q to Q 8th (ch)
3. Q Kt to B 3rd	K P two	33. K to Kt 2nd	Q to Q 7th (ch)
4. K Kt to B 3rd	Kt takes P	34. K to B sq	Q (7) to Q 8th
5. K B P two	Kt to K B 2nd	35. R to K sq	Q to Q 2nd
6. K B to Q B 4th	K to K B 2nd	36. R to K 8th (ch)	K to B 2nd
7. K B P one (a)	K B to Q Kt 5th	37. R to K 7th (h)	R to Q sq
8. Q B takes K Kt	B takes Kt (ch)	38. R takes Q (ch)	It takes R
9. P takes B	Q to K R 5th (ch)	39. Q to K B 4th (ch)	K to B sq
10. K to B sq	Q takes B (b)	40. K to K 2nd	K R P one
11. B takes Kt (ch)	h takes B	41. Q to B 8th (ch)	K to B 2nd
12. Q to her 8th (ch)	K to K sq (c)	42. K to K 3rd	Q Kt P two
13. K to B 3rd	Q B P one	43. K to K 4th	Q R P two
14. Q to Q B 4th	Q P one	44. K to K 5th	R to Q 4th (ch)
15. Q R to Q sq	R to K 2nd	45. K to K 6th	R to K kt 4th
16. K to B 2nd	Q B to Q 2nd	46. K B P one	R to K Kt 7th
17. K R to K sq (d)	K R to K B sq	47. Q to K 7th (ch)	K to K 3rd
18. K to Kt sq	K to Q sq	48. Q to Q 8th (ch)	K to R 3rd
19. Q to Q 4th (e)	K to Q B 2nd	49. Q to Q B 8th (ch)	K to Kt 3rd
20. K P one	Q P one	50. K B P one	R takes Q B P
21. K P one	B to K sq	51. Q to K Kt 8th	R to K Kt 7th
22. Q to K 8th (ch)	K to B sq	52. K to K B 7th	R to K 4th
23. P to Q B 4th	B to K R 4th	53. Q to Q 8th (ch)	K to Kt 2nd
24. P takes P	B takes Kt	54. Q takes P	P takes Q
25. P takes P (f)	Q to Kt 4th (ch)	55. K takes P	Q B P one
26. K to Kt sq	R takes K B P	56. K B P one	Q B P one
27. Q to Q 6th	R takes Q P	57. K B P one	Q B P one
28. K P one	R takes K P	58. P "Queens"	Q Kt P one
29. P "Queens" (ch)	R to Q sq	59. Q to Q B 8th	Resigns.
30. R takes R (ch)	Q takes R

(a) This is premature. It is better play, we believe, to move K Kt to B 3rd.

(b) Stronger, perhaps, to take the Bishop with the Kt.

(c) K to the second square preferable.

(d) P to K 4th would have been more forcible. If then White replied, by taking the P, or playing Q P one, Black must have got an irresistable game by checking with the Q at Q Kt 5th.

(e) A good move, but less effective than Q to her Kt 4th. In the latter case, the following is, probably, the game we should have presumed:

20. Q to her Kt 4th	K to Q B 2nd	20. P to K 5th	Q P takes K P
21. Kt takes P	K takes Kt	21. Q takes Q P (ch)	K to his 3rd

If White advance the P to Q 6th, Black can attack the P with K P, winning without trouble

21. Kt takes it (ch)	h takes h	22. R to Q sq (ch)	and wins
22. Q takes Q R P (ch)	K to Q 3rd

(f) P to Q B 4th, it have been solely played (g) An excellent move.

(h) Q takes Q, followed by R takes R, would have speedily terminated the struggle

BETWEEN THE SAME PLAYERS;

Mr. H. giving Pawn and two moves. (Remove White's K B P from the Board.)

BLACK (Mr. M.)	WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. M.)	WHITE (Mr. H.)
1. K P two		23. K to B 2nd	P takes Kt
2. Q P two	Q Kt to B 3rd	24. R takes B (ch)	K to B 2nd
3. Q Kt to B 3rd	K P two	25. Q to K 2nd	K to Q 2nd
4. P takes P	Kt takes P	26. K R to Q sq	Q R to Q sq
5. K B P two	Kt to B 2nd	27. R takes R (ch)	R takes R
6. K Kt to B 4th	K Kt to K 4th	28. Q to K 2nd	K to Kt 2nd
7. Q to Q 4th	Q to K R 5th (ch)	29. R to K 6th	K R P two
8. K Kt P one	Q to K R 4th	30. B takes P	R takes P
9. Q B P two	K to Q sq	31. B to K Kt 4th	R to Kt 7th (ch)
10. K B P one	K B to Q 3rd	32. K to Q 3rd	Q R P two
11. Kt to K B 4th	B takes kt	33. K takes P	Q B P one (ch)
12. B takes B	h to K sq	34. K to Q B 3rd	R to K Kt 8th (ch)
13. K B to K 2nd	K Kt to K B 5th	35. K to Q 4th	R to K Kt 7th
14. K R P one	Q Kt to K R 3rd	36. R to K 6th	R takes P
15. Q B takes Q K.	Q takes B	37. R to K 2nd	R to Q B 8th
16. K B takes Kt	Q B P two	38. K B P one	R to K B 8th
17. Q to Q 3rd	Q Kt P two	39. K to K 6th	K to Q sq
18. Q Kt to Q sq	R to K 2nd	40. B to K 4th	Q Kt P one
19. K Kt to B 3rd	Q B to Kt 2nd	41. K B P one	R to K 7th
20. Kt to K 5th	Q to K B 3rd	42. K to Q 5th (dis ch)	K to K P sq
21. Kt takes Q P	R takes K P	43. R to K 8th (ch)	K to K 2nd
22. Kt takes Q (dis ch)	R takes Q (dis ch)	44. P "Queens" (i)	A mate.

At the termination of this game the score stood as follows:

Mr. Harrwitz .. .. 4 | Mr. Medley .. .. 4 | Drawn 0

CHESS ENIGMAS.

(HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.)

No. 179.—By Mr. Mc G——r.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q Kt 6th	K at Q 3d	Kt at Q 4th
3 at K B 5th		P at his R 4th
B at Q 8th		Q 2d and Q B 3d

White to play and mate in three moves.

No. 180.—By Mr. S. Boddy.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at his 8th	K at K R 8th	Kt at K R 6th
P at K R 6th and	P at K 3d
B at K Kt 3rd	K Kt 7th

White to mate in five moves.

No. 181.—By A. L——N.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at his K 2d	K at K R 4th	B at Q 4th
R at K Kt 2d	P at K R 3d and K Kt 3d	P at K B 4th

White playing first, mates in four moves.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

CONFLAGRATION AT GREENWICH FROM LIGHTNING.

During the violent thunder-storm on Wednesday morning, the lightning struck the roofing of the private dwelling in the occupation of Mr. Wiseman, Brewer's-lane, Greenwich, near to the Hospital, and close by the Watermen's Pier, at the bottom of Church-street, and set fire to several other dwellings

It appears that one of the neighbours, a Mrs. Giles, being alarmed by the thunder, went to one of the windows to throw it open, when a stream of fire shot from the clouds, striking immediately over the roofing of the premises in Mr. Wiseman's occupation; in a short time she saw the roof on fire, and aroused her neighbours. Scenes of poor people, who inhabit this densely crowded thoroughfare, jumped from their beds, and rushed from their dwellings almost in a state of nudity; and some narrow escapes from injury were experienced.

Several engines soon arrived, and the hose of the first being led from the Thames, and the engines well supplied, vast bodies of water were soon poured upon the burning materials, but the fire progressed from house to house, until it encircled an area of great extent. From Mr. Wiseman's private dwelling it extended to the lofts and store-rooms of Messrs. W. and R Huntley, sail-makers, thence to the warehouses of the same firm, and the private residence of one of the partners. Several cottages on the same side of the way then became ignited, while those on the opposite side, in Coombe's-court, caught fire. The excitement then became extreme. The poor people were compelled to stand by, and see their little all of furniture and effects destroyed, all their efforts to save it being cut off by the fury of the flames. The efforts of the firemen were directed for some time, to removing some wooden partitions, that they might, if possible save the ancient water-side house, the "Fubb's Yacht," but their exertion proved fruitless—the whole of the building and its contents are destroyed. By seven o'clock, however, the fire was so far subdued that no further danger of its extension appeared, and by nine o'clock nothing remained but a smouldering mass of ruins.

Subjoined is the official report:—"July 7, 1847. Fire upon the premises undermentioned, situated severally in Brewer's-lane and Coombe's-court, near the Hospital, Greenwich. Broke out upon the premises in the occupation of Mr. T. Wiseman (private) burnt down not at present known if insured. Premises of Messrs. W. and R. Huntley, mast, block, and sail makers; building and contents all burnt down. Private house and warehouse belonging to the same firm; roof, tiles, and stock and furniture seriously damaged; not known if insured. Mr. James Finch, Brewer's lane (private); all but destroyed. House of Mr. T. Cole, licensed victualler, sign Fubbs's Yacht; burned down. Mrs. Truscott (private), burnt down; not insured. Coombe's-court: Mr. S. Welsh (private); burned down—uninsured. Mr. Burns (private); burned down—uninsured. Mrs. Taylor (private); front damaged, walls partially pulled down not insured. Mr Lawrence (private); similarly injured. Three houses on the opposite side, occupied severally by Mr. Blackman, Mr. Giles, and Mr. Matthews, are also destroyed—cause, electric fluid. Happily, no one was injured."

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Braidwood, the Superintendent of the London Fire Establishment, proceeded to Greenwich, for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the calamity was occasioned by electricity. The result of his investigation has no doubt whatever that the fire was so caused. Two persons, who reside in Brewer's-lane, assert that they saw the buildings struck. Mrs. Giles, whose house and furniture have been reduced to ashes, states that about ten minutes before two o'clock she was awoke from her slumbers by a peal of thunder resembling the discharge of a piece of ordnance near her house. Imagining that the house was falling, she immediately got out of bed, and, pulling the blind on one side, looked out of the window, when she saw a streak of lightning shoot in an oblique direction, and strike the sail loft of Mr. Huntley. It had no sooner done so than smoke and flames shot forth, in the first instance in small patches. She, seeing what was likely to take place, apprised her family, and by the time they could get dressed the principal portion of Mr. Huntley's property was enveloped in one broad sheet of flame.

It is the general opinion that several parts of the same building were fired simultaneously. This is borne out by a man named Smith, a shoemaker. He stated that he had got up and gone into the court, when he saw a stream of lightning descend in a "zig-zag" form through the sky, as if its progress was impeded by the walls of the houses, and as soon as it touched the arch that crossed the lane, and which connected Mr. Huntley's stores, it made a whizzing noise like the discharge of a squib, and in less than a minute afterwards the fire was distinctly visible in several places. At the time of the outbreak there was an immense quantity of blocks, spars, tar, ropes, and canvass, and other equally inflammable articles in the premises, which will account for the rapid progress of the conflagration. Shortly after the premises of Mr. Huntley became fired the side walls bulged out, and then the flames extended right and left. Mr. Hamilton, senior, who had been confined to his bed by illness, was unable to escape. A man named Blackmore, carried him on his back to his son's private residence.

It has been ascertained that the mast and sail making premises of Mr. Huntley were insured in the Sun and Phœnix Fire Offices. The salt warehouses of Mr. W. Huntley were insured in the Sun. Mrs. Finch, whose premises were nearly destroyed, was insured in the same office. Mr. Cole, the proprietor of the Fubbs's Yacht public-house, was insured in the Phœnix. Mrs. Truscott, Mr. S. Welsh, Mr. Burns, Mr. Taylor, Mr. Blackman, Mr. Giles, and Mr. Matthews, were not insured. The latter were poor hard-working people; and, having been deprived of house and furniture, there is no doubt that a subscription will be opened for them

CONVICTION OF THE LADY RAILWAY THIEVES AT BRISTOL.—The two "lady thieves," Lofts and Smith, who were apprehended at Bristol about three weeks since, on a charge of robbing a lady, named Barnard, of a purse containing £35, while waiting at the Bristol station of the Great Western Railway, were brought to trial on Wednesday, before the Recorder, at the Quarter Sessions for Bristol. It seems from the evidence of a witness named Potter, traveller for a large metropolitan brewery, who was called by Lofts to speak to her character, that she is the wife of an innkeeper of London, who formerly kept the Swan at Stratford-on-Avon. The witness stated that he believed her to be an honest and respectable woman. The other prisoner, Smith, was also described by a master tailor, of London, named Turner, as being respectably connected. The fact of the robbery was clearly brought home to them by several witnesses, and the Jury found them both "Guilty." The Recorder then sentenced each of them to twelve months' imprisonment, with hard labour.

FIRE AT A MILL IN HALIFAX.—A serious fire occurred at Halifax on Thursday morning (last week), at the mill of Messrs. James Akroyd and Son It appears that the fire originated in the garret, which was used for reeling purposes, and was first discovered a little after nine o'clock, and in the short space of little more than an hour the whole was in flames. The mill is entirely gutted. It contained from seventy to one hundred spinning and drawing frames. The amount of damage, it is thought, cannot be less than £30,000, and a number of hands are thus thrown out of employment.

EFFECTS OF THE STORM ON WEDNESDAY MORNING. About a quarter past two on Wednesday morning, during the storm, the electric fluid struck the roof of the house of Mr. Whichelow, leather-dresser, Paulin-street, Bermondsey. The parish engine was got to work, but the workshop and the front of the dwelling house were destroyed. The family narrowly escaped. The storm was felt with equal violence, although it was not attended with so great a destruction of property as at Greenwich, throughout the whole of the counties of Surrey, Kent, and Middlesex. At Walworth the lightning struck a tall house, and did material damage. In the Waterloo-road, one of the police constables of the L division, whilst patrolling his beat, was knocked down by the lightning, but fortunately, although seriously, he was not fatally injured. At Farringdon-market the roof of the building was so shaken that the market people made a precipitate retreat, expecting that the place would have been thrown down; no damage, however, was done. During the storm, a poor woman of the name of Flynn, residing at Broad-street, Golden-square, was returning home from the Three Compasses in that neighbourhood, accompanied by her husband, when the electric fluid passed close to the road-way, and struck her to the ground. As soon as possible Mrs. Flynn was conveyed to a public-house close at hand, but in a lifeless state, and her recovery is deemed hopeless. Strange to say, Mr. Flynn did not receive a slight injury, although his wife was holding his arm at the moment she received the shock.

DARING ATTEMPT TO ROB A POSTMAN. On Wednesday morning, shortly after eight o'clock, Bradley, the postman who carries the letters to the various banking-houses, was attacked on his way through Mitre-court, near Wood-street, Cheapside, by three fellows, one of whom struck him on the head with a life-preserver, and attempted to snatch the bag off his arm. He rolled over with the fellow, and Mr. Proctor, another postman, who happened to be in Wood-street, hearing the cries, ran up, when he found the fellows had closed the gate at the end of the court, on which he immediately ran round to Milk-street; but, by the time he had got into the court, the assailants had effected their escape. They calculated, no doubt, on a considerable plunder in remittances, &c. The skeleton key and the life-preserver were found by the officer. The poor postman bled profusely from the head; but, although the violence used against him was very great, he grasped his bags in the most determined manner, so that even those who went to his assistance could not get them from him without great difficulty. It is considered a most daring attempt, and it was remarkable, in that [illegible] on Wednesday morning.

THE INSTALLATION AT CAMBRIDGE.

THE QUEEN PASSING THE TRIUMPHAL ARCH, AT TOTTENHAM GREEN.

THE ceremonial of Installing the newly-elected Prince-Chancellor in his high office, from its first announcement, promised a magnificent display of Academic "pomp and circumstance;" but, when it was known that his Royal Highness would be accompanied by her Majesty, the preparations assumed a more extensive character; with the two-fold noble purpose of honour to the Sovereign, and a fitting welcome to the Chancellor, with all the State due to his high official rank.

In glancing at a list of Royal Progresses to Cambridge, during a period of nearly one thousand years, we find that only upon six occasions, in upwards of forty Royal Visits, has Cambridge been honoured with the presence of a Queen; and, one of these, the present Sovereign. Although scarcely four years have elapsed since this auspicious visit, the reception of her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert in Cambridge, on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday last, could not have been exceeded in enthusiasm: all that warmth of feeling by which a monarchy-loving people can attest their affection for Royalty, was evinced upon this occasion; and that with, perhaps, greater favour than when the Queen and the Prince visited Granta's time-honoured seat of learning in 1843. This may, possibly, be explained by the present being not a mere visit of pleasure, but, in connection with an event as honourable to the University as gratifying to the feelings of the husband of the Sovereign, in the choice of his Royal Highness for his Academic office.

Of the recent Election of the Prince-Chancellor, and the Inauguration of his Royal Highness, we have already presented the reader with a Series of Illustrations in our Volume just completed; and our present purpose is to chronicle as well as illustrate the leading scenes and ceremonies of THE INSTALLATION AND THE ROYAL VISIT to Cambridge, on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday last.

MONDAY.

THE RAILWAY STATION, AT TOTTENHAM.

On Monday morning, at half-past ten, the Queen and Prince Albert left Buckingham Palace, for the Tottenham Station of the Eastern Counties Railway, en route for Cambridge.

The Royal party occupied three open carriages and four. In the first carriage were her Majesty the Queen, his Royal Highness Prince Albert; the Mistress of the Robes, the Duchess of Sutherland; and the Lady in Waiting, the Countess of Desart. In the second carriage were the Groom of the Stole to Prince Albert, the Marquis of Abercorn; the Lord in Waiting, the Earl of Morton; the Equerry in Waiting, Colonel Buckley; and the Equerry in Waiting to Prince Albert, Lieutenant-Colonel Seymour. In the third carriage were Mr George Edward Anson, Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. C. F. Phipps, Major-General Bowles, and Dr. Meyer. The escort was a party of Lancers.

INTERIOR OF THE RAILWAY PAVILION, AT TOTTENHAM.

Extensive preparations were made for the reception of her Majesty and the Prince at Tottenham; and this being the first time of the Queen travelling on the Eastern Counties line, the Directors determined not to let pass unimproved such an opportunity of signalising their railway, as well as placing it on a level with the other great trunk lines of the kingdom. On Tottenham-green, about 300 yards from the Station, a lofty arch, composed of evergreens and flowers, was erected. From this, a road, the sides of which were marked out by wreaths and flagstaffs, led to a Pavilion close to the railway. The centre of the Pavilion formed a reception-room, which was lined with white and scarlet drapery: on each side was a retiring room for her Majesty's suite. From the reception-room, a corridor, supported by columns, and fitted up with a ladies' gallery, led to the departure platform. The number of ladies present in the galleries, the military dresses of the yeomanry, the music of several bands, the bright colours of the flags which were flying at every point, formed in combination a remarkably gay scene.

A guard of honour, furnished by the West Essex Yeomanry Cavalry, awaited the Queen's arrival. The detachment was commanded by Captain Palmer, the son of one of the members for the county. Mr. Hudson, M.P., chairman of the railway company, accompanied by Messrs. Gibbs, Waddington, Anderson, and Sheriff Kennard, directors of the same, and attended by Messrs. Roney and Duncan, the secretary and solicitor, arrived shortly after eleven o'clock. Mrs. Hudson, the Countess (Dowager) of Essex and Miss Johnson, the Hon. Charles and Lady Mary Howard, and some few ladies, arrived in the same train with the Directors.

The Royal train having been previously arranged, was now brought alongside the platform. It consisted of six carriages, viz., a break van, two first class carriages, a saloon carriage, a third first-class carriage, and, lastly, a second break van.

The saloon carriage used on this occasion was obligingly lent by the Directors of the London and North-Western Railway. The interior was tastefully ornamented with exquisite bouquets of flowers. On a table in the centre was placed an elegantly bound map and plan of the Eastern Counties Railway, for the use of her Majesty and the Prince during their journey.

At twenty minutes past eleven, the Royal cortège drove across the Green, in front of the Station, and drew up at the entrance to the Pavilion. There were about 3000 persons assembled, who received her Majesty with every demonstration of affectionate loyalty.

Mr. Hudson and his co-directors advanced to receive the Queen, who, upon alighting, addressed the worthy Chairman very affably. Mr. Hudson was about to conduct her Majesty to an apartment which had been fitted for her express accommodation within the Pavilion; but, on the Queen intimating that she would prefer taking her seat in the train immediately, he led the way through the Pavilion on to the platform. As her Majesty passed along, she was loyally greeted by the fair occupants on either side.

EXTERIOR OF THE RAILWAY PAVILION, AT TOTTENHAM.

THE INSTALLATION AT CAMBRIDGE.

HER MAJESTY AT THE CAMBRIDGE RAILWAY STATION.

The Queen having entered the saloon carriage, amid the cheers of the assembled spectators, some few moments' delay took place, in order to allow the pilot engine, which it had been arranged should precede the Royal train, to get in advance. Precisely at twenty-eight minutes past eleven, Mr. Roney, the Secretary to the Railway Company, gave the signal for starting, and the train moved slowly on towards Cambridge.

By the express command of her Majesty, the speed was not allowed to exceed thirty-five miles an hour, and in a very few moments after the train got into motion that rate was attained. The first pilot-engine bore one Union jack; the after one carried two. Over the Queen's carriage floated the Royal standard. It was, as we have mentioned, the Royal carriage of the London and North Western Company; and, says the Times report, "It is worthy of mention, as illustrative of the facility of transmission by railway, that it was found more convenient to send this carriage by railway from Euston-square to Shoreditch, round by Peterborough, a distance of 210 miles, than to take it off the rails, about two and a half miles, the distance between the London termini of the Birmingham and the Eastern Counties lines. The engine-driver who had the honour of officiating on this occasion was William Young; and we are induced to mention his name, because he is represented to be 'a steady man of good character,'—a better claim to notice in the record of these proceedings than, perhaps, is possessed by many of those who are placed by fortuitous circumstances in a more noticeable position."

THE JOURNEY.

At every Station along the line, crowds of persons had assembled to catch a glimpse of their beloved Sovereign and her Consort; and there was scarcely a space of 600 yards, along the whole line, at which groups of spectators were not to be seen waving hats, handkerchiefs, and small boughs of trees. "At all the Stations," says the Morning Post, "between Tottenham and Bishop's Stortford, the platforms and hedge-rows, to a considerable distance on either side, were thronged with spectators; and even in the midst of rural districts, over which the eye scarcely rested on a cottage, here and there might be seen groups of ruddy faces, eagerly striving to catch a glance at the Royal travellers, and testifying their loyalty in the most enthusiastic manner."

At Bishop Stortford, the West Essex Yeomanry supplied a guard of honour, and a rustic band played the National Anthem while the train halted to take in water.

The Station was very gaily decorated with flags and evergreens, and the whole population of the place appeared to be congregated in its vicinity.

Again, speeding onward, the train passed successively the Stanstead and Elsenham Stations the latter the highest point throughout the line. The district which this railway traverses is here exceedingly beautiful, and the interesting objects with which the county abounds cannot fail to have been very gratifying to her Majesty.

Newport, Wendon, Chesterford (where the Newmarket Branch commences), Whittlesford, and Shelford, having been successively passed, the classic towers of Cambridge soon broke upon the view; and at fifty two minutes after twelve o'clock, the Royal train drew up alongside the platform within the Station.

ARRIVAL AT CAMBRIDGE.

Here were assembled, to meet her Majesty, the Earl of Hardwick, Lord Lieutenant of the county; Lord Godolphin, High Steward of the Corporation of Cambridge; Mr. Pate, the High Sheriff of the county; the Mayor and Corporation of Cambridge, &c.

A guard of honour, composed of a company of Chelsea Out-Pensioners, under the command of Captain Forster, were drawn up on the platform within the Station; and without, a detachment of the Whittlesea Yeomanry Cavalry, under Captain Charles Smith, an old Waterloo officer, and brother of the gallant Sir Harry Smith, formed an escort to accompany the Royal Party from the Station to Trinity College.

On the Royal carriage being drawn up, alongside the platform, the Mayor (Mr. C. E. Brown), who was attended by his chaplain, the Rev. W. Carus, and accompanied by a large body of Aldermen, all of whom wore their Corporation robes, advanced to the window, and delivered up the mace and other insignia of his office, which her Majesty graciously requested him to retain.

The Duke of Norfolk, as Master of the Horse, had previously arrived at Cambridge, and, with four of the Royal carriages, was in attendance to receive his Sovereign.

THE PROCESSION TO TRINITY COLLEGE.

Her Majesty having stepped from the saloon carriage, thanked the Directors for their attention to her convenience, and expressed herself much gratified with the manner in which the journey had been performed; after which, resting on the arm of the Prince Consort, the Queen walked across the platform, and, on looking round at the gay scene, was heard to exclaim, in evident delight, to the Prince—"Really, this is beautiful! Is it not most gratifying?"

The Royal pair then took their seats in the state carriage; and the procession moved up Hill's-road, headed by a detachment of Yeomanry. After these came three of the Queen's carriages, containing the officers of her Majesty's household; which were in turn succeeded by a company of Out-Pensioners and the band of the Sappers and Miners.

The Corporation of Cambridge immediately preceded the Queen's carriage, the Mayor walking on the right-hand, and the Earl of Hardwick riding on the left-hand of her Majesty.

In this order, the cortège moved between dense masses of spectators throughout the whole distance, from the station to Trumpington-street. All the shops were closed; the houses were decorated with flags and devices in flowers, and every window and public building was thronged with applauding spectators. There were some magnificent triumphal arches; the churches rang out their merry peals, and throughout the distance (about a mile and-a-half) every one participated in the joyous greetings of a general holiday.

Nor should we omit to state that the Railway Station was profusely decorated with evergreens and flowers; while, high above its roof floated the Royal standard among an array of Union Jacks and military ensigns. Immediately outside the grand entrance, spacious and lofty galleries were erected by the Railway Directors for their ladies and friends, the Mayor and Corporation, their ladies and friends.

(Continued on page 24.)

THE RECEPTION OF THE QUEEN IN THE GREAT COURT OF TRINITY COLLEGE.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, July 11.—Sixth Sunday after Trinity. Old St. Peter.
MONDAY, 12.—New Moon at 11h. 38m. a.m.—The Sun rises at 3h. 59m.
TUESDAY, 13.—Jupiter rises at 2h. 39m. a.m.—The Sun is due E. at 7h. 20m.
WEDNESDAY, 14.—Mars rises at 11h. 16m. p.m.—The Sun sets at 8h 10m.
THURSDAY, 15.—St. Swithin.—The Length of the Day is 16h. 7m.
FRIDAY, 16.—Beginning of the Hegira, or Mahometan Era in the year 622.
SATURDAY, 17.—Venus sets at 9h. 54m. p.m.—The Day has decreased 31 minutes since the Longest Day.

Venus and the Moon are near together on the 16th; during which day, the Moon will not rise a second time to find the planet Venus.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 17

Sat.	Sun.	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
0 0	0 36	1 13	1 43	2 12	2 39	3 6	3 30
3 53	4 16	4 38	5 0	5 23	5 46	6 10	6 36
7 3	7 33	8 5	8 40	9 20	10 5	10 55	11 50

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Three Ladies, Subscribers."—Her Majesty visited Cambridge in October, 1843. The leading incidents of the Royal Progress and Sojourn will be found described and illustrated in Nos. 73 and 79 (vol. III.) of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. The maiden name of the lady in question was Hogarth.

"W. R. W."—The Rehearing Officer is mistaken.

"Young Arthur."—See the Memoir of Mille Jenny Lind, in our Journal for April 24 last

"A Subscriber," Rowley Regis.—The Letter has been referred to the Editor.

"A Subscriber," Bedale.—The focal length of Lord Rosse's Leviathan Telescope is 52 feet. The tube, partly a cubic chamber, where the mirror is fixed, and partly a cylinder, of such deal, strongly hooped, is 6 feet diameter at its centre. If we remember rightly, the Dean of Ely has walked through the tube, with an umbrella up! (See the description of the Telescope, in Nos. 71 and 155 of our Journal.)

"Ajuhna" will find a Portrait and copious Memoir of Sir Robert Stopford (who died a few days since), in No. 104 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

"C. R.," and "T. T.," Bangor.—The Cornerake, or Landrail, arrives in Britain late in April, and leaves it in September. In Germany, this bird is called the King of the Quails, because it was formerly supposed to lead them in their migrations.

"R. S.," Witney.—The Planet Astræa was discovered in 1846, by Herr Encke, of Berlin.—(See the Athenæum, No. 951.)

"W. S.," co. Wicklow, is thanked for the Lithograph.

"F. T. T.," Holsworthy.—Apply to Mr. Bell, Publisher, Fleet-street.

"X. Y. Z." and "R. K. J."—See the General Notice below, relating to "Back Numbers."

"E. B.," Haslingden, is thanked; but we have not room.

"Hibernicus," Ryde, should read Sir R. Bonnycastle's last Work on Canada (for Emigration details), to be obtained at a circulating library.

"Volatile" must excuse our declining to reply to her inquiries as to the fortune of a certain opulent lady, who is a partner in the Bank named: address, Stratton-street, Piccadilly. Omission to reply to such an enquiry as the above is rather an Observance than a breach of courtesy. The Railway distances will be found in Arrowsmith's Guide

"A. P." Meaningless.—Song or Sung is the preterite of Sing: either is correct as the instance names!

"B. C.," Walton, Norfolk.—The Hospital for Consumption and Diseases of the Chest is at Brompton, in the Fulham Road.

"R. B. L.," Suffolk, is not recommended to purchase either of the "Substitutes for Silver." The so-called "German Silver" is white copper, and is dangerous for general use. Perhaps, the least objectionable "Substitute" is that which is plated on white nickel.

"An Old Lexington Spinster."—Mdlle. Lind's name is pronounced Lorn*d. Use the India-rubber remedy.*

"W. P.," Hampstead, had better submit his four questions to a Solicitor.

"F. T.," Ringwood.—A small work on the Art of Making Fireworks is published by Knight, Marshall, and Co.

"A Reader," Tipton, may become a Member of the British Association by a subscription of One Guinea: apply to John Taylor, Esq., General Secretary, Adelphi: and, to the Royal Agricultural Society of England by the same method. Apply to Horace Hayman, Esq., Secretary, 4, Hanover-square

"J. S. C.," Derby.—Persons are admitted, on Sundays, between the hours of Divine Service, to view St. George's Chapel, Windsor.

"A Constant Reader."—The Sketches of London Police Offices and Magistrates which have appeared in our Journal, are "from the life."

"A. B.," Belfast.—The address of Sir George Grey is 14, Eaton-place.

"R. R.," Loughborough.—The Song, though smart in its way, is quite out of our way.

"Ignoramus."—The "Kentish Fire" is a kind of trick of applause, not introduced at public meetings in Kent. "De Minimis non Curat" is about as well an orthodox as the "British Lion."

"J. A.," Birmingham, is thanked for his sensible letter, which we will endeavour to print

"H. S.," Greenwich.—Not with any chance of recovery.

"An Old Subscriber," Paisley.—Valpy's "Latin Grammar:" or, there is a "Self-instructing Work," published by Britain, Paternoster-row.

"Prior," Ilminster.—We will inquire.

"A Lady," Brixton-road.—Address Her Majesty's Theatre. We should not be justified in giving the "private address"

"W. B. B." is thanked for his offer; but, we cannot engrave the subject

"S. S. S."—Apply to Knight and Co., Foster-lane, Cheapside, for a little work on Daguerreotype Manipulation.

"A Father."—The Hon. Secretary to the Governess Benevolent Society is the Rev. D. Tarrant, 1, Cambridge-terrace, Regent's Park.

"H. C. W.," Thames Litton, perhaps, had better communicate the result of his observations on the Potato Disease to Mr. Alfred Smee, who takes great pains with the subject, and who solicits information from all quarters. As a Lecturer on Surgery, we presume that he must be conversant with the effects of parasites on the human frame

"T. S." The half-year's notice to quit the house must be so given as to expire on the same quarter-day as that on which the tenant took possession.—"X. L."'s notice will, therefore, legally be minute at Midsummer.

"J. P. H."—Is all probability

"T. L.," Edinburgh.—The thin Silver Coin in question is a Penny of Edward II.: worth 2*s., when in good preservation.*

"J. H. B." The gentleman named, we should say, will not be removed from his office, under the circumstances stated.

"Hop."—See a receipt for rendering cloth, &c., incombustible, at page 74 of the Volume of our Journal just completed.

"J. C.," Cornhill.—According to Johnson, the term Whig is from Whiggs, a term originally applied to the Scotch Covenanters, and all that opposed the Court.—(See Hist. of his Own Time, vol. I., p. 4.1.) Tory is said to be the Irish word Torse, that is, Give me, which was the watchword of surrender used by the Bandists to whom the name was originally applied

"J. T.," Chellington.—The New York line of Packets sail from St. Katherine's Docks, London.

THE CAMBRIDGE INSTALLATION.—Next week, we shall conclude our Series of Illustrations, with Engravings which space would not allow to be comprised in the present Number

COMPLETION OF VOL. X.—With the present Number, gratis, A SUPPLEMENT, containing Title-page and Indexes to Vol. X.; with a Chronology of the Remarkable Events of the last Six Months.

COVERS for Binding Vol. X. are now ready, price 3*s.*

BACK NUMBERS.

All Numbers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, one month old, will, in future, be considered "Back Numbers," and be charged each sixpence extra.

The Back Numbers are now reprinted; and any single Number from the commencement may be had by remitting One Shilling to the Office or to any Bookseller or News-agent.

The Volumes and Parts will be charged the same as usual, viz., Volumes, 18*s.*; Parts, 3*s.* 6*d.*

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JULY 10, 1847.

THERE is a gleam of hope for the Spanish bondholders; if Spain can be moved by anything short of physical force, the "great moral lesson" she received in the speech of Lord Palmerston on Tuesday evening, may shame her into payment of her debts. It was the most unqualified condemnation a foreign government ever received from the lips of an English Minister; and most righteously is it earned. Spain may have the advantage desired by the poet, of "being herself as others see her,"—that is, as a mean paltry cheat, ignorant and rapacious, and wilfully blind to the most ordinary principles on which the transactions of the world are conducted. We hear much of the greatness of the Spaniards in former ages; doubtless they were powerful, as all nations are that have the means of paying larger armies than their neighbours; but it resolves itself pretty clearly into brute force; in the civil history of Spain, we could never find much to admire; a fierce pride, sullen obstinacy, and savage delight in blood, a court gloomily profligate, with everything overborne by a miserably stiff etiquette, and a church bigoted and persecuting to a degree incredible, if the facts were not patent; as a state, it exhibited every vice which nations should avoid. If we go to particular acts, we shall find folly enough to ruin, not one nation only, but a score. But there is a caprice that decides the characters of states as of men, and historians have painted Spain more as she seemed to be than as she was; real civilization and wealth she lost with the expulsion of the Moors, who worked, built, cultivated, produced. There is little in her history afterwards that brute force, and kingcraft, supported by the plunder of a new world, will not account for. And no nation has clung so obstinately to all its errors and vices as Spain; its people seem incapable of learning anything from without; they are the Chinese of Europe; their trade is all smuggling; for their policy, it is a continual pretence of exclusiveness, and as continual a breach of the principle which it is too weak to enforce. The only modern invention it has adopted is borrowing money without intending to pay it, for it seems it is well able to do so, if the Ministers were anything but—we may use the word after the charge fixed on them by Lord Palmerston—thieves and peculators. Even Russia, that as an Empire is scarce a century old, is more civilised than this nation, that all writers have eulogised, and no one can tell why; an analysis speedily brings out a list of vices in the national character that makes all improvement doubtful. Their splendid language has done for them more than their deeds; it is impossible to see that those who talk and write so gloriously can be shabby and faithless; yet as a Government, Spain was always so. In the war they never kept an engagement with their allies that they could possibly break, or put off, frequently causing us severe suffering, though their very existence depended on action. Their leading men always talked like heroes and acted like asses, or worse, save on some few occasions, when their fierceness was as remarkable as their previous indifference. We believe the people are better than their Government, that individuals the national character shows fine qualities; but as a State, as in all corporations, the vices keep each other in countenance, and acquire activity. Then they are cursed with a past history that is one of domination and conquest, and they preserve its traditions; they cannot adapt themselves to their altered position; nay they regard the modern spirit of the world, commerce, rather with contempt; in Spain business is still degrading; a man of birth will rather starve on a scanty pension, or subsist on a salary always in arrear, as clerk in a Government office, than seek a competency from Trade. In supporting the hordes of employés—this feeling keeps hanging miserably on the State—the money of the English bondholders is absorbed. Before Spain can redeem her faith she must learn frugality and honesty—the very virtues a needy man of great pretensions finds the hardest to practise. Spain is the nation that "has seen better days," and cannot lower itself by doing anything useful: it will accept the money of others, to be sure, when they are silly enough to part with it; but as to going to work to pay it back, the very idea is derogatory to a "proud people," who have activity for nothing but revolutions and bull-fights. If they have any real pride left in them, if there be a spark of national honour in their Government, the bitterly truthful speech of Lord Palmerston will draw forth some declaration, either of anger or repentance: the last, coupled with an instalment, would be preferred. We really believe that the can about the pride and honour of the Spaniards which pervades our literature has been the ruin of thousands, by creating a notion that this "proud people" is the same thing as honesty; whereas no two qualities can be more different. One "man of honour" was ever the most unsafe creditor: for a safe investment go to the dykes of Holland rather than "romantic Spain."

THE REVENUE.

The Revenue returns for the quarter ending July 5, exhibit a gratifying result. There is an increase of £41,457 on the quarter that terminated on Monday, as compared with the corresponding quarter of last year. In the twelvemonths, ending on the same day, there is an increase of £1,004,026.

The details of the improvement on the quarter are thus made out:—

INCREASE.
Excise	£186,341
Stamps	138,963
Taxes	68,574
Property Tax	27,355
Post-Office	34,000
Imprest and other Moneys	14,693
Repayments of Advances	26,337
	490,269

From this amount must be deducted:—

DECREASE.
Customs	4,272
Miscellaneous	10,540
China Money	440,000
	454,812
	£41,457

The Items of receipt do not include those on account of the Loan of £8,000,000, which amount in all to £6,470,572.

For the year, there is a positive increase in every Item of the ordinary revenue, and for the quarter, an increase in the Excise, Stamps, Taxes, Property-tax, and Post-office. For the quarter, there is a slight falling off in the Customs (£4272), and in the Miscellaneous. In the extraordinary revenue there is a decrease, for the year, of £1,611,845, of which £963,315 is in the item of China money alone. In imprest and other monies there is a decline of £7393 for the year, but an increase of 14,653 for the quarter. In re-payments of advances the decrease for the year is £641,597, with an increase for the quarter of £26,337.

THE WEATHER.

The weather, during the past week, has been generally very fine, with but little wind; the direction of the wind has been from the N and E. The following are some particulars of each day:—

Thursday, the sky was cloudy till 10*h.* A.M.; after this time some faint gleams of sunshine were visible; about noon, the sky was generally free from cloud; the wind was light, and from the N. The average temperature of the day was 59°. In the evening and night following were cloudy. Friday was a very dull and cold day; its average temperature was 60°. Saturday, the sky was cloudy till near noon; after this time it was cloudless, and the remainder of the day was fine; its average temperature was 64°. Sunday, early in the morning, there was a dense blue fog; during the day, the sky was generally cloudless. At about four P.M., the wind suddenly veered from the N. to the E. The average temperature of the day was 61°. Monday was a very fine and hot day; the sky was cloudless, with the exception of a few scattered cumuli. The average temperature of the day was 73°. Tuesday, the sky was principally cloudless, there existed here a few white rocky cumuli only scattered over the sky; the day was hot, the average temperature was 74°. Wednesday, early in the morning, thunder was heard, and rain fell to the depth of about one-tenth part of an inch. The sky was principally covered with thin cerrostratus; the day felt sultry, though it was cooler than the preceding day. Its average temperature was 70°. The average temperature of the week ending Wednesday, was 67°.

The extreme thermometrical readings each day were

Thursday	July 1, the highest during the week 73 deg., and the lowest was 55 deg.
Friday	July 2	65	55
Saturday	July 3	72	54
Sunday	July 4	73	51
Monday	July 5	82	64
Tuesday	July 6	83	65
Wednesday	July 7	78	63

Uffington, near Stamford, July 8, 1847. J. G.

N.B. The grain crops in this neighbourhood, and for some distance round, are in a most promising appearance. The potato crop appears to be in an equally satisfactory state in this neighbourhood; but, in the neighbourhood of Lincoln, it would seem that the potato disease has certainly appeared there, as several potatoes have been found with spots on them when taken up.

REPORTED MARRIAGE OF THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON.—The Morning Post has a vague announcement of the intended marriage of a Noble Duke with a rich and benevolent Lady. The report refers to the Duke of Wellington and Miss Burdett Coutts. We have reason to believe such a marriage is in contemplation.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

RETURN OF HER MAJESTY AND PRINCE ALBERT TO BUCKINGHAM PALACE.—The Queen and Prince Albert, attended by the Duchess of Sutherland and the Countess of Desart, returned to Buckingham Palace on Wednesday afternoon, in an open carriage-and-four, escorted by a party of Lancers, from Cambridge. Her Majesty and her Royal Consort were received at the Palace by the Honourable Misses Murray and Macdonald, and Sir Edward Bowater. The Queen held a Court, on Thursday afternoon, at Buckingham Palace. A Deputation of the Mates of Jersey had an audience of her Majesty to present an address. The Queen and Prince Albert honoured the performance at her Majesty's Theatre with their presence in the evening.

DEPARTURE OF THE KING AND QUEEN OF THE BELGIANS.—The King and Queen of the Belgians embarked at Woolwich on Monday for Ostend, on their return to Brussels.

PRINCE WALDEMAR OF PRUSSIA.—It is expected that this distinguished Prince will, previous to his departure from England, be present at an inspection of the troops in Hyde-park, as well as a display of artillery movements at Woolwich.

THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE.—The Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, on Tuesday, arrived from Worsley Hall, the seat of the Earl of Ellesmere, at Eccleston Hall, the residence of the Earl of Derby. On Wednesday, he visited Liverpool, and, after inspecting the various objects of interest in that town, was received by the Mayor and Council at the Town-hall, and afterwards embarked with his suite on board the Government mail tender, and inspected the line of docks.

DEPARTURE OF THE COUNTESS DE ST. AULAIRE.—The Count and Countess de St. Aulaire left Manchester House on Monday on their return to Paris.

VISCOUNT AND VISCOUNTESS PALMERSTON'S SUMMER FÊTE.—Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston gave a superb entertainment on Saturday last, in Carlton Gardens, to their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Gloucester and Prince George of Cambridge.

THE QUEEN'S SUMMER CRUISE.—The Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, and her tender, the Fairy, have been reported ready for the Royal service. We believe her Majesty and Prince Albert may embark on Tuesday next, and very shortly after will proceed on a cruise round the kingdom of Great Britain, visiting the Land's End, west coasts of England and Scotland, the Orkneys, the Shetlands, and the Hebrides, and eastward returning home.

COUNTRY NEWS.

THE ELECTIONS.

TOTNES.—The Whigs intend bringing forward Mr. Sampson Ricardo, a brother to Mr. Ricardo, M.P. The Hon. Edward Petre has given up the idea of contesting the seat with Mr. Harry Baldwin.

HULL.—Sir James Graham has withdrawn his pretensions to the representation of this borough.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—There will be a very severe contest in this borough between Mr. Wawn, the sitting member, and Mr. Whately, the new candidate on the Conservative interest.

EAST SURREY.—Mr. Locke King has issued an address, announcing his intention to offer himself for re-election. In a private letter, Mr. Villiers says that he shall certainly solicit the suffrages of the electors as soon as a dissolution takes place, in compliance with a pledge he gave last year.

WIGTONSHIRE.—Sir James Graham and Col. Blair are both named as opponents to the present member, but neither with much probability.

BURY ST. EDMUND'S.—Mr. Horace Twiss has presented himself to the electors of Bury St. Edmund's, whom he invites to reverse, at the coming general election, their decision against him at the last. And a noble Earl (Earl Jermyn), who now represents the borough, has been induced to "join fortunes" with the learned equity lawyer

BIRMINGHAM.—In addition to the three candidates for the representation of this borough, already soliciting the suffrages of the electors, a fourth gentleman has announced himself, in the person of Mr. Sergeant Allen.

NORWICH.—Mr. Feargus O'Connor, who was met on his arrival by a procession with music and banners, on Monday evening addressed the Norwich Land Society on the duty of opposing any compromise at the ensuing election. Mr. Edgar Taylor was expected to attend and announce himself as a candidate for the city, but he did not appear. Mr. Feargus O'Connor was excused by Mr. Feargus O'Connor on the ground that he had become a candidate for Halifax. Dr. Simpson, of Norwich, son of the late town clerk, was called upon to become a candidate; but, as he did not appear, Mr. O'Connor undertook to produce a candidate a week before the election, if they would reserve their votes until then.

WEST GLOUCESTERSHIRE.—Mr. Grantley Berkeley has issued an address to the electors, in which he announces that the Hon. Captain Berkeley, brother to Lord Fitzhardinge, and himself. Mr. Berkeley states that Lord Fitzhardinge, through a committee of "gentlemen," has made proposals to "buy him out" of the representation of the county, by dividing the county into two districts, Lord Fitzhardinge, however, denies the construction put upon the proposals referred to, and says—"As for the sale of the representation of the county of Gloucester, and the idea that either Mr. Grantley Berkeley and the person to sell, or I to purchase, is perfectly ridiculous. No such consideration influenced me in according to the terms proposed. I had family reasons for the concession I made."

MORE ATTEMPTS AT POISONING IN THE COUNTRY.

An attempt was made, last Monday, to poison the family of Mr. J. Mayes, at Stoke-upon-Ferry, Norfolk, some arsenic having been put into the kettle containing the water used for breakfast. The whole family were taken suddenly and alarmingly ill. Of these, perhaps, Mr. Mayes was the worst. Medical advice being close at hand, no time was lost in administering remedies. The surgeon took care to secure the kettle, in which the presence of arsenic was readily detected. The effects of this criminal attempt were not confined to its intended victims. Mrs. Tindale, of the Crown Inn, unconsciously took a small quantity of the water from the kettle, and called in, on Mrs. Mayes, and has ever since been in a suffering state. In all, eight persons have been more or less affected by the poison.

There has also been a poisoning case at the village of Barnetby-le-Wold, near Caistor, Lincolnshire. The accused is a woman named Milner. It appears that some time ago, an elderly female, a relative of Milner, died very suddenly; subsequently, a child named Jeckills, a daughter of the prisoner's sister-in-law, died under extraordinary circumstances; and last week, Mrs. Jeckills, the mother of the child, and the wife of a labourer in the village, also died. Suspicion being at length excited, the remains of Mrs. Jeckills were ordered, and the result proved that she had been poisoned by arsenic: the body of the child was then exhumed and examined, and poison was also found in her stomach. Circumstances led to the suspicion that Milner had mixed up the deadly drug in the deceased's food; and, after a minute investigation by a Coroner's jury, a verdict of "Wilful murder" was returned against Milner, who has been committed to Lincoln Castle.

STOCKTON AND PETERBOROUGH RAILWAY.—It is expected that the line from Melton to Oakham will be opened by the month of October next; but from Oakham to Stamford not until after that month, on account of the time required to complete the Melton tunnel.

IRELAND.

THE ELECTIONS.

CITY OF DUBLIN.—Some doubt is entertained whether Mr. John O'Connell will offer for Dublin.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY.—Mr. Henry Stopford Kyle, son of the Bishop of Cork, is a candidate for the University.

COUNTY OF WESTMEATH.—It is said that the honour of representing Westmeath County will be contended for by no less than thirteen candidates.

CORK COUNTY ELECTION.—Dr. Power has been declared duly elected for the county of Cork. The numbers at the close were—For Dr. Power, 834; for Mr. Leader, 545: majority, 289. Mr. Leader having sent in his resignation, the High Sheriff declared Dr. Power duly elected.

CLARE.—The County of Clare is likely to be contested. Sir Lucius O'Brien, Bart., brother of Mr. Smith O'Brien, has issued his address to the electors. The hon. Baronet, however, states that it is not his intention to involve himself in a contest, if the seats by which on a former occasion he lost his seat are still insisted on.

RETURN OF THE LORD LIEUTENANT.—On Saturday last the Earl and Countess of Clarendon and family returned to Dublin.

LORD MAYOR OF DUBLIN.—Mr. Jeremiah Dunn has been elected Lord Mayor of Dublin for the ensuing year. His opponent was Mr. John Reynolds.

ASSASSINATION ATTEMPTED AT ARDFINNAN.—Mr. Daniel, of Portlaina, and his lady were returning, about eight o'clock on Friday evening (last week) from Redwood, in Tipperary, they were stopped at an angle of the road near Moanfield by two men, undisguised, one armed with a double-barrelled gun, the other with a large cavalry pistol; both being within a yard or so of Mr. Hacket, who was sitting on the car driving. They levelled their murderous weapons at his breast; he instantly jumped off between the animals, and threw them in the face with his whip, which he supposes disturbed the aim. The two barrels were discharged at him almost instantaneously; the slugs from one struck him in the face, lacerating him in a most dreadful manner from his mouth to his neck, up the back of his ear; the other shot tore off and burned the breast and collar of his coat, without doing him further injury, whilst the shot from the pistol fortunately missed him altogether. Having kept a manly hold of the spirited animal that he drove, he was dragged along for some distance, till, having recovered his presence of mind, he jumped on the car again, and, notwithstanding his weakness from loss of blood, he drove home to Portumna, a distance of three miles, where he now lies dangerously ill. The motive for this crime cannot be guessed at, for Mr. and Mrs. Hacket are known to be very kind to the poor.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS. FRIDAY

ROYAL ASSENT.—The Royal Assent was given by commission to the Corn Importation Bill; the Militia Ballot Suspension Bill; the Cemeteries Clauses Bill; the Custody of Offenders Bill; and upwards of eighty private bills

The Tithe Commutation Bill, and the Fisheries, Piers, and Harbours (Ireland) Bill was read a second time.

THE EARL OF DERBY IN IRELAND.—The Earl of RODEN called attention to the report of the Relief Commissioners in Ireland, in which he said aspersions were made upon the character of his countrymen, and moved for some papers connected with the matter. The Marquis of LANSDOWNE objected to the motion, and entered into some explanations upon the subject.—A discussion arose, and, eventually, the Earl of RODEN withdrew his motion, and the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

METROPOLITAN IMPROVEMENTS.—Sir DENIS LE MARCHANT asked whether the improvement intended as a continuation street from New Coventry-street towards King-street, Covent-garden, was to be carried forward this session or postponed —Lord MORPETH said there was no intention of bringing in a bill on the subject during the present session.

MISUNDERSTANDING BETWEEN MR. HUME AND MR. SPOONER.—A discussion of rather a personal nature took place in reference to a remark made the other evening by Mr Hume of Mr. Spooner. Mr. OSBORNE said he trusted the House would require both hon. members to give an assurance that they would not commit a breach of the peace. (Loud and long continued cheering.)—Mr. ALDERMAN SIDNEY thought there was no blame to be attached to the hon. member for Montrose, and trusted the hon. member for Birmingham would be of the same opinion, and consent to the matter being forgot. After a few words from Mr HUME, the subject dropped.

COMMITTEE OF SUPPLY.—The House having resolved into Committee of Supply, several votes were agreed to.—The House was occupied with the Supply votes during the remainder of the night.

ALLEGED ATTEMPT TO DEFRAUD PRINCE LOUIS NAPOLEON.

At the Central Criminal Court, yesterday, an individual named Charles Pollard, residing in Essex-street, Strand, was indicted for stealing two bills of exchange of £1000 value each, the property of Prince Napoleon, on the 15th of June.

Mr. Clarkson appeared for the prosecution. He stated that the Prince, being in temporary want of £3,000, from delay in the transmission of his customary remittances from his estates in Italy, had proposed borrowing that sum for two months. The prisoner became, by some means, acquainted with this fact, and although unknown to the Prince, wrote to him requesting a private interview, which being agreed to, he then proposed to lend the Prince the money upon the receipt of two bills of exchange for the amount, payable two months after date, the money to be at five per cent. interest. The Prince then gave the two bills of exchange, the prisoner promising to call again the next day to pay the money, which, however, he never did. It was subsequently found that the prisoner had dissolved of the bills.

Prince Napoleon was examined in support of the charge, and after some further evidence had been given,

Mr. Humphreys, for the defence, contended that there was no case against the prisoner. If the indictment was for stealing the bills of exchange, the prisoner was clearly not guilty, for the paper and stamps were the prisoner's, and any right that the bill gave to the prisoner was actually intended to be conferred by the Prince, who intended to part with the bill, and never wished to see it again. There was no larceny in the case; the bill of exchange never belonged to the Prince. The moment it acquired any value beyond that of the mere paper and stamp, the Prince, by his own voluntary act, made it over to the prisoner, and any indictment on which the prisoner could be properly convicted must be for swindling, and not for larceny.

Mr. Clarkson and Mr. Bodkin then addressed the Court for the prosecution.

Mr. Baron Alderson then said, that, though he greatly regretted it, he must direct the Jury to acquit the prisoner.

A verdict of "Not guilty" was accordingly returned.

THE QUEEN'S VISIT TO SCOTLAND.—It is expected that the Royal visit to the North will be made about the 12th of the ensuing month. Her Majesty will be accompanied by Earl Grey and other noblemen. Lord John Russell, it is feared, will be detained in town by his electioneering engagements.

DEATH OF LORD REAY.—The Right Hon. Lord Reay died at Goldings, Hertfordshire, after a short illness, on Wednesday last. He was a Scotch Representative Peer.

DEATH OF CARDINAL ACTON.—Cardinal Acton died on the 27th ult., in the Jesuits' Convent, at Naples. He was born at Naples on the 6th of March, 1803.

CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATES FOR THE CITY OF LONDON.—A meeting of Conservative electors of London took place on Thursday, at the London Tavern; Mr. Thomas Baring, M.P., in the chair. The meeting was called "for the purpose of adopting measures for securing the return of three Conservative candidates;" but only three have yet been nominated. The meeting was addressed by Mr. Wilson, Mr. Holmes, Mr. F. Hodgson, M.P., Mr. Russell Ellice, Mr. J. Horsley Palmer, Mr. Colesworth, and other gentlemen; and resolutions were adopted expressive of confidence in Mr. Masterman, Mr. Alderman Johnson, and Mr. R. C. L. Bevan, the three present candidates on the Conservative interest; and, on the motion of Mr. Horsley, Mr. Baring was invited to stand as a fourth candidate, but he at once declined, on account of his engagements to his present constituents Lord Ashley's name was mentioned as a candidate; but after some discussion, a committee was formed for the purpose of deciding upon some person who will consent to enter upon the forthcoming struggle.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE EASTERN COUNTIES RAILWAY.—On Thursday, as the early train from Peterborough to London was coming up, the engine jumped off the line at a place near Whittlesea, called the Hundred Foot-bridge. The engine driver got off the steam, and having loosed his engine, became unharmed, that he jumped off from it. The motion of the engine being rapid at the time, the consequence was, that, on alighting, he missed his footing, and was hurled to a very considerable distance with great violence. The occurrence having been observed by the guards, the breaks were at once applied, and the train fortunately brought to a stand before any injury was done. Some of the guards, instantly ran to the assistance of the engine-driver, whom they found quite insensible, and bleeding. He shortly afterwards expired. Beyond the alarm, no further harm occurred, and, the engine having been got upon the line again, the train proceeded, and reached London in safety.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE

Our letters from Paris announce that the Minister of Finance has presented a bill to the Chamber of Deputies, authorising the Government to contract a loan of 30,000,000 francs.

NATIONAL SPORTS

THE July Meeting at Newmarket has not been by any means a brilliant affair of late years: in the present season, it was absolutely eclipsed by the rival July Meeting at Cambridge. In racing, just now, there is no middle course either it is very good or very bad. It is not the fashion to adopt the Turf as a means of mere pleasure; it is manum ton for any one to do so: it would be the utter annihilation of a "gent" to be detected at Epsom or Ascot without his "book." The betting at Newmarket is never an exhilarating one; it very rarely calls any considerable amount of "sweeps" into activity; the Summer Meeting disposed of in the current week was altogether divested of speculation, hence it was also barren of eclat. Very different was it, how-ever, nearer home.

On Wednesday last was enacted the most brilliant and exciting passage of amateur aquatics ever celebrated on the river Thames, or probably on any other water, salt or fresh On that occasion a purse of one hundred sovereigns, given by the Royal Thames Yacht Club, and open to vessels belonging to any Royal Yacht Club, was sailed for by as gallant a fleet of clippers as ever hailed within the bills of the old father of streams. It was a handicap match—that is to say a penalty of half a minute attached to every ton of measurement above that of the lowest wager craft. The course from Erith bay round the Nore Light, and back again—the starting point being also the goal.

For this golden guerdon, nineteen yachts—first-rasers in their classes—were entered originally, and the issue of tickets promised a company to witness this trial of worth and skill beyond all former precedent. For this cause, the Meteor steamer, engaged, in the first instance, to convey the members and their friends, was found to be quite inadequate to so goodly a freight, and a second steamer was just into commission. Now, the hour for starting from London Bridge, as announced in the bills of the programme, was half-past ten, but Lord Alfred Paget, the commodore, in fear lest the tide might not suit the return, if that time were strictly abided by, got under way at ten, whereas the other vessel the Gem—did not get off till hard upon eleven, whence it came to pass that her crew and company were at their wits' end, in despair of never catching the match at all—a calamity happily dispersed by their overtaking it in the "Lower Hope."

This was mishap the first another far more serious, and which might have put an end to the Regatta without its ever commencing, was in this wise. The thunder-storm of the previous night fell fearfully upon the town of Greenwich, where it demolished the stores of the Royal Thames Yacht Club; and, but for an extra supply of anchors and cables having been forwarded to Erith, in anticipation of the greater number of yachts that would take up their stations as starters, there would have been no moorings for those that did come to the post. But, all being well that ends well, behold the fleet—their distinguishing flags "flouting the wind"—awaiting the signal gun; which booms heavily, and "off she goes" is the device of each, as fastly as she may. The following—as numbered in the original entry started.

	Yachts	Tons.	Port.	Owners
5.	Channels ..	8 ..	Southton ..	Smyth Pigott, Esq.
7	Eclipse ..	80 ..	Weymouth ..	T. P. Wickham, Esq.
8	Princess Olga	35 ..	Cowes ..	T. H. Rutherford, Esq.
12	Secret ..	30 ..	Poole ..	J. W. Smith, Esq.
11	Jne ..	25 ..	Ditto ..	H. Gibbon, Esq.
13	Blanche ..	31 ..	Cowes ..	Lord C. Paget.
14	Snake ..	30 ..	Poole ..	T. and J. M. Washill, Esqrs.
16	Lily of Devon	31 ..	Plymouth ..	W. F. Moore, Esq.
17	Blue Belle ..	81 ..	London ..	Twisden Hodges, Esq.
18	Little Gambler	19 ..	Portsmouth ..	A. Fournieau, Esq.
10	Antagonist ..	36 ..	London ..	G. F. Naylor, Esq.

The wind—a pretty little white-sail breeze—enabled them to mark down, as regarded the majority, on fair terms; but long before she was abreast of Gravesend the Eclipse bar first appearance in public was half-a-mile ahead of everything; the Secret second, as far before the third. Without any fact worth entering in our log, in this way the Nore light was rounded; the third place for turn being occupied by the Princess Olga and the Jne—running a dead heat: but here, by superior seamanship, the Jne weathered the Princess, and presently took the shine out of her, as well as the wind. The turning over the tide home was a most animating and interesting sight. The hill displayed by the whole fleet was admirable, that is to say by the side which now emerged it, for the Dances were so early in the contest, and the Channels was non est. We are not, however, going to work the details, our duty of extending beyond a round of the main incidents At six minutes past six, then, sat, the Eclipse passed the winning post, with any odd on her, but, at 6d. 18m. 7s., the Secret followed her, thus winning the match by 25s., her allowances for tonnage being 12m. 0s. A race of the like distance, afloat or ashore, seldom, if ever, has been accustomed to such an achievement of every day, and this being of the match for the R. T. Y. C. Hundred Sovereigns' Purse will probably rule A 1 in the records of yachting as long as that sport endures.

A pleasure now succeeded it, for the Dances gave no

THE INSTALLATION AT CAMBRIDGE.

THE ARRIVAL OF THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON.

PRINCE WALDEMAR AND SUITE.

SIR R. PEEL, THE BISHOP OF OXFORD, AND THE DUKE OF SAXE WEIMAR.

(Continued from page 21.)

TRINITY COLLEGE.

This noble edifice, as at the last Royal Visit, was appointed for her Majesty's residence; and here, accordingly, the preparations for the Royal reception were very complete, and the anxiety of the official personages, as it were, concentrated. The scene in the Quadrangle was strikingly picturesque; for here were assembled the Professors, Doctors, Masters of Arts, and a few favoured visitors. The Royal residence is on the west side of the Square, adjoining the upper end of the noble Hall. "On the broad and newly-gravelled walks, and green parterres (of the Quadrangle) there met thousands of happy faces, rejoicing to recognise old competitors after a long interval of time and diversified pursuit. All were clad in the Academic costume appropriate to the different degrees they had attained; the bright scarlet robe of the one class contrasting with the black gowns and white hoods of another not more strongly than the age and aspect of their respective owners."

At twenty-five minutes to one o'clock, the Duke of Wellington arrived at Trinity, and was received with such a shout of affectionate greeting that many thought her Majesty herself had come; and it was not a little amusing to see hundreds of the University men, of all degrees and of all ages, running—despite the encumbrance of their robes—from one side of Trinity Quadrangle to the other, to assist in the welcome.

From Trinity Hall, the long tables which usually occupy the floor, had been entirely removed; and, at the upper end was a slightly raised and superbly carpeted platform, on which was placed a chair of state, richly carved and gilt, covered with scarlet satin damask, and embroidered in gold.

At the lower end of the Hall was an orchestra, or gallery, in which were accommodated the wives and daughters of the masters and professors; for whom a summer refection of ices, fruits, &c., was served before the Queen's arrival.

ARRIVAL AT TRINITY.

At twenty minutes to two o'clock, the Royal procession, headed by the municipal authorities, reached Trinity-gate. As Queen's carriage passed through, the Royal Standard was hoisted on the flag-staff of the turreted entrance, and the procession, accompanied by the University officers, and a guard of honour, passed on, by the pièces d'eaux, along the centre walk, and round up to the Lodge, amidst the enthusiastic plaudits of the multitude, the band playing the National Anthem. On reaching the Lodge, the Vice-Chancellor and the College authorities presented their insignia of office, which her Majesty was graciously pleased to order them to resume. The Queen then entered the Lodge with Prince Albert.

With the exception of the gallery, Trinity Hall had been, up this moment, empty; but, shortly after two o'clock, Dr. Whewell, (the Master of Trinity), entered, escorting Lady Hardwicke, Mrs. Whewell, Miss Marshall, and Madame Bunsen, who took their seats on the north side of the dais, whereon her Majesty's throne was placed. The main entrances remained closed, until quarter past two, when her Majesty entered the Hall through a side door, at the upper end, communicating with the Lodge. The Queen was ushered in by Colonel Phipps and the Earl of Fortescue, and attended by the Duchess of Sutherland and the Countess of Desart. Prince Waldemar of Prussia also accompanied her Majesty; and in the Royal party were Sir George Grey, the Secretary of State for the Home Department, the Duke of Saxe Weimar, &c.

The Duke of Wellington, the Bishops of London and Oxford, and other distinguished visitors, were in their places according to their academical rank. On her entrée, the Queen immediately advanced and saluted the Countess of Hardwicke, who presented her Majesty with a bouquet of the choicest flowers. The Queen wore a white lace dress over silk, trimmed with straw coloured satin, and a white chip bonnet with marabout feather.

THE ADDRESS IN TRINITY HALL.

The doors at the lower end of the Hall were now thrown open, and his Royal Highness the Chancellor (habited in his gorgeous satin robes, ponderous with bullion tassels and fringe, and its train borne by attendants), accompanied by the Duke of Wellington, the Bishop of Oxford, the Vice-Chancellor, the Master of Trinity, and the other Masters of Colleges, entered, followed by the whole body of the Doctors, Professors, and Members of the University.

The Chancellor having approached the dais, the Queen rose, and advanced a step or two towards his Royal Highness who now proceeded to read the following

ADDRESS OF THE UNIVERSITY TO THE QUEEN.

"May it please your Majesty,

"We, your Majesty's most loyal and devoted subjects, the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, avail ourselves of your Majesty's gracious permission at this time to renew our assurances of our attachment to your Majesty's person and Government.

"The recollection of your Majesty's former visit is preserved by us with feelings of pride and satisfaction, and we now hail with fervent joy your Majesty's presence amongst us for a second time, and desire to express—though in the fullest manner no words can convey it—our heartfelt gratitude for this gracious mark of Royal favour. We trust that we may be allowed to consider the honour which we enjoy as a proof of your Majesty's undiminished favour, which will be cherished as an incentive to renewed exertion, and will encourage the members of our body, in their several stations, to deserve your Majesty's approbation by a zealous and diligent discharge of their important duties

"The time which has elapsed since the period of your Majesty's former visit has been marked by an important change in the highest office of our body. We have had to deplore the loss of our late exemplary Chancellor, who, to his great regret, was prevented by the infirm state of his health, from assuming his place among us, and expressing in person his acknowledgment of your Majesty's gracious favour

"We are encouraged by your Majesty's presence in the University at this time, to entertain a confident hope that the act of the University, in filling this vacant office, has been regarded by your Majesty with approbation; and we trust that the same Royal protection and favour will be continued to us, which we have been wont to enjoy from the Sovereigns of this kingdom.

"The occasion seems to require that we should take the opportunity of assuring your Majesty that we are not unmindful of those purposes which the University was instituted to accomplish. We trust there have not been wanting hitherto zeal for the cause of literature and of science, and efforts to promote the still more elevated and holy object which our founders had in view in the establishment of religion and virtue.

"We would venture to appeal to recent discoveries in astronomical and other kindred sciences—to the many persons eminent in literature and sciences, and in the public offices of life—to the statesmen, judges, and philosophers of our country, who have received their early education and been taught to discipline their minds in the seat of learning. We trust we may call attention, also, to the clergy in general, who have gone from us and contributed so much to the elevation of the character of our country, and who, by their piety, their truth of doctrine, and their innocence of life, have done so much to prove themselves the blessing and glory of the land.

"While we thus reflect with satisfaction upon the good fruit which has resulted from the past labours of the University, our attention is awakened to the task which lies before us. We see how important is the place which the University occupies in respect to the sound happiness of the world, and how dignified are the duties, and how great the responsibilities, of those who have to direct its studies and administer its affairs

"We desire to assure your Majesty that these topics of reflection are ever before our minds, and that it is our care to address ourselves to the course of duty in a deep and earnest spirit, undaunted by difficulty but warmed by the consideration of it to that patience and temper which we hope, by God's blessing, will bring success.

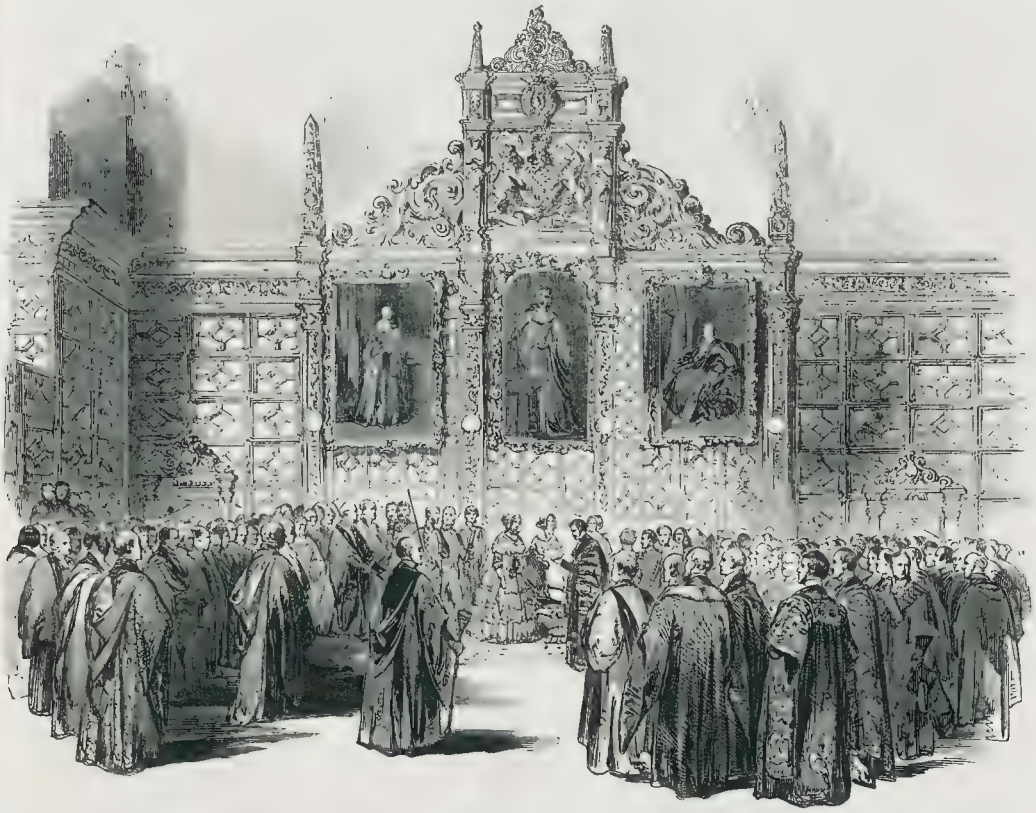
"It is our earnest desire and prayer that your Majesty may long live to see the fruit of our efforts for our country's welfare.

"May Almighty God protect and strengthen you, prosper you with all happiness, and pour down upon you the continual dew of his blessing."

His Royal Highness the Chancellor, having read the above Address, making an obeisance, presented it to her Majesty, who, still remaining standing, read

THE PRINCE CHANCELLOR ACCOMPANIED BY THE MEMBERS OF THE UNIVERSITY ENTERING THE HALL OF TRINITY COLLEGE.

THE INSTALLATION AT CAMBRIDGE.



THE PRINCE CHANCELLOR READING THE ADDRESS TO HER MAJESTY IN THE HALL OF TRINITY COLLEGE.

the following most gracious answer which was handed to her Majesty by Sir George Grey:—

"I have received with the highest satisfaction your loyal and affectionate Address. "It affords me great pleasure to visit you on this occasion, and to assure you of my entire approbation of the act of the University in their selection Chancellor.

VIEW FROM THE NEW BUILDINGS OF ST. JOHN'S ON THE DAY OF THE JOINT FETE.

"I have always felt it to be one of the first duties of a British Sovereign to extend favour and protection to institutions intended for the advancement of religion and learning.

"I am peculiarly impressed with a sense of that duty in a place which has produced so many persons eminently distinguished in science, literature, and religion, and in which I am surrounded with noble monuments of the munificence of Princes who have preceded me on the throne of this kingdom.

"None of those Princes can have more earnestly desired to promote the welfare of your University than myself; and I shall ever feel the warmest interest in its continued and increasing prosperity."

His Royal Highness the Chancellor, who remained standing below the dais, was then presented to her Majesty by Vice Chancellor and the Heads of Colleges, who had the honour of kissing hands.

Almost immediately, a backward movement took place among the crowd in the body of the Hall, in which Prince Albert and the other authorities of the University speedily participated, at which her Majesty could not repress a smile.

The Hall being now cleared, her Majesty withdrew to Trinity Lodge, to partake of luncheon, and was there joined by the Prince Chancellor.

CONVOCATION IN THE SENATE HOUSE.

From soon after ten o'clock in the morning until nearly half past three o'clock, the Senate House had been filled with some 3000 spectators, to witness the Convocation appointed to be holden there. The whole assembly had, from the great variety of the costumes, a very rich effect: the magnificent dresses of the Officers of the Household, the crimson gowns of the Doctors, the brilliant steam blaze of the ladies in their light and elegant summer attire, mingled harmoniously with the dark gowns of the Masters of Arts.

The fittings for the reception of her Majesty were in superb taste. At the west end was a raised dais, covered with a splendid Victoria carpet; and on it were set two state chairs and ottomans, covered with crimson velvet and gold. Above was an elliptical canopy of crimson cloth, trimmed with gold cord and lace, and surmounted with a regal crown.

Shortly before half-past three o'clock, Prince Albert entered, in his Chancellor's robes, and was hailed with enthusiastic cheers

His Royal Highness made his way with some difficulty through the throng in the body of the room, and ascending the platform, bowed to the assembly. The Prince looked remarkably well in his robes. After about a quarter of an hour had been consumed in going through some formalities incident to the occasion, a flourish of trumpets, and loud cries of "the Queen," announced the approach of her Majesty; when the Prince proceeded through the Hall to meet her. The whole assembly were now standing. The ladies waved their handkerchiefs and the gentlemen their caps and hats, all vieing with each other in enthusiastic loyalty and joy. Her Majesty was evidently deeply gratified, and, after ascending the platform, turned round, and made three separate obeisances; she then seated herself on her Throne. Prince Albert occupied a chair somewhat to the left

Her Majesty having taken her seat, Mr. Crick, the public orator of the University, delivered a Latin oration, on introducing to the Chancellor the foreign Princes and others who were to receive honorary degrees. This oration occupied nearly an hour in the delivery, and so exhausted the patience of the assembly, that, long before it was brought to a conclusion, the most unequivocal symptoms of fatigue were manifested

At the close of the oration, the Prince rose, and gracefully bowed, in acknowledgment of the compliments bestowed upon him. Some honorary degrees were then conferred by his Royal Highness; and the Convocation was dissolved. The Prince-Chancellor then conducted her Majesty down the centre of the Senate House to the Royal carriage, which proceeded back to Trinity College, amidst the same loyal demonstrations as before.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR'S BANQUET.

About six o'clock, the guests invited to the Banquet at Catherine Hall, began to arrive; and were soon assembled in Doctors' scarlet gowns on the lawn in front of the Master's Lodge. At half-past six o'clock, the Queen, the Prince-Chancellor, and suite, entered the gates of the College; when the band of the Sappers and Miners played the national anthem.

Having retired for a few moments to the Master's Lodge, her Majesty and the Prince-Chancellor walked across the court, which was richly carpeted for the occasion, accompanied by the Duchess of Sutherland, and Sir R. Peel, the Bishop of Oxford, the Vice-Chancellor, the Proctors, and the other guests, who had ranged themselves on the side of the lawn, to the Hall, where the dinner was laid out in the most tasteful and elegant style.

The display of silver and silver-gilt plate on the table and sideboards was most magnificent. It was laid out under the immediate direction of Mr. T. Reed, of Market-hill, Cambridge.

The Vice-Chancellor took his seat at the centre of the cross table; on his right sat her Majesty, and on the left his Royal Highness the Prince-Chancellor.

From the cross table two others stretched at right angles the entire length of the Hall, at which the other guests were seated

The following is a list of the principal guests:—The Hereditary Grand Duke of Saxe Weimar, Prince Waldemar of Prussia, Prince Peter of Oldenburg, the Duke of Wellington, Earl Fortescue, Mr. Bancroft, the Duchess of Sutherland, Mrs. Philpott, Baron Von de Weyer, Earl of Aberdeen, Duke of Norfolk, Chevalier Bunsen, Countess Desart, Lord Hardwicke, the Marquis of Exeter, Bishop of Durham, the Masters of Jesus, Pembroke, Peterhouse, the Provost of King's, Master of Christ's, Chaplain to the Prince Chancellor, Colonel Buckley, Master of Sidney Sussex, Colonel Grey, the Master of Emmanuel, Prebendary of Norwich, Mr. Goulburn and Mr. Law (members for the University), the Master of Magdalen, the Dean of Windsor, the Earl of Morton, the Marquis Camden, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Marquis Spinola (father-in-law to the Vice-Chancellor), &c

The Vice-Chancellor said grace

Appended is the bill of fare, copies of which, printed in silver on blue satin, were placed before her Majesty and Prince Albert:

Sauté de Saumon.
Charlotte Russe à l'Ananas Tambale de Volaille	Salad Pate de Ris de Veau Gelée de Fruces
Basket of Pastry Mayonnaise.	Les petits Pigeons en Aspic.
Turtle Chantilly Basket.
Gelée Macédoine Salad Pate de Ris de Veau	Salade d'Ecrevisses Charlotte Russe à la Vanille
Turtle Les Filets de Soles à l'Hollandaise
Bisque Rocheva	Turkey Poults broiled. Quail.
Ramekins de Venison Necks of Venison broiled.
Friandeaux de Veau à la Sauce Tomate

The fish was supplied by Messrs. Grove, Charing-cross. The venison was a present from the Earl of Hardwicke

Messrs. Hudson, of Trinity, were the chefs de cuisine; and Mr. Edlin, of the Bull Inn, supplied the wine.

The following pieces of music were played by the band on the lawn during the dinner:

1 March "Prince Albert's"
2 Cavatina "Fresca, Fresca, Inventami" .. .. .. Verdi
3 Waltz "Bouquet Royal" .. .. Jullien
4 Quadrille "Les Fêtes de la Régence" .. .. .. Musard
5 Air, Lay of Pastel .. .. Pastel
6 Polka "Scudella" .. .. Pastel
7 March—"Mary Anne" .. .. Coote
8 Waltz "Sonnets that Calmness" .. .. Wallace
9 Polka "Bridal Polka" .. .. C. D. Albert
10 Galopade "Friend" .. .. Jullien

CONCERT IN THE SENATE HOUSE.

After the grand banquet at Catherine Hall, there was a Concert at the Senate-House, at which her Majesty, Prince Albert, and most of the principal guests of the University attended. On her Majesty's entrance, the National Anthem was sung: the whole company rising

The Senate House presented a most splendid spectacle on the occasion. There was a brilliant display of beauty. The members of the University attended in their University robes. Prince Albert wore his scarlet robes as Doctor, and on the dais around the Royal seats were a crowd of Duchesses, Princes, and other distinguished persons, in similar robes, with Peeresses and other ladies of distinction in rich and elegant attire. Her Majesty wore a pink dress, with a splendid wreath of diamonds. Her Majesty and the Prince sat (the Prince on her left hand) upon chairs of state, under a splendid canopy. The Senate House was crowded in every part, and there could not have been less than 2000 persons present.

The orchestra included most of the principal performers—Blagrove, Seymour, Willy, Griesbach, Cramer, Lindley, Richardson, Nicholls, Cooke, Williams, Benjamin, Platt, Harper, Smithers, &c. &c., T. Cooke being leader of the band. The vocalists were Mdlle. Alberti, Mrs Birch, Miss Dolby, Signors Lablache and Salvi, and Messrs. Lockey and Phillips.

The programme comprised:

PART I.

"The National Anthem," a Symphony (MS.), introduction and first allegro, T. Attwood Walmisley.

Trio Cherubman—Miss Birch, Miss Dolby, and Mr. Lockey, "Ti prego, O padre eterno! a Semele" from "Anima mia" .. .. Handel

Recitative and Air "Il Turco in Italia," Ismaël, Signor Lablache and Mr Phillips.

Scena Chorus "—Ah! Von Weber, Miss Birch

Air Ismaël's Song, Signor Salvi

Recitative Ismaël and Selima, Mdlle. Alberti, and Signor Lablache

Madrigal Attwood Walmisley. (The words from a Masque by Ben Jonson)

Overture "Fidelio," Beethoven

PART II

Concerto, Violin—Herr Joachim, F. Hendrendon, Bartholdy.

Aria—"Maria di Rohan," Donizetti. Signor Salvi

Aria—"La Nonne di Picardi," Mozart, Signor Lablache

Recitative Miss Dolby

Trio Lockey, Lablache, and Salvi

Recitative and Chorus—"Allegro," Handel, Mr. Phillips.

Overture M. Von Weber.

Shortly after the commencement of the concert, the Marquis of Lansdowne entered the Senate House and took his seat at the door in order not to disturb the proceedings; which her Majesty observing, sent one of the Doctors on her right, and commanded his appearance on the platform, where the noble Marquis took his seat on the left of the Prince-Chancellor

The Queen retired shortly after ten o'clock, walking down the Hall amidst the enthusiastic cheering of the audience.

Many of those who were at the concert left early in order to proceed to Parker's Piece—a common outside the town at which amusement for the million was liberally provided in the shape of fireworks

At all the colleges, of course, hospitality and festivity prevailed. At Trinity, a grand banquet was given in the evening in the Hall, at which, after the healths of her Majesty and the Prince were given, Professor Sedgwick, in a very eloquent speech, gave the health of Sir Harry Smith, who was present. The gallant hero returned thanks in his usual brief and happy manner. He concluded by proposing the Duke of Wellington's health, which was received with

[illegible]

We should not omit to state that one of the most interesting incidents of the day was the meeting of Prince Waldemar and Sir Harry Smith. The Prince observing the gallant soldier, in the great quadrangle of Trinity, as his Royal Highness was proceeding with her Majesty's carriage to the Senate House, jumped out of the carriage, and embraced him most enthusiastically, to the great delight of the surrounding thousands, who loudly cheered the hearty display of affection on the part of the young Prince

TUESDAY.

The glorious weather continued, and the town presented the same gay and animated aspect as yesterday. The day's proceedings in the Senate House were the grand feature of the Installation, as that there was no falling off in the attraction. The Royal Party breakfasted at Trinity Lodge. At ten, the Prince Chancellor proceeded to the Senate House, to be installed in his new dignity.

COMMENCEMENT DAY.—THE SENATE HOUSE.

So early as six o'clock, the doors were besieged by fair aspirants for seats; and long before nine, every doorway was blocked up with a phalanx of beauty and fashion. When we state that upwards of 600 tickets of admission had been issued by the Registrary, more than that number were possibly contained, the anxiety displayed to obtain seats cannot be wondered at. The moment the doors opened the rush was terrific, and but a few minutes elapsed ere the house was filled in every corner.

At nine o'clock, the platform on the right and left of the Throne was filled; the Earl of Hardwicke; the Rebels of the University; the Vice-Chancellor; the Heads of Colleges; the Prince Waldemar of Prussia, Prince Lowenstein, the Duke of Saxe Weimar, Chevalier Bunsen and lady, the Belgian Ambassador and lady, the Duke of Buccleuch, the Marquis and Marchioness of Northampton, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Earl of Devon, Lord Cranbrook, Lord Montague, the Bishop of London, the Bishop of Oxford, the Bishop of St. David's, the Bishop of Norwich, the Bishop of Melbourne, Sir Robert and Lady Peel, the Vice-Chancellor of England, Mr. W. J. Peel, Mr. Cubitt, and the Hon. Mr. Law, occupying prominent positions. Up till nearly ten o'clock, the Undergraduates in the gallery congratulated themselves on having taken possession of the most convenient and commanding seats in the Senate House

The Duke of Wellington arrived about a quarter before ten o'clock, and was received outside by the band with "See the Conquering Hero comes," and inside the walls of the Senate House with the same tumultuous applause

At five minutes to ten, a flourish of trumpets announced the arrival of the Prince-Chancellor, who, accompanied by his suite, and preceded by the Bedels, made his way up the centre of the Senate House, amidst vociferous cheering, and waving of handkerchiefs. After acknowledging the salutations of the audience with his usual courtesy, the suite of the gentleman, his Royal Highness took his seat in the chair of state on the left of the Throne

The Prince wore his robes as Chancellor, with his collar and badge, and remained with cap on head, while the different Princes recited their essays before him

The Exercises for the Chancellor's Medal, Sir W. Browne's Medal, and the Porson Prize were recovered, and the prizes delivered to the Princess by his Royal Highness, who said a kind word to each. Before this part of the business of Commencement Day had been completed, at eight minutes past ten, the Queen arrived, attended by the Ladies of her suite, the Foreign Princes, and other visitors. Her Majesty was received by the Chancellor in the same form as yesterday. The Queen wore a lace dress over pink, with lace flounces; a transparent lace bonnet, with flowers, and a lace visite lined with French white silk; a pearl necklace and gold bracelets.

At a quarter past eleven, commenced the performances of the following written by Mr. William Wordsworth (Poet Laureate), and set to music by Thomas Attwood Walmisley, M.A., Professor of Music, Cambridge.

INSTALLATION ODE,

INTRODUCTION AND CHORUS.

For thrice of power that Heaven disowns,
For tempest, sorrow, and for tears,
Too long instituted by the Spoiler's shock,
Indignant Europe
Hears [illegible] at last
To reap the whirlwind on a Lybian rock.

RECIT.

Where [illegible]
Where [illegible] cause,
Is [illegible]
Upraises [illegible] Earth and Heaven?

AIR.

The servile mind is low;
But what the Spiritual gives and spares
The despot's baneful brow?

CHORUS.

War is strong, glory, fame,
Wages as it rescues holy cause;
Freedom, such as man may claim
Under God's favour love;
Such is Albion's fame and glory
Let unarmed Knowledge prove.

RECIT.—(Accompanied)—Contralto.

But, lo! what sudden cloud has darkened all
The land as with a funeral pall?
The lives of England suffers blight,
The flower has drooped, the leaf is pallid,
Fierce and hot tempests fall—
A nation's hopes lie scathed in Cadmont's desolate hall.

AIR—Soprano.

Time a checkered mantle wears;
Earth awakes from wintry sleep;
Again the tree a blossom bears,
Cease, Britannia, cease to weep!
Hark! to the peaceful Bright May-morn!
They tell that your future Queen is born!

SOPRANO SOLO AND CHORUS.

A beautiful Angel flattered
Above the babe, unseen,
One word and only one heard—
It named the future Queen.
"Victoria be your name!"
So righteous triumphs are the boon
Wherein Britannia must her peacock fame.

QUARTET.

Time, in his mantle's amplest fold,
Upfurled on his arrow the child;
And, while the fearless infant smiled,
Her happy flourished—
"Infancy, by wisdom mild,
To mock be Herald of future beauty;
Youth, by plans [illegible]
From the [illegible]
Womanhood in pure renown,
Seated on her lofty throne,
Leaves of myrtle in her crown,
Fresh with tints of their own.
Love, the treasure of her dowry blessing
More than all the world besides,
Take this to thy heart, dearest child,
Oh to Royal hearts dowry.

The vocalists were Miss Birch, Miss Dolby, Mr. Phillips, and Mr. Lockey. The instrumental performers were the same as on the previous night's concert.

Professor Walmisley, who wore his splendid robes as Professor of Music, conducted.

The Times report states that many portions of the Ode were very loudly cheered. "In one of the solos a favourite air of the Prince Chancellor was introduced, and in the portion referring to Luther's life there was a marked resemblance in the accompaniments to his celebrated hymn. The first tenor solo, by Lockey, the contralto recitative, by Miss Dolby, 'But lo! what sudden cloud,' the soprano solo, by Miss Birch, the bass air, 'Albert, in thy race we cherish,' by Phillips, and all the choruses, were loudly and universal applause. The grand chorus, too, drew down thunders of applause. Amidst the general plaudits the National Anthem was called for, and sung with heart-stirring enthusiasm, the Prince-Chancellor joining in the chorus."

Her Majesty and the Prince immediately afterwards left the Senate House amidst universal acclamations. The others were afterwards given for the Queen, the Prince Chancellor, the Prince of Wales, the Lord Steward, the Duke of Wellington, the Bishops, Professor Walmisley, &c.

On leaving the Senate House, her Majesty retired to her residence, Trinity Lodge. Shortly after, the Prince-Chancellor paid a visit to St. John's College, the distinguished senior and rival of his own adopted College. On entering that Hall, his Royal Highness was received by the fellows and other members with loud cheering. The Cambridge Advertiser remarks:—"His Royal Highness was evidently highly gratified by this proof of the cordiality of his reception, as testified even by that portion of the University which has the most formidable support to the claims of Lord Powis." The Prince-Chancellor also paid official visits to King's, Christ's, and Magdalen College.

FLOWER SHOW AT DOWNING

This Exhibition, in the beautiful grounds of Downing College, was a delightful relief to the in-door ceremonies.

About nine spacious tents were erected in different parts of the grounds, within which the flowers and plants were arranged with much taste. The fine air, entertainment of the company; seats were placed beneath the trees for those who were disposed to seek temporary repose or shelter from the scorching rays of the sun; and many who could not obtain seats stretched themselves on the grass, forming, as they were seen from various points, Watteau-like groups. A portion of the grounds extending from the Lodge shrubbery to the Royal tent had been railed off for the exclusive accommodation of her Majesty and suite. The rest of the grounds were at the disposal of the visitors. Five thousand tickets had been distributed. The whole were eagerly bought up, and vast numbers were disappointed. The spacious and picturesque enclosure, resembling the pleasure grounds of a baronial mansion, was crowded throughout the Fête. Her Majesty and the Prince were received at the Lodge by the Master of Downing, and entered the grounds by the southern facade. The Queen and the Prince then proceeded to the Royal tent, which was most gorgeously decorated with gold and crimson. After partaking of some refreshment, the Royal visitors, attended by H.C. Ashton, Secretary to the Horticultural Society, visited each tent, in which flowers were displayed. The tents were, at this time, very great; the Duke of Wellington got into the middle of the crowd before he was recognised, and was much inconvenienced. After remaining in the grounds about three quarters of an hour, and accepting a beautiful bouquet from Mrs. Ashton, her Majesty, Prince Albert, and the whole of their suite, withdrew at the house of the Master of Downing College, where the Queen was pleased to express her gratification at what she had seen. The Royal party then left for the Fitzwilliam Museum, to which they performed a circuit by Downing Terrace and Trumpington street. The Royal visitors entered the Museum, and remained about half an hour inspecting the interior of that elegant edifice. They returned to Trinity Lodge a little after five o'clock. At five o'clock, Mr. Green ascended, from Parker's Piece, in his "new Installation Balloon," which voyaged in the direction of Newmarket.

THE BANQUET AT TRINITY.

The invited guests began to arrive shortly after five o'clock. When all had assembled, the appearance of the Hall was truly magnificent.

The Royal table at the west end of the Hall was placed the Royal table, at which sat the Vice-Chancellor, the Duke of Wellington, the Countess of Hardwicke, Miss Yorke, Prince Waldemar, the Duchess Lady Jane Peel, the Master, the Queen, the Grand Duke of Saxe Weimar, the Lady of the Vice Chancellor, Prince Waldemar, Duchess of Sutherland, Marquis of Abercorn, Lady Charlotte Grenville, March cness of Exeter, Lord Fortescue, Lady Desart, Lord John Russell, Duke of Norfolk, Madame Bunsen, Marquis of Lansdown, Duke of Sutherland, Bishop of London, Earl Spencer, Chevalier Bunsen, Lady Montague, M. Bancroft, Lady Peel, and the Vice-Master.

At right angles stretched five other tables to the lower end of the Hall, at which were seated the other guests—in all, 200 in number.

For her Majesty and the Prince-Chancellor were placed splendid chairs of state, richly carved and gilt, or either side of the Master of Trinity.

At half-past six o'clock, the Master of Trinity, Doctor Whewell, had the distinguished honour of conducting the Queen to the seat prepared for her as the banqueting board; and the Prince Consort led in like honour Mrs. Whewell, the Master's wife. Upon her Majesty's entrance, the company, who had already taken their seats, rose simultaneously. The scene was extremely brilliant. The Queen wore a dress of white blonde, over white satin; and, in her hair, a circlet of pearls.

The table was profusely decorated with gold and silver-gilt plate, supplied by Mr. T. Reed of Market-hill. Before her Majesty was placed a magnificent gold pasteau, and on either side a frosted silver vase of gigantic dimensions, filled with the choicest flowers. On the other tables were ranged all the plate belonging to the University, and a great variety of decorative accessories in silver and gold. In addition to these graces of the table, a profusion of most tasteful decorations were displayed in confectionery and sugar work, with many prize bouquets of flowers.

Before the company sat down, the Dean of Ely brought the customary form of prayer observed at these high ceremonials to the Master, who, having recited the same, the Dean received the customary salute.

The banquet was of the most recherché character, as will be seen from the following

BILL OF FARE.

Prawns.	Les Filets de Poulet à la Bechamelle.
Jelly	Turtle Roast Pig	Salade d'Ecrevisse Crème à Anglaise
	Les Filets de Soles à la Dalmar
Basket of Pastry.	Turtle
Salade d'Ecrevisse	Les Petit Pigeons en Aspic.	Charlotte Russe
Charlotte Russe	Peacock	Prawns
Lobster à la Bechamelle.	Ham.	Basket of Pastry
	Potage aux beaux d'Ecrevisses.
	Sauté de Saumon
	Bœuf braisée.
	Peacock
	Filets de Turbot à la Bechamelle.
	Potage aux Pates d'Italie
Basket of Pastry	Ham	La tourte Jo Cerise.
Charlotte Russe.	Les Petits Pigeons en Aspic	Basket of Pastry.
	Bœuf braisée.	Turtle
Crème aux mille fruits.	Sauté de Saumon.	Gelée Macedoine
Salade d'Ecrevisse.	Roasted Hare.	Prawns.
Turtle.	Filets de Sole à la Dalmar.
	Relevés.
Ramekins of Venison.		Turkey Poults.
Necks of Venison.		Jellies

During dinner, the band of the Grenadier Guards, stationed in the gallery, played several pieces. The banquet lasted from half-past six till eight; and at its close, the Queen proposed

A most sumptuous dessert, with the rarest wines and richest prize fruit, having been placed on the tables.

The Rev. Dr. Whewell, Master of Trinity, rose and spoke as follows:—"May it please your Majesty—My Lords and Gentlemen—I have received her Majesty's gracious permission to propose a toast. I am allowed to propose a toast which, we are sure, will be heard with delight—the health of Her Majesty the Queen." (Three times three, loud and long-continued cheers.)

During the first three cheers, her Majesty stood and graciously bowed three several times to the assembled company, who remained standing during the remainder of the cheers; and after they were finished, seated good-naturedly to guide the Master of Trinity for the loud enthusiasm of the company.

The band having played the National Anthem,

The Master of Trinity rose and said:—"I have received the gracious permission of her Majesty to propose another toast: it is the health of one for whom we also daily pray in this Hall as for ourselves—'The Health of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Chancellor of this University.'"

The cheers which greeted the toast were loud and long-continued. They had scarcely subsided, when her Majesty and the Prince-Chancellor rose, about half-past eight o'clock; and, leading the way, the other guests at the upper table speedily retired from the Hall, the band playing the National Anthem

At nine o'clock, her Majesty held a Levee in the Master's Drawing-Room, at Trinity Lodge, when the Masters, Professors, and Doctors, with their ladies, were received by the Queen. The reception lasted till eleven o'clock.

WEDNESDAY.

THE PRINCE CHANCELLOR'S LEVEE.

This morning, at nine o'clock, the Prince Chancellor held a Levee in the Queen's Drawing-room, at Trinity Lodge. His Royal Highness wore his magnificent robes as Chancellor of the University. At the Levee, the Mayor and Corporation of Cambridge presented a congratulatory address; and all the Heads of Houses, Fellows, and Masters of Arts were presented. His Royal Highness stood the whole time of the reception, a period of a couple of hours at least. The Vice-Chancellor presented.

VISITS TO THE COLLEGES.

After the Levee, the Prince-Chancellor proceeded in one of the state carriages to visit Colleges which he was not enabled to take in his round yesterday. His Royal Highness was accompanied by Professor Sedgwick, and first visited Trinity Hall and Library, where he was received by the Masters and Fellows. He then proceeded to Clare Hall; and afterwards went to the Library, Museum, and the Geological Museum, Professor Sedgwick giving him an account of the various interesting specimens of the antediluvian creation, including the megatherium and a magnificent specimen of the gigantic elk. The Royal party then proceeded to Caius College, entering at the beautiful Gate of Honour, proceeding through the Gate of Humility, and went out at the Gate of Virtue; having previously inspected the Hall, Library, and the other interesting buildings in the College. The Prince-Chancellor next paid a visit to the Master and Fellows of Corpus Christi, where he viewed the various objects of interest connected with that institution. He then went to Emmanuel, where he was received by the Master and the Duke of Wellington. He also went to Queen's College; and then returned to Trinity Lodge.

At the latter, the Prince-Chancellor expressed his concern at the absence of the venerable and much-respected Professor of Modern History, Professor Smyth, through ill health. On his paying his visit to the different Colleges, the Prince was particularly anxious that he should be driven to St. Peter's, where he condescendingly paid his respects to the venerable Professor

PUBLIC BREAKFAST AT TRINITY.

The preparations for this fête were on a magnificent scale. The great quadrangle of Trinity was made available for the Fête. The breakfast was laid out under the two sides of the inner quadrangle and the places under the Library. On the two sides of the court, tables, extending from the Hall to the Library, were spread with crimson cloth; and under the Library (where there is a spacious area) three rows of tables similarly provided, and decked with great taste, were ranged, the whole affording accommodation for upwards of 900 persons. In the centre of the quadrangle of Trinity, a marquee was pitched, whereon the band of the 1st Regiment of Life Guards was stationed; and in the grounds beyond the Library, a second pavilion was erected for the reception of the Queen and Prince Consort.

At one o'clock, the Queen made her appearance at the door leading from the Hall into the inner court, and descended the steps on the grass, leading on the arm of Prince Waldemar of Prussia, and preceded by the Duke of Norfolk (Earl Marshal), the Earl Fortescue, the Marquis of Northampton, and other noblemen. On her Majesty's right walked his Royal Highness the Prince-Chancellor, and the Vice-Chancellor; on the left, Lord Jocelyn, with Lord Alfred Paget. The Royal party walked across the green sward and through the gate. Immediately outside the piazza, on the green, with a full view of the river, and the grounds, and the

(Continued on page 28.)

PRINTERS' ALMSHOUSE FUND.—On Monday evening the fifth annual meeting of the friends and subscribers of the above fund took place, at the London Mechanics' Institution, T. S. Duncombe, Esq., M.P., presiding. The report showed that the previous balance, the receipts of the past year, amounted to £2035 7s. 8d., and the expenditure was £837, leaving a balance available to the erection of almshouses, &c., of £2005 7s. 8d., in addition to subscriptions since received. The Committee had received £50 from the executors of the late W. S. Pfaed, Esq., and various other subscriptions, including those of the daily and weekly journals, and had negotiated for a plot of ground at Wood-green, Hornsey, adjoining that of the Fishmongers' and Poulterers', for £400, proposing to erect thereon six almshouses, to accommodate twelve pensioners, with library, &c

A PLEASANT ANNOUNCEMENT.—The letter of the Norwood Cemetery to its proprietors commences thus: "Sir, your grave (No. —) is now ready."

THE THEATRES.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA

Verdi's "Ernani" was produced on Saturday night for the début of Mdlle. Steffanoni, a prima donna, who has gained great fame in Italy. She is very young and remarkably handsome, although her embonpoint is considerable. Her voice was decided, notwithstanding her trepidation throughout the opera. She possesses pure and ample compass of considerable roundness; the low notes of the register are a little husky. Her style is unexceptionable, her intonation good, and execution admirable. Mdlle. Steffanoni sang the cavatina, "Ernani! Ernani, involviamo," in a style that was never before heard in this country. The cabaletta was done to perfection nothing could be more neat and finished than her mastery of the scales, and one prolonged shake was so beautifully articulated as to call down a burst of rapturous applause. As an actress, she has a good deal to intelligence.

A great novelty in the cast was the assumption of Don Carlo by Mdlle. Alboni, who achieved another triumph. We should have premised that in the hands of a baritone, for which it was written; but it is Tamburini, and Ronconi has taken an invincible dislike to the music. Alboni, however, in order that the opera should not be shelved, kindly undertook the [illegible]ng; and, if the concerted pieces suffered a little from the want of a bass, there can be no question that the solo were more so delightful. Among the parts in Italy, and amply merits its European repute. Salvi's Ernani was another hit. He studied it expressly for this establishment; and we agree perfectly with the Times, that, whether as regards singing or dramatic acting, it was almost faultless. The death scene was portrayed with striking fidelity, and the refinement of his style in the musical portions left nothing to be desired. A word or praise is due to the pains taken in having the subordinate parts so adequately sustained by Polonini and Piacentini.

Whatever may be our admiration of Verdi's dramatic colouring—of his skill in the combination of crescendos in an orchestra, of principals, band, and chorus we see no reason to withdraw our previously expressed opinions as to his lack of melody, and of originality. He tears the voices of his singers to pieces in organised [illegible]-phrases; and, although in every one of the four acts of "Ernani" he manages to create a sensation, still is the general effect of his work heavy.

"Ernani" was splendidly mounted. Grieve and Telbin have contributed some charming scenery, especially the opening mountainous scene of sunrise, and the concluding moonlight view.

With the single exception of a hitch in the chorus, arising from a wrong one having been given, the execution was perfect. There was a sufficiency band behind the scenes, to add to the effect. The ovations to the artists—Steffanoni, Alboni, Salvi, and Marini—were highly compromentary throughout the evening.

Mdlle. Plunkett made her début triumphantly in the new divertissement called "L'Amour et La Danse." Everything asserted as to her great improvement turned out to be correct, and she now ranks in the first class of living danseuses, possessing grace, agility, and energy to a surpassing degree.

"Ernani" was to have been repeated on Tuesday, but Salvi was so indisposed, that he was unable to appear. "Il Barbiere" was substituted, with Marlo in Count Almaviva, having adopted, we presume, the character at an hour's notice. He sang beautifully, and was much cheered. Alboni, Rovere, Ronconi, and Marini, convulsed the house with laughter with the rich comedy.

On Thursday night, for the benefit of the inimitable Grisi, Donizetti's "Anna Bolena" was performed for the first time, with the Diva as Anna; Mdlle. Corbari, as Lady Jane Seymour; Mdlle. Alboni, as the page Smeaton; Mario, as Percy; Tamburini, King Harry, Taglafico, as Rochfort; and Tilli, as Hervey. Grisi's Anna Bolena is one of her most glorious delineations. As in Norma, Lucrezia Borgia, Semiramide, Donna Anna, and in all those characters exacting the combination of womanly beauty, physical energy, dignified deportment, and grand vocalisation, Grisi is without a rival. Her supremacy is unquestionable and there is not a travelled professor, or amateur, who has heard all the great European singers in every country, who will not declare that Grisi, Donizetti's Approach Grisi in the portraiture of lofty lyrical art. It is now some fifteen years since Grisi has maintained the proud position, both in Paris and London. How many prime donne has she not survived! And yet is her voice fresh and unimpaired—her strength greater than ever her intellectual capacity more and more developed. From the most august amateur in the land, down to the veriest tyro, is heard the remark, "How she is singing! she never has been so fine before."

It would be impossible to describe Grisi's reception in Anna Bolena, without being almost suspected of exaggeration by those readers who were not present at her matchless performance. In the finale of the first act, the pit rose at her en masse to cheer. The artist, who by one single exclamation can thus move an audience, must indeed be transcendent. After the opera was over, Grisi and Mario, who once uttered by Grisi, are not easily to be forgotten. For withering scorn, and intense passion, this situation in the opera, where Henry consigns Anne to the Tower, have never been equalled. It was Siddons and Kean in the Middle Ages, like a startling energy. It is useless to dwell on the three successive calls before the curtain at the end of the act—the highest compliment was paid to her by the Countess Lucer of Essex, who ordered a diamond bracelet, and threw it on the stage a costly bracelet studded with jewels, in the midst of the floral shower Her last act was one continued series of triumphs, and the honours at the end of the opera were renewed again and again.

Alboni made another hit in Smeaton, and was rapturously encored in the romance "Deh non volar." Never was this character so beautifully sustained before. Corbari may be congratulated for her share of the vocal gory of her exquisite singing in Lady Jane Seymour. Mario was husky in the first act, and [illegible]ology was made for him; but his "Vivi ancor" was perfect. Tamburini looked as [illegible]he had walked out of one of Holbein's frames; he was the morose, sensual, and [illegible]ete Harry to the life. The opera was splendidly mounted. The scene of the Council Chamber and of the Tower, with the City in the distance, were deservedly applauded. The costumes have been a serious outlay. There was a military band besides the usual orchestra—we need scarcely add that the accompaniments were splendidly rendered. The house was crowded with rank and fashion.

FRENCH PLAYS. MADEMOISELLE RACHEL.

On Monday evening, this great actress made her first appearance this season at the St. James's Theatre, in Corneille's tragedy of "Les Horaces."

When we noticed the performance of Mademoiselle Rachel last year, in this same character—that of Camille—we spoke of it as one of the most superb pieces of acting we had ever witnessed; and we remain in the same opinion. It is impossible to form an idea of the import and meaning she gives to every word either by a marvellous command of the tone of voice, or the powerful expression of features that accompanies the utterance. If the perfection of her art lies in entirely concealing the intention of making her grand points, then is she also entitled to be considered the first living actress. It is, more especially, in the latter scenes of the tragedy that she is enabled more fully to develope her dramatic powers. In the earlier portions of "Les Horaces," careful and impressive declamation is all that is required of Corneille's heroes; but the story approaches to denouement, it is necessary, in order that the character may come forward in all its grandeur, to delineate with extreme force and truth some of the great and terrible passions; and in this delineation of love, and hate, and anguish, Mdlle. Rachel is marvellled. In the hands of a less consummate actress, the representation would be as wearying as ineffective, especially as there is in all French tragedies a unpleasant monotony of rhythm, which requires great skill to relieve by varied expression of voice and feature, in order that it may be overcome. So wonderfully did Rachel interpret, to its fullest extent, the meaning of the poet—and with such intensity did she give all the great points, especially the last of them, the agony at hearing of the death of Curiace and the imprecations on Rome that the enthusiasm of the audience appeared to know no bounds. They applauded, called her before the curtain, and redoubled their cheers; and she showered such a profusion of bouquets upon her, that we were astonished to see the usually tranquil company of the St. James's Theatre give way to such bulkiness of contenement. A very clever actress, Madame Babert, new to our boards, deserves great praise for the admirable way in which she assisted the representation, and the brother of Rachel, M. Felix, is also a performer of some merit. The house was very full, and Mdlle. Rachel was complimented by the attendance of a fashionable and influential audience.

Mdlle. Rachel appeared on Wednesday as Marie Stuart, in the tragedy of the same name. Her performance created the same interest, and elicited similar applause from a house quite filled in every part. At the conclusion, she was called for, and again greeted with a quantity of bouquets and loud cheering.

HAYMARKET

The performance of Mrs. Nisbett, in Murphy's revived comedy of "All in the Wrong," has been so attractive, that the representation has been given four or five times. There are some parts of this performance which are worthy of the first performance of this comedy. It is a translation of Molière's "Sganarel," which was first brought out at Paris in 1660, and was adapted seven different times to the English stage. About a month before the close of the winter season of 1760-61, Foote complained that he was likely to pass an idle summer, as he could not obtain a license to perform at "the little theatre in the Haymarket," a man who had a pack of dancing dogs had been beforehand with him at the Lord Chamberlain's Office. In this distress, he proposed to Murphy that they should enter into partnership for the summer; and, for that purpose, Garrick let them Drury-Lane Theatre at a moderate price, and Murphy brought out "All in the Wrong." Foote wrote and spoke the prologue, in which he said that they meant to manage now as this but their own; and that there would be no tragedy, as Roscius had locked up his lightning, his daggers, and his bowls. When Mrs. Yates had spoken the epilogue, two ballad-singers sang some stanzas alluding to the title of the play; and one of them might be read with good effect by those actors who are too much given to "gag" at the present day. They were as follows:

1 actors who act what these writers [illegible]
2 ay stick to your pat and spare your own wit,
For, when with your own you imbellish your songs,
I'll hold tea to one you are All in the Wrong

The comedy was entirely successful, and ran until the end of the season. Mrs. Nisbett's Lady Restless is a charming piece of acting, and the piece has been altogether revived in a manner quite worthy of the Haymarket Theatre.

LYCEUM

Another translation of "Les Couleurs de Marguerite" has been produced at this theatre. "Marguerite's Colours," at the Lyceum, is devised with "Flying Colours," at the Adelphi, but has the disadvantage of coming after the latter It is, however, very well played, the chief duty devolving upon Mr. Wigan and Miss Dickenson. In the "Bottle Imp," which concludes the entertainments, the Spanish dancers introduce a very effective divertissement.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE On Thursday, this theatre was again honoured with the presence of the Queen and H.R.H. Prince Albert, to witness the admirable performance of Jenny Lind, who returned to her favourite rôle, Adea, in "Roberto il Diavolo." We have never heard her sing the beautiful melody, "Quando lasciai la Normandia," better than on this occasion, which she was obliged to repeat. The orchestra was filled to its utmost with the greatest attention; Madame Castellan, Gardoni, Fraschini, and Staudigl, each contributing to the perfect ensemble. Mdlle. Lind was, as usual, recalled twice after the opera, with the accustomed accompaniments of floral offerings The new ballet "Les Ecmens" concluded the evening's entertainments. We understand Madame Carlotti has arrived. What a splendid addition to the gal xy of talent already engaged!

HAYMARKET.—Mr. Frederick Webster, (the clever Stage Director) takes his Benefit on Saturday next, when the entertainments will be varied by the combined talent of the Haymarket and Adelphi Companies; Mr. John Parry, and other powerful auxiliaries.

The poor Drachma now was indisposed when we wrote last week, is quite well again; and once more amuses the audience by his good-humoured comicality. He is a very droll fellow; singularly proficient in the pantomime of nature, and would, we conceive, make his fortune in a comic ballet, as well as that of the piece.

There is a wonderful little boy at VAUXHALL GARDENS, named Leisset, who performs some remarkable feats standing on a ball about two feet in diameter. Without quitting its axis, he rolls it about beneath him, by the action of his feet, wherever he chooses to go—over blocks of wood, and under and down inclined planes, with wonderful facility. His performance is altogether so novel and clever, that it will repay the trouble of visiting Vauxhall to see him, if you are about to depart. The splendid leap over the barrier of the circus, with which she quits the arena, is a sight in itself. She is the most fearless, as well as the most graceful of equitrici.

The ETHIOPIAN SERENADERS left England at the beginning of the week for New York. They take with them substantial proofs of the favour with which they were received and deserved to be. During their several visits to these shores, they never once disappointed the public; and wherever they entered into engagements, the managements speak in high terms of their honourable conduct, and obliging, unassuming deportment. If invitation to the ancient Battery, then must these Serenaders have experienced enough to turn their brains

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kean have arrived in England, after a successful and prolonged sojourn in America

MUSIC.

DRURY-LANE THEATRE Mr. Bunn has declined to renew the lease offered to him by the Proprietary: the Committee have, therefore, accepted M. Jullien's offer; and he is now the Lessee. He proposes, not only to have his season of Promenade Concerts, but to give English Operas on a grand scale, and to perform the Legitimate Drama. We are persuaded that whatever M. Jullien undertakes, he will carry on well; and, as he has had the courage to undertake a very hazardous speculation, we wish him every success. But it is certain that this will be the second instance of a Frenchman being at the head of a patent theatre, M. Laporte having been the lessee of Covent-Garden some years since. M. Jullien will take care to put the orchestra on a most effective footing.

MUSICAL UNION.—We congratulate Mr. Ella, the Founder and Director of this Society, on the successful season which terminated on Tuesday, the Duke of Cambridge, the Duchess of Cleveland, the Duke of Beaufort, the Earl of Falmouth, Lord Saltoun, and a long list of distinguished amateurs, being present. Spohr was also in the room, and was cordially greeted. The programme comprised Beethoven's Quartet in F, No. 2, Op 18; Spohr's Quintet in G Minor, for piano, two violins, viola, and violoncello; and Mozart's Quintet in

The executants were—First violins, Joachim and Joseph Hellmesberger; second violin, M. Deloffre; tenor, Mr. Henry Hofmeister; violoncello, Piatti. delayed their departure to attend this last meeting; Signor Piatti, violoncello; and Madame Dulcken, piano. We need scarcely add, that the execution was a great treat.

JEFFREYSON'S "EGMONT" Mr. Miller, a native of Edinburgh, whose musical education has been formed in Germany, gave a Concert at the Music Hall, Store-street, chiefly for the purpose of performing Beethoven's music to Goethe's tragedy of "Egmont." It was the first time that this music has been legitimately presented in this country, although its overture is familiar to concert frequenters, and connoisseurs of melodramatic music have also had Beethoven's "Egmont" music in many dramas. Count Egmont was the opponent of Alba in the Spanish persecution against the house of Orange, and fell a victim to his loyalty, being beheaded in 1563. Goethe introduces in his tragedy the Dutch Clara, who is loved for Egmont; Clara, in turn, being beloved by Brackenberg, a citizen's son. Mr. Wilson narrated with skill the explanatory poem from the German of Carlbrenner, translated by Mr. Miller. Mr. Wilson also sang the incidental songs ably. But the descriptive music required a better orchestra than was supplied on this occasion. Mr. Miller's attempt was, however, praiseworthy, in point of performance on Saturday, at the St. James's Theatre, and appeared in the last part with white faces. The Turner family played on the harp, violin, and guitar.

MORNING PERFORMANCE AT THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA —The second Concert was brilliantly attended, and the "Sabat Mater" applauded greatly. Alboni performed her music; but Mario, and Tamburini, declined. Beethoven's Symphony, with the two military bands, besides the usual orchestra, and the "Leonora" overture, were finely played. We never heard anything so startling as the musical thunder. These annual performances have been eminently successful. In the miscellaneous act, Grisi and Alboni sang the duo from "Semiramide," Mario and Rovere the duo from Ricci's "Chiara di Rosenberg," from which Mr. Balfe borrowed his "Siege of Rochelle." Grisi was encored in the "Pasquale" Serenade. Corbari, Ronconi, and Madame Ronconi, Taglafico, Madame Persiani, Salvi, &c., assisted in the scheme.

MUSIC AT THE COUNTRY MEETING OF THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY AT NORTHAMPTON.—Great preparations are making in this borough for a long talked-of meeting of this Society. It is expected that accommodation for one hundred thousand persons will be required and generously entertained. People and the inhabitants, to render their town as inviting as possible, are determined on making it assume the gayest appearance, there being but few houses which do not present evidences of recent architectural embellishment, while, in many instances, they have been either rebuilt, or at least entirely re-fronted. Although agriculture and its interests will occupy the first place in the attractions of the town and neighbourhood—this being eminently an agricultural county, and the very focus of the landed aristocracy of England—yet, every inducement, and, in the instances, of a most costly kind, to make Northampton worthy the distinction of its selection. The Corn Exchange, and Market, being expressly erected by the Society, will be offered to the visitors. Wilson, the Scottish vocalist, and Henry Phillips have both announced their intertainments, and with every prospect of a promising harvest; but the great musical celebrities and stars will shed the chief interest in the neighbourhood, will be a Morning Concert, for which the great contralto, Alboni, is engaged—a party, including this celebrated singer, Corbari, John Parry, Hughes, and Sedgwick, being expressly retained. The Pavilion, which is designed to dine 1200 persons, is rapidly approaching completion; whilst the Race-course, which is set apart as a show-yard for the exhibition of prize cattle, agricultural implements, &c., is in active progress, and will, no doubt, will, in a few days, be given up to the Committee of Management.

MUSICAL CHIT CHAT.

A Concert was given at the Hanover-square Rooms, last night, in aid of the funds of the Italian Gratuitous School. Spohr conducted his "Fall of Babylon," last night, at Exeter Hall, but we must defer our notice until the next number.

The Fourth and last Concert of the Royal Academy of Music will be given this morning. On Monday morning will be the Annual Public Morning Rehearsal of "The Messiah." And on Wednesday evening, the performance at the Hanover-square Rooms, in aid of the Royal Society of Musicians.

MM Duponchel and Roqueplan have commenced their duties in the direction of the Royal Academy of Music, in Paris, which will be closed for two months for repair.

Liszt is now astonishing the Turks, in Constantinople, with his powers as a pianist. Heyseler is in Jehemia, for the benefit of his health. Thalberg is in Paris, organising a fresh speculation. Mr. Vincent Wallace, the composer, is in Vienna, getting up his "Maritana" and "Matilda of Hungar.

A subscription is in progress to find the veteran composer Whitaker, whose "Darby Kelly," "Paddy Carey," "Molly Malone," "Best thee, Babe," are well-known and popular ballads. Sir G. Smart, Sir H. R. Bishop, Mr. T. Cooke, and many other friends are interested in this purpose.

Arrangements are in active progress for the Gloucester Musical Festival. It would, indeed, be a disgrace if the three-hundred meetings of the Three Choirs were given up, especially as the railroads ought to increase their chances of success if undertaken with spirit.

LOLA MONTES AGAIN.—The Cologne Gazette of the 3rd inst., gives the following:—"From letters received from Bamberg, it appears that the excitement excited at the beginning of this year against Lola Montes are far from having subsided. On passing through Nuremberg she has been cold with decency. At Bamberg, however, it was quite the reverse. The reception she was not only hissed and hooted, but stones thrown at her carriage, and at one moment she presented her pistols, and threatened to punish her assailants. On arriving at the hotel where she alighted, it became necessary to shut the gates to prevent the populace from entering and insulting her. These demonstrations assumed a character so decidedly hostile, that although she had intended to pass the night at Bamberg, she resolved upon continuing her journey. The higher classes of the town were ashamed of these excesses, and yet they, in some sure, will have to pay the penalty; for, it is said, an order has been received by the chief magistrate of the town, insisting upon his appointing a deputation to wait upon Lola Montes, and apologise for the treatment she had received at Bamberg."

OUR MAGAZINE COLUMN FOR JULY.

A SUMMER'S DAY IN LONDON.

The weather was warm, the wind sultry; and there was a sigh of the summer time in Princess's Place, that turned Miss Tox's thoughts upon the country. The pot-boy attached to the Princess's Arms had come out with a can and frizzled water, in a flowing pattern, all over Princess's Place, and it gave the weedy ground a fresh scent—quite a growing scent, Miss Tox said. There was a tiny blink of sun peeping in from the great street round the corner, and the smoky sparrows hopped over it and back again, brightening as they passed: or bathed in it, like a stream, and became glorified sparrows, unconnected with chimneys. Legends in prairs of Ginger Beer, with picture-a representations of fairmy gentlemen submerged in the effervescence, or stunned by the flying corks, were conspicuous in the window of the Princess's Arms. They were making late hay, somewhere out of town; and though the fragrance had a long way to come, and many counter fragrances to contend with among the Dwellings of the poor (may God reward the worthy gentlemen who stickle for the Plague as part and parcel of the wisdom of our ancestors, and do their little best to keep those dwellings miserable!) yet it was wafted faintly into Princess's-place, whisperings of Nature and her wholesome air, as such things will, even into prisoners and captives, and those are deaden and oppressed, in very spite of aldermen and knights to boot: at whose sage nod—and how they nod! the rolling world stands still!—Dombey and Son.

DAYDON AND THE ELGIN MARBLES

I went with Haydon to see these celebrated marbles, when they were in Piccadilly. For want of an artist's ability and comprehension of such subjects, I found my mind retire into history, and irresistibly empoyed on the associations connected with works of art produced in the age of Pericles, some hundreds of years before the Christian era. The intervening ages came into my mind in their leading events; the fall of two great empires, and the dawn of a new faith, and almost the existence of the country where these relics then stood, on which the eyes of so many renowned men long passed away had gazed with admiration. "Are they not beautiful? They are the work of Phidias, my boy!" said Haydon. "Think of that. They are none of your gods and goddesses put together at the fire. Things in antiquities—no complexities; they are nature—no like others—the most perfect nature. Look at the limbs, at the hoofs, and the legs, of the men and horses I am copying. There is nothing there but the truth of nature. The Greeks were the true sculptors here is proof of it; and yet people won't see it. There, my boy, look at that figure; such ease, and beauty, too! And yet it is only a man such as we might find in the Life Guards, but how perfect; not one [illegible] wanting! I told him I did not comprehend enough of it to see all he saw, that I thought them very fine, and mentioned what were my ideas as I first glanced upon them. "That's right, too," said poor Haydon; "but that is the poetry of the marbles, not the artist's impression on the first sight of them." Fraser's Magazine.

BALLOON ASCENT OF "THE MAN IN THE MOON."

The prevailing scarcity having extended from coin and potatoes to jokes and subjects for wit, we determined upon accompanying the "Columbus of the Skies" (as Mr. Green is emphatically called in the powerful language of Cremorne) to the realms of air, to see if there was anything there that had not yet been said. We were also anxious to pay a visit to the real Man in the Moon, and present him with a copy of our work, in person; we wished to experience a new sensation: and we thought that it was time our efforts should take a higher flight than we had hitherto essayed. We were ready also for a lark, and we thought the skies the best place to find one. A friend wished us to accompany him by taking up some bills, which the ascending power of the great Nassau could not carry amount. In the present dearth of theatrical talent—especially after Macready's late failure at the Princess's—we wanted to see what stars were out of engagements; and, above all, a heir friend had requested us to procure for her terrier. And so, with all these inducements, we did not dissent to the assent, but made our will with the aid of sixpenny-worth of "plain instructions," and prepared for the worst. On Monday, the seventh of the past June, we had the opportunity of taking the air in a manner we had never before experienced of filling the office of overseer of every parish in London at once—of adding our name to the list of darling Balloonatics who had preceded us, and descended again safely enough to be our Airshire legatees had we required them: of meeting Mr. Green in his own element: and with our companions, full of spirits, and tolerably turning into cash-boys. From the Gardens the balloon looked something like the dome of St. Paul's out on a spree, and rather overcome with drink; for it rolled about vaguely, restless of confinement, and now and then took a run out of the hands of the stalwart men who held it, and behind on a manner altogether unbecoming, when the important trust about to be confided to it was considered.—The Man in the Moon.

MRS. MIFF, THE PEW-OPENER.

Mrs. Miff, the wheezy little pew opener, is a mighty dry old lady, sparely dressed, with not an inch of fulness anywhere about her, has been waiting at the church-gate half-an-hour, as her place is, for the beadle. A vinegary face has Mrs. Miff, and a mortified bonnet, and she's a Dursley sort for sharpness of dealings. Beckoning to stray people to come into pews, has given Mrs. Miff an air of mystery; and there is reservation in the eye of Mrs. Miff, as always knowing in a sniffer-sensation of pews. Has been pew opener to Mr. Mim, as well as Mr. Miff, nor has there been these twenty years, and Mrs. Miff would rather not allude to him. He held some bat opinions, it would seem, about free seats, and though Mrs. Miff hopes he may be gone upwards, she couldn't positively undertake to say so.—Dombey and Son.

REMINISCENCES OF CAMBRIDGE

My love for Cambridge is still warm. Who that has encountered in the noon-day heat across King's bridge, and gazed upon the smooth verdant banks of the creeping Cam peopled with myriads of cool silent fishes, and crossed by many an arch, one hidden another, each scanning upon the glassy water an image of perfect beauty now ruffled by the form of a graceful swan—how shivered into a fantastical figure by the brisk scrills of a merry boat; who, that has walked beneath the stately elms in Queen's-road, or wandered in the pleasant wilderness of St. John's; who, that in the witching time of night, has paced the airy cloisters of Neville's-court, when the high moon shines greenly upon the walnut, and the fountain plays, and with a fantastic light; what Cambridge man can ever cease to love Cambridge? Warm, by Jove it for itself, for its old associates, for its friendships never to be renewed elsewhere, for its expectations, and its memory! Formally St. John's, and Queen's, and Corpus Christi I do good. Yes: "VOCATUS ET NON VOCATUS DEFENDAM!" Bolman's Magazine.

"MASTER'S STUDY."

Behind Mr. Osborne's dining-room was the usual apartment which went in his house by the name of the study; and was sacred to the master of the house. There Mr. Osborne would retire of a Sunday forenoon when not minded to go to church; and here pass the morning in his crimson leather chair, reading the paper. A couple of glazed book-cases were here, containing standard works in gilt gilt bindings. The "Annual Register," the "Gentleman's Magazine," "Blair's Sermons," and "Hume and Smollet." From year's end to year's end he never took one of these volumes from the shelf; but there was no member of the family that would dare for his life to touch one of the books, except upon those rare Sunday evenings when there was no dinner party, and when the great scarlet Bible and Prayer Book were taken out from the corner where they stood beside the copy of the Peerage, and the volumes being ranged on the dining parlour, Osborne read the evening service to his family in a loud, grating, pompous voice. No member of the household, child or domestic, ever entered that room without a certain awe. There he checked the housekeeper's accounts, and overhauled the butler's cellar book. Hence he could command, across the drawn gravel courtyard, the back entrance of the stables, with which one of his bells communicated, and into this part of the coachman issued from his promises as into a dock, and Osborne swore at him from the study window. Four times a year Miss Osborne and Miss Dobbin went to get her salary; and his daughters to receive their quarterly allowance. George, as a boy, had been housewhipped in this room many times; his mother sitting sick on the sofa, listening to the cuts of the whip. The boy was scarcely ever known to go under the punishment; the poor woman used to fondle and kiss him secretly, and give him money to soothe him, when he came out. There was a picture of the family over the mantel-piece, removed thither from the front room after Mrs. Osborne's death: George was on a pony, the elder sister holding him up a bunch of flowers; the younger led by her mother's hand; all with red cheeks and large red mouths, simpering on each other in the approved family-portrait manner. The mother lay under ground now, long since forgotten the sisters and brother had a hundred different interests of their own, sad, familiar still, were utterly estranged from each other. Some few score of years afterwards, when all the parties represented are grown old, what bitter satire there is in those flaunting childish family-portraits, with their faces of sentiment and smiling lips, and innocence so self-conscious and self-satisfied. Opposite, over stately portrait, with that of his great silver inkstand and arm-chair, had taken the place of honour in the dining-room, vacated by the family piece.—Vanity Fair

SIR THOMAS MORE'S WIT.

Among the petty persecutions to which More was exposed in prison, was the taking away from him all writing implements from his good old man, who, deprived of pens and ink, took a coal as a substitute He at length learned to write with a piece of Wall's End as rapidly as he could use a pen, and, with a coal-scuttle for an inkstand, he never would be thankful to Jove for the fire of his genius. Considering how famous he was for the use of "words that burn," we do not see how he could have found a better instrument than a piece of coal for transcribing his sentiments. A priest was soon found for taking the life of this excellent man, whose facetious bearing at his own execution shall not mislead us into unseemly levity in alluding to it. He made jokes upon the scaffold; but we must admit that they are of so sad and melancholy a description, as to be scarcely considered illappropriate to his very serious position. So much has been said of the wit of More, that we may perhaps be excused for hazarding a word or two concerning it. Judging by some of the bon mots that have been preserved, they seem to us hardly worth the expense of their keep; for as horses are said to have eaten off their own heads, so the witticisms of More appear in many instances to have consumed all their own point, or, at all events, the rust of ages has a good deal dimmed their brilliancy. His wife had but little respect for his wag [illegible] and would sometimes ask him "how he could play the fool in a close [illegible] pr—n?" and she evidently thought it was carrying the joke a little too far when she found her husband would not "drop it," even in the Tower. His allusion to his being obliged to write with coals instead of pens, which caused him to say that "he was but a wreck of his former self, and had better be scuttled at once," seems to us equally deficient in point and dignity. He was executed on the 6th of July, 1535, after a quantity of badinage with the headsman, which makes us regret, for the sake of More, that any reporters were allowed to be present. Comic History of England.

THE INSTALLATION AT CAMBRIDGE.

THE FETE IN THE GARDENS OF ST. JOHN'S.

(Continued from page 26.)

cloisters of St. John's, stood the pavilion, in which refreshments were provided for her Majesty and the Prince, and the noble and distinguished persons who accompanied them. Here they remained for about half an hour.

Meanwhile, dancing commenced, to the music of Jullien's Band, in the immense Pavilion which had been erected for the purpose in the gardens of St. John's College. The grounds of this College and Trinity were united by two temporary wooden bridges thrown across the Cam. It is scarcely possible to conceive a more brilliant assemblage than that which appeared to-day, in all directions of those usually calm and peaceful retreats; and those who retired, now and then, from the bustle and the music and the heat of the pavilions, to take a distant view of the general effect, must have been particularly struck with its peculiarly enlivening appearance.

It is stated there were present at this fête 2000 persons, each of whom paid one guinea for a ticket of admission.

At about ten minutes past two, the Royal party left the Pavilion in the Gardens, and retired amidst the cheering of the company. They next visited the Hall, where the Queen recognised Sir Robert and Lady Peel, and conversed with them a few minutes.

THE RETURN.

In about half-an-hour from the inspection of Trinity Hall, the Royal visitors left for the Railway Station, where Mr. Hudson and Mr. Waddington were in attendance, as on the journey from London. At three minutes before three o'clock, the signal was given for the start; and, stopping only at Bishop's Stortford for three minutes, the train arrived at the Tottenham Station at twenty-three minutes past four o'clock.

Her Majesty was pleased to express herself much gratified with the arrangements for her reception at the Railway, and the manner in which her journeys along the line had been conducted; and three graceful acknowledgments were conveyed by Prince Albert to Mr. Hudson. The Queen then entered her carriage, accompanied by Prince Albert, and attended by the Duchess of Sutherland and the Countess of Desart, and proceeded to Buckingham Palace, by way of the Regent's Park, under the escort of a troop of Life Guards.

To return to Cambridge. At six o'clock, many of the members of the University and their ladies who had assembled in Trinity College, repaired to the dancing-tent erected on the lawn opposite the new building of St. John's College, where polkas, quadrilles, and other dances were kept up to the excellent accompaniment of Jullien's admirable band till nearly ten o'clock.

CELEBRATIONS.

A very handsome medal has been struck by Messrs. Peter, Cambridge, to commemorate this Installation. On the obverse is a finely-executed head of the Prince, from a miniature by Ross, with the inscription "Princeps Celsissimus Albertus Acad. Cantab. Cancell., 1847;" and on the reverse an interior of the Senate House.

Another very handsome medal has been struck by Mr. Reed, of the Market-hill, with an admirable likeness of the Prince-Chancellor.

The Poet Laureate's "Installation Ode" has been superbly printed, with illuminated borders, by Messrs. Vizetelly, of Fleet-street. It bears, as a Frontispiece, the whole-length Portrait of his Royal Highness the Prince-Chancellor, which appeared in our Journal of the 27th of March, although this acknowledgment has been inadvertently omitted. The Messrs. Vizetelly also executed for the University the Illuminated Programmes, cartes a diner, &c.

THE QUEEN ENTERING THE RAILWAY CARRIAGE, ATTENDED BY MR. HUDSON.

The first arrival of any importance at Trinity College was Sir Harry Smith, who was immediately conducted to the apartments prepared for him by two of the dignitaries of the College. He walked about the Court for some time unrecognised except by a few friends; till, at last, he became generally known, and numerous groups collected around him. Among the next arrivals were several Peers, temporal and spiritual, with their families: but that which excited the greatest interest was the arrival of the Duke of Wellington, preceded by the three University Bedells, and conducted by the Vice-Chancellor and other members of the University. As soon as he entered the Court-yard, cries of "the Duke," "the Duke," followed by loud cheering, accompanied him the whole length of the Court, until he stepped within the hall of the Master of Trinity's residence.

The firing of guns at various intervals now announced to those within the walls of Trinity College that her Majesty had arrived, and had entered the town. Shortly afterwards the gates of Trinity College were thrown open, and the first Royal carriage passed through. None of the University authorities were present, as was announced in the morning papers, to receive their Royal guests, who drove through the Court-yard past the fountain (the point represented in the Illustration), and on to the doorway of the Master of Trinity's house. The cheering as the last carriage, containing the Queen and the Prince, made its appearance, was tremendous, being joined in by every individual present. On alighting from their carriage, and after her Majesty and the Prince had entered the apartment, where numerous distinguished guests were waiting to receive her, the Vice-Chancellor presented to the Prince the staves of office, carried by the University Bedells, which the Prince immediately laid at her Majesty's feet.

By the kindness of Dr. Whewell, our Artist was accorded a place at the corner of the platform in the Hall of Trinity College, previous to the Address being read, and the description he has furnished us of the proceedings connected therewith, is as follows. On entering the Hall, he found no one present except three of the University authorities. Shortly afterwards a party of ladies were admitted through one of the doorways communicating with the Master of Trinity's residence, and immediately took their seats upon the platform. Her Majesty next entered, preceded by Sir George Grey, and two gentlemen in waiting; and attended by the Duchess of Sutherland, and a Maid of Honour. The Queen immediately walked up to the state chair, placed for her accommodation, but did not sit down. She soon afterwards recognised the ladies who had previously entered, and hastening up to them embraced them. The Queen passed some time in conversation with the Duchess of Sutherland and Sir George Grey, until at length it became known that the Prince-Chancellor had arrived, with the members of the University; the doors at the lower end of the Hall were suddenly thrown open, and the Prince walked up the whole length of the building, preceded by the Univers.ty Bedells, the train of his magnificent robes being borne by two gentlemen of the Court. This scene forms one of our principal Illustrations. At the same moment, the doors communicating with the platform were thrown open, and the Prince Waldemar of Prussia, the Prince of Oldenburg, and other distinguished personages, took their places on the platform to the right of her Majesty; the Duchess of Sutherland and the Maid of Honour, standing on her Majesty's left hand. The Queen smiled as soon as she caught sight of the Prince, and when at length he had reached the platform, and commenced reading the Address, neither of them could repress a laugh. The Prince read the Address in a firm and distinct voice, and with a pure English accent. At its conclusion, her Majesty received from one of the gentlemen in attendance, the copy of the answer, which she read in her usual distinct tone.

The presentation of the Vice-Chancellor, the Heads of Colleges, and other noblemen and gentlemen followed, all of whom had the honour to kiss hands; and the style in which each particular party acquitted himself was the object of especial criticism from the bystanders, and evidently afforded her Majesty amusement. When Sir Harry Smith was presented, a tremendous shout rang through the Hall, which was reiterated four or five times

On the termination of this portion of the proceedings, the Prince and the members of the University who accompanied him, retired bowing—with their faces turned towards her Majesty from her Majesty's presence. This was a strange scene: the lower end of the Hall was filled with many hundred persons, who had to be ejected by force, communicated from the upper end, before any retrograde movement of consequence could be made. The Prince-Chancellor's train-bearers saved him the necessity of taking part in this ejection; but the reverend Bishops and other dignitaries occupying the front rank, on a line with the Prince, used their utmost exertions to force back the crowd, all the while keeping their faces turned towards her Majesty, who enjoyed the proceedings.

In conclusion, we have to make our acknowledgments to the University authorities generally, and more particularly to the Vice-Chancellor, the Master of Trinity, and Mr. Leafingwell, the Esquire Bedell; as well as to the Mayor of Cambridge, for the facilities they have afforded our Artists in their exertions to insure accuracy.

Too much praise can scarcely be given to the authorities of the Eastern Counties Railway for the excellence of their arrangements, under the able direction of Mr. Waddington; and Mr. C. P. Roney, the indefatigable Secretary to the Company. Their obliging attention was alike extended to all who, from business or pleasure, journeyed to the Installation by the railway.

F I N E A R T S.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH DURING THE PERSECUTION BY THE PAGAN EMPERORS OF ROME.—PAINTED BY F. R. PICKERSGILL.—EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY EXHIBITION.

WE have, this week, engraved Mr. F. R. Pickersgill's highly-meritorious Picture, which, we are happy to perceive, has been purchased for £200, as one of the London Art-Union Prizes.

The Picture is entitled, in the Exhibition Catalogue, "The Christian Church during the Persecutions by the Pagan Emperors of Rome." Appended is the following epigraph:—

In subterranean chapels (the catacombs) where the living were separated from the dead by a mere tile or slab of stone, and sometimes liable to be mingled with them by the violence of their enemies, even before the conclusion of their worship, the hope of a future life naturally occupied a prominent place in their creed. The words, "I believe in the resurrection of the dead," must have resounded with solemn import through those dreary caves; and all that could help a trembling faith to seize the joyful reality, was eagerly adopted. -Maitland.

PERILOUS DESCENT OF MR. GYPSON'S BALLOON, ON TUESDAY NIGHT.

SINCE the 15th of October, 1783, when the daring Marquis d'Arlandes and M. Pilâtre de Rosier first trusted themselves to a free balloon, there have been few ascents made which terminated in so nearly fatal a manner as that from Vauxhall Gardens on Tuesday night. Setting aside the hapless attempt of the latter aëronaut and his companion, M. Romain, whose balloon caught fire at an elevation of 3000 feet, and who were dashed to earth, and killed on the rabbit-warren at Wimereux, near Boulogne, the adventure which comes nearest to the one on Tuesday night was that of Signor Carlo Brioschi, the Astronomer Royal at Naples, and the Italian aëronaut, Signor Andreani. Trying to rise higher than M. Gay Lussac had done a year or two before, they got into an atmosphere so rarified that the balloon burst. The remnants checked the velocity of the descent; but Brioschi was so injured that it ultimately brought him to his grave.

When I stated, half in joke, a fortnight ago, in the account of a trip in the NASSAU Balloon, written for the ILLUSTRATED NEWS, that, for further excitement, I would next ascend at midnight, with fireworks, without ballast, and the valve closed, I little thought how soon three of these conditions would be realised—the fourth being carried out in an entirely opposite manner. Anxious to see a view of London by night from a great height, I arranged with Mr. Gypson for a seat in his car; and, finding that Mr. Wardell, the proprietor of Vauxhall, had fixed the evening for Tuesday last, I went to the Gardens about eleven o'clock. The night was uncommonly close and sultry, and scarcely a breath of wind was stirring; what there was blew lightly from the S.E.; and the lightning was repeatedly flashing about the skies, preluding the thunder storm with which, our readers may remember, the metropolis was visited on the evening in question.

I found that two gentlemen, besides the owner of the balloon, were to be my companions—Mr. Coxwell and Mr. Pridmore. The balloon itself was a very fine machine—not so large as the NASSAU, but higher, I should conceive, than any of the others used for single ascents. It had lifted seven people from the ground just before I got there, and appeared in every way calculated to make a good ascent

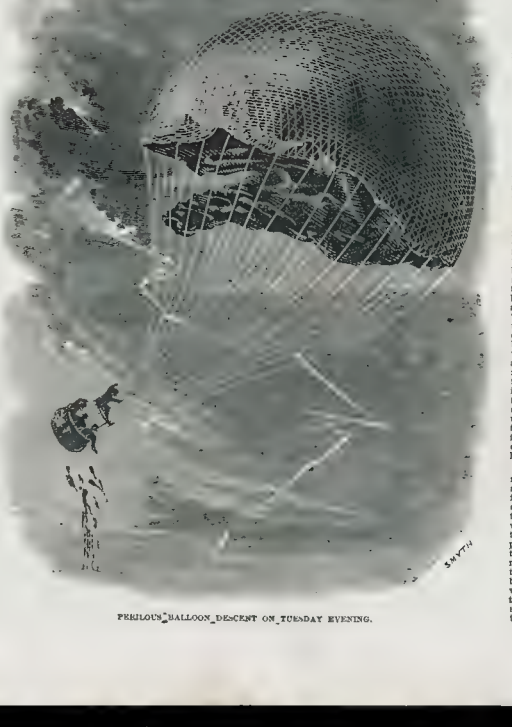
The fireworks—the frame of which resembled a very large skeleton drum—were to be hung some thirty or forty feet below it, and fired from the car by a fuse—a most dangerous method, by the way, as the neck of the balloon is but a few feet overhead. I must confess that the preparations gave me some uneasiness: there was too much confusion—too much noise—too many suggesting and interfering all at once; altogether different to the tranquil and collected manner in which Mr. Green had taken us up a week or two before.

At last, however, everything was pronounced ready to start. We took in some "stores" for the trip, as, had it been quite dark, it was the intention of Mr. Gypson to have remained up all night; and with six or eight bags of sand for ballast, gave the command to "let go." The band played "Off she goes!" the View of Venice was lighted up with blue fire: the people hurrahed, and the balloon rose with extreme velocity, shooting straight up at once, but turning round as it ascended. The first attempt to light the match of the fireworks failed; but it caught readily at the second, and then they began to shoot out cascades of coloured fires, which had a very beautiful effect, and must have looked exceedingly imposing from the Gardens, as they tinged the air round us.

It is impossible to form the feeblest idea of what the appearance of London is, seen by night, from the elevation we had now attained—as nearly as could be judged from the apparent breadth of the river at the bridges, about four thousand feet. In the obscurity all traces of houses or enclosures are lost sight of. I can compare it to nothing else than floating over a dark blue and boundless sea, spangled with hundreds of thousands of stars. These stars were the lamps. We could see them stretching over the river at the bridges, edging its banks, forming squares and long parallel lines of light in the streets, and solitary sparks—further and further apart until they were altogether lost in the suburbs. The effect was too bewildering—too novel and extraordinary to allow any of us even to speak; we could only gaze on them in wrapt and deep attention.

The fireworks had commenced at Vauxhall, and we saw the blaze of light about the gardens very distinctly, as well as the explosions of the rockets; and a flash of lightning now and then illuminated the entire panorama, but too transiently to catch any of its features. Above us the sky was deeply blue, studded with innumerable stars; in fact, above, below, and around, we appeared sailing through a galaxy of twinkling points of light, incalculable and interminable. The impression made on my mind in these few minutes will never be effaced; neither will the scene by which it was so speedily followed.

We were still going up, higher and higher, until the gentlemen assured us we had attained the height of 7000 feet—nearly a mile and a quarter perpendicular—when Mr. Coxwell, who had charge of the valve line, and was sitting on the hoop of the netting above us, informed Mr. Gypson that the balloon was getting very tense, from the extreme rarefaction of the external air at the elevation we had attained. An order was immediately given for him to "ease her," by allowing some of the gas to escape by the top valve. It may be necessary to explain that the top of a balloon is furnished with what is termed a "butterfly valve" a circular double-flap trap, opening downwards by a cord which passes through the interior of the balloon, and closing again with a spring when sufficient gas has escaped, which it readily does by reason of its buoyancy. Mr. Coxwell pulled this line, and immediately afterwards we heard a noise, similar to, but not so loud as, the escape of spare steam in a locomotive; and the lower part of the balloon collapsed rapidly, and appeared to fly up into the upper portion. Mr. Gypson cried out immediately, "Good heavens! what has gone?" to which Mr. Coxwell answered "The valve is gone! we are all dead men!" or words to that effect; and that same instant the balloon began to fall with appalling velocity; the immense mass of loose silk, surging and rustling frightfully over our heads, as it flapped to and fro, like the sail of a ship when tacking, between the network and cords by which our car was slung, retreating up away from us more and more into the head of the balloon.



PERILOUS BALLOON DESCENT ON TUESDAY EVENING.

Two of our party directly gave way to exclamations of extreme terror, in the midst of which the suggestion was made to throw everything over that might ease the balloon. I had two sand bags in my lap which were cast away directly, and Mr. Coxwell lowered himself from the hoop into the car, when we all began to haul about amongst our feet for whatever we could find. There were several bags of ballast, and some bottles of wine or brandy, and these were instantaneously thrown away; but no effect was perceptible. The wind still appeared to be rushing up past us at a fearful rate; and to add to the horror of these few moments, we came amidst the expiring discharge of the fireworks, which floated on the air; so that little bits of exploded cases and touch-paper, still incandescent, attached themselves to the cordage of the balloon, and were blown into sparks. The lightning, which so shortly merged into the storm of Tuesday night, was playing about us uninterruptedly—it had done so during our ascent—and the whole machine soon began to oscillate frightfully. I afterwards gave a rude sketch of our position at this time to one of the gentlemen connected with the artistic department of this paper, and he has reproduced it in a graphic and faithful manner in the accompanying engraving. I presume we must have been at this period upwards of a mile from the earth; but the only way I had of judging, as before stated, was by comparing the boundaries of familiar localities with what I had before seen when up with Mr. Green.

"What were your feelings at this moment?" is a question that I was asked scores of times on Wednesday, by friends who called to hear about the accident; and my readers also may wish to know. After the first start, then, when the valve gave way, I felt collected and tranquil to a degree almost preternatural; but every impression, of the most trivial kind, appeared to be made with tenfold intensity. I have still the appearance of the lights on the earth before my eyes, almost as vividly as when I was looking at them—as though their forms had been so forcibly impressed on the retina that they were retained there. I could see the firework still going on at Vauxhall, and I looked after the river, in a wild hope that we might fall into it, when there would still be the chance of a swim for life. But this, as we shall afterwards see, must have terminated fatally.

How long we were in descending I have not the slightest idea; but two minutes must have been the outside. At one position I threw away an envelope from my pocket, to judge, in a vague manner, of our speed; and the rapidity with which we left it floating behind proved that our velocity was frightful. The parallelograms of light, too, formed by the squares, got visibly larger and larger, like an image in a phantasmagoria; and the oscillation of the balloon did not appear to be so violent, although the car was still swinging. I attribute our preservation alone to the fact of the upper netting of the balloon having kept firm, preserving the empty silk in an unbroken condition, which acted as a parachute. We now saw the houses, the roofs of which appeared advancing to meet us; and the next instant, as we dashed by their summits, the words "Hold hard!" burst simultaneously from all the party. Calculating the distance as closely as possible, as the car took the ground on a slant, I caught hold of the hoop, and jumped towards it, thus breaking the first shock, which, it need scarcely be said, was very violent.

We were all directly thrown out of the car, along the ground, and amidst the cords — and silk of the balloon, part of which, I think, had caught upon a scaffold pole; but it appeared to be entirely emptied of its gas. We were so entangled in the netting, having got our arms, heads, and legs into the meshes, that at first we could not move; and I then saw that a fall in the Thames would have ended in certain death. There was a large crowd of spectators immediately about us, and they assisted us out of our embarrassment, testifying in a very hearty and impulsive manner, their joy at our extraordinary escape. For, incomprehensible as it now appears to me, nobody was seriously hurt. Torn clothes, scratched hats, and a few grazes and bruises, were all the evils that resulted from a descent of a mile, without gas! We found we were in one of the new streets—a very small thoroughfare—between the Vauxhall and Belgrave roads, and not above a mile from the Gardens, if so much. As my brother and a great number of friends were still there, I was anxious to get back before any other account of the occurrence reached them, and my first step was to procure a cab, and to get them in packing up the balloon, I availed myself of a cab, kindly placed at my disposal by a gentleman who drove up at the moment, and drove quickly back to Vauxhall, where I met a friend at the gate in great alarm, from having heard that the balloon had fallen, and that we were (of course) all dashed to pieces. Mr. Gypson and the other gentlemen soon after arrived, with the balloon; and the cheering that greeted the return of the party (then providentially united) was far more hearty than that which had accompanied the ascent.

And now a few words in conclusion to aferonauts in general, as well as the proprietors of al fresco places of entertainment. I hope that to see more night ascents will be permitted. Nothing is gained by them. If the great attraction is the view of the fireworks in the air, they could be sent up by themselves, with a pilot balloon, and present an equally brilliant and far safer spectacle. I am satisfied that they will be persisted in, some frightful accident, and succeeding inquest, will certainly stop them, by authority.

The question put to us by Mr. Wardell, just before the ascent, which was, "Gentlemen, do you go up by your own free will, and have you confidence in the aëronautical skill of your conductors?" was answered in the affirmative. I have been but slight—was apprehended. I speak perfectly disinterestedly. The accounts hitherto furnished of the night ascents have usually been given by the aëronauts themselves to the reporters; and, therefore, the real risk of the venture has never been made known.

And I would recommend Mr. Gypson to have his balloon thoroughly examined by competent persons before he attempts another ascent. He stated, on his return, that the state of the atmosphere affecting the gas, produced much unforeseen inconvenience; but something must have been mechanically wrong in the arrangement of the valve, or the mere pulling of the line would not have led to a catastrophe so nearly terminating in the loss of four lives.

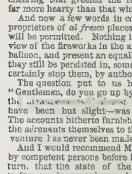
ALBERT SMITH.

Since the above was written, Mr. Coxwell has published an excellent statement of the manner in which the accident occurred. He says that the balloon burst before the valve-line was touched, the valve being found unmoved upon subsequently examining the balloon; and it is also ascertained that he remained on the hoop until the descent, in entire accordance with the above; the first impression of all the parties being that the valve itself had gone.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

THE EARL OF LANESBOROUGH.

BRINSLEY BUTLER, fourth Earl of Lanesborough, died recently, at Brislington, near Bristol. His Lordship was only surviving son of Robert Hobart, third Earl, by Elizabeth, his wife, eldest daughter of the Right Hon. David La Touche, and grandson of Brinsley, second Earl of Lanesborough, by Jane, daughter of Robert, first Earl of Belvedere. The deceased peer was born 22nd October, 1788, and, consequently, completed his 64th year. Never having married he is succeeded in his honours and estates by his cousin George John Danvers Butler



Danvers, Esq., of Surthland Hall, Leicestershire, now fifth Earl of Lanesborough, who is elder son of the late Honourable Augustus Richard Butler, by Elizabeth, his first wife, daughter and heir of Sir John Danvers, Bart. The new peer was born in Dublin, 29th May, 1816, Frances Arabella, third daughter of the late Colonel Stephen Fremantle.

The noble house of Lanesborough was founded by Sir Stephen Butler, who, also settled in Ireland, temp. James I. He was one of the undertakers for the plantation of the province of Ulster; and, having obtained a grant of two thousand acres of land in the county of Cavan, erected a baronial castle of great strength there. Sir Stephen and his co-undertakers of the precinct of Loghtee commenced, according to their agreement, the plantation of a town, or Belturbet; and, in the first three, thirty-five houses were erected, all inhabited by British tenants, most of whom were tradesmen, each having a house and garden-plot, with four acres of land, and commons for a certain number of cattle.

GENERAL SIR FITZROY MACLEAN, BART.

THIS gallant officer, a General in the Army, and Colonel of the 45th Regiment of Foot, died on the 5th instant, at his residence in Cadogan-place.

Sir Fitzroy succeeded to the Baronetcy and the Chieftainship of the Macleans at the decease, in 1818, of his elder brother, Sir Hector Maclean. He was twice married: first, to Mrs. Bisbee, relict of J. Bishop, Esq., of Barbadoes; and, secondly, to Frances, widow of Henry Campion, Esq., of Malling Deanery, Sussex. By the former he had two sons, Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Fitzroy

Maclean, the present Baronet of Morvaren; and Donald, of the Chancery Bar, late M.P. for Oxford. Sir Fitzroy was a full General, and wore a medal for his services at Gundalupe.

The family, of which he was the representative, claimed remote antiquity. Gaelic Antiquaries assert that its surname was originally Mac Gillian, and that it was derived from the celebrated Highland warrior Gillan, who was denominated Gillian-ni-Tuoidh, from his ordinary weapon, a battle axe, which some of his descendants wear to this day in their crest, betwixt a laurel and cypress branch.

TWO STEAMERS ASHORE.

— On Sunday morning, at a quarter past two, the Sea-King, on voyage from Liverpool to Belfast, and the Athlone, Dublin to Belfast, struck on Copeland Island, lying on the direct route between the entrance ing Belfast Lough, and immediately outside the outer Copeland Isle, on which the Light-house is erected. The passengers left the sea-King at about six o'clock, in boats which came from Donaghadee, to which place one of the officers of the steamer went in one of the ship's boats as soon after the accident as the fog (which had been great for some hours) subsided. Almost immediately after the last boat left the Sea-King, she fell over a few points, with a frightful crash. The Athlone was also then lying on her side seaward, showing her wheel a dozen feet above the water, and her starboard side, when she righted, and was backed off without apparent damage.

THE CASE OF RICHARD DUNN.—It will be recollected that the defendant, some time ago, moved for an arrest of judgment, and the only question at issue related to the power of the Court of Bankruptcy to grant a certificate in the case of death, and whether, on some other technical grounds, an act of bankruptcy had actually committed. On Wednesday, the Court of QUEEN'S BENCH gave decision to the effect that the 1 and 2 Victoria, c. 110, was a statute relating to bankruptcy, under which the affidavit was sworn, and that bankruptcy, consisting of the failure of the debtor to satisfy or compound for the debt sworn to in the affidavit within 21 days after service thereof. The affidavit had been sworn before a competent authority, and it was properly described in the indictment upon which the defendant had been convicted; therefore, the rule nisi, which had been granted to arrest the judgment, must be discharged.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—Since Monday the arrivals of English wheat for our market have been on a very limited scale, and the show of samples here to-day was small. Although the attendance of factors and buyers was fully equal to that of last week, there was a very dull feeling on the factors, and, to some few instances, the best qualities of white wheat sold at a trifling improvement; but for the most part the demand was confined to retail purchases, and was trifling. From abroad, 16 320 quarters of wheat have come to hand this week. On the whole there was rather more doing in the middling and inferior qualities, and no actual advance in the quotations. We had a very limited quantity of barley on offer, yet the sale was heavy, at the late depression in value. In malt, next to nothing was doing, yet the few lots that would not sell except at full prices. Beans, peas, Indian corn, and flour the same as of which were good—very dull.

ARRIVALS.—English wheat, 10,840 quarters; barley, 3260; oats, 290 quarters; beans, 1120; barley, ——; oats, ——. Foreign wheat, 16,320; barley 1080; oats, 6800. Flour, 2110 sacks and 12,200 barrels; Indian meal, 500 quarters.

English.—Wheat, barley, and beans, full prices. Oats, 6d to 12d; ditto, white, 12s to 20s; Norfolk and Suffolk, ——s to 22s; ditto, white, 22s to 26s; Chevalier, 23s to 26s. Yorkshire and Lincolnshire ditto, 21s to 24s; ditto, white, 24s to 28s; Scotch and Cork, 20s to ——.

Wheat, ——s to ——s per quarter. Barley, ——s to ——s; grey peas, 50s to 52s; maple, 54s to 56s; white, ——s to ——s; boilers, 52s to 54s per quarter. Town-made flour, 50s to 52s; Suffolk, 48s to 49s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 45s to 46s, per 280 lbs. Foreign.—Dantzig, red wheat, —— to ——; white, —— to ——. Barley, —— to ——. Oats, —— to ——. Beans, —— to —— peas, —— to —— per quarter. Flour, American, 34s to 36s; Baltic, —— to —— per barrel.

The Seed Market.—So little business is doing in the market generally, that last week quotations are nominally unchanged.

Linseed, baglish, sowing, 56s to 60s; Baltic, crushing, 49s to 52s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 46s to 48s. Hempseed, 34s to 36s per quarter. Rapeseed, from 36s to 37s per cwt. Brown Mustard-seed, 8s to 10s; white ditto, 6s to 10s. Tares, 5s 6d to 6s 6d per bushel. English Rapeseed, new, £21 to £23 per last of 10 quarters. Linseed cakes, English, £13 5s to £14; ditto, foreign, £8 10s to £10 per 1000; Rapeseed cakes, £7 10s to £9 0s per ton. Canary, 60s to 64s, per quarter. Hempseed, 36s to 38s per quarter. Coriander, 14s to ——s; white, —— to ——s; extra, 15s to ——s. Foreign, red, —— to —— extra, —— white, —— to —— extra, —— per cwt.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread, in the metropolis, are from 10d to 10½d; of household ditto, 8½d to 9½d per 4lb. loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 57s 1d; barley, 31s 11d, oats, 22s 10d; rye, ——; beans, 34s 6d; peas, 36s 1d.

The Six Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 58s 6d; barley, 33s 4d; oats, 24s 4d; rye, 70s; beans, 37s 1d; peas, 38s 0d.

Tea.—There has been a fair average amount of business doing in this article, at full but at nothing quotable beyond last week's prices. The stock in London is now about 37,000,000 lbs., against 36,000,000 lbs at the same time last year.

Sugar.—All kinds of raw sugar are in improved request, at late rates, but refined goods are heavy, inasmuch as 2,000 tons of foreign have been taken for home consumption this week.

Coffee.—Most qualities, though in good supply, command a fair demand, and last week's figures are with rapidity obtained.

Rice.—There is more passing in this market; but we can report no improvement in value.

Provisions.—The arrivals of Irish butter having been somewhat exhaustive this week, the demand has been steady, at full prices. Fine Cork, Limerick, and Waterford, and Kilkenny, 84s to 86s; fine Cork and Waterford, 88s to 92s; and Limerick, 85s to 91s per cwt. Foreign butter has improved in value 2s per cwt. Fine Friesland and Holstein, is selling at 82s to 84s; good and middling, 78s to 80s per cwt. English butter—the supply of which is good—has fallen from 1s to 2s per cwt. Fine, 90s to 94s; middling fine, 86s to 88s; fine Devon, 90s to 96s per cwt. fresh, 8d to 12s per dozen lbs. Large prices are known being pressed for sale, the rise per cwt. Prime American Waterford pork may be quoted at 75s to 80s; and America, 58s to 65s per cwt. Prime bladdered lard is scarce, and quotations have advanced 2s per cwt. Other kinds of pork and lard are without alteration. Bacon is in moderate request, at late rates without difficulty.

Wool.—Privately, there is more business doing, yet prices have not improved.

Potatoes.—The supply of new potatoes is very extensive, and of excellent quality. Prices range from 8s to 16s per cwt.

Hops (Friday).—Notwithstanding several unfavourable accounts respecting the appearance of the growing bine have been received from this neighbourhood, from Kent and Sussex, our market continues in a very inactive state for all kinds of hops, at barely last week's quotations, which, though we do not like to report them, are by no means supported. A few bags have been laid that the duty will not exceed £140,000.

Sussex weald, 3l 5s to 4l 5s; Wealds of Kent, 4l 10s to 5l 5s; Mid and East Kent ditto, 5l 15s to 7l 7s per cwt.

Coals (Friday).—Adair's, 15s 3d; Lambton, 16s 6d; Stewart's, 16s; Haswell, 16s 3d; Killingworth, 15s 9d per ton.

Smithfield (Friday).—The supply of beasts brought forward here this morning was tolerably large for the season of the year, and the demand for them was by no means active, at a somewhat lower rate of money than on this day se'nnight. Prime Scots, Shorthorns, and crosses, were in moderate request, at full prices; but other breeds were in very slow request. In sheep a middling business was done, at rather lower prices than last week. In calves, pigs, and lambs, the trade was in a very sluggish state, at barely last week's quotations.

Supplies:—Beasts, 2,600; sheep, 12,200; calves, 140; pigs, 270.

Prices per stone of 8lbs. (sinking the offal)—Inferior beasts, 3s 4d to 3s 8d; second quality ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 4d; prime large oxen, 4s 6d to 4s 8d, prime Scots, &c., 4s 10d to 5s 0d; coarse and inferior sheep, 4s 2d to 4s 4d; second quality ditto, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; prime coarse-woolled ditto, 4s 10d to 5s 0d; prime Southdown ditto, 5s 4d to 5s 6d; large coarse calves, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; prime small ditto, 4s 8d to 5s 0d; large hogs, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; neat small porkers, 4s 0d to 4s 2d. Lambs, 5s 0d to 6s 0d per quarter. Suckling calves, from 20s to 28s; milch cows and pigs, 18s to 21s each. Beasts, 941; sheep, 141; sheep and lambs, 13,820; calves, 610; pigs, 320.

Newgate and Leadenhall Markets (Friday).—The supplies of meat being under to-day's average, and the general demand was by no means active on the following terms:—

Per lb. by the carcase.—Inferior beef, 3s 6d to 4s 0d; middling ditto, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; prime large ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; prime small ditto 4s 2d to 4s 4d; large pork, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; middling ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; prime ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 4d; veal — 10d to 4s 10d; small pork, 4s 6d to 4s 10d; lamb, 1s 10d to 2s 6d. ROBT. HERBERT.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

Considerable difference of opinion exists as to the prospects of the Foreign Exchanges during the next month. Many capitalists expected the week very trifling, but the opening of a policy at Lloyd's for about £6,00,000, has drawn public attention again to the question. There can be little doubt that the large importations of bullion and daily demand have tended to improve the exportation of gold, particularly with the price of cotton, so enhanced as to make its cost, when manufactured, too high for sale in foreign markets. Again, the Stock has been taken off to a large extent in this market than in the continental markets, and this especially relates to Paris. The contrary was the fact during the late exportation of gold: consequently the Exchanges have settled in favour of London, restoring the equilibrium of the exchanges. But, in the present case, the result is precisely contrary. The Paris exchange has been gradually receding for several post days, and this also applies to Holland, Hamburgh, and America. But if this be the case the Bank of England is daily improving. A great proportion of the Eight Million Loan is paid up, and never was there a greater quantity of corn in the harvest. A slight drain of gold, therefore, could be met without any important disturbance of the issues. The present limited demands for trade, in consequence of the late pressure, and the additional means given by a cheap money, will, after such circumstances, it can be merely considered as a postponement of the reaction, which had already shown some symptoms of commencing too rapidly for safety. Better had it by happened until the harvest is secured, than commenced before the yield of the harvest is known. That information once obtained, a guide is afforded to all classes of traders. At present, under the most favourable appearances, all speculative transactions must be undertaken either in hope or on almost groundless calculation.

The English Funds opened on Monday at a slight improvement in the closing prices of the preceding week. The first price was 88¾, and 89¾ was the highest prices marked, arising from the fine weather, and a fall in the Corn Market. Tuesday was the first transfer day in Consols, but the business transacted was very limited. The prices varied from 89 to 89¼, closing at 89, sellers. Dulness and absence of business were the prevailing features of Wednesday's market, the price not varying during the day. On Thursday, a slight depression followed this dulness. Consols marking 88¾ at the close of the day, notwithstanding that it was the first day of the payment of the July dividends. Exchequer Bills have not varied materially, but have been quoted at a slight advance on the present week. Long annuities to exist little inclination on the part of the public to invest at existing prices, and for security Exchequer Bills in offering such a superior rate of interest at the present moment is a good premium for preference. The closing prices are, for Bank Stock, 196½; Three per Cent. Reduced, 89½; Consols, 89¾; Three per Cent, Annuities, ——87¾; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent., 91; Long Annuities, 1856, 15 3-16; Bank Stock, ex. div., 194; India Stock, New Annuities, ex. div., 187½, Consols for Opening, July 16, 88⅝; Three per Cent. Consols, Scrip, ¼ pm.; Exchequer Bills, large, 13 pm., 16 pm., Small, 20 pm.

The news from Portugal of the termination of the war, had no effect on Portuguese stock, and Lord Palmerston's brilliant speech failed in advancing spanish beyond its turn. The almost general London and South-Western, and Dover, arrival of its odd inducements seen probable. The public have had a surfeit of foreign loans and prefer speculating in our own railways—certainly a more patriotic field. The closing prices are as under:—Caledonian, 21¼; Ditto, York Extension, 1846, Preference, 96; Great Northern, 43 x int., Ditto, London and York Extension, 2 x int.; Great North of England, New, £30, 70; Great Western, 120; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 39½; Ditto, Bristol and Exeter, 74; Lancaster and Carlisle, 66; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 55½; London and North-Western, Quarters, L. and B., 98; Ditto ditto, New Shares, 13; Ditto Ditto, 17¼; Ditto, £40 Shares, M. and S., 70; London and South-Western, 68; Ditto, New Preference, 96; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 39; Ditto, Extension, 10; Ditto, Shares, 46¼; Newcastle and Berwick, 29; Newcastle and Berwick, New, 73; Norwich, 12½; Ditto, New, 8½; Ditto, Extension, 10½; North British, 33; North British, Half Shares, 15½; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 6¾; Ditto, Thirds, 5¾; North Staffordshire, 10¾; Preston and Wyre, Half Shares (A.), 19¾; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 51; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, 31; Shropshire Union, 24½; South Devon, 3; South Staffordshire, 5 dis.; South Eastern and Dover, 37¼; Ditto, New (3, No. 4, 4¼; South Yorkshire, Doncaster, and Goole, 14; Waterford and Kilkenny, 6; West Riding Union, 3 pm.; Windsor, Staines, and South Western, 24 pm., Whits, Somerset, and Weymouth, 10¾ x 1¼; York and Newcastle Preference, 8; York and North Midland, 89; Ditto, Preference, 18; Ditto, Extension, 6; Ditto, Leeds and Bradford, 140; Ditto, Leeds and Thirsk, 75; Ditto, Malton and Driffield, 45; Ditto, Scarborough and Whitby, 15; Ditto, Shares, 4; Ditto, Preference, 4; Ditto, Thirds, 2; Ditto, Extension, 1; Ditto, Fifths, 1; Ditto, Eighths, ½; Ditto, Tenths, ¼; Ditto, Twentieths, ⅛; Ditto, Fortieths, 1-16; Ditto, Eighteenths, 1-32; Ditto, Thirty-sixths, 1-64; Ditto, Seventy-seconds, 1-128; Ditto, Hundred and Forty-fourths, 1-256; Ditto, Two Hundred and Eighty-eighths, 1-512; Ditto, Five Hundred and Seventy-sixths, 1-1024; Ditto, One Thousand One Hundred and Fifty-second, 1-2048; Ditto, Two Thousand Three Hundred and Four-fifths, 1-4096; Ditto, Four Thousand Six Hundred and Eighth, 1-8192; Ditto, Nine Thousand Two Hundred and Sixteenths, 1-16384; Ditto, Eighteen Thousand Four Hundred and Thirty-seconds, 1-32768; Ditto, Thirty-six Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-fourths, 1-65536; Ditto, Seventy-three Thousand Seven Hundred and Twenty-eighths, 1-131072; Ditto, One Hundred and Forty-seven Thousand Four Hundred and Fifty-sixths, 1-262144; Ditto, Two Hundred and Ninety-four Thousand Nine Hundred and Twelfths, 1-524288; Ditto, Five Hundred and Eighty-nine Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-fourths, 1-1048576; Ditto, One Million One Hundred and Seventy-nine Thousand Six Hundred and Forty-eighths, 1-2097152; Ditto, Two Million Three Hundred and Fifty-nine Thousand Three Hundred and Ninety-sixths, 1-4194304; Ditto, Four Million Seven Hundred and Eighteen Thousand Six Hundred and Seventy-seconds, 1-8388608; Ditto, Nine Million Four Hundred and Thirty-seven Thousand Three Hundred and Forty-fourths, 1-16777216; Ditto, Eighteen Million Eight Hundred and Seventy-four Thousand Six Hundred and Eighty-eighths, 1-33554432; Ditto, Thirty-seven Million Seven Hundred and Forty-nine Thousand Three Hundred and Seventy-sixths, 1-67108864; Ditto, Seventy-five Million Four Hundred and Ninety-eight Thousand Six Hundred and Fifty-second, 1-134217728; Ditto, One Hundred and Fifty Million Nine Hundred and Ninety-seven Thousand Three Hundred and Four-fifths, 1-268435456; Ditto, Three Hundred Million Nine Hundred and Seventy-four Thousand Six Hundred and Eighth, 1-536870912; Ditto, Five Hundred and Eighty-nine Million Eight Hundred and Twenty-fourths, 1-1073741824; Ditto, One Billion One Hundred and Seventy-nine Million Six Hundred and Forty-eighths, 1-2147483648; Ditto, Two Billion Three Hundred and Fifty-nine Million Three Hundred and Ninety-sixths, 1-4294967296; Ditto, Four Billion Seven Hundred and Eighteen Million Six Hundred and Seventy-seconds, 1-8589934592; Ditto, Nine Billion Four Hundred and Thirty-seven Million Three Hundred and Forty-fourths, 1-17179869184; Ditto, Eighteen Billion Eight Hundred and Seventy-four Million Six Hundred and Eighty-eighths, 1-34359738368; Ditto, Thirty-seven Billion Seven Hundred and Forty-nine Million Three Hundred and Seventy-sixths, 1-68719476736; Ditto, Seventy-five Billion Four Hundred and Ninety-eight Million Six Hundred and Fifty-second, 1-137438953472; Ditto, One Hundred and Fifty Billion Nine Hundred and Ninety-seven Million Three Hundred and Four-fifths, 1-274877906944; Ditto, Three Hundred Billion Nine Hundred and Seventy-four Million Six Hundred and Eighth, 1-549755813888; Ditto, Five Hundred and Eighty-nine Billion Eight Hundred and Twenty-fourths, 1-1099511627776; Ditto, One Billion One Hundred and Seventy-nine Billion Six Hundred and Forty-eighths, 1-2199023255552; Ditto, Two Billion Three Hundred and Fifty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Ninety-sixths, 1-4398046511104; Ditto, Four Billion Seven Hundred and Eighteen Billion Six Hundred and Seventy-seconds, 1-8796093022208; Ditto, Nine Billion Four Hundred and Thirty-seven Billion Three Hundred and Forty-fourths, 1-17592186044416; Ditto, Eighteen Billion Eight Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighty-eighths, 1-35184372088832; Ditto, Thirty-seven Billion Seven Hundred and Forty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Seventy-sixths, 1-70368744177664; Ditto, Seventy-five Billion Four Hundred and Ninety-eight Billion Six Hundred and Fifty-second, 1-140737488355328; Ditto, One Hundred and Fifty Billion Nine Hundred and Ninety-seven Billion Three Hundred and Four-fifths, 1-281474976710656; Ditto, Three Hundred Billion Nine Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighth, 1-562949953421312; Ditto, Five Hundred and Eighty-nine Billion Eight Hundred and Twenty-fourths, 1-1125899906842624; Ditto, One Billion One Hundred and Seventy-nine Billion Six Hundred and Forty-eighths, 1-2251799813685248; Ditto, Two Billion Three Hundred and Fifty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Ninety-sixths, 1-4503599627370496; Ditto, Four Billion Seven Hundred and Eighteen Billion Six Hundred and Seventy-seconds, 1-9007199254740992; Ditto, Nine Billion Four Hundred and Thirty-seven Billion Three Hundred and Forty-fourths, 1-18014398509481984; Ditto, Eighteen Billion Eight Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighty-eighths, 1-36028797018963968; Ditto, Thirty-seven Billion Seven Hundred and Forty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Seventy-sixths, 1-72057594037927936; Ditto, Seventy-five Billion Four Hundred and Ninety-eight Billion Six Hundred and Fifty-second, 1-144115188075855872; Ditto, One Hundred and Fifty Billion Nine Hundred and Ninety-seven Billion Three Hundred and Four-fifths, 1-288230376151711744; Ditto, Three Hundred Billion Nine Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighth, 1-576460752303423488; Ditto, Five Hundred and Eighty-nine Billion Eight Hundred and Twenty-fourths, 1-1152921504606846976; Ditto, One Billion One Hundred and Seventy-nine Billion Six Hundred and Forty-eighths, 1-2305843009213693952; Ditto, Two Billion Three Hundred and Fifty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Ninety-sixths, 1-4611686018427387904; Ditto, Four Billion Seven Hundred and Eighteen Billion Six Hundred and Seventy-seconds, 1-9223372036854775808; Ditto, Nine Billion Four Hundred and Thirty-seven Billion Three Hundred and Forty-fourths, 1-18446744073709551616; Ditto, Eighteen Billion Eight Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighty-eighths, 1-36893488147419103232; Ditto, Thirty-seven Billion Seven Hundred and Forty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Seventy-sixths, 1-73786976294838206464; Ditto, Seventy-five Billion Four Hundred and Ninety-eight Billion Six Hundred and Fifty-second, 1-147573952589676412928; Ditto, One Hundred and Fifty Billion Nine Hundred and Ninety-seven Billion Three Hundred and Four-fifths, 1-295147905179352825856; Ditto, Three Hundred Billion Nine Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighth, 1-590295810358705651712; Ditto, Five Hundred and Eighty-nine Billion Eight Hundred and Twenty-fourths, 1-1180591620717411303424; Ditto, One Billion One Hundred and Seventy-nine Billion Six Hundred and Forty-eighths, 1-2361183241434822606848; Ditto, Two Billion Three Hundred and Fifty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Ninety-sixths, 1-4722366482869645213696; Ditto, Four Billion Seven Hundred and Eighteen Billion Six Hundred and Seventy-seconds, 1-9444732965739290427392; Ditto, Nine Billion Four Hundred and Thirty-seven Billion Three Hundred and Forty-fourths, 1-18889465931478580854784; Ditto, Eighteen Billion Eight Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighty-eighths, 1-37778931862957161709568; Ditto, Thirty-seven Billion Seven Hundred and Forty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Seventy-sixths, 1-75557863725914323419136; Ditto, Seventy-five Billion Four Hundred and Ninety-eight Billion Six Hundred and Fifty-second, 1-151115727451828646838272; Ditto, One Hundred and Fifty Billion Nine Hundred and Ninety-seven Billion Three Hundred and Four-fifths, 1-302231454903657293676544; Ditto, Three Hundred Billion Nine Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighth, 1-604462909807314587353088; Ditto, Five Hundred and Eighty-nine Billion Eight Hundred and Twenty-fourths, 1-1208925819614629174706176; Ditto, One Billion One Hundred and Seventy-nine Billion Six Hundred and Forty-eighths, 1-2417851639229258349412352; Ditto, Two Billion Three Hundred and Fifty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Ninety-sixths, 1-4835703278458516698824704; Ditto, Four Billion Seven Hundred and Eighteen Billion Six Hundred and Seventy-seconds, 1-9671406556917033397649408; Ditto, Nine Billion Four Hundred and Thirty-seven Billion Three Hundred and Forty-fourths, 1-19342813113834066795298816; Ditto, Eighteen Billion Eight Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighty-eighths, 1-38685626227668133590597632; Ditto, Thirty-seven Billion Seven Hundred and Forty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Seventy-sixths, 1-77371252455336267181195264; Ditto, Seventy-five Billion Four Hundred and Ninety-eight Billion Six Hundred and Fifty-second, 1-154742504910672534362390528; Ditto, One Hundred and Fifty Billion Nine Hundred and Ninety-seven Billion Three Hundred and Four-fifths, 1-309485009821345068724781056; Ditto, Three Hundred Billion Nine Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighth, 1-618970019642690137449562112; Ditto, Five Hundred and Eighty-nine Billion Eight Hundred and Twenty-fourths, 1-1237940039285380274899124224; Ditto, One Billion One Hundred and Seventy-nine Billion Six Hundred and Forty-eighths, 1-2475880078570760549798248448; Ditto, Two Billion Three Hundred and Fifty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Ninety-sixths, 1-4951760157141521099596496896; Ditto, Four Billion Seven Hundred and Eighteen Billion Six Hundred and Seventy-seconds, 1-9903520314283042199192993792; Ditto, Nine Billion Four Hundred and Thirty-seven Billion Three Hundred and Forty-fourths, 1-19807040628566084398385987584; Ditto, Eighteen Billion Eight Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighty-eighths, 1-39614081257132168796771975168; Ditto, Thirty-seven Billion Seven Hundred and Forty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Seventy-sixths, 1-79228162514264337593543950336; Ditto, Seventy-five Billion Four Hundred and Ninety-eight Billion Six Hundred and Fifty-second, 1-158456325028528675187087900672; Ditto, One Hundred and Fifty Billion Nine Hundred and Ninety-seven Billion Three Hundred and Four-fifths, 1-316912650057057350374175801344; Ditto, Three Hundred Billion Nine Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighth, 1-633825300114114700748351602688; Ditto, Five Hundred and Eighty-nine Billion Eight Hundred and Twenty-fourths, 1-1267650600228229401496703205376; Ditto, One Billion One Hundred and Seventy-nine Billion Six Hundred and Forty-eighths, 1-2535301200456458802993406410752; Ditto, Two Billion Three Hundred and Fifty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Ninety-sixths, 1-5070602400912917605986812821504; Ditto, Four Billion Seven Hundred and Eighteen Billion Six Hundred and Seventy-seconds, 1-10141204801825835211973625643008; Ditto, Nine Billion Four Hundred and Thirty-seven Billion Three Hundred and Forty-fourths, 1-20282409603651670423947251286016; Ditto, Eighteen Billion Eight Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighty-eighths, 1-40564819207303341847894502572032; Ditto, Thirty-seven Billion Seven Hundred and Forty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Seventy-sixths, 1-81129638414606683695789005144064; Ditto, Seventy-five Billion Four Hundred and Ninety-eight Billion Six Hundred and Fifty-second, 1-162259276829213363391578010288128; Ditto, One Hundred and Fifty Billion Nine Hundred and Ninety-seven Billion Three Hundred and Four-fifths, 1-324518553658426726783156020576256; Ditto, Three Hundred Billion Nine Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighth, 1-649037107316853453566312041152512; Ditto, Five Hundred and Eighty-nine Billion Eight Hundred and Twenty-fourths, 1-1298074214633706907132624082305024; Ditto, One Billion One Hundred and Seventy-nine Billion Six Hundred and Forty-eighths, 1-2596148429267413814265248164610048; Ditto, Two Billion Three Hundred and Fifty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Ninety-sixths, 1-5192296858534827628530496329220096; Ditto, Four Billion Seven Hundred and Eighteen Billion Six Hundred and Seventy-seconds, 1-10384593717069655257060992658440192; Ditto, Nine Billion Four Hundred and Thirty-seven Billion Three Hundred and Forty-fourths, 1-20769187434139310514121985316880384; Ditto, Eighteen Billion Eight Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighty-eighths, 1-41538374868278621028243970633760768; Ditto, Thirty-seven Billion Seven Hundred and Forty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Seventy-sixths, 1-83076749736557242056487941267521536; Ditto, Seventy-five Billion Four Hundred and Ninety-eight Billion Six Hundred and Fifty-second, 1-166153499473114484112975882535043072; Ditto, One Hundred and Fifty Billion Nine Hundred and Ninety-seven Billion Three Hundred and Four-fifths, 1-332306998946228968225951765070086144; Ditto, Three Hundred Billion Nine Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighth, 1-664613997892457936451903530140172288; Ditto, Five Hundred and Eighty-nine Billion Eight Hundred and Twenty-fourths, 1-1329227995784915872903807060280344576; Ditto, One Billion One Hundred and Seventy-nine Billion Six Hundred and Forty-eighths, 1-2658455991569831745807614120560689152; Ditto, Two Billion Three Hundred and Fifty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Ninety-sixths, 1-5316911983139663491615228240721378304; Ditto, Four Billion Seven Hundred and Eighteen Billion Six Hundred and Seventy-seconds, 1-10633823966279326983230456482942756608; Ditto, Nine Billion Four Hundred and Thirty-seven Billion Three Hundred and Forty-fourths, 1-21267647932558653966460912964485513216; Ditto, Eighteen Billion Eight Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighty-eighths, 1-42535295865117307932921825928971026432; Ditto, Thirty-seven Billion Seven Hundred and Forty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Seventy-sixths, 1-85070591730234615865843651857942052864; Ditto, Seventy-five Billion Four Hundred and Ninety-eight Billion Six Hundred and Fifty-second, 1-170141183460469231731687303715884105728; Ditto, One Hundred and Fifty Billion Nine Hundred and Ninety-seven Billion Three Hundred and Four-fifths, 1-340282366920938463463374607431768211456; Ditto, Three Hundred Billion Nine Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighth, 1-680564733841876926926749214863536422912; Ditto, Five Hundred and Eighty-nine Billion Eight Hundred and Twenty-fourths, 1-1361129467683753853853498429727072845824; Ditto, One Billion One Hundred and Seventy-nine Billion Six Hundred and Forty-eighths, 1-2722258935367507707706996859454145691648; Ditto, Two Billion Three Hundred and Fifty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Ninety-sixths, 1-5444517870735015415413993718908291383296; Ditto, Four Billion Seven Hundred and Eighteen Billion Six Hundred and Seventy-seconds, 1-10889035741470030830827987437816582766592; Ditto, Nine Billion Four Hundred and Thirty-seven Billion Three Hundred and Forty-fourths, 1-21778071482940061661655974875633165533184; Ditto, Eighteen Billion Eight Hundred and Seventy-four Billion Six Hundred and Eighty-eighths, 1-43556142965880123323311949751266331066368; Ditto, Thirty-seven Billion Seven Hundred and Forty-nine Billion Three Hundred and Seventy-sixths, 1-87112285931760246646623899502532662132736; Ditto, Seventy-five Billion Four Hundred and Ninety-eight Billion Six Hundred and Fifty-second, 1-174224571863

HIMALAYA MOUNTAINS. — JUST OPENED, at the PANORAMA ROYAL, LEICESTER-SQUARE: a VIEW of the HIMALAYA MOUNTAINS, with the British Stations of Kussowlee, Sunjauoo, and Simla, and a vast extent of the plains of Hindostan, forming the most magnificent scenery in the world. The VIEWS at CAIRO, from Drawings taken by David Roberts, Esq., R.A., and of the CASTLES, CITY, ATHENS are also now open.

ARTICLED PUPIL.—WANTED, after the Young Ladies only are received, an ARTICLED PUPIL of thirteen or fourteen years who will be treated in every respect as the other pupils, and have instruction in Music Drawing, Dancing, French from a resident French Governess, Italian, Use of the Globes, and the various branches of a liberal English education. Address to C. M., at the Library, [illegible] London. Address an Instru[illegible]

AMBERGATE, NOTTINGHAM, BOSTON, AND EASTERN JUNCTION R[illegible]

In pursuance of a Resolution passed at a Meeting of [illegible] the Court of Directors, held on the [illegible] 1847, Robert Badger, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, of Cambridge-terrace, Hyde [illegible] chair, the Court of the Company will hereby convene a Meeting of the Shareholders, to be held at the [illegible] on Tuesday, the 13th July, 1847, at the hour of Eleven in the forenoon precisely. One o'Clock precisely, in order to determine what measures shall be adopted with regard to the Act of Parliament [illegible] to the next Half-yearly Meeting.

By Order of the Board, [illegible] Secretary.

[illegible] Joseph Davis, Esq., Secretary to the Stock Exchange of Liverpool, Manchester, Leeds, and Hull.

Committee Room, George and Vulture, George-yard, Lombard-street, London, July 7, 1847.

UNDER THE ESPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

THE ROYAL NAVAL, MILITARY, EAST INDIA, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY,
13, WATERLOO PLACE, LONDON

CHAIRMAN.—Colonel Sir Frederic Smith, K.H., R.E.
DEPUTY CHAIRMAN.—Major-Gen. Sir William Gossett, G.B., K.C.H., R.E.
Admiral the Right Hon. Sir G. Cockburn, G.C.B. Lieut.-Gen. Sir Richard England, K.C.B.
G.C.H., M.P. Lieut.-Col. H. Hammer, K.H., late R.H.G.
Major-Gen. J. Cockburn, R. C.H. Lieut.-Col. Parsham, R.C.H.
General Sir Thomas Bradford, G.C.B., G.C.H. Lieut.-Col. Matson, R.E.
Major-Gen. Sir Rose, H.C.B., K.C.H. Major Crackwell Clarke, K.H., F.R.S.
Lieut.-Gen. Sir John Gardiner, K.C.B. Archibald Hew, Esq., M.D., late R.H.G.
Major-Gen. Sir Richard Armstrong, K.C.B., K.H., K.A. Captain William Lamey, R.E.
Major-Gen. Sir George Buck, K.H. William Chard, Esq., Navy Agent.
Major-Gen. Taylor, C.B., E.I.C.S. James Nugent Duncall, Esq.
Major-Gen. Edward Wynyard, C.B. Wilbraham Taylor, Esq.
Major-Gen. Arnold, K.H., K.C.

SECRETARY—Captain Finlaison, Esq., the Government Calculator.

Assurances are granted upon the lives of persons in every station or life, and in every part of the world, upon particularly favourable terms.

Persons assured in this office may change from one country to another without forfeiting their policies.

A bonus, amounting to 30 per cent. on the actual value of the policies, was apportioned to the assured at the first Septennial meeting, 31st December, 1845.

Policies effected during the present year, on the participating scale of premiums, will entitle the assured to a proportionate Share of the Profits at the next Septennial Division of Profits, in 1852.

JOSEPH C. BARTTELL, Secretary.
1851

EXTRAORDINARY IMPROVEMENTS in PIANOS, at MOTT'S, 76, Strand, most desirable in every respect; prices moderate, notwithstanding the great superiority over all others, their admirable quality and touch, the rich tone of the [illegible] and beautiful effects, &c., they standing firm, y in tune in any climate.

PIANOFORTES for SALE or HIRE, WARRANTED.—[illegible] Manufacturer, [illegible] Wholesale and Retail Warehouse, Wilton-place, Belgrave-square, Pimlico, opposite the Marine Society, respectfully solicits the attention of the Nobility, Gentry, and Public to his extensive assortment of improved Cabinet, Cottage, Pianofortes, Square Pianofortes, New Patent Harps, which he has always on hand, at the lowest possible prices for instruments that can really be warranted. Two hundred Pianofortes for choice. Inspection, with a view to purchase, is respectfully requested.

PIANOFORTES.—The cheapest house in London to purchase them first-rate instruments is at H. FOLKIEN'S, manufacturer, 28, King William-street, London Bridge. H. F., having completed his extensive alterations, begs his friends to view his wholesale stock of PIANOS, which is not to be equalled by any house, and at about half the price charged by them. H. F.'s much admired Piccolos, cash price £25. Old instruments taken in exchange.—FOLKIEN'S Manufactory, Bridge.

BAKER'S PHEASANTRY, Beaufort-street, King's-road, Chelsea (by appointment to her Majesty and H.R.H. Prince Albert), WATERPOWL, consisting of Black and White Swans, Canadian, Egyptian, and Chinese Geese, Shieldrakes, Pintail, Widgeon, Summer and Winter Teal; Landrail, Ruff, and Sanderling; Golden Plover, Grey and Dun Diver; Carolina Ducks, &c., domesticated and pinioned; also Spanish, Cochin-China, Dorking, Bantam, Guinea, Surrey, and Dorking Fowls, and all S. Bull-necks-cramps, Cranebench-street.—White, Japan, Pied, and Common Peafowl and Java Chaffinches.

SHOWER BATHS, with curtains, 8s.; ditto, with copper connecting tubes, brass pump, valves, and curtains, 12s. 6d.; hanging baths, from 6s. 6d. to 30s.; Nile, 2nd 31s., also every description of bath and toilet ware at most prices 30 per cent. lower than other houses. Your Bank of Dewdrops of Baths, and every article of furnishing ironmongery, may be had gratis, or sent to any part, post-free. R. and J. SLACK, 336, Strand, opposite Somerset House. Established 1818.

MECHI'S TABLE CUTLERY has long been famed for its admirable qualities combined with cheapness. His manufactory is at 4, Leadenhall-street, four doors from Cornhill. Balanced handles, in sets of fifty pieces, 42 10s.; ditto, 24 pieces, 14 14s.; common kitchen, per dozen, 10s., 12s., 16s., 21s., 25s. Tables steels, patent sharpeners, and dessert knives. Barber's razors ever [illegible] Mechi's unrivalled pocket-knife and ecclesiastical, from its upwards. His peculiar strop, razors and magic strop and paste have given comfort to many a suffering shaver, and the ladies pronounce his scissors to be unequalled.

MENIER'S FRENCH CHOCOLATE, prepared at the celebrated Manufactory, at Noisiel, near Paris. Established in 1816. The great superiority of this Chocolate—KAKAO MEDIANT—is manifested in its delicious flavour and in the most valuable daily stimulants its consumption in that country shows exceeds 1,000,000 the annually in the Capital, among all classes of society for breakfast, and is much used in the Public Establishments as evening parties, and for flavouring creams, custards, and various other sweet dishes. It is likewise highly recommended by medical gentlemen, as a most healthy food for invalids, persons and children for its nutritive and digestive properties. CHOCOLAT MENIER, both plain and vanilla, may be obtained, in packets suitable to travellers and men of business for luncheon, &c. This remarkable and [illegible] Chocolate is sold by Grocers, Confectioners, and Tea dealers everywhere and in all parts of the World. Wholesale Depôt, 8, Pall-mall, Charing-cross, Paris, Chaussée d'Antin, and Chaussée d'Antin, Paris, Chaussée d'Antin, Paris, Chaussée d'Antin, Paris, have received. (Loud cheers.) I never yet appealed to the courage of a British soldier that he did not readily respond to my call, and support me in the most trying emergencies. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, I hope that war may be far distant, for, believe me, war, though a glorious, is a horrid profession. (Cheers.)

ROSATI. CARLOTTI GRISI CERITO.

THE GRAND "PAS DES BLUMENS," AT HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

* * * * * * * *

As allusion has been made to my future services, I will only say, I shall be most happy if they be not required; but if they be, my only apprehension is lest I should fail to fulfil the expectations which my kind friends may have formed, or secure to the same extent those great results which in some degree I have already contributed to attain. (Cheers.) My first martial ardour was created in the Whittlesea troop of Yeomanry Cavalry, which I have this day inspected, (cheers); and I have had great gratification in observing that they are even superior to what they were in those days. (Cheers.) * * * To you, my Lords, who have come from other parts to do me honour, I feel deeply grateful. Thus received and honoured by you, the friends of my youth,'many of you my schoolfellows and playmates, all of you so much respected and revered by me, I return to you the heartfelt thanks of an honoured, but humble and most grateful townsman, Henry Smith." (Loud cheers.)

The healths of "the Duke of Bedford," "the Earl Fitzwilliam," and "the Lord-Lieutenant of the County," were then drunk. The latter toast was acknowledged by the Earl of Hardwicke, who proposed, in a complimentary speech, 'The health of Lady Smith," which was drunk with great applause.

Sir H. Smith thanked the company for the kindness they had shown to one he loved so dearly, and who had followed him with the greatest devotion over many fields of battle, and in every quarter of the world. They had met under the most extraordinary, he might say sanguinary circumstances—she at the tender age of fourteen, and he but a youth. Such, however, was the heroism she had displayed on his account, he should have been less than man had he not sought, not only her protection, but her hand. (Cheers.) From that period she had followed him with a devotion he could not express—not a devotion to him alone, but to the cause in which he was engaged. (Loud cheers.)

After several other toasts, the company separated.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

ON Saturday, "La Sonnambula" was repeated, by desire, before her Majesty, the King and Queen of the Belgians, and a crowded audience of Royalty, rank, and fashion. As we have so often endeavoured to describe Mdlle. Lind's performance in this opera, it needs no fresh comment on our part than that she more than confirms, after repeated hearings, the extraordinary impression of delight her first appearance in any character conveys.

On Tuesday evening, the "Lombardi" was given for the first time this season, with an almost entirely new cast, consisting of Castellan, Gardoni, Coletti, and Bouché. This opera has been got up with even more than usual care; the rehearsals have been going on for a long time past; and the effect is felt in the admirable training and ensemble of both orchestra and chorus. In its performance on Tuesday, there was a spirit and brilliancy in the crescendos—a delicacy and neatness in the demmandos and softer passages, which gave the fullest effect to Verdi's massive music. In the fine dramatic choruses and morceaux d'ensemble of the first act, and in the charming chorus, "O Signor," of the last, this was especially remarkable. But the pains that have been bestowed on the mounting this opera were observable throughout; and Mr. Balfe deserves great credit for his able conductorship.

Castellan, who took the part of Oronta, sang the music with that sweetness of tone and facility of vocalisation for which she is distinguished; while her splendid low tones told from time to time with great effect. The execution of the more subdued passages was marked by exquisite delicacy and neatness of execution; and, accomplished musician as she always has been, yet there is now an advance in artistic skill, very perceptible to the ear of an habitué. Artists and amateurs will all agree upon the extraordinary difficulties Verdi's music presents to singers accustomed to that of Bellini and Donizetti, and admirably did Castellan surmount them. On the whole, though there may be operas calculated to show off her natural powers to greater advantage, there are none in whic she evinces herself so admirable an artist as in this one.

There could be no doubt whatever, beforehand, as to Gardoni's performance in this opera; the character of the music and of the part, so well suited to him, ensured him a triumph, and he obtained one even more brilliant than was anticipated. There are few tenor airs more in favour, and more deservedly so, than "La Mia Letezia Infondere," and this he gave with a sweetness, taste, and a fervour of expression which obtained it an enthusiastic encore. In the charming duet with Castellan, and the splendid trio of the third act, he was admirable. Let us add also that his Eastern costume was one of the best got up and arranged we have seen for a long time, and suited him excellently. Coletti, with his splendid voice, gave immense increase of brilliancy to the concerted pieces throughout the opera. It is in the first act that he has much to do, and he did it excellently. Bouché's performance of a very subordinate character gave that completeness of effect to the opera which always results from filling minor parts with excellent artists. We must not omit an honourable mention of Mdme. Solari and Corelli, the latter of whom seems to have gained in strength and energy since last year.

"Les Eléments" continues to create a fever of enthusiasm amongst the ballet votaries, and Carlotta Grisi, Cerito, and Rosati continue to vie with each other for public applause.

We understand that a new opera by Verdi is in active preparation, called "I Masnadieri," in which Mdlle. Lind will appear; and the talented composer is superintending the rehearsals.

ENTRY OF SIR HARRY SMITH INTO WHITTLESEA.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JULY 10, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 272.—Vol. XI.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JULY 17, 1847. [Sixpence.

OUR AFRICAN BLOCKADE.

IN THE Slave Trade we recognise a question that now and then appears on the surface of discussion, exhibits its hideousness, scares men by its magnitude, and then disappears again, like some terrible sea monster, which, though known to exist, cannot yet be crushed, and is, therefore, thought of as seldom and as slightly as possible. But occasionally it obtrudes itself, in aspect worse than Famine and Pestilence—more difficult to deal with, and not much less expensive to those who have to keep watch over it, with the intention of checking its ravages. Unhappily, at every glimpse we catch of it, it presents a more vast and appalling form; and, as it is guided by the human intellect, sharpened by avarice, it seems to possess a power devilish alike in its cunning and its wickedness. At every appearance it produces a misgiving as to our ability to cope with it: it goes on devouring its hundreds of thousands of human beings, defying all attempts to destroy it, the most evident result of them being this, that the number and sufferings of its victims are but increased. There is a league of nations against the traffic in men, but the sincerity of some of the parties to the compact may be doubted; others, even if they were earnest in the wish to suppress it, are weak; so that most of the weight of the conflict with this gigantic evil falls on England, the most chivalric of empires, that, in every country, discharges the duties of the haute police of the Universe, compelling some states to be loyal, and others honest, against their will. This championship of principles is thrust on us by our position, and we certainly have enough to do in the vocation; but our success is not always equal to our zeal. We tried to beat the French into Legitimacy, and failed; we have tried to teach Spain Constitutional Principles, and they will not work; we are trying to make the Portuguese free and obedient at the same time, and they do not understand us. We have for years endeavoured to suppress the Slave Trade, and its enormity is worse than ever. It is well to love liberty; it is well to spend lives and gold in securing it to others; but what if the effort drives slavery to take a shape made worse by evils not its own? If the thousands of Africans slaughtered in the slave hunts of the interior, and the thousands more suffocated in the slavers' holds during the dreadful "middle passage," knew that nine-tenths of the mortality was directly caused by the efforts of England to prevent the traffic, they would certainly execrate our zeal, and curse the wealth and power that enable us to be, or attempt to be, the moral police of the world.

Some painful doubts obtrude themselves on us when we reflect on what our attempts to suppress the Slave Trade have actually done. Let us place the facts admitted by the most ardent opponents of Slavery in a light in which they are not often considered. Those who create the Slave Trade, and those who would crush it, are both of the superior race—the strong and governing powers of the world. Strength and knowledge can make the lot of the weak and ignorant unutterably wretched, or as tolerable as the lower condition can be—just as the superior gifts are used by those possessing them. But, instead of uniting in any plan of action that might secure all the ends desired, the stronger race divides into two sections, one seizing the weak by violence, and compelling it to serve its needs; the other, with equal violence, resisting the attempt. The poor Negro is martyred between them, and becomes the victim in a contest, of the principle of which he knows nothing. He is as little a free man where he is born as where he is taken to; but there is a struggle about his transfer, in which his race is destroyed with a cool mercantile calculation of the per centages of the massacre, which realizes what are supposed to be the attributes of the Fiend. Suppose the Africans of some remote mud village on the Niger could be informed of the debates of the Legislatures, and the Treaties of the Cabinets of Europe, of which they are the object, and were told at the same time that other Powers gave all their energies to defeat these treaties, and elude those who enforce them; suppose farther, that they knew that the results of this conflict of force and stratagem were floating coffins to pack them in, built for much speed, with little space, the close stowage, the foul air, all the nameless horrors of the slaver, and the death of five for every one landed and sold—what would the Africans themselves say, having a knowledge of these facts? They would tell us, "your legislation and your treaties may serve some purposes of policy between yourselves, but to us they bring nothing but dreadful miseries; leave us alone; slavery, with its toil and its whips, and its oppressions may be all that you think it; but it is worse to reach it through tortures and disease, to which slavery itself is nothing; your parchments and your cruisers do not secure us peace or freedom. They sentence five out of every six of us to death, in the well-meant attempt to save all from the fate that falls on the survivor." Suppose the knowledge possible, we are convinced a Negro congress would unanimously reject the "protection" that destroys them in this manner. The whites know all this, and continue year after year, one section to commit a crime, the other driving it to be committed in the worst possible manner.

H.M.S. "CANOPUS," OFF LISBON—(SEE NEXT PAGE).

What is the remedy? Are we to resign all hope, and admit Slavery is necessary and inevitable? By no means: let it no more be put by steamers and cruisers it will be destroyed; no material force will do it, however great, however perfectly applied. If we employed all our Navy for that purpose, and no other, it would not suffice. The Slave Trade will be extinguished as all other contraband and unlawful trades are destroyed—when it becomes unprofitable. There is slowly but surely rising the conviction that Slave labour is the dearest. While the system was general, there were no means of making the comparison; but the example of our own West India possessions is operating favourably for the better principle. The germs of what will be the next system are already visible, in the importations of Hill Coolies to labour in Mauritius, and of Chinese to Ceylon. Some of the Tribes on the African Coast work admirably for wages, and have become indispensable to ships on that station, or to vessels ascending the rivers. It does not necessarily follow that one race cannot toil for another except as its purchased slave: the Krooman is not the property of the Captain whose ship he sails; why should the Negro not plant sugar-cane in the Brazils without being the chattel of the landowner? The relation between the two may become hereafter as much a matter of contract as the entry of a Krooman for a voyage. We do not yet know enough of the interior of Africa to determine exactly as to its social condition, or to say whether a Negro gains or loses by leaving it for servitude under civilisation. There may be undiscovered nations in the interior, as happy as the "noble savage" was ever painted: we hope there are: but all the African tribes of which we have any knowledge are as wretched as humanity can be; Slavery can bring them no calamity they were not liable to, in a worse shape, before.

An African Chief cuts a throat as often, and with as little compunction, as an overseer uses the whip; but we wish to see man placed out of the reach of both. If the lands of the Tropics are to be cultivated, it can be by the labour of the black race alone; they do with ease what to all of European descent would be fatal. But their toil need not necessarily be in excess, nor compelled by force. Give them a share of the produce—leave them free to come and go, and the rest may be safely left to the nature of man. Time would be required, but the result would be certain. A few cargoes of Africans returning to their own country, for them, enriched by paid toil, would do more to destroy the Slave Trade than all the treaties ever made. Could not something be tried for the supply of Negro labour like the regulations our Government has made for the Hill Coolies? Let cargoes of Negroes from the ocean freely—the number proportioned to the tonnage—with wages ensured them, and a return guaranteed: we might begin in our own Colonies first, where the presence of free blacks is not feared; in course of time Spain and Brazil would be compelled to abolish slavery, and hire labour in self-defence. The first Negroes imported to the Spanish possessions would be those the Coolies are taken to the Mauritius, to supply the labour which failed with the decrease of the native Indians. The pious Las Casas established the immigration in all good faith, little dreaming it would be abused and degenerate into such a system as it at last became. Regulated and recognised, it was bad enough; but now we have made it a smuggling traffic, the worst point is reached. The whole thing is a failure, and the next change must be something very different. The time will come when men will read of slavers and their losses, and captures, and prize money for rescued negroes, as a proof that our rulers did not discover the best mode of adjusting the balance between land to be dug and the hands to dig it, nor venture to try it justly and fairly. The smugglers on our own coast daily rebuke the short-sightedness of those who frame our Tariffs, so as to leave the smuggler not only a chance, but a certainty, of turning into his own pockets money that might go into the Exchequer. There is no positive sin in carrying a bale of tobacco across a Channel; it is a law-made offence—a mala prohibita. There is nothing abstractedly wrong or offensive to Divine Laws in a Negro crossing the Atlantic to dig in a Brazilian cane-field; the sin is in stealing him first, and robbing him of his wages afterwards. Then legitimise the transaction, by refraining from the robbery, and discontinuing the injustice; the Negro, in the same position, becomes then a "labourer worthy of his hire," a "man earning his bread by the sweat of his brow," who is an object of admiration, not pity. But it is impossible for England to go on playing the part of keeper to a vast preserve of human game; sometimes shooting the poachers—more frequently the poachers eluding, if not shooting us; but so long as that the creatures protected are smothered, trod down, and crushed into blood and dust, in the struggle.

NEWS FROM PORTUGAL.

INTELLIGENCE has been received from Lisbon of the 9th, and from Oporto of the 10th inst., by the Peninsula and Oriental Company's steam-ship Madrid, which arrived at Southampton on Wednesday night.

The Junta of Oporto has dissolved itself, and Saldanha and his troops have entered the town, where they are at present in garrison with the Spanish troops under Concha. The castle of Foz is garrisoned by English marines. The Duke of Terceira and his fellow-captives have arrived in Lisbon. The Ministers of Lisbon, and the English, Spanish, and French Ambassadors have, it is said, expressed their disapproval of the Convention entered into with the Junta before their surrender. A proclamation has been issued by Saldanha, granting "the fullest amnesty."

The Marquis of Loulé, and several other distinguished members of the Junta, have arrived at Lisbon. The Condé Das Antas and the Visconde Sa da Bandeira are still detained as prisoners. It is rumoured that the Queen, unmindful of the recent lesson which has been taught her, is about to recall Costa Cabral, as indicated by the appointment of several Cabralistas to high official situations. Neither has the Queen performed her promise of entering at once upon a constitutional course of Government. A decree was issued on the 9th, continuing to the end of July the suspension of the guarantees of personal liberty, and prohibiting until that day the publication of newspapers and pamphlets

At Lisbon all was tranquil. Many of the prisoners taken at St. Ubes, and on board the Junta's squadron, had joined the forces of the Queen; but a few yet remained on board the British fleet, and in the fortress of St. Julian.

Our Illustration, from a spirited sketch by a Correspondent, shows the fine British Ship-of-War, Canopus, lying off Black Horse Square, at Lisbon.

The Canopus is French built, and is considered among sailors and shipwrights as one of the finest ships in the navy. A score of ships have been built from her model, but all are said to be inferior. She sails well, rows well, and is a fine sea-boat. It may be added that she is the only one of the fleet allowed to lie off Lisbon, specially to protect the Queen and the British subjects; and, she has afforded refuge also to many of the insurgents who flew there to save their lives.

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL, PADDINGTON.—This noble edifice is now in progress of completion; and, to aid the fund for that purpose, the committee earnest invite the public patronage of a Concert in the Hanover-square Rooms, on Wednesday, the 21st July, at half-past two o'clock, when several of our most distinguished artistes have kindly promised their valuable assistance in behalf of this much-wanted Hospital.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE

FRANCE

In part of our impression last week, we communicated the fact that the Minister of Finance is about to contract a loan to the amount of 350,000,000 francs. The announcement, of course, has engaged the attention of the monetary classes.

The great topic of the week, in Paris, has been the attempted suicide of M Teste.

The King and Queen of the Belgians, with their son, the Duke of Brabant, are at Neuilly.

The King and Queen of the French and Madame Adelaide, with the Duchess of Orleans and her children, are at Dreux, attending the religious solemnities usual on the anniversary of the death of the Duke of Orleans, which took place on July 13.

A discussion has taken place in the Chamber of Deputies upon the necessity of a postal reform. Some change appears to be absolutely necessary; for it is a strange fact, that the London papers and letters are not delivered to the Paris public at the present time one hour earlier than they were before the establishment of railways. The consequence is, that private parties get both papers and letters from London by private means fully twenty-four hours sooner than through the Post-Office. M. Dejean, the Director of the Post-Office, pledged himself that in a short time the post between London and Paris should be expedited. M. E. de Girardin said that he was a subscriber to two London Journals, on condition of receiving them the day after their publication: for that, however, he had to pay no less than 4500f. a year.

The Reform dinner which took place last week at the Château Rouge was very fully attended. The speeches were remarkable, inasmuch as they were very hostile to the present policy pursued in France. Messrs. Odilon Barrot, Duvergier de Hauranne, Marie Leon de Malleville, and other public men of note, delivered speeches of a most strong character, and all to the effect that the revolution of 1830 had been falsified; and while some looked for a remedy in Parliamentary reform, others went much further. It was remarkable that the health of Louis Philippe was not given.

A report of a Committee which has been circulated in the Chamber of Deputies gives a very unsatisfactory account of the financial condition of France. It is calculated that the year 1846 will leave a new deficit of 60,000,000 francs, on the 996,000,000 francs of previous deficits. The Committee on the budget of receipts, like that on expenses, conjures the Government to apply an immediate and energetic remedy to the state of things, by establishing an equilibrium between the ordinary receipts and expenses, and by confining the extraordinary expenses within the limits of the reserves of the sinking fund, which the Minister of Finance finally promised should be applied for such objects. The Committee proposes the pure and simple maintenance of the receipts inscribed in the budget, which amount to the sum of 1,391,125,510 francs. In this sum, 20,145,800 francs arise from the portion of the loan of 450,000,000 francs, authorised in 1841, and applicable, in 1848, to extraordinary public works. The committee has only introduced some slight modifications in the wording of some articles, and especially in Art. 14, on caution-money, to be deposited by Receivers-General, receivers of arrondis-sements, and collectors, such modifications being suggested by the Minister of Finance himself.

TRIAL OF EMINENT PERSONS FOR CORRUPTION

The trial of General Cubières, M. Teste, and M. Parmentier, before the Court of Peers, which excited so much interest in France, commenced on Thursday (last week). The preliminary proceedings of calling over the names of the Peers being gone through, the accused were asked to give their names, ages, professions, &c. General Cubières, with perfect calmness, answered, "Amedie Louis Despans Cubières, sixty-one years of age, Peer of France." M. Teste, with great emotion, said that he had then no title, for under the circumstances of such an act of accusation hanging over his head he had resigned all his dignities into the hands of the King. His son, seated beside him, shared his father's emotion. M Teste is sixty-seven years of age. M. Parmentier exhibited something like levity of manner. An official intimation was then made that M. Pellaprat was not present to take his trial. He has escaped into Belgium, and is now with his daughter, the Princess of Chimay. M. Gaichy, the clerk of the court, proceeded to read the act of accusation, a document of very great length. The reading of this document consumed the greater part of the day.

On a subsequent day M. Teste was questioned by the Attorney-General, and persisted in denying the truth of the charges directed against his honour. The Chancellor next addressed another appeal to General Cubières, calling upon him to declare his conviction that the 100,000 francs had been given by M. Pellaprat to M. Teste. The General replied, "I believed the statement of M. Pellaprat, when he told me that he had paid 100,000 francs to M. Teste, and it is because I credited that declaration that I confided to him the sum I have already mentioned. I do not consider M. Pellaprat a swindler, for I had undertaken to refund the money he had advanced. There was no swindling in the transaction. What was there? I may be asked. The gentleman, to decide. For my part, I have no personal knowledge of either swindling or corruption."

On Monday, General Cubières underwent a very searching examination, after which the General rose, and, with great emotion, said that the tortures to which he had been subjected caused him to express himself with occasional obscurity. His honour called upon him to be explicit. Yes, he at first did entertain the idea of corruption. He believed it to be an enormity by means. He believed what M. Pellaprat said of his relations with the Minister; but he no longer believed him when he saw the various stories in accordance with the pretensions of the society. He again returned to his former opinion when M. Pellaprat told him he had given 40,000 francs: for he would not have, on his side, paid that money if he had his belief. His own sacrifices amounted to 105,000 francs, thus accepting the half. It was with pain and grief he had to make such disclosures. He belonged to the army. He might be condemned, but never dishonoured. He had the confidence in his judges. He then referred to calumnious rumours, to the effect that every effort had been made to make him alter his tongue, but such was not the fact; he had spoken openly and candidly, and had told the whole truth.

A quantity of papers, letters, and other documents were read, which had been placed at the disposal of the Court by Madame Pellaprat, and these documents prove, he said, that M. Pellaprat had paid over to M. Teste the sum of 100,000 francs. This is proved by M. Pellaprat's account book and his banker's book. The correctness of the entries into the account book were sworn to by M. Pellaprat's agent de change, who was summoned for that purpose before the Court.

M. Teste treated as unworthy of consideration the notes in his handwriting which had been produced. M. de Cubières, it appears, knew early of this compact of corruption; yet see how little his declarations correspond with the papers now produced? He [illegible] and [illegible] There was [illegible] waited M. Teste, at last, knew who [illegible] to deal. He should had entrusted [illegible] with the [illegible] and [illegible] and afterwards publicly expressed [illegible] the [illegible] of these new documents.

After some proceedings of little importance, the reports of M. Pellaprat was introduced. M Duplessy read it in spite of the General and his counsel. After speaking of the honesty and high character of Pellaprat, M Pellaprat he deposed [illegible] and possessed [illegible] that M. Pellaprat had absolutely lent him that [illegible] Teste.

This evidence produced an extraordinary sensation in the Court

The trial was brought to a conclusion on Tuesday by a startling incident. The disclosures of Monday had made an effect upon M. Teste that he attempted to commit suicide.

The following account of the affair is from the National:—"Between eight and nine o'clock on Monday evening, an explosion was heard in one of the chambers in the prison of the Luxembourg, occupied by the accused parties in the affair of the Gouvernous Mines. The attendants immediately rushed in, and it was found that M. Teste had attempted to commit suicide. He placed a pistol in his mouth, and pulled the trigger, but the pistol missed fire. He then placed a second pistol close to his heart, and fired, but he had pressed the weapon with such force against the part that the ball did not enter, and fell to the ground. No wound was inflicted, and the only trace of the explosion was a black mark from the powder on the flannel waistcoat and the skin. It was remarked that the discharge of the second pistol produced a severe contusion and a violent swelling. But that it was with great difficulty M. Teste could be induced to submit to have the contusion dressed."

The contusion was dressed, and a keeper placed over the unfortunate man. An account of the attempt was drawn up by the proper authorities.

Tuesday's sitting, we have hardly to say, was marked by great excitement, in consequence of what had taken place.

At one o'clock the Duke Pasquier entered the hall, followed by the members of the Court, and shortly after M. Hebert, Chancellor, the Attorney-General, and M. Glandaz, his substitute. General Cubières and M. Parmentier were ushered in by the officers of the court.

The Secretary, having called over the names of the Peers, was directed by the President to read several statements relative to the attempted suicide of M. Teste. One of those documents, from the Commissary of Police, charged with the surveillance of the prisoners at the Luxembourg, stated that, at three-quarters past nine, o'clock, P.M., on Monday, he had been informed by the Grand Referendary of the court that M. Teste had attempted to commit suicide. He accordingly repaired to the prison, and was conducted by the Director, Mr. Privert, to a room on the second floor, where he found M. Teste lying on his bed, with a physician, Dr. Bayle, seated by his side. Having approached the bed, he questioned M. Teste, who stated that he had attempted to kill himself, expressly to avoid the honour to life. He expressed regret at not having succeeded, but refused to make known the person who had procured him the pistols. He declared, however, that it was not his son, although he would have considered his doing so an act of filial piety.

The deposition of M. Drevet, the director of the prison, stated that on entering the room he found M. Teste extended on his bed. He asked him, "What is the matter?" exclaimed the prisoner, "you appear greatly affected." On examining his person, M. Drevet perceived a black mark on his shirt, and asked him what had occurred. M. Teste replied that he had attempted to end suicide, and, pointing to his desk, he told him he would find the pistols in the second drawer. M. Drevet immediately secured those arms, and having left two keepers and his servant to watch over the prisoner he ran to give notice of the occurrence to the Chancellor

The President next ordered the Secretary to read a letter he had received in the morning from M. Teste. M. Teste declared that the incidents of the preceding sitting obtained him of all possibility of refuting the charges directed against him. He relied on everything the Court would do in his absence. His presence being no longer necessary In conclusion, he entreated the Chancellor not to resort to force to compel his appearance, as he was determined to offer to the last a desperate resistance.

The President had nevertheless thought proper to take measures to conquer M. Teste's resistance, and had sent M. Beaulieu, one of the officers of the court, to enforce the execution of his order. M. Beaulieu reported to the Chancellor that he had vainly summoned M. Teste to follow him to the court, and that having returned to his room accompanied by a body of soldiers, he repeated his summons with as little success. M. Teste resisted, declaring that he entertained the highest respect for the Court, and would submit to its decision, but that his presence had now become useless, and his justification impossible, in presence of the proofs of the only weakness he had to reproach himself with during his whole life.

The President then ordered that the proceedings should continue in the absence of M. Teste, and the Attorney-General having risen, observed that the declaration of M. Teste had terminated the trial, since the culpability of the accused was now no longer a matter of doubt. The charge of corruption against General Cubières was, he said, completely proved; it was with him the first thought of the corruption had originated, and he had thereby forfeited all right to continue on the list of the army and to sit in the Chamber of Peers. M. Parmentier had speculated on his own turpitude, and had had recourse to means repugnant to all honest men. He deserved, accordingly, to be visited with all the severity of the laws. As to M. Pel aprat, he must not expect, in exile, where he is now dragging his dishonoured old age, to escape the chastisement of justice.

M. Barroche addressed the Court in behalf of General Cubières. He then spoke, not of M. Teste, but of his son, who, he said, had been totally ignorant of the transaction in which he had figured as an innocent actor. He next made a strong appeal to the Court in favour of the father, which he concluded by those words of Bossuet:—"Mercy is an integral part of justice."

M. Benoît subsequently commenced the defence of M. Parmentier.

The weather has become extremely warm in France. In Paris, at nine o'clock on Monday morning, the thermometer (Fahrenheit) indicated 90 degrees. A breeze subsequently sprang up; and, although the weather remained beautiful, lowered the heat, by two o'clock, to 86 degrees

The opening of the Orleans to Vierzon Railway, as far as the line is completely finished (about fifty miles), is definitively fixed for the 20th inst. (Tuesday next).

SPAIN.

Our last accounts from Madrid include to existing apprehensions of Carlist movements. The Eco del Comercio says, that letters from Pampeluna speak in positive terms of a Carlist rising, under the general directions of Elio. The Carlists had, it is said, extensive ramifications spread against through Navarre. A military conspiracy had, it was said, been discovered at Tafolla, of a French character. The same journal undertakes to assert that General Narvaez had declined to accept the overture which had been made to him through Senor Ezeagoua, to return to Spain, for the purpose of forming a Cabinet. Carlist movements are spoken of by the Faro, and by the Clamor Publico, as having taken place at Mora, in New Castile, at the Maestrazgo, in Valencia. The Faro had been seized for a libel on the Government

The shares of the Bank of St. Ferdinand fell on the 7th no less than 15 per cent.

Royal orders of the 8th announce that Queen Isabella has made Marquis of Novaliches; and to Bernardo Roez Fuentes, Spanish Consul at Oporto, is accorded the Cross of Commander of the Order of Isabella the Catholic

The Government have determined upon raising 90 millions reals on Treasury Bills. English capitalists, however, seem very shy of offering to bid for the loan.

A grand banquet was given at the Palace on the 6th instant, in honour of Cardinal Brunelli. Amongst the high functionaries who attended on the occasion were MM. Santa Coloma, Malpica, Pena, Aguayo, and Vega. All the Ministers, the members of the diplomatic corps, and the Patriarch, were amongst the number of the guests

The Infante Don Francisco de Paula and his family were to leave Madrid on the 9th inst., for St. Sebastian.

SWITZERLAND.

A letter from Berne, of the 9th inst., in the Federal Gazette, gives the following details relative to the note delivered from M. Guizot to M. Ochsenstein:—"The note expresses itself in a more precise manner on the dangerous situation of Switzerland, and points out clearly the position of France, and the principles which the Government has to adopt. The right of Switzerland to an independent State, to give herself a Constitution, and to modify it, is expressly recognised. But at the same time the Swiss were warned, in the moderate language of a friendly power, that the existence of Switzerland was the federal power, and not to confound the Republics, who have an independent existence based on history and treaties, which have been recognised by Europe. The dangers of a civil war are also pointed out, and the perils which would hang over the prosperity of Switzerland, and the interests and tranquility of the powers."

THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO.

The Cambria has brought New York papers to the 30th June. Neither the local news, nor that from Mexico is important.

The commercial affairs of the Union excite some attention. The fact of the exchange being at the favourable rate of 6 to 6¼ per cent. premium, has been the cause of gratulation among the mercantile community of New York.

President Polk was engaged in a tour through the northern states of the Union. He left New York on Monday the 28th of June; reached Hartford the same day; Boston on Tuesday; and Portland on Wednesday. Throughout his "progress" the chief magistrate of the Union encountered a cordial and respectful welcome.

There has been another explosion of a river-steamer, the Edna. It took place at Columbia, on the Ouachita River, and resulted in the loss of from twenty to twenty-five lives, and the injury of a great many wounded. The passengers, both those saved as well as lost, were all natives of the South.

The date from the city of Mexico is to the 2nd of June. Captain Wood, of the steamer Alabama, from Vera Cruz, arrived at New Orleans on the 21st of June, having left Vera Cruz on the 16th, states that information had been received there that Generals Scott and Worth, with the main body of the army, had advanced as far as Rio Frio without opposition. Santa Anna had taken his place by a deputation from the capital with proposals for peace. Captain Wood had not heard what the nature of those propositions was, but their tenor was such that General Scott refused to accept them, and resolved to push on to the capital.

No certain intelligence had been received of the result of the Mexican Presidential election. An attempt at a pronunciamento had been made at Mexico by Gomez Farias's partisans, but it was put down easily by Bustamente. Santa Anna had a second time tendered his resignation of the Presidency and of the command of the army; but Congress had acted upon neither offer. About 20,000 men, the wreck of all armies, were gathered between Mexico and the Rio.

At Vera Cruz the yellow fever was making fearful havoc among the unfortunate troops located there; 49 deaths are reported to have occurred in one day. There are also to be added a thousand deaths from the same cause at Vera Cruz. General Shields was at Jalapa, and was about to leave for the United States, when he received an order from General Scott to join him at Puebla.

IRELAND.

THE EARL OF CLARENDON.—On Tuesday, a deputation from the Royal College of Physicians presented an address of congratulation to his Excellency on his appointment to the Lord Lieutenancy of Ireland. His Excellency received the deputation with marked kindness, and returned a suitable reply. In the course of his observations he alluded to an address of congratulation to the Lord Lieutenant, which their honours expect will be presented. A reply from his Excellency is now expected which he entertains of Irish affairs, present, past, and future

FUNERAL OF DANIEL O'CONNELL.—O'Connell's funeral is fixed for the 23rd inst., at Glasnevin, near Dublin. His remains will arrive in Dublin on the previous day probably on the 20th.

DUNGARVAN ELECTION.—Some of the electors of Dungarvan appear determined that the Master of the Mint shall not resume his seat for that ancient borough without exhibiting "her Majesty's picture." Seventy-two electors have requested a meeting to consider the propriety of putting "a Conciliation Hall Repealer in nomination."

ENNIS ELECTION.—There will be a fierce fight for the borough of Ennis. Mr. O'Gorman Mahon, who has arrived from Paris, made quite a triumphal entry into the town a few days ago, accompanied by a great crowd of people, with music and colours. His reception is described as most enthusiastic.

THE CORN HARVEST.—The harvest operations are still downwards, while the supplies are by no means large. Indeed, there is something approaching to scarcity in the country markets. Between Thursday and Saturday evening, 74 vessels, laden with meal and other bread stuffs, arrived in Cove harbour. The cargoes amount to 23,356 tons.

THE HARVEST.—The accounts in the Irish provincial papers continue to describe the crops, including the potato, as of a most abundant and fast ripening, giving every promise of an early and abundant harvest.

FRIGHTFUL MURDER.—An inquest was held at Limerick last week, upon the body of Andrew Fitzgerald, a carrier, who was stoned to death on the Black-lyke, while in the act of driving cattle into the city. The Jury returned a verdict, "That deceased died in consequence of a beating he received from a party of men and women on the 6th of July, at the Black-boy-lake; and that Pat Ryan (Early), Bridget Ryan, his wife, and Bridget, his daughter, were principals in the homicide." The prisoners have been committed for trial. It was a woman who drew the first stone from the ditch with which the deceased was killed, and then four strokes of a loaded whip from Ryan, literally demolished the right side of his skull, and completed this audacious butchery in the noon-day, at the corner of the road in the principal street of the city.

COMMITTAL OF A BARRISTER FOR SHOOTING A GAMEKEEPER.—Randal Pratt, Esq., a highly-respectable gentleman resident in the county of Longford, and a barrister, has been lodged in gaol, charged with shooting and severely wounding a man named Lenahan, who was gamekeeper to Colonel Pratt, his cousin. The man is out of danger, although severely wounded.

SUICIDE BY A PERSON NINETY-THREE YEARS OF AGE.—An inquest was held at Fardisland (Ile-sforddsire), on Monday week, on the body of Mr. John Morgan, 93 years of age, who occupied a small farm in the above parish, and who, on the preceding Friday, drowned himself in a pool in his field. It appears from the evidence of Mr. Morgan, aged about 40, son of the deceased, that a great alteration had of late taken place in the manner of his father, and that he had been subject to great irritation of temper. On the day of his death some person went to his house to inquire for him, when search was made for him, and he was at length discovered in the horse-pond, with his head in the mud. He was quite dead. The Jury returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased destroyed himself whilst in a state of temporary insanity.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

BRIBERY AT ELECTIONS.—Lord BROUGHAM proposed the three resolutions of which he had given notice, declaring it to be the duty of their Lordships to adopt measures, at the beginning of the next session of Parliament, for detecting and punishing of acts of bribery committed in the election of Members of the House of Commons, and of Representative Peers of Ireland and Scotland; and for inquiring into and punishing corrupt bargains, compromises, &c. The noble and learned Lord contended that their Lordships were equally concerned with the Commons in the purity of election, and that they had an equal right to interfere in punishing down bribery and corruption. He referred to the charges of Ministerial corruption now under investigat on in France, and said that, in his opinion, the evil effects produced by the bartering for places in France were not comparable to the direful effects of that wholesale corruption of conscience which takes place in this country at a general election. -The Marquis of LANSDOWNE, on the ground that it was not advisable to adopt an abstract principle, and with the conviction that their Lordships would willingly adopt any measure sent up to them in the next session of Parliament for punishing such delinquencies and crime in connexion with bribery and corruption at elections as the existing law was not able to reach, moved the previous question.—Lord BROUGHAM agreed briefly addressed the House on the subject, and then withdrew his motion.

EVILS IN EMIGRANT VESSELS.—In reply to a question from the Earl of ENNISKILLEN, the Earl GREY said it was true that frightful fevers had broken out in several of the emigrant vessels from Ireland to Canada. He described the measures that had been taken by the Governor-General of Canada to alleviate the condition of the emigrants.

The House adjourned about eight o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS MONDAY.

THE WELLINGTON STATUE.—The House met at three o'clock, and on the order of the day for going into Committee of Supply, Lord J. RUSSELL said "Before the order of the day is read, I wish to fulfil a promise made to my noble friend opposite (Lord G. Bentinck), and to state to-day the intention of the Government with respect to the Wellington military memorial, the subject on which he proposed a motion. Since I last addressed the House, I have had a communication with the Illustrious Duke with reference to the equestrian statue erected over the arch in the Green Park; and, in substance, his reply to my inquiry was that he viewed it as a question to be considered, not upon individuals, but upon public grounds: that many persons were of opinion that the committee by whom the testimonial had been erected were of opinion that its removal from the arch would be looked upon as a mark of disapprobation on the part of the Crown; and that, though he received too many evidences of Royal favour to suppose there had been any such intention, as such would be the effect, upon public grounds, he deprecated the proposition to take down the statue from its present position. (Hear, hear.) This statement has been communicated to her Majesty, and I have received the Queen's commands to say that the Government do not intend to permit the removal of the Statue." (Cheers.)

The House soon afterwards went into a Committee of Supply, and the remaining estimates were agreed to.

The House subsequently went into Committee of Ways and Means, and resolutions were agreed to, upon which the Appropriation Bill (the last bill of the session) will be introduced

The New Zealand (No. 2) Bill was read a second time.

The Mussel Fisheries (Scotland) Bill, the Post-office Bill, the Navigation Bill (No. 2), and the Herring Fishery Bill, were read a third time and passed.

The Constabulary Force (Ireland) Bill, the Destitute Persons (Ireland) Bill, Public Works and Drainage (Ireland) Bill, and the London-bridge Approaches Bill, passed through Committee.

THE BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY BILL. The ATTORNEY-GENERAL moved the committa. of the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Bill. Sir J. GRAHAM agreed to a large proportion of the bill, but was strongly opposed to that portion of it which restored jurisdiction to the Keeper of the Great Seal, as calculated to retain several useless officers in Chancery. He hoped that the Government would not press this portion of the bill, as the whole question must come under consideration in a future Parliament. Sir E. STRADY said the bill required much more consideration than could be given to it at this period of the session, and he hoped, therefore, the Government would consent to its postponement.—The House then went into Committee, and Sir J. GRAHAM proposed the omission of the clauses to which he had referred. Two divisions took place, in each of which the right hon. Baronet was defeated by a majority of seven. The remaining clauses were then agreed to, and, soon afterwards, the House adjourned at midnight

HOUSE OF LORDS. TUESDAY.

EXHIBITION OF WORKS OF ART AND THE NEW PALACE. Lord BROUGHAM presented a petition from certain artists, contributors to, and competitors in, the exhibition of works of art now exhibiting in Westminster Hall. They complained of the manner in which the prizes had been awarded after only three days' examination of a vast number of pictures which required a careful examination and a sifting inquiry into their respective merits, and they further urged that, prior to an adjudication, the pictures should be removed and placed in the Hall of the public. The petitioners suggested that the artists of France, Germany, and Italy should have been called in as assessors before the Commissioners had adjudicated, and they prayed that such a course should be taken before anybody Mr. A. Mr. B, or Mr. C should be employed finally to decorate the walls of the new palace. The Marquis of LANSDOWNE made several observations in reply, which were totally inaudible. The petition was ordered to be on the table.

The Minor's Relief Suspension Bill was read a third time and passed.

THE POOR LAW SUPERVISION (IRELAND) BILL.—On the motion for the committal of the Poor-Law Supervision (Ireland) Bill, the Earl of St. GERMANS moved, as an amendment, that the bill be committed that day three months. This amendment was, however, negatived, without a division, and the bill passed through committee.

The Tithe Commutation Bill was read a third time and passed.

The Compensation for Damages (Ireland) Bill, the Drainage of Lands (Ireland) Bill, the Stock in Trade Exemption Bill, the Polling at Elections (Ireland) Bill, and the Joint-Stock Companies Bill, were read a second time.

The House adjourned before eight o'clock, till Thursday

HOUSE OF COMMONS. TUESDAY.

The House again met at twelve o'clock

THE EPISCOPATE OF MANCHESTER.—Lord J. RUSSELL moved the second reading of the Bishop of Manchester, &c., Bill; and stated that it was the intention of the Government hereafter to propose, on the authority of the Ecclesiastical Commission, a Bishopric of St Alban's should be established in relief of that of London; one for Southwell, in relief of that of the Archbishopric of York and Bishopric of Lincoln; and a Bishopric for Bodmin in Cornwall, in relief of the diocese of Exeter; but each of which propositions would require the sanction of a separate act of Parliament.—Mr. HORSMAN moved a declaratory resolution affirmative of the principle that the bill could not be fitly entertained during the present session, the amendment being seconded by Mr. J. COLLETT. After a protracted discussion, Mr. HUME moved, as an amendment upon that of Mr. Horsman, that the bill be read a second time that day three months; which was seconded. The amendment, the House divided, when the original motion was carried by 124 to 15, the bill being then read a second time.

ANOTHER ABANDONMENT. Mr. WARD announced that, in consequence of the opposition, threatened in the Lords, the Government had resolved to withdraw the Thames Conservancy Bill for the present session.

MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS. The remainder of the sitting was devoted to miscellaneous business. Mr. ESCOTT brought the case of Mr. Langslow, recently a Judge in Ceylon, under the notice of the House, with a view of obtaining him redress.—Mr. HAWES having replied to the statement, concluded by moving the previous question. After some discussion the motion was withdrawn.—Mr. BENNET'S Poor Removal Bill was rejected by a majority of 44 to 5 The Poor Removal Act Amendment Bill (No. 2), after a short discussion, was read a third time and passed

The House adjourned at twelve o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

THE NEW HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Mr. H. YORKE asked the noble Lord at the head of the Woods and Forests, if he could state distinctly, positively, and without doubt or ambiguity, whether the New House of Commons would be ready for occupation by the next Parliament? Lord MORPETH was not able distinctly, positively, and without doubt or ambiguity to make such a statement. The new House of Commons would be ready for occupation. From the communications he had had with the architect, he could not indulge any hope that it would be ready by next session; but he hoped it would not be delayed beyond that period.

THE COLLIERIES BILL.—Mr. DUNCOMBE moved the second reading of the Collieries Bill.—Sir G. GREY opposed the bill, as the whole question must come before Parliament early in the next session. He moved, as an amendment, that the bill be read a second time that day three months. A discussion took place after which the House divided, and the second reading of the bill was negatived by 55 to 23.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTORS BILL.

Sir DE LACY EVANS moved the second reading of the Parliamentary Electors (No. 2) Bill.

Mr. NEWDEGATE opposed the bill, as tending to a dangerous alteration in the principle of the elective franchise, and that, too, on the eve of a general election. Cons during the late period of the session, he thought the time very badly selected for introducing such a bill

Sir W. CLAY, regarding the bill as essentially good in itself, could not agree with Mr. Newdegate that a wrong time had been selected for its introduction. He cordially supported the bill, as a step in a correct direction.

Mr. CRIPPS moved, as an amendment, that the bill be read a second time that day three months

The House divided: when, the numbers being equal—54 on either side—the Speaker gave the casting vote against the amendment, which was consequently lost

The House then again divided on the question that the bill be read a second time, and the bill was lost by a majority of 53 to 52

The report on the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Bill was brought up and agreed to

The House, which met at noon, adjourned at half-past four.

HOUSE OF LORDS. (THURSDAY.)

THE POOR RELIEF SUPERVISION (IRELAND) BILL.—On the motion of the Marquis of LANSDOWNE, the Poor Relief Supervision (Ireland) Bill was read a third time. An amendment was added, providing that the commissioners shall make a regular report of their proceedings to Parliament; and the bill then passed.

THE POOR LAW ADMINISTRATION BILL.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE moved the third reading of the Poor Law Administration Bill.

Lord BROUGHAM thought it would be much better to continue the present system until the end of the next session of Parliament, before which time the whole subject could be fully considered. He, therefore, moved that the bill be read a third time that day three months.

After a few remarks from the Bishop of London and the Earl of Ellenborough, The Marquis of LANSDOWNE said the Poor Law was passed as a temporary measure, and it could not be expected under it to do more than tend forward to some material alterations in it at a future period; in fact, that it might undergo an entire change, and yet the commissioners and others took their respective offices on close cuidition.

After some discussion, Lord Brougham's amendment was rejected by 43 to 10, and the bill was read a third time. The House then adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS THURSDAY.

THE DEAN OF MANCHESTER.—In answer to a question from Mr. HORSMAN, Lord J. RUSSELL said, that Mr. Bowen having been appointed Dean of Manchester, there would be no difficulty in his performing the duty of Rector of St. Paul's, Covent-garden. Mr Bowen had been strongly recommended to the office, and he believed the appointment had given general satisfaction.

CONSOLIDATED FUND BILL.—The bill went through committee. On the motion that the report be brought up, Lord G. BENTINCK called the attention of the House to the infraction, by the Dutch Government, of the Treaty of Commerce contracted in 1837 between Great Britain and the Netherlands, in respect to the trade and commerce of the Eastern territories of both countries: and asked Lord Palmerston if any remonstrance had been made to the Government of the King of the Netherlands.—Lord PALMERSTON said the subject to which the noble Lord alluded had been for a length of time under the consideration of her Majesty's Government: at present, however, there had been no remonstrance; but he trusted, from the negotiations which were going forward, that the subject would soon be brought to an amicable settlement.

The Canal Companies Bill, the Militia Pay Bill, the New Zealand (No. 2) Bill, and the Trustees Relief Bill, were read a third time and passed.

BISHOPRIC OF MANCHESTER BILL.

The order of the day having been read for going into Committee on this bill,

Mr. FREWEN said, if this bill was agreed to, it would necessarily lead to the creation of a number of other small Bishoprics

Mr. HUME trusted that the Government, at this late period of the session, would withdraw the bill. It was a measure which could not be satisfactorily considered during the present Parliament. He concluded by moving as an amendment that the Committee on the bill be postponed until this day week. (Laughter)

Mr. M. PHILLIPS seconded the amendment.

Lord J. RUSSELL said, when the Statute down from the second reading of this bill was carried by 124 to 18 (hear). he could see no reason why he should abandon it.

A debate ensued that lasted the whole of the sitting: on the division, the amendment was rejected by 29, but the debate upon the bill was adjourned. The House sat till half-; at twelve o'clock

COUNTRY NEWS.

THE ELECTIONS.

BOLTON.—Dr Bowring has arrived in Bolton, and commenced his canvass with Mr. Brooks, who has made a very favourable impression amongst the electors. Mr. Bolling's friends appear rather inactive; and Mr. Ainsworth's, after having talked of a requisition, seem disinclined to commence operations

BRIDGNORTH. Sir J. Easthope has addressed the electors. The two sitting members, Mr. Whitmore, of Apley Park, a large landed proprietor, and Sir Robert Pigot, of Patchill.

CHELTENHAM.—Mr. C. Berkeley is, it is said, threatened with an opposition in the person of Lord Feltham Clinton, son of the Duke of Newcastle. Mr. C. Berkeley's speech on the Health of Towns Bill appears to have given rise to a very general feeling of hostility towards him.

EVESHAM.—Mr. P. Berrington has announced his intention of retiring from the representation. Sir H. Willoughby solicits the suffrages of the electors on Conservative principles. Lord Marcus Hill and Mr. E. J. Rudge are the Liberal candidates. A severe contest is expected.

FROME.—The member for this borough (T. Sheppard, Esq.), retires at the close of the present session, and the only candidate now in the field is Major the Hon. Robert Edward Boyle, son of the Earl of Cork.

GREENWICH. Admiral Deans Dundas, C.B., has issued an address to the electors of Greenwich, and announcing his intention to solicit from them the honourable distinction of being again returned as one of their representatives.

LIVERPOOL.—Lord John Manners has at length acceded to the wishes of his friends, and come forward as a candidate.

LIVERPOOL.—Mr. Cardwell has entered the lists for this borough. He was introduced on Change on Tuesday afternoon, and entered into a full exposition of his political views. His reception was satisfactory. A requisition to stand for the borough has been presented to Mr. J. Bancroft, the Chairman of the South-Eastern Railway Company.

LUDLOW.—The promised opposition for the representation of this borough has commenced. At present Ludlow returns two Conservative members, one of whom (Mr. Ackers) has declared his intention to retire at the dissolution, while the other (Mr. Botfield) solicits re-election. To supply the vacancy, no fewer than six candidates are in the field, Mr. J. B. Clive, (Conservative), and Colonel Salway (Whig).

PLYMOUTH. Mr. Gill retires from the representation of Plymouth, and Mr. Archer, Q.C., starts in his place.

READING.—A new candidate has come forward, in the person of Mr. F. Pigott, of Heckfield, near Reading. There are now, besides, three candidates in the field —Mr. C. Russell and Lord Chelsea, the present members; and Mr. Sergeant Talfourd.

REIGATE.—By a circular, dated from Nice, Viscount Eastnor, M.P. for Reigate, has declared his resolution not to come forward at the ensuing election, on account of ill health. Thomas Somers Cocks, jun., Esq., has come forward in the Conservative interest, and expects to oppose Mr. Scarlett and Mr. Bagshaw.

SHREWSBURY. A Mr. Baldock intends to offer for Shrewsbury, in the place of Mr. Disraeli TAMWORTH.—Mr. Goldsmid, son of Sir Isaac Goldsmid, and who has the honour of being the first Jewish barrister, has addressed the electors as a friend of civil and religious liberty. At the same meeting, Mr. Cufaude said that Mr. Willshere had declined to come forward. Mr. Bagshaw has arrived, and is actively engaged in canvassing the electors Mr. Rumbold has as yet issued no notification of his intentions; and there seems to be an opinion that his retirement is not improbable. Mr. Goldsmid will be returned with Mr. Bagshaw, as supporters of the Whig cause.

OPENING OF THE HADLEIGH RAILWAY.—The Suffolk papers state that this line will be opened for goods traffic on the 1st of August, and for passenger traffic on the 10th of August.

EARLY HARVEST IN HAMPSHIRE. Mr. NEAVE, a large farmer and miller, residing at Fordingbridge, in Hampshire, on Monday commenced mowing a field of peas, one of the most prolific crops he ever grew

THE CROPS.—A farmer, describing the effect of the present favourable weather, and the progress of the crops, said, "We could not have managed it better ourselves, if we had had the sun in one hand and a watering-can in the other!"

THE MURDER AT CHESTERFIELD.—Another person has been apprehended on a charge of aiding and abetting in the murder of George Collis. His name is Statham, and he is a master butcher, at Chesterfield. It will be recollected that, a short time ago, Anthony Launt, a butcher, was apprehended on the same charge. Evidence has come from the prisoner himself, as well as from the money, and evinced great interest in the defence of Platts, executed as one of the murderers of Collis). A witness sweart to seeing Mr. Statham in the yard at the back of Mortley's shop, and to certain conversations passing between him and Mortley, at the time Platts and Collis were in the shop, and immediately after the "scuffle" and "blow" were heard, and the shop doors banged to. He also swore that Statham was coming from the yard into the house, as if he had been washing himself, and evinced great interest in the defence of Platts, executed as one of the murderers of Collis). A witness swears

HOLLAND HOUSE.—SOUTH FRONT.

LORD HOLLAND'S PARK, KENSINGTON.

THE picturesque Elizabethan pile—Holland House—is, unquestionably, one of the most celebrated "nooks and corners" of the environs of the metropolis. The public have long enjoyed the privilege of walking within a few yards of the principal front of the mansion; it has long been esteemed as one of the delicia of the neighbourhood: perhaps, a more rural retreat it would be impossible to point to in the vicinity of London.

We are not, therefore, surprised to find that the desire of Lord Holland to divert the public footpath from this part of the estate has excited great interest in Kensington and Hammersmith. His Lordship, it appears, proposes to divert that portion of the footway leading from Notting-hill to Kensington, which commences at the north-east corner of the Park, in front of Holland House, and passes the north-west side of the same Park in a curved line; and then passes on along the west side of the same Park, in a south direction, to the high road, leading from Kensington to Hammersmith, extending in length 692 yards. In place of such footway so proposed to be stopped up, Lord Holland offers to substitute a footway on the east side of the Park, in front of Holland House, in a line with and in continuation of the present footpath, from the point at the north-east corner of the Park, in front of the mansion where the part of the footpath proposed to be stopped up commences; and extending thence along the east side of the Park in a south direction into the high road, and terminating opposite Earl-street, leading to Battersea bridge.

Yesterday week, a very numerous meeting of the inhabitants of Kensington was held in the National School Room, to take into consideration Lord Holland's proposal. The chair having been taken by Mr. Churchwarden Bellworthy, and some questions relating to what had previously taken place having been answered, Mr. Browne, Lord Holland's agent, declared that his Lordship would abide by the three plans which had been previously laid before the parish. (Cheers.) Captain Prior moved that the proposal of Lord Holland be agreed to, and Mr. T. Bird seconded the motion. After some desultory conversation, Mr. Milley proposed an amendment, declaring that, as the diversion of the footpath would be injurious to the interests of the public, as well as to the inhabitants of Kensington, the stopping up of the highway was inexpedient. The amendment having been seconded by Mr. Sullivan, was received with great disapprobation. Mr. Whittaker, Mr. Barlow, Captain Hood, R.N., and Mr. Hawkes, spoke in favour of the original motion; Mr. Davis and Mr. Heraputh supported the amendment, which was put from the chair and negatived by a large majority; the original motion was carried with but few dissentient voices, and the meeting broke up. It appeared from the speech of Mr. Hawkes that the new footpath is to be 50 feet in width, and that the whole footpath is to be dedicated for ever to the use of the public, so that there will always be a direct communication between the Great Western and other high roads which pass through the parish; there will also be a lodge at the south end of the footpath, and one near to Holland House, by which much greater protection will be afforded to persons using it. The Duchess of Bedford, whose grounds adjoin at the upper part, is understood to be ready to join in the improvement, and in giving additional protection.

Our Illustration shows the South Front of the Mansion, past which lies the path in question.

Addison possessed this property scarcely three years; yet, his genius invests the place with its paramount interest. "And now," says a recent writer, "let us glance at this fine example of picturesque architecture, with its park-like domain and pleasaunce, its 'windpipes of hospitality' (as an old writer has quaintly termed chimneys), its lofty gables, and enbayed windows—all characteristic of the proper mansion of the period. Its general plan is that of half the letter H; a public footway passes the south front, shown in the engraving; the eastern or garden front had on the lower story an arcade of wooden trellis-work, and had the interior stuccoed or painted in imitation of trellis-work, to match. On this side, was an approach to the Chapel, through gilt iron gates from the arcade. The only original apartments remaining on the ground floor, are the entrance-hall, and the two stair-cases. The one-pair contains the gilt-room, the library, and the sitting-room in the opposite wing; the rest of the interior is in the style of Inigo Jones, and supposed to be by him. The Library occupies the whole extent of the western wing, about 110 feet in length; and in the space between the book-cases and the ceiling, are portraits of eminent persons. The antique character of the mansion has been generally preserved. The late Lord Holland caused to be erected, at the carriage entrance from the road at Kensington, a lodge and a pair of metal gates, the latter gilt, and emblazoned, in appropriate Elizabethan taste."

LARGE IMPORTATION OF WEST INDIA PINE APPLES.

A CARGO of this hitherto valuable and delicious fruit, consisting of the immense quantity of 35,000 Pines, has, within these few days, been received by the Trinity yacht, Captain Hunnsell, in twenty-five days from New Providence, consigned to Messrs. Keeling and Hunt, Monument-yard; this being the largest quantity of Pines ever brought, at one time, to this country. A portion of the fruit was brought on the deck of the vessel, growing in the soil in which it was originally planted; and, as exhibited in the different floors at the warehouses of Messrs. Keeling and Hunt, gave them the appearance of huge pineries. This firm received, previous to the above cargo, upwards of 30,000 Pines, by steamers and sailing vessels; the whole of which went rapidly into consumption; and the annual supplies are now looked forward to anxiously by the public, who apply the fruit to pine-serving purposes, as well as dessert.

The bulk of this fruit is brought from the Bahamas, where the Americans, to the period of the first importations to England, enjoyed the exclusive purchase of the fruit from the natives; but, since the English have been in the market, the Pines have advanced 50 to 60 per cent. in value.

The Pine plants in the West Indies only bear for three years; and those of the last of the three years' growth are sent on the trees to England, and thereby make room for other plantations.

Eleuthera and Governor Harbour are two of the most prolific islands in the Bahamas for the growth of the fruit; and both places are equally celebrated for their turtles.

The Pines received this year are, unquestionably, superior to those of former seasons; the dry and warm weather having been favourable to their growth.

The Engraving shows the Pines as exhibited for sale, with the crown, main leaves and root; the varieties being "Bird's-eye," "Providence," and "Sugar-loaf."

On Wednesday, a sale of about 5000 Pines, and a number of Bananas, took place in Monument Yard. There was a numerous attendance of buyers, who purchased freely; the Pines selling at from 10s. to 40s. per lot of 20; and the Bananas from 8s. to 10s. per bunch

Lord Jocelyn, in his very intelligent little volume, entitled "Six Months with the Chinese Expedition," notes:—"Pine-apples at Singapore, although not equal to those of English hot-house growth, bear no comparison, from their superior flavour, with the same fruit of either East or West India growth. Here they are in such abundance, that captains of ships frequently purchase them by boat-loads to scour their decks; which, from the acidity they possess, have the property of whitening."

As Pine-apples are becoming economical luxuries, it may be useful to state that they may be kept a considerable time by twisting off their crowns; which are often suffered to remain and live upon the fruit, till they have sucked out nearly all the goodness

"In preparing to serve a Pine-apple, at table, first remove the crown, by placing round it a napkin, and twisting it out; then cut the fruit horizontally into slices; and, these being served, the scales and rind are pared off by the guests."—(Hints for the Table, page 86.)

EXHIBITION GROUND
HORTICULTURAL GDNS.
Barracks
Broad Walk
Terrace Walk
Parade
Kensington Street
Gate
Gate
Gate

PRESENTATION OF NEW COLOURS TO THE SECOND (QUEEN'S ROYAL) REGIMENT, AT GOSPORT.

the Arrangements for the Meeting, showing the respective localities of the Exhibitions.

The Exhibition Yard willjbe on the Race-course, nearly close to the high-road leading from Northampton to Leicester, within ten minutes walk of the market-place, and fifteen minutes walk from the railway station. Omnibuses will meet every train, and convey passengers to the Show Yard, or to any part of the town.

The Dining Pavilion will be erected on Manning's Close, in Bedford-street, about two hundred yards from the Market-square.

The general business of the Society will be transacted in the Grand Jury room, the entrance being through the County Hall, which adjoins the Nisi Prius and Criminal Courts, and situated in one corner of the Market-square.

The Lectures will be given in All Saints Schools, in Horse Shoe-street, close to the Theatre.

Since the original plan for the Exhibition Yard was decided on by the Council of the Society, the entries made for exhibition have been found to be so numerous, and so far beyond that of any preceding meeting, that a very considerable enlargement of the yard and shedding has been decided on. It may, therefore, be expected that the Exhibition at Northampton, especially as regards agricultural machinery and implements, will be the largest of the kind ever held in this or any other country

The space occupied by the Show Yard, including the Receiving Yard and Trial Yard, comprises nearly fourteen acres.

There have been used in covering the sheds and offices as much canvass, floor-cloth, and felt, as would cover, if laid out flatwise, twelve acres of land. The Pavilion is nearly as last year, being prepared for 1200 persons to dine in.

Next week we shall fully illustrate this great national gathering. A very useful "Guide to the Show," for Visitors, has been opportunely published by Messrs. Abel and Son, of Northampton.

PRESENTATION OF NEW COLOURS TO THE SECOND (QUEEN'S ROYAL) REGIMENT, AT GOSPORT.

ON Saturday afternoon, this distinguished regiment, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Carruthers, C.B., quartered at Forton, near Gosport, was presented with new Colours, by Lady Augusta Fitzclarence and Miss Fitzclarence, the wife and daughter of Major General the Right Hon. Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, G.C.H., Lieutenant-Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the district.

Preparatory to the ceremony, at half-past one, the Regiment formed in line to receive the General, who arrived at the hour appointed, accompanied by Lieutenant General Lord Saltoun, K.C.B., G.C.H., &c., Colonel of the 2nd, the staff, and the Ladies Fitzclarence. The Regiment then formed square, and the Colours were brought into the centre and placed upon the big drum head. The Rev. Henry Aubrey Veck, M.A., incumbent of St. John's, Forton, and chaplain to her Majesty's troops in Forton and Haslar Barracks, then delivered the following prayer:—

O Lord of Hosts, God of the armies of heaven and earth, look down, we beseech Thee, upon us, Thy sinful creatures, who come before Thee in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Saviour, to offer unto Thee our homage and to seek Thy blessing. Bless, O Lord, this day the work of our hands. O prosper Thou our handy work. We know, O Lord that the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong. We now, O Lord, implore Thy protection and blessing on these banners, which we would this day consecrate to Thy service and the defence and honour of our Sovereign and her dominions. In Thy name, O Lord, do we set up these banners; may they never be unfurled in an unrighteous cause; may they never be reared before an enemy; may they ever be borne by strong hands and faithful hearts, which, trusting Thee, fear none but Thee; may they ever be carried to victory, as in the plains of Italy and in the fields of Spain: and may victory ever be tempered with mercy to the vanquished. We pray, also, that these Colours may always be borne by this regiment as a token and pledge of their duty, fidelity, and honour,—of their loyalty and zeal—their fortitude and valour in the service of our most gracious and beloved Queen, and in the maintenance of our holy faith, our constitution, and our laws: and that they may put their hope and confidence in Thee, the great Captain of their salvation—the Lord of Hosts—without whose aid vain is the help of man.

Lady Augusta Fitzclarence then received the Queen's Colour from the Senior Major (Gilland), and presenting it to the Colonel, Lord Saltoun, addressed him as follows:—

"I feel exceedingly happy in being selected to present this Colour to your gallant Regiment, and I feel quite satisfied it cannot be given into better hands. I feel extreme pleasure in giving this Colour to you, Lord Saltoun, being one of my earliest and oldest friends."

Lord Saltoun having acknowledged the compliment paid to himself and the Regiment,

The Hon. Miss Fitzclarence presented the Regimental Colour to Major Lloyd. They were next consigned to the custody of Ensigns M'Carthy and Inglis, the Senior Ensigns. The Grenadiers then closed ranks, and wheeling to their left, proceeded to the centre, where they joined the Ensigns bearing the Colours, and trooped them in the usual form, concluding by the escort of the old Colours to the Orderly Room, the band playing "Auld lang syne." The line then wheeled back into open column right in front, and marched past the Generals in slow and quick time, Lord Saltoun (their Colonel) receiving the salute. After which, both Generals, accompanied by their staffs, inspected the Regiment in column, and bestowed on them the highest commendation

After the ceremony, a superb dejeuner was served to 300 guests, in a tent on the parade; the company, including Sir Charles Ogle (the Naval Commander-in-Chief), Rear-Admiral Hyde Parker, and their respective circles.

After the banquet, the guests adjourned to an elegant and appropriately fitted up ball-room, where dancing was kept up until a late hour, to the music of the band of the Regiment.

The chief figures portrayed in our illustration (from a sketch by Mr. Foate, of Portsmouth), are 1. The Rev. H. A. Veck, who consecrated the Colours. 2. Colonel and Mrs. Carruthers. 3. Town-Major White. 4. Rear-Admiral Hyde Parker, C.B., and Miss Parker; Ensigns M'Carthy and Inglis after receiving the Colours. 5. Lady Augusta Fitzclarence. 6. The Hon. Miss Fitzclarence. 7. General Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, G.C.H., &c. 8. Lord Saltoun.

On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, the Regiment vacated its quarters at Gosport, and left by the South-Western and North-Western Railways for Liverpool, where they embarked for Athlone, Ireland.

The Queen's gave up its distinguishing Colour—a superbly-embroidered green one—in 1796, by order. The fact was, as the Regiment was marching into Dublin, with its colours flying, when the Colonel then commanding, fearing that the colour would excite disturbance, on account of its apparent party character, ordered it to be furled on the spot while the Regiment was crossing a bridge, and it was never unfurled afterwards this Colour was, on the present occasion, suspended from the chief, or centre, pillar of the pavilion in which the banquet took place, and was an object of much interest—but, in 1825, they were allowed to resume it, making three Colours instead of two. They were accordingly presented with a new one—the Lamb on which was most beautifully embroidered by the hands of Lady Torrens in 1825, on the embarkation of the Regiment for India.

This distinguished Regiment was raised in 1661, when it is reported they mustered 1000 men. During the Colonelcy of John, Earl of Middleton, 1688, the Queen's had the honour of numbering among its volunteers John Churchill, Duke of Marlborough; William O'Brien, Earl of Inchiquin, 1675; Colonel Sir Palmes Fairborne, 1680; Lieutenant-Colonel Sackville, 1681; and Colonel Percy Kirke, 1682. In 1685, the Regiment was again called into active service at Sedgmoor, by the rebellion headed by the Duke of Monmouth. In 1689 the Regiment went to Ireland, and served with distinction in the army of King William at the Battle of the Boyne, on the 1st of July, 1690.

After the close of the war in Ireland, the Regiment was withdrawn by King William III., to reinforce his army in Flanders; and it distinguished itself at the battle of Landen (1693), and the siege of Namur (1695). The Regiment subsequently distinguished itself in action at the defence of Tongres, siege of Valentia de Alcantara, Albuquerque, Badajos, Alcantara, Ciudad Rodrigo, battle of Almanza, expedition to Canada; in the fleet, as marines, under Earl Howe, on the glorious 1st of June, 1794; at the Helder, at the battle of Egmont-op-Zee, at Alkmaar, battle of Alexandria, battle of Vimiera, battle of Corunna, expedition to Walcheren, battle of Salamanca, Vittoria, in the Pyrenees, at the battle on the Nivelle, Toulouse; and lastly, in India, under Lord Keane and Sir Charles Napier, where they participated in the achievements of the army of the Indus, and took an active and prominent part in the capture of Ghuznee and Cabul, which words are emblazoned on their Colours. In the latter glorious events the Regiment was commanded by its present commanding Colonel (Carruthers), then Major.

THE VACANT COLONELCIES.—His Grace the Commander-in-Chief has filled up the Colonelcies of the 72nd Highlanders, and 45th Foot, vacant by the deaths of Sir Colin Campbell and Sir Fitzroy Maclean, agreeably to the following arrangement:—General Sir Colin Halkett, K.C.H., goes from the 31st to the 45th, which has a double battalion. Lieut.-General the Hon. Otway Trevor, formerly of the Coldstreams, receives the vacancy in the 31st. Lieut.-General Sir Neil Douglas changes from the 81st Foot to the 72nd Highlanders; and the consequent vacancy in the 81st Foot is filled up by the appointment of Major-General Thomas Evans, C.B., late of the 70th Foot.

THE OLD AND NEW COLOURS OF THE SECOND (QUEEN'S ROYAL) REGIMENT.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, July 18.—Seventh Sunday after Trinity.—The Sun rises at 4h. 8m.

MONDAY, 19.—Venus sets at 8h. 52m. p.m.—The Sun is due E. at 7h. 17m.

TUESDAY, 20.—The Moon enters her First Quarter at 0h. 53m. p.m.—St. Margaret

WEDNESDAY, 21.—Mars rises at 10h. 57m. p.m. near the E. by N. point of the horizon.

THURSDAY, 22.—St. Magdalene. The Sun sets at 8h. 2m. The Length of the Day is 15h 52m.

FRIDAY, 23. Saturn rises at 9h. 33m. p.m.—The Day has decreased 44 minutes since the Longest Day.

SATURDAY, 24.

The constellations Aquila Cygnus and Sagittarius are on the meridian at about midnight during this week

ERRATUM IN THE WEEK ENDING JULY 2.—Time of full moon, for 37*h.* 10*h* 8*m.* P.M., read 23*d.* 1*h.* 33*m.* P M

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 24.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M A	M A	M A	M A	M A	M A	M A
h m h m	h m h m	h m h m	h m h m	h m h m	h m h m	h m h m
2 23 | 5 55	6 10 | 6 39	7 0 | 7 31	7 50 | 8 20	8 39 | 9 7	9 25 | 9 49	10 13 | 10 47

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"A. H."—The late Earl of Portsmouth's name was John (not Coulson) Wallop. He died 15th May, 1797.

"A Correspondent" informs us that Laurence Washington, of Gersdon, was grandson (not son) of Laurence Washington, Esq., of Sulgrave, from whose eldest son Robert descended the American General. The statement will be found fully explained in a recent work entitled "Acta Cancellaria."

"Juvenis Ignoramus."—A Degree at the London University will not curtail the period of a Law Student's probation at the Inns of Court. £100 is the sum generally paid to a Special Pleader for one year's attendance at the Pleader's chambers.

"A Hoary Reader." We prefer Ackermain's "Numismatic Manual." Submit the coin to Mr. Webster, Medallist, 17, Great Russell-street, Covent-garden.

"J. P. L."—Mr. Duncan Turner resides at Yarmouth. Mr. Turner is an Honorary Member of the Central Committee of the Archæological Institute. Trinity College, or St. John's, Cambridge.

"A. B. C."—The wheels of the carriage for the removal of the Great Wellington Statue from the Foundry to the Arch were lent for the purpose by the Great Western Railway Company. (See the details in No. 281 of our Journal.)

"A Subscriber from Barley-street."—The cost of binding our Journal in covers made for the purpose (to be had at our Office) is 5s. per volume.

"Sherwood Forest."—We cannot, at present, promise the Portraits.

"J. R.," Rotherham, should write to Cadell and Co., Edinburgh, for their List, with specimens, of the several Editions of Sir Walter Scott's Works.

"An Elector." "Are."

"Gloucester."—Galvanised Iron is successfully employed for water-pipes.

"J. C." and "E. C."—We shall illustrate the subject fully, though not by anticipation. The paper, we infer, will be printed in full in the Proceedings of the Association

"E. St. B."—The question of "Cockades" is difficult of solution. General custom in this country restricts the usage to the servants of naval and military officers.

"W. H.," Glasgow.—The Christian name of the present King of Sweden is Joseph Francis Oscar. He reigns as "Oscar I." Prince Oscar is but third son. The Count de Paras is her-apparent to his grandfather, Louis Philippe. Should the Queen of Spain have a son, of course he will not be incapacitated from succeeding to the Spanish Throne by the Treaty alluded to by our Correspondent. Egypt is a dependence of the Sublime Porte, but its Government is vested hereditarily in the family of Mehemet Ali. Napoleon Buonaparte was born at Ajaccio, 15th August, 1769. Legally, no one is entitled to bear the arms of a family from which he cannot prove his descent. A grant from the Crown is obtained by petitioning the Earl Marshal, through the Heralds' College, at an expense of about seventy-five guineas

"M.," Dublin.—is thanked for his offer; but, we have not received the Lunes.

"J. M. H."—c. Cavan, should write to the Editor of the Journal in question.

"A Madrid subscriber" should order our Journal on the large envelope.

"E. E. H."—Mr. Brahan's address is 3, Gloucester-place, Hyde Park.

"S. E.," Dursley.—The Engraving in question occupied about six days.

"G. W.," Guernsey.—Postage not paid.

"J. M. E."—See the Memoir of Mdlle. Lind in No. 260 of our Journal, page 272.

"Enfy."on." Stove.—Pontet's, Cockspur-street.

"Eliza" Salop.—We do not know.

A Constant Reader.—We do not see how the suggestion can be made with propriety.

"E. G.—Apply for American Newspapers to Messrs. Wiley and Putnam, 12, Paternoster-row.

"G. P.," Nottingham, is thanked; but we have not room.

"J. O.," Greenock.—Her Majesty will, it is expected, leave town for Scotland, in the first week of August.

"X X X," Jersey, is thanked, but, we cannot spare room for the Sketch.

"J. B." will find the Bazaar noticed in our "Metropolitan News."

"W W W" Ashtead.—Address the Church Pastoral-Aid Society, Temple Chambers, Falcon Court, Fleet-street.

"Anxious." We cannot give the information required.

"Alice."—The lieutenancy of a ship is not affected by the illegitimacy of its mother.

"X. Z. Z." Hereford.—The annual pay of a Colonel of Dragoons is £1000, if appointed on or before the 31st of March, 1834; £500, if appointed after that date and a Colonel of the Line, £600; or half-pay, according to seniority, if caused an expenditure of more than £1,000 per annum.

Mary Cornelia, wife of Viscount Seaham, is only child of Sir John Edwards, Bart., of Garth, in the county of Montgomery: her marriage took place on the 3rd of August, 1846.

"Florence."—"Cousins once removed" implies the relationship existing between the member of a family and his or her cousin of the next generation.

"A Correspondent." There is no such title as Marquis of Aberdeen. It was evidently a misprint for "Marquis of Abercorn."

"A Constant Reader."—A Foreigner cannot sit in the English House of Commons

"L. C. C." Cossack: Orange body and cap, with scarlet sleeves. Miami: Red jacket; black cap.

"A Subscriber," Exeter.—On Jan. 1, at noon, the distance of the Sun from the Earth was 93,400,000 miles, nearly; and, on July 1st, at noon, the distance was 96,587,000 miles, nearly.

"A Subscriber from the Peak."—Yes: the time of New Moon in July was inadvertently inserted for that in June

"An Inquirer."—We do not remember the Song in question.

"E. W.," Exeter, may find the information sought in the Local Guides: we cannot spare time for such searches.

"J. P.," Belfast.—A pamphlet of information for Tourists, as to Custom-House Duties, is published by Mr. Knight, 22, Ludgate-street

"A Subscriber"—We cannot, at the moment, ascertain the name of the steamer.

"A Constant Reader."—The Royal Academy of Music is in Tenterden-street, Hanover-square.

"Minta."—The general opinion is, that the Moon has an influence on the weather; but, in fact, she has very little indeed, if any

"T. U. V."—The wax impression is from a Swan Coin of Maximinus.

"A Constant Reader."—The distance from Southampton to Aden is about 5000 miles; from Aden to Bombay, about 1800 miles; and from Bombay to London, about 14,000 miles.

"Cornelia."—We will see

"Wilhelm." Apply as a Fencing Academy.

"A Subscriber."—The usual passage of a Steam-ship from London to New York is from 15 to 18 days.

"A. D."—No license is required.

"A. H. W."—Poaching was punished with death under the old Forest Laws of England, and the penalty was often inflicted.

"Puter." The question is under consideration of the Government.

BACK NUMBERS.

All Numbers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, one month old, will, in future, be considered "Back Numbers," and be charged each sixpence extra.

The Back Numbers are now reprinted; and any single Number from the commencement may be had by remitting One Shilling to the Office, or to any Bookseller or News-agent.

The Volumes and Parts will be charged the same as usual, viz., Volumes, 18s.; Parts, 2s. 6d.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JULY 17, 1847.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL has made further preparations for the end of the session: several measures have followed the Health of Towns Bill, and have been withdrawn. But that the present is a year of exceptional circumstances, and that much cannot be expected of a Minister who governs with a Parliament really hostile to him, though the feeling is suspended, there have been failures enough to injure any party in public estimation. Russell's policy, at present, seems very undecided and inconsistent. In the Education Scheme and the Creation of New Bishopric, he has tried to conciliate the Church party; yet he stands with a Jew candidate for the City, to the terror of the same party for which he has done so much, it is believed for the purpose of testing the question of the civil disabilities of that persuasion. It is not a little curious to hear him receiving in one day the praises of Sir Robert Inglis and the condemnation of those who would concede nothing to either Jew or Catholic.

Whether the failure of so many measures has irritated the Premier, or Dr. Reid has failed to keep the House of Commons cool enough, we cannot say; but the Premier, in one instance at least, seemed to lose both tact and temper in the uncalled-for remarks he made on Mr. Hume. He told the Member for Montrose his words had no weight, for he did not seem to understand the meaning of them—that he had a chartered liberty to say what he pleased, since nobody felt it as censure.

It was to this effect that the Premier spoke of the oldest and ablest of his non-official supporters! The manner of such things is often more regarded than the matter; and that of Lord John was cold and bitter, as if he really wished to give pain, or avenge himself for instances of opposition too sturdy for official equanimity. But Mr. Hume is looked on now as a patriarch of the party, and the Premier's gratuitous sneer pained all who heard it.

There is something of real influence even in the personal department of Rulers, which all Ministers should remember. A statesman need be strong all round before he can afford to alienate, and cast them off. After all, a vote on a division is not all that a Minister should rely on; there is a social side even to politics, and a harsh and repulsive manner of dealing with men will sap a party as surely if not so soon as bad principles. The personal opinion we have of a man influence immensely our feelings as to his actions; start with a personal prejudice against a Minister, and it is amazing how soon you begin to pick holes in his policy. The importance of manner and bearing seems to be underrated by more than one public man of the day on both sides. When they are natural and spring from a genial disposition they are all powerful; even if they have to be assumed, the assumption is better than the total want of them. Lord John has to sell's outbreak on Mr. Hume was positively ill mannered as well as ill tempered. The present Premier both want cordiality of manner in public; possibly they are all the better when they unbend to the select few in private; but we cannot help thinking even there it must cost an effort, the other manner seems so natural. Are official cares so unrelenting as to banish all freedom from the outward deportment? Mr. Disraeli, in the early part of Sir Robert Peel's Government, said plainly that the coldness of manner with which the Premier treated them had caused just dissatisfaction among several members of the party. This was before the great offence came and absorbed all minor discontents. We have seen Sir Robert Peel in the House laugh at an opponent; we cannot recall his doing the same thing with a friend. Sir Robert Walpole was an immoral man and a not very upright Minister; but, from what you read of him, he must have been personally liked; he would come from his brain for something besides red tape and official statistics. He would bet a guinea with an Opposition member and throw it across the table to him when he lost; very indecorous says some stickler for the solemnity of the Treasury Bench; it would be if not done well and heartily, as we are sure Walpole did it. In the same spirit, he was the life and soul of his social parties. We may rely on it his bonhommie served him well as many a pinch.

A party wants a social side to brighten and soften matters; but official dinners at the "residence in Downing-street" are not the thing required. The Whigs have been losing terrain in society ever since Holland House and its glory departed; the world hears no brilliant things from among them, or from those they gathered round them. They produce nothing but dreadful Acts of Parliament, that fail—poor specimens of things bad at the best. They have spent eight millions of money, and not balanced it with a single joke! Not a mot or a repartee to record for all that pull on our pockets. Mankind will avenge itself on the hustings for such a wrong. The Whigs make a mistake when they think they are great in office; they never were higher in public opinion than when office was twenty years away from them, and they could fight the Tories with nothing but epigrams on a speech. To be sure, Tom Moore launched the poetry, and Sheridan and Fox the prose! But now—why are there no more "Twopenny Postbags?" Because the party has grown official and Parliamentary, and ignores everything that does not come out of, or go into a red box. And now, when they cannot produce a flash of wit among them, to light their steps among the graves of their defunct measures—not a genius to lend them a lift of his wing over their difficulties—the spirit of ill-temper has descended upon them, and prompted their chief to speak bitter words of one of the most respected men the party holds in its ranks. Has the ill success of his measures soured him? It may be; but it was a great error; Mr. Hume's character and services outweigh those of half the Ministry; a sneer now recoils from him on its author. We hear that the attack, unatoned for by an apology, is awakening much wrath in the City.

THE political signs and symptoms of affairs in France are suggestive of danger. The influence of the King has overcome all the efforts of every Ministry, and nothing has been attempted in the way of internal improvement. Did it not frequently happen that men of exceeding cunning are really imprudent, we should think it impossible so clear-headed a Monarch would have suffered affairs to get into such embarrassment. Of all the evils of a State, the worst is financial difficulty; and the deficit in the French revenue is appalling. It is not that the resources of the country are failing; the revenue itself rather increases than diminishes; but the expenditure is enormous. Algiers alone is a devouring fiery furnace, that melts down millions, and gapes for more. The "system" is wearing out; the sacrifice of everything to the King's family has become too apparent, too continual. Where so few political demonstrations are made, a political banquet becomes important. At the dinner just given at Paris, the King's health was excluded, and the Marseillaise was sung! Charges of peculation, of the lowest kind, hang over the Ministry; some being proved gives a colour to many that are, perhaps, false. But even should they change the Government, with the present electoral body and the influence of the King, all the Ministries will resemble each other. An additional and painful interest has been given to the official inquiry by the attempt of M. Teste to commit suicide.

THE DISSOLUTION OF PARLIAMENT.—We hear, in an official quarter, that Parliament will be prorogued by her Majesty in person on Thursday next, the 22d inst., and that the dissolution will take place immediately afterwards.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES &c.

OXFORD. July 10.

This being the last day of Act Term, a Congregation was holden, when the following degrees were conferred:

M. A.—The Rev. C. G. Newcomb, of Oriel College.

B. A. V. C. Smith, Fellow of New College; A. F. Westmacott, of Merton College; J. Denman, of Lincoln College.

In a Convocation holden previously, the following gentlemen were admitted ad eundem:—The Rev. F. M. Walter, B.D., of St. John's College, Cambridge; the Rev. J. Williamson, M.A., of St. John's College, Cambridge; the Rev. W. H. Hill, of Trinity College, Cambridge; E. D. MacDermot, Bachelor in Medicine, of Trinity College, Dublin; the Rev. W. A. Newman, M.A., of Trinity College, Dublin.

THE BISHOP OF MANCHESTER.—Rumour assigns the new Bishopric of Manchester to Archdeacon Musgrave, brother to the Bishop of Hereford.

THE WEATHER.

The weather during the past week has been very fine, the temperature of each day being higher than that of the preceding till the 12th, and remaining as high after this time, the air being sultry. There has been but little wind, the direction of which has been from the S.W. or the S.S.W. The reading of a thermometer on grass has been as high as 132°, and as low as 36°; the daily range during the last few days has been from 70° to 86°, and to these extremes vegetation has been daily exposed. The following are some particulars of each day:

Thursday, rain was falling during the morning; the sky was covered with cloud till two P.M., after which time the sky was partially covered with cumuli, cumulostrati, and haze. The average temperature of the day was 62½°. Friday, the greater part of the sky was covered with cumuli, cirrostratus, and scud, throughout the day. The average temperature of the day was 63½°. Saturday, the sky was chiefly overcast till 8h. P.M.; after this time it was cloudless. The average temperature of this day was 68°. Sunday, the sky was clear and cloudy alternately, with much haze; and the day was sultry. The average temperature was 70½°. Monday was a fine day; there were a few cumuli scattered over the sky; the day was hazy and sultry; the average temperature was 74½°. Tuesday was a fine day, but very sultry, close, hazy, and the air was calm, with nearly a cloudless sky; its average temperature was 75°. Wednesday was a very sultry day; the sky was partially covered by a thin haze; its average temperature was 73½°. Thursday was a fine day, with a gentle air from the E., and much less sultry than the preceding days had been; its average temperature was 72½°. The average temperature of the week ending July 15, was 70½°.

The average temperature of the month of June was 57½°

The extreme thermometrical readings were:—

Thursday,	July 8	the highest during the day was	73½ deg.,	and the lowest was 52 deg.
Friday,	July 9	.....	73½	 53
Saturday,	July 10	.....	77½	..... 60½
Sunday,	July 11	.....	80½	 61
Monday,	July 12	.....	83½	 61
Tuesday,	July 13	.....	85	..... 58½
Wednesday,	July 14	.....	86½	 60
Thursday,	July 15	.....	85	 60

Blackheath, Friday, July 16, 1847. J. G.

N.B.—In writing from Uffington the two preceding weeks, I have given short notes upon the then state of the crops in the neighbourhood of Stamford and the country around, as found by personal inspection, as well as from good authority, and to the time I left, July 8, there was no appearance of the potato disease. On July 13, I received a letter from a friend, a clergyman, of Uffington, who had assisted me in my inquiries, and he states that the potato disease has certainly appeared. A gentleman, who has been travelling about the country during the last month, and in whose judgment I can place implicit confidence, told Mr. Stackhouse that for the last month he had been looking for it, but he had not decidedly seen it till Wednesday and Thursday, July 7 and 8, and he most clearly saw it on Friday, July 9, at Stratford-upon-Avon. Mr. Stackhouse has sent me some affected leaves, taken from his own plants at Uffington, which I have examined well with good glasses; but, beyond a deep discolouration, I have not seen anything upon them. In appearance the stalks rows of plants are affected, whilst parallel rows on both sides are unaffected.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

On Sunday morning the Queen and Prince Albert, the ladies and gentlemen of the Court, and the domestic household of Buckingham Palace, attended divine service in the private chapel in Buckingham Palace. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Stanley.

On Monday, the Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal, took an airing in an open carriage and four. At three o'clock there was a full Chapter of the Order of the Bath, when the Earl of Dundonald was invested with the badge of a Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath. Sir Charles William Pasley and Rear Admiral Sir Hugh Pigott were invested with the insignia of Knight Commanders of the Bath.

On Tuesday the Queen and Prince Albert honoured the performance at her Majesty's Theatre with their presence.

ARRIVAL OF HER MAJESTY AT OSBORNE HOUSE.—Her Majesty, Prince Albert, and the Royal Family arrived in town on Wednesday afternoon, and arrived at Osborne House about six in the evening. The weather was beautifully fine; and the Royal party remained on deck during the time occupied in crossing the Solent.

PRINCE WALDEMAR OF PRUSSIA.—His Royal Highness visited the Tower on Monday; attended the Investiture of the Order of the Bath in the afternoon; and dined with the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge. On Tuesday, his Royal Highness went to Woolwich, and lunched with the officers of the garrison at the mess-room. He visited the Thames Tunnel on his return, and, in the evening, went to her Majesty's Theatre. Prince Waldemar left the Queen's Hotel on Wednesday, and went to Bushy Park, to visit her Majesty the Queen Dowager. Lord and Lady John Russell had the honour to receive his Royal Highness, Prince Lewenstein, Count Castell, Count Grotkau, and Baron Mauer Munchhosen at dinner, at the noble Lord and Lady's residence at Richmond. A select party was there to meet the Royal guest.

DEPARTURE OF SIR R. PEEL.—Sir R. Peel left town on Wednesday, accompanied by Lady Peel and family, for Drayton Manor, Staffordshire, for the season.

LORD LANESBOROUGH.—Lord Lanesborough succeeds to an Irish estate, situate within a few miles of Dublin, of the yearly value of £3000, in addition to which his Lordship comes in for a large share of £400,000 in the public funds, principally the accumulated savings of his cousin, the late Lord Lanesborough, whose unbounded love of living for many years past must have caused an expenditure of more than £1,000 per annum.

ARISTOCRATIC MARRIAGES.—The following marriages among members of the aristocracy are about to take place:—Lord Bernardale, son of the Earl of Caithness, with Miss Philips, only daughter of Mr. G. R. and the Hon. Mrs Philips. The Lady Jane Bouverie, second surviving daughter of the Earl and Countess of Radnor, to Mr. Montague Cholmeley, son of the Right Hon. E. Elliot. M.P. The Hon. Charlotte Hanbury, second daughter of Lady Bateman, and sister of the present Peer, to Mr. Whyte Melville, eldest son of Mr. John and Lady Caroline Whyte Melville (of Bennochy), and cousin of the Duke of Leeds. The preliminaries are also settled for the marriage of Mr. George Granville Harcourt, M.P., eldest son of the Archbishop of York, with the Countess Dowager of Waldegrave, widow of the late Earl, and daughter of Mr. Braham, the celebrated vocalist. A matrimonial alliance is about to take place between the Lady Caroline Leveson Gower, third daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, and the Marquis of Kildare, eldest son of the Duke of Leinster.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

THE STATUE OF PRINCE ALBERT IN THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.—The marble statue of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, subscribed for by the merchants of the City of London, is about to be erected in the vestibule of Lloyd's, in the Royal Exchange, in commemoration of his laying the foundation stone of that splendid edifice. Workmen are engaged in preparing the pedestal for the figure, which will be raised in the course of the ensuing week.

COURT OF COMMON COUNCIL.—Summonses have been issued to the Cabinet Ministers to attend a Council at the Foreign Office to-day (Saturday) at two o'clock. At this Council the Royal Speech on the prorogation of Parliament will be considered, previous to its committing it for her Majesty's approbation.

ELECTION FOR FINSBURY.—Mr. Samuel Warner, the barrister, is a candidate for Finsbury, on Conservative principles.

LAMBETH ELECTION.—On Monday evening Mr. C. Pearson attended a meeting at the Horns, Kennington, to explain his political sentiments. In a lengthy address he advocated the extension of the suffrage, vote by ballot, the repeal of the window tax, and repeal of the duty on fire insurance. A resolution was carried declaring Mr. Pearson to be a fit and proper person to represent Lambeth. A Mr. Leaver has become a candidate in the Conservative interest for this borough.

WARD OF FARRINGDON WITHOUT.—A Wardmote was held on Monday, in the New Court, Old Bailey, to elect a Common Councilman for Farringdon-Without, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Dr. Lynch. Mr. T. H. Fox was selected.

MEETING AT THE EAST INDIA HOUSE. On Wednesday, a Special General Court of Proprietors was held at the India House, for the purpose of laying before the Proprietors a resolution passed unanimously by the Court of Directors, for granting an annuity of £1000 to Major-General Sir George Pollock, G.C.B. The resolution was moved by Mr. Henry St. George Tucker, chairman, in an address detailing the services of Sir George Pollock in the recent Indian wars. The motion was seconded by Sir James Law Lushington. The Court having been likewise addressed by several Proprietors in support of the motion, the resolution was carried unanimously, and the Court adjourned. The pension is to commence from the day when Sir G. Pollock relinquished his seat in the Council of India.

FALL IN THE PRICE OF BREAD.—On Thursday a general reduction of 1d. took place in the price of the loaf of bread throughout the metropolis. The best wheaten bread may now be obtained for 7½d., country bread 6½d. and 5½d the 4lb, and fodian corn bread 4½d the 4lb.

THE MODEL BATHS AND WASH-HOUSES, WHITECHAPEL.—On Wednesday, that portion of the building intended for the men's baths of the Model Bath and Wash-house establishment in Goulston-street, Whitechapel, was opened for public inspection. The entire erection covers an area of about 4000 square feet, and that part opened on Wednesday forms the north division. It contains about 30 separate bathing rooms, each 10 feet by 8, formed by solid blocks of slate, fitted with the necessary requisites, and supplied with hot and cold water by a powerful steam apparatus, placed in the centre of building. These baths are divided into three classes, each having a distinct entrance. They will be opened for public use on Monday, and will, it is hoped, be duly appreciated by the class for whose especial benefit they have been erected. Want of funds has delayed the completion of the wash-houses, and of the baths for females.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS IN THE METROPOLIS.—The number of births in the week ending July 10, was 1199, of which 618 were males, and 581 females. This number exceeds that of the preceding week by 78. The number of deaths was 882 (424 males and 448 females), thus being less than the births by 317, less than the deaths of the preceding week by 51, and less than the weekly average for the last five summers by 58.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

Several conferences took place with the Commons upon the subject of amendments made to bills.

The Drainage of Land (Scotland) Bill went through Committee.

Progress was made with several bills, and the House adjourned at an early hour

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

NEW MEMBER IN THE ROOM OF MR. O'CONNELL.—Dr. Power took the oaths and his seat for the county of Cork, in the room of the late Mr. D. O'Connell.

THE RAJAH OI SATTARA.

Hr. HUME moved for certain returns connected with the Rajah of Sattara.

SIR J. C. HOBHOUSE defended the conduct of the Government and the East Indi- Company with respect to the Rajah of Sattara, and said that he could not agree to the motion.

Mr. HUME did not persist with his motion, and the subject dropped.

THE POOR LAW BILL. Lord J. RUSSELL intimated that it was the intention of the Government to restore the clause struck out by the House of Lords respecting the separation of aged paupers.

ADJOURNED DEBATE ON THE RISEOPRIC OF MANCHESTER BILL.

The adjourned debate upon the question of going into Committee on this bill was resumed.

In the course of a preliminary conversation, Lord J. RUSSELL said he would consent to a limitation of the number of Bishops.

Mr HUME reiterated his objections to the measure, and moved, as an amendment, that the House should go into Committee on Monday.

Upon a division, Mr. Hume's amendment was rejected by 63 to 18, and the House went into Committee on the bill.

The remainder of the night was chiefly devoted to the discussion of the bill in Committee.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO SCOTLAND. It is, we hear, now arranged that her Majesty, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and suite, will embark at Woolwich on Saturday, the 31st of this month, or on Monday, the 2nd of August. The junior branches of the Royal Family are expected to remain at Osborne House during her Majesty's visit to Scotland.

COLONIAL APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. Macdonnell, the Chief Justice of the Gambia, is to be the new Governor; his successor in the Chief Justiceship is not yet appointed. Lieutenant-Colonel Rolfe goes from Adelaide to assume the Deputy Adjutant Generalship at the Mauritius, and will be succeeded at Adelaide by Sir Henry Young (for some years Colonial Secretary in Guiana), who now leaves the Western District of the Cape Colony.

DEATH OF THE DERGUE OF O'CONNELL.—A letter has been received from the Rev. Dr. Miley, dated Sienna, July 3, 1847, from which the following is an extract: "We are unfortunately detained here by the sudden illness of the hon. member for Dundalk, Mr. Daniel O'Connell. This will explain the cause which has caused the sailing of the Montrose steamer from Genoa, without the remains of Mr. O'Connell."

INJURY OF FLORENTINE PAINTINGS AT ETON COLLEGE CHAPEL. During the extensive repairs which are now going on at the venerable chapel attached to Eton College, a large number of fine old paintings were discovered under the removal of the oak panelling from the walls of the sacred edifice. Some of these paintings, which appear to have been executed by Florentine artists between 1440 and 1480, and which are in a very fair state of preservation, represent a variety of miracles alleged, by the Romish church, to have been performed by the Virgin Mary. It appears that when the choir was enlarged, under the superintendence of Sir Christopher Wren, these fine, some of which were not considered very appropriate ornaments, at that time, for a place of worship, were hidden from view behind the oaken panelling. Hence their preservation up to this period. It is the intention of the Provost and Fellows of Eton to cause as many of these rare works of art to be preserved as will not interfere with the extensive alterations and embellishments now in progress in the interior of the Chapel. It has been suggested that the old oak panelling should be replaced, and that doors should be made to open in front of the paintings, so that they might at any time be inspected by visitors to the chapel, artists, and others. It may be mentioned that some of the subjects represented are not exactly suited for public exhibition in a Protestant place of worship; but, as works of art, it was deemed proper that they should not be destroyed.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

The case against M. Teste and his associates was concluded on Tuesday evening, and the Court was afterwards to sit in private till it gives judgment. The Paris Correspondent of the Times asserts, "in high authority," that the four accused would respect only be found guilty; that M. Teste would be sentenced to the maximum punishment prescribed by the law) refund the 1,000f. he had obviously received from M. Pellaprat, and would go to the galleys for life, with the hospital chain, for a fine of double that amount, and the loss of his civil rights. The Peerage he had already resigned. M Parmentier would also be condemned to the maximum of imprisonment and a fine, with the loss of his civil rights. General Cubières would be sentenced to two years imprisonment, a fine of 200,000f. the loss of his Peerage, and of at least his civil rights. The sentence on M. Pellaprat would be in every respect the maximum, because of his confidence.

The Paris papers state that shocks of an earthquake were felt in the Department of the Seine Inférieure, at about midnight on the night of the 30th ult. At Fécamp the shock was violent, and created a general panic among the inhabitants, but no damage was done beyond the smashing of crockery and the derangement of furniture. The oscillating movement lasted about eighteen seconds, and was in a direction of from north to south. The communes near Fécamp were also affected by the convulsion, and in the valley of Marcombray two shocks were felt; but they did no further harm than to derange furniture. At Gerville the oscillations were very strong, and the dismay of the inhabitants was extreme; but after a few seconds, the movement ceased. At Gerville and Goderville also shocks were felt.

ASSIZE INTELLIGENCE.

A WIFE CONVICTED OF ATTEMPTING TO POISON HER HUSBAND.

At the ASSIZES at Chelmsford, on Tuesday, Sarah Elizabeth Hume, 24, was indicted for attempting to administer to Thomas Hume, her husband, a large quantity of a certain deadly poison, called sugar of lead, with intent to kill and murder him.

It appeared from the evidence of the prisoner's husband, who was considerably older than herself, that he was a widower at the time he married the prisoner, and had some grown-up children. For some time prior to the month of April he had been suffering from a liver complaint; and a man named Marchant, who lived in the same village, and who, it appeared, had the reputation of being able to cure the disorder in question, had been prescribing for him, and had supplied him some pills. On the 7th of April, the prisoner was observed by her daughter-in-law to be mixing up some flour and water to a thick paste, and she then moulded it to the form of two large pills, which she placed upon the oven; and when they were dried she put them into a box which contained some of the pills that had been sent by Marchant. At this time her husband was bed-ridden, and it appeared that she tried to persuade him to take some of the pills she had made. From circumstances that had previously occurred, he had some suspicions of her intentions, and after observing that the pills were too large and too strong for him, he refused to take them. The prisoner pressed him to do so, and told him that Tom Warner had said that they were just the things for his complaint, but he pers sted in his refusal. The next day she again pressed him to take the large pills, but he refused, and it appeared that after this they were handed over to the police. The prosecutor also stated that a short time before this happened the prisoner had brought him some fried potatoes, and he found they had such a nauseous taste that he would not eat them. He had also had takes; and upon another occasion she brought him some broth, which had the same taste, and he refused to drink it. Sarah Elizabeth Hume, the prisoner's daughter, proved that she saw her mother make up the large pills and place them, with the small ones, in the box, and she afterwards saw her offer the same pills to her father, and press him to take them, upon two occasions. Another witness, a neighbour, proved that she saw her mother make the mutton broth; she first also stated upon the occasion when her mother made the mutton broth, she first put some white powder into a basin, and mixed it up, and then poured the broth into it. When her father refused to drink it, the prisoner told her to throw it away, and, at the same time, directed her to wash the basin and scrape it quite clean. The prisoner said it was not true that she asked her to wash the saucepan; she did it herself.

FOX, the constable who took the prisoner into custody, said that, upon his showing her the large pills, she at first denied all knowledge of them, but she afterwards admitted that she had attempted to administer them to her husband, but she said she did not intend to poison him.

It was then given in evidence that the two large pills referred to, upon their being analysed, were found to contain 263 grains of sugar of lead, and that, in the state of health of the prosecutor, that quantity would certainly have caused his death.

The prisoner, in her defence, merely denied the charge.

Mr Baron Parke, having summed up, the jury, after deliberating for a few minutes, returned a verdict of "Guilty."

The learned Judge ordered the prisoner to be transported for life.

The prisoner heard the address of the learned Judge with apparent indifference, and the moment the sentence was pronounced she sprang to the side of the dock where her husband was standing, evidently with the intention of inflicting an injury that might be in her power upon him. She was immediately seized by two or three turnkeys, with whom she struggled with the most desperate determination. Finding herself overpowered, she turned towards her husband, and as she could and grinned at him, and with a most savage expression of countenance, muttered imprecations upon him, the poor old man trembling in every limb, and apparently almost dead from fright.

A YOUTH SENTENCED TO DEATH FOR MURDER.

On Thursday, James Wilmore, a youth of 17, was indicted for the wilful murder of John Terry, by fracturing his skull with a hoe The deceased was an old labouring man, l ng near the town of Rochford, and on the 31st March, which was the day he received the injury that terminated in his death, he was on his way to that town about ten o'clock in the morning. The prisoner, it seems, had been lodging at a public-house in the village of South Fambridge, about four miles from Rochford, and left the public-house and proceeded in a direction to the town of Rochford on the same morning. It seemed that, soon after this, the prisoner and the old man joined company, and they were seen by several of the witnesses walking together towards a place called the Mead, near Daggett's Farm, on the road to the town above-mentioned, the prisoner at the time having a hoe in his hand, and the deceased a hoe-staff without the iron end. About eleven o'clock of the same morning, the poor old man was found lying in the Mead, in a dreadful state. He was covered with blood, and the top of his right ear was completely severed from the head, and was found in a mass of clotted blood among his hair. His pockets appeared to have been rifled, and his watch, a canvass purse, a key, and a small sum of money, were missing. He had sufficient consciousness to state that he had been robbed and ill-used, and he was taken in the parish workhouse at Rochford, where he remained until the 22nd April, when he died.

Circumstantial evidence was given to connect the prisoner with the murder, and the Jury found him guilty, but recommended him to mercy. Mr. Baron Parke sentenced him to death.

PERJURY IN THE DAGENHAM MURDER CASE

At Chelmsford, on Wednesday, Thomas Kempton, formerly a police-constable of the K division, was found guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury in some depositions he had made relative to the murder of the Policeman Clark at Dagenham, which depositions took on objection to the form of indictment, which, he said, merely averred that the offence was committed on a certain day in the year 1846; and he submitted that the indictment should have contained the words, "in the year of our Lord."—Mr. Baron Parke appeared to be of opinion that there was something in the objection; and he said he should take time to consider of it

Isaac Hickton, another constable of the same division, was then arraigned upon a similar indictment, arising out of the same transaction.—The Jury found him "Guilty," but recommended him to mercy.

On Thursday, Mr. Baron Parke intimated that upon consideration of the point of law, he should pass judgment, which he did, and sentenced both Kempton and Hickson to pay a fine of 1s., to be imprisoned for a week, and then to be transported for seven years.

THE LATE ACCIDENT AT WOLVERTON.—At Buckingham, on Saturday last, Bernard Fossey was tried on an indictment which charged him, being a policeman in the employ of the London and North Western Railway, entrusted with the charge of certain points at Wolverton, so negligently and carelessly conducted himself in the discharge of that duty, on the 8th of June last, as to cause a train of passengers to pass from the main line of rails on a siding devoted to goods trains, whereby a collision occurred between the said train and certain coal-waggons on the said siding; and such injuries were inflicted on one John Langston Hilton, then being a passenger in the said train, that he died thereof. Six other and similar indictments and Coroner's inquisitions charged the prisoner with having caused the death of six other parties. The prosecution were conducted in the Queen's name by the recorder, that it is unnecessary to repeat them. The Jury returned this verdict:

"We find the prisoner guilty, but we blame the company for not keeping two men at the posts." Mr. Baron Alderson sentenced Fossey to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for two years.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

MURDER AND SUICIDE AT BERMONDSEY

Early on Tuesday evening, the vicinity of Hickman's Folly, Dockhead, Bermondsey, was the scene of a deplorable crime. A young man murdered a girl to whom he had been paying his addresses, and then destroyed his own life.

The unfortunate female was a good-looking young woman, named Matilda Griffin, aged nineteen, and lived with her mother, a decent hard-working woman, at No. 6, Hickman's Folly (a narrow thoroughfare leading from Jacob Street, opposite the Catholic Chapel, to the creek or water-course). The wretched man was a linen draper's assistant, known by the name of Henry Parker, aged twenty-three, who lodged in the same house as the unfortunate girl. From the statements made to the police by the friends of the deceased, it appears that for some time past they had been keeping company together, and up to within the last three or four days they seemed to be ardently attached to each other. Parker, it appears, had of late shown more attachment than otherwise. Suddenly, however, a marked change presented itself between the parties; the girl, whether from the fact of Parker having lost his employ, or other circumstances, has not yet transpired, began to hold herself aloof from his solicitations, and eventually took no notice of his advances. As may be surmised, this produced considerable depression on the mind of Parker, who, it is said, threatened mischief to her and her new lover, he having heard that she was about to attach herself to another person, merely to annoy him. This took place as late as Monday evening, and it is said that she took but little notice of the threat he had held out, which may be partly accounted for from the circumstance that she shortly afterwards walked out with the party who had excited his jealousy. During her absence it was noticed that the excitement of Parker was greatly increased, and, by the wildness of his manner, it was feared that he was bent on some dreadful act. Nothing in the house that he meditated some serious act. On her return, about eleven o'clock, he again endeavoured to gain her attention; she, however, avoided his advances, and told him, in the presence of her parent, that she did not want his company any more, for she had the affection of another whom she liked better." High words then ensued between them, and Parker, provoked by her "if she would not be his wife she would not be another's, for he would cut her throat and his own too." They then retired to their respective rooms, but it is seems that he never went to bed, as her mother was frequently awoke by him walking about the room. On coming down stairs, his appearance and manners fully showed the disturbed state of his mind, so much so as to create much alarm amongst those in the house. Even while some of the lodgers were at dinner, the girl observed to them in a loose manner, "that she must mind her p's and q's, for she was to have her throat cut," little thinking, no doubt, of the probability of that dreadful deed being realised so soon. Hours passed by In the course of the afternoon, about three o'clock, she left her mother's company and went up stairs to make up the beds, and the last that was heard of her was her singing. Parker had been out several times in the course of the day, returned about a quarter of an hour after she had gone up to the upper rooms. He seemed much flurried, and was noticed to stumble several times on procuring to the stairs. On five o'clock drawing nigh, the mother remarked to her son, who was sitting in the kitchen with her, "that Matilda was very quiet, and that she would go up and see what she was doing." The poor woman, on arriving at the room, on the frightful scream alarmed the inhabitants The lodgers instantly ran to her aid, and, on entering a back attic, a horrible sight presented itself. Near the fireplace lay the girl, with her head nearly severed from the neck of course, a corpse, and the lifeless body of Parker laying partly over her, his throat being frightfully cut. Several medical gentlemen were quickly called to the spot, but their assistance was of no avail, as the couple had been dead some time. From the position the bodies were in when discovered it would seem that the poor girl was in the act of making the bed in the room next to his when her life was taken, and it is more than probable that he secretly stole from his apartment, and, catching her by the hair, cut her throat with a razor he held in his hand, and then divided his own. Their death must have been instantaneous. The most singular fact is, that the nurse which must have attended this shocking affair was not heard by any of the lodgers

One of the M division of police, named Richard Johns, 121, found in Parker's room an open letter, which, on further search, was handed over to the parochial authorities, who shortly took possession of the house.

The letter is in Parker's handwriting, and therein states the motive he had for destroying the life of the unfortunate girl and his own.

According to another account, Griffin and Parker had been keeping company together for eighteen months or two years. On Monday night, the female went out with a male acquaintance. The prisoner, in a state of excitement, without Parker, who, on hearing of it, threatened to do something desperate. Upon examining the neck of Parker three gashes in his throat were discovered.

The Coroner held an Inquest took place at the King's Arms, Hickman's Folly, Bermondsey, before Mr. W. Carter

The above circumstances having been formally given in evidence, the Jury returned the following verdict:—"We find that the deceased Matilda Griffin was wilfully murdered by the deceased Henry Thomas Parker, and that he, the said Henry Thomas Parker, did feloniously kill himself."

FATAL EXPLOSION AT FAVERSHAM.

On Wednesday forenoon a loud explosion took place in the neighbourhood of Faversham, and, on investigation, it was found that the powder-mill of Mr. Hall, used for the manufacture of gun-cotton, was in ruins. Two persons were found dead among the debris, and many other persons were found in a most lamentable state, with but little chance of their surviving the injuries they had received. Several others were extricated, so much mutilated that they could not be identified; while portions of bodies were found in all directions, scattered in the fields and adjoining grounds. Up to seven in the evening it was ascertained that from eighteen to twenty men, women, and children had fallen a sacrifice. It appears that Mr. Hall had recently added to his long-established business of powder manufacturer that of preparing gun-cotton, and had appropriated two buildings at the western end of his premises for works for that purpose; in these the explosions took place, one after another in immediate succession; the first which blew up appearing to be that in which this newly-invented combustible substance was deposited in its complete or finished state. The mine fell principally in a north-west direction, tearing up several trees, and burning and razing to the earth a field of wheat to a considerable distance, where might be identified; while portions of the human frame, and the remains of the various mangled stones, bricks, and pieces of metal, which had formed the various machinery, as also remnants of wearing apparel, which had been worn by the sufferers, and, in several instances, portions of the limbs of the victims were found in the fields and adjacent meadows. Among those killed is Mr. H. Toppings, a practical chemist, from London.

COLLISION ON THE BRIGHTON RAILWAY.—An accident of a serious nature occurred on the Brighton Railway, between ten and eleven o'clock on Monday night The annual excursion of the Printers' Pension Society took place on that day to Brighton, and all proceeded well, until, on the return of the train, when near the New Cross station, a fearful collision took place. It appeared that a Croydon train was but a short distance before the excursion train, and so near that the latter train was frequently slackened; but on nearing New Cross station, the ex- train was brought with great violence against the foremost carriage of the [illegible] train. The engine [illegible] and literally [illegible] four carriages, the [illegible] of which was of the most tremendous description. After the delay of an hour, the train was again set in motion, and on its arrival at the terminus at London Bridge, several persons were conveyed to Guy's and St. Thomas's Hospitals, where assistance was rendered. Several passengers were much injured. One person, Mr. Wm. Stammers, of 9, Little Cadogan-place, Bond-street, had some of his ribs fractured; another person had his leg cut; two had their eyes injured; two ladies had their knees contused, and some others received minor injuries. Except Mr. Stammers, none of the parties taken to the hospital were so injured as to cause their detention. An investigation was gone into on Wednesday afternoon, at the London terminus, before Mr. F. Greenfell, for the purpose of inquiring into the cause of the accident. Several of the company's servants were interrogated, but they were unable to throw any light upon the affair, and the investigation was adjourned.

TREMENDOUS RAILWAY ACCIDENT. A dreadful accident occurred on the Manchester and Bolton line on Saturday evening. The engineer of a luggage train, consisting of thirty-six waggons, on its way to Manchester, about eleven o'clock in the evening, felt the engine jerk immediately after perceiving something lying across the rails. He did not stop the train, however; and, on arriving at the Salford Station, it was found that a quantity of hair and a piece of bone were also lying to the wheels and guards of the engine, and there was also blood on all the wheels of the carriages. On returning to the spot with the engine, the head and chest of a human body were found without the rails; and about three yards further on, and on the other side of the rails, the legs and part of the body of a man. On examination of the remains, they were found to be those of a watchman employed at the Clifton coal pits, who, it was supposed, had left his work about half an hour before, to keep watch. He was in a state of intoxication, and appears to have got over a fence to cross the line; but he had a habit, when drunk, of lying down in any exposed situation he might chance to light upon, and fall asleep, heedless of consequences. The conjecture is that he had done so in this instance, and, lying with his right leg across the rail, had been cut in pieces as above described.

ALARMING STEAM-BOAT COLLISION.—A violent collision took place on Tuesday, near Northfleet, between the Satellite and the Eclipse steamers. Both boats were crowded, and were steaming at full speed, when they were seen coming into immediate contact. The crash was dreadful. The bowsprit of the one ran into the near bow of the other: all were in deepest consternation. Many were for throwing themselves overboard, believing that both boats would launch with the shock. Others were fainting, most were in dreadful confusion, but, worst of all, one of the passengers, a man, named Moore who was near the bow, had his leg and thigh smashed by the force of the boat. Only a few inches nearer, the bow is low, and all in both boats might have perished. The vessels, however, with the exception of the bowsprits, paddle-box, &c., escaped unhurt. At Gravesend the poor sufferer was got on shore, where every attention was paid him by the master of the poorhouse, and also by Mr. Grimshaw, surgeon, who as soon as possible amputated the limb near the thigh.

SUDDEN DEATH IN BOW-STREET.—On Wednesday afternoon, a gentlemanly looking man, about fifty years of age, was observed to stagger and fall in Bow-street, Covent-garden. He was assisted into a chemist's, when it was found that he was labouring under the effects of a coup de soleil. The usual remedies were applied, but without effect. Nothing being found on the body to lead to identification, it was removed to St. Giles's workhouse.

MANSLAUGHTER.—On Wednesday Mr. Carter held an inquest at the Windmill, High-street, Lambeth, respecting the death of Mary Allsworth, aged 68 years, lately residing at No. 23, High-street, who died from the effects of injuries caused by a man named James Bruce, on Saturday night last. The jury, after hearing the evidence of the witnesses, and the testimony of Mr. Yellowley, the surgeon, who attributed death to the rupture of a bloodvessel, resulting upon external violence, returned a verdict of "Manslaughter against James Bruce," who stands committed to Horsemonger-lane gaol to await his trial.

COMPENSATION FOR RAILWAY INJURIES. At the SHERIFFS' COURT, last Saturday, a case was tried, Bromley v. the Eastern Counties Railway Company, in which the plaintiff sought compensation in damages for injuries sustained whilst a passenger on the Eastern Counties Railway, on the 18th of July, 1846. A judgment had been suffered to go by default, and a writ of inquiry was then executed for the assessment of damages, which were laid by the plaintiff at £5000. Evidence having been given, the Jury assessed the damages at £500.—There was also an action brought by the plaintiff for damages sustained by his wife, on the same occasion. The parties agreed to take a verdict for £150, making in the two cases £650. The wife was seriously bruised, and she received several cases £650. The wife was seriously bruised, and she received several contusions, had a fractured leg, and other hurts, from the effects of which she kept his bed for twenty-four weeks, entailing medical and other contingent expenses to the amount of £250.

RAILWAY INJURIES COMPENSATION COMPANY.—The extension of railways, and the unfortunate accidents which have lately taken place, has induced some gentlemen to project a company under the above title, with the view of providing a compensation for every degree of injury that can occur to a person by accidents on railways. The premium once paid ensures compensation in case of accident through the non-payment of any further premium. The capital is £1 10s., with annual payment of £1 1s. will £10 10s., with annual payments. The payment of £1 1s. will secure to a person receiving an injury rendering medical advice necessary, a sum sufficient for maintaining the assured from getting a livelihood, £50; for the loss of a limb, £250, and for the loss of both limbs, £500, to the legal representative; while the sum of £10 10s. would ensure for the same injuries, £500, £2000, and £3000, respectively. Females are assured at half price, we presume as there is supposed to be less danger to them. There is a scale of compensation for companies' servants who meet with injuries "not occasioned by any voluntary act" of their own.

THE LONDON PRINTERS' PROVIDENT RETREAT.—On Tuesday, the Anniversary of founding this excellent Institution was celebrated in the grounds at Abbotts Langley, adjoining the King's Langley Railway Station. The company left London in the direct train, and soon after their arrival at Abbotts Langley, the terminus of a lodge, at the verge of the grounds, was laid in due form, by Mrs. Rodgson, the wife of the Treasurer to the Association. This good work being completed the party proceeded by a procession into the fine grounds facing the Retreat; the weather was splendid; and a military band in attendance played several fine compositions in masterly style. The guests, numbering about 150, sat down to an elegant dinner, served up in the open air, and then in a large marquee, by Messrs. Staples, of the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate. The collation was of the best kind; and there was a profusion of those seasonable luxuries, fruit and champagne. Mr. Berkeley Hill, M.P., presided, supported by Mr. C. Longman, Mr. B. E. Green, Mr. E. Hodgson, the Rev. Mr. Gee (the Vicar of Abbotts Langley), Mr. W. Jerdan, Mr. Dickenson, the eminent paper manufacturer, who so generously presented the ground for the site of the Retreat; and several other influential persons connected with the bookselling trade. After the collation, some appropriate toasts were drunk, and several subscriptions announced, including a donation of twenty guineas from the worthy Chairman, who, in advocating the claims of the Institution, stated that, during the past year, three inmates had been received at the Retreat, who had each served four years under one master. The party broke up about six o'clock, and returned to town by railway, highly gratified with the day's excursion. (A view of the Retreat, with full details of its establishment, was given last year, in our Journal for July 25.)

EXHIBITION OF WORKS OF ART, IN WESTMINSTER HALL.

LAST week we were obliged to defer the additional notice we had promised of the Westminster Hall Exhibition. This promise we now redeem, and in our paper of to-day present our subscribers with two of the Prize Pictures—"The Burial of Harold," by Mr. F. R. Pickersgill, to which the first premium of £500 was assigned by the Judges employed; and "Alfred Inciting the Saxons to Prevent the Landing of the Danes," by Mr. G. F. Watts, to which the second premium of £300 was awarded by the same competent authorities.

Our readers will, perhaps, remember a remark we made on the former occasion. "With the Judges' decisions," we said, "it would be impossible to find fault; nor could six better Judges have been selected." The pictures to which the premiums have been awarded are, unquestionably, the best in the collection, of the particular character the Commissioners required. Nor can we find much fault with the general plan of the prize pictures in the three classes. When merits are nearly equal, and premiums restricted to certain sums, one man may and will receive a larger premium than the one who is next him. Thus, Mr. Armitage is the last on the list of those to whom five-hundred-pound premiums have been assigned, and Mr. Cross the first on the list (the next list) to which three-hundred-pound premiums have been given; yet, perhaps, in the eyes of the Judges, there was very little difference between them—certainly, as it turns out, nothing in value to two hundred pounds—the amount of the difference between the two premiums.

The finding the body of Harold at Hastings, and the burial of Harold in Waltham Abbey, have long been popular subjects with painters. Each admits of great variety of composition, anatomy, and expression; one, a dead warrior and an anxious lover; the other, a tapered rite and a weeping woman. That found on the field at Hastings, historians seem pretty well agreed upon; that his body was recognised and removed by his beloved Editha, will still continue to be believed; and that he was buried at Waltham, in Essex, was the conviction of the monks of Waltham, who were accustomed to point to the brief but expressive inscription on his tomb—"Hic jacet Harold infelix." The subjects, whether true or not to the stern realities required in history, are nevertheless traditionally and pictorially true; and Mr. Pickersgill, in selecting "The Burial of Harold" for the subject of his competition picture, has shown great judgment in the selection—completely justified by the careful and well-considered treatment of it in every part. The licence assumed by the artist of representing the body—not sadly decomposed, as it was said to have been found, but in that middle state between the vigour of life and of first decay—is a painter's licence; a proper licence, for had the picture been painted true to the story as it has come down to us, the subject must have borne a repulsive character. But Mr. Pickersgill has shown his usual judgment in avoiding the artistic improprieties of the [illegible] and [illegible] these [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE WESTMINSTER HALL EXHIBITION.

"BURIAL OF HAROLD AT WALTHAM ABBEY."—PAINTED BY F. R. PICKERSGILL.—PREMIUM £500.

THE INSTALLATION AT CAMBRIDGE.

THE INSTALLATION IN THE SENATE HOUSE.—THE PRINCE-CHANCELLOR PRESENTING A MEDAL TO THE WRITER OF THE PRIZE POEM.

We resume our series of Illustrations of this magnificent Ceremonial with the Proceedings on Tuesday Commencement Day.

THE PRINCE CHANCELLOR PRESENTING THE CHANCELLOR'S MEDAL to Mr Henry Day, Scholar of Trinity Hall, for his Poem on Sir Thomas More.

Throughout the Ceremony in the Senate House, the body of the Hall was densely filled: and, it may be imagined what the unfortunate tenants of that locality had to suffer for their loyalty, when a lane had to be formed to admit the passage of the Prince Chancellor and his suite. He was greeted with a tremendous burst of applause, in which the Undergraduates particularly distinguished themselves. The Duke did not make his appearance until after the Prince had taken his seat.

THE ROYAL PROCESSION IN THE SENATE HOUSE.

At about half-past ten, the National Anthem was heard outside, accompanied by tremendous cheering, announcing the approach of the Queen. Her Majesty was met at the door of the Senate House by the Prince-Chancellor, and conducted to her chair of state on the platform. This occurred during the recitation of the Latin poem. A basket of roses was placed before her Majesty's footstool and

(Continued on Page 44.)

THE ROYAL PROCESSION IN THE SENATE-HOUSE.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

It has already been remarked that Mdlle. Lind's pre-eminence arises from the extraordinary combination of natural and acquired gifts which she presents. It is not the isolation of one peculiar talent, but the union of several, which render her the wonderful artist she is. To the most delicious natural organ, she combines the most admirable "production of voice," as it is technically termed, of any living artist. While in the facility and brilliancy of her vocalisation she is unrivalled, her execution of slow and cantabile passages has a beauty peculiarly its own, and reaches every heart. To this marvellous superiority in vocal power, she adds a dramatic genius which places her on a rank with the greatest actors of this or any other epoch; and her gifts for tragedy and comedy are so equally balanced, that none can decide in which her powers shine forth most transcendent. Hardly less remarkable is her judgment in her performances. She never disappoints the listener, and maintains the illusion unbroken from beginning to end.

The only manner of obtaining an adequate idea of her gifts would be by attending the theatre when, as in the past week, she performed, one after another, of her parts, as, for example, "Robert le Diable," "La Figlia del Reggimento," "La Sonnambula," "Norma," all characters essentially different, and, in each of which, those who have heard and seen her, will find it but scanty praise to say that she is pre-eminent. Of the particulars of her performance it is scarcely necessary to speak, they have been already so often commented on. The constant presence of her Majesty, who has scarcely, we believe, missed a single appearance of the Nightingale when in town, would alone prove that these performances do not lose in interest upon repetition.

"La Figlia del Reggimento" was performed again on Thursday night, and the same ovations were unanimously accorded to Mdlle. Lind, as on every representation of this sparkling opera, which improves each night it is performed. The applause after the celebrated scene of the singing lesson was most vehement and long continued. Mdlle. Lind re-appeared, and gracefully bowed her thanks; Gardoni was in excellent voice; and F. Lablache played and sung with his usual comic spirit. The new ballet divertissement, "Les Elémens," concluded the entertainments. "La déesse de la Danse," Taglioni, will appear in a few days.

THE NEW OPERA OF VERDI.

From all parts of the Continent the great Impresarii are arriving in town to witness the performance of "I Masnadieri." MM. Duponchel and Roqueplan, the directors of the Grand Opera of Paris, arrive to-night: M. Vatel, of the Italiens, is expected to-morrow. This opera written expressly for the great talents now at her Majesty's Theatre, and developing the peculiar features of each, is founded on the far-famed drama of Schiller, which created such a great revolution amongst the critics of his time. In the opera is reflected powerfully the lights and shades of that great work, which, from its melodramatic tinge, is so well suited to the lyrical drama, and particularly to the peculiar style and genius of Verdi, now engaged from morning till night in preparing its first performance, on Thursday next. To imagine how attractive this opera may prove, it is only necessary to peruse the following cast, which will baffle every company in Europe to reproduce with equal splendour:—Carlo Moor, Gardoni; Francesco, Coletti; Massimiliano, Lablache; Friez, Bouché; Daniele, Corelli; Amalia, Jenny Lind.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Donizetti's "Anna Bolena" was repeated on Saturday and Tuesday, and, notwithstanding the heat of the weather, the new Theatre has been well filled, the attendance of rank, and fashion being as brilliant as ever. Grisi's injured Queen has been the talk and admiration of the town; such has been the display of her vocal and histrionic genius. Mario was in splendid voice on both evenings, and his "Vivo ancor" must be vividly encored, as was, of course, the romance of Smeaton, "Deh I non volerr," so divinely sung by Alboni. Corbari's Lady Jane Seymour, Tamburini's Henry the Eighth, and Tagliafico's Rocheford, present strong features of interest in the completion of the cast.

Perrot's interesting ballet of "La Peri" was produced on Tuesday night, with Mdlle. Plunkett, Mdlle. Baderna, Mdlle. Bertin, &c. Mdlle. Plunkett's flying leap created the usual sensation.

On Thursday night, for the benefit of Mdlle. Alboni, Donizetti's "Lucrezia Borgia" was given, and the scena, "In queste semplice," from Donizetti's one-act opera of "Betly." Mdlle. Alboni has appeared in seven characters, every one of which has been a great triumph for her—namely, Arsace, in "Semiramide;" Isabella, in "Italiana in Algeri;" Maffio Orsini, in "Lucrezia Borgia;" Armando di Gondi, in Donizetti's "Maria di Rohan;" Rosina, in "Il Barbiere di Siviglia;" Carlos Quinto, in Verdi's "Ernani;" and Smeaton, in "Anna Bolena." She was received with the greatest enthusiasm in the Orsini, and had a double encore, as usual, in the drinking song. She was also called upon to repeat the Betly scena, in which the heroine boasts of the joys of liberty, as she is all the time attended as a peasant. The maîreté of her acting, and the exquisite charm of Alboni's Tyrolean variations, created quite a furore. She was called for, to receive two ovations, after the scena. Grisi's Lucrezia, Mario's Gennaro, and Tamburini's Duke, were as fine as ever; they were all in excellent voice. Marini secured an encore for the chorus, "Passiam la notte," in the Prologue.

FRENCH PLAYS

Mademoiselle Rachel's engagement is drawing near to its termination. She performed, on Wednesday evening, the part of Agrippine in Racine's "Britannicus;" and was announced to appear as Jeanne d'Arc last evening. On the former night the house was well filled, despite the heat, which raised the thermometer during the day higher than it has been known for a long time in England. Mademoiselle Rachel is announced also to play Célimène in Molière's comedy of "Le Misantrope" on Wednesday next, it being her first appearance in that character. There is no doubt of the latter performance being very well attended; and Mr Mitchell deserving of a bumper, were it on nor having provided during the early months of the year one of the most elegant and interesting amusements that London can offer.

LYCEUM.

A one act piece, by Mr. H. R. Addison, was brought out here on Thursday evening, called "The Ninth Hour." Although stated in the bills to be "new and original," it savours very strongly of French origin, both in its incidents and its construction, which, but for a little carelessness at the end, appeared to be unmistakeably foreign. However, we will not raise a question about this; suffice it to say that the drama was entirely successful: the interest turning upon the escape of a French refugee from a prison at the time of the Revolution, at the "ninth hour" of the watch. In an old guard she discovers her father, whom she had formerly ran away from. He aids her escape, but is found on the sentinel dies as the guard is about to be assured in her looking so ill. Miss E. Daly had a little part of a servant, which she made much of by her intelligence and care; and Mr Oxberry was sufficiently funny in a servant, but he wanted more to do. The applause at the conclusion was unanimous, and Mr. Emery announced the piece for repetition every evening amidst renewed tokens of approbation.

After the new piece came a divertissement, in which the [illegible] the chief features. Signora Dolores Serral is a very pretty [illegible] Her attitudes are exceedingly characteristic, and there is a joyous appearance of abandon and animal spirits in her dancing which is very attractive. Signor Mariano Camprubi would do well to dress in a more manly style. Au reste he is active and energetic enough. Mr. Fiexmore and Mademoiselle Louise Blanche were encored in a tarantella. Miss Massall danced a clever medley pas, and Miss Rose a Highland fling. The house was tolerably well filled. Several novelties are in preparation, including a new ballet; a new two-act piece by Messrs. Mayhew, Reach and Hamilton; and a new three-act drama by Mr. Shirley Brooks.

ADELPHI

"Out on the Sly" is the name of a very comical piece by Mr. Selby, [illegible] forming with as much laughter from as good audiences as can be expected [illegible] country weather, at the Adelphi. We have often been surprised that Granby Hall and Rosierville have not been more frequently taken as the subject for a farce. They are now so well known, and such comical incidents are constantly taking place there, that a dramatist would only have to make a short stay in this locality to pick up "situations" for a dozen good vaudevilles. The name of the present interlude allows you at once to form a notion of the plot. A lot of persons determine, privately and individually, to go to Rosierville "on the sly," and the dramatic interest of the piece turns upon their meeting there. This has been done many times before, in various ways, by the characters in our farces; but what has not been done is an excellent quadrille, danced by the parties whilst they are all in a desperate rage with one another [illegible] convulsed the house with laughter; and Mr. Selby's eccentricities, as [illegible] Gent, were not the least amusing features of the piece. One [illegible] whether to admire him most as an author, an actor, or an indefatigable dancer. The various dramatis personæ will, we prophecy, be "out on the sly" for some time to come. It requires no ordinary attractions to draw anybody to the theatres during this Syrian-roasting weather; but Mr. Webster contrives to secure very fair attendances—and this with the penny and halfpenny steamers taking one hundred pounds a day from the pleasure-seekers, who swarm upon them. "Title Deeds," with the clever acting of Mr. Wright and Miss Woolgar, goes admirably; and "Flying Colours" concludes the evening pleasantly enough.

HAYMARKET.

Mr Frederick Webster, the stage-director of this theatre, contrived to make out as attractive a bill as we remember to have seen, for his benefit, on Tuesday evening; and, in consequence, the house was crammed. Besides "The Provoked Husband" and "The Jacobite," the Adelphi company appeared in "Black-Eyed Bagman," and there was an agreeable Concert added to these entertainments, in which three very Little pupils of Mr. F. Chatterton played a trio on three harps in a manner which took the audience by storm. Two young brothers, Lionel Holmes, created a similar sensation, by some excellent violin playing. And Mr. John Parry was encored in "The London Season." Mademoiselle Adèle, from Drury-Lane, danced a bolero with Mr. A. Webster; and, altogether, everything went off famously. We must not omit to mention some charming singing by Miss F. Horton, and some popular pieces of music well played by the band, under the direction of Mr. Howell.

On Wednesday next, the performances at this theatre will be for the benefit of that popular favourite, Mr. Buckstone, who will play Sorob, in Farquhar's "Beaux Stratagem," for the first time. Mr. John Reeve, son of the celebrated comedian, will, also, make his first appearance in public, in one of his father's characters, whose sir comics he is said largely to inherit.

VAUXHALL.

It may be readily believed that the Royal Property has been flourishing this last week; for it is just the weather to sit in the open air, drink sherry-cobblers and listen to music. On Monday, the graceful Caroline commenced a fresh engagement; and the performances in the arena were also strengthened by the débuts of Madame Lejars and Mdlle. Pauline Cuzent, who, with the Lousets and the Redouins, form a first-rate company.

Everybody who has been to Paris will recollect the elegant Cirque Olympique, the summer theatre of the Champs Elysées, in the Champ Elysées. It is a vast circular tent, capable of accommodating many thousand persons, with a splendid orchestra of fifty musicians, erected over the passage by which the horses enter the ring. All the accommodations for the performers, and for the audience, and the display of the performances, are carried out in first-rate style. The costumes are superb and tasteful beyond all description; the general air and appointments perfectly unique. The music is, in itself, a great treat. For all this, one and two francs will admit you; the entertainment lasts from eight until half-past ten: the first riders and equilibrists in the world are engaged: and the Cirque is always crowded. Madame Lejars—not Lejarr, as she is called and the Cuzents were the stars of [illegible] [illegible] its some eight or nine years ago. Since then, they have been [illegible] in the favour of the Emperor. We remember Madame Lejars' clever equestrian scena of the Garde Noble, and a young act of gymnastics she used to perform on a spirited steed, without either saddle or bridle. The "pas de trois sur deux chevaux" of Petit Cuzent, dressed as a French postilion, was also very effective. There were others with whom time cannot yet have dealt otherwise than lightly. Where is the graceful Madame Hasten and Virginie Aucher? Where the two dare-devil brothers Lataine, and the inimitable Auriol? The clever little boy, Le Petit Fortuné, has, if we mistake not, grown up into the M. Dumont, of Ast ey's. The managers of equestrian theatres would do well to engage their eye upon all these personages, if their services are still available.

Madame Lejars made her first appearance in a pleasing cachucha, very nicely danced, but wanting in effect. She will do well to substitute some more striking scena for it; and a little attention is required on the part of the band. The music and the performer were evidently not d'accord, which is fatal to an act of horsemanship. Mdlle. Pauline Cuzent rides in the school of haute equitation, after the manner of Caroline. She is very bold and sure; a feat in which she excels perilously against the boundary of the arena, and stops suddenly, was loudly cheered. On Wednesday evening, she nearly met with an accident, from the girths slipping round with her saddle; but, this being remedied, she rode off again with a good-humoured confidence that elicited a hearty round of applause. Country friends "down the line" may come up by the South-Western train, which reaches Vauxhall at 10 minutes to 9, and enjoy an agreeable evening: sleeping in the neighbourhood; and, if they cannot come again to breakfast the next morning, wherever their home may be, between this and Gosport or, we think a special train on Saturday evening would be a great "hit."

PRINCESS'.

The libretto of a popular light French opera—"Ne Touchez Pas à la Reine" has been turned into an agreeable burlesta at this theatre, under the title of "Dying for a Kiss." An amusing writter in the Times has given the plot in a refreshing enough to stand by itself, although Mr. Loder has introduced some very agreeable melodies, sung with much effect and taste by Madame Vestris. In its denouement, it reminds us much of "Les Amours de la Couronne." The subject is very slight, but there is in all these French comic and courtly pieces an elegance and agreeable equivoque which keeps up the attention of the audience to the last. They are much, it is true, to be translated; and our stage lacks the polish of the continental ones. But "Dying for a Kiss" was sufficiently applauded to take its place amongst the most successful pieces produced here of late; and the remarks above made do not certainly apply to Madame Vestris, whose acting was perfection.

MUSIC.

SPOHR'S "FALL OF BABYLON."—There have been two performances of this oratorio, at Exeter Hall, by the Sacred Harmonic Society, conducted by the gifted composer, who was expressly invited to this country for that purpose. The "Fall of Babylon," which was written for, and first performed at the Norwich Musical Festival, in 1842. It was repeated the following year, at the Hanover-square Rooms, at a Concert given to Spohr by the musical profession, and there Exeter Hall amateurs paid him the compliment of engaging him to direct his work, presenting him with a piece of plate on the occasion. We think, for divers bearings, that the "Fall of Babylon" is the weakest of Spohr's oratorios, in which only his early habits and thoughts; but when he approaches the Hellenian subjects, such as the prayers, supplications, and thanksgivings of the Hebrews—when he essays to describe the awful handwriting on the wall of Belshazzar's Feast—then are his inspirations weak and commonplace. To Spohr may be ascribed astonishing learning. His instrumentation is most elaborate, but his chromatic combinations become monotonous and heavy after a short time. He has formed Mendelssohn, in making together the elements by brief [illegible] symphonic bits of modulation. In the forms of fugue writing Spohr is not a proficient—his style is too dajoin ed. The most striking airs are "No longer shall Judea's children wander," a Tyrolese Ballad, with oboe accompaniment, sweetly sung by Miss Birch, and encored; the song, "Dear child of bondage," sung by Miss Poole charmin ly; the air of Cyrus, "O what is man?" and the song of the Israelitish women, "Sing to the Lord," which, with the solos, chorus and quartet, "Lord, before thy footsteps kneeling," is an elegant round, which we loudly encored. The Gluckish chorus, "The lion roused," is characteristic. There is also a pretty quartet, "Strike the harp," in the second part. We were gratified to witness the cordial reception given to Spohr. He is one of the greatest composers of the age—one who has contributed largely to the stage and chamber, exquisite models. —On Friday next (the 23rd) will be the last appearance, when he will conduct his masterpiece, "The Last Judgment;" the cantata of "The Cordelian's Prayer," and well produce, for the first time, Milton's version of the 84th Psalm, set to music by Mendelssohn.

MDLLE EMMA UCELLI'S MATINÉE MUSICALE. At the Beethoven Rooms, in Harley-street, on Monday, this concert was given, and was fashionably attended. The bénéficiaire is a pupil of Mr. Balfe, and has much talent. She sang compositions by her mother separately. Mdlle. Ucelli was powerfully aided in the scheme by Mdlle. Alboni, who sang in a concerted piece and two Bacchanalian songs, Signor Marras, Gardoni, Brizzi, and Tamburini. The solo instrumentalists were Madame Dulcken (piano), Signor Emiliani (violin), and Signor Piatti (violoncello). The accompanyists were Signor Benedict and Mr. Lucas.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The fourth and last concert of the season was given on Saturday morning. It was more numerously attended than on any former occasion; indeed, in this respect, as well as in the progress of the pupils, the Academy had every occasion to be satisfied. There was a Sinfonia in E flat, by Mr. Baily, a student, who had evidently taken Haydn as his model, and adhered to him pretty closely. The work is clever, and, with more effort, although it may make no claim to originality. The Harp Concerto, by Mr. Thomas, seemed to provoke a strong difference of opinion. He played it well, and is an honour to his master, Mr. Balaye (Bochsa). The vocalists were the Misses Dolby, Rainforth, Salmon, Solomon, D'Ernst, the sisters Holroyd, Mr. Weeks, Mr. St. Albin, and Mr. Pollard. Miss Austen and Mr. J. Whitehead Smith played pianoforte pieces. There was an elegant Pastoral and Chorus from one of the Earl of Westmoreland's operas in the scheme. Mr. Lucas ably conducted, M. Sainton being first violin.

ITALIAN GRATUITOUS CONCERT.—At the Annual Concert given in aid of the Italian Institution, at the Hanover-square Rooms, on Wednesday, the Duke of Malfi and Duke de Glimes, Mdlle. Alboni was encored in the ballad from "Maria di Rohan," "Per non istare [illegible]," in Mercadante's "Ah! rammento;" John Parry, in "Lalla Rookh," gave his usual imitations of "The London Season," and Salvi, Rovere, and Marini, in the Pappatacci trio, from the "Italiana in Algeri." In addition to these artists, Madame Romorini, Mdlle. Steffanoni, Mdlle Corbari, Signori Lavia, Marras, Tamburini and Lablache, from the Royal Italian Opera, gave their aid, in addition to Madame Tagliafico Miss S Novello, Signors Marras, Galli, and Brizzi; Piatti, the violoncellist. Begondi, the contrabasso, and Benedict, the directing conductor.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF MUSICIANS.—The annual public rehearsal, on Monday morning, and performance on Wednesday night, at the Hanover-square Rooms, of Handel's "Messiah," have produced a considerable sum to the funds of this admirable Society. The artists, on these occasions, give their aid gratuitously. The principal vocalists were Madame Caradori Allan, Miss Hirch, Miss Dolby, Miss S. Novello, Miss M. Williams, Messrs. Harvey, Lockey, Machin, and A. Novello. Sir H. R. Bishop conducted, and Mr. T. Cooke led the band.

M. ROCSKELOT. The Concert at the Beethoven Rooms, given by this accomplished violoncellist and composer, on Monday night, was fashionably attended. His Septuor in E Flat Major, for piano (Mr. Lindsay Sloper), violin (Sainton), violoncello (the composer), contra-basso (Casolani), oboe (Barret), bassoon (Baumann), and horn (Jarrett), was admirably executed, and was much applauded. The critic of the Chronicle thus describes the Septuor: "It opens with a charming subject in a movement allegro moderato, which is most ingeniously treated. The Scherzo in C Minor was full of brilliant passages; the Andante in A Flat Major was exquisitely scored, and the finale replete with grand and imposing ideas, distributed amongst the instruments with infinite tact. Rapid passages for the pianoforte contrasted with vigorous phrases from the basses, whilst the wind instruments came in over and anon with delicious bits of cantabile."

MISS MESSENT. Under the patronage of the Duke of Cambridge, this vocalist, who it will be recollected made her début last season at Drury Lane Theatre, on Tuesday evening had a benefit at the St. James's Theatre, appearing in the character of Lucia in the English version. In the early scenes she was very successful, but her stamina failed to carry her through the opera. She was very ably supported by Weiss's Henry and Donald King's Edgar, who, following the example of Salvi and Ronconi, at the Royal Italian Opera, restored the due of defiance in the last act.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of the members took place on Monday last. Every amateur will rejoice to learn that the balance, after paying a bonus to the band, will add considerably to the funded capital of the Society. The election of the new committee for the Season 1848 took place, when Messrs. Anderson, Sterndale Bennett, Costa, B. Chatterton, Griesbach, Lucas, and Macmurdo, were elected; but, Mr. Costa having declined the honour, on account of his numerous duties at the Royal Italian Opera, which he has engaged for six years, Mr James Calkin was elected in his place. The nomination of Conductor, and all the concert arrangements, rest with the Directors; but the re-appointment of Costa, as Conductor, may be regarded as certain. Mr. Anderson remains the indefatigable Honorary Treasurer. The Society is deeply indebted to him for his exertions. Mr. George Budd, the Secretary of the Western Madrigal Society, will, for the season 1848, combine the office of Librarian and Secretary to the Philharmonic, at a salary

THE UPPER SINGING SCHOOLS.—The Fourth and Last Great Choral Meeting at Exeter Hall took place on Wednesday evening, conducted by Mr. John Hullah. The sacred part comprised pieces by Tallis, Reynolds, Palestrina, Lotti, Hulah, and Zingarelli; Palestrina's sacred Madrigal, "Why art thou cast down," being encored. The secular part was more for the amateur act; namely, Hullah's Part Song, "Song should breathe;" words by Barry Cornwall: Arne and Jackson's Glee, "Where the bee sucks;" Sterndale Bennett's Part Song, "Come live with me," and Lord Mornington's Glee, "Here in cool grot." The meeting terminated with the National Anthem. The Hall was well attended

MUSICAL CHIT-CHAT.

Thalberg, the son-in-law of Lablache, has returned in London.

Mdlle. Jenny Lind will sing at the close of the season at concerts in Brighton, Birmingham, Liverpool, Glasgow, and Edinburgh, and on the stage at Manchester. She has many engagements in the provinces, as she is pledged to be in Berlin in September, and to dance with full power at her native country. After singing at Stockholm she will next proceed to Vienna.

Lablache has returned to Paris, after his triumphant trip to Germany and Russia.

Madame Dorus Gras is expected to be re-engaged at the Académie Royale de Musique, as also Roger

LITERATURE.

THE BOOK OF SOUTH WALES, THE BRISTOL CHANNEL, MONMOUTHSHIRE, AND THE WYE. By CHARLES FREDERICK CLIFFE. Hamilton, Adams, and Co.

The paucity of satisfactory Guide-books through a country so fraught, as "merrie England" is, with delightful scenes for the tourist, has long been matter of general regret. But for such information as these works would supply, thousands of pleasure-seekers annually leave our shores for lands that present little beyond the scenery of an exotic name to compensate for the passage. In such migrations, we leave coasts of endless sublimity and grandeur for flat and objectless shores; rivers landscapes for long and dreary wastes, which even all art has scarcely rendered endurable: in short, in such a transit, we exchange picturesque successions of hill and dale, wood and water, for weary travel through countries whose embellished cities resemble so many oases in a desert. To such sacrifices, Britons are led by the spes infusa of fashion; and an equal number thus gather ennui abroad for want of knowing how extensively they may enjoy at home of the old Latin poet's Elysium, which his commentators have fixed almost every where save in England, the most delightful place of all.

> Incolæ lotos, et amœna vireta
> Fortunatorum nemorum, sedesque beatas,

The work before us proves a case in point. Every one has some idea of the picturesque character of the scenery of South Wales, Monmouthshire, and the Wye; and who could imagine that there exists but a single small local Guide-book of the first named country; and, relating to the latter district, the information is either out of date, or otherwise unsatisfactory. Certain picture-books may have appeared to supply this deficiency to a certain extent, by expressing tolerably clear to the illustrations, they are better fitted for the drawing-room table than for the tourist's use.

Here, then, is the case made out for the necessity of the present work; and the mode in which it has been produced assures the reader of a book far more copious than any of the class we have just adverted to. It is not a merely skimming glance at the country that we are led by the spes infusa of fashion; and an equal number thus gather ennui abroad for want of knowing how extensively they may enjoy at home of the old Latin poet's Elysium, which his commentators have fixed almost every where save in England, the most delightful place of all.

> Incolæ lotos, et amœna vireta
> Fortunatorum nemorum, sedesque beatas.

The work before us proves a case in point. Every one has some idea of the picturesque character of the scenery of South Wales, Monmouthshire, and the Wye; and who could imagine that there exists but a single small local Guide-book of the first named country; and, relating to the latter district, the information is either out of date, or otherwise unsatisfactory. Certain picture-books may have appeared to supply this deficiency to a certain extent, by expressing tolerably clear to the illustrations, they are better fitted for the drawing-room table than for the tourist's use.

Here, then, is the case made out for the necessity of the present work; and the mode in which it has been produced assures the reader of a book far more copious than any of the class we have just adverted to. It is not a merely skimming glance at the country that we are led by the spes infusa of fashion; and an equal number thus gather ennui abroad for want of knowing how extensively they may enjoy at home

> Incolæ lotos, et amœna vireta
> Fortunatorum nemorum, sedesque beatas,

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"D. G."—We never heard of the work. You must mean "The Philidorian," a Magazine brought out in Monthly Numbers, some years ago. Mr. Bryan's pamphlet on the Great Match between England and France is obtainable for a Sh lling in the usual Chess Repositories, and we will, on receipt of Postage Stamps, forward a Copy to you."

"H. J. A."—The solution is—1. B to Q B 2d; 2. K moves; 3. R to Q 2nd, &c. R to Q 4th double ch, and mate.

"C. F. S."—It shall be examined.

"Brixtonian."—He can.

"D. G."—The price of Mr. Staunton's "Handbook" is 5s.: any additional charge is an imposition.

"T." Maravon.—It contains many beautiful specimens by the same accomplished master.

Solutions by "Sopracitta," "T." Maravon; "Willy," "G. P." "W. K." "Phil." "S. S." "Eric," "T. P." "Summer," and "Old Joe," are correct.

Communications not replied to this week, will be answered in our next.

 Any Amateur wishing to play a Game at Chess by Correspondence, may hear of an opponent, by addressing "G. F. Smith, 16, Spencer-terrace, Lower Road, Islington."

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, No. 181.

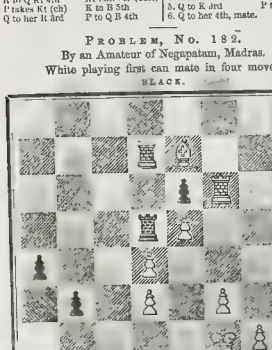
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1 R to Q Kt 4th	Kt takes R (best)	4 Kt to B 4th	P takes P
2 P takes Kt (ch)	K to B 5th	5. Q to K 2nd	P to Q Kt 6th
3 Q to her R 3rd	P to Q B 4th	6. Q to her 4th, mate.

PROBLEM, No. 182.

By an Amateur of Negapatam, Madras.

White playing first can mate in four moves.

BLACK.



WHITE.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.

No. 182.—By HERR KLING.

WHITE.	BLACK	WHITE	BLACK
K at Q 7th	K at Q Kt 2nd	B at K B 2nd
Q at Q B sq		P s at Q B 4th and Q
R at K B 3rd		Kt 2nd

White, playing first, gives mate in two moves.

No. 183.—By J. N.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q B 2nd	K at Q B 5th	P s at Q 4th, Q B 3rd, and Q R 4.
R at Q Kt sq	R at Q 8th
B at K B 7th	P at Q 4th

White to play first, and mate in three moves.

No. 184.—By AN AMATEUR.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q B 4th	K s at Q R 4th	B at Q B 7th	2nd and 3rd, and Q R 2nd
B at Q 3rd	P awns at Q Kt 3rd	P at Q Kt 3rd
	P awns at Q Kt 2nd	P at Q Kt 3rd

White to play and mate in four moves.

CHESS IN AMERICA.

PLAYED AT NEW YORK, BETWEEN MR. STANLEY AND AN AMATEUR.

WHITE. (Amateur.)	BLACK. (Mr. S.)	WHITE. (Amateur.)	BLACK. (Mr. S.)
1. K P two	K P two	15. Q B 3rd	Kt to Q 6th
2 K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	16. Q to Kt 3rd	B to K Kt 5th (ch)
3 Q P two	P takes P	17. K B P one	Q to K R 3rd. (b)
4. B to Q B 4th	K Kt to Q B 4th	18. Kt to Q 2nd	Q to Q 4th
5. K Kt to K Kt 5th	K Kt to B 3rd	19. R to K B sq	Q to K 6th (c)
6. Kt takes K B P	Kt takes Kt	20. Q takes B	Q to K 7th (ch)
7. B takes Kt (ch)	K takes B	21. K to Q B 2nd	Kt to Kt 5th (ch)
8. Q to R 5th (ch)	K Kt P one	22. K to Kt 3rd	Q to Q 6th (ch)
9. K takes B	Q P one	23. K to Q R 4th	Q Kt P two (ch)
10. Q to Q 4th (ch)	Q P one	24. K takes P	Q R to Kt sq (ch)
11. P takes P (a)	R to K sq (ch)	25. K to R 5th	Kt to B 3rd (ch)
12. K to Q sq	Kt to K 4th	26. P takes Kt	Q to her sq (ch)
13. Q takes Q P	Q B P two	27. K to R 4th	Q to Kt 2nd
14. Q to K B 4th (ch)	K to Kt sq	And wins.

(a) If this Pawn is taken wi h the Q. the second player exchanges Qs, and then, by playing Kt to Q B 4th, he has the better game.

(b) Mr Stanley has already managed to wrest the attack from his opponent, and conducts it with remarkable cleverness.

(c) If to K B 4th might also have been played advantageously.

MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN LOUISVILLE AND LEXINGTON, UNITED STATES.

(With Notes, from Stanley's "New York Magazine.")

The hardly-contested Match between the Chess Clubs of Lexington and Louisville has at length terminated in a drawn battle. Having been commenced by correspondence, and by mail, no time can be called in attendance state, the interests of either Club were at stake to the utmost, for the contest involved honour and the championship. In the first circle a party, Mr E A Dudley on the part of Lexington, while Dr. B. Rapaske was appointed to act on behalf of Louisville. Between these gentlemen the encounter was opened on the 4th move of each Game, and fought hand to hand across the Chess Board.

FIRST, OR LEXINGTON GAME OF THE MATCH.

WHITE. (Lexington.)	BLACK. (Louisville.)	WHITE. (Lexington.)	BLACK. (Louisville.)
1. K P two	Q B P two	23. Kt to K 4th	Kt takes R
2. K B P two	K P one	24. K takes Kt	B to K 7th
3. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	25. R to K sq	Q to B 3rd
4. K B to Q Kt 5th	Q to her Kt 3rd	26. R takes B	K B P one
5. It takes Kt	Q takes B	27. Kt to K R 3rd (d)	K takes R (ch)
6. Q P one	Q P two	28. K takes P	K to Kt 2nd (ch)
7. K Kt to K 5th	Q to her B 2nd	29. K to K 5th	K takes P
8. K P takes P	K P takes P	30. Q to K 2nd	K to B 3rd
9. Q P one	K B to K 2nd	31. K to Q 4th	K to K 4th
10. Q Kt to B 3rd	K Kt to B 3rd	32. K to K 4th	R to Kt 4th
11. Q P one	Castles (c)	33. K P one	K P one
12. Q B to K 3rd	Q R P one	34. K P one (e)	K Kt P one
13. P takes P	B takes P	35. K Kt P one	Q Kt P one
14. Castles (on Q side)	Q B to K 3rd	36. K takes P	K to B 4th
15. B to Q 4th	K Kt to B sq	37. Q Kt to B 3rd	K to B 4th
16. Q Kt to B 2nd	Q R to Q B sq	38. K Kt to Q B 4th	K to Kt 3rd
17. B takes B	Q takes B	39. K Kt takes Kt P	It to Q B 3rd
18. Q takes Q	B takes Q (ch)	40. K Kt to Q 4th	K takes P
19. K Kt to B 3rd	K to Q B 3rd	41. Q Kt to K 4th (ch)	K takes R P
20. K R to K B sq	Q P one	42. Q Kt takes P	K to Kt 4th
21. Q Kt to K sq	Q B to K Kt 4th	43. K B P one	P takes P
22. Q to Q 2nd	K Kt to K 5th (e)	44. Kt takes P (ch)	K to B 5th (f)

And the game was drawn by mutual consent.

(c) Wisely declining the acceptance of the proffered Pawn, as in such case, Lexington would command the attack, and probably win the game. (d) Admirably played. (e) Had this Pawn not been moved, the game must have been drawn by perpetual check. (f) From the nature of the position, it has long been evident that, with good playing on either side, the "draw" was inevitable.

THE SECOND, OR LOUISVILLE GAME.

BLACK. (Louisville.)	WHITE. (Lexington.)	BLACK. (Lexington.)	WHITE. (Lexington.)
1. P two	K P two	23. K B P two	Kt to K 5th
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q B to Q B 4th (b)	24. R to K 4th	Kt to K 6th (ch)
3. Q P two	Kt takes P	25. K to K 2nd	K Kt P two
4. Q P one	K Kt to Q B 4th	26. Kt to B 3rd	P takes P
5. K P one	Q P two	27. K to K 3rd	Q B P two
6. K B P one	K P takes P	28. Q R P one	P takes K Kt P
7. K B to Q B 4th	Kt takes B	29 Q Kt P one	K to Kt 3rd
8. Q P takes P (c)	Q B to K Kt 5th	30 Q R P takes P (ch)	K to Kt 2nd
9. Q P takes K P	K B to Q Kt 5th (ch)	31. R takes R (ch)	P takes R
10. B to Q 2nd	Q B takes Kt	32. Kt to K 6th	R to K B 4th
11. Q takes B	B takes B (ch)	33. Kt to K 4th	R to K B 5th (ch)
12. Q Kt takes B	Castles	34. K to K 3rd	K Kt P one
13. K P takes P	R to K sq (ch)	35. Q to Q Kt 3rd	K to Kt 2nd
14. R to Q sq	R to K B sq	36. Q to Q 4th	Q Kt P one
15. K R to K sq	R takes P	37. Q P one	R to Kt 7th (ch)
16. Q to K 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	38. K to K 2nd	R to Q 4th
17. Kt to K B 3rd	Q to Q 3rd	39. Q to Q R 4th	Kt to K B 5th (ch)
18. Q R P one	Q R to K B sq	40. K to B 3rd	Q R P two
19. K R to K 2nd	R to K R 3rd	41. Q to K 8th	Q to Kt 3rd
20. K Kt P one	K R to B 3rd	42. K to Kt 4th	Q to B 3rd (ch)
21. Kt to R 4th	Q P one	43. K to Kt 5th	Kt to R 8th
22. Q to Q 2nd	Kt to K 4th	Drawn by mutual consent (d)

(b) This Defence, at first sight, was unsuccessfully adopted by the Paris Club in their match, by correspondence, with Bath, in Hungary.

(c) "Kt takes P" we understand to be the more move generally recommended.

(d) Louisville certainly does not appear to profit by the somewhat exceptionable defence offered by the Lexington Club.

(e) The Lexington players can now force a drawn game, unless their adversaries prefer losing it. We recommend our young readers to find the modus operandi.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Falstaff. Why 'tis my vocation, Hal: 'tis no sin for a man to labour in his vocation.

King Henry IV., Part I.

During the latter moiety of this week a very influential meeting, for the provinces, was held on the course at Aintree—the Circus Maximus of our great mart of commerce, Liverpool. Too many fragments of space and time, however, still remain, despite steam presses, railways, and express trains, to permit of our giving more than an outline of its principal results. For this reason albeit "fat justicia ruat cælum" might have stood us in stead of this admission we shall be compelled to recur to the three days of the former week, which constituted the July Week at Newmarket, noticed in our last paper. This, indeed, we are bound to do, seeing that these columns profess, in all humility, to furnish "an abstract and brief chronicle" of the turf as at present existing, both in relation to its theory and practice.

Upon retiring from the Heath on Wednesday afternoon, the 7th instant, the members of the Jockey Club met at their Rooms, to re-consider certain steps adopted towards Samuel Rogers, and John and William Day, jockeys, and, ultimately, to retrace them. Those unfortunate young men had, for a long time, been debarred from labouring in their vocation: this, "with respect to the late lamentation boil over at injustice such as this? What can make urge against the individual implicated in the Satan affair more than that, having, through the implicit confidence placed in his integrity, the entire conduct of the animal, he did not encourage his winning the Derby, waresby a certain loss would result to himself? What is the wrong imputed to poor John Day, jun.? "A wilful falsehood to support a criminal charge," forsooth! nothing more, except, indeed, his acquaintance with the person who prefers the complaint against him, "a mistake; but advised that he should be closely watched, in order to prevent self-violence, which was observed all night.

The prisoner's wife said she had three children. She was formerly in the service of his Grace the Duke of Wellington, as kitchen-maid. She saved some money, and married the prisoner, when they set up in the business of cheesemongers, in Chapel-street, Somers Town. Her husband became acquainted with the deceased, and through him they were brought to ruin and bankruptcy, and were obliged to give up their business about two years and a half ago; and ever since she had been the chief support of the family by taking in washing. Mr. Arrold asked the prisoner if he wished to say anything. To the charge, he could do as he thought proper; he was not bound to say anything.

The prisoner declined saying anything.

Mr. Arnold: Then I shall remand you for a week.

DANGEROUS CROWDING OF STEAM VESSELS.

The Lord Mayor stated at the MANSION-HOUSE, on Tuesday, that he had received several communications from persons complaining of the dangerous manner in which the steamers were filled to and fro on the Thames, a subject which was daily becoming more serious in consequence of the vast increase of what might be termed the river population. Several letters which had been addressed to him, he also stated that on Sunday last one of the Gravesend boats had on board upwards of 1400 people, and that writer, after animadverting upon the fact with very proper severity, said he did not see why the Lord Mayor was unable for any accident that might occur from the extraordinary inattention thus paid to the regulations passed by the Court of Aldermen, and confirmed and sanctioned by the Judges.

Inspector Todhunter informed his Lordship that the Gem, Gravesend boat, had on board on Sunday upwards of 1400 people, who were all closely packed—even the paddleboxes, contrary to all former experience, were covered with passengers.

The Lord Mayor said, one of his correspondents suggested the use of a float-line, as a means of insuring a limited number of passengers for each vessel, this being the principle on which the Exhibition-roads in the Parks were constructed, and represented that, to reckon the passengers as they crowded into a steamer in fine weather was an utter impossibility.

Mr. Goodman (the chief clerk) said, it was evident that without the interference of the police the steamers would continue to receive the superabundance very gladly. The penalty for the infringement of the bye law to prevent the overcrowding was, strange to say, limited to 40s., although the bye law was intended to protect the passengers from the most serious of all the dangers to which they were exposed, so that the proprietors, whenever they incurred a penalty, were sure to pocket a profit, which diminished the fine to a matter of no consideration, a much smaller offence under the regulations was visited with a much larger penalty.

The Lord Mayor hoped for the co-operation of the City police, so far as the interference of that body was justifiable. His Lordship said he had resolved to spare neither time nor trouble in endeavouring to prevent the recurrence of such a wilful accident, which would perhaps be the only remedy after all. All he could say was, that there existed a number of regulations, intended, and he thought correctly so, if properly carried into effect, to accomplish all that was necessary; and that he was ready to act upon every occasion of infringement of callcit upon.

GREAT SCULLERS' CONTEST

The great scullers' contest between Thomas Coombes, the brother of the champion of the Thames, and Frederick Lett, of Lambeth, for £50, took place on Wednesday afternoon. The distance chosen was from Putney Bridge to Chiswick Eyot. Betting was even. At ten minutes to four the men appeared at their stations, Lett having the choice, and going to the Middlesex side. On the signal being given, Lett jumped away with the lead, and held it until past the Star and Garter. It fell, owing to the most foolish tactics. That few more strokes they were steadily level, and off Soames's Crossing they were so much in a line as to render it, as thought the latter had been dead on anchor. Lett tried hard to overhaul him, but ineffectually. Coombes won with apparent ease, by half a dozen lengths or more

PUTNEY AND ROEHAMPTON REGATTA.

The annual regatta amongst the watermen at Putney, for a purse of sovereigns, subscribed by the nobility and gentry of the neighbourhood, took place on Wednesday, in three seats. The distance was from Putney-bridge, up round a boat off the Vice-Chancellor's, down to the College of Civil Engineers, and back to Putney-bridge. The race was won by Charles Cobb and Frederick Phelps (blue).

THE ROYAL YACHT SQUADRON.—Sir Bellingham Graham has been elected Vice-Commodore of the Royal Yacht Squadron, in the room of the Marquis of Donegal.

GREAT SCULLERS' MATCH.—The long-pending contest between R. Tarrant (better known as Doubledee), of Lambeth, and Thomas Cook, of Hungerford, came off on Thursday, and was throughout a very capital race. The distance was from Putney to Chiswick Eyot, and the stakes £50. Cook being the favourite at 5 to 4. Doubledee won by somewhat less than CRICKET.—This match (Marylebone Club and Ground v. Cambridge Town and County Club) was finished on Tuesday at Lord's. The innings of Marylebone, including byes and wides, amounted to 130, or "132 on." Cambridge went in against this total, and were vanquished by 67 runs.

POLICE.

CONFESSION OF A MURDER.

At CLERKENWELL Office, on Wednesday, John Ramsay, a young man of respectable appearance, was brought from Farringdon-wells station-house, in the custody of Inspector Penny and police constable 248 G, and placed at the bar before Mr. Arnold, charged, upon his own confession, with the wilful murder of Mr. Henry Williams.

The prisoner was described in the police-sheet as a cheesemonger, residing at No. 1, Mahada-place, Caledonian-road, Islington.

Mr. Henry Williams, the deceased, was formerly an attorney, whose principal practice was in the Lambeth and Thames Police Courts, and resided in Cheltenham-row, St. Pancras. About two years and a half ago he had to conduct a case professionally in the Customs, and at the conclusion he accompanied some friends to a tavern in the Sparrow's-gate, near Tower-hill, where they indulged freely, and the deceased left the place. He was afterwards found in the Minories, insensible, and bleeding from an injury immediately over his eye, and at an early hour in the morning he was driven up to the door of his residence, in Constitution-row, and died shortly afterwards, in consequence of the injury he had received. A Coroner's Jury was called, and the subject being involved in mystery, the Jury came to no decided verdict, leaving the matter open for the production of further evidence and future investigation.

Ralph Rose, 248 G, now deposed that the prisoner came to the station-house, and said he had come there to deliver himself up for a murder which he had committed two years and a half ago. He said he had hit a man on the head with a stick. He was in his company with another man, named Strickland; and on whom he had committed the crime he had not been able to rest. He said the deceased's name was Williams.

Mr. Inspector Penny stated, that at seven o'clock in the morning he went into the cell where the prisoner was confined, and inquired whether he wished him to send for any refreshment, and should he send for his wife. The prisoner was silent, and replied, "Why, I suppose she will know it if they know it." He (the Inspector), under the impression that the prisoner might be deranged in his intellects, in the course of the night sent for the police-surgeon, when Mr. Sheehy, the surgeon, attended, and decided that he was of sound mind; but advised that he should be closely watched, in order to prevent self-violence, which was observed all night.

Mr. ARNOLD asked the prisoner if he wished to say anything. To the charge, he could do as he thought proper; he was not bound to say anything.

The prisoner declined saying anything.

Mr. Arnold: Then I shall remand you for a week.

POLICE OF THE METROPOLIS.

The Lord Mayor stated at the MANSION-HOUSE, on Tuesday, that he had received several communications from persons complaining of the dangerous manner in which the steamers were filled to and fro on the Thames, a subject which was daily becoming more serious in consequence of the vast increase of what might be termed the river population. Several letters which had been addressed to him, he also stated that on Sunday last one of the Gravesend boats had on board upwards of 1400 people, and that writer, after animadverting upon the fact with very proper severity, said he did not see why the Lord Mayor was unable for any accident that might occur from the extraordinary inattention thus paid to the regulations passed by the Court of Aldermen, and confirmed and sanctioned by the Judges.

Inspector Todhunter informed his Lordship that the Gem, Gravesend boat, had on board on Sunday upwards of 1400 people, who were all closely packed—even the paddleboxes, contrary to all former experience, were covered with passengers.

The Lord Mayor said, one of his correspondents suggested the use of a float-line, as a means of insuring a limited number of passengers for each vessel, this being the principle on which the Exhibition-roads in the Parks were constructed, and represented that, to reckon the passengers as they crowded into a steamer in fine weather was an utter impossibility.

Mr. Goodman (the chief clerk) said, it was evident that without the interference of the police the steamers would continue to receive the superabundance very gladly. The penalty for the infringement of the bye law to prevent the overcrowding was, strange to say, limited to 40s., although the bye law was intended to protect the passengers from the most serious of all the dangers to which they were exposed, so that the proprietors, whenever they incurred a penalty, were sure to pocket a profit, which diminished the fine to a matter of no consideration, a much smaller offence under the regulations was visited with a much larger penalty.

The Lord Mayor hoped for the co-operation of the City police, so far as the interference of that body was justifiable. His Lordship said he had resolved to spare neither time nor trouble in endeavouring to prevent the recurrence of such a wilful accident, which would perhaps be the only remedy after all. All he could say was, that there existed a number of regulations, intended, and he thought correctly so, if properly carried into effect, to accomplish all that was necessary; and that he was ready to act upon every occasion of infringement of callcit upon.

FORGING A CHEQUE ON MESSRS. COUTTS'S BANK.—H. G. Baugh, clerk to Mr. Lewis, solicitor, and Coroner for Essex, was charged before Mr. Hall and Mr. Maltwood, at the Mansion-house, on Saturday, with committing a forgery to the extent of £2251 5s. 6d. on the above banking-house. Messrs. Robb, Maunde, and the solicitors to the Commissioners of Excise, for whom the prisoner acted, and the solicitors to the Commissioner of Stamps for whom he appeared for the prisoner. Fraud, admitted by the firm, was examined. He did not know the prisoner; and he had not written, or authorised the writing, of the cheque in question. Some further unimportant evidence having been taken, the prisoner was remanded for a week.

CHARGE OF INCENDIARISM.—At WORSHIP-STREET, on Thursday, John Watling, a young man, twenty years of age, was charged with wilfully setting fire to two brackets in Mr. Sea's working premises, Shoreditch. Mr. Maunde-street, Spitalfields. From the evidence, it appeared that, on Tuesday week, the premises were observed by a lad named Whitaker to be on fire in the upper part of the building, and immediately a fire burst out. A great portion of the premises were destroyed. Mr. Superintendent Frankum, of the Metropolitan Constabulary, stated that the prisoner came to him and said that he was about leaving Mr. Sea's employment, and for having set fire to his master's house. He did not appear to know where the premises were situated, nor the name of the owner thereof, but said that he had accidentally let fall a lucifer match, by which he was about to light his pipe, among a lot of tow, which had ignited, and, seeing that the premises were likely to be set on fire, he proceeded for the purpose of putting out the fire. He said he had no intention of setting the house on fire. Mr. Sea said that the smoking was all they produced in the shop in his time in all the business of his nature. His statement impressed him at the time that the fire was done by the prisoner, and he had no doubt of it now. Mr Arnold remanded the prisoner, in order to give all parties the required time for the production of further evidence on so serious a charge.

CURIOUS SUICIDE.—An inquest was held on Monday evening, at the workhouse, Bermondsey-street, Southwark, by Joseph Hart, Esq., coroner, who was also sheriff's officer in most of the county courts. Sarah Andrews passed the night in the dead-house of her house. Next morning, about half-past four o'clock, she was found under great difficulty breathing, and a man and boy living near to her could get no answer. Early on supposing that some one had got in, and murdered her, they broke open the door, when she was found in bed, with her throat cut from ear to ear, and a pool of blood on the floor. A razor was found in bed. He has evidently intended to commit suicide with the razor, as several wounds were found on his body, but the instrument was blunt. Verdict, "Temporary insanity."

THE INSTALLATION AT CAMBRIDGE.

THE PERFORMANCE OF THE INSTALLATION ODE.

(Continued from Page 41.)

another before that of the Prince. The Duke of Wellington and Sir Harry Smith stood on the queen's right hand, and the Duchess of Sutherland stood behind her Majesty. On the left of Prince Albert sat Prince Wittgenstein, wearing a Doctor's robe over his uniform; and a lady sat near him; these were the only persons seated at the commencement of the proceedings; but towards the latter part the Duchess of Sutherland sat on the Queen's right, and the Lady-in-Waiting on the left of Prince Albert. There were, also, on the platform the [illegible] Duke of Northumberland, the Bishop of London, Lord [illegible], Sir R. Peel, the latter in plain dress.

THE INSTALLATION ODE.

Previous to the commencement of the Ode, a splendidly-bound copy of the score was presented to Prince Albert by Professor Walmisley, and immediately afterwards two copies of the illuminated edition of the Ode (mentioned in our last Number), bound in white and gold, were presented, by the Vice-Chancellor, one to the Queen and one to Prince Albert.

At the conclusion of the Ode an encore was made for "God Save the Queen," the solo parts were very well executed by Misses Birch and Dolby

THE BREAKFAST BENEATH THE CLOISTERS OF NEVILLE'S-COURT

THE INSTALLATION AT CAMBRIDGE.

THE ROYAL PARTY PASSING ACROSS THE LAWN OF CATHERINE HALL TO THE BANQUET.

THE HORTICULTURAL FETE AT DOWNING-COLLEGE.—THE ROYAL PAVILION.

TEMPORARY BRIDGE CONNECTING TRINITY AND ST. JOHN'S.

and H. Phillips and Lockey; and the chorus was joined in by every one in the hall.

THE HORTICULTURAL FETE, AT DOWNING, on Tuesday, was detailed in our Journal of last week; together with the Royal Pavilion

After the Fete, the Queen, and the Prince-Chancellor, and their suites, visited the Fitzwilliam Museum, and were attended through the building by Mr. C. R. Cockerill, R.A., the architect, who was highly complimented by her Majesty and the Duchess of Sutherland, on the beauty of the design.

The tents erected in the grounds of Downing College for the exhibition of the magnificent collection of fruit and flowers, together with the pavilion in the gardens of Trinity and St. John, were from the establishment of Mr. Benjamin Edmonton, of Tooley's-reef.

THE BREAKFAST IN NEVILLE'S COURT,

Trinity College, was a very elegant scene. The pilasters of the piazza were hung with the festoons of flowers and evergreens, and on the terrace was a crown, flanked by the letters "V. A." This device was formed altogether of choice flowers. The space in the middle of the quadrangle is a green sward, which, for the occasion, had been mown very closely; and here was a handsome pavilion.

Passing under the piazza at the west end of the court, through one of three iron gates, you entered into some beautiful grounds, and let, opposite the middle gate, the Queen's Pavilion was erected, with the Royal Standard floating over the entrance. This pavilion was about 40 feet long; it was of red and white striped cloth, and the interior was lined with yellow and white striped muslin. A brilliantly-gilt console table, surmounted by a mirror with handsome candalabra, was placed against one side of the tent. At the table were placed two State chairs for the use of her Majesty and Prince Albert.

A SKETCH IN THE HALL OF THE MASTER OF TRINITY'S RESIDENCE DURING THE INSTALLATION.

The Cam, which flows through the grounds of the College, was crossed a little to the right of the spot where the Royal Pavilion was placed by a rustic Wooden Bridge, which we have Engraved. On the other side of the river, and upon the terrace opposite the New Building of St. John's College, a large Pavilion was erected, with a seating for dancing.

THE PROCESSION AT ST. CATHERINE'S.

The lawn in the centre of the quadrangle of Catherine Hall, presented a very gay appearance on Monday evening, as the company began to arrive to the ban quet given by the Vice-Chancellor. The Royal standard was reared in the centre, around which were arranged numerous groups, in uniform or full dress costumes; most of the guests wearing their scarlet gowns, as D ctors of Laws.

Sir Robert Peel was among the late arrivals, and directly he was recognised, was greeted with most vociferous cheers by the populace. As soon as he entered the Quadrangle, in company with the Bishop of Oxford, the Duke of Saxe Weimar and several rewards hip, all of whom were in full dress costume, cheering took place. Immediately after, the Royal carriages arrived, and Sir Robert dispatched a messenger for his scarlet gown, and robed himself in it as he chatted with one person or the other on the lawn.

The point represented in the Illustration is the Royal party passing from the Vice-Chancellor's private apartments to the Dining Hall, which is on the opposite side of the Quadrangle; her Majesty was conducted by the Vice-Chancellor, who walked backwards the whole distance; a crimson cloth being laid down from one door to the other.

SKETCH AT THE MASTER'S, TRINITY COLLEGE.

The Duke of Wellington, on his arrival at Trinity College, was immediately conducted into the Hall of the Master of Trinity's residence, when, after the exchange of a few civilities with some of the distinguished guests present, the Duke was led up to the Statue of Bacon at the further end of the Hall, and stood for a few minutes in deep contemplation. This Statue is a repetition of the well-known piece of sculpture in St. Michael's Church, St Alb ns. It represents the great Philosopher in a contemplative attitude, easy, yet dignified withal, seated in his favourite elbow-chair, and has inscribed on its front the first part of the elegant Latin Epitaph written by Sir Henry Wotton. The English translation of that portion of the Epitaph inscribed on the base of the Cambridge Statue is as follows:—

FRANCIS BACON,
BARON OF VERULAM, VISCOUNT OF ST. ALBAN'S,
OR, BY MORE CONSPICUOUS TITLES, OF SCIENCE THE LIGHT, OF ELOQUENCE THE LAW,
SAT THUS.

We conclude with a few anecdotic traits:—

The Banquet in the Hall of Trinity College, on Tuesday, was a very magnificent scene, as well as an interesting tableau, from the intellectual character of the guests. "Casting the eye down one table," says the Daily News report, "the countenances of Sir R. Peel, the noble Regent and Bishop of Oxford, and the Marquis of Northampton, could be selected, as characterising the mixed nature of the convivial association; at another, the astronomers, Le Verrier and Adams; the geologists, Buckland, Murchison, and Sedgwick; might be discovered: a third group consisted of Judges and Bishops; a fourth of military gownsmen; and so on throughout the whole area."

Throughout the Installation, Sir Harry Smith was an object of general attention, and he and the Duke of Wellington were loudly cheered whenever they appeared. On Tuesday the Duke was escorted to his residence in St. Catherine's by a body guard of gownsmen, and testified his great attachment and respect to his Grace were exhibited in the most hearty vociferations.

ON THE MEETING OF PRINCE WALDEMAR AND SIR HARRY SMITH, AT CAMBRIDGE.

When first they met and side by side,
Flamed forth their noble swords,
'Twas where the Sutlej rolled in pride,
Beholding Punjaub's hordes.
A hundred guns pour'd shot and shell
Around them thick as hail,
And many a brave heart bade farewell
To Life's dark-shadow'd vale.

But now, oh! different is the scene.
Old Prussia's gallant son,
Honoured by England and her Queen,
Has cast his eyes upon

The brave of peaceful arms round it wreath'd,
And Mercy's palms entwine.—L.

Not the least interesting incident of Tuesday was the respectful attention paid by Sir Robert Peel to the venerable poet Rogers, who, being exhausted with the long sitting in the Senate House, was compelled to retire, shortly after the commencement of the Ode; this he did, leaning upon the arm of the right hon. Baronet, with whom, after taking a turn round the walks, he retired.

The following are the names of the visitors, on Tuesday:—

Harry Day, Trinity Hall,	.. ..	English Poem.
James Campor Wright, King's	.. ..	Latin Poem.
Brook F. Westcott, Trinity	.. ..	Greek Ode.
David James Vaughan, Trinity	.. ..	Latin Ode
David James Vaughan, Trinity	.. ..	Translation of Latin Eulogems.
George James Gill	.. ..	The Porson Prize (Greek Iambics).

His Royal Highness the Chancellor was then presented by one of the Esquires with a copy of the Installation Ode.

The following is the first official announcement of the Prince Chancellor:—

Trinity College Lodge, July 6, 1847.

Notice is hereby given, that there will be a Congregation of the Senate on Thursday next, at eleven o'clock. ALBERT, Chancellor.

A TRIBUTARY ODETTE.— CAMBRIDGE, JULY, 1847.

'Tis Who in Greece divine,
By Hippocrene's font, or by the streams
Of bright Ilyssus, loved the wreath to twine
Of glorious song, and made Man's soul the shrine
Of Learning's worth, and Minstrels' hallow'd dreams,
Ode—ye, ye Nine!
Sing on a theme where spotless glory beams,
E'en as halo from th' Almighty's throne,
Encircling with its rays
The theme Minerva loves,
In academic groves,
In lit. yal palace or in desert lone,
Fair Learning's praise.

ARIETTA.

Freedom's sun poured steadless light on
Thy pure blade, Aristejdion!
For, within the myrtle's shade
Wreathed glanced the patriot blade,
Nobler far thy choral strain,
Euripides! which burst the chain
Of captive bondmen, when the hand
Fell from the vanquished victor's hand
At Syracuse!

Brave Columbus ploughed the ocean,
Gave a world to thankless Spain;
But the needle's daring motion
Caused the glory and the gain.
Greater glory, Watt! is thine,
Being man at leathers mast,
'Till swart Indus and fair Rhine
In confluence each other greet,
Cheering the ones.

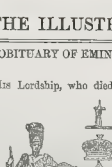
Whose genius trod the paths of Heaven?
Who traced the mysteries of the mind?
Newton and Locke to light have given
Glories that honour humankind.

The likeness of Messrs. Darwen's Installation Medal has been pronounced excellent: it is from a miniature painted by Rose for her Majesty; the Prince wearing the Chancellor's robes. The reverse bears the interior view of the Senate-House.

JOHN KNOX'S BIBLE.—The Irvine News Letter says:—"We had lately the great satisfaction of inspecting and examining a relic of ancient times, that merits a high place in the estimation of Protestants. This was the Bible of John Knox. In writing, it contains a signature of John Knox, the ink and handwriting of which correspond with copious notes written in a cipher on the margin, in which hand the Psalms are divided into twenties and evening portions. The following affidavit is also inscribed:—'This book was printed by a gentleman named Richard Cameron, in the year of our Lord 1560, and was presented to the famous John Knox, our Scottish Reformer, in the year of our Lord, 1560, for his family Bible, which he kept till his death, which happened at Edinburgh, in the year of our Lord, 1592, being twelve years in his possession. It next fell into the hands of his successor Mr Craver, where it remained till his death, and vaqued into the hands of his widow, whose name was Fare, where it continued till the present year, of our Lord, 1688.' (Signed) THOS FARE." The Bible was transferred from the hands of Fage to the name of Houston, on account of marriage, and continued in the hands of the Houston s till it was next transferred by Margaret Houston to the name of K err; and at his decease, upon the 20th February, 1807, it came into the hands of his son, Hugh Elder, now residing in Edinburgh. This Bible was purchased from Hugh Elder by Mr. William Glenny, Edinburgh, and at his decease, on the year 1844, was sold by Mrs Glenny to the Rev. Roger Kelso, and is now in the possession of his son, John B. Kelso, Esq.'

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

ERIC, LORD REAY.



His Lordship, who died at his seat, Goldings, Herts, after a short illness, aged seventy-four, on the 6th instant, was eldest son of the Hon. George Mackay, of Skibo, M.P., Master of the Mint of Scotland, by Anne, his wife, eldest daughter of Eric Sutherland, only son of the attainted Lord Duffus; and inherited the family honours at the death of his cousin, the sixth Lord, in 1797. He was never married, and is, consequently, succeeded by his next brother, the Hon. Alexander Mackay, Barrack Master at Malta, who married, in 1809, Mrs. Ross, widow of David Ross, Esq., of Calcutta, and has Eric, and several other children.

The very ancient family from which derived the nobleman whose death we record held possessions in the north of Scotland seven centuries ago, which possessions were originally denominated Strathnaver, but more recently Lord Reay. Country. The great influence, however, of the Mackays may be attributed to the celebrated Donald Mackay, (Strath-Ha-Dhonuill-Mohr) as "a great general, and a wise and politic gentleman." This personage was at the battle of So.way Moss, and returned with the King to Edinburgh three days after the conflict, when his Majesty bestowed upon him, in requita. of his faithful services, the forfeited lands of several individuals, by charter dated 25th November, 1542. Sir Donald Mackay, of Farr, the first Lord Reay, was a distinguished soldier of his time, and took an active part during the civil war, in favour of Royalty; but, being one of those excepted from pardon in the treaty between the Covenanters and King Charles, he was obliged to retire to Denmark, where he died, in 1648.

LADY CAROLINE CAPEL.

This lady, who died on the 9th inst., aged 74, was eldest sister of the present Marquis of Anglesey, being daughter of Henry, first Earl of Uxbridge, by Jane, his wife, daughter of the Very Rev. Arthur Champagne, Dean of Clonmacnois, of Farr, the first Lord Reay. She is a distinguished author of his time, and took an active part during the civil war, in favour of Royalty; but, being one of those excepted from pardon in the treaty between the Covenanters and King Charles, he was obliged to retire to Denmark, where he died, in 1648.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—Scarcely any English wheat has been received up to our market countenance, by land carriage, since Monday. The few samples fresh up today commanded a steady sale, though not to say brisk, inquiry, at fully the late improvement in value. Upwards of 23,000 quarters of foreign wheat have come in this week, mostly in mild condition. The barley trade somewhat resembles that of wheat. Very little doing, but all other kinds were dull and somewhat cheaper to sell. In barley next to nothing was doing, yet prices were most supported. The show of that article was small. In beans there was fresh to mill—no supply of which was small—but prices were almost nominal. Oats moved off steadily at late rates. Beans and peas, Indian corn, and flour commanded very little attention.

ARRIVALS.—English: Wheat, 1270 quarters; barley, 860; malt, 1910; oats, 80; irish: Wheat, 880; barley, 600; malt, —; oats, 100. Foreign: Wheat, 23,638; barley, 4750; malt, —; oats, 6790. Flour: 1660 sacks; 17,360 barrels.

English. Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 74s to 78s; ditto white, 78s to 84s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 71s to 78s; ditto white, 78s to 82s; rye, 50s to 52s; grinding barley, 40s to 42s; distilling, 43s to 45s; malting ditto, 50s to 54s; Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 74s to 76s; brown do., 70s to 72s. Harrow and Hertford grey peas, 50s to 51s. Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feeding oats, 26s to 30s; potato ditto, 32s to 35s; Youghal and Cork, black, 25s to 27s; ditto white, 28s to 29s; ditto brown, new, 22s to 24s; ditto grey, new, 24s to 26s; mealy ditto, 25s to 28s; white, 28s to —; bollers, 26s to 28s, per quarter. Town-made flour, 52s to 70s. Suffolk, Kent, and Essex, sacks, 45s to 50s. Norfolk and Lincolnshire feeding oats, 23s to 25s; potato ditto, 32s to 35s; Youghal and Cork, black, 25s to 27s; ditto white, 28s to 29s; ditto brown, new, 22s to 24s; ditto grey, new, 24s to 26s; mealy ditto, 25s to 28s; white, 28s to —; bollers, 26s to 28s, per quarter. Town-made flour, 52s to 70s. Suffolk, Kent, and Essex, sacks, 45s to 50s. Norfolk and Lincolnshire ditto, 42s to 44s. Foreign.—Dantzig, red wheat, —s to —; white, —s to —; barley, —s to —; oats, —s to —; beans, —s to —; rye, —s to —; peas, —s to —; per quarter. Flour, American, 36s to 38s per barrel. Baltic, —s to —s per sack.

Irish. Wheat—Scarcely a transaction has taken place in this market since our last, and prices are almost nominal.

Limerick, English, sowing, 30s to 40s; Baltic, crushing, 42s to 44s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 42s to 44s. Beans and Peas.—Consumers continue to be very sparing in their purchases. Mustard seed, 5s to 10s; white ditto, 8s to 10s. Tares, 3s 6d to 6s 6d per bushel. English Hamburgh oats, £21 to £22 per ton. Dutch, £19 to £20. Potatoes, £13 to £14 per ton; ditto, foreign, £8 10s to £10 per 1000; Rapeseed taken £7 12s to £9 0s per ton. Canary, 60s to 65s per quarter. English Flour.—Town-made, per sack, —s to —; whites, —s to —; cakes, 45s to —; Essex, 40s to —s; Foreign, red, —s to —s; extra, —s; white, —s to —s; extra, —s per cwt.

Bread. The prices of wheaten bread in the Metropolis are from 9½d. to 10d. per 4lb. loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 83s 3d; barley, 48s 8d; oats, 31s 11d; rye, 51s 8d; beans, 53s 9d; peas, 55s 10d.

The Six Weeks' Average. Wheat, 90s 3d; barley, 52s 9d; oats, 35s 7d; rye, 57s 10d; beans, 56s 10d; peas, 57s 1d.

Tea. About 6000 packages of Tea have been submitted to public competition this week. The holdings have been tolerably steady, and the demand for most sorts has been active.

Sugar.—On the whole, a steady business is doing in raw sugar, at the late decline in value. Refined goods are a slow sale, at 2s to 3s per cwt. less money. Considerable sales have been made.

Coffee.—Most kinds are in fair request, at about last-many prices.

Rice.—The article is heavy, and the quotations have been rather lowered in per cwt.

Provisions.—The supplies of Irish butter being still on the increase, we have to report a very dull country for that article, and prices have given way 2s per cwt. Foreign qualities are limited, may be nominally quoted at 88s to 90s; Waterford 86s to 88s, Cork, 87s to 89s; and Limerick, 85s to 88s, per cwt. Bacon is in limited supply, and the demand for the trade is very heavy, and 4s to 5s per cwt. lower. The best Ireland is selling at 48s to 49s: inferior and middling, 42s to 46s per cwt. Some choice Waterford, 50s. Fine Belfast, 46s to 48s. Good, 40s to 44s; middling ditto, 36s to 38s; fine Dorset, 48s to 49s per cwt.; fresh, 8s to 12s per dozen lbs. Hams is tending to lower, the best Waterford as low as 60s per cwt. Fine bladdered lard is held at 54s to 56s per cwt. In all other kinds of provisions, next to nothing is doing.

Tallow.—P. Y. C., on the spot is very dull, at 48s 9d to 49s, and for the last three months, 47s 3d per cwt. Town tallow, 43s 3d, net cash.

Oils.—There is rather more business doing in this market, at fully last week's quotations.

Rum.—This article is a slow sale, but not cheaper. About 200 puncheons have sold this week.

Potatoes.—New potatoes—the supplies of which are very abundant—sell freely, at from 7s 6d to 10s 6d per cwt.

Hops. Friday.—The accounts respecting the growing bine being considered rather more favourable, our market for all kinds of new hops is very dull, and prices have given way on actual dealings in the quantities, although the supply on offer is rather extensive. The duty is fixed from £105 to £120 per ton.

Sussex pockets 4s 6s to 5s 10s; Weald of Kent ditto, 5s 10s to 6s 5s; Mid and East Kent ditto, 5s 5s to 7s 7s per cwt.

Coals (Friday).—Lambton, 18s; South Durham, 17s; Belmont, 17s 6d; Stewart's, 18s 6d; Wallsr, 17s 3d per ton.

Smithfield. Friday.—Although our market, to-day, was very moderately supplied with beasts, both as respects number and quality, the demand for all breeds was in a sluggish state, at barely, last week's quoted prices. There were but few sheep on sale, the number not exceeding 1540 sheep and lambs, and 210 calves from abroad; as also, 164 beasts from Scotland. The supply of pigs was, comparatively speaking, small in number.—As most of the beasts were purchased very sparingly of late, at Newgate and Leadenhall, the grazier came this morning was firm, at a most decided improvement of 2s per 8lb on the prime qualities of Scots. Downs producing without difficulty 4s 4d per 8lb. In lambs, a full average amount of business was transacted, at rates, if anything, rather in favour of the buyer. In veal, both large and choice of supply, was barely late rates. Pigs were very dull, but not cheaper. Much cows sold at from £14 to £18 each.

Per 8lb. to sink the offal.—Coarse and inferior beasts, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; second quality ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 4d; prime large oxen, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; prime Scots, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; coarse and inferior sheep, 4s 2d to 4s 4d. Second quality ditto, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; prime ditto, 4s 10d to 5s 0d; small ditto, 5s 2d to 5s 4d; prime south Down ditto, 5s 2d to 5s 4d; large coarse calves, 4s 0d to 4s 6. prime small ditto, 4s 8d to 5s 0d; large Scots, 4s 0d to 4s 6d; rood small porkers, 5s 8d to 5s 0d; lambs, 5s 2d to 5s 4d. Suckling calves, 18s to 28s, and quarter old store pigs, 16s to 18s each. Numbers in:—Beasts, 2,200; sheep, 11,520; calves, 210; pigs, 270.

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday).—We had a steady trade here to day, at very full prices.

Per 8lb. by the carcase.—Inferior beef, 3s 0d to 3s 8d; middling ditto, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; prime large ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; small ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 4d; large coarse mutton, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; middling ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; prime ditto, 4s 10d to 5s 0d; veal, 3s 10d to 4s 10d; small pork, 4s 8d to 4s 10d: lamb, 5s 0d to 6s 0d. HOWARD HEARNET.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

There has been rather a demand for money during the past week, and prices have been firmly maintained. The Discount houses, however, have not shown any disposition to increase their rate for money on the 15th of July. The payment of the Half-Yearly Dividends has not had the ordinary effect of making money cheaper. Daily accounts speak favourably of the promise of the harvest, but the effect on the Money Market is counteracted by the approaching loan, for 350 millions of francs. The Railway calls are also beginning to be felt strongly. These circumstances operate to retard the attainment of a more active state of trade; but much of their pressure will disappear if the present fine prospects as favourable as there is good ground for anticipating.

The English Market opened with depression, Consols at one period on Monday having receded to 88. The closing prices were for money on the 15th of July. The approaching settlement had an influence on prices, but on Tuesday a brisk business was done at a slight advance. The finances of the weather, and the Account promising to pass off favourably, again improved prices on Wednesday, and on Thursday still further advanced, in consequence of the bears being obliged to make purchases to buy in their accounts. Prices at the close of the week were, however, a little flatter. Exchequer Bills are not so good as the prices of last week, and India Bonds have slightly declined. The last prices are, for Bank Stock, 193½; Reduced, 88; Consols, 88¾; New Three and-a-Quarter per Cent. Annuities, 90¾; Long Annuities, expire Jan. 5, 1860, 9¾; India Bonds, under £1,000, 9 p.; Consols for Opening, July 16, 88¾; Exchequer Bills, £1000, 9 pm.; Ditto, Small, 13 pm.

It will be remembered that, some months since, the Committee of Spanish Bondholders despatched one of their number (Mr. Henderson) to Madrid, with such duty to press a settlement of the over-due dividends on the Five per Cent. Stock, and arrange generally for the punctual payment of the future dividends for the future. On Saturday last, Mr Henderson, jun., arrived from Madrid, with the following important proposal:—

"To convert the whole debt into 4 Three per Cent. Stock, and on condition of revenues being duly received and appropriated to the payment of the reduced interest, those revenues arising from the Customs or any other source, the bondholders to subscribe a relative proportion of their bonds, rather than all go further to the shape of a loan. For instance, on each coupon of the £125 Active Bonds and Coupon, £120 of the new Bonds to be received by the creditors, and £5 by the Government." Mr Henderson further states that "the abandonment of two per cent interest on the Active and the surrender to the Government of more than the moiety of Stock is the great lever, and constitutes the leading obligation for the Government at any sacrifice, to give bona fide security for the future punctual payment of the interest. The Passive and Deferred of 1831 to be admitted at rates to be agreed on."

The total amount of this proposition is to consign 12 per cent. upon the principal, and give up two out of five per cent. interest; receiving in exchange a worse security (if possible) than the present. Now, the whole revenues of the State are, according to the arrangements, liable for the debt; the proposition is therefore obligingly offers to substitute any one portion, viz., Customs, &c., to that purpose. That such a proposition can be for one moment entertained is hardly probable; nevertheless, the meeting of bondholders on Thursday separated, contenting themselves with voting the Committee to be their representatives, and passing a vote of thanks to Mr. Henderson. George Bentinck and Faucitt St. Stanhope only with this proposal, a loan is advertised for, secured on the emission of one million of Treasury Bonds. Nine per cent. per annum is offered by way of temptation. The holders of the last issue of Treasury Bonds, which were issued only to pay five per cent. per annum, were nearly paid off, after seven years of incessant dunning, a part of the principal was liquidated. It is needless, however, to waste our space or our readers' time by commenting upon the subject.

Although there has been rather more business done in ordinary Stocks on Foreign Market, on Monday, prices closed flatly with regard to Spanish and Portuguese. Purchases, however, on Tuesday improved the state of affairs, and both the previously mentioned descriptions advanced. Spanish Active Account, advanced to 18¾, and Spanish Five per Cents to 23¾. A reaction, however, in the last mentioned stock has since occurred, and the closing of the Account so limited business that quotations have been almost nominal. Mexican also, for account, fell from previous rates. Five per Cent, 84¾; d.tto, Small, 31; Equador Bonds, Granada One per Cent, Deferred ¼; 32¾ Mexican Bonds, 1846, Five per Cent. 19; Ditto, for the Account, 19¼; Peruvian Bonds, 1st or Small, 5 per Cent, 84¾; Ditto, Five per Cent, 21¼; Ditto, for the Account, 22; Ditto, Passive Bonds, 5; Ditto, Three per Cent, 31¼; Ditto, for the Account, 31¾; Dutch Two-and-a-half per Cent, 57; Ditto, Four per Cent, Certificates, 104.

The settlement in the Share Market passed off without much difficulty, the dealings not having been very extensive. The Market, however, is far from firm, at the following rates:—Amberley Buildings, 2¼; Birmingham and Derby Junction, 14; Birmingham and Oxford Junction, 18; Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Dudley, 15½; Buckinghamshire, ¼ dis.; Caledonian, 25¼; Chester and Holyhead, 2¼; Dublin and Belfast Junction, 2¼; Eastern Counties, 3¾; Ditto, York Extension, 7; East Lancashire, New, 9¼ x. in.; Ditto ditto, Extension Scrip, 1¼; Ditto, Lincolnshire, 8; Great Northern, 4¼; Great Southern and Western (Ireland), 31; Great Western, 123 x. 10; Ditto, Half Shares, 70; Great Western, Quarter Shares, 20¼; Great Western, New £17 Shares, 10; London and Blackwall, 7¼; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 55½; Ditto, Consolidated Eighths, 12¾; London and North Western, 179¾; Ditto, Quarters, (L. and B.), 29; Ditto, £40 Shares, (M. and B.), 71; London and South Western, 86; Ditto, New £50, 38¼; Ditto, Tentns (Consolidated), 56¼; Ditto, Scrip, £50, 4; Manchester and Leeds, 94; Ditto, Half Shares, 46; Midland, 128; Ditto, £40 Shares, 48¼; Ditto, £30 Shares, 10¼; Ditto, Birmingham and Derby, 100; Ditto, Consolidated, 104; Bristol and Birmingham Six per Cents., 128; Newcastle and Berwick, New, 19¼; North Staffordshire, 10¾; North and South British, Half Shares, 15½; Ditto, Thirds, 2¼; North Staffordshire, 10¾; Scottish Central, 58; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, 3½; Ditto, Class B, 2¾; South Staffordshire, ¼ dis.; South Eastern and Dover, New (issued at £20), 20¾; South Wales, 11¾; South Yorkshire, Doncaster, and Goole, 1¾; Winchester, Southsea, and South Western, 2¾ pm.; York and Newcastle, 37¾; Ditto, Extension, 16½; Ditto, Preference, 12¾ x.; York and North Midland, 80¾; Ditto, Extension, 42½; Ditto, Preference, 16¾; Ditto East and West Riding Junction, 27¾; Northern of France, 12 x.; Orleans and Bordeaux, 5¾; Paris and Lyons, 5; London and Westminster, 2¾; Ditto, New, 1¾.

SATURDAY MORNING.—Yesterday was settling day in Consols, and the Market opened with much buoyancy, at an advance of nearly ¼ per cent. A slight reaction, however, left the closing prices at 88¾ for Account, and for the next Account, 89¾. In the Share Market, and Foreign Stocks, nothing of importance transpired.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, JULY 13.

CROWN OFFICE, JULY 13.

MEMBER RETURNED TO SERVE IN THE PRESENT PARLIAMENT.

County of Cork.—Maurice Power, of Rossmeadhip, in the said county of Cork, M.D., in the room of Daniel O'Connell, deceased.

WAR-OFFICE, JULY 13.

3rd Dragoon Guards: R. C. Bennett, to be Lieut. Captain, vice Manleton.

6th Light Dragoons: Lieut. the Hon. C. Pewys to be Captain, vice M'Mahon; Cornet R. W. King to be Lieut. vice Pewys; R. A. Sarel to be Cornet, vice King. 11th. Lieut. the Hon. G. J. Noel to be Captain, vice Dawson; Cornet A. Arbuthnot to be Lieut. vice Noel. L. Garland to be Cornet, vice Heloon. 12th: Assist.-Surgeon G. T. Woodman, M.D., to be Assist.-Surgeon, vice Bell.

Coldstream Regiment of Foot Guards: Capt. the Hon. F. W. C. Villers to be Lieut. and Captain, vice Neville; Ensign and Adjutant C. Neville to be Lieut. and Captain, vice the Hon. F. W. C. Villers; Second Lieut. H. M. Bouverie to be Ensign and Lieutenant, vice Neville.

5th Foot: Staff Surgeon of the Second Class W. G. Mackenzie, M.D., to be Surgeon, vice D. Bell, who exchanges. 7th: Assist.-Surg. W. D. Austin, from the 2nd Foot, to be Assist.-Surg. W. Bailey to be Assistant-Surgeon 21st: Assist.-Surg. F. C. Annesley to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Mark. 26th: Surgeon J. Sayers, from the 31st Foot, to be Surgeon, vice Stewart. 31st: Lieut.-Gen. the Hon. H. G. Trevor, C.B., to be Colonel, vice General Sir C. Halkett, K.C.B. 40th Foot: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain, vice Hall. 45th: Capt. R. Sutherland, Hussars, vice Sir C. Halkett, K.C.B., to be Colonel, vice General Sir Frazley J. G. Maclear, Bart. 47th: Capt. C. P. Pickard to be Major, vice Wise. Capt. J. Pickard to be Captain, vice G. P. Pickard; Lieut. R. S. Torrens to be Captain, vice Bantham; Ensign W. J. Wise to be Lieutenant, vice Torrens; T. Wollcombe to be Ensign, vice Hooke. 63rd: Capt. S. Y. Martin to be Captain, vice Evans, deceased; Lieut. G. Bowen to be Captain, vice Martin; Ensign and Adjutant W. Fuller to have the rank of Lieutenant; Ensign J. Bourchier to be Lieutenant vice Wilson; C. A. Bowen to be Ensign, vice Bourchier. 64th: Lieut. J. Bowen to be Captain, vice Beckwith; Ensign and Adjutant W. Fuller to have the rank of Lieutenant; Ensign J. Bourchier to be Lieutenant vice Wilson; C. A. Bowen to be Ensign, vice Bourchier. 64th: Lieut. J. Bowen to be Captain, vice Beckwith, Lieut. the Hon. F. Pitt Rey to Place to be Captain, vice Skinner; Second Lieut C. V. Cavanagh to be First Lieutenant, vice Pace. C. Butler to be Second Lieutenant, vice Cavendish; F. H. Ramsden to be Second Lieutenant, vice ——.

BANKRUPTS.

J. S. PYE, Berkeley-square, milliner. G. HARRIS, Gillspur-street, tailor. J. WORTERS, Goldin Saffron, builder. S. R. BILLINGS, Commercial-road East, Cheapside. A. HILL, Ipswich, hat-maker. T. H. HOLFORD, Dudley, grocer. J. LEGASSICK, Tavistock, grocer. J. BUTTERWORTH, Rochdale, flannel-dealer. W. BOOTH, Sutterfield, Rossendale, calender. J. MACHIN, Manchester, grocer. W. GUTTON, jun., Liverpool, merchant. J. KINDER, Birkenhead.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.

A. REID, Glasgow, grocer. A. LANG, jun., Glasgow, wine-merchant. W. SMITH, Burrhead, Renfrewshire, coal-master. Q. M'GOWAN, Glasgow, wright

FRIDAY, JULY 16.

FOREIGN OFFICE, JULY 15

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Evan E. William Carroll, as Consul at St. Helena for his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway.

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

E. SWIFT, Walsall, Staffordshire, grocer. H. DAVIS, Bristol.

BANKRUPTS.

J. BRITTAIN, Redyard, Wiltshire, tallow-chandler. J. SNOOK, Ledbury-road, Paddington, builder. S. HOLKEN, Cornwall-terrace, Queen's-road, Bayswa. builder. H. CLARK, Hedgerwarcott, Clip, and Prismore's Row, Whitechapel, oil and colour merchant. S. LANGLEY, Reading, late of Wyfold, Basset, Oxfordshire, grocer. P. COLE, draper. J. DOLPHIN, Bilston, Staffordshire, grocer. J. W. SUGG, Torquay, Devonshire, architect. W. B. COOKE, Burton upon-Trent, Staffordshire, manufacturer of ginger-beer. J. SEED, Bradford, Yorkshire, manufacturing chemist. G. ROBERTS, Rochdrough, Gloucestershire, maltster. W. A. MACEY, Bristol, grocer. G. WILLIAMS, Bristol, large draper. W. KEARLEY HYDE, W. KEARLEY HYDE, J. JOLLIEN, T. BARLOW, D. CRIGHTON, J. JONES, T. MALLINSON, W. DENNER, D. CRIGHTON, and J. ASHWORTH, Manchester, calico-printers. J. L. BUTTERALL, Doncaster, grocer

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATION

H. COLVILLE, Glasgow, wine-merchant

BIRTHS.

On the 7th inst., the wife of Mr. William. Rotherhithe, of twins—sons.—In Belgrave-square, the Lady Louisa Douglas Pennant, of a daughter.—In Portman-square, the lady of the Rev. Henry Vigne, of a daughter.—At Westbourne-terrace, the lady of Thomas Fainthorner, Esq., of a daughter.

MARRIAGES

Skinner Taylor, to Anne Jessey Hunt Bourchier, Baron Torquay, Arthur Hill Hasted Mercer, Esq., to Elizabeth Anne, daughter of the late Major Robert Hutchinson Orr.—At Kensington, the Rev. David Edward Doncvile, M.A., to Mary Jane, daughter of Ewen Stobb, Esq. —At Ashton-under-Lyne, the Rev Henry Wilkinson, M.A., to Frances Sarah, youngest surviving daughter of the late Michael Russell, Esq.—At Chiton, the Rev. J. C. Hendows, M.A., to Sarah, second daughter of Captain Edward Sutherland.

DEATHS.

At Park-hall, Great Bardfield, Essex, Thomas Pollett, Esq., in the 82nd year of his age.—On the 8th inst., Captain Frederick Barlow, late of the 41st Regiment.—At Shapwick, Somerset, in the 87th year of her age, Jane, widow of George Bennett, Esq.—At Madrid, Dona Francisca Lopez Pelegrin, Esq.—At Bath, Mary Boulton, Esq.—At Hatcham-house, New Cross Susanna, the wife of Mr Henry Hains, sen., in her 87th year.—Aged 40, Gloucester-place, Portman-square, Mrs Powys, relict of the late Rev. Thomas Powys.—On the 10th inst., Mr. Gilbert Blight, in his 85th year.—At Tendeley, Staffordshire, the Hon. Lucy Anne Agnes Littleton, the Rev Hugh Pigot, M.A., to Frances Sarah, youngest surviving daughter of the late Michael Russell, Esq.—At Chiton, the Rev. J. C. Hendows, M.A., to Sarah, second daughter of Captain Edward Sutherland.

DEATHS.

At Park-hall, Great Bardfield, Essex, Thomas Pollett, Esq., in the 82nd year of his age.—On the 8th inst., Captain Frederick Barlow, late of the 41st Regiment.—At Shapwick, Somerset, in the 87th year of her age, Jane, widow of George Bennett, Esq.—At Madrid, Dona Francisca Lopez Pelegrin, Esq.—At Bath, Mary Boulton, Esq.—At Hatcham-house, New Cross Susanna, the wife of Mr Henry Hains, sen., in her 87th year.—Aged 40, Gloucester-place, Portman-square, Mrs Powys, relict of the late Rev. Thomas Powys.—On the 10th inst., Mr. Gilbert Blight, in his 85th year.—At Tendeley, Staffordshire, the Hon. Lucy Anne Agnes Littleton, youngest daughter of Lord and Lady Hatherton, in her 21st year, Rhoda Jane, widow of the late Richard Weeden Sharp.—At Rochampton, Mrs Jane Hawes, in her 74 h year.—At Hitchgreen, Hants, Rear-Admiral Colquit, aged 2 years.—At Hereford Sunday, in her 76th year.—On the 11th inst., Michael Clayton, Esq., of Charlwood Park, Surrey.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—By Special Desire. The Nobility, Subscribers to the Opera, and the Public are respectfully informed that, on THURSDAY NEXT, JULY 22nd 18 7, it being a Subscription Night, will be produced an entirely new Opera, composed expressly for her Majesty's Theatre, by Signor Verdi, called I MASNADIERI (The Libe ty-loving Outlaws) or The Robbers. Characters:—Signor Salvini, with new Scenery, Dresses, and Decorations. The music by M. Charles Marshall. Amalia, Mdlle. Jenny Lind; Carlo, Sig. Gardoni; Francesco, Sig. Coletti., Maggior Sig. Bonetti. Armino, Sig. Cornelli, Rodi, Sig. Poli; Moor, Mapoleoni, Sig. Lorenzo

The Free List is suspended, for the present.

* * Pit Tickets may be obtained at the Box-Office of the Theatre, price 10s 6d. each. Applicants for Box, Pit Stalls, and Tickets, to be made at the Box-Office, at the Theatre. Doors open at Seven o'Clock, the Opera to commence at half-past Seven.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT-GARDEN.—The Nobility [illegible] EVERY [illegible] for [illegible] Madame Grisi; Countess, Mdlle Steffanoni, Cl[illegible]; Mdlle Adele Marcon[illegible]; Mdlle Bastini, Sestilio, Sig[illegible]; Signor Tamburini, Barili, Sig Ferdinando, Sig Polonini, Figure, Sig. Marini. Conductor, M. Costa.

To conclude with a popular BALLET, in which the principal Artistes will dance, supported by the whole of the Corps de Ballet.

Prices, Stalls, and Boxes, to be obtained at the Box-office (in the theatre), Bow-street, and at Messrs Cramer, Beale and Co's, 201 Regent-street.

The doors will be opened at Half-past Seven, and the performances commence at eight o'clock

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET. Mr. BUCKSTONE'S FAREWELL BENEFIT, WEDNESDAY Next, JULY 21. FIRE BRAND STRATAGEM [illegible] Mr. Buckstone. Mr. Webster. Mr. Strickland. Mr. Compton. THE UNFINISHED GENTLEMAN. Bill Stanley Mr John Reeve, son of the late celebrated Comedian, his First Appearance in Public. With other Entertainments.—Boxes, Pass, &c., of Mr. ARTHUR, at the B.-office, and of Mr. BUCKSTONE, 8 Devonshire-street, Queen-square.

ASTLEY'S POWERFUL ATTRACTIVE NOVELTIES.—[illegible] Every Evening [illegible] Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at Two o'clock. Last Six Nights of Mr W. Cook's Appearance. First Time this Season, Lord Byron's MAZEPPA, or the WILD HORSE with all his original Effects. Last Week of the Highly Successful Drama, to be SPEEDILY REVIVED, or the WARRIOR of the SUN. In La Sr W West Entirely NEW SCENES in the ARENA, introduced by the Talented Artistes of this the First Equestrian Establishment in Europe, in the various Scenes of Equitation. With other Novelties. Acting and Stage Manager, Mr. W. D. Beaufoot. Box-office Open at 11 till 5.

ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF LONDON.—Fellows and Visitors are informed that the Band of the First Life Guards will perform in the Gardens of the Zoological Society in the Regent's Park on Saturday, July 24, 31, and August 7, from Four to Six o'Clock. Admissions may be obtained as usual, on payment of One Shilling by each person. The EXHIBITION of DOMESTIC POULTRY will take place on the 28th, 29th, and 30th of JULY. Particulars will be forwarded to parties desirous of exhibiting, on the [illegible] Secretary, at the Gardens.

July 15, 1847. By Order of the Council, D. W. MITCHELL, Secretary.

M. JULLIEN'S BENEFIT, ROYAL SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—MONDAY, 19th Instant.—M. JULLIEN has the honour to announce that his BENEFIT must positively be Last Appearance but One at the Royal City of London Theatre, on Monday, the 19th Instant, when the Programme of Mr. Jullien's Concert will be of the most brilliant character, and will include THE JENNY LIND QUADRILLES, composed by M. JULLIEN, and the most popular Melodies sung by the celebrated Vocalist, arranged with Solos and Variations for Flute, Flageolet, and Cornet-à-Piston, performed by Mr. Richardson M. Collinet, and Henry Koenig.

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS, WILL CLOSE SATURDAY, 24st inst. THE THIRTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION NOW OPEN at their Gallery, 53, Pall-mall, near St. James's Palace, from Nine o'Clock till Dusk.—Admission, 1s.; Catalogue, 6d.

JERUSALEM AS IT IS.—NOW EXHIBITING, at the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, E. WYN SMITH'S New and Original MODEL OF JERUSALEM AS IT IS, measuring nearly 100 square feet; enlarged from the Model executed by command of her Majesty Queen Adelaide, and presented by the King of Prussia, and a number of the Nobility and Clergy, when on a visit to the Court of Berlin. Mr. Wyn Smith, Architect and Engineer, has just returned from Palestine, and has taken the opportunity of visiting the Holy Land, for the purpose of making the above Model as correct as possible. The Model is open for the reception of Visitors from Ten in the Morning till Ten at Night. Admittance 1s.; Children, Half Price. A Description at the commencement of every hour. Printed Description and Key, 6d.

COLLINS'S ODE to the PASSIONS will be recited by Mr. J. RUSSELL, with a full illustration in a Series of DRAWINGS, magnified by means of the OPAQUE MICROSCOPE, accompanied by Music by Dr. Wade, on the Morphine of Professor Faraday, and Saturday; and on the Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at One and FOUR o'clock precisely, in addition to the above series of four new ones, entitled [illegible] LECTURES on NATURAL PHILOSOPHY, CHEMICAL LECTURES by Dr. Nevil Norton, in the Evenings at Monday and Wednesday, in the Evenings. The beautiful OPTICAL EFFECTS forming the last DISSOLVING VIEWS, DIVING BELL and DIVER, with EXPERIMENTS, &c. Admission, 1s.; Stalls, 2s.; Second Seats, 1s.; Private Boxes, 10s. 6d.

WALHALLA, late Miss Linwood's Gallery, Leicester-square. RETURN of MADAME WARTON from her Provincial Engagements and re-opening of the WHITE MARBLE STATUES. Madame Warton will have the honour of appearing every Morning and Evening in a Splendid New Series of TABLEAUX. In consequence of the numerous applications for the revival of the inimitable Whole Marble Statue Groupings, they will be produced, from additional Classic Illustrations, Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, with the Novel Chemical Light by Mr. G. Southby, of the Royal Surrey Zoological Gardens. On Monday, July 26, they will be presented, in the strength of the company, as a Morning Performance at Three o'Clock; Evening, at Half-past Eight. Stalls, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 2s.; Promenade, 1s.

PROVIDENT SOCIETY of DANCERS and TEACHERS DANCING.—The THIRD ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of the above Society will be held on Tuesday Evening, at MADAM Almanack, at 8 o'clock precisely, in the THEATRE ROYAL HAYMARKET, by kind permission of Benj. Webster, Esq., Lessee and Manager. All Dancers and Teachers of Dancing (Male and Female, Native and Foreign Members, or not, of the Society, are invited to attend. There is a Register Office attached to the Society, for [illegible] engagements, and which [illegible] Members are [illegible] Members.—For further particulars, address the Secretary, at the Office No. 29, Bedford-street, Strand.

THE ROYAL INSTALLATION MEDAL.—Published by the Authority of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE CHANCELLOR.

This beautiful Medal, which has met with the approval of the Chancellor and other Nobility at the late Installation, is Published by JAMES PETERS and SON, Jewellers, Cambridge; and sold in London by BOWDLER and JAMES, Regent-street.

Price in Gold	..	..	.. £4 14 0
" Silver	..	..	.. 0 12 0
" Gilt (in a Frame)	..	..	.. 1 11 6
" Bronze (in a Case)	..	..	.. 0 8 0

Sent, Post Free, to all parts of the Kingdom.

ELEGANCE and ECONOMY in PAPER-HANGINGS.—French Satins, 2s. 6d. per piece; Flock, 6d. per yard; 10,000 pieces in Stock. Panel Decorations, Borders, or Oak, as cheap as other Papers. Terms Cash. Patterns included 30 years. W. CROSBY, 22, Lowther Arcade. N.B.—Three doors from the Strand entrance.

CHUBB'S LOCKS, Fire-proof Safes, and Cash Boxes.—CHUBB'S NEW PATENT DETECTOR LOCKS are perfect security for doors, chests of keys and pinlocks, and also give immediate notice of any attempt to open them. They are made of every size, and for all purposes to which locks are applied, and are fitted to doors, chests, &c., neat and durable. Chubb's Patent Fire-proof Safes, Bankbooxes, Chests, &c., Strong Japan Cash Boxes, and Deed Boxes of all sizes, on sale, and made to order, fitted with the Detector Locks. 57, CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard.

BED FEATHERS, PURIFIED by STEAM with PATENT MACHINERY, whereby they are rendered perfectly sweet and free from dust.

Mixed	.. 1s. 8d. per lb.	Best Dorking Grey Goose	.. 2s. 6d. per lb.
Grey Goose	.. 1s. 4d.	Best Irish White ditto	.. 2s. 6d.
Foreign ditto	.. 1s. 2d.	Best Hungarian ditto	.. 3s. 0d.

"It is an excellent list of Bedding containing many sorts of weights grey and cheap enough for the poor to apply and for a family of moderate means to use."—Times, January 30, 1847.

RESTORATIVE FOR THE HAIR.—Many a Gentleman whose head was rapidly losing its natural ornament has, by the use of OLDRIDGE'S BALM OF COLUMBIA, restored it to its pristine beauty, and prevented the hair from falling off. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., and 10s. 6d. per bottle. Sold by the Proprietor, 1, Wellington-street, Strand, and by all Perfumers.

EQUITY and LAW LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, No. 26, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London.

TRUSTEES.

The Right Hon. Lord Monteagle	Nassau W. Senior, Esq., Master in Chancery
The Right Hon. the Lord Chief Baron	Charles Purton Cooper, Esq., Q.C., LL.D.
The Right Hon. Justice Erle	Bar
The Hon. Mr. Justice Erle	George Capron, Esq.

Parties assuring within six months from their birthdays will have only half-a-year's premium to the rate of premium charged, and premiums may be made payable half-yearly and quarterly.

Policies in which third parties are interested, if the life assured go beyond the prescribed limits within the knowledge of such parties, may be renewed.

The rates calculated from the Healthiness of Climate, especially favourable to young and middle-aged lives.

Assurances may be effected on an ascending scale at a very reduced rate for the first seven years. Annuities granted.

Loans may be granted on deposit of policies already assured.

The actual commission allowed.

Offices hours between Ten and Four. Communications to be addressed to the Secretary.

J. J. SYLVESTER, Actuary and Secretary.

LEGAL and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 10, Fleet-street, London. Established 1836.

TRUSTEES.

The Right Hon. Lord Lyndhurst	The Right Hon. Sir H. Jenner Fust
The Right Hon. Lord Chief Baron of Devon	Thomas Wingfield, Esq.
The Right Hon. the Vice-Chancellor of England	Peter Schlesinger Rendle, Esq.
	James Hall, Esq.

DIRECTORS.

Mr. Sergeant Adams	Charles Jenkins, Esq.
Charles Austin, Esq., Q.C.	Joan Ingoldsby, Esq.
G. Lenn Baker, Esq.	James W. Lyon, Esq.
Edward Smith Bigg, Esq.	Kenyon S. Parker, Esq., Q.C.
The Right Hon. Sir J. L. K. Bruce	Edward Leigh Pemberton, Esq.
J. H. H. Chambers, Esq.	The Hon. Mr. Baron Platt
Charles Clarke, Esq.	The Hon. Sir George Rose
Michael Cassy, Esq.	Sir Francis Simpkinson, Q.C.
James Currie, Esq.	Clement T. Swanston, Esq., Q.C.
Sir William Dorrville, Bart.	Mr. Sergeant Talfourd
Mr. Sergeant Goulburn	Members Tatham, Esq.
Mr. William Hanson	Thomas Turner, Esq.

AUDITORS.

Richard B. Crowder, Esq., Q.C.	James Leman, Esq.
Robert B. Follett, Esq.	Frederick Robinson, Esq.

SOLICITORS.

Messrs. Kinderley, Denton and Kinderley.

MEDICAL OFFICERS.

Henry S. Boots, Esq., M.D.; J. G. Percy, Esq.

A Bonus was declared on the 16th day of April last on the Policies effected in this office.

In the following Table are contained Specimens of the Additions to Policies of £1000 each

Age at entrance	Duration of Assurance	Annual Premium	Total of Premiums paid	Vested Interests added to Policy or assumed	Prospective Annual Bonus Reversionary	Sum Assured and Bonus	Reduction of Premium
	Years	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
20	10	18 3	181 13	130	18	9 5	55
30	10	25 7	253 18	140	14	11 8	55
40	10	32 19	329 12	150	14	8 8	55
50	10	45 7	453 15	200	20	8 8	55
60	10	59 13	596 12	130	18	10 3	60
40	8	32 19	263 13	121	15½	10 9	44
40	7	32 19	230 14	109	15½	10 9	39½
40	6	32 19	197 15	97	15½	22 2	33
40	5	32 19	164 16	77	15½	22 13	27

The next Quinquennial Division of Profits will take place at the end of the year 1851. All Policies effected before the [illegible] will participate.

Persons whose lives are assured in the county are [illegible] entitled, without payment of any extra premium, to voyage (as passengers) or reside in any part of the world—distant not more than 33 degrees of [illegible].

The Directors' Report to the recent Periodical General Meeting of the Members of the Society may be obtained at the Office, on personal or written application to

By order of the Board, T. E. SYMONDS, Actuary.

PUBLICATIONS, &c.

[illegible] Water.

HAND-BOOK of TOWN GARDENING. By a LADY. With an Illustration. Small 8vo., Gilt Edges.—Dublin: JAMES M'GLASHAN, 21, D'Olier-street. London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN, 65, Paternoster-row.

NEW GUIDE TO WALES.

Now Ready, price 8s. with a Coloured Map and Illustrations,

EXCURSIONS in NORTH WALES; a Complete Guide to the Tourist through that Romantic Country. Edited by JOHN HICKLIN, of the "Chester Courant." London, Whittaker and Co., Simpkin and Marshall; Hamilton, Adams, and Co., Lon[illegible]

On Saturday, July 17

LETTER from SIR ROBERT PEEL to the ELECTORS of the BOROUGH of TAMWORTH. London: JAMES HAIN, 1, Dayna-ter.

Just Published, Royal 12mo. Price 7s. 6d.,

THE WILD ROSE, in SIX CANTOS, WITH OTHER POEMS. By ROBERT BELL, Barrister-at-Law.

W. PICKERING, 177, Piccadilly

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS: History of the Succession of the Ancient Roman Emperors, with the Prices of their Coins, bearing Portraits, their Dates and Mintages, in fine yellow gold by F. WILLIAMS, Dealer in Ancient Coins, 16, Strand, London, price 1s.; by post, 1s 2d. Coins sent by post, Bought, Catalogued, &c.

Just Published, Price 2s. 6d.,

THE GILBERT POLKA, composed and arranged for the Piano Forte, and dedicated to Captain Gilbert, R.H.A., by W. COLLINS, Master of the Royal Artillery Band. The Polka has been performed with success at the recent Balls and Concerts of the officers of Royal Artillery; and, besides being easy and effective, is very [illegible] and [illegible] Lindsay, Hanover-square, Publishers.

Just Published, price 6d. each, plain 1s. coloured,

REID'S "RAILWAY RIDE" from LONDON to EDINBURGH; showing the Cities, Towns, Villages, and Roads, with the Distances of each Station from London. Sent free to any part, on the receipt of 8 or 14 postage stamps.

Published by ANDREW REID, 12, Tilmouth-street, Newcastle upon-Tyne.

Just Published,

THE STRANGER'S GUIDE TO NORTHAMPTON, and Visitor's Hand-Book to the Proceedings of the Show of the Royal Agricultural Society to be held for '47, containing a full description of the Town and its Environs, Antiquities, Edifices, and other Public Buildings, with Details of General History and Local Events. Price One Shilling. Northampton: S. and J. BAKER, Northampton; and JAMES GILBART, 49, Paternoster-row, London.

HAND-BOOK FOR WALES.—Just Published, price 8s., with a Coloured Map and Illustrations, PANORAMA of the Beauties, Curiosities and Antiquities of North Wales, intended as a Pocket Companion to the Tourist and Traveller on that Edition. By J. HEMINGWAY. The Coloured Map may also be had separate from the above, at the price of 2s. 6d.

London: Whittaker and Co., Simpkin and Co., Hamilton and Adams, Longman and Co., and G. Pickard, late Seacome and Pickard, Chester.

Second Edition, price sixpence.—Plain Engravings,

HAND-BOOK to the ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH; A Popular Explanatory Treatise on the construction of this wonderworking Instrument. The attention of the public is directed to the "Hand-Book," the details and drawings being by gentlemen who have had daily superintendence for [illegible] of the Electric Telegraph Company [illegible]

London: W. H. SMITH, Wych-street; SCALES, Shoreditch; and to order, of all Booksellers.

THE ONLY AUTHORISED ENGLISH EDITION, TRANSLATED BY D. FORBES CAMPBELL, Esq., New Series.

VOL. VII. of THIERS' HISTORY of the CONSULATE and EMPIRE. [illegible]

Also just Published,

VOL. X. of AGNES STRICKLAND'S LIVES of the QUEENS of ENGLAND.

LORD CASTLEREAGH'S NARRATIVE of HIS JOURNEY to DAMASCUS, &c. 2 Vols., with numerous Engravings. 28s. bound.

HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

SHERRINGTON'S SCHOOL BOOKS

BUTTER'S ETYMOLOGICAL SPELLING-BOOK AND EXPOSITOR, an Introduction to the spelling, pronunciation, and derivation of the English Language. 42nd edition, price 1s. 6d. bound. BUTTER'S ANALYSIS to the 1, 2, 3, and 4 Letters, upon a uniform, new and original plan, by which exercises are rendered as easy as lessons. 1s. 6d. bound. Key, price 1s. 6d. BUTTER'S ANALYSIS to the Primer, with Engravings. 20th edition, price 6d. Sold by Simpkin and Co., Whittaker and Co., Longman and Co., Hamilton and Co., Darton and Co., Aylott and Jones, Reid and Lambert, Orr and Co., London; H. Stroud and Co., Surrey; Carver and Boyd, Edinburgh; J. M'Glashan, Dublin.

Just Published,

FIVE MINUTES COMMON SENSE ABOUT the HAIR, as regards its Restoration, Preservation, and Improvement.

"We have endeavoured to condense the most valuable and sound ideas upon this subject."

Published by THOMAS CHURCHILL, 22 King-street, Regent-street, London: and may be had on application, or will be sent free to any part of the Kingdom on receipt of two postage stamps

TO PARENTS and GUARDIANS.—WANTED, as an APPRENTICE, to a Manufacturing and Retail STATIONER, an active and intelligent YOUTH of respectable connexions, to reside with the Family. Premium required.—Address to R. K., care of Mr. Hedge, 19, Great Marlborough-street, Regent-street.

PARIS.—PROTESTANT ESTABLISHMENT.—Madame MARTIN, No. 1, Rue de Seanne, Faubourg St. Germain, receives a limited number of YOUNG LADIES, who [illegible] Terms, 1,000 francs per annum. [illegible] Madame Martin's house combines [illegible] the comforts of a home with the [illegible] of a school. She has been engaged for upwards of twenty years as a [illegible] educating young ladies of [illegible] wishing to complete their studies, will, at the same time, have the advantage of introduction to [illegible] society, can be received. If required, the pupils may be sent for either to the coast or London. The highest references given, both in England and in the Continent. Address as above.

GOVERNESS.—A LADY, who has had considerable experience in tuition, having no only completed the education of her pupils, but also [illegible] to ENGAGEMENT as GOVERNESS in a gentleman's family.

French and Italian [illegible] Music, Drawing, Writing, Arithmetic, the Use of the Globes, Composition, and all the branches of a good and useful education. Address to [illegible] to a continued residence in town or country. A letter addressed to M. H., [illegible]

ISLE of WIGHT.—EDUCATION BY THE SEA-SIDE.—A Limited number of Young Gentlemen are Boarded and Educated at HANOVER HOUSE, GEORGE-STREET, RYDE, at moderate and inclusive Terms. The [illegible] progress as regards its Restoration, Preservation, and Improvement.

ROBINSON'S PATENT BRYING MACHINE.—Mr. W. E. JERKINS, Proprietor of the Patent, has had the pleasure to receive (among many others, the following Testimonials from the Lessees of a highly-distinguished Private Establishment:—"We have had one of Mr. Robinson's Drying Machines in use for the last three days, and we are decidedly of opinion, that it is decidedly the greatest of Washing Inventions, and we who use it will find, as it has done with us, the work of cleaning, drying, and getting up linen, is done in a much safer and more manner than before, but, above all, the saving in wear and tear will be very considerable."

Manufactory, 97, Long-acre Street, Berners Street, Oxford-street.

METCALFE and CO'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH, and SMYRNA SPONGES. Lately-imported.—For proof of the extreme durability, power of cleaning, and fine economy, and all who have used Messrs. Metcalfe's Brushes. The tooth-brush performs the most effectual cleansing of the teeth, and the gums are invigorated by its friction in the most extraordinary manner, hairs never come out; its peculiarly penetrating Hair-brushes, with the durable unbleached Russia bristles, which will not retain the smallest particle. Improved Clothes-brush, that cleans harmlessly, in one-third the time. The new Velvet Brush and Improved Stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponges, at METCALFE and CO.'S only Establishment, 130B, Oxford-street, one door from Hanover street.

GIBBINS' CREAM of ROSES and ROSEMARY.—This delicious and elegant article is most respectfully offered to the Ladies, by GIBBINS, Court Hairdresser and Perfumer (from Paris), King-street, St. James's-square, as the most delicate and effectual Preservative of the skin. Being a Powder, it will be successfully applied in preventing the growth of superfluous hair.

GIBBINS' ARTIFICIAL PERSPIRATION, a Fluid for Shaving, is the most delightful and refreshing preparation ever introduced to the notice of the Public. Sold by GIBBINS, 20, King-street, St. James's-square.

THE ATRAPILATORY, or LIQUID HAIR DYE; the only Dye that really answers for all colours, and does not require re-doing, but as the hair grows, as it never fades or changes to any other than its natural or original colour.—BOTANIC WATER and BEAR'S GREASE. When the hair is becoming thin and falling off, the only effectual remedy, besides shaving the head, is the use of the two above named articles, which stimulate the roots of the hair to produce a new growth, and that in such a manner that, in a short time, and the hair's former as a nourishment. The NEW TOOTH-PICK BRUSH, thoroughly cleansing between the teeth, and rendering up and down, and in the surface when used overways. The hair warmer and cover to moustache. The LAVENDER and FRENCH HAIR BRUSHES. The DOUBLE ARTIFICIAL PERSPIRE. The NEW SMOOTH SHAVING MEDIUM. The RAILWAY BRUSH and POWDER. The above new and elegant articles, in addition to a very extensive assortment of useful and fashionable Brushes, are the sole Manufactures and Inventions of Messrs. ROSS and SONS, 119 and 120, Bishopsgate-street, London.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—MESSRS. A. ROWLAND and SON, 25, Hatton-garden, London, beg to caution the Nobility and Gentry against being misled by the attempts of some shopkeepers, who to compound of their own manufacture give the title of "MACASSAR OIL," "KALYDOR," and "ODONTO," or other words in imitation of Rowland and the Government Departments, with similar attempts at Deception, while [illegible] the genuine Articles are signed "A. ROWLAND and SON," in red ink, thus [illegible] Ask for "ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL," "ROWLAND'S KALYDOR," and "ODONTO," or "ROWLANDS" and the Wrapper of each Genuine Bottle, Box, &c., bearing that of the Article, with their Signature as above. [illegible] "A. ROWLAND & SON" Sold by them, and by all Chemists and Perfumers.

CHILDREN'S and INVALIDS' CARRIAGES.—Invalids' Wheel Chairs, from £3 to £35, with hoods, second-hand as well as new; Spinal and Self-acting Chairs, Children's Chaises, Vis-à-Vis Waggons, Pony Chaises, Bath Chairs, &c., from Two Shillings to Twenty Guineas. Immense and varied collection on SALE or HIRE, at KINGMAN'S Manufactory, 28, City-road, Finsbury-square. N.B. Illustrated Catalogues.

DEANE'S GUNS are manufactured of no other than the choicest materials, and by none but the most experienced Artists, under the immediate [illegible] and [illegible] Deane, Dray, and Co., London-bridge.

ORNAMENTS for the DRAWING-ROOM, LIBRARY, and [illegible] Manufactory, [illegible] Show-Rooms, [illegible] Strand, [illegible] Bronzes, Porcelain, Glass, Ormolu, and Fancy Articles, [illegible] Lamps, Chandeliers, Candelabra, Tea Trays, Dinner Services, Table Cutlery, Dressing Cases, Work Boxes, Writing Desks, Tea Caddies, Tea Urns, Tea Services, Bronze Figures, Inkstands, Clocks, Vases, Papier Mâché Goods, Tables, Chairs, Couches, Fenders, Fire Irons, Fire Screens, Bedroom Furniture, Kitchen Utensils, Turnery, Brushes, Mats, Baskets, Culinary Articles, Gilt Toys, Stationery, Bagatelle Boards, Backgammon Boards, Chess Men, Dominoes, Cribbage Boards, Dice, Cards, Playing Cards, Cribbage Cases, Tea Chests GIBSON'S STATUE OF THE QUEEN, IN THE ROYAL ACADEMY EXHIBITION.

GIBSON'S STATUE OF THE QUEEN.

THIS long talked-of work has just been placed in the Sculpture Room of the Royal Academy, where it proves very attractive. It is, in part, coloured, but sparingly. This is a novelty in art, which has excited some difference of opinion. In an article in the Roman Advertiser, the work is characterised as "a personification of the Royal so obvious, that, if discovered centuries hence, we believe there could be no hesitation in recognising it as the statue of a Queen, even without the tiara or any other insignia. We felt some alarm for its reputation on learning that it had been coloured, and visited it again, doubtful of receiving an impression so agreeable as the first. But the application of colour is so delicate, the tone so subdued, that no effect of glaring contrast is produced, and the pale purity of the marble does not, as a whole, suffer from the partial tinting. Nothing more is coloured than the rim of the tiara and the dolphins that ornament its circlet, in yellow; the wave-formed embroidery of the robe, and the rose, shamrock, and thistle, at the corners, in red and blue; the acorns pendant from the extremities, where the Greeks wore weight of gold, in yellow."

NEW CACTUS, FROM REAL DEL MONTE, MEXICO.

(CEREUS SENILIS.)

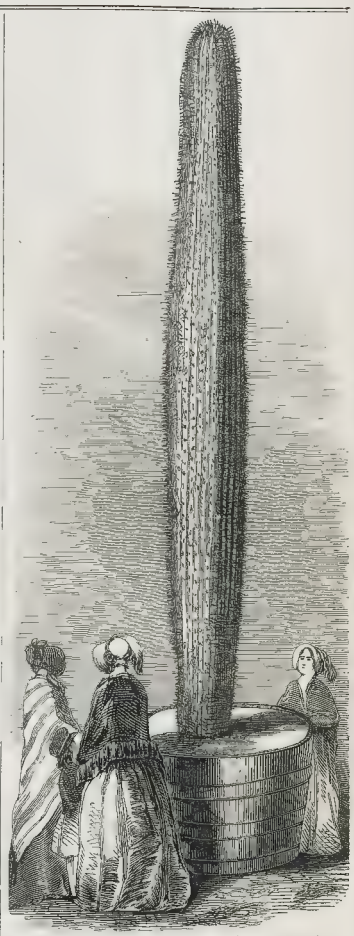
THERE are three specimens of this lofty Cactus in the Royal Gardens at Kew, 12½ feet, 16 feet, and 18½ feet high; two of the three, however, we regret to add, are now showing evident symptoms of decay. This species is called Senilis, vulgo, "Old Man's Head," from the quantity of long, wiry grey hair which crowns the summit. Unlike the human kind, the old plants are less conspicuous by their grey hair than the younger ones. For the means of procuring them we are indebted to John Taylor, Esq., and the gentlemen of the Real del Monte Company. Small plants of this species we know to be twenty and twenty-five years old: from their slowness of growth, as well as from the reports of the inhabitants of Mexico, there is reason to believe that these gigantic individuals are some hundreds, (probably a thousand,) years old.

THE PRINCESS SOPHIA.—Her Royal Highness the Princess Sophia continues to gradually improve in health. Their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Gloucester and the Duke of Cambridge daily visit their relative at Kensington.

AMBERGATE, NOTTINGHAM, BOSTON, AND EASTERN JUNCTION RAILWAY.—A meeting of shareholders in this line was held at the George and Vulture Tavern, Cornhill, on Tuesday, Mr. B. Badger in the chair, at which great complaints were made of the manner in which the affairs have been managed, especially in the Directors having refused two offers, one from the Eastern Counties of £1 premium per share, and the other from the Direct Northern of a guaranteed interest of 5½ per cent., with the option of exchanging the shares into those of the Great Northern within two years of the opening of that line, without consulting the Proprietors, the Directors being determined to carry out the line in all its integrity; whereas, it was contended that the objects of the line could now be as well carried out by making a portion only of the line. A series of resolutions was carried, to the effect that the Direction, as at present constituted, does not meet with the approbation of the shareholders; and that a Committee, acting on the part of the Proprietors, be requested to canvass the shareholders as far as possible, with a view to obtain a change in the management, at the half-yearly meeting, in August next. A subscription of 4d. per share being entered into towards defraying the expenses of the Committee, the meeting concluded with a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

A GENTLEMAN DROWNED WHILE BATHING NEAR WINDSOR.—On Monday afternoon, an inquest was held at Windsor on the body of Mr. Julius Jacobsen, of the firm of Jacobsen Brothers, merchants, Great St. Helen's, Bishopsgate street, who was unfortunately drowned the previous afternoon, while bathing in the Thames, a short distance below Windsor Bridge. It was stated in evidence that the place where the deceased went to bathe was one of the most dangerous parts of the river, except to those who were fully acquainted with the eddies and deep holes which were around the spot. Dr. Hermann Scherer, of 36, Half Moon-street, Piccadilly, who accompanied the deceased, described the manner of his friend's death, and his own ineffectual efforts to rescue him. The body was afterwards found in a deep hole, within a few yards whence it sank. The Jury returned a verdict of "Accidentally Drowned while Bathing."



NEW CACTUS, FROM REAL DEL MONTE.—(CEREUS SENILIS.)

EXTRAORDINARY MIRAGE.

(From a Correspondent.)

THE accompanying Sketch shows a most remarkable occasion of Mirage which took place here (Ramsgate) on the 6th inst. An occurrence of this sort, to such an extent as the present, has not been witnessed for many years. The appearance of the atmosphere over the sea during the whole day was very peculiar; and the refraction operating upon the ships anchored in the Downs, increased their hulls to three times their respective bulks. Vessels in the offing were seen as it were suspended in the air; others with an inverted reflection; and in one instance, to the west of the southernmost head of the Goodwin Sands, a ship was doubly reflected.

The coast of France presented a most extraordinary appearance. The white cliffs were elevated several degrees above the horizon, and inversely refracted, while the apparent nearness was most striking. After nightfall, the lighthouses on the coast at Calais, Grinez, Gravelines, and Dunkirk, were distinctly seen. That some peculiar atmospheric action was going on is proved by the thunderstorms in different parts, but which did not reach these districts.

EXTRAORDINARY MIRAGE AT RAMSGATE.

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON.—The Duke of Wellington intends to leave Apsley House immediately after the Parliamentary Session for Walmer Castle.

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—One day last week, a lady took a first-class ticket, at the Exeter Station of the South Devon Railway, for Starcross, and, on arriving at her journey's end, she found, to her great chagrin, that she had somewhere or other mislaid it. After searching the carriage in vain, she made up her mind to pay her fare again, and went towards the office for the purpose. Meeting the station-master by the way, she mentioned her loss to him, and found, to her great surprise, that he was already informed of it. "He knew it half an hour ago: she had left it on the counter at the Exeter Station." The lady was delighted; she saved her money, and was initiated into one of the mysteries of science, at the same time.

THE NEW CROWN PIECE.

By the courtesy of Mr. Wyon, R.A., Chief Engraver to her Majesty' Mint, we are enabled to engrave a specimen five-shilling piece of Queen Victoria, part of a new coinage, which presents a very considerable advance, in point of design, upon the five-shilling piece in circulation. The face of the Queen (in profile) is exquisitely rendered.

Her Majesty wears a crown, of mediæval design, of exquisite workmanship. This is a tasteful revival on Mr. Wyon's part; the last Sovereign crowned upon our coins being Charles the First. The Queen's hair is plaited and banded; her robe-work with roses, shamrocks, and thistles, and other ornaments. The legend is, "Victoria Dei gratia Britanniar—reg: f: d."

On the reverse, the arms of the three kingdoms are represented, not quarterly, but on separate escutcheons, ranged base to base, in the form of a cross. In the intervals is an elaborate fretwork, with rose, thistle, and shamrock. The legend is, "Tuetur unita Deus—anno dom. mdccclvii."

On the edge, we read "Decus et tutamen—anno regni undecimo;" a rose between each two words, a crown between the sentences.

THE NEW CROWN PIECE.

All these legends are in the old black letter; and the style of the ornaments is mediæval. The execution is throughout extremely beautiful.

DIABOLICAL CASE OF POISONING IN TEXAS.—A letter from Sabine, Texas, details one of the most unexampled acts of poisoning committed in Shelby county, Texas, that was ever heard of in a civilised community. It appears that there was a wedding at old Mr. Wilkinson's, of an orphan girl he raised, at which all the invited guests were poisoned, including the bride's maid and groom's man. Out of sixty persons poisoned, thirty will certainly die. Ten or twelve are already dead, including two sons of preacher Britton, two Castleberrys—the one a young man, and the other a young woman: one of the Slaughters and his wife. Strange to tell, none of the family were injured, nor yet the bride and groom; yet one of the bride's maids died in the house. Old Wilkinson immediately absconded. This portion of Texas is in arms, and woe betide the guilty. It is supposed that the negroes were hired to administer the poison in the coffee, or food, by a disappointed suitor, who was present at the wedding.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JULY 17, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 273.—Vol. XI.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JULY 24, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE DISSOLUTION.

COMPLAINTS are general of the want of a decided and specific policy as to measures in the addresses of most of the candidates who have as yet offered themselves to the constituencies. The deficiency extends to the manifestoes of the late and present Premiers, which have been put forth within the same week. One is a pamphlet, with a long, clear, and minute statement of facts and results; the other is a speech, touching lightly on facts, and dwelling with something of pride on the triumphs of principle. But, except that Lord John Russell bids the electors judge of the future by the past, the time to come is left without that guidance which the heads of parties were wont to afford to the constituencies, by specifying the measures they would offer or oppose. Generalities, good intentions, and a submission to circumstances, are all that can be gathered from the professions of the opposed, but scarcely rival, statesmen. On the side of the constituency there is almost as much uncertainty: the likeness between Cæsar and Pompey is puzzling them everywhere, and the only distinguishing trait is, that the Whigs are rather more like Tories than the majority of the Tories themselves. Measures present as little that is striking as men; no great question towers above the level of public opinion, overshadowing all others, supplying a point of defence and attack to both sides. But so indispensable to the electoral mind is something to be alarmed and indignant about, that a terror has been created where none exists; the endowment of the Roman Catholic Church is the phantom of the hustings, the more terrible, because, like Milton's Death, it has neither shape, form, nor being. The present, or rather the late Parliament, has added to the number of the Prelacy of the Establishment, and increased the influence of the Clergy over the people by the education plan; both the leading statesmen of the age disown and disavow any intention of taking such a step as endowing a second Establishment; the Catholics, as a body, do not ask for it, nor seek it; the Catholic Clergy would not accept it if offered; yet with all these circumstances against the possibility of such a measure, it is the one thing talked of at preparatory meetings, and promises to be the one question at the hustings. We never remember a general election turning on a subject disavowed and disowned by every public man of the time. It proves the want of real subjects of controversy when practical men, Aldermen and Bankers, who pride themselves on being "men of business," and thank heaven they have no pretensions to be statesmen, are reduced, like the old schoolmen, to oppose propositions quite remote from the business or probabilities of life, and to argue on premises as dubious and metaphysical as any of those which misemployed the ingenuity of the "subtle" or "seraphic" doctors of a remote age.

What a contrast does this state of things present to the last general election? There was then one great question before the country for solution; since the elections preceding the Reform Bill, the public mind had not been so deeply agitated. The Whigs had sank through years of office to almost general discsteem and mistrust; well meaning, but weak and unlucky, they had been afraid of their own principles, till inaction rendered them powerless. Then the bad harvests and the deficits of revenue, and those terrible Baring Budgets, over which it was the wont of Peel and Graham to be caustic and jocose—under all these disadvantages, the Liberals went to the hustings in 1841, like a culprit to the bar, with a bad case, and the facts against them, but with the power of calling witnesses to character, which, in the main, was good, for they had got "into trouble" rather by misfortune than dishonesty. Desperate as the expedient seemed at the time, we believe Lord John Russell's Free-Trade Budget of 1841 has been the salvation of the party. It was one of those bold and energetic steps which the Whig Leader more frequently takes when he is weak than in the hour of his strength, for he rises in an emergency, and becomes equal to a crisis. The wisdom of his policy came too late to preserve him in office; but the right key had been struck, and the Conservatives left the hustings of 1841 exulting over the prostrated Whig party, only to carry out in St. Stephen's the very policy they had scouted and ridiculed. The Tariff and the remodelled Sliding Scale of 1842, were the fruits of principles the Liberals had laid down in advance of the mass of opinion both in the Legislature and the constituencies. Then followed the further modification of the Tariff, with a respite of a year for the Corn-Laws. Then rose the first dark signs of scarcity and famine; and then the Corn-Laws fell like a house of cards, and fell by the very hands that made, and had for thirty years upheld them, with a determination that seemed to invest the question of imports and exports with a quasi sanctity, as a thing not to be touched.

MISS BURDETT COUTTS LAYING THE FOUNDATION-STONE OF ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH, WESTMINSTER.—(SEE PAGE 56.)

It is the justification of this policy that has just been issued from Tamworth. It is the voice of one at present almost politically isolated; explaining and proving a success, but not triumphing in it, for it was bought by a costly sacrifice. As an explanation, it is complete and perfect; if the revenue and the financial policy of a nation are to be considered as a whole, the proof of the soundness of the principles on which Sir Robert Peel deserted his party is full and satisfactory, and will defy Lord George Bentinck's attempt to take it to pieces, like a Chinese puzzle, to show a failure through separate items. But with the financial defence is joined a formal renunciation of his position as a party man; an abdication of the post of leader; almost a renunciation of political influence, which speaks of the pain and suffering with which the great success has been purchased. Time alone can heal the scars of a statesman's reputation; it seems to be the power of time to which Sir Robert Peel trusts. When the Landed Interest finds it is not ruined, and comes to the conviction that its prosperity rests upon something more firm than an Act of Parliament, the wants of millions who must be fed, the resentment of the Protectionists may abate under the influence of rents regularly paid—and the want of a leader.

Sir Robert Peel stands in a very different relation to the country and to his party. The success that gives him influence with the people is his greatest crime in the eyes of those he once commanded. It is to put his success beyond a doubt that he treats so fully in his manifesto the whole of his commercial policy. What may be called the moral part of the question rests between himself and his followers, and that offence can only receive condonation by time; perhaps, if the policy is fully justified by its results, the forgiveness can be dispensed with, and Sir Robert Peel may rule in defiance of his old party, rather than by their assistance. But, in any case, his elaborate pamphlet is an appeal to the future more than to the present; it seems to be issued from the retirement of Drayton with something of the blended confidence and misgiving of the poet:—

> Go, little book, from this my solitude
> I cast thee on the waters—go thy ways;
> And if—as I believe thy vein be good,
> The world will find thee after many days.

That the world will find the writer of the "little book" in power again, scarcely admits of a doubt; and the number of the "many days" to elapse before that event, will depend very much on the conduct of those who have succeeded him. The Protectionists cannot make any way as an independent party, yet; the reaction against Free Trade, which will come with a range of exceedingly low prices, has not yet commenced. The Whigs at present stand in the best position as a party before the country. Their principles have conquered, and "passed into the Statute-book," though not by their personal act; their constituents are not estranged or irritated by those startling conversions and violations of pledges which have still to be avenged on the followers of Peel. The Whigs have done what was expected of them, and they appear the only party of settled, earnest, and consistent policy, equally free from long persistence in error, or too sudden conversion to the truth. Even their recent advocacy of Church principles, and the support they have given to Ecclesiastical power, will secure them a large share of support from an immense mass of quiet and moderate opinion, though it may estrange some of the more extreme in the ranks of the party. It is this confidence in the truth of the convictions he has acted on all his life, that gives an air of boldness and pride to the Speech of Lord John Russell to the Electors of the City. He goes back to a period now historical, and calls to the minds of men a series of victories gained by principle and opinion, that speak for themselves. He does not need tables of imports and averages to excuse a great desertion by its great success. It is this consistency of opinion and policy that gives Lord John Russell the moral superiority over an opponent, more able, we believe, in expedient and action, but unfortunate in having been always allied to a party with which, when in power, the necessities of the day and his own clear judgment would not allow him to act. He never moved but he was brought out from his party and placed against it. The consequence has been a disruption of interests and a confusion of names and principles, which almost distract the observer of public events. Amid the shifting and changing scene, it is with a feeling of pleasure the eye rests on Lord John Russell, with his calm, quiet perseverance in one general course. It has lent him strength even in defeat: there is something Roman in the confidence which led him never to despair of his principles, his party, or himself; and while others are tortured by the necessity of reconciling their past acts with their present opinions, Lord John Russell seems elevated as on a pedestal, from which, with a simplicity and repose almost statuesque, he looks back on the past and forward into the future—the latter requiring no professions, and the first no apology or repentance.

ALFRED INCITING THE SAXONS TO PREVENT THE LANDING OF THE DANES BY ATTACKING THEM AT SEA.

(See the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of last week.)

> "Come on! Behold our battle-field
> 'Tis there upon the main,
> There let us make the sea-kings yield
> And crush the prowling Dane.
> The freshen breeze is in our sails,
> It cheers us to the fight,
> Out with our banner to the gales,
> And strike for England's right!
>
> "Come Britons! Saxons! brothers all!
> There let us meet the shock
> Together there let's stand or fall
> Nor fight behind a rock.
> Sack let us drive their ravens dire,
> Or make them feed the shark.
> Come man and boy and heavy sire!
> God shields the British bark!"
>
> Out flew the oak-hearted galley,
> Out flew the wicker skiff,
> Round from each hill and valley,
> Men bounded down t a cliff.
> And Alfred made the Ravens fly
> From Albion's shores afar,
> As Nelson tore the tricolor
> At Nile and Trafalgar.
>
> Ay! fled the red haired Pagan,
> There came another day,
> That saw Sir Copenha en
> Flame England's naval sway.
> And still her sway knows not decay,
> Though peaceful sleeps her g.ive,
> Brave Alfred's spirit guides its way
> O'er battle field and wave.—L.

O'CONNELL'S FUNERAL.—The Rev Dr Miley and Mr. O'Connell arrived at the Hotel Mirabeau, at Paris, on Monday night, on their way to Havre, with the remains of Mr. O'Connell. They travelled with celerity, having left Geneva only on the night of the 12th inst., and with the utmost privacy, declining all testimonies of respect to the memory of the deceased. Immediately on reaching Paris, the hearse in which the coffin is enclosed, was removed from the hotel, in order to the necessary preparations for its transfer to Havre. It was their intention to proceed at once to Southampton and thence to Liverpool, and there embark for Dublin, where they would arrive about the 3d of August

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

Our latest letters from Paris allude to rumours of a fresh modification of the cabinet. It was believed that Marshal Soult had again tendered his resignation, which had been received; and that a courier had been sent off to Marshal Bugeaud, bearing an offer of the portfolio of the War Department. The result is not known. It was also thought that M. Guizot was to become President of the Council. M. Cunin-Gridaine has, it is said, expressed his intention to withdraw, and he is to be replaced by M. Muret de Bord

M. Pellaprat has given himself up. The Moniteur announces that his trial was to commence on Friday (yesterday)

The most agreeable, if not the most important, news in the Paris papers, this week, relates to the harvests. The Journal des Débats publishes accounts from the different provinces of France—north, south, east, and west—and all agree, with a few exceptions, that the wheat harvest will be most abundant. Rye and barley promise a fair average crop, but oats alone are likely to be scarce and dear. The consequence is, that a general decline of prices has been manifested in all the corn markets of France. On Friday and Saturday (last week) the fall within the octus which supplies the capital varied from 3 to 10 francs per hectolitre. The reaping of wheat has commenced in the south, with every desirable appearance both in yield and quality. The reaping of this grain will not commence in the northern departments until the end of August, but the appearances are as splendid as elsewhere. The importations, meanwhile, at Marseilles, Nantes, and Havre are immense. The decline of price, general as it is, not being in proportion to the vast quantities of grain thus received on the eve of an abundant harvest as that now expected, is ascribed to the re-exportations to England, which are considerable from Havre and Nantes. Some of the papers state that for fifty years the vegetable and fruit markets of the capital had never witnessed supplies of equal quality and abundance with those of this season.

The Court of Peers, on Saturday last, pronounced its judgment in the case of MM. Teste, Cubières, and Parmentier. The three prisoners were convicted of corruption, and sentenced, M. Teste to restore the 98,000f. he had received from General Cubières, which sum to be confiscated for the benefit of the hospitals, to three years' imprisonment, to five years of the civil rights, and to a fine of 94,000f.; M. Cubières to deprivation of his civil rights and 10,000f fine; and M Parmentier to deprivation of civil rights and 10,000f fine, and all the costs.

M Teste, it is said, was so deeply affected on hearing the judgment of the Court read to him, that for a time there was great alarm that he would suffer from a congestion of the brain, but the assiduous attention paid to him by Dr. Rouget, the physician to the Luxembourg, saved him. The conclusion occasioned by the pistol ball had assumed such a character that it was necessary to apply leeches. It is feared that an abscess is forming. In the course of Saturday evening General Cubières paid the fine of 94,000f., also 1000f. for his portion of the costs, and 4000f. for the decune de guerre, whereupon he was immediately set at liberty.

General Cubières is also in a deplorable state, having fallen into a fit of dull blind-like despondency, from which he cannot be aroused. The conduct of Madame Cubières is more heroic and noble, endeavouring to set an example of courageous endurance, which, as yet, has failed to produce any effect.

M. Teste is to be transferred to the Concergerie, where an apartment is to be prepared for him precisely under the Court of Cassation, in which he sat as President during the last three years. His place in that court is, it is said, to be given to M. Vincens Saint-Laurent, a Pear of France and a relative of M. Guizot, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The Court of Assizes of the Seine has been occupied several days with the trial of ten men for belonging to a secret society called itself "Communi-te Malfeitaire," whose object was nothing less than to effect a political revolution, which should confer all property to be taken from the rich, and distributed equally among all. In the meantime, several of the band deemed themselves justified in committing robbery, inasmuch as they held that everything that was their everybody; possess belongs to everybody, and may therefore be taken by anybody. One of the means by which they proposed to effect their objects was to set fire to different parts of Paris, and, in the alarm which that would have created, commenced a general pillage of the city, or, as one of them called it, "another St. Bartholomew." They kept alive their political faith by meetings, at which speeches of the most outrageous kind were delivered. The charge of belonging to the secret society was fully made out, and the commission of seven robberies was clearly brought home to some of the prisoners. The Jury declared a guilty, but admitted several mitigating circumstances in favour of some The sentences passed by the Court were two years' imprisonment on a man named Gautier; three years' imprisonment on Crouzet, Chabannes, and Dufour, six years on Lefevre and Jouy; nine years on Dodge, Bonnet, and Javelot, and seven years on Codli ean, the most active and mischievous of the gang

A letter from Palermo, of July 8, states that the Prince de Joinville arrived in that port the evening before, and at once landed. He proceeded in one of the Royal carriages, which was in waiting, to the palace, and paid a short visit to the Royal Family. His Royal Highness afterwards returned on board. Ten French ships of the line and steam-vessels were at anchor in the harbour

The Vierzon Railway was opened to the public on Tue-day as far as Bourges. The passage from Paris to Bourges is to be done in about eight hours.

The Chamber of Deputies for several days been engaged with a discussion on the Paris and Lyons Railroad Bill. M. Fould moved an amendment, which left it optional with the company, two years after the completion of the line, to abandon the enterprise on condition that the Government should reimburse its expenses in Four per Cent. Stock. The Minister of Public Works opposed the amendment, and fully concurred in the system proposed by the commission. He said he was sure that the country would find it easy to borrow the sum necessary for the construction of the line, the whole cost of which, he thought, would not exceed 274,000,000f. M. Des Longrais, the Minister of the Interior, M. Garnier Pages, and M. Darblay, successively supported or combated the amendment, which was ultimately rejected.

SPAIN.

We have accounts from Madrid to the 16th inst. Lord Palmerston's speech upon the subject of Spanish Bonds had been received, and it is hardly necessary to say had excited great indignation. One of the journals coolly argues that the inability of Spain to pay last debts has arisen from Lord Palmerston's mania for interfering with her concerns

The Queen's resolution to raise a monument to Arguelles had elicited felicitations from all sides, except from the Carlists, who declared his gave his own sequence. The Queen was about to leave Madrid for Ildefonso. The Duke de Sotomayor has published a letter repelling the insinuation of the Correo, that his Cabinet had fomented differences between the King and Queen. Rumours of Montemolinist proceedings in different quarters still prevailed. The Correo states that a new principal had been signed at Lisbon. The English had given up the fort of Fez to the Spanish.

The Estafeta stopped the Santander mail within a few leagues of Burgos a few days ago, and after burning the public correspondence, and having a smart skirmish with some cavalry that came up to the rescue, carried off the horses that drew the vehicle. Several of the Government troops were killed and wounded in this affair

The Infante Don Francisco de Paula and his family have arrived at San Sebastian.

PORTUGAL.

Letters from Lisbon to the 12th inst., state that the whole of the prisoners had been a lowed to leave the fortress of St. Julian, and that Das Antas, Sa da Bandeira, and all the state prisoners had been restored to freedom on the 9th. On making their public appearance they were received with considerable enthusiasm, but no disturbance followed; and, up to the last accounts, the capital was quiet, though the streets were thronged by the disarmed forces of the late Junta, and by soldiers in the Royal service, neither party being favourably disposed towards the other. Saldanha was enrolling Carlist volunteers in several towns in the Beiras, Minho, &c., but it was doubtful if they could be depended upon; in Lisbon, at all events, they were generally discredited. It believed the Government has been in no hurry to realise some of the most important conditions guaranteed by the Allied Powers. No period had been fixed for the elections; and, to excuse this delay, the Diario was beginning to prove that remote districts of the country continued in a disturbed state

The insurgents who fled from Oporto previous to the surrender were stated to be still in arms. The monetary difficulties so long felt continued to press upon the treasury. The losses to the State during the nine months' insurrection are estimated at 12,220,000,000 reis, to which must be added 18,000 contos, the estimated loss of the banking establishments and holders of the funds of the public Internal debt, making a sum of 30,000 contos, or £7,000,000 sterling, without taking into account the losses of those embarked in trade, commerce, agriculture, &c. To redeem the credit of the country, now that quiet has been in some degree restored, the Finance Minister was arranging for the collection of taxes and the suppression of smuggling, especially on the coast of Algarve.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

We have received Cape of Good Hope papers to the 29th of May. The intelligence they give from the frontier is less satisfactory, a most daring and successful attack having been made by the Kaffirs on some wagons returning from Fort Peddie, where they had been discharged from Government service at Waterloo Bay. The natives, during the skirmish, carried off twenty-six bullocks. The accounts from the escort was with these waggons. Local affairs at Cape Town were moving forward quietly. The Lieutenant-Governor had published an order at Graham's Town, encouraging the employment of Kaffirs as servants, who are "to be treated in respect as free men, subject only to the terms of a voluntary and mutual agreement binding on them and their masters, and sanctioned by authority."

The Graham's Town Journal states that some specimens of fossil coal had been found a few miles from the mouth of the Kowie River, and that there were indications which led to the conviction that there will be found an extensive deposit. Should this prove true, it will be an important discovery for the colony.

THE OVERLAND CALCUTTA MAIL.

The Overland Calcutta Mail arrived, on Tuesday, with news from thence to the 2nd of June. From China the accounts are to the 23rd May, and are of great interest, as they allude to the probability of further hostilities with the Chinese. It appears that at the date in question all business remained suspended at Canton, and fresh disturbances were anticipated. The mob had menaced the Governor, Keying, for his recent concessions to foreigners, and threatened to burn his palace if he attempted to give effect to the terms of the late treaty; especially in so far as a concession to the English of adequate land for dwellings, warehouses, &c., on the Honan side of the river, a site for the erection of a church in the vicinity of the present factories, and space for the formation of a cemetery at Whampoa. Mr. Pope, who had been appointed to inspect the grounds for these purposes, had been obliged to abandon the attempt. Under these circumstances, a fresh expedition against Canton was expected. The Phoebe was stationed opposite the British factory, and the Scout was ordered to approach as near as possible to the city.

The China Mail of May 20, says—

"Rumours of an attempt on the part of the Chinese to surprise Hong Kong have prevailed during the past week, and slight circumstances have been looked upon with suspicion which at another time would have been passed unheeded. The military and police have been on the alert; but, though this is highly commendable at all times, we greatly doubt that any peculiar necessity exists for it at present, nor suspect that the whole originates in a report of some vagrant officials at Canton, who have been besieging Keyh g to allow them to take vengeance on the outlying barbarians.

"Upwards of a month ago our Chinese correspondent at Canton informed us that on the 22nd day of the second moon, Yeang, the Prefect of Sin hing-fu, a district in Kwang tung, had come to Canton with 3000 soldiers, and offered to exterminate the English, but Keying refused, and three several applications on the same subject were equally unsuccessful. Wel, the Salt Commissioner, was next surround i—affix his seal to a declaration calling upon the people to rise en masse and slaughter the barbarians. This Wel positively refused, and admonished the people of the illegality and danger of any such proceedings as they contemplated.

"The blood-thirsty Yeang does not seem to have been at all satisfied with these rebuffs, for our correspondent, writing on the 24th day of 3rd Moon (May 8), informs us that the Prefect had been tampering with Keying with fresh proposals."

The following is the Emperor's reply to Keying's dispatches, announcing the recent occurrences at Canton:

"We have received the official notification presented to us by Keying, informing us that on the 19th day of the second moon the English merchants, with a number of soldiers, suddenly entered the provincial river. According to the investigations of the Viceroy, the said merchants alleged that their object was to revenge the insults they had received from the people of the flowery land; they also desire to go to Fuhshan to converse and argue with the people, besides making a determined request to enter a portion of the provincial city. Since the establishment of peace the said foreigners have been tolerably quiet, until now that they have suddenly entered the country with soldiers, and it was certainly impossible to foresee such an occurrence and arrange accordingly. We imagine, however, that they have some other reason for being so anxious to enter the city, though in itself this is a matter of small importance. The said Viceroy and his colleagues must not be disconcerted at what has happened, nor must they exhibit the least remissness, but command both the civil and military officers effectually to suppress the disturbance, and set permanently at rest any cause of alarm to the inhabitants

"As the guns of every fort were spiked, Keying must, therefore, demand the most severe punishments for those officers who were charged with the defence of the passes, but he must deliver up all the keys of the forts to the Board of Punishment. After the matter has been decided, again present a statement.

"This must travel 500 le (about 160 miles) per day. Command it to be known. Respect this."

There is nothing of consequence from India.

Of the few items of authentic news from Lahore, worthy of notice, mentions the decease of Colonel Allen, C.B., Chief Justice of Bombay, died on the 22nd May, aged 67 years, having held his appointment only about six months. He was buried in the Cathedral.

ASSIZE INTELLIGENCE.

A WOMAN TRIED FOR HANGING THREE OF HER CHILDREN.

At the Assizes at Carmarthen, last week, Mary Hughes, a pleasing-looking middle-aged woman (although by her manner it was evident her mind was deranged), was tried before Mr. Justice Creswell, for the wilful murder of her three children, Sarah, Mary, and Evan Hughes, at Rhos, under circumstances. The husband of the wretched woman, who is a mason, rented a cottage at the foot of the Llanybyther Mountain, and on the morning of the 26th of April, when he left for work, the children were in good health, and the mother seemingly in her usual spirits. In the course of the day her sister had occasion to visit the house, but not finding the unfortunate woman in the building, she proceeded to examine the premises, when she entering a loft she was horror-struck on seeing the three lifeless children suspended by handkerchiefs from a large beam which ran across the roof.

On being called on to plead to the indictment, she stared steadfastly at the learned Judge, and seemed to have no knowledge of what was passing around. The accused was made to her in Welsh, still she heeded not the challenge, and remained mute.

The Judge examined the medical officer of the prison as to the capability of her mind to plead, and he pronounced her to be insane.

The learned Judge then explained to the Jury, as to the incapacity of prisoners to plead when their minds were affected, and directed them to return a verdict of not guilty in her case.

This was accordingly done, and the unhappy woman will, therefore, be detained during her Majesty's pleasure.

THE TRIPLE MURDERS AT MIRFIELD, YORKSHIRE.

Two days have been occupied at York with the trial of Patrick Reid, for the three diabolical murders of Mr. James Wraith, his wife Ann Wraith, and their female servant, Caroline Ellis

The prisoner, M'Cabe, who was to have been indicted with Reid, was admitted evidence against him.

The particulars of these murders were recently given in our paper.

The case for the prosecution having closed, Mr. Sergeant Wilkins addressed the Jury for a considerable time, in a speech of great duration, contending that the evidence was insufficient to show that Reid was the guilty party; but that, if it proved anything, it was that M'Cabe had himself committed the murder. No witnesses were called in defence.

The Jury, after being absent for two hours and forty minutes, returned a verdict of "Not Guilty."

A WOMAN CONVICTED OF POISONING.

At the assizes at Lincoln, on Tuesday, Mary Anne Miller, an interesting young married woman, aged 27, was tried before Mr Baron Rolfe, for the murder of her mother-in-law, Mary Miller.—The prisoner and her husband lived at a village called Barnetby-le-wold. The deceased at her husband resided in the same village. The old people had been ordered to take some sago, having been unwell, and, though the prisoner was not present when it was mixed it, she had stated she had given the sago to them, being with them almost alone during their illness. The mother-in-law died; the father survived, but has ever since been paralysed. Suspicion having been excited by subsequent events, the body was exhumed, and the presence of arsenic detected. The prisoner was proved to have purchased arsenic shortly before, but the facts not being sufficiently brought home, she was acquitted.

The prisoner was then arraigned for the murder of her sister-in-law, Hannah Dickels. It seems, from the testimony of one Elizabeth Watson, that between eight and nine o'clock on the morning of the deceased's death she asked her if there was anybody in the house, because if there was not she would tell her something, but she was not to tell anybody. She went on to say the prisoner had come to her house that morning, and said, "Why, you have had no fire; I'll lay you have had nothing warm this morning, and if you will go with me I will fry you a pancake" that she went and had the pancake, but believed the prisoner had put something in the flour. She was ill—that she would leave the pancake, but a lodger was there, and she thought it would look ill-mannered. The prisoner was proved to have bought some arsenic of a grocer in the village, stating that she wanted it to kill some rats.

Mary Winter proved the deceased called at Ler house in the village about ten o'clock, saying she had eaten some pancake given her by the prisoner, and believed she was poisoned and would die. She stated she had not taken any poison herself, and had never had any in the house; that she then left and went to her own house, the witness following her, where she saw her on her knees violently sick and saying the pancake had poisoned her. She wished her husband to be sent for. She continued ill, and died about six the same evening. The witness told the prisoner what Dickells had said, who came and said, "Oh, Hannah, do you think the pancake has caused you to be ill?" Deceased was too ill to make any reply.

The prisoner had been desired to keep what deceased had thrown up, but, when asked about it, she said she had got it thrown away. The prisoner was known to have purchased arsenic in the village, as in the former case, and death was proved to have resulted from arsenic. The Jury found her guilty, and sentence of death was pronounced. There was a third indictment against the prisoner, if the second had failed. The prisoner betrayed no feeling throughout the trials.

DEATH OF A WIFE FROM BRUTAL TREATMENT.

At the Assizes at Worcester, a day or two ago, Hercules Lovell Birnett was indicted for the murder of his wife, at Dudley, on the 9th of June last.

It appeared that the prisoner, who was a nail-maker, had lived for some time on very bad terms with his wife, constantly abusing and ill-treating her, and living with a number of women. On the day in question he was more than usually disposed to ill-treat her. He had abused her repeatedly in the course of the day, and struck her, and she was so much in dread of him that she ran out of the lodgings where she lived, in Queen-street, Dudley, and would not come back to tea till he promised her solemnly that he would not ask quarrel with her. She then went into the house. They remained quiet for half an hour or so. He was then heard to beat her, and the first person who came in, and who had been attracted by her cries, found her lying in a coal-hole under the stairs, with the prisoner standing over her, and trying to pour the contents of a bucket of boiling water on her, she crying out that she was scalded, and imploring him not to injure her more, and trying to turn the spout of the kettle from her. He, however, succeeded in scalding her to such an extent that she died in a few days.

The surgeon who attended her said that she was in very bad health before, but that the scalds were so severe that they would have killed her had she been in the soundest health.

Mr. Cooke having addressed the Jury for the prisoner,

Mr. Justice Coleridge summed up, and the Jury having returned a verdict of manslaughter, the prisoner was sentenced to be transported for twenty years.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS—MONDAY.

The House sat for about two hours, but was chiefly occupied with private bills and routine business.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—MONDAY.

THE MANCHESTER BISHOPRIC BILL.

On the question for resuming the Committee on the Bishopric of Manchester Bill,

Mr B. ESCOTT moved, as an amendment, that the House should pass to the consideration of the other orders of the day.

The amendment excited a long discussion, but it was eventually withdrawn, and the House went into Committee

Mr. M. PHILLIPS then moved as an amendment to the preamble that all the words contained therein respecting the appointment of a Bishop for Manchester should be omitted

Another long debate took place, and, on a division, the amendment of Mr. Phillips was declared to be lost by 93 to 14.

Mr V. SMITH then proceeded to move as an amendment, that the words "so soon as conveniently might be, three other additional Bishoprics," be omitted from the preamble.

After some observations from Lord CLIVE,

Lord J RUSSELL said that the words were only introduced for the purpose of suprising Parliament of the intentions of the Government ultimately, and not for the purpose of founding any immediate enactment upon them. If it were supposed that the words would in any way bind any future Parliament he would not object to their omission.

The amendment was therefore agreed to, and the words were accordingly omitted. The remainder of the preamble was ultimately agreed to.

On the first clause being proposed, Mr. HUME divided the Committee against it, but it was carried by a majority of 128 to 25.

Lord J. RUSSELL then announced his intention of postponing to another session those clauses of the Bill which related to the See of St. Asaph and Bangor.

THE POOR LAW ADMINISTRATION BILL.

The Lords' amendments to the Poor Law Administration Bill were then taken into consideration.

Lord J. RUSSELL recommended the House to disagree with the amendment striking out the clause which permitted old married couples to be lodged together in the workhouse, and to agree to that which prevented the admission of the public to the board of guardians.

The House agreed unanimously to the first, but divided upon the second recommendation, when the numbers appeared—

For the amendment	.. ..	19
Against		89
Majority for the clause		—70

The House sat till two o'clock in the morning.

HOUSE OF LORDS—TUESDAY.

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE BUSINESS OF THE SESSION.

Lord BROUGHAM took a review of the business of the session, à la Lyndhurst, condemning the omissions and commissions of the Ministers. The noble and learned Lord, however, in commencing his diatribe against the Government, said, he had no vacuc desire of casting blame on the Government—much of which he complained being incident. almost necessary, to the way in which the business of the country was conducted His sole object was to gather wisdom from the past, and to prevent, if possible, the calamity of another such se sion ever again occurring. He then spoke of the measures actually carried, which were, fortunately, the smallest portion of his subject—fortunately, because worse measures were never passed in any preceding Parliament. Those bad measures were the Poor-Law Administration Act, the Act for establishing the whole peop e of Ireland, and the Factories Act. The noble and learned Lord then descended, as he said, to the regions below; and, having just pointed out the measures that had been partly announced by several members of the Government, but never received a tangible shape—"the thousand freaks that died in thinking"—noticed, seriatim, the various measures abandoned by the Government. Having enumerated them, he said, he "had now come to the last, and he found himself surrounded by a whole troop of the ghosts of bills. All these shades of bills gave a painful recollection of what they might have been had they lived. It was most unfortunate that this wholesale impotency should exist, and he thought that a stronger Government which one did not like very well would be better than such a weak one. The constitution was not to be charged with this defect and weakness. It was related by Bishop Burnet, that William the Third said to him that he doubted whether a Monarchy or a Republic was the best form of Government; that there were excellent arguments on both sides, and he could not make up his mind on the subject; but of one thing he was sure, that anything was better than a Monarchy without power. So he (Lord Brougham) said of a Ministry whose impotency incapacitated them from performing the duties of a Government. A weak Government which could not carry a single measure of itself could not possess that power of giving protection to the people which was the essence of their allegiance. He sincerely hoped that he might never live to see such another Session, or to see bills meet with such a fate as the Railways Bill, the Incumbrances (Ireland) Bill, and the Bank of Ireland Bill. He hoped he might never see bills so treated, and especially one of such importance as that which had been recommended by the Queen in her Speech from the Throne, and which her Majesty's representative at Paris had hurried over to this country to support. He hoped the next election would see the Government strengthened by the voice of the people, enhanced by its merits in the affections of the people, and backed by such majorities in both houses that there should be no doubt of their power—that they may be a Government so supported as to make clear their responsibilities as a Government, responsibilities which did not now rest upon them, but were divided between them and the people." Lord Brougham concluded his speech by moving an address to the Queen expressive of the regret felt by the House that the subjects recommended to its attention by her Majesty had not been brought forward with a view to produce legislative measures.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE defended the Administration, of which he formed a part, from the charges of incompetency and feebleness, and noticed the precedents of many other sessions whose results had been as comp.etely blank as those of the one just closing. After alluding to the defunct bills of the session, and particularly to the one for regulating the health of towns, which he considered once more to his precedents, and adduced the celebrated examples of the Test and Corporation Relief Acts, as showing how important bills might be protracted and delayed, without proving the present weakness of a Ministry or the final failure of the measure. The noble Marquis pressed upon Lord Brougham's attention the fact that although bills might not be carried, the proposal of important measures had a beneficial effect. He said—" No one knew better than his noble and learned friend, for no one had failed oftener in carrying bills, that even when measures were not carried, if they were based on the solid interests of the country, they were fruitfu. even when they were withdrawn, that they left seeds behind them which fructified and caused the adoption of opinions favourable to them; and this was often the means of bills being brought forward in a more perfect state, and made them better fitted for operation, by the public being prepared to receive them."

Lord BROUGHAM did not press his motion to a division, and it was negatived.

The House adjourned at quarter-past eight.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

SIR ROBERT PEEL'S ADDRESS TO THE ELECTORS OF TAMWORTH.—Lord G. BENTINCK referred to the recent address of Sir R. Peel to the electors of Tamworth; and, after moving for some returns connected with the revenue, went into various calculations to prove that the right hon. Baronet was quite mistaken in taking credit to himself for having improved the revenue. Lord George asserted that Sir R. Peel had actually sacrificed upwards of four millions sterling of revenue, that is, regarding the articles of revenue with which the right hon. baronet had tampered; while there was found to be a large and positive increase of revenue on the articles with which Sir R. Peel had not meddled. Fortunately, he said, the right hon. Baronet had only dealt with two articles of the revenue, for had he dealt with the whole upon the same principle, there would have been, in the same ratio, a loss to the revenue of twenty millions per annum. The noble Lord recited the speech of the right hon. Baronet in Sir R. Peel's address, and attributed the elasticity of the revenue to the three good harvests that followed the departure of the Whigs from office in 1841, and to the hundred millions sterling that had been spent during the years in home railway enterprise. The noble Lord gave his opinion that they would find in the increased consumption of tea, tobacco, and sugar, which was the consequence of this, the true cause of the elasticity of the revenue, and not to the often boasted effects of the alterations in the financial and commercial policy of the country made by the right hon. Baronet, the member for Tamworth. (Hear, hear.) These boasts often reminded him of the two flies described by the poet Prior, which ascribed to their own exertions the dust raised by the wheels of the chariot—

> "Say, flies of insects, mighty Sol,
> A fly on the box cries out,
> What blue-bottle alive
> Did ever with such fury drive?"
> "Tell, Beelzebub, great chief, tell,
> Says t'other, perch'd upon the wheel,
> Did ever any mortal fly
> Raise such a cloud of dust as I?"
> By judgment tardy the wise debate—
> My valour saw'd the sinking State

(Much laughter.)

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER thought that this manifesto might fairly go as an answer to Sir R. Peel's, though it might have been better if addressed to the electors of King's Lynn. He had no objection to the returns moved for They were accordingly ordered.

THE BISHOPRIC OF MANCHESTER BILL.—The report on this bill was received, but not without some opposition.

THE BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY COURT BILL.—On the third reading of the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Court Bill, Mr. STUART opposed the bill, contending that its tendency was most mischievous, and distracting strongly the adoption of the Court of Review. He moved, as an amendment, that the bill be read a third time that day three months. –Sir J. GRAHAM moved the insertion of a clause, enacting that no Judge of any County Court shall, during his continuance in such office, be capable of being elected, or of sitting as a member of the House of Commons. –The ATTORNEY-GENERAL assented, and the clause was added to the bill.—The amendment of Mr. STUART was negatived; the bill was read a third time and passed; and shortly before midnight the House adjourned till twelve o'clock on Wednesday.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—WEDNESDAY.

The Poor Removal Act Amendment Bill, with amendments, was read a third time.

A message from the Commons brought up the Bishopric of Manchester Bill, with amendments

The Marquis of Drogheda took the oaths and his seat as Baron Moore of the United Kingdom

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

THE BISHOPRIC OF MANCHESTER BILL.

Mr. HUME renewed his opposition to the bill; and, on the order of the day, moved an amendment to defer the third reading for six months.

In this course he was supported by Sir J. GRAHAM, who spoke against the bill. He said he should not have opposed the appointment of the bishop with a seat in the House of Lords; but he was decidedly opposed to the erection of Bishops without that privi ege.

After further discussion, the third reading was carried by 93 to 14.

Several returns were ordered; and, on the motion for one having reference to Dr Reid and the ventilation of the Houses of Parliament, a compliment was passed upon Dr Reid by Lord MORPETH and other members, for the efficient manner in which he ventilated the House of Commons; and his Lordship expressed a hope that, in the new Houses of Parliament, the Doctor's system of ventilation might be fairly tested.

The House, which met at twelve, adjourned at half-past four.

HOUSE OF LORDS—THURSDAY

THE ROYAL ASSENT.—The Royal Assent was given by Commission to 146 public and private bills

EDUCATION.

Lord STANLEY asked a question relative to the supplemental minutes of the Committee of Council on Education, in which certain schools were mentioned as being entitled to Government assistance under circumstances that he (Lord Stanley) could not altogether understand.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE said there was a great number of schools in this country and Scotland which were so impressed with the duty of avoiding the appearance of deriving any support to their religion from the State, that they had declared in the strongest terms that if any inquiry should be made as to the religious instruction given in their schools, they should consider themselves as accepting contributions towards religious instruction. The Committee of the Privy Council had admitted the exception only in those schools in which they were satisfied the objection was made entirely on religious grounds.

THE POOR-LAW ADMINISTRATION BILL.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE moved that the Commons' amendment to the Poor-Law Administration Bill be considered. He urged the House to agree to the clause which enacts that married persons above the age of sixty shall not be separated in workhouses.

Earl STRADBROKE, Earl RADNOR, and Lord REDESDALE opposed the concession, and censured the Government for having given way on a point which, at election purposes and to catch popular favour. An amendment omitting the clause was moved.

Earl GREY said the bill was too important to be risked for a clause so unimportant in practical effect.

On a division, the clause was retained by a majority of 29 to 11.

The Commons' amendments to the Bishopric of Manchester Bill were agreed to, and their Lordships adjourned at eight o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

PORTUGAL.—Sir DE LACY EVANS expressed his regret that the liberty of the press had not been re-established in Portugal, and that the Government in that country had not been changed in conformity with the terms guaranteed by the British Government.—Lord PALMERSTON said that he was happy to be able to state that the whole of the prisoners had been liberated, and he hoped the liberty of the press would be shortly re-established. With respect to the continuan e of the Ministry in power, he could not say anything positive; but he was quite sure that there was an earnest disposition on the part of the Queen of Portugal to fulfil the engagements which had been entered into at their recommendation, and that there would be no slackness on the part of the British Government to obtain full and complete fulfilment of those engagements.

No business of importance was transacted, and the House adjourned at an early hour.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

THE LATE JAMES WOOD, OF GLOUCESTER.

The HOUSE OF LORDS, on Wednesday, gave judgment in an appeal from a decree of Vice Chancellor Wigram, in the case of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses of Gloucester, v. Osborne and Others. A bill has been filed by the appellants to enforce the payment of two legacies of £140,000 and of £66,000, under an alleged codicil to the will of the late James Wood This bill, by the decree appealed against, was dismissed. Mr. Wood died on the 20th of April, 1836, possessed of a very large property in chattels real and personal, and being also possessed of real estates of very considerable value. After his death, several testamentary papers were presented for probate, and two of them were admitted to that character. These bore date the 2nd and 3rd of December, 1834. By these papers the testator devised all his estates, real and personal, to the respondents Osborne and Surman, and to the late Sir Matthew Wood, Bart., and John Chadborn, also since deceased, and their heirs, in equal proportions, subject to certain debts and legacies; and he further appointed the said Sir M. Wood and Mr Chadborn to be his executors

These papers were each duly attested by three witnesses. Upon the death of the testator proceedings were instituted in the Ecclesiastical Court, by parties who claimed to be his next of kin, disputing the validity of the will. Proof was propounded for probate by the executors, and shortly after the commencement of such proceeding the present appellants, together with other parties, intervened in the cause, and propounded for probate a paper writing, dated July, 1835, as a codicil of the testator, which paper referred to another. According to this codicil, various legacies were to be made. The Corporation of Gloucester received £140,000 under it.

No evidence was given as to how or where this codicil was found, and thereupon its validity was disputed by those parties who were already before the Ecclesiastical Court. Judgment was given in that Court against the validity of the first testamentary paper and the codicil, whereupon the second testamentary paper became altogether important, inasmuch as it designated the persons the executors. The Privy Council, however, reversed that judgment, and held that the whole of the three testamentary papers were good and valid documents. A bill has been filed in the Court of Exchequer by the appellants against Sir Matthew Wood, Bart., and others, with a view of carrying the codicil in question into effect.

Their Lordships now affirmed the decree of the Court below, with costs.

MR. ALDERMAN GIBBS AND HIS ACCOUNTS.—In the Court of CHANCERY, on Wednesday, the Lord Chancellor gave judgment on an appeal, the Attorney-General v. Gibbs. It will be in the recollection of our readers that the object of the suit was to take the accounts of Alderman Gibbs as one of the trustees of a charity founded by Sarah, Duchess of Malborough, and to have new trustees appointed in his stead. The cause was heard before Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, who directed a reference to the Master to take the accounts of the charity. The report of the Master was totally opposed to the case made out by the bill, for, instead of balance being due from Alderman Gibbs, the Master found that a large balance was due to the Alderman. It was admitted that there was no case for removing the defendant from the office of trustee, but the Vice-Chancellor considered that in the costs of the information, on the ground that the accounts had been an necessarily withheld. Against this decree the defendant appealed. After a long argument, the Lord Chancellor gave his opinion that the decree was right—and he therefore confirmed it, with costs.

DEATH OF THE REV. DR. SHEPHERD.—This gentleman, who was for many years one of the leaders of the Reform party, expired on Wednesday morning, at his residence, near Liverpool. He enjoyed the friendship of Lord Brougham, Lord Campbell, Sir Thomas Wilde, and most of the other eminent men who grace the Bench.

DEATH OF HUGH W. BOULTON, ESQ., OF THE 1ST LIFE GUARDS. This young gent eman died at an early hour on Sunday morning The deceased caught a violent cold early in the month of June, while quartered at Windsor with his regiment, which, terminating in inflammation of the lungs, caused his death. The deceased was second son of the late Mathew Boulton, Esq., of Tew Park, Oxfordshire, and Soho, Staffordshire.

VIOLENT STORM AT SAFFRON WALDEN.—Yesterday week there was a terrific tempest at Saffron Walden. It began about five in the morning for an hour or two, then was only heard in the distance until about eight o'clock, when it gathered, and for about an hour was terrific. At a quarter to ten, the greatest clap was heard. It rained in torrents. At the same time, a fire-ball or fluid struck the roof of a house in Castle-Street, and the slates were driven off; something passed through the roof and floor, and scorched the window going out, and would have set fire to the roof had it not been immediately attended to. A large barn on the Deaf Farm, Debden, occupied by Mr. Smith, was at the same time struck and burnt entirely to the ground; the communication between the house and other buildings being cut off by dividing the hazlin walls, or .hs whole appeared likely to come down. A stack was struck in the parish of Widdon with the same fluid

MEETING OF THE BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION AT WARWICK.

WARWICK CASTLE, FROM THE AVON.

THE fourth Annual Congress of this Association commenced on Monday last; and from the judicious selection of the ancient town of Warwick, for a "local habitation," this meeting has proved, perhaps, more attractive than either of its predecessors. We perfectly agree with one of the reports of the proceedings, that, "It would be difficult, perhaps impossible, to select a locale for a congress of antiquarians, which, from its central position, could command so many objects of historical interest as the town of Warwick. Placed in the midst of one of the most luxuriant and picturesque counties in England, rich in ecclesiastical antiquities, in the immediate vicinity of the only perfect remaining feudal castle in the country, and but a short distance removed from the sub-sacred Stratford upon-Avon—Warwick offers an abundance of facility for antiquarian investigation, such as could with difficulty be found in any other locality."

Amongst the arrivals to Monday were the following:—Lord Brooke, M.P., Sir Charles Douglas, M.P., Sir Wm. Betham, Ulster King at Arms; Admiral Sir Henry Dillon, K.C.H., Sir James Annersley, Mr. Harrison Ainsworth, Professor Huber, of Berlin; Mr. Hazzard, Mr. Edmund Pool, Mr. Roper, Mr. Fisher, Mr. Halliwell, Dr. O'Callaghan, Mr. Twamley, Dr Beattie, Mr. Sault, Mr. Jackson, Mr. Wansey, Rev. Mr. Harris, Mr. Arden, Mr. Isaacs, Dr. Jeafferson, and Mr. Capel Adey.

The gentry of the neighbourhood, it may here be mentioned, have taken great interest in the proceedings. On Saturday, the very active Secretaries of the Association, Messrs. Crofton Croker, C. Roach Smith, and T. Wright, arrived from London, and perfected the excellent arrangements for the reception of the Members.

MONDAY.

The opening meeting of the Association was held in the Court House, at three o'clock in the afternoon, when the chair was taken by Lord Brooke, who made a short address, expressing his regret that the unexpected illness of the President, Lord Albert Conyngham, had rendered it necessary for him to take the chair.

Mr Pettigrew then read a long introductory report on the labours of the Association during the past year. The most important statement in this Report (which, by the way, reflects somewhat ungenerously on kindred societies), is that passage which shows how much had been done by the Association and its agents during the year, to hinder desecration and destruction of our national monuments of antiquity, as well as to bring to light those which had lain concealed from observation. Mr. Pettigrew concluded with a notice, biographical and panegyrical, of the distinguished members of the Association, who had been carried from its ranks by death during the year—the rather long list including the names of Henry Hatcher (the editor and translator of "Richard of Cirencester"), A. J. Kempe, John Sydenham (the antiquary of Dorset), Henry Stothard, the Rev. A. B. Hutchins, Edward Bridgett, T. F. Savory, the Hon. Ridley Colborne, and Mrs. Stuart Hall, who, it will be remembered, threw open her house with so much liberality to the members of the Association, during their visit to Winchester, in 1845.

Sir W. Betham made some observations relative to a collection of drawings of early Irish antiquities which he had brought with him from Dublin.

The meeting then adjourned; and at six o'clock about eighty persons (ladies and gentlemen) sat down to a plentiful dinner in the Mayor's banqueting-room, at the Court-house. Lord Brooke presided, supported by Sir Charles Douglas, M.P., Mrs. Collins (the lady of the other member for Warwick, who was unavoidably absent), Admiral Sir Henry Dillon and lady, Sir William Betham, Mr. H. Ainsworth, Mr. C. Croker, Professor Huber, of Berlin, and the principal persons of the neighbourhood and of the Archæological Association. During the evening every train brought fresh arrivals, and at the meeting at half-past eight o'clock, held, as before, in the County Court, the room was crowded. Lord Brooke again took the chair.

The proceedings opened with a paper, of no great novelty, by the Rev. Beale Poer, on the early English chronicles as illustrative of the chronicle of the Warwick antiquary of the fifteenth century—John Rouse. This was followed by a long and interesting paper, by Mr. Wright, on the romance of "Guy of Warwick," in which Mr. Wright investigated the history of the origin of romance, showed how the original mythic histories of nations was gradually transformed in each tribe into a fabulous history of individuals (thus constituting what we call the heroic [illegible] of nations), and [illegible] many of these were at last taken for [illegible] [illegible] was also told of [illegible] He also read how [illegible] as in [illegible] Europe. He [illegible] [illegible] as in [illegible] [illegible] are shown [illegible] the new [illegible] Wright [illegible] an [illegible] in [illegible] degree [illegible]

[illegible] paper Mr C. H. [illegible]ge, of Atherstone-hall, [illegible] Warwick, from a MS in Magdalen [illegible] of that College. Mr. [illegible] drawings [illegible] imaginary figures of the early Earls of Warwick, painted on glass and now in the windows of his own seat, Atherstone-hall. The meeting [illegible] with this paper.

TUESDAY.

This morning the Archæologists met again in the County Court, and Sir Wil-

GUY'S CLIFF.

BEAUCHAMP CHAPEL, AND TOMB OF THE EARL OF WARWICK.

MEETING OF THE BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION AT WARWICK.

lism Betham took the chair. The first paper read was by Sir S. R. Meyrick, on the effigy of Richard de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, in the Beauchamp Chapel, in St. Mary's Church, Warwick. This was followed by a very excellent paper, by Mr. W. Harry Rogers, on Limoges enamels, especially illustrative of the beautiful collection of these objects in Warwick Castle. Mr. Rogers traced the history of enamels from the period of Egyptian history to the 17th century, and explained the various changes and vicissitudes through which it had passed. This paper was followed by another good contribution on the same subject, by Mr. George Isaacs. At its conclusion, the meeting broke up, to proceed to visit the Castle, the bells of the two churches ringing a merry peal as they went.

STATUE OF GUY.

GUY'S TOWER.

WARWICK CASTLE—THE ENTRANCE GATE.

VISIT TO WARWICK CASTLE.

Lord Brooke received the visitors in Warwick Castle, and they were led round every part of this noble edifice by Mr. J. G. Jackson, of Leamington, who explained to them its various architectural peculiarities. The appearance of the Castle, with the numerous groups of visitors scattered over its lawns, among its battlements, and through the majestic masses of trees and foliage with which it was surrounded, was extremely picturesque. Every part of the structure was, on this occasion, thrown open, and such of the inhabitants of Warwick as had taken tickets for the Congress were indulged with access to vaults and recesses, and with magnificent views from lofty turrets, which were totally new to them. After the majority of the visitors had left the grounds, Lord Brooke, who acted throughout with the greatest hospitality and affability, retained a select party of between twenty and thirty to luncheon.

We have engraved three views of the magnificent Castle, one of the finest specimens in the kingdom of the ancient residences of our feudal nobles.

The larger Illustration shows the Castle as seen overhanging the river Avon. It is evidently the work of different ages, the most ancient part being, according to "Domesday Book," of the time of Edward the Confessor, when "it was a special stronghold for the midland part of the kingdom." A portion of the edifice is of the time of William the Norman, who committed the Castle to the custody of one of his followers, Henry de Newburgh, whom he created Earl of Warwick, the first line of that title of the Norman line.

The second Illustration shows the stately building at the north-east angle, called Guy's Tower, of the latter part of the fourteenth century, and of decorated English character, in fine preservation, of noble outline, and of curious construction and composition.

The third Engraving represents the principal portion of the Castle, from the entrance; but the grand front of the edifice is displayed towards the river. The tower, known as "Cæsar's" is, however, the most ancient part of the building.

The apartments have mostly been modernised; but the outward arrangement and form of the Castle have sustained little alteration. The Great Hall, 62 feet by 37, retains, in its appearance and furniture, much of its ancient character. The other apartments contain a fine collection of pictures, and ancient armour, besides many antiquarian "curiosities."

On Tuesday, after leaving the Castle, a large party of the members of the Association went to visit the fine old timber-built Leycester Hospital, in Warwick, where they were received with due ceremony, by the Master, the Rev. B. S. Harris, and the Brethren of the Hospital.

Another party paid a visit to Beauchamp Chapel, in the Cross Church of St. Mary, and examined its curious monuments.

The Chapel of Our Lady, or the Beauchamp Chapel, as it is generally called, after the name of its founder, adjoins the south transept of St. Mary's Church, and has been pronounced, both "in its external and internal embellishment, inferior only to the Chapel of Henry the Seventh, at Westminster." This fabric was completed in the third year of the reign of Edward the Fourth, at a cost of £2481 4s. 7½d., apparently an insignificant sum; but, it must be remembered, that wheat was then sold at 3s. 4d. per quarter.

The exterior of the Chapel has a highly enriched open parapet, and buttresses of great beauty. The roof of the principal room is groined, and embellished with fan-tracery. In the centre stands the monument of the founder. It is an altar-tomb of grey marble, most elaborately enriched: on the slab is a life-size figure of the Earl of Warwick, of brass-gilt. The body is clad in plate armour, and at the feet are a griffin and muzzled bear. Over the effigies is a hearse of brass hoops, gilt; and, at the upper ends of four of the poles which strengthen the hoops of the hearse, are enamelled shields, with the arms of Beauchamp, and other armorial bearings. In the niches of the table part of the monument are figures of brass gilt; arms enamelled on shields in starred quatrefoils, figures of angels holding inscribed scrolls, &c. There are, also here, other monuments of great splendour.

Besides this principal division are other apartments connected with the Chapel; among which, on the north side, is the Confessional, which we have likewise engraved. It has an exquisitely fan-traceried roof; niches flanking the end window; and other enrichments of great beauty.

On Tuesday, the President's Soirée at the Shire-Hall was well attended.

WEDNESDAY.

In the morning, a party left Warwick on an excursion to Guy's Cliff, about one mile and a half north-east of the town. It may be as well to mention that, as the chronicles of Rouse, the Warwickshire antiquary, have formed the subject of one of the papers read at this Congress, it was at a chapel here, in former years, that he was once an officiating priest. The chapel was founded by Richard Earl of Beauchamp, in the reign of Henry VI.; and in its interior is a colossal statue of the "hermit knight," Sir Guy, who, after his warlike exploits, retired to a cave close by. The mansion stands in a most lovely situation on the western bank of the Avon, Camden calling it "the very seat of pleasantness." The mansion is now the seat of the Hon. Charles Bertie Percy.

We have engraved the rude statue of the famous Earl Guy, about eight feet in height; and, from a print in Dugdale's "Warwickshire," the figure appears to have been in good preservation in the seventeenth century; but it is now much mutilated.

The two remaining Illustrations are a scene in the picturesque grounds of Guy's Cliff; and the offices of the establishment, consisting of excavations in the rock.

There were also excursions made on Wednesday, to Stoneleigh Abbey, the residence of Lord Leigh; and to the very interesting Church and Castle of Kenilworth, about five miles north of Warwick.

GUY'S CLIFF.—THE EXCAVATIONS.

THE CONFESSIONAL IN THE BEAUCHAMP CHAPEL.

Lord Leigh received the party very hospitably, having prepared for them a collation. The early monastic remains, which have been preserved in constructing the present mansion (most of which are of Anglo-Norman architecture), were pointed out to the visitors by the Rev. Mr. Coleville, of Stoneleigh, who read a description prepared for the occasion by Mr. M. H. Bloxam. Lord Leigh afterwards took the archæologists in Stoneleigh Church, where they inspected its curious monuments; after which the party left for Kenilworth.

The Church has a fine enriched western Norman door, in the lower part of an ancient tower, surmounted by a spire of more modern date.

The Castle, as it now appears, is a vast and magnificent pile of ruins, proudly seated on an elevated spot, extended round three sides of a spacious inner court, exhibiting in grand display mouldering walls, dismantled towers, broken battle-ments, shattered staircases, and fragments, more or less perfect, of arches and windows, some highly ornamented and beautiful. The earliest history of the Castle is coeval with the reign of Henry the First. It sustained various reverses, as to its owners during the civil wars: it was here that the unfortunate Edward the Second was brought a prisoner by Harry of Lancaster, and received the disastrous news of his deposition by the Parliament. This ill-fated Monarch was almost immediately hurried to Berkeley Castle, where he was barbarously murdered. The interest associated with Kenilworth by Scott's romance is familiar to everybody.

From Kenilworth, the party returned to Warwick, where a few papers were read at the Evening Meeting

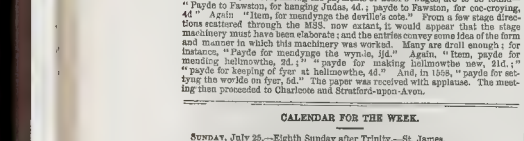
THURSDAY.

This morning, a paper of great research, upon "the Coventry Mysteries," was read by Mr. Wright. He referred to several curious entries in old corporate books. Thus, in 1573, among the payments of actor's wages, are to be found—"Payde to Fawston, for hawking Judas, 4d.; payde to Fawston, for coe-crowing, 4d." Again "Item, for mendynge the devile's cote." From a few stage directions scattered through the MSS. now extant, it would appear that the stage machinery must have been elaborate: take the entries conveyed some idea of the form and manner in which this machinery was worked. Many are droll enough: for instance, "Payde for mendynge the wyn-sle, 1d." Again, "Item, payde for mending hellmowthe, 2d.;" "payde for making hellmowthe new, 21d.;" "payde for keeping of fyer at hellmowthe, 4d." And, in 1568, "payde for setting the worlde on fyer, 6d." The paper was received with applause. The meeting then proceeded to Charlecote and Stratford-upon-Avon.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, July 25.—Eighth Sunday after Trinity.—St. James.
MONDAY, 26.—St. Anne.—The Sun rises at 4h. 15m., a.m.
TUESDAY, 27.—Full Moon at 10h. 8m., p.m.—The Sun is due East at 7h. 15m.
WEDNESDAY, 28.—Saturn rises at 9h. 12m., p.m.
THURSDAY, 29.—Mars rises at 10h. 36m., p.m.
FRIDAY, 30.—The Moon is near the planet Saturn.
SATURDAY, 31.—Jupiter rises at 1h. 47m., a.m., near N.E. by N.

The planet Saturn, at about midnight, is favourably situated for observation. During this year, he will appear surrounded by his ring, as in the annexed dia-



SCALE 15" TO AN INCH.

gram; but which will become less and less visible, till, during a part of next year, the ring will not be visible at all: the planet then will have the appearance of a round ball only, and it will be two years before the ring will be as favourably situated for observation as it will be during this and the following few weeks.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 31.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. A. M. A.	M. A. M. A.	M. A. M. A.	M. A. M. A.	M. A. M. A.	M. A. M. A.	M. A. M. A.
h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.
11 55 | 4 0	0 50 | 15	1 40 | 3	2 25 | 3 50	3 10 | 4 30	3 55 | 5 15	4 35 | 5 55

* On Sunday the 25th, there will be no high tide during the afternoon.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Elinor" Engraved representations of the Embellishments of the Painted Chamber at Westminster have been published, if we mistake not. Drawings of them were exhibited to the Society of Antiquaries early in 1845

"A Constant Reader" The relationship of Mary Queen of Scots and Queen Elizabeth stands thus. Mary was the great niece of Henry VIII., being the granddaughter of his sister Margaret. Elizabeth was Henry's own daughter.

"K"—The four-sided letter on the New Crown-piece has some clever points; but we cannot spare room to print it.

"W. P." Ramsay.—We cannot promise.

"B." Loddige's Nursery Grounds at Hackney are open daily, except Sundays, free to Persons known to the Proprietors, or bringing satisfactory references.

"E. P." should appeal to the Lords-Commissioners of the Treasury.

"An Antigua Subscriber" informs us that the sum of £144, 4*s.* 1*d.* is on our Journal of May 8 last, to be subscribed by the Negroes, towards the relief of the Distressed Irish, was collected by Irish: an Scots on the Island, whence, also, the sum of £300 has been sent by the Scotch to their suffering countrymen.

"An Old Subscriber"—Apply at the Admiralty, specifying name of ship, &c.

"H. S. J." should consult Buchanan's "Technical Dictionary."

"F. H. L." Oporto, we thankful; but, his communication reach'd us too late to be available

"W. T." Cheshunt.—Her Majesty's Theatre, and the Royal Italian Opera (Covent Garden), will, it is expected, be closed in about a month.

"J. W. W." Alles, in "Roberto il Diavolo."

"An Inhabitant of Marylebone" should appeal to the Registration Officers.

"Rachel," Bayswater.—Land is properly pronounced Leend.

"G. H. T."—The papers in question will not be returned. Madame Rachel performed in London last July

"Rouse," Arundel-street. The Celtic words "Ste. Rolach, na dhearn" may be translated "Holy Religion! my support"

"R. W."—We have not room to reply to such trifles.

"A Subscriber," Bangor, is thanked for his Sketch of the Great Britain; but, we had rather await the result of the experiment

"Miriam" should appeal to the Income-Tax Commissioners of the District.

"R. N."—We cannot decide as to the relic found at Inverness: it is, probably, a pectoral cross.

"J. S. L." Sheepshed, may obtain the Chemicals named of Messrs. Knight and Co., Foster Lane, Cheapside.

"Inquirer," Hoxton. We cannot assist you.

"A Liverpool Subscriber" is thanked for the Sketch; but, we cannot promise to engrave it

"A Subscriber" should apply to the Auctioneers, or to the neighbourhood, for the amount realised by the sale of the Tewkesbury Estate.

"A Bedfordshire Rector" is thanked

"G. B. C." Apply to the Office for the Sale of Parliamentary Papers, Great Turnstile, Holborn.

"H. A." We have not room.

"Bay a Broom."—The actress in question is performing in the provinces.

"A." Sub-aquan. "A crowd, pronounced "a-row-mail," is from aer, the air, and mailes, a sailor.

"One of the People."—We cannot spare space for the "grievance."

"W. S." Sandy.—To Spike a gun is to drive a large nail into the touch-hole of a cannon, so as to render it unfit for service. Hammers and Spikes are carried by the contending parties in war, for this purpose.

"A Constant Reader," Ipswich.—The Sandwich is said to have been first introduced by the Earl of Sandwich.

"C. H. W." Norton St. Philip.—The rule of settling Executors' Accounts is to best with exceptions, that our Correspondent had better purchase Brady's "Plain Instructions to Executors"

"A. C."—The cost of a Special Train on the Eastern Counties Railway is 8*s.* per mile.

"A Three Years' Subscriber" should have confidence in his patron.

"F. M. P." Wednesbury. We have already replied to the question.

"A Lover of Somerset" The most convenient route to Paris is by the South-Eastern Railway, Folkstone, and Boulogne.

"A. B." Upper Gunnels place.—Address Her Majesty's Theatre.

"E. P." Bowling Green Close.—Buckingham Palace can only be seen by permission of the Lord Steward, or the Lord Chamberlain.

"J. C." is thanked for the Sketch of the Devastation; though, we have not room to engrave it

"A Young Artist" should apply to the Royal Academy, for admission as a Student.

"A Subscriber." Smart's New and Improved Edition of Walker's Pronouncing Dictionary, published by Longman and Co

"T. K. S." The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals have an Office at 3, Exeter Hall, Strand; and there is a Branch Society in Dublin, at 2, Lower Ormond Quay

"B. W."—We do not know.

"A Subscriber."—The highest reading of the thermometer, in the year 1846, was 83½°; the highest reading which has occurred to the present time of this year, of the same thermometer, was 81°. The highest average daily temperature, in 1846, was 74½°, occurring on July 31; and the highest, this year, was also 74½°, occurring on July 13

"C. A. S. H."—Mrs. Nisbett was born in Ireland. She made her first appearance at Drury Lane, as the Widow Cheerly, in "The Soldier's Daughter," on the 16th of October, 1826. She had previously performed with some amateurs at the English Opera House

"F. M. S."—Jamieson, in his "Scottish Dictionary," (Sco. Edit.—the 4to Ldit' is silent on the point,) says that the word links at a sandy, uneven Pasture common. Its etymology is uncertain; but it is not the Germain Leucken (to bend), as he states. The Anglo Saxon Lenca an (to lengthen), is a much more likely derivation; Links meaning a stripe or length of in d. Robert Chambers, in a pleasant article in his Miscellaneous Essays, on Golf (the ancient game played on Links), states that the word is never used—as our Correspondent writes it—in the singular.

"A Frequent Reader," Chelsea.—The approved party can enforce payment

"T. L.," Newcastle-on-Tyne, is thanked: we have engraved the subject, and only await an opportunity for its insertion. Any new details will be acceptable.

"A Parent" should apply to a Magistrate.

"Pro Bono Publico," Torquay.—Mason, Bookseller, 65, Paternoster-row.

"C. T." Greenwich.—We do not know anything of the parties.

"M. J. R."—Chalk Drawings may be fixed with milk, or water holding in solution a little sunglass.

"Elector" has not a vote. The Grand Duke Constantine is the second son of the Emperor of Russia.

"R. H. A."—Mr. Macaulay's town address is 2 1, Albany

"R. P." Acton.—There is no late edition of the "Biographia Dramatica."

AGRICULTURAL SHOW AT NORTHAMPTON.—Next week, we shall engrave Portraits of the principal Prize Animals, in a novel style.

BACK NUMBERS.

All Numbers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, one month old, will, in future, be considered "Back Numbers," and be charged each sixpence extra.

The Back Numbers are now reprinted; and any single Number from the commencement may be had by remitting One Shilling to the Office or to any Bookseller or News-agent.

The Volumes and Parts will be charged the same as usual, viz., Volumes, 18*s.*; Parts, 2*s.* 6*d.*

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JULY 24, 1847.

To those who can remember the acts of the Whigs and their leaders in the days when an "appropriation clause" overthrew a Government, and laid down a principle never yet acted on, that the funds of the Church can be applied to other than ecclesiastical purposes—to those who recollect the time when a Stanley "towering in his pride of place," swept away from the Irish Church Establishment no less than ten Bishops—the Lord John Russell of the Session of 1847 can hardly appear the same person, nor the Whigs the same party. The principle of the appropriation clause was soon abandoned; all the funds that can be acquired by the suppression of useless dignities in the Church, and the reduction of the too abundant revenues of the princely see of Durham, and others of lesser, but still exceeding wealth, are devoted to the Church in another form; but, for State Education, the State must pay. The policy that dictated the suppression of the Irish Bishops, and the union of some of the English sees, is wholly reversed; dioceses that have been united, are separated again; and to the number of Bishops already existing, more are to be added. And the Whigs, having been for the last twenty years identified with the policy that makes the Church subordinate to the State, by recognising its revenues as national property, are rapidly linking themselves with the High Church party, who wholly deny the "national property" theory as applied to Ecclesiastical revenues, regard with grudging eyes the royal lands now held by Laymen, which were once the domains of the Church, and of which the aristocracy stripped her at the Reformation. The opinions on Church policy that are now influencing our Legislation, have sprung from that movement of the last few years, which is but ill described by the term Puseyism; for evil or for good, there is a tendency to assert and act on bolder and more decided principles in Church government than the laity may so describe it, a return to first principles, a disposition to assimilate the polity of the Reformed Establishment to the Church from which it sprang. The close alliance between Church and State is the policy of the Reformation, and it was maintained by keeping the Church, as a power, subordinate to the Crown. The Tractarians regard the Church in another and higher light; they insist on its independence of the State, but its alliance would be that between two powers, standing on different but still equal terms. Thus, we witness the apparent anomaly of the more extreme Church party stating boldly, that, as a Church, it derives no advantage by its connection with the State; that the benefit of the alliance is all on the side of the temporal power; that, for spiritual purposes, it would be better if the Church were less dependent; and, finally, that they look without any apprehension on the beginning of a course of measures which actually deprives the office of a Bishop of a prescriptive and temporal rank, and may, by its future operation, exclude from the House of Lords the oldest sees in the kingdom. Something still stranger than this can be traced in the last discussions of the Parliament elected by the triumphant Conservation of 1841. The High Churchmen accept an Episcopacy deprived of political power, on the ground that the Church is independent of the State, and, in its functions, above it; and the same Episcopacy is pointed out by those who wish to place all creeds on one level, as the precedent by which they will hereafter abolish the political power of the Church altogether. There is a risk of the added Bishoprics being dearly purchased. It is impossible to foresee all the future consequences of the new element that is now undoubtedly introduced into the English Episcopacy. Passing strange has been the destiny of the first Parliament that gave unbounded influence to the Conservatives since the Reform Bill. It was elected expressly to keep up the system of Protection in our commercial policy—and, as a system, Protection is totally abolished; containing an overwhelming majority of supporters of the Church, it may have, in its last hours, sowed the seeds of a struggle that may be ere after change all the constitutional relations of Church and State.

We cannot persuade ourselves that the risk of that great conflict which we see gathering in the future, need to have been incurred; the efficiency of the Church, the necessity of "widening its borders," so as to proportion its capacity more duly to the increase of the population, might have been met without touching the political and constitutional question. In a word, we agree more with those who think it would have been more useful, as well as more safe, to have made broader the base and foundation on which the Church rests, than to have raised higher its towers and pinnacles. As far as our observation and reading serve us, we think the surplus funds of the Church would have been better devoted to the increase of the number and efficiency of the Parochial Clergy, than to the creation of more superintendents of those now existing; the army of the Church militant needs rather more soldiers for the fight of faith, than commanders.

It is impossible to take up a report of the Inspectors of Mines, without finding grievous instances of the almost heathenish state in which large masses of our population exist, simply because it has outgrown the physical possibility of its wants being supplied by the same arrangement that existed a century ago. The appointment of additional Prelates will not remedy this evil. Again, if more efficient government of the Clergy was required, would it not have been better to increase the power of the Bishops than their number? At present, the Episcopal Constitution is imperfect; it cannot, in many cases, act with any vigour or effect; we have heard one of the most respected Prelates on the bench declare that a vicious Clergyman can set his Bishop almost at defiance; his superior can only pursue him through the forms of a court remarkable for prolixity and intricacies of practice. In some cases, a Bishop has t prosecute an offender at an enormous expense, even where the proofs of misconduct are open and palpable. If powers are imperfect, to increase the number of those who are to exercise them is worse than useless. In dealing with matters of doctrine or discipline, whether as a body, or by individual interference, the Episcopacy is trammelled by the defects of the Law and the jealousy of the Constitution. Without the consent of Parliament we believe there cannot be a Convocation of Prelates to settle any disputed point. At the present moment even the ritual of the Church is a subject of dispute, and in the charges of the different Bishops, each party may find countenance. A beneficed clergyman guilty of crime may be suspended from his functions; but the question of property is mixed up with that of conduct, and he may continue to receive the revenues of the Church of which he is an unworthy servant. What remedy can additional Bishops bring to these anomalies? From the late debates it would seem that the increase of the Bishops is more warmly advocated and sought by the Laity than the Clergy. From all we can gather from the tone of letters that appear from time to time in the public papers, there is an under-current of feeling among the parochial clergy against the Bishops. Complaints are made of harsh and arbitrary conduct, and arrogance of personal demeanour; whether they are well founded or not we cannot tell; but they have an effect on the public mind, and, combined with the absence of any general movement among the Clergy in favour of the addition to the Episcopal bench, produce the impression that the plan is not so zealously supported by the Clergy as might be imagined. What the future results may be, no one can predict; but we doubt the policy of adding members to an order in the Church, equal in powers and rank, but marked with one disqualification; it is still worse to extend that disqualification over all those ancient sees, that have for many centuries occupied a certain and settled position in the State. Contingently, all the old Bishoprics in the kingdom, with three exceptions, are displaced from their rank. They are all subjected in turn to a deprivation of their places in the political fabric. Will this exclusion produce no consequences? Will the excluded prelates, if more should be created, have no ground of difference with their more favoured brethren? Will there be no jealousies or ill feelings between the greater and the less—between the mitres linked with the coronet and the mitres that stand alone? In case of any movement in the Church, may this policy not furnish leaders to a party who will prove more formidable to the union of Church and State, which, we repeat, was one great principle of the Reformation, than any we have yet seen? The germs of such a movement are already visible, and an independent and unpolitical prelacy, may hereafter be the sternest opponents of the power that created it. It was an English King who said, "The first thing a Bishop does is to forget his maker." The seatless prelates will have much less reason to remember him.

THE WEATHER.

The weather, during the past week, has been dull; the sky has been generally covered with cloud; the air has been for the most part calm, or the wind has been very light. There has been a great fall in the temperature since Saturday. The following are some particulars of each day:—

Monday, the sky was covered by cloud till 4 P.M., and it was nearly free from cloud after that time. The wind was from the S., and it was light. The average temperature of the day was 73½°; the extreme thermometrical readings on grass during the day were 137° and 49°. Saturday, the sky was covered by cloud throughout the day. Early in the morning, and again between 9h. A.M. and noon, there were thunder storms. The thunder was first heard in the N.W., and it successively passed to N., N.E., E., and to S.E. The forewalls of time after the lightning was seen was from five seconds to many seconds; so that the nearest approach of the storm was about one mile. Rain was falling heavily. This day is remarkable as one as compared with those of the week preceding; the extreme difference between the highest and lowest readings of the thermometer during the day was only 9°, and the average difference of each day during the week was 50°. The average temperature of the day was 64°, being 9½° less than that of the preceding day. During the day the sky was chiefly overcast throughout the day, till towards evening. The direction of the wind was S.E. The average temperature of the day was 63½°; the lowest reading on grass was 49°. Monday, the sky was chiefly cloudy throughout the day, and a small quantity of rain fell in the evening. The direction of the wind was S.E. The average temperature of the day was 60°. Tuesday, the sky was cloudy throughout; at times the clouds were thin, so faint solar shadows were cast; the direction of the wind was S.; the average temperature of the day was 65°. Wednesday, the sky was covered by cloud till 2 P.M., and a small quantity of cloud only prevailed afterwards. The direction of the wind was W.; the average temperature of the day was 64°. The lowest reading on grass was 54°. Thursday, the sky was overcast almost throughout the day; the direction of the wind was W. A thin rain was falling occasionally. The average temperature of the day was 65°; and the average temperature of the week was 66°.

The extreme thermometrical readings each day were:—

Friday	July 16, the highest during the day was 85 deg., and the lowest was 61 deg.
Saturday,	July 17	624	599
Sunday,	July 18	71	52
Monday,	July 19	68½	51
Tuesday,	July 20	74	55
Wednesday,	July 21	67½	55½
Thursday,	July 22	70	60

Backheath, Friday, July 23, 1847. J. G.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT OSBORNE HOUSE.

On Saturday last, his Royal Highness Prince Waldemar of Prussia arrived at Osborne, on a visit to her Majesty.

On Sunday, the Queen and Prince Albert, and the Ladies and Gentlemen of the Court, attended divine service in the Queen's private chapel.

On Monday, her Majesty, Prince Albert, and the Royal children, went out in the pleasure grounds and plantations.

On Tuesday, the Queen and Prince Albert visited the squadron at Spithead. As the Fairy, with the standard at the main, and attended by the Undine (the Port Admiral's yacht), came in sight, the whole of the line-of-battle ships commenced the Royal salute, viz., the St. Vincent, 120, flag-ship; the Queen, 110; the Caledonia, 120; the Howe, 120; and the Vengeance, 84, manned yards, and fired a Royal salute; and, as the yacht approached, each ship made preparations for receiving the Royal visit.

When within a convenient distance, the illustrious personages embarked in the state barge, and, leaving the yacht, proceeded on board the Queen, where they were received by Sir Charles Ogle, Sir Henry Leslie (her Captain), and the other officers of the ship, and by a guard of honour of the Royal Marines. Some time was passed on board this noble specimen of naval architecture; and the extreme cleanliness and high order which prevailed in every department excited expressions of admiration and amazement from the august visitors. On board the St. Vincent, the gallant Sir G. Naplier's flag-ship, the same ceremonies were gone through, and the same well-deserved praise bestowed on the exquisite arrangement apparent throughout. During the time the Royal visitors were on board the St. Vincent, and Queen (the only two ships they visited on this occasion), the standard of England and the Black Eagle of Prussia (the latter in compliment to Prince Waldemar) were kept flying at the mizentop-gallant-mast-heads. On the return of the Royal party to the Fairy, she immediately hoisted the standard, and steamed off in the direction of Osborne. She then again manning yards, and the platform battery at Portsmouth firing a Royal salute

HER MAJESTY'S RETURN TO BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

Her Majesty returned to Buckingham Palace, from the Isle of Wight, on Thursday. In the afternoon, a Privy Council was held, at which the Royal Speech at the close of the Session was submitted to her Majesty's approbation.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO SCOTLAND.—The Royal party will embark for Scotland at East Cowes, in the Isle of Wight, and, passing round the Land's End, they will proceed along the west coast of Scotland in the Royal yacht Albert and Victoria, until abreast of Inverness-shire, and then disembarking at Fort William, in Loch Eil. One report is that her Majesty will land in Cornwall.

ARISTOCRATIC MARRIAGE.—Last Saturday, Lord Berkdales, son of the Earl and Countess of Caithness, was married to Miss Louisa Georgiana Philips, third daughter of G. R. Philips, Esq., M.P.

DEATH OF LADY EYRE COOTE.—We regret to announce the demise of Lady Eyre Coote, which took place at the Baths of Vichy, last week. The deceased lady was widow of the late gallant General Sir Eyre Coote, G.C.B.

POSTSCRIPT.

THE DISSOLUTION OF PARLIAMENT.

The following Proclamation appeared in last night's Gazette:—

BY THE QUEEN.

A PROCLAMATION FOR DISSOLVING THE PRESENT PARLIAMENT, AND DECLARING THE CALLING OF ANOTHER.

VICTORIA, R.

Whereas we have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Privy Council, to dissolve this present Parliament, which meets this day pursuant to our writs, at nine progressed to Tuesday, the 21st day of September next: we do for that end publish this our Royal Proclamation, and do hereby declare the said Parliament accordingly; and the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses, and the Commissioners for Shires and Burghs, of the House of Commons, are dissolved from their meeting and attendance on the said Tuesday, the 21st day of Sep ember next, and we, being desirous and resolved, as soon as may be, to meet our people, and to have their advice in Parliament, do hereby make known to all our loving subjects our Royal will and pleasure to call a new Parliament; and do hereby declare, that, with the advice of our Privy Council, we have given order that our Chancellor of that part of our United Kingdom, called Great Britain, and our Chancellor of Ireland, do, respectively, upon notice thereof, forthwith issue our writs in due form, and according to law, for calling a new Parliament: and we do hereby also, by this our Royal Proclamation under our Great seal of our United Kingdom, require writs forthwith to be issued accordingly by the said Chancellors respectively, for causing the Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons, who are to serve in the said Parliament, to be duly returned to, and give their attendance in, our said Parliament: which writs are to be returnable on Tuesday, the 21st day of September next.

Given at our Court at Buckingham Place this 23rd day of July, in the year of our Lord 1847, and in the 11th of our reign.

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN

The Gazette also contains a Proclamation, ordering the election of sixteen Peers of Sc tland at Edinburgh, on the 8th of September next.

ELECTION FOR LONDON.—It is understood that the City election will commence on Wednesday next, and that the po ling will take place on Thursday.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

We learn from the Paris Journals of Thursday that the Paris and Lyons Railway Bill was passed by a large majority on Wednesday. The report of the resignation of Marshal Soult gained ground, and one of the Journals states that he has shortly existed in Paris

The papers contain the most cheering accounts of the corn harvest from all parts of the country. The farmers in the environs of Paris have begun to cut down their wheat.

TURKEY AND GREECE

It appears, by accounts from Constantinople of the 7th instant, that the dispute between Turkey and Greece, which it was thought had been settled, had, on the contrary, become more complicated. The despatches received on that day, from M. Colet ti, were couched in terms so unsatisfactory to the Turkish Government, that the latter had determined to suspend all commercial relations with Greece. The despatches, it is said, contained no apology for the insult offered to M. Mussurus, for the King's conduct to him at the Ba l, although a promise had been made that the Greek Government should make one. It was believed that Turkey intended to send a fleet of seventy-five ships of war to the Archipelago. A letter from Athens, dated July 10, says:—"Bl.od has at last flowed. Magnesia is in a state of revolt. The Ministerial parties are fighting amongst themselves. The Mavrocnichali party are protected by the Court. The Tzamedaki party are the bosom friends of M. Colett i. They joined together to oust out the Opposition, and now they are killing each other. The eldest son of General Mavromichali is amongst the number of the victims."

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

THE ELECTION FOR THE CITY OF LONDON.

There was a meeting of the Liberal electors at the London Tavern, on Tuesday, at which Lord John Russell entered into a full exposition of the principles upon which h again offered himself. The chair was taken by Mr. Abel Smith, and the meeting was attended by many Members of Parliament and other influential persons.

Lord John Russell at first met with some interruption, and was greeted with cries of "No new Bishops," and "No endowment of Popery." As soon as the noise subsided, he referred to the objections which had been made against him in certain quarters:

"I have heard reasons put forth on account of which it is stated that I am disqualified from appearing as a candidate for the honour of your suffrages. (Hear, hear.) It is said, in the first place, that as a Minister of the Crown I ought not to be a candidate for the representation of the City of London. (Hear, hear.) Gentlemen, such an objection I believe to be contrary to the popular genius of our constitution. (Hear, hear.) I believe nothing can more conduce to the harmony of the non-intrusion than the those who possess the confidence of the people as the should seek for the suffrages of large bodies of the people. I can conceive nothing more advantageous to the Crown than that persons representing large communities should be able to carry the wishes, the opinions, and the feelings of those communities to the foot of the Throne. (Hear, hear.) I cannot agree, therefore, that, as a Minister of the Crown, I am disqualified from your service." (Great cheering.)

Lord J. RUSSELL proceeded to show that he had for many years promoted the cause of civil and religious liberty, and advocated free trade.

"I remember well a declaration that I once made in this room—that I thought if a weaver in Lancashire produced a piece of cloth, and a husbandman on the banks of the Ohio grew a quarter of wheat, that those two men ought to be at liberty to exchange these articles of their labour, and that no law ought to be made to prevent the interchange. (Hear, hear.) That which I asserted here in 1841, I proposed again in 1842 in the House of Commons, when I pointed out how fruitful were the countries beyond the Atlantic, and how desirable it was that in any difficulty of procuring food in this country which might arise, that the abundant harvests of America should be made available to us, and that the products of the manufacturing industry of this country should be sent there in exchange. (Hear, hear.) And, gentlemen, what I then asserted as desirable, has this year come to pass. (Hear, hear.) We have had the produce of America brought to feed the people of this country. I believe that not less than 4,000,000 quarters of grain of various kinds will be found to have been brought into the consumption of this country from America during the past year. Therefore I assert that in proposing even what I then proposed—a compromise—as well as in supporting that which I afterwards contended for, when I saw there was no longer room for a compromise, and when the time for it had gone by, a total abrogation of the duties on corn, I assert that I served your interest, and did that which was for the general welfare of the country." (Cheers.)

The noble Lord reiterated his well-known views upon the subject of education.

"I venture to ask you (said he), and with confidence, whether, while we are giving millions of money, perhaps near 20,000,000 every year for the purposes of defence—for our army and our navy, and our courts of justice, and various other branches of criminal government—whether it is much to have demanded a grant of 100,000 to promote the better education and instruction of the people. (Cheers, and a cry of 'It's not enough.') Of this I feel assured, that some misapprehension upon the subject must have prevailed with the great body of the Protestant Dissenters—(hear, hear)—because, as I have said, in the British and Foreign School Society, to which I belong, and in every other mode, I have always found the Protestant Dissenters of this country most eager to forward and promote the general education of the people—(hear, hear)—and, therefore, I must differ at all, it must be, not in our object, but in some misconstruction or misapprehension of the particular measure itself, which further inquiry and further reflection are, I think, sure to dissipate." (Cheers.)

In reference to pledges, the noble Lord said, "I am not myself speaking of it as a general question and apart from my official position—partial to the giving of pledges; because I have always in my time thought that pledges were a check both to the parties themselves who gave the pledges, the character of the House of Commons, and the reputation of the country. I have seen men pledge themselves never to agree to the removal of the Roman Catholic Disabilities (hear, hear); but when that great man, the Duke of Wellington with his sagacious eye perceived that the time was come for removing those disabilities, or encountering civil dissensions, those gentlemen, preferring the safety of the country to the keeping of their own pledges, wisely, but not much to their own credit, voted against the engagements they had made. (Hear, hear, and cries of 'Shame.') I will go further and say that, standing in the position I do, as the Minister of this great country, I should think myself undeserving of that trust if I fettered my own hands, and was not at liberty to give to my Sovereign at any time the advice which I think is most for the public good. (Loud cheers.) Gentlemen, I have only to add that I think that th pledges which have been required on the subject of the Roman Cathol ic endowments are peculiarly unnecessary (hear, hear), because so far as I am acquainted there is no intention at present of proposing any measure for that purpose to Parliament, nor do I know that there is any probability even of its being proposed. (Hear, hear.) But I must further say, with regard to all these subjects, that I think the Roman Catholics are entitled to all the privileges which the rest of the country possesses (cheers); and that a man's religious opinions ought to be no bar to his obtaining that which he otherwise might obtain." (Renewed cheers, and cries of "Bravo.")

Lord John Russel, concluded thus:—"Gentlemen, I stand, as I have said, in a position which is one of great responsibility (hear, hear); none, also, of great eminence, but which is by no means one of ease or of pleasure. (Hear, hear.) It has been said, poetically—

What's grandeur what is power,
But heavier toil, superior pain?

Now, I confess that, with that heavier toil, with that superior pain, there are charms in power to which I do not profess myself insensible. It is a charm to be able to advance, in any way, the prosperity, to promote the interests, or to enlarge the liberties of such an empire as this. (Cheers.) It is for such an object, pursuing my own conscientious course, taking counsel from all that public opinion can teach me of that which is suggested amongst this enlightened people, judging with the force of my own understanding, however imperfect, it may be, and guided also by the dictates of my heart, that I now again seek to be your representative in the House of Commons. (Hear, hear.) And as in former days I have had the honour of moving and carrying the repeal of those disabilities which afflicted the Protestant Dissenters with degradation, as in former days I have had the honour of opening Manchester, Leeds, Birmingham, and a vast proportion of the inhabitants of the country to the power of a franch se, which I succeeded in disfranchising Gatton and Old Sarum, and other causes of corruption, so, in the same spirit, shall I, if elected by your suffrages, continue to promote the best interests of the country. So long as I hold power, or so long as I hold the trust of being your representative, such shall be my object; and when I can no longer do so, I shall retire with the satisfaction of having acted to the best of my ability with a pure conscience." (Cheers.)

The other three Liberal candidates then very briefly addressed the meeting.

Resolutions in their favour were then agreed to.

Meetings have also been held during the week, at which resolutions were agreed to in support of the Conservative candidates.

LAMBETH ELECTION.—A meeting of electors of Lambeth was held on Tuesday evening, to arrange preliminary measures, and appoint a committee to secure the return of Mr B Hawes to the repr esentation of this borough. Mr Reed took the chair, and introduced Mr Hawes to the meeting That gentleman, on coming forward, declared the opinions which he had previously expressed to them to be unchanged: and his attention to the r interests as great as ever, notwithstanding the appointment which he now held in the Government, a power which he had obtained by no condition or sacrifice of his opinions, but simply by industry and perseverance. Mr. Meade proposed a resolution, approving of Mr. Hawes as representative of the borough, and for which the meeting pledged itself to promote his re-election by all means in its power

THE MARYLEBONE ELECTION.—The ballot to decide which of the Liberal candidates for the borough of Marylebone—viz., Lord Dudley Stuart, Mr. D. W. Harvey, or Sergeant Shee, should stand with Sir Benjamin Hall, at the ensuing election, took place, in accordance with previous arrangement, at Hall's Riding School, Albany-street, Regent's Park, on Monday evening. At eight o'clock in the evening the doors were closed, and the scrutineers retired. At half-past eleven o'clock, Mr. John Williams, the Chairman of Mr. Harvey's Committee, was called to the chair, and the scrutineers made their return as follows: For Mr. D. W. Harvey, 1934; Lord Dudley Stuart, 1390; Mr. Sergeant Shee, 410. Mr. Harvey and Lord Dudley Stuart addressed the electors, but Mr. Sergeant Shee was not present.——A meeting of the Conservative party took place on Tuesday. Mr. Mackinnon, M P, in the chair. A deputation having been appointed to wait upon Sir James Hamilton to make known to him the wish of the Conservative electors of the borough, that he would consent to be put in nomination, the hon Baronet accompanied the gentlemen on their return to the meeting, and there read the address which he proposed to issue, in which he declared that he could not honestly separate himself from the Statu of the ministers of any other religion than that of the Established Church. A resolution having been adopted, re olving to return the hon. Baronet, if possible, free of expense, a committee was formed for the purpose of the election.

TOWER HAMLETS ELECTION.—The electors of West Hackney met at Kingsland, on Wednesday, when Mr. George Thompson explained the principles upon which he offered himself as a Candidate for the Tower Hamlets. He alluded to his past efforts in the cause of the personal freedom of the human race— for the abolition of slavery. But he did not stop there in his opinions—he wished to give to every man his right of political and religious freedom. He designated the alliance between Church and State as an unnatural one, which had led to laxity and corruption of Christianity, and was of opinion that it should be broken of for the good of both. A resolution, pledging the electors to support Mr Thompson, was agreed to

THE EXHIBITION AT WESTMINSTER HALL.—On Monday the exhibition of pictures and works of art in Westminster Hall was opened to the public, from o'clock in the morning, and continued throughout the day till a late hour in the evening. Prayer, sermons, and hymns, followed each other without interm ssion

ANOTHER FALL IN THE PRICE OF BREAD.—On Wednesday, the bakers throughout the metropolis lowered the price of the 4 lb loaf, 1d. The best bread is 9d. to 9½d; second quality, 8d.; and in the Blackfriars-road, Westminster, Whitechapel, &c., 7½d. and 7d.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS IN THE METROPOLIS.—The number of births registered in the metropolis, for the week ending July 17, was Males, 600; females, 582. The deaths were—Males, 479; females, 465. Weekly Average derived from Deaths of 1842-3-4-5-6, and corrected for increase of population:—Males, 479; females, 461.

COUNTRY NEWS.

THE ELECTIONS.

BATH.—On Tuesday evening a meeting of the electors of the Walcot district was held, Mr. George Edwards in the chair, at which a resolution, pledging the meeting to supp rt the present members, Mr. Roebuck and Lord Duncan, was carried unanimously. Lord Duncan and Mr. Roebuck afterwards addressed a numerou- meeting.

CAMBRIDGE.—Mr. Humfrey the Queen's Counsel, is in the field for the representation of this borough. His address expresses the learned gentleman's adherence to Conservative principles generally, but its chief feature is hostility to the present Poor-Law

CHELTENHAM.—Great excitement prevails in Cheltenham as to the probable results of the contested election for that borough. Three candidates are in the field. Mr. Craven Berkeley, the present member, has called down upon himself great indignation, even among his supporters, in consequence of his making a statement in the House, a few days ago, concerning the health of Cheltenham, exceedi gly prejudicial to the town. A great majority of the tradespeople are up in arms, and a number of the most influential have given notice to Mr. Berkeley, that they, Mr. Longsby Jones, a gentleman of property, and of Conservative Protestant principles, to come forward to contest the election. A Captain Carrington Smith has also presented himself as a candidate, being, as well as Mr. Jones, of Conservative principles

EVESHAM.—This borough is now become the arena of high political strife. Mr. Knight, the new candidate, who offered his services to the electors a month ago, has retired, and Sir Rel h Howard appears in the field as his successor.

GUILDFORD.—Mr Henry Currie, who was one of the defeated candidates at the last election, has come forward again; as has also Captain Maguire, one of the Liberal representatives of this borough; the other (Mr. Baring Wall) will be a candidate for Salisbury

HADDAX.—The hon. Baronet Sir Wood has issued a second address, to the effect that he cannot come down to canvass until the public business of the session is concluded; and that he will then come to Halifax, and give any explanation which his constituents may desire.

HUNTINGDON.—A deputation has waited on Mr Prendergast, the barrister and common councilman, requesting him to allow himself to be put in nomination for this borough, in the Liberal interest. It is his intention to do so.

LIVERPOOL.—On Tuesday, a very crowded meeting was held in the Amphitheatre, Liverpool, for the purpose of devising means of returning Sir Digby M'Acworth and Lord John Manners as the representatives of Liverpool. Both these candidates were present E. Molyneux was called to the chair, and Sir Digby Mackworth first addressed the meeting. He expressed himself opposed to the abolition of the Corn laws, hostile to the admission of the Jews to the Wardenty, and to a reduction of the duties on tea and coffee. The poor of every denomination he wished to see educated on the principles of the Bible, and he should determine to oppose any endowment of the Roman Catholic priesthood. Lord J. Manners addressed the meeting in a lengthy speech. He avowed himself a Tory and a Churchman, lauded Lord Stanley, and expressed himself favorable to a modification, but not an entire abolition, of the Excise system. He condemned the alterations made in the tariff by Sir R. Peel, and contended that, had there not been a considerable increase in those articles unmedded with, there would now have been an unfortunate reduction in the revenue.

LYME REGIS.—Sir Fitzroy Kelly, Q.C., has announced to the electors his intention of soliciting their votes in the ensuing election.

NORWICH.—Mr Ben, the eminent railway contractor, is a candidate for the representation of Norwich. Mr. Peto is a Dissenter.

PLYMOUTH.—Here are now four candidates in the field, viz., Lord Ebrington, one of the present representatives; Mr. Calmady, of Langdon Hall, the chairman of the Free Trade Association; Mr. Crowder, the Recorder of Bristo , whose opinions assimilate to those of Lord Ebrington, and Mr. E. Palmer, the barrister, of Lincoln's-Inn, who is supported by the Conservatives. Mr. Wilcocks, another barrister, has retired from the contest in favour of Mr Calmady.

RIPON.—Sir James Graham, upon the retirement of Sir G. Cockburn, has offered himself as a candidate for Ripon. In the course of his address, the right hon. Baronet says:—"I am conscious that my judgment may have erred on many occasions; but it has been my constant aim to preserve, to strengthen, and to uphold the institutions of our country by the application of timely remedies to their defects; and, without regard to my personal interests, I have laboured to promote the happiness and welfare of all classes of my fellow subjects. I can only promise to adhere to the independent conduct which I have hitherto pursued; and, if you confide to me the trust of representing you in Parliament, you may rest assured that no party considerations shall prevail over my sense of public duty."

SURREY (WEST).—Mr. W. J. Denison has again offered himself as a candidate. Mr. Trotter retires, and Mr. Drummond, of Albury Park, comes forward in the Conservative i terest.

SURREY (EAST).—The prospect of an uncontested election remains undimished. No Conservative candidate has yet appeared ag inst Messrs King and Alcock.

SUNDERLAND.—Mr Hudson met a number of his constituents on Saturday last at Sunderland, and entered at length into the c urse he had taken during the session. The hon. gentle man said he had been favourable to Protection; but, if he found that the Free-Trade measures worked well, he should support them. Mr. Hudson then referred to the present Government, and said he should not give it any factious opposition; but, if it brought forward good measures, he should always support them. With reference to any endowment of the Catholic Church, he was most decidedly opposed to such a proposition. He should support the Navigation Laws, believing them to be necessary to the prosperity of this country. Resolutions were unanimously agreed to, approving of the conduct of Mr Hudson, and pledging the electors to support Mr. Hudson at the next election, and to return him at the head of the poll.

STAFFORD ELECTION.—Mr. Healey is a candidate for this borough, on Liberal principles, and has every prospect of success. He addressed the electors last week, and was very favourably received. Mr. Healey is the proprietor and principal editor of the Scalcot Times, and the Pharmaceutical Times, and occupies a high standing in the medical profession.

SHEFFIELD.—The two sitting members, Mr. Parker and Mr. Ward, have issued addresses announcing their intention to solicit a renewal of the electors' support at the approaching election. Mr. Thomas Clark, has also issued an address.

WHITEHAVEN. Mr. Matthias Attwood, M.P for Whitehaven, retires from the House of Commons at the approaching dissolution, on account of ill health UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD.—The election for the University of Oxford will probably commence on the 29th instant.

WINDSOR.—After all the exertions which have been made by a small section of the Liberal party, to obtain a third candidate, to oppose the return of Colonel Reid, no one has been induced to come forward, and therefore, at this late period, no further means will be resorted to, to endeavour to obtain their object. Mr. Alfred Morrison, of Basildon Park, near Reading, the son of the member for the Inverness Districts, has been solicited to offer himself; but, it having been ascertained, after the necessary inquiries had been made at the Treasury, that the Government would not, beyond Lord John Hay being a candidate to represent the borough, interfere in any way with the election, as far as their influence extended, no further steps were taken in the matter. The election for Windsor will, therefore, be a very quiet "walk over."

SIR ROBERT PEEL AND THE ELECTORS OF TAMWORTH.—Sir Robert Peel has issued a very long address to the electors of Tamworth, in which he again offers himself as a candidate for that borough, although, as he states, he has been solicited by many important towns of the empire to represent them. Sir R. Peel assures the electors that he "rejoices in the recovery of leisure and independence," and that he is not desirous either to be at the head of the Government or of the Opposition. The right honourable Baronet then makes a long and evidently laboured defence of the policy pursued by himself while in power and dwells particularly upon the measures passed by Lord Aberdeen in regard to foreign affairs He then speaks of the Church, and his attachment to her interests, and desires to remedy any abuses connected with the Establishment And he endeavours to explain away the inconsistency he sees great difficulties in the way but, at the same time, he objects to pledge himself to "refuse even the consideration of any such plan at all times, and under all circumstances." Sir R. Peel takes cool, and many beneficial measures regarding Ireland. He then advertto the financial measures of his Government, and the steps taken to improve the revenue; and records his firm conviction of the advantages of Free-Trade. The right hon. Baronet concludes his long address in these terms—"If you disapprove of that which I have done—if you think the commercial policy erroneous, or the motives for adopting it insufficient or unworthy, I cannot solicit or expect the renewal of your confidence. Still less can I solicit or expect it, if you think that that policy ought to be reversed—if you desire to re-establish the principle of protection—to restore the duties that have been repealed on cattle, on provisions, on flour, on foreign wood, on the raw material of which are either the materials for domestic manufactures, or enter into general consumption as articles of food. It is my earnest hope that you will make your choice of a representative exclusively upon public grounds—that you will not permit the consideration of mere personal regard, or of my long connection with you, to influence that choice against your deliberate judgment. If that deliberate judgment be in favour of the course which I have pursued, and which I propose to pursue, I shall hope for a continuance of your confidence—if it be not, our intercourse in all the relations of private life will not assume a less friendly character, for the discharge of a trust committed to you, you should give effect to opinions upon public matters at variance with those which I have expressed."

OPENING OF THE SOUTH DEVON RAILWAY FROM NEWTON TO TOTNES.—The public opening of the most difficult portion of one of the most difficult railways in the kingdom—viz., the 8½ miles from Newton to Totnes, on the South Devon—took place on Tuesday. The event is an interesting one to the nation, as well as to the railway engineer. This small extension of the line is of moment to the public, because it brings the metropolis and the whole of the North of England and the Bristol and Birmingham Railway still more closely in connection with the important port and dockyard of Plymouth; and it is interesting to the railway engineer, inasmuch as the 8½ miles in question run through a country by the character of which nerders very heavy gradients and curves inevitable, and as the imperfect preparation for the application of the atmospheric system of traction, for which both gradients and curve were laid down, have rendered the adoption of locomotive power necessary

TWO RAILWAY BRIDGES SWEPT AWAY.—An accident resulting from the thunder-storm occurred on Friday (last week), when two bridges connected with the Great Western Railway were swept away by the flood. The bridges were those at the Junction and the Grogley; the traffic, in consequence, will be stopped for some time. A train was advancing to the Junction by six in the forenoon of its falling, but the signal-man succeeded in apprising the engine-driver of the accident, who quickly brought the train to a standing, without any person sustaining injury. The water appears to have collected in the valleys near Cannington, where it eventually forced a passage in two directions—one along the Camel river, and the other towards the east, in the direction of Lantuel. The part that entered the latter valley rose to the waters to a height of from 12 to 16 and 18 feet above its usual level, overflowing, at the same time, all the lower portions of the country from Camelford to the town, a distance of 15 miles. Such an immense body of water, of course, tended to produce the most disastrous effects. All the corn and crops near the river were destroyed Besides the Grogley and Junction bridges, three other road bridges are reported to have been carried away. No lives were lost.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

ACCIDENT AT THE HOUSE OF LORDS.—A man named Michael Hogan was killed at the House of Lords, on Monday. He fell a height of sixty feet from one of the towers, striking against several rafters as he fell, and trying in vain to catch hold of them.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE BLACKWALL RAILWAY.—On Monday, an inquest was held at the Railway Tavern, Blackwall, on the body of John Collyer, aged 31, a plate-layer on the Blackwall Railway, who had been employed on the line, and between eleven and twelve o'clock was proceeding along the rails on the Poplar side of the West India Docks, when the down train from Shadwell station came along. The deceased, in attempting to get out of the way, accidentally passed over his head, killing him on the spot. The Jury returned a verdict of "Accidental Death." The deceased has left a wife and three children.

ACCIDENT ON THE SOUTH EASTERN RAILWAY. An accident occurred to the seven o'clock A M train from Dorchester on Saturday. The train con sisted of engine, tend r, six passenger carriages, and a van. On their arrival about ten minutes past the journey between Southampton and Bishopstoke Heath a loose sandy embankment forming part of the road at least 25 feet above the natural ground below, the train ran off the line so suddenly and unexpectedly that the engineer had t o time to reverse or stop the speed. Fortunately, but one carriage was thrown down this tremendous embankment, and that had but two gentlemen within, who, most mir culously on assistance arriving, were found to be injured. The only serious misfortune in breaking of the chain connecting this carriage with the other five and the engine, the engine maintained its place on the rail. The cause is supposed to have been the heavy rains that had fallen during the night.

CURIOUS CASE OF SOMNAMBULISM.—A serious accident occurred on Sunday morning, between one and two o'clock, to a little boy only ten years of age, the son of Mr Charles Bennett, a respectable wedding in Farnham, Surrey. Mr. Stilwell, an articled clerk to Mr. Vou ss, hearing at that early hour in the morning the breaking of glass, and the sound of son ething falling heavily on the ground just below his window, went down, when he discovered Mr. Voules's son in the stones, and insensible. Although the poor little fellow was dreadfully bruised, his body showing one mass of contusions, no bones fortunately were broken. It was ascertained from the little sufferer, as soon as he was restored to sensibility, that he had been dreaming he was bathing in the river, and it is supposed that, when he was in the imaginary act of leaping from a bank into the water, he sprang from the dressing table through the window, falling from a height of upwards of 28 feet. Although the pane of glass he leaped through was little more than a foot square, he did not sustain the least injury from the broken glass. From the extremely severe nature of the injuries he has sustained, very faint hopes are entertained of his recovery.

A WIFE CHARGED WITH POISONING HER HUSBAND.—A long inquiry before Mr Reid, the Coroner for the County of Northumberland, at North shields, has terminated in a verdict of Wilful Murder against a woman named Margaret Lennox, for having caused the death of her husband, John Lennox, by arsenic. The deceased was sixty seven years of age, and the prisoner forty. It was clearly proved that the deceased and his wife had frequently quarrelled, on account of the latter having latterly given herself much up to drinking. The deceased and his wife had been married upwards of thirty-seven years, and three of their offspring are living, two of whom are married.

NEW CHURCH FOUNDED BY MISS BURDETT COUTTS.

A CONSIDERABLE period has now elapsed since Miss Burdett Coutts first communicated to the Lord Bishop of London her devotion of the sum of £30,000 to the erection and endowment of a Church, with Parsonage House and Schools, in Westminster. The determination of the locality was left to the Lord Bishop, as most conversant with the spiritual requirements of Westminster; and his Lord-hip accordingly fixed upon Rochester-row, the most densely populated portion of the city and liberties; the site being presented by the Dean and Chapter of Westminster, of wh se property it forms a part. The plot of ground almost immediately adjoins Vincent-square, and nearly opposite Emery Hill's Almshouses. The design for the Church and Buildings was prepared by Mr. Benjamin Ferrey, of Trinity-place, in accordance with Miss Coutts views; and Tuesday last was the day appointed for laying the foundation-stone.

The site was inclosed for the occasion, and there was accommodation for a large attendance of persons to witness the ceremony. Before two o'clock, the appointed hour, the several galleries were occupied, and several ladies were accommodated with seats on the platform, whereon were made the requisite arrangements for laying the stone, suspended from a truck, travelling along an elevated tramway.

MISS BURDETT COUTTS' CHURCH.

At two o'clock, the several authorities engaged in the ceremony, entered the enclosure in procession, preceded by the officials, bearing their silver staves. Amongst those present were, Miss Angela Burdett Coutts (who was accompanied by Lady King, Lady Antrobus, Miss Burdett, and Mrs. Ramsden); the Lord Bishop of London, the Lord Bishop of Oxford; Earl Brownlow, Lord Sandon, M.P., Lord Ashley; The Very Rev. Dr. Buckland, Dean of Westminster; the Venerable John Sinclair, M.A., Archdeacon of Middlesex; the Rev. Lord John Thynne, M.A., Canon of Westminster, the Venerable Archdeacon Bencinck; Foster Owen, Esq., High Constable of Westminster; the Right Rev. Dr. Short, Bishop of Adelaide, South Australia (the new see endowed by Miss Coutts); the Lord Bishop of Tasmania; Sir Frederick French, Col. Sturt; the Rev. Edward Repton, M.A., Canon of Westminster, and a large number of clergy.

The general arrangements were under the superintendence of the High Constable, and were very satisfactory. A large concourse of persons had assembled in the neighbourhood; and the walls and house-tops, commanding a view of the ceremony, were fringed with spectators.

The appointed office was read by the Bishop of London, and three of the Canons of the Abbey Church of Westminster. It consisted of the 84th Psalm, the Lord's Prayer, and the following Collect:—

"Almighty God, whom the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain, who yet vouchsafest to dwell with thy Church upon earth; look down with thy favour upon us, thine unworthy Servants, who are now about to lay the foundation of a house, to be dedicated to thy service, and to the glory of thy Holy Name; through Jesus Christ our Lord, who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen."

The bottle of coins, &c., and the inscription-plate, being placed within the stone, Miss Coutts spread the mortar with an elegant silver trowel; the stone was then lowered from the tramway, and it being adjusted, the Founder said, "We place this Foundation Stone in faith and hope, to the glory of God, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen." Miss Coutts then slightly struck the stone thrice with the mallet.

The following Hymn was next sung by the children of the Grey Coat, Green Coat, Blue Coat, and Emery Hill's, Schools:—

O Lord of Hosts, whose glory fills
The bounds of the eternal hills,
And yet vouchsafe, in Christian lands,
To dwell in temples made with hands:

Grant that all we, who here to-day,
Relying, this Foundation lay,
May be in very deed Thine own,
Built on the peerless Corner-stone.

Endue the creatures with Thy grace
That shall adorn Thy dwelling-place;
The beauty of the oak and pine,
The gold and silver, make them Thine.

To Thee they all pertain; to Thee
The treasures of the earth and sea;
And when we bring them to Thy throne,
We but present Thee with Thine own.

Endue the hearts that guide with skill;
Preserve the hands that work from ill;
That we, who these Foundations lay,
May raise the top-stone in its day.

Both now and ever, Lord protect
The Temple of Thine own elect;
Be Thou in these, and they in Thee,
O ever-blessed Trinity!

The singing of this Hymn, the spectators being uncovered, had a very impressive effect.

A Psalm and three other Prayers and Collects were then read, and the Bishop of London addressed the assembly at some length, dwelling on the pious munificence of the lady who had so handsomely contributed to the provision of spiritual instruction through the instrumentality of the Church, in that densely-populated district. Miss Coutts's father (Sir Francis Burdett) had represented that ancient city in Parliament during a course of thirty years, and this new Church would serve to perpetuate his memory. The ancient parish churches and cathedrals had been reared through the Christian liberality of benevolent individuals, but none, he regretted to say, had of late years been equal to the work they were now commencing, and he trusted it would be one of those bright examples which would redound to the strength of the Church and the ultimate security of the country.

The Bishop then pronounced the Blessing; "God save the Queen" was sung, and the congregation dispersed; three cheers being given as they retired from the platform.

A sumptuous collation was given by J. Carter Wood, Esq., at the Grey Coat School Rooms, to which a large party sat down.

The new Church is dedicated to Saint Stephen, and to it has been assigned an ecclesiastical district, hitherto forming part of the extensive parish of Saint John's. To the incumbency, the Bishop of London has, on the nomination of Miss Coutts, licensed the Rev. William Tennant, M.A., formerly curate of Saint John's.

DESCRIPTION OF THE CHURCH.—(See the Engraving.)

The Church of St. Stephen is designed in the style of architecture prevalent in the fourteenth century, called Decorated. It will consist of a nave, 82 feet long by 21 feet wide, aisles 82 feet by 13 feet, chancel 47 by 21 feet; and a massive tower and spire at the east end of the north aisle; the base of the tower being 23 feet square, and the entire height 200 feet.

The materials to be used will be Sneaton rag-stone, for the walls, and Anstone stone for the various dressings and quoins, being similar to that used in the new Houses of Parliament. The roofs will be of British oak, and covered with lead; and the open seating throughout, together with the chancel stalls and screens, will be of Riga wainscot. The Church will be capable of holding about 1000 persons. The tower is to contain a peal of bells.

MISS BURDETT COUTTS.

The schools will be built of the same materials as above described; and will hold 230 boys, and 170 girls. The masters' and mistresses' house is close adjoining these buildings, and designed in a suitable style to the Church. The builders are Messrs. Rigby, of Westminster, under the direction of Mr. R. Ferrey, the architect.

Our representation of the exterior of the Church gives a faithful view of its truly picturesque form and character. The tower and spire, it will be seen, instead of, as is generally the case, rising at one end of the Church, takes its rise near the chancel, and, projecting boldly, forms an imposing feature in the architectural arrangement of the Church. The tower is divided into three stories; at its corners are octagonal turrets, crowned with enriched canopies and crocketed pinnacles; and from these octagonal turrets project the angle buttresses of the tower, the steps of which are crocketed. In the lowest story of the tower is a floriated window of exceedingly beautiful design; in the second is a small plain window; and in the third story are the windows of the belfry. These are each of two lights, having enriched quarrefoils in the upper portions. Massive battlements crown the tower, and a small canopied niche, containing a figure of the patron Saint, fills the space of the centre battlement. A very lofty spire, having three tiers of lights, enriched by crocketing and finials, surmounts the whole.

The body of the Church is divided into nave aisles and chancel; and the entrance into it is through a porch of massive design, having a deeply moulded arch, boldly formed, and richly decorated angle buttresses. The nave is lighted by clerestory windows of two lights each, traceried with quatrefoils in the headings; and the aisles by windows of three lights, having tracery of varied and excellent design in them. The chancel windows also differ in detail, and are of admirable character. The angle buttresses to the chancel are very highly enriched with sunken panelling and crocketing, and terminated in pinnacles. The chancel is further enriched by a pierced battlement of quatrefoils, whilst the heads of the buttresses at the sides are traceried, and have crocketing and finials. The battlements to the nave and aisles are plain mouldings. The base mouldings round the Church are of peculiarly bold and effective design. A trefoil cresting runs along the roofs of the chancel, nave, and porch.

The Schools attached to the Church are of extremely picturesque design, and their gabled roofs and moulded chimnies add much to the appearance and character of the building.

The silver trowel used by the munificent founder on Tuesday has been presented to her by the inhabitants of the district; on it is engraved the following inscription:—

TO MISS ANGELA GEORGINA BURDETT COUTTS,
The Founder of the Church of ST. STEPHEN, Westminster,
This Trowel
presented, as a token of respect and gratitude, by
The Inhabitants of the District,
July 20, 1847.

Mercy and Truth to them that devise good."
PROV. XIV., 22.

Laus Deo.

The Trowel is of beautiful design, and was manufactured by Messrs. Lambert and Rawlings, of Coventry street. It is about one foot in length: upon the back is the above inscription, and the front of the blade bears a nicely engraved representation of the new Church. Upon the handle are emblazoned the armorial bearings of Miss Coutts.

The Mallet is of Amboyna wood, and has an ivory handle. Upon the top is a circular silver plate, inscribed as follows:—"The Foundation-stone of the Church of St. Stephen, Westminster, was laid July 20, 1847, by Miss Angela Burdett Coutts, the Founder."

The following is a Copy of the Inscription enclosed within the Foundation-stone of the Church:—

Hujusce Ædis sacrosanctæ,
Deo, Creatori, Sospitatori, Sanctificatori,
in honorem B. STEPHANI protomartyris, dicatæ, lapidem auspicium posuit
ANGELA GEORGINA BURDETT COUTTS, filia nata minima
FRANCISCI BURDETT, Baronetti,
hujus civitatis Westmonasteriensis
Suffragiis olim in Senatum per XXXI. annos colligati,
eadem illa, pietatis ergo in patrem,
et gratia in Deum observantia,
quam nunc inchoavit sedem,
proprio sumptu exstructam,
ornatam, dotatam,
singulare in hoc seculo tantæ munificentiæ exemplar.
XIII. Prid. Kal. Aug.
A D. MDCCCXLVII.

Miss Angela Georgina Burdett Coutts is youngest daughter of the late Sir Francis Burdett, Bart., of Bramcote, county of Warwick, M.P. for Westminster, by Sophia, his wife, youngest daughter of Thomas Coutts, Esq., the opulent banker of the Strand. Mr. Coutts's other daughters, were Susan, Countess of Guilford (mother of Susan, Baroness North), and Frances, Marchioness of Bute (mother of Lord Dudley Coutts Stuart, and of Viscountess Sandon). Miss Burdett Coutts was born 25th April, 1814, and assumed, by Royal license, in September, 1837, the additional surname and arms of Coutts, having succeeded to the vast property of her grandfather, Mr. Coutts, under the will of that gentleman's widow, the late Duchess of St. Alban's.

Miss Burdett Coutts has one brother, the present Sir Robert Burdett, Bart., who is unmarried; and four sisters, the two elder of whom have been married—viz., Sophia, the widow of the Hon. Robert Otway Cave, and Susannah, wife of John Bettesworth Trevanion, Esq., of Caerhays in Cornwall.

The family of Burdett, enriched by alliances with the houses of Camville of Arrow, Brain of Bramcote, and Fraunceys of Foremark, can be traced to one of the soldiers of the Conquest. In the time of Edward IV., Thomas Burdett, of Arrow, a person of great note and figure in the county of Warwick, fell a victim to his attachment to the Duke of Clarence. Having intemperately rushed the horns of a white buck, which he had heard that the King had killed in his park of Arrow, in the belly of the Monarch's adviser, he was arraigned (nominally for that offence, but really on account of his devotion to Clarence), convicted, and executed for high treason A.D. 1477.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH, WESTMINSTER.—FOUNDED BY MISS BURDETT COUTTS.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF ENGLAND.

MEETING AT NORTHAMPTON.

1847

Heaven speed the Plough! and smile upon the crown
Of Ceres; bless the efforts of all men
Who labour heartfully on dale or down,
The plain luxuriant, or the mountain glen,
Evoking Nature's gifts, till e'en the fan
Teems with abundance, and the general land
Shines worthy of Earth's worthiest citizen,
Who bids the sickle triumph o'er the brand!
Heaven speed the Plough! Fair Nature's shuttle true.
The farmer is her weaver, and the field
Her web and woof! Long ages but renew
Proofs of her power, while rots the warrior's shield.
Rarely hath shame flushed on a nation's brow
Whose honest prayer hath been God speed the Plough!

God speed the Plough! Here in Northampton meet
The sons of Ceres: 'tis her festival.
The peasant, yeoman, and the land's élite,
From cottage, homestead, and baronial hall,
Come with the pride of garden, pen, and stall,
Competitors. E'en Royalty will strive,
Proud of the prize which may to it befal;
Though won by tenant of the humble hive,
Long may such scenes ennoble England fair;
For noble are they—bringing high and low
Into communion worthy as 'tis rare,
Making the heart of honest labour glow.
Heaven shield the enterprise of mine and rail,
And speed the plough, the loom, and freedom's sail.—L.

TUESDAY.

THE Annual Meeting of this great and truly national Society commenced, on Tuesday morning, at Northampton, under the most favourable auspices. As we intimated last week, the Exhibition has surpassed all preceding ones in extent. The railway companies, as became them, led the way, by announcing that they would convey implements, &c., for exhibition at the show-yard, free of charge, from any part of England to Northampton; consequently, a great number of competitors availed themselves of the opportunity; and it is computed that upwards of 500 tons weight of implements and machinery, from all parts of England, and from Scotland, arrived during last week, and were safely delivered at the station, from whence they were carefully removed to the show-yard, under the superintendence of Mr. Roadster, the local agent of Messrs. Pickford and Messrs. Worster and Co., and Mr. T. Shaw, of Northampton. The arrivals of live stock have been also larger than heretofore. An unfortunate accident, on Monday, however, deprived the owner and the Society of a fine animal for the Exhibition. A heifer, belonging to Mr. Newman, a gentleman of property in Gloucestershire, was coming to Northampton, attended by a boy, when a spark from the engine caught the straw with which it was littered, and immediately set the carriage in a blaze. The boy jumped out, and, happily, escaped with a slight burning; but the heifer was so seriously burnt, that it was obliged to be killed on its arrival at Northampton.

The arrangements for the Exhibition, under the direction of Mr. Brandreth Gibbs, were very efficient. The place of exhibition was the Race-course, about half a mile from the town, and the space enclosed for it comprised an area of eighteen acres. It was divided, as usual, into two compartments, one for the implements, and the other for the stock; and contained altogether thirty seven sheds each, about 240 feet long, and arranged in parallel lines, with ample space between for the passage of the visitors. There were also additional stalls for seeds, roots, models, &c., and rooms for the officers of the Society. Around the Exhibition-yard, and about the Race-course, there was a very large congregation of refreshment booths, toy and fruit stalls; shows of all kinds of curiosities, all of which were as gay and brilliant as they could be made by hangings of red, and blue, and yellow cambric, and flags and streamers waving in the sunshine.

At eight o'clock, the Implement Yard was opened to the public. There were but few novel implements; and of the twenty ploughs sent in for exhibition, but eight were allowed to enter into competition for the prizes. The heavy land was so tough and stubborn, on account of the long drought, as to set at nought the efforts of any but the very best implements; and many a harrow and scarifier was broken into pieces, and sent back with its teeth extracted, after a few attempts to cut through the rugged beast. The number of steam engines and steaming apparatus, was greater than at any of the former meetings.

The public exhibition of the working of the light land implements took place on the fields of Mr. Sealy and Mr. Green, adjoining the Race-course; and that of the heavy land implements at the farm of Mr Pickering, of Moulton-park, on the Market-Harborough-road. Both were well attended; and thus the day passed away up to four o'clock. Meantime a considerable number of visitors had collected in the Implement Yard, and the very pretty Exhibition of the Horticultural Society adjoining it. Among them was Sir Harry Smith, who attracted much attention.

Towards the evening, the crowd began to move towards the Race-course; others flocked into the town for dinner, and many for the purpose of attending the Financial Discussion, which the Rev. A. Hazeldine opened "five o'clock, by reading a paper in All Saints' Parochial School-room (the East of Egmont presiding) on the Growth of Turnips by means of Artificial Manures, with a recommendation of particular combinations of manure best adapted to special cases, with remarks on the adulteration of artificial manures, and the best mode of detecting them

The room was very full; and, for upwards of an hour, the reverend gentleman illustrated this novel culture of the Turnip Bones (he maintained) formed the best manure for it; but, as they required a series of years for their decomposition, it was necessary to employ the agency of sulphuric acid to effect it, and the introduction of that agency formed the grand improvement of modern days in the system of manuring. The object they had to insure was, that they should not be cheated in the quality of the acid; and this, the reverend lecturer considered, was, in some degree, effected by the inventions of Messrs. Button, Hall and Co., which would show the specific gravity of the acid. Having entered into a great variety of details as to the value of the manure, and the proper use of its action, he concluded, amid loud applause, by recommending a manure which he would guarantee to produce twenty-five tons of turnips per acre, at a cost of £2 It was composed of four bushels of bones, four cwt. of gypsum, two cwt. of salt, two quarters of ashes, and 30 bushels of wood-ashes wetted with tank water.

Professor Way then came forward to give a scientific outline of the conditions most favourable for promoting the growth of the Turnip, and a chemical explanation of the action of manures employed for that purpose; but his lecture was not so attractive as that of his predecessor. At the conclusion a gentleman rose and proposed a new manure of 4cwlb to the acre, at £1 11s. 6d., being 8s. 6d. less than that proposed by the Rev Mr Huxtable.

The following is the award of the Judges of Implements :—

For the best plough for deep land, £10.—Mr. Busby, of Newton-le-Willows.
For the best plough for light land, £10.—Messrs. Howard and Son, Bedford.
For the best drill for general purpo-es, £15 Messrs. Garrett, Saxmundham.
For the best turnip drill on the flat, £10.—Messrs. Garrett, Saxmundham.
For the best turnip-drill on the ridge, £10.—Messrs. Garrett, Saxmundham.
For the best scarifier, £10. Messrs. Shurman and Co, Wellingborough.
For the best chaff cutter, £10 — Mr Corres, Barbridge, Nantwich
For the best pipe and tile machine, £25.—Sanders, Williams, and Taylor, Bedford
For the best harrows. £5 —Sanders, Williams, and Taylor, Bedford.
For the best drill pressc, £10 Mr. Barnsby, Spittlegate, Grantham.
For the best churn, £5. -Trial deferred.
For the best weighing machine, £10 —Mr. James, Fish street-hill, London.
For the best steaming apparatus, £10. Mr Robinson, Lisburn, Antrim.
For the best skim or paring plough, £5.—Mr. G Kilby, Queensborough.
For the best subsoil pulveriser, £10.—John Read, Regent's-Ireia, London.
For the best horse-seed-dibbler, £10.—Mr. Newberry, Rock Norton, Oxon.
For the best lan-ced crusher, £5 — Trial deferred
For the best one-horse cart, £10 Mr. Stratton, Bristol.
For the best threshing-machine, £10 Messrs. Garrett, Saxmundham.
For the be t drai ning tools for clay land, £5. Mr. Clayton, Upper Park-place, Dorset-square, London
For the best draining tools for friable land, £5.— Messrs. Mapplebeck and Lowe.
For the best draining tools for general draining, £5 —Messrs. Mapplebeck and Lowe

For the best steam-engine, £50 —Mr. Cambridge, Market Lavington, Devizes.
For the best model of rick-yard, £25 Withheld.
For the best drain plough, £25 -Withheld
For the best plan, h to fill in drains, £10.—Withheld
For the best corn dressing machine. £15 —Mr. Cooch, Harleston, Northampton.
For the best set of harness. £5.—Withheld
For the best cart-saddle, £10 —Withheld
For the best broad cast manure distributor, £10.— Mr. Crosskill, Beverley.
For the best grinding-mill, £15 Withheld
For the best clever-seed and rye-grass barrow, silver medal. Mr. Smyth, Peasenhall, Suffolk

For the best fire-engine, silver medal Mr. Read, Regent-terrea, London.
For the best horse draught-rake, silver medal.—Messrs. Garrett, Saxmundham.
For the best gardener's turnip-cutter, silver medal.—Messrs. Mapplebeck and Lowe, Bruning-am
For the best 4-blade-breaker, silver medal—Wedlake and Thompson, Romford
For the best horse hoe, silver medal.—Messrs. Garrett, Saxmundham.

The Morning Chronicle report states:—" Inexplicably enough, the fields and even the very streets are filled with immense swarms of the bright fly, and the beans, &c., are said to show the effects of their ravages already."

The Implement Yard was well attended throughout the day, there being nearly 1500 visitors.

WEDNESDAY.

This morning, the Mayor of Northampton (Mr. Sharpe), gave a déjeuner à la fourchette to several members of the Royal Agricultural Society, the members of the Corporation, and others. Among the company was Sir Harry Smith. Whose health was drunk with enthusiasm.

Among the distinguished visitors who had arrived in the town up to this day were The Duke of Buccleuch, the Duke of Cleveland, Count de Gurney, Chevalier Bunsen, the Hon. Mr. Bancroft (American Minister), the Marquis of Exeter, the Marquis of Northampton, the Marquis of Downshire, the Earl of Egmont, Earl Delaware, the Earl of Yarborough, Earl Spencer, the Earl of Hardwicke, the Earl of Chichester, Viscount Sydney, Viscount Hill, Viscount Newry and Morne, Lord Howard de Walden, Lord Portman, Lord St John, Lord Bridport, Lor Southampton, Lord Forester, the Hon. E. U. Leigh, the Hon. Captain D. Pelham, the Hon. P. Pierrepont, Sir J. Johnstone, Bart, M.P., Sir C. Lemon, Bart., Sir J Aubrey, Bart., Sir Bowater Bart., Sir G. Robinson, Bart, Sir W. O Pell. Bart., Sir H Smith, Bart., Sir F. Head. Bart., Mr P. Pusey, M P., Colonel Austen, M P., Mr W Miles, M.P., Mr. W. G. Hayter, M.P., Mr. H Stuart, M.P., Mr G Hudson, M.P., Mr. T W. Bramston, M.P., Col. Challoner, Col Fitzroy, Col. Gilpin, Mr. H. Wilson, Mr. T. R Barker, Mr. J. V Shelley, Mr. E J. Bosanquet, Mr. W. B. Stopford, Mr. H. Brandreth, Professor Way, Dr. Danberry, Dr. Buckland (of Westminster), &c.

The main business of the day was the examination of the Live Stock and the awarding of the Prizes; the Judges being Lord Portman; Mr. Druce, of Eaaham, Oxon; and Mr. Chandler, Sambridge Bury, Herts.

The total number of lots of animals exhibited was 459. Among the competitors are the Marquis of Northampton, Lord Southampton, Mr. R G Barnard, M.P.; Sir J. Caih.art, Bart., the Bishop of Exeter; Sir C. Knightley, Bart.; Earl Spencer, the Duke of Buccleuch, the Duke of Devonshire, Lord Faversham, Viscount Hill, the Duke of Manchester, the Duke of Buckingham, Lord St. John, the Right Hon. Benjamin Disraeli, Mr David Barclay, Mr. Jos. Pease, the Duke of Richmond, the Earl of Radnor; Mr. Pusey, M.P.; Mr. C. Oldyard, the Speaker of the House of Commons, &c.

In the evening, Mr. Thompson opened a discussion at All Saints' Parochial School-room, by reading a paper on the subject of the comparative advantages and disadvantages of the thick and thin sowing of wheat. The substance of the paper, which detailed the results of numerous experiments respecting the question at issue, was that thick sowing, or from eight to twelve pecks an acre, was far better than thin sowing, or from three to six pecks an acre; and that thin sowing did not answer in bad seasons or in bad seasons. The writer did not think thin sowing good practice, and could not agree with those who believed it would effect a reduction to the amount of £10 000,000 in the resources of the country

At eight o'clock, the Earl of Egmont read the Judges' award of Prizes for Live Stock. We are compelled, by want of space, to quote only the first Prize of each Class.

SHORT HORNS

Class 1.—Bulls calved previously to January 1, 1845.—First prize of £50, to Mr. John Parkinson, of Ley-fields, near Newark, Nottingham, a 4 years 11 months and 3 days old short-horned bull, bred by Mr. Thomas Lax, of Ravensworth, near Richmond, Yorkshire

Class 2.—Bulls calved since January 1, 1845.—First prize of £20, to Mr. William Smith, of West Haseu, Hemel-Hempstead, a 2 years and 6 months old short-horned bull, bred by Mr Thomas Lax, of Ravensworth, York

Class 3.—Cows in milk or in calf.—First prize of £20, to Mr. Richard Booth, of Warlaby, near Northallerton, York, a 3 years, 5 months, and 3 weeks old short-horned cow, bred by himself.

Class 4.—In-calf heifers, not exceeding three years old.—The prize of £15, to Mr Richard Booth, of Warlaby, near Northallerton, York, a 2 years, 3 months, and 3 weeks old short-horned in-calf heifer, bred by himself.

Class 5 —Yearling Heifers.—The prize of £10 was awarded to Mr. Richard Booth, of Warlaby, near Northallerton, York, a 1 year, 4 months, and 2 weeks old short-horned yearling heifer, bred by himself.

HEREFORDS

Class 1.—Bulls calved previously to January 1, 1845.—First prize of £50 to Mr. Samuel Aston, of Lyncham, near Leominster, Hereford, a 3 year and 6 months old Hereford bull, bred by himself

Class 2. —Bulls calved since January 1, 1845 First prize of £20 to Mr George Pitt, of Wellington, near Hereford, Herefordshire, a 1 year and 8 months old Hereford bull, bred by himself.

Class 3.—Cows in milk or in calf —First prize of £20 to Mr. William Allett, of Colt-house, near Peterborough, Northampton, a 5 year and 2 months old in-calf Hereford cow, bred by Mr. Richard Whiteman, of Ashford, Herefordshire.

Class 4 In-calf Heifers.—The prize of £15 to Mr. Edward Williams, of Lowes-court, near Hay, Brecon, a 2 years, 10 months, and 6 days old Hereford in-calf heifer, bred by Mr. John Nelson Carpenter, of Eardisland, Herefordshire

Class 5.—Yearling Heifers.—The prize of £10 to Mr. Samuel Aston, of Lyncham-court, near Leominster, Hereford, a 1 year and 10 months old Hereford yearling heifer, bred by himself.

DEVONS

Class 1.—Bulls calved previously to January 1, 1845.—First prize of £50 to Mr. Thomas Bond, of Bishop's Lydiard, near Taunton, Somerset, a 3 years and 6 months old Devon Bull, bred by Mr Richard Merson, of North Momiton, Devon.

Class 2 —Bulls calved since January 1, 1845.—Prizes withheld on account of want of merit.

Class 3. Cows in milk or in calf —First prize of £20, to his Grace the Duke of Manchester, of Kimbolton Castle, Huntingdon, a 6 years and 3 months old pure Dev n cow, bred by the late Duke of Nuttolk

Class 4.—In-calf Heifers not exceeding 3 years old. The prize of £15 to Mr. Edward Fox, of Shipperton, near Ilminster, Dorset, a 2 years and 4 months old pure Devon heifer, bred by himself.

Class 5 —Yearling Heifers —The prize of £.0 to Mr. James Hole, of Knowle house, near Dunster, Somerset, a 1 year and 4 months old Devon yearling heifer, bred by himself.

CATTLE OF ANY BREED.

Class 1 and 2. —No competition.

Class 3. —Cows in milk or in calf. The prize of £15 to Mr. William Umbers, of Wappenbury, near Leamington Spa, Warwick, for a 6 years and 4 months old in milk pure long-horned cow, bred by himself

Class 5 —Yearling Heifers.—The prize of £10, to the Duke of Buckingham, for a 1 year, 8 months, and 3 days old pure long-horned heifer, bred by his Grace.

HORSES.

Class 1.—Stallions for Agricultural Purposes. First prize of £40, to Mr. F. T. Bryan, of Knossington, Leicestershire, near Oakham, Rutland, a cart stallion, 4 years old, bred by Mr. R. Brown, of Elsworth, Cambridgeshire.

Class 2.—The prize of £20 was withheld for want merit.

Class 3 —Stallions, two years old —The prize of £10, to Viscount Hill, of Hawkstone, Salop, a cart stallion, 2 years old, of the Suffolk breed, bred by his Lordship

Class 4. Mares and Foals for Agricultural Purposes. The first prize of £20, to Mr G. Townshend, of Spcdton, near Hinckley, Leicester, a cart mare and foal.

Class 5. Fillies, 3 years old.—The prize of £10, to Mr. W. Barnes, of Byfield, near Northampton, a 2 year old filly, bred by himself.

LEICESTER SHEEP.

Class 1.—Shearling Rams.—First prize of £40 to Mr. Thomas Edward Pawlett, of Beeston, near Biggleswade, Bedford, a 16th months old Leicester ram, bred by himself.

Class 2.—Rams of any age above two years. —First prize of £30 to Mr. William Sandays, of Holme Pierrepont, near Nottingham, a 40 months old Leicester ram, bred by Mr Robert Burgess, of Cotgrave-place, near Nottingham.

Class 3.—Shearling Ewes.—First prize of £20 to Mr. William Sanday, of Holme Pierrepont, near Nottingham, a pen of five 16th months old Leicester shearling ewes, bred by himself

SOUTH-DOWN SHEEP

Class 1.—Shearling Rams.—First prize of £40 to Mr. Jonas Webb, of Babraham, near Cambridge, a South Down ram, 16 months old, bred by himself.

Class 2.—Rams of any age.—First prize of £30 to Mr. John Harris, of Hinton, near Abingdon, Berks, a South Down ram, 20 months old, bred by himself.

Class 3.—First prize of £20 was awarded to his Grace the Duke of Manchester, of Kimbolton Castle, Huntingdon, a pen of five South Down shearling ewes, 16 months old, bred by his Grace.

LONG WOOLLED SHEEP.

Class 1.—Shearling rams.—First prize of £40 to Mr. Charles Large, of Broadwell, Oxford rise, near Lechdale, Gloucester, a new Oxfordshire long-woolled ram, 16 months old, bred by himself

Class 2. Rams of any age. -First prize of £30, to Mr. Charles Large, of Broadwell, Oxfordshire, near Lechdale, Gloucester, a long woolled new Oxfordshire ram, 40 months old, bred by himself

Class 3 —First prize of £20, to Mr Charles Large, of Broadwell, Oxfordshire, near Lechdale, Gloucester, a pen of five long-woolled new Oxfordshire shearling ewes, 16 months old, bred by himself.

PIGS

Class 1. —Boars of a large breed.—First prize of £15, to Earl Spencer, of Althorp Park, near Northampton, a Berkshire boar, 2 years old, bred by his Lordship.

Class 2 —Boars of a small breed —First prize of £15, to Mr. William Fisher Hobbs, of Boxted Lodge, near Colchester, Essex, an improved Essex boar, 16 months, 3 weeks, and 4 days old, bred by himself

Class 3 —Sows of a large breed.—First prize of £10 to Mr. Moses Cartwright, of Stanton Hill, near Burton-on-Trent, a Tamworth sow, 1 year and seven months old.

Class 4 —Sows of a small breed —The prize of £10, to Mr. William Fisher Hobbs, of Boxted Lodge, near Colchester, Essex, an improved Essex sow, 7 months, 3 weeks, and 4 days old, bred by himself

Class 5.—Pens of breeding sows.—The prize of £10, to the Right Hon the Earl of Radnor, of Coleshill, near Farringdon, Berks, a pen of three Coleshill sow pigs, under 32 weeks old, bred by his Lordship.

Class 6. The prize of £10, to Mr. William Fisher Hobbs, of Boxted Lodge, near Colchester, Essex, for a pen of three improved Essex sow pigs, 7 months, 3 weeks, and 4 days old, bred by himself

There was a lack of exhibitions and entertainments in the town as well as on the race-course, at this Northampton meeting. Mr. Wilson gave their entertainments at the Mechanics' Institute, and Mr. Kivel those at a local artist, assisted by the Dando Family, gave concerts every day at the New Hall, Newland.

Among the many exhibitions unregistered on the race-course around the Society's show-yard, by far the best was that of the United Gardeners' Horticultural Society. The first meeting of this Society was held last year at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and attracted much attention. Horticultural Exhibition takes place in a number of oblong tents, which radiate from a circular one, 100 feet in diameter, as orchestra, and decorated with statues, fountains, &c. (See the Engravings in our Number of this day.) The display of fruit, especially of pines and grapes, was remarkably good; and of flowers, particularly of fuchsias, heaths, and calceolarias, of the very best description.

(Continued on page 60.)

MUSIC.

HOMAGE TO SPOHR.—On Monday afternoon, the Beethoven Quartet Society gave a performance in honour of Spohr, beginning with his Quartet No 3, Op. 4, played by S-hmitz, Blagrove, Hill, and Rousselot. Joachim and Sainton then performed Spohr's Grand Duetto for two violins, in admirable style. The most interesting part was spohr's Double Quartet in E minor, in which Spohr himself led, after an interregnum of nearly four years, having played a Concert no at the Philharmonic Society in 1843. His purity of style and finish of execution were as brilliant as ever. His colleagues were Joachim, Sainton, Goffrie, Hill, W. Thomas, Rousselot and Piatti. The reception given to Spohr by his brother artists, and by the connoisseurs, was most enthusiastic, Jenny Lind applauding most cordially.

SIGNOR MASSONE—His basso gave an Evening Concert at the Princes' Room, on Monday, assisted by Mdlle. Alboni, Mdme. Ronconi, Signori Gardoni, Tamburini, and Marras. The solo instrumentalists were Mdlle Clauss Pagliardini (piano), Herr Solbeck (clarionet), and Signor Piatti (violoncello.) Signori Alary, Festa, and Bit tia were the accompanyists.

CONCERT FOR THE ST. MARK'S HOSPITAL.—An excellent Morning Concert was given on Wednesday at the Hanover-square Rooms, in aid of the funds of St. Mary's Hospital, Cambridge-place, Paddington, under the patronage o her Majesty, the Prince Consort, the Duke and Prince George of Cambridge.

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY.—Yesterday evening (Friday) the oratorio of the "Last Judgment," the cantata of the "Christian's Prayer," and the 54th Psalm, composed and conducted by "the Legend's Song." The melody of the former composition, which is in E flat, common time, is pleasing, and the accompaniments are elegant. The song of the Brigand is vigorous in style. The two remaining pieces, "Sweet Rose of Life" and "Oh, how we forget," are well calculated for amateurs, the melody of the first being by Douizetti, and the second by Mr. E. Morton, who is the poet in both instances. We should imagine that, if quality be as well attended to in the forthcoming numbers of the part before us, the quantity given must render the undertaking quite successful.

THE GILBERT FOLKS. Z. T. Purday

This lively polka is composed by Mr. W. Collins, Band-Master of the Royal Artillery, and is inscribed to Captain Gilbert (Royal Horse Artillery).

HUMAN FOR THE LAND, MOTHER EARTH; OR, THE BRITISH FARMER'S SONG. By J. F. KLITZ. Lawson.

This is an occasional inspiration provoked by the visit of the Royal Agricultural Society of England to Northampton during the present week. The poetry is by Mr. Esq., and the music by Mr. Klitz, a redolent professor in that town. It is dedicated to Earl Spencer. It is a characteristic composition, well adapted to inspire the heart of the English farmer.

THE STANDARD LYRIC DRAMA. Boosey and Co.

The first part of a very excellent publication. It has just been given to the world under the above title. It contains fifty-two pages of engraved music, small quarto. Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" is commenced in th s part, the musical portion being edited by W. S. Rockstro, and t e English text by Mr. J. Wray Monid. It is proposed to issue a collection of the best operas of the most eminent composers, in succession, comprising both the ancient and modern school From the specimen before us, we augur well for the success of the speculation. The explanatory notes have been prepared with great care. The instrumentation of each piece is carefully indicated; and at the head of every scene is a description of the action, as a key to the musical situation. It will be a most convenient portable edition for amateurs to take to the theatre and concert-room, desirous of following the opera with a pianoforte and vocal score, as the words are given, both in Italian and English It is announced that from time to five operas are to be completed in one year, and as each monthly part is priced only at half-a-crown, the formation of a good lyric library at a small cost is attainable.

THE MUSIC-BOOK, Part IX.

This publication, edited by Mrs. G. A Becker, has reached its ninth part, with the following specimens of its first volume in view. The present part contains two songs, "How are t ou chang d," the words by Maria Weaver, and the music by Mr. Alfred Mellon, the leader of the t allet at the Royal Italian Opera; and "I will sing no song of sorrow," the words by Mark Lemon, the music by Mr. J. L Hatton. Mr. Mellon's work is a plaintive melody, with a graceful accompaniment; and Mr. Hatton's song is well contrasted by its cheerfulness.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

The past week has been fertile in events at her Majesty's Theatre. The revival of the mechanical "Pas de Quatre," given for the first time in London, on account of the departure of Carlotta Grisi: the rentrée of Taglioni, as graceful, as spectral as ever, as ever pre-eminent, even when surrounded by danseuses enjoying the prestige of youth and good looks, have given to the ballet an importance which could only be eclipsed by so great a musical event as the production of a new Italian opera, written for our Anglo-Italian stage—a circumstance as rare as it is interesting. We must, however, speak of these things in order, especially as their due importance has hardly this year been assigned to the admirable choreographic productions at this theatre, on account of the still greater brilliancy of the star which has risen on the horizon of the musical world—Jenny Lind. Nothing could exceed the enthusiasm with which the four danseuses were welcomed, on Saturday, as they came forth together, part of which was, no doubt, created by the appearance of Taglioni for the first time this year. As she ascended as of old across the stage the thunders of applause testified that the Déesse de la Danse had lost nothing. In the exquisite grace of her movements, and in certain steps, resembling floating rather than dancing, she is still unapproached, and unapproachable. Carlotta Grisi, whose style of dancing resembles hers more than any other of her sisters in art, although she possesses extraordinary excellence peculiar to herself, came next in order. Least, perhaps, could exceed the enthusiasm with which the four danseuses were welcomed, on Saturday, as they came forth together, part of which was, no doubt, created by the appearance of Taglioni for the first time this year. As she ascended as of old across the stage the thunders of applause testified that the Déesse de la Danse had lost nothing. In the exquisite grace of her movements, and in certain steps, resembling floating rather than dancing, she is still unapproached, and unapproachable. Carlotta Grisi, whose style of dancing resembles hers more than any other of her sisters in art, although she possesses extraordinary excellence peculiar to herself, came next in order. Least, perhaps, English in the character of steps we have just mentioned. Nothing could be more perfect, however, than the succession of steps which la Carlotta introduced, in which she alights on the point of one toe with the most graceful grace of attitude truly admirable. Cerito, with her bounding flying movements, was as wonderful as ever; while Rosati, thus brought into contrast with the greatest dancers in the world, gained even more than her share of applause, and showed herself worthy the high rank in her art she has thus attained.

We subjoin an account of the plot of Verdi's new Opera, "I Masnadieri," purposing, as space will not allow us at present to do so, to analyse the music in our next number. It is taken from Schiller's well-known trag dy, "The Robbers," the principal incidents and crimes, which, if they are un pplly not untrue to human nature, are yet better calculated for a certain theatrical representation, and cannot be considered as within the scope of the tragic art. With all this, however, for the groundwork of an opera, it is exceedingly effective, and admirably suited to the character of Verdi's music, which is here wielded in the ex rems, and somewhat excels the masterpieces of Meyerbeer and other composers of the German "Romantic School" of Music. To return to the plot—Two brothers, Carlo (Gardoni), and Francesco (Coletti), the sons of Massimiliano Moor (Lablache), an old Bavarian noble. The younger, Francesco, filled with jealousy and hatred of the elder, contrives first-born, poisons his father's heart against him. Carlo is driven forth from the home, becomes desperate, and at length joins a band of robbers. Francesco, impatient to reap the fruits of his wickedness, then announces to the old man, by a pretended messenger and companion of Carlo, the death of his eldest son on the field of battle—a wicked fabrication intended to accelerate the old man's end. Massimiliano faints on hearing the intelligence, but the arrival of the pretended messenger, the infamous Francesco orders his confinement, to confine his feelings, and to conceal from whence he may be starved to death The resolutions of Armano to accomplish this parricidal act, both long and heavy, to prolong the life of the old man's life, by carrying him food from time to time. Meanwhile, Francesco hopes to marry Amalia (Mdlle. Jenny Lind), the betrothed wife of Carlo, to become his bride; but she indignantly refuses, and, spurning a present of a poignard from his vest, menaces him with it should he persist in pressing his odious suit. At length she accidentally meets with Carlo, and the lovers enjoy a few moments of exquisite happiness, until the unfortunate maiden discovers that she is ignorant, in connection with the vile band of outlaws, who must for ever separate him from her. Distracted with melancholy thoughts, he is wandering in one of the wildest parts of the forest, when the murderers Armano (acting fond to his father, who is confined in a cave close at hand. his drags the old man, forth, and earns the atrocious indeed of his brother. Inflamed with a frantic desire for vengeance, he wakes the sleeping band, and, placing around them a number of horror, of melancholy, and tenderness, watch the subject a seriously excites.

This opera was highly successful. The talented maestro, on appearing in the orchestra to conduct his overture, was received with the loudest bursts of applause. He was called before the curtain after the first and third acts, and at the conclusion of the opera, amidst the most vehement applause. The house was crowded to excess, and was honoured by the presence of their Majesty and Prince Albert, the Queen Dowager, and the Duchess of Cambridge.

The following are the most scenes fal pieces in the first act:—The introduction, in which there is a chorus, sung by the Bavarian nobles, accompanied by Piatti; Gardoni's aria, "O mio castel paterno," after which he was recalled, the beautiful aria, deliciously accompanied by the wind instruments, "Lo, ricordi," generally sung by Jenny Lind, which, as usual, elicited from one of those marvellous cadences which none can equal, the quartet, "Tigre iersce"

In the second act, the charming aria, with harp accompaniment, "Volasti alma beata," the cabaletta of which was encored; and the splendid chorus, "in parad.i."

In the last act, the duetting, "Ma un'ri d pace," and a very original and clever chorus, "La ruina gli sospiri," which contains a variety of styles, and which we are sure will be a great favourite, and the finale, in which there is a fine passage for the basses. In le last act, the duet between Lablache and Gardoni, "Colui, l'hai," which was encored, and the grand scena "Parenti che sarà," magnificently given by Coletti, and the finale. Al. the artistes sung in their best style, and Jenny Lind delighted the audience with several new, original, and charming morceaux, which will no doubt become popular airs.

To succeed Verdi's new opera, as soon as it has run a few nights of its triumphant career, one of the most popular of the old lyrical dramas is in rehearsal—"Le Nozze di Figaro," in which Jenny Lind will appear in the principal character; since, not only will it include Lind, as Susanna; Castellan, as the Countess; but the greatest of living bass Coletti, as the Count; Lablache, Figaro; and Staudigl, Bartolo.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Rossini's "Semiramide" was given on Saturday night, and was brilliantly performed, in presence of a numerous auditory, the exertions of Grisi, Alboni, Tamburini, Lavia, and Tagliafico bein g deservedly applauded.

On Tuesday, Verdi's "Ernani" was represented for the second time, a new tenor, Signor Bettini, making his debut as the hero. This artist is a native of Milan, who has been singing at the Académie Royal de Musique, in Paris, with much success; and has also been performing at Lisbon, with, we may take a high position in the profession, as he is young in his career. He was much applauded in the opening cavatina, and in the trio finale in the last act. Mdlle. Steffanoni made a considerable debut in the character of the Addolorata. Her unpleasant acting and brilliant singing. She is one of the most promising of the rising prime donne. The Carlo Quinto of Alboni, and the Gomez of Marini, completed all the cast. After "Ernani" the ballet of Mdlle. Duvernai pas "Beauty," in "questo semi zio," creating a perfect furore. Nothing can be more charming than her pyrolean variations. She was compelled to repeat the entire scena, amidst the most plaudits from the House of fashionable amateurs

The great event of the week, and we might also add, of the season, was the production of Mozart's glorious work, "Le Nozze di Figaro," with the following superb cast: Count Almaviva, Tamburini; Countess, Mdlle. Steffanoni; Susanna, Grisi; Figaro, Signor Marini; Cherubino, (the Page), Mdlle. Alboni; Dr. Bartolo, Signor Rovere; Basilio, Signor Lavia; Antonio, (the gardener), Signor Polonini; and Marcellina, Mdme. Bellini. Unusual pains had been taken by Mr. Costa, in the rehearsals of this opera, and a finer performance was never witnessed. Mozart composed the "Nozze" in 1786. The libretto was adapted by Da Ponte, who wrote the same for Storace, from Beaumarchais' celebrated comedy. Kelly, in his memoirs, has given an interesting account of the first representation, and Mr. Holmes, in his "Life of Mozart," has also supplied copious details. Mozart composed the Nozze in Vienna, unknown to this country, was included in the original cast. The "Nozze" is remarkable for its dazzling spirit, the elegance and spontaneity of the melodies, and the variety pied richness of the concerted pieces, which are full of life and descriptive from beginning to end; the sound is always an echo to the sense. It requires the finest executants to do justice to the elaborate accompaniment

He last wrote in all twenty-nine pieces, with the additional air "Al Desio" for the Countess, composed after the performance. Originally the opera was divided into four acts, but it is now the custom to play it in two, with the exclusion of the part of Barbarina, and the blending of Don Curzio into that of Basilio. In the first act, the following are the prominent pieces:—The duo between Susanna and Figaro, "Cinque dieci;" the cavatina, "Se vuol ballare," and the aria, "Non più andrai," of Figaro; the two airs of Cherubino, "Non si più," and "Voi che sapete;" the "Vendetta," of Bartolo; the terzetto, "Cosa sento," the chorus,

"Giovani liet;" the aria of the Countess, "Porgi, amor;" the aria of Susanna, "Vanite, ingiocchiatevi;" the terzetto, "Susanna, or via sortite;" the duette, "Aprite, presto aprite," between the Page and Susanna, and the splendid finale, "Ecco ridente;" In the second act is the duetto "Crudel perche;" the air of the Countess, "Dove sono;" the duo, "Sull' aria," between the Countess and Susanna; the aria "In quegli anni," of Basilio, the air, "Tutto e disposto," of Figaro; and the finale "Pian." In the mention of the above morceaux, the concert frequenter and the cultivated amateur will immediately recall to the mind a host of vocal gems that have passed their pop ularity for upwards of sixty years. Mr. Holmes has eloquently remarked on this fact:—"While all the popular melodies of the same opera have vanished with it, Figaro (tunes which are regularly transferred from the theatre to the street musicians) are last, not a note of that composition has faded; and when re-produced it still finds as many enthusiastic admirers as a comedy of Shakspeare."

There is no opera by Mozart in which his individuality is more strongly impressed than in his "Nozze di Figaro." It is impossible to mistake the style. And yet afterwards, when his "Don Giovanni" was given to the world, his forms and ideas were traced to their parent-source It was the "Figaro" which revolutionised the operatic world, and the orchestra became the pedestal for the drama. One of its most astonishing attributes is that it is as delightful to the multitude as for the musicians the latter revel in the gorgeous concert-room, but the former exult, at the same time, in the exquisite melodious imagery.

Every dramatic situation is, in fact, musical; therefore the instrumentation is in turns playful, satiric, joyous, mournful, and martial. What can be more heart-stirring than Figaro's appeal to military glory? What more touching than the Countess' lament for her husband's lost affection? How exhilarating the malicious is the cry of vengeance of Bartolo! How deliciously sentimental is the Page's description of love's distress! What inexhaustible changes are there in the finales! How climax is heaped upon climax! What constant surprises! How charming melodiously every moment assail the ear!

We can afford but a few lines to Thursday's performance, in our present notice. The opening overture, wonderfully played, was the first encore, and then Alboni in the lovely air "Non so piu;" next Marini, most rapturously, in "Non piu andrai," which he gave with such electrical effect as to call for a separate oration after the encore; and then Alboni, for her stirring singing of the "Voi che sapete." As the end of the first act, Grisi, Alboni, Steffanoni, Marini, Tamburini, Rovere, &c., were called before the curtain. In the second act, the duo between Grisi and Tamburini, "Crudel perche," was fervently encored. Finally, the popular letter duo, "Sull' aria," charmingly warbled by Grisi and Stedanoni, making altogether six encores, besides the honours paid to the artists by being called on.

Marini's Figaro was the great hit of the evening, after Alboni's Cherubino, a most lively piece of acting as well as vocalisation was the singing. Mdlle. Steffanoni's Countess was lady-like and graceful, and her "Dove sono" was nicely rendered. Lavia deserves a so praise for his artistical style of giving Basilio's air, Rovere for his "Vendetta," and Tagliafici for his air in the second act.

After the opera, a very pretty ballet was produced, composed by Signor Casati, the inventor of "Manon Lescaut," with music by Signor Curmi. It is called the "Rose," a well-known flower in villages on the Continent, where the best-conducted maiden for the year is crowned with a white wreath, and receives a marriage portion. Casati has placed his scene in Switzerland, and he makes Mdlle. Fanny (Madame Casella's pupil), one of the most effective pas we have ever witnessed, and brought down imuse so applause. The house was crowded to excess.

HAYMARKET

We have all—at least all of us who are playgoers—many pleasant recollections connected with Mr. Buckstone's name. In former years we remember the excitement which such a new Adelphi drama was looked forward to, whereon we had that "the principal characters would be supported by Messrs. Yates, Buckstone, O. Smith, J. R. Reeve, Wielding, Wilkinson, &c.; Mesdames Yates, Fitzwilliam, Keeley, &c." And we laughed almost in anticipation at the ace and wit which Mr. Buckstone and Mr. John Reeve we were sure would play so admirably together the coming scene beneath the wintry moonlight in the "Wreck Ashore" the tipsy quarrel of the singe men in "Isabella" the scene in which Blanc dressed Mr. Bunsens for his party, in "Victorine"—with others of the same broad humour, which alternated so well with the deep pathos of the various portions of the plays. We have few of these dramas now. Occasionally Mr. Buckstone still produces one, and it accomplishes a long run; such, for instance, as "The Green Bushes," and "The Flowers of the Forest;" but we fancy that the laughter in these natural rounds than when it recognised Jemmy Green's appeal to the parochial dignity against the pirate's gallantry evi coo toward—his wife—but the interest is less intense and breathless than was created by the death of Alice in Alice's lonely cottage in the Essex Marshes. And then only our own feelings have become somewhat toned down or clouded since then, but we are loth to laugh as this so be the case. We would rather throw the change upon other causes, as the old gentleman did who complained they produced pieces less and less clearly every day.

For all these bygone pleasures, however, we have to thank Mr Buckstone, and for many a merry hour since, as he has sent us laughing from the play-market at midnight, when no one else could have kept us in good humour, play ng as out with a smile upon our faces that was lasted in the way home, and been called up pleasantly again the next day.

No wonder then that such an overflowing house greeted him on Wednesday, on the occasion of his farewell benefit, previous to leaving the Ve y Pretty Theatre in the Lycæum in October; less work and a higher salary being, as we hear, the chief inducements to the change. Mr. Buckstone had been at the Haymarket since 1834, and produced there "Married Life," "Single Life," "Wedding Day," "The Irish Lion," "The Happiest Day of My Life," "Uncle John," "Rural Felicity," "John Jones," "Second Thoughts," "A Lesson for Ladies," "A hasband in the Dark," and many scores that still hold possession of the stage. Apart from these claims upon the public, and an attractive bill, his introduction of the son of the late lamented John Reeve created considerable curiosity. He made his bow as Bob Dancey, in "The Unfinished Gentleman," and, at first, seemed somewhat nervous, but the hearty cheering that greeted him from all parts of the house gave him confidence. We were told that he is very like what his father was, at his age. He evidently possesses much natural humour, and a flow of animal spirits; sings and dances well, and when practice shall have taught him the conventional business of the stage, and the art of modulating his voice, will be an exceedingly droll fellow. He goes, we understand, into the provinces for the necessary probation; and we have little doubt but that we shall shortly see him again at a London theatre. His song of "My Lord Tom Noddy" was loudly encored. He possesses a good voice, and has all the qualifications for forming a first-rate comic actor. At the conclusion of the play he was loudly call d for; and, on being led on by Mr. Buckstone, was warmly cheered; an involuntary shake of the hand by his father's old friend and fellow-actor creating increased sensation.

The characters in which Mr. Buckstone appeared were James, the "tiger" in the above piece; John Buck, in "The Jacobite;" and, for the first time, Scrub, in "The Beaux Stratagem." He had to appear again after "The Jacobite," and was received with extraordinary enthusiasm, the pit and galleries waving their hats, and shouting they never could give sufficient utterance to their satisfaction. The house was crammed to the roof: the Earl of Granville, Earl of Charleville, the Marquis of Clanricarde, Lord Saughs, Mr. Newdegate, M.P., and a large company of fashionables, occupying the private boxes. Of Mr. Buckstone's merits as an actor, it is useless to speak. Everybody knows him, and everybody allows him to be the funniest gentleman upon the stage.

The performances on Monday will be for the Benefit of Mr. J. M. Stephens, of the Free List.

On Saturday, the season will close with a variety of performances, for the Benefit of Mr. Webster, the very spirited lessee of the Theatre.

LYCEUM.

There is very little to complain of in the management of this theatre, as regards activity: one or two new pieces a week show that both energy and liberality are evinced, to accomplish success; the only obstacles being the inevitable ones of a limited leading name or two in the bills, to be supported by a really good general company.

"Fleur-de-Lys, or Love's sacrifice," is the title of the new two-act drama, produced with much success, at this theatre, last Monday, to be noticed more to be aught else than a stirring melodrama, aiming at being effective and hitting its mark. There is nothing very novel about it, neither is there any attempt at refined analysis of character, or lofty poetical sentiment. It interests: there is not one of the audience who does not follow with real anxiety the fortunes of the heroine; and as we heard the hearty bursts of honest enthusiasm which welcomed the denouement and the ultimate triumph of the lovers, we felt that though the story was old, it was good, and had in it that which stirred the hearts of the listeners. The scene is laid at the opening of the French Revolution, just as the grand outbreak of popular frenzy hurried the so-blesse to the earth, and with it all the power and prestige of the old aristocracy of France. Fleur-de-Lys, a Parisian grisette, has found favour in the sight of Floridor, an officer of the Swiss Guards who manages to get into the Bastile, and there menaces her with and oubliette, if she refuses to give up her lover for him. Floridor is playing a double game—aiming at a marriage of interest and a liaison to meet it more pleasantly. We need not follow the intrigue into all its ramifications. Suffice it to say that Floridor is foiled in every attempt to accomplish his purpose; and that, when matters have been worked up to a climax, Fleur-de-Lys is rescued by the captors of the Bastile, headed by her lover.

The piece was cast ially played. Miss Daly's Fleur-de-Lys was an impassioned and impressive piece of acting, and Mr Emery and Mr. Leigh Murray—the former as a ruffianly sapper, devoted to the aristocratical rout, and the latter as Fleur-de-Lys' lover—were excellent, each in his way. The comic business was entrusted to Mr. Xberry and Mr. George Wild, both of whom carried out the objects of their characters admirably. A word of praise for the getting up of the piece, especially the last scene, which is one of the best pieces of stage effect we have seen for some time.

"Fleur-de-Lys" is a joint production, the authors being Mr. Angus Reach and Mr. H. Hamilton. The fashion of writing in pairs, borrowed from the French dramatists, is becoming common here, and has been, to all appearances, generally attended with success.

THE SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS could not, literally, contain the visitors on Wednesday, on the occasion of the Floricultural Show. When we were present, in the evening, upwards of two thousand persons had assembled, and moving about the grounds, in any direction, became a matter of some difficulty. M. Jullien's Monster Band gave the greatest set election; and the company generally were so anxious to witness the Siege of Gibraltar, that all the galleries were fit ed at least an hour before the commencement of the spectacle. The reflection of the illuminated bridge in the water is one of the most pleasing features of this popular resort.

VAUXHALL is doing equally well, and, on Monday last, was visited by a longer list of Royal and noble personages than our space will permit us to chronicle. As we surmised last week, the equestrial, we believe, take place there; and the equestrianate drama will have as fair a chance as will opera, ballet, or promenade concerts.

There is a report in dramatic circles that Mr. Bunn will be the future manager of the Surrey. If so, he will have the finest theatrical property in London, and, with his tact and experience, may render it second to none of the other houses.

Mr. and Mrs. Keeley have been playing to capital houses at Yarmouth. Last week, whilst a procession in "The Governor's Wife" was being rehearsed, previously to the curtain rising, a man habited as a slave got near one of the wings; and his dress, which was of light cotton, caught fire from one of the lights, and burst into flame. Mrs. Keeley jumped instantly from the palanquin, in which she had been seated, caught the man in her arms, and extinguished the flame without injury to herself. The back part of the dress was entirely destroyed.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"J. T." Glasgow—Enigmas Nos. 179, 180, and 181, are quite correct. Try them again. In No. 174, it is Black, not White, who is to effect the mate; and of 175, the solution shall be given in our next, if you find meanwhile to hit upon the key

"Sopranist."—See the solution to No 182, in the present Number. If, after another trial, you cannot succeed with Enigmas Nos. 179 and 181, the solutions shall appear.

"F. L. G."—A player can have two or more queens upon the board at once. "A" is therefore in error.

"G. N. T."—Early application should be made for the back Volumes of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle:" some of the Numbers are already out of print

"R. B. S."—We have no means of testing precisely; but our impression is that the circulation of the English Chess Magazine, now, is at least double that of any other periodical of the same nature

"F. L. N."—Stanley's American Chess publication can be obtained through Messrs. Piley and Putnam. Its Editor is unquestionably the best player in the United States. The third query is unanswerable

"Squamus."—Your ideas has been anticipated. It is intended that the Second Edition shall contain a critical and biographical analysis of the most eminent author in the Game

Solutions by "G. A. H." "E. G. D." "Philo-Chess." "Troll." "Statlus," "M. P." "Comus," "R. B. S." "P. P. W." and "A. D. A." are correct.

 Any Amateur desirous of playing a Game of Chess by Correspondence, may hear of an opponent by addressing "K. Y. Z." 20, Bennett's Hill, Birmingham.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 182.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. B to Q Kt 4th	B to K 4th (best)	3 R takes R P (ch)	B takes R
2. B to Q 2nd	B to K R 3rd (best)	4. B to K R 6th

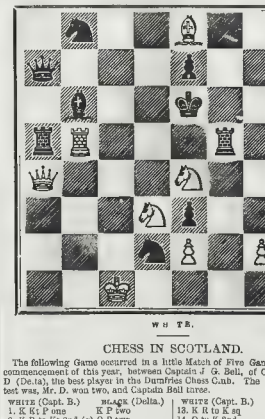
Checkmate.

PROBLEM, NO. 183.

By W. H. C.

White playing first to mate in five moves.

BLACK.



WHITE.

CHESS IN SCOTLAND.

The following Game occurred in a little Match of Five Games played at the commencement of this year, between Captain J. G. Bell, of Cumnock, and Mr D (De.la), the best player in the Dumfries Chess Club. The result of the contest was, Mr. D. won two, and Captain Bell nine.

WHITE (Capt. B.)	BLACK (Della.)	WHITE (Capt. B.)	BLACK (Della.)
1. K Pt P one	K P two	17. R to K sq	Q B to K 3rd
2. K B to Kt 2nd (a)	Q P two	18. Q to K 2nd	K R P one
3. Q Kt P one	Q B P two	19. Kt to Q 3rd	Q to 2nd
4. Q P one	Q Kt to B 3rd	20. Q Kt to R 3rd	K Kt P two
5. Q B P two	Q P one	21. K to R sq	Castles on Q side
6. B takes Kt (ch)	P takes B	22. Q to K 2nd	K Kt to Kt sq
7. K P two	K Kt to B 3rd	23. Q to K 6th	Kt to K 6th
8. K B P two	P takes P	24. Kt takes Kt	K B P two
9. B takes P	K Kt to his 5th	25. P takes P (en pass)	B takes K Kt P
10. K Kt to B 3rd	K B to Q 3rd	26. B takes Kt (b)	R takes B
11. K P one	Q to K 2nd	27. Q to K Kt 2nd	B takes Kt
12. Castles	K B to Q B 2nd	28. Q to K R 2nd	Q takes B P

White resigns (c).

(a) For an analysis of this peculiar opening, which the Italians call "The Fanesetto. (See page 379 of the new "Handbook."

(b.) Better to have taken the Bishop, although the attack must, in any case, have proved formidable

(c) The terminating moves of this brief affair are smartly played by Black.

GAME BETWEEN MR HORWITZ AND A MEMBER OF THE LONDON CHESS CLUB.

BLACK (Mr. H.)	WHITE. (Mr. M.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)	WHITE. (Mr. M.)
1. K P two	K P two	18. Q B to Q R 3rd	Q B P two (a)
2. K B P two	P takes P	19. Kt to Q 2d	Q Kt to R 3d
3. B to Q B 4th	Q checks	20. Q B to Kt 2d	Q to her B 2d
4. K to B sq	K Kt P two	21. K to R sq	R to Q sq (b)
5. Q Kt to B 3d	B to K Kt 2d	22. Kt to Q 5th	Kt to his 5th
6. Q P two	Q P one	23. Kt to Q 6th (ch)	K to Kt sq
7. K P one	P takes P	24. B takes K B P	R takes B
8. Kt to Q 5th	K to Q sq	25. Kt takes R	Q B to K 3rd
9. P takes P	B to Q 2d	26. Kt to Q 8th	Q to K 3rd
10. K Kt to B 3d	Q to K R 4th	27. Kt takes B	Q takes Kt
11. K R P two	K R P one	28. Q to her 5th (ch)	Q to B sq
12. Kt to Kt sq	Q to K Kt 2d	29. Q to K 7th	B to his sq (c)
13. K B P one	Q to Q B 3d	30. Q to K 8 6th	Kt to Q 4th
14. Q Kt P one	K Kt to K 2d	31. Q to K B 7th	Kt to Q B 2nd
15. K to R 2d	Kt takes Kt	32. K P one	Q to K sq
16. B takes Kt	Q to her Kt 3d	33. Q takes Q (ch)	Kt takes Q
17. R to K sq	R to K B sq	34. K P one

And White resigns.

(a) Up to this stage, White retains his numerical superiority of force without any marked disadvantage in position.

(b) If Q R is comparatively useless all this time.

(c) B to K R sq appears to be better play.

STOUTLY-CONTESTED GAME JUST PLAYED AT THE ST. GEORGE'S CLUB, BETWEEN MR TUCKETT AND MR HARRWITZ

WHITE (Mr. T.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)	WHITE (Mr. T.)	BLACK (Mr H)
1. K P two	K P two	29. Q to Q B 3rd	Q P one
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	30. Q to K Kt 3rd	Q to K 2nd
3. Q P two	P takes P	31. R to K 4th	K B P one
4. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	32. P takes P (ch)	K takes P
5. Q B P one	K Kt to B 3rd	33. Kt to K Kt 4th	B takes Kt
6. K P one	Q P two (a)	34. B takes B	R to K 6th
7. B to Q Kt 3rd	K Kt to K 2nd	35. Q to K B 3rd	Q to K 3rd
8. K Kt takes P	Q B to Q 3rd (b)	36. R to K 5th	Q takes P (ch)
9. B takes Kt	P takes B	37. K to Kt sq	Q to K 5th
10. Castles	K B to Q Kt 3d (c)	38. R to Q sq	Q to K 6th
11. Q R P two	Q R P two	39. Kt to K B 3rd	Q P one
12. Q Kt to Q 2nd	K Kt to Q B 4th	40. R takes K R P
13. Q to her 2nd	Castles	(ch) (f)	K to Kt sq
14. K R P one	Q Kt to K sq	41. R to Q 7th	Q to K 6th
15. Q R P two	K R to K sq	42. R to K B 3rd	Q to K 5th
16. Q R to Q sq	Q R to Q sq	43. R to Kt sq	Q to K 6th
17. Q to Q sq	K B to Q B 4th	44. P takes Kt	Q takes P (ch)
18. B takes B (e)	Kt takes B	45. K to corner	Kt to K 7th
19. Kt to K 4th	Q to K 3rd		And wins.
20. Q to Kt 3rd	Q to K 2nd
21. Kt to Q 6th	Q to Q B 3rd
22. Kt to K B 5th	Q to Q 3rd
23. Kt to K 4th	Q to Q B 3rd
24. Kt to K B 5th	Q to Q 3rd
25. Kt to K 4th	Q to Q B 3rd
26. Kt to K B 5th	Q to Q 3rd
27. Kt to K 4th	Q to Q B 3rd
28. Kt to K B 5th	Q to Q 3rd

(a) We have now the same position precisely as to the regular "Giuoco Piano" opening.

(b) If Black in this situation takes off the K Kt, he is subject to some embarrassment to find a place of safety for his own K Kt, when White, after Castling, plays his K B P one sq.

(c) To make an exit for the Kt about White attack in which his K B P, and the Kt, do admi. the advance of the doubled pawn.

(d) A fine attack was obtainable at this point by playing Pt. Q Kt to K 4th, and, if Black took the Bishop, K Kt to B 6th (ch &c)

(e) Threatening now to take the Kt with his R, and thus win a piece.

(f) A tempting bait, but the opponent is much too wary to be caught by it.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

(HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.)

No. 185.—By Mr. J. B. ESSERT.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at his 8th	K at his 8 Th	Kt at K 8 3rd
K at Q sq		K at K B 3rd
		Q at her 8th
		R at Q Kt 8th
		B at Q Kt 7th
		P at Q R 6th

White to move and mate in two moves.

No. 186.—By an AMATEUR.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q B sq	K at Q R 4th	K at Q Kt 4th	B at K 4th
Q at K Kt 2nd	R at K R 7th		P at Q K 6th

White can Mate in two moves.

No 187.—By Mr. S. BODEN.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q B sq	K at his 5th	Kt at K Kt 6th
R at Q 8th		P at K 2nd
B at Q 4th		White playing first Mates in three moves

THE LATE EXPLOSION OF GUN-COTTON, AT FAVERSHAM.

(To the Editor.)

It appears to me that the manufacture of Gun-Cotton must always be attended with a most alarming amount of risk, such as is entirely prohibited to being made on a large scale for general use. You will recollect when all the amateurs of science and chemistry were occupied in repeating the wonderful discovery of Professor Schönbein; that many curious and interesting experiments were published at var ous times of peculiar charac ers exhibited by this remarkable compound. In some instances, combustion or explosion was spontaneous; in others, rapid combustion or explosi n did not t ke place under the usual circumstances. Now these phenomena demonstrate one very important fact, viz.—that in the manufacture of Gun-Cotton, although apparently under precise y the same circumstances, it is possible to produce two or more samples differing greatly in their explosive qualities; in other words, an organic chemical compound, although constituted of precisely the same elements, will occasionally possess characters widely distinct. In all chemical combinations constituted of organic elements, when the atoms are allowed to arrange themselves in the cold and fluid state, it is quite impossible to say for certain that, in the case of two experiments, the results shall be precisely alike. The following important and extremely interesting fact in relation to the manufacture of Gun Cotton occurred under my own notice:—

A gentleman of my acquaintance was engaged in the manufacture of Gun-Cotton. When he had arrived at that stage if the process at which the cotton, after being subject to the action of the acid, is immersed in pure water, he was suddenly called away; on his return, after being absent a month or two, not a particle of anything having the shape or character of cotton could be found; all that remained was a small quantity of black matter or charcoal. In this case, it will be seen, the atomic arrangement and affinity were so extremely feeble, that combustion or explosion actually occurred, although the compound was saturated with water.

The fact is alone sufficient to prove that great danger must always attend the manufacture of Gun-Cotton to those not acquainted with the history of chemistry. It may be useful and amusing to mention two accidents which occurred to the distinguished French che. ist, M. Dulong, wh ist experimenting with a very explosive compound prepared with iodine and ammonia. In the first instance, although a small quantity of the compound was used, he had three fingers torn from one hand. Immediate y after his recovery, he returned eagerly again to the same investigation, and in the next experiment had one of his eyes blown out. Such is another illustration of the extreme instability in preparing an explosive compound. When the elements combine in the cold and fluid state, at one time, it may be comparatively safe, as it requires either considerable heat or powerful acids or alkalies to produce such another instance where agitation of the air, by opening a door, is sufficient to occasion an explosion. If such freaks as this are played by nature on a small scale, what are we to expect but the most terrific fatal results when organic compounds, build together by uncertain and feeble affinities, are manufactured on so large a scale as at Faversham?

A CORRESPONDENT.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

HUBERT KELLY, ESQ., M.D.

THIS gentleman was a very eminent physician, and for a long series of years enjoyed one of the most extensive practices in the central part of Ireland. His skill in cases of midwifery was universally acknowledged. Mr. Kelly, however, was not famed for knowledge alone; his charity, benevolence, and hospitality, had obtained him general regard and affection.

The residence of Mr. Kelly was at Parsonstown, in the King's County, a place of continual resort to travellers, in consequence of being the locality of Lord Rosse's wonderful telescope. Visitors thither will have cause to regret the Doctor's death, for at his social and intellectual home many a stranger met a cordial and agreeable welcome. Indeed, there are stories told, on good authority, of how, on more than one occasion, the worthy Doctor once called to travellers taken ill at the inn in his town, has invited them to his house, and never allowed them to depart until he restored them to health: on such occasions, he refused all pecuniary reward for his services, as he then esteemed the patients his guests.

Mr. Kelly died at Parsonstown, on the 14th instant, after a short illness, at a very advanced age. He leaves behind him a numerous family. One of his sons is Edmund Meares Kelly, Esq., a member of the Irish bar, and the author of a well-known work on the law relating to Scire Facias.

T. J. WALTON.

MR. WALTON was the Stage Manager of the Princess' Theatre, and an actor of more than ordinary merit there. His death, which occurred on the 19th instant, happened under melancholy circumstances. He had been suffering from a painful disease, and he was in the habit of taking laudanum and morphia to allay the torment. An over dose proved fatal to him: he died in his 48th year.

THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE.—His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge is to embark at Dover, for the Continent, in her Majesty's mail steam-packet, the Garland. The Garland has left Woolwich to be in readiness to receive the Duke.

ST. ANDREWS AND QUEBEC RAILWAY.—A very important line has just been sanctioned by the Government of New Brunswick, with a guarantee of five per cent. for ten years, and is now offered to the notice of capitalists of this country.

THE "GREAT BRITAIN."—We have received an account of the engineering operations for floating of this immense ship, which took place on the flowing of the spring-tide on Thursday (last week), at which time Mr. Brunner proposed repeating the experiment, the complete success of which had been slightly marred by a trivial accident on the previous Tuesday. This was that the injury to some of the spars, over which the caissons are suspended, having been raised ed, the workmen employed by Mr. Brunner commenced operations for making the attempt about two hours before high water. Half an hour forwards, as on the former occasion, the ship floated—rising, however, nine inches higher than on Tuesday, but one of the caissons on the starboard bow gave way, and fell, having, from its great weight, been cut through or crushed by the chain; consequently it became necessary to allow the vessel to settle down again, lest the extra strain on the other bulk heads and caissons should cause risk to one or both. Every possible advantage has, of course, be n taken of the partial success of the attempt to increase the bat ks of some under the bilges, by an addition of upwards of 100 tons. The hull is thus retained at the height to which it rose; and, as bui...der inches more of floatage are required for the purpose of allowing the repairs to be made, there is no doubt that the engineer will be enabled to obtain that, even with an ordinary tide.

THE RAILWAY STATION AT NORTHAMPTON.

(Continued from page 38.)

Throughout the day, Northampton was crowded with visitors, who poured in by every old inlet; whilst the railway trains were loaded to excess. The great attraction was the Cattle Show, which was thrown open at six o'clock in the morning; and, from that early hour till one o'clock, the number of visitors, who paid 2s. 6d. each for admission, was 11,000. The charge was then reduced to 1s., and the exhibition yards were almost instantaneously choked up with visitors. The opinion of competent judges was, that the Show was the best the Society had made, best in short-horns, sheep, and pigs; but the Herefords and Devons were not, on the whole, equal in excellence to the classes first mentioned. In horses, there was a marked improvement. There were fewer over-fed animals than usual, the quality was unexceptionable.

The Dinner took place in a tent erected in a part of the town called Waterloo. the pavilion was erected by Mr. Manning, of High Holborn, and was an ingenious construction. Upwards of 1100 gentlemen sat down to dinner, the Earl of Egmont in the chair; and the Earl of Yarborough, (the President elect,) filled the office of Vice-Chairman. Among the guests at the two principal tables were the Mayor, the Duke of Manchester, the Duke of Buccleuch, the Earl of Sandwich, the Earl of Chichester, the Marquis of Downshire, the Marquis of Northampton, the Marquis of Exeter, the Marquis of Granby, Lord Portman, Lord W. Compton, Viscount Alford, the Earl of Euston, Lord Walsingham, Count de Gourcy; Mr. Hudson, M.P.; the Hon. Mr. Bancroft, the American Minister; Sir H. Smith, Lord Newry, Hon. P. Pierrepont, Lord Feilding, the Dean of Westminster, Lord Southampton, the Earl of Forefret, and Sir F. Head. After the usual demonstrations of loyalty, the Earl of Chichester proposed the health of the American Minister, which was drunk with much applause. Mr. Bancroft thanked the company, and, in the course of his address, remarked that "the Americans had to depend on the fertility of the soil; in England, everything was subjected to scientific care." He trusted that peace between the two countries would continue for ever, or rather, that the commerce and interchange of intelligence that the thought of an interruption of peace should never be entertained—(hear)—and that the preservation of peace should be a vain, a holiday, and a useless prayer. (Hear, hear.) With these sentiments, uttered from his heart and soul, he responded to the sympathy shown for his country, and prayed for the prosperity of the farmers of England. (Loud cheers.)

INTERIOR OF ST. SEPULCHRE'S ROUND CHURCH.

The Chairman then gave "The Hero of Aliwal," which toast was drunk amidst great cheering. Sir H. Smith returned thanks, and in his address, advised that the breed of hunters should be kept up as a matter of great importance in a military point of view.

The Duke of Buccleuch proposed the next toast—"Success to the Royal Agricultural Society of England," which was drunk with all the honours.

NORTHAMPTON CROSS.

Mr. S. O'Brien then introduced the toast of "Agriculture, Manufactures, and Commerce;" or, as the hon. gentleman gave it, "The Plough, the Loom, and the Sail." The toast was much applauded.

The other toasts were "The Health of the Mayor and Corporation of Northampton," proposed by the Marquis of Northampton; "The Labouring Classes," proposed by Lord Portman; and "The Health of the President," by Mr. Vernon Smith. Mr. Shelley, in proposing "The Judges of the Show," stated that, at the first Exhibition of the Society, the number of implements was small; whereas, at the present Show, the number was 1250, and, if placed in a row, they would occupy a mile and a quarter in length by 20 feet broad.

The remaining toasts were "The Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland, and the Royal Agricultural Improvement Society of Ireland;" "The Railway Companies, who have so liberally carried cattle and implements free of charge to and from the Show." The last toast was "The President Elect," for which the Earl of Yarborough returned thanks; and the company broke up.

The numbers admitted to the Show Yard were, on Tuesday, 1336; Wednesday 2758; Thursday, 22,090.

It was stated that the next meeting would be held at York.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

The large Engraving upon the preceding page shows a Vignette View of Northampton, from the Danes' Camp; within an emblematic border.

The next Illustration shows the busy scene at the Northampton Railway Station.

We have subjoined a few specimens of the antiquarian rarities of the town—of "Old Northampton," as it is distinctively called by topographers. Its architectural glories were almost swept away by a great fire in 1675. "The town walls are gone," says Abel's "Handbook" (just published), "with the exception of a few lingering remains. The Castle, once the home of Monarchs and the seat of Parliaments, and then extensively dilapidated by time and violence, now presents nothing but its earthworks, some remnants of the exterior wall, a round bastion, and traces of the fosse." Yet, these relics will shortly be obliterated by a railway "construction;" and, on this account, as well as for their picturesqueness, our Artist has sketched them.

Another monument of our ancestors is St. Sepulchre's, one of the four remaining Round Churches in England. Its date is referred, with probability, to Simon St. Sir or Senlis, the first Earl of Northampton of that name, a crusader, who died about the middle of the reign of Henry I., or 1115; if this date be correct, the Northampton Church ranks next in point of time to the Round Church of Cambridge. The former has no pretensions to architectural beauty, but depends for its interest upon its peculiar form; the body, or Round, being the original fabric

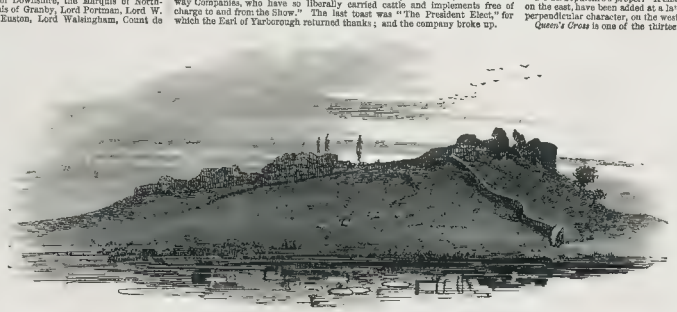
ST. JOHN'S HOSPITAL.

—the St. Sepulchre's proper. A chancel and two aisles, opening out of the Round on the east, have been added at a later period, with a fine tower and spire of early perpendicular character, on the west.

Queen's Cross is one of the thirteen or fifteen crosses erected by Edward I. to commemorate his Consort, Queen Eleanor. Two others remain—viz., Geddington and Waltham

"The cross at Northampton was erected by John of Battle, assisted by William of Ireland. The same builder was employed upon the crosses at Stony Stratford, Woburn, Dunstable, and St. Alban's, now destroyed. The designer of the monuments is unknown. Some of the details appear to have been executed in London, and transmitted to their respective sites. The figures of Eleanor bear a general resemblance to her bronze effigy in Westminster Abbey, cast by Master William Torel, from which they were probably copied. Notwithstanding the mutilations of time, the countenance of the chere reine has not lost its serene expression." (Abel's Hand-book.) This interesting memorial stands at the south-west corner of the park of Delapre, a short mile from the skirts of the town.

The fourth edifice is one of the old charitable foundations, St. John's Hospital, on the east side of Bridge-street; which offers an asylum to a few aged persons, who have firing and 1s. 2d. weekly. The buildings consist of a chapel, a large hall, and apartments for the poor lodgers, and some of the architectural details are very elegant.



REMAINS OF NORTHAMPTON CASTLE.

BLIGHT ON THE WHEAT, PEA, BEAN, AND POTATO CROPS.

THE duty of the public journals is always to take care to provide accurate information upon everything appertaining to food in times of scarcity and famine that by being informed by disinterested parties of the exact position of affairs, the public may be able to provide against any emergency, and thus plenty may be secured to the people at a moderate cost. We regret exceedingly, in the discharge of our duty, to have to record facts relating to this year's crop to which Mr. Alfred Smee now calls the attention of the public; and which, if not calculated to excite some apprehension, must cause us to watch with anxiety the state of the harvest.

FIG. 3.—TARE.

1. WHEAT.

FIG. 2.—BEAN,

In No. 267, Fig. 14, we have delineated the Aphis which injures the corn: we have now to report that it has extensively attacked the Wheat, and even sparingly other kinds of grain. It will feed upon the leaf, though it principally delights to live upon the ear between the grains of corn, where, occasionally, fifty or sixty may be detected sucking the juices from the plant. The effect of this abstraction of the vital fluid is to cause the grain to shrivel up, and be useless; and thus, whilst the crop to outward appearance looks prosperous, a great diminution of the produce may occur, and evince itself when the corn is thrashed. We feared the occurrence of this Aphis, because last year the Wheat throughout France, in one of the finest seasons for its growth ever known, was found to be sadly deficient in produce from some unknown cause; and as all blights are prone to travel from East to West, we conceived that it would attack our crop this season. Preying upon the Aphides may often be noticed the lady-bird and larvæ. (Fig. 1.)

The Bean all over the kingdom is now literally covered with myriads of the black Aphis (No. 267, Fig. 15), which has caused great mischief. They delight to feed on the top of the plant which they destroy: passing downwards, they prey upon the larger leaves and young pods. By the injury which they inflict, in consequence of the abstraction of the vital fluid, the plant turns black, and in some cases is utterly killed; or, in others, the leaves and only a part of the produce are destroyed. We have seen, in one locality, the crop to be so injured, that it will scarce yield the seed sown. The Bean is now also infected by the Pea Aphis.

The Pea and Tare crops are also severely attacked by the Pea Aphis (No. 267, Fig. 16), which injures much the late crop. It commences at the lower leaves, and kills successively every part, until the entire plant is destroyed, or the crop rendered in great part abortive. Last week, the winged insect flew in myriads; and so extensive was their distribution, that great numbers were observed even in the heart of the City of London. The naturalist will do well to examine the affected fields, for the ground under the plants may be observed to be literally covered with countless numbers of the cast skins, which afford a very beautiful microscopic object. The destruction of the Pea crop is often attended by the exhalation of an odour which is analogous to that arising from the decaying haulms of the Potato.

Our report upon the Potato crop is, upon the whole, up to the present time, favourable. The weather has been everything which could be desired to render the produce large; and the superior flavour of the Potato this year is a subject of universal observation. From this time to the gathering of the crop, we must look with great anxiety for the changes which occur; as, in some districts, the malady decidedly exists in its former virulence. In examining the plant, agriculturists must be careful not to confound the yellow appearance of the leaves consequent on the ripening of the plant with the disease, which may be known by the leaf perishing and becoming dry. We have figured the mode of death (Fig. 4) as occurring in a field where not much less than a thousand Vastators are feeding on each leaf. They have killed successively leaf after leaf, except a few at the top, and these, in some cases, have totally perished. We have ourselves personally made extensive observations, extending from Gravesend to Richmond, and Tunbridge Wells to Enfield, and we find that, as a general rule, the rot in the underground stem has healed up, except in a few instances where the Vastator has damaged the plants. Our accounts from the country are conflicting: within, however, the last two days, disease has shown itself in many districts.

In every case where Aphides attack plants it is curious to observe the larvæ of the Ladybirds in search of their prey; so voracious are these creatures that they frequently clear off the insects from a whole field, or from a whole district; and we only know of their previous existence by finding dead insects on the pupæ of the Ladybirds. To such a degree may Ladybirds carry on their work of destruction, that, unless the plant is absolutely destroyed, there are always hopes of its entire recovery.

There are now five crops in more or less jeopardy—the Wheat, Pea, Bean, Potato, and Hop; nevertheless, the Bean alone has actually suffered beyond recovery. At the present time, then, there is no ground for actual alarm, for the creatures may leave the plant, or the crop may be as much above the average as the amount of the injury inflicted. There are, however, grounds for watchfulness and unceasing observation, and we trust that this article will be sufficient to draw universal attention to the subject.

Fig. 1 Wheat, showing the Aphides, with the Ladybird and larvæ feeding upon them.
Fig. 2. Bean, showing the gangrene of the leaf and pod from the black Aphis.
Fig 3. Tare leaf, showing the gangrene from the pea Aphis.
Fig 4. Potato stalk, exhibiting the mode of death from the Aphis Vastator.

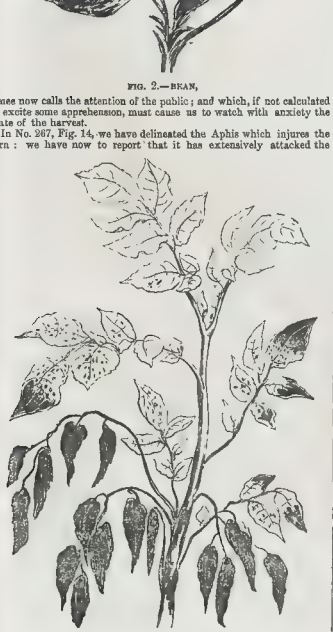


FIG. 4.—POTATO.

MARBLE STATUE OF PRINCE ALBERT, BY MR. LOUGH.

THIS exquisite work must take rank among the most successful productions of the chisel of Mr. Lough; and it well deserves the honour accorded to it on Monday last, the day announced for the ceremony of opening the Statue to public view. It was a commission from a Committee, as well as the Committee of Lloyd's, the aim being the adornment of the Royal Exchange, as well as the commemoration of his Royal Highness Prince Albert having laid the first stone of the new edifice.

The Statue, (covered up,) had been placed in the vestible; and thither the Committees proceeded, by way of the underwriters' room, which, on Monday, was crowded with subscribers and the public. On the covering being removed, there was a very warm expression of approbation; after which Mr. Thomas Baring, M.P., addressed the assembly, and observed that they were all aware that the merchants and underwriters, in order to commemorate the laying of the first stone of the Royal Exchange, had subscribed to place a Statue of his Royal Highness Prince Albert in some conspicuous part of the building, and he felt assured that those who now witnessed the success which had attended the labours of the Committee, would congratulate them on the beautiful Statue which had just been uncovered to their view. Mr. Baring then observed that his Royal Highness occupied a high station in the country, and the members of Lloyd's, in contemplating the elevated position in which the Statue appeared in their rooms, would feel gratified that they were in the possession of such a work of art, reflecting, as it did, the highest credit on the sculptor. The subscribers were aware that it was mainly owing to the exertions of his friend, Mr. Thomas Chapman, the Deputy Chairman of the Committee, that this splendid and appropriate tribute to his Royal Highness had been placed in their rooms; and he felt convinced that, on their behalf, he might congratulate Mr. Chapman on the happy termination of his labours.

Three hearty cheers were then given for the Statue, followed by three other cheers for Mr. Lough, the sculptor. The meeting then separated, but the vestibule continued crowded during the remainder of the day.

There were present Mr. Thomas Baring, M.P., Chairman; Mr. Thomas Chapman, Deputy Chairman; Baron Goldsmid; Sir John Henry Pelly, Bart., Deputy Master of the Trinity House; Sir George Larpent; Sir Peter Laurie; Mr. Charles Graham, the Hon. Secretary to the Committee for erecting the Statue, &c.

LOUGH'S MARBLE STATUE OF PRINCE ALBERT, IN THE ROYAL EXCHANGE.

The Statue, as we have intimated, is a fine work of art. The pose and dignity of the figure, and the natural expression of the features, are excellent; and there is much skill and taste shown in the management of the drapery of the robe.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL IN THE CITY.—IT WAS curious on Tuesday to notice the interest excited about the time it was expected that Lord John Russell would arrive in the City, to attend the election meeting at the London Tavern. A large crowd of people was assembled on each side of the road, close by Temple Bar, at between one and two o'clock, to greet his Lordship as he entered the City, and many of them waited long after the latter hour, as if remaining for his return.

THE BIRMINGHAM AND OXFORD RAILWAY.—At the last adjourned meeting of the proprietors of the Birmingham and Oxford Company, a further adjournment took place, in order that a conference might be had between the narrow gauge, or London and North-Western interests, on the one hand, and the broad gauge, or Great Western interests, on the other. This conference has been held, and the result, we learn, leaves but little hope of an amicable arrangement.

THE GENERAL ELECTION.—It is important to know that county elections cannot take place earlier than the 10th, nor later than the 16th day from the time of the proclamation, which must be made within two days after the receipt of the writ. In boroughs, four days' notice of the election is required, and the election must not be deferred longer than eight days after the receipt of the precept, which is issued by the Sheriff to the various returning officers within their respective boroughs.

OAK STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

BETWEEN two and three o'clock, on the morning of Saturday last, Wimbledon and its neighbourhood were visited by a violent storm, during which, a large Oak, on a farm adjoining Wimbledon Park, was struck by lightning, and reduced to the wreck shown in our Illustration. The tree was struck at the top, and the instantaneous work of destruction was wrought precisely as here illustrated.

By an account from Southampton, we learn that on Saturday morning, also, there was in the town and its environs, at half-past one o'clock, one of the most violent storms of thunder and lightning, accompanied with rain, ever remembered in the locality. The storm continued, with very little intermission, until ten o'clock. At a village called Shirley, about two miles from the town, a house was entirely destroyed by the lightning; together with nine sheep in the neighbourhood of Fear-tree Green.

OAK STRUCK BY LIGHTNING AT WIMBLEDON-PARK.

FINE ARTS.

THE DAWN OF LOVE. Painted by THOMAS BROOKS. Engraved by W. H. SIMMONS. Published by Moxon.

The subject of Mr Brooks's picture is one of those domestic episodes that have, of late years, become extensively popular as "furniture prints." Time was when large engravings of battle-pieces by land and sea were favourites on the bouse-hold wall: but these fine subjects have nearly been laye long given place to se of more refined character, showing us the brighter side of existence, and leaving the carnage of war to the pen of the historian rather than the pencil of the painter. The cause of this change may be a fanciful one, on our part; but, certain it is that the painters of our day betoke themselves to the illustration of the affections—the tenderest passion—with great success; and, happily, the elevating effect of their productions is multiplied, almost beyond computation, by the en raver's art

The "Dawn of Love" is of this welcome class of prints. The scene lies in a mountain country, of picturesque sublimity; and there, beside a bubbling fount, at the foot of one of the hills, a shepherd-by is telling the tale of early love to a sweet girl who came to fill her pitcher at the spring: the dawn of affection is beaming in the two f ces; and, to show how comp tely the maiden's attention is absorbed in the love-making, the pitcher is fil ed, and the water, as the old poet sings, "welleth forth sway;" or, as the composition is told, in verse, by a popular lyrist:—

Oh, she will make a winsome bride,	White smoke curls from yon distant not,
That rarely barefoot lass	Like fading wreaths of foam;
Her heart is like the fountain's tide,	And, when they've sent their wedded lot
And both are pure as grass.	Within its simple home,
The tide hath played its babbling part,	Life's setting glow, peraduse, in thrill
And rears'd the pitcher's brim;	Of happiness may in ow,
But faster flows into her heart	And those fond lovers hearts among the hills
The love-fount sprung by him!	That saw their "Dawn of Love."

We have only to add that the composition of this picture is very delightful; its sentiment very pure—the head of the girl being remarkably fine. It has been admirably engraved, and it will, doubtless, become very popular.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Once more unto the waters! Byron.

It is now the prime of the year with the amateur mariners. The yachting season has set in with all its "pride, pomp, and circumstance," of regattas, and matches by canvass and oar. The wager craft have already hoisted their signal colours on the lide of old Father Thames—and in many a harbour and roadstead the blue peter an ounces some "rakish" shooner or "taunt" cutter bound for the Wight. The two island clubs have put forth their programmes—and goodly ones they are. The Royal Victoria Yacht Club Regatta, under the especial patronage of her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, will take place at Cowes, on Wednesday, the 28th of July—and on Friday, the 30th. This is arranged "excellent well," as it leaves the two best days at Goodwood open—and there is hardly a more convenient head quarters for that glorious meeting than Ryde—everything had h accommodation. The first day of the Victoria Club Regatta the Royal Victoria Purse of 100 guineas will be sailed for by schooners of any Royal Yacht Club—time race on Acker's scale—the course round the Wight. A fifty pound cup, by cutters belonging to any Royal Yacht Club above 31 tons, and under 50, old measurement—the course inside the Wight, and there will be rowing matches to f l up the interval-. The Cutter Race will be also sailed for on A.ker's time principle The same day has fix £50 Cup mem ber's cutters of the Club not exceeding 31 tons, and above 25 O M—a second £30 for ya-hts of any R Y. C., not exceeding 25 tons and above 15 O. M.; and a third of £20 for ves-els belonging to any R. Y. C., not exceeding 15 tons O. M. Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to announce her intention of honouring the Club by her presence, and a marine spectacle of the first class may be counted on. The Royal Yacht Squadron held their annual meeting at Cowes on the 12th, 14th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 21st and 23d of August. The prizes will be sailed for on the 12th, 14th, 17th, 19th, 21st, and 23d. Sir Bellingham Graham has been elected Vice-Commodore; and G. H. Ackers, Esq, is the new Vice Commodore of the R Y. C. The cup given by the Solent bear ga llant a pleasure fleet as ever swam since the days of Cleopatra on the Cydnus.

On Thursday, the closing match of the season for prizes given by the Royal Thames Yacht Club was to have taken place—but on the Tuesday preceding a notice to the following effect was put up in the Club Room, and subsequently appeared in the morning papers:—"The match for Thursday next is postponed for the present." The cause of this postponement was simply the want of vessels to sail; a fact, at first sight, some-what startling, as the entries for all the prizes given by that spirited Society are full—but sailing men form the green water—they are no lo ger to be found in parting streams, and blue roasted-ed. Besides, there are occasions of grave account at hand, and some were in actual discussion during the week—as the Isle of Man Regatta, and that held on the Mersey a d at Scarborough.

So far, then, as this our notice of the latest position of our amateur sailing goes, our motto must be understood as applying to it—theoretically, and not practically: we are writing—"Once more upon the waters." And, truly, the theme is a right gentle one. We cannot but recall the memory of the last match on the river—nor part from this allusion to it without the hope that its successor may only be postponed for a very brief present. . . . Anon, be it our office of love to record that, once more,

> There was a sound of revelry by day—
> And Britain's capital had gathered there
> Her Beauty and her Chivalry, and gay
> Her flag waved o'er fair women and brave men;
> A thousand hearts beat happily, and when
> Music a.ose with its voluptuous swell,
> Soft eyes looked love to eyes which spake again,
> And all were merry as a marriage bell!

TATTERSALL'S

MONDAY.—The Hero, of whom some ominous rumours had been in circulation, was the "great gun" he was lame, at least so it was said and some Sabbath breakers had amused themselves by bidding 8 and 10 to 1 against him; to day he was in better order, large sums having been laid on him at 7 2, 5 to 1, and 9 to 2; all things considered, however, he is just the horse we should recommend our friends to let alone. Eryx and Halo, are in steady favour. Nothing of consequence on the other stakes.

GOODWOOD STAKES.

7 to 1 agst Stultz	15 to 1 agst Mo'ner's c.	20 to 1 agst Hydrangea
8 to 1 — Questionable	2 to 1 — Miss Flite	20 to 1 — Tantivy
11 to 1 — Lothario	20 to 1 — Vain, s c
GOODWOOD CUP.
7 to 2 agst Eryx	15 to 1 agst Gladiator, 4 yrs old	16 to 1 agst Pyrrhus the First
14 to 1 — The Hero	14 to 1 — Dalbot	40 to 1 — Fitz Rambus
7 to 1 — Wolding	Sunbeam is declared not to start.
ST. LEGER.
9 to 4 agst Cossack	10 to 1 agst Red Hark	30 to 1 agst Halo (t)
6 to 1 — Van Tromp	20 to 1 — Forestmaster	100 to 1 — Examiner
DERBY.
25 to 1 agst Winterstoke (t)	28 to 1 agst Sagacity (t)	40 to 1 agst Revenue (t)
25 to 1 — Surplice (t)	33 to 1 — Gladower (t)	50 to 1 — Sling (t)

THURSDAY.—The betting this afternoon was very slack, but it had the effect of bringing Lothario, Miss Ella, and Hydrangea, into prominent notice for the Goodwood Stakes, and of driving Stultz back sight or ten points. The Hero was rallied; Eryx, as a consequence, ecoding two or three points. The Questionable was declared not to run at Goodwood.

GOODWOOD STAKES.

8 to 1 agst Lotharlo (3)	16 to 1 agst Stultz (3)	25 to 1 agst Mariext
9 to 1 — Miss Ella	16 to 1 — Van Tromp	25 to 1 — Tantivy
10 to 1 — Milliner	20 to 1 — Power	25 to 1 — Annandale
14 to 1 — Hydrangea	20 to 1 — Eryx	25 to 1 — Tammy
GOODWOOD CUP
3 to 1 agst The Hero	11 to 1 agst Halo	20 to 1 agst Pyrrhus the First
7 to 1 — Eryx	12 to 1 — Sling	25 to 1 — Occultus
8 to 1 — Woldlng	16 to 1 — Dalbot
No change in the ST. LEGER.
DERBY
25 to 1 agst Surplice (t)	40 to 1 agst Revenue (t)	50 to 1 agst Whitstone (t)

NOTTINGHAM RACES TUESDAY.

The Sherwood Stakes, of 5 sovs each, with 50 added, if three start; three-year-olds, 10st 4lb; four 11st 2lb; five, 11st 10.b; six and aged, 12st 2lb; winners extra, &c. Heats, two miles.

Sir J. Gerard's Fantas-a, 6 years.. .. .. ..walked over

The Nottinghamshire Handicap, of 15 sovs each, 10 ft., and 5 only if declared, with 200 added, the second to receive £50, and the third to save his stake. Two miles

Lord Chesterfield's Lady Willaby, 5 yrs, 8st	.. ..	(Nat) 1
Mr. Whittaker named Faustus, 3 yrs, 4st 6lb	.. ..	(Treen) 2

Fiddlestring, 4 yrs, 6st 12lb, and The Wizard, aged, 6st 4lb, also ran. A good race. Won by three parts of a length.

The Two-yr-old Stakes of 10 sovs each, with 50 added; colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 2lb; winners, 3lb extra.

Mr. Fedley's Tuscan	.. .. ..	(Templeman) 1
Sir J. Gerard's Matadore	.. .. ..	(Edwards) 2

Won by a length.

The County Members' Plate of £50; the second to receive £10. Two miles and a half

Mr. Ewbank's Louisa Newell, 3 yrs, 6st 6lb	.. ..	..(Tasker) 1
Mr. Hawkins's Blind Hookey, aged, 8st 10lb	.. ..	.. 2

Won by half a length.

The Military Plate of £40 Heats, one mile.

Mr. F. Haughton's Sleaking Painter, aged	.. ..	..(Owner) 1
Mr. Alcock's Clipston, 4 yrs	.. ..	.. 2

Won easy.

CRICKET.—The match—the Gentlemen v. the Players—was brought to a conclus. n on Wednesday, the result being, that the players won by 147 runs.

SHAKSPEARE'S HOUSE.—The sale of Shakspeare's house, at Stratf rd-on-Avon, is fixed for Thursday, the 16th of September. It is to be hoped that advantage may be taken of the intervening period to adopt effectual means for securing to us, as a nation, this most interesting relic of the immortal bard, and that Kingland will not allow it to be taken to the United States for the mere purposes of a show.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE Friday).—The arrivals of English wheat for our market since Monday—to-day inclu as well as by land carriage and sample—have been on a moderate scale and the show of samples of that grain here to-day was small. On the whole the trade was firm, but no improvement was noticed in the quotations. Nearly 50,000 quarters of foreign wheat have come to hand this week, for the most part in sailing condition. The best qualities moved off steadily, at fir prices but all the other kinds were quite neg.ected. Although the supply of barley was to a very large extent, at market a shadow of improvement. Malt for delivery sold to retail, at full prices The oat trade, owing to the large imports from abroad, was in a sluggish state, a sensitived figures. Beans were firm at our, and peas steady.

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 3,600 barley, 320; malt, 950 quarters. Irish: wheat, 670; barley, none; oats, none. Foreign: wheat, 29,660; barley 3730; oats, 24,470. Flour, 2910 sacks and 2910 barrels. malt, 1950 sacks.

English.—Wheat, barley and beans, red, 72s to 80s, white, 80s to 86s. Norfolk and Suffolk, red 72s to 80s. ditto, white 80s to 86s. Rye, 52s to 56s. grinding barley, 30s to 32s. Sa milling, 32s to 3 s. malting ditto, 36s to 38s; Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 74s to 76s, brown ditto 72s to 80s., Kingston and Ware 78s to 82s; Chevalier, 80s to 84s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats 22s to 30s potato ditto, 32s to 34s; Youghal and Cork, black, 30s to 32s, ditto, white 33s to 35s; Sligo, ditto, brown, 29s to 34s, ditto, old, 40s to 42s; grey peas, 34s to 36s, maple 35s to 36s, white, 35s to —s; boilers, 38s to 39s per quarter. Town-made flour, 48s to 50s Suffolk, 46s to 47s. Stockton and Yorkshire, 46s to 48s, per 280 lbs. Foreign. Dantzig red wheat, 4 s to —s; white, 5 s to —s; barley, —s to —s. oats, —s to —s, beans, —s to —s, per quarter Flour, American, 36s to 38s; Baltic, —s to —s, per barrel.

The Seed Market.—A few samp se of new cats may send have appeared on sale this week but we do not hear of any transactions In seeds generally the business doing is trifling, at last week's quotations

Linseed, English, sowing, 48s to 50s; Baltic, crushing, 45s to 49s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 45s to 48s. Hempseed, 32s to 38s per quarter. Rapeseed, 18 to 21 per ton. Brown Mustard-seed, 5s to 10s; white ditto, 5s to 10s. Tares, 9s 6d to 6d per bushel. English Rapeseed, new, £31 to £33 per last. Linseed cakes, English, £13 5s to £13 10s; ditto, foreign, £8 10s to £10 per 1000; Rapeseed cakes, £7 10s to £9 5s per ton. Canary, 38s to 44s, per quarter. Coriander, 20s to 22s per cwt. Tares, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; extra, —s; white, —s to —s, extra, —s per cwt.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread, in the metropolis, are from 10d to 10½d; of household ditto 8d to 9½d per 4lb loaf

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 74s 6d; barley, 40s 11d; oats, 26s 7d; rye, 47s 8d; beans, 42s 1d peas 43s 8d.

The Six Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 85s 10d; barley, 50s 8d; oats, 32s 6d; rye, 57s 3d; beans, 54s 3d peas, 56s 6d

Teas.—This market rules tolerably steady, and, in every instance, last week's prices are well supported.

Sugar.—Although a large business is still passing in raw sugars, not the slightest improvement can be noticed in the quotations. Refined goods are a slow sale, at 57s for brown, and 57s 6d to 58s 6d for standard lumps.

Coffee.—Native Ceylon is firmer, at fully last figures. Plantation kinds are, in some instances, held f r higher rates. The sales are small, and consist of parcels on the spot.

Rice. All kinds of rice move off heavily, and most descriptions may be purchased at 6d per cwt. lower than last week's quotations.

Provisions.—The arrivals of butter from Ireland still continuing large, the demand rules heavy, at late rates. Fine Carlow, Waterford, and Cork, are in moderate request, but inferior qualities have been principa ly confined to second rate brands of Limerick, landed, at 82s to 84s per cwt. In foreign butter, we have to report a steady sale for fine and mid ling qualities, but the best brands of Bacon are in improved request, and full, curroncies; but the middling and inferior qu lities exceedingly little is doing. English butter is heavy, and quite as dear, in other respects, as last week, from 80s to 85s for Cheshire, 80s to 9 s for Derby, 60s to 66s for old double Gloucester, and 46s to 50s per cwt for new ditto. All other kinds of provisions are a slow sale at late rates.

Tallow.—This market is very dull and prices have further declined 3d per cwt. P. Y. C. on the spot may be pur-based at 47s 9d. to 48s; and for forward delivery, 47s to 47s 3d per cwt., very tallow is the turn offered.

Oils.—There is rather more doing in oil, but no advance can be noticed in value.

Rum.—Most qualities are a dull sale, and rather cheaper than last week. Extra fine Jamaica is quoted at 2s 2d to 2s 4d per gs.on

Hay and Straw.—Prices are unchanged. Best meadow hay, £3 0s to £4 0s new do., £2 5s to £3 5s; old clover, £4 to £5, new ditto £3 5s £4; and straw, £1 12s to £1 16s per load

Hops (Friday).—Only a moderate demand exists for most kinds from Bolding, at late prices. The duty is called £180,000

Sussex pockets, £4 5s to £4 10s; Weald of Kent ditto, £4 10s to £5 5s, Mid and East Kent ditto, £5 10s to £7 5s per cwt.

Coals Hetton, Adair's 12s 6d; Hamilton, 12s 6d, Stewart's, 12s 6d; Hilda, 12s per ton.

Smithfield Prices.—The supply on offer both to-day and the last was moderate in number, and very deficient in quality The poorest 8o ts, Downs, &c., sold readily, at prices fully equal to those obtained on Monday But the inferior kinds of beef were a rare drug, though we announced, even cheaper. There were in the mar kes 2 cows fr m Spain 203 oxen and sows, 1,310 sheep and lambs, and 60 calves from Holland, and 1,000 sheep and lambs we were but moderately supplied with the mutton trade was firm, and late rates were strictly supported. The supply of calves was good; the sale for that stock was somewhat active, at very full prices. Notwithstanding the supply of calves was great, the veal trade was firm, at an advance of from 2d to 4d per 8lb. Pigs met a ready sale, at about stationary prices. Milch cows were very dull, at from £16 to £18 each, the ailing their sale at late rates.

Per 8lb. to sink the offal.—Coarse and inferior beasts, 3s 8d to 4s 0d, second quality ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 4d; prime large oxen, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; prime down ks, 4s 10d to 5s 0d; coarse and inferior sheep, 4s 2d to 4s 4d, second quality ditto, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; prime ditto, 4s 10d to 5s 0d; prime South Down ditto 5s 2d to 5s 4d; prime coarse calves, 4s 6d to 4s 10d; prime small ditto, 5s 0d to 5s 2d; large coarse pigs, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; small ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 4d; suckling calves, 21s to 30s each; quarter old store pigs, 16s to 20s each.

Newgate and Leadenhall Prices.—We had a very ady trade here to day at full prices Per 8lb by the carcase:—Inferior beef, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; middling ditto, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; prime large ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 8d; prime sma ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 4 ; large pork, 3s 8 to 4s 6d; small ditto, 4s 8d to 5s 0d; veal, 3s 4d to 4s 8d; mutton, 3s 4d to 4s 10d; lamb, 5s 0d to 6s 0d; small pork, 4s 8d to 5s 10d; lamb, 5s 0d to 6s 8d. ROBT HERBERT.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

There has been a good demand for Money during the week, while the uncertain position of the Exchanges inspires caution. The ra e has not, however, been enhanced, either to those requiring accommodation, or to the lender. No immediate relaxation is expected in the rates.

The English Funds opened heavily on Monday, at a decline of about 1 per cent, upon Saturday's prices; and, although slig ht ly recovered in the course of the day, still the close was 1 per cent below the Saturday's quotations. Business on Tuesday it was not until the afternoon that an improved price was quoted. At closing, 88¾ ⅞ for Money, and 89¼ for Account, were the official quotations. Chinese affairs had a favourable influence upon the Stocks which were the last quotation. On Thursday the market was dull and inanimate at a reduction of about ¼ per cent upon the former advance—no disposition to rally since. Exchequer Bills have not varied materially, but Bank Stock has been in better very firm late y, receded on Tuesday to 196¾ 197¼ The remaini g Britis. Securities, at the close of the week, were as follows:—Bank Stock, 197¼; Reduced, 88¼; Consols, 88¾; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent Annu. 99¾; Long Annuity Expire Jan. 5, 1860, 9⅜; Ditto, 30 years, Oct. 10. 1859, 6¼; South Sea Stock, 97¼; Ditto, New Annuities, 96¾; India Stock, 263; Bonds, Aug. 96, 98¾; Exchequer Bills, 1½d , £1000, 11 pm.; £500, 14 pm.; Ditto, 5ma, 11 pm.

For ere were some few transactions in Mexican stock on Monday, at a slight advance, but, with this exception, the Foreign Market continues in its usual dull state. Mexican was again dealt in on Tuesday, a d closed at 19¾ to ⅞ On Wednesday, s few transactions in Brazilian, Spanish Five per Cents, and Dutch Stock, made up the day's transactions. The correspondence relative to Peruvian Stock formed the topic of conversation on Thursday's market. The point consists in requesting that an agent may be authorised to settle in Lima what has been long promised to be paid in London. The purport of the proposed contract, amounting to a large sum, instead of being remitted, are retained; and, as an excuse for delay, the request that an agent should be appointed is required to. This is shuffling, and is regarded only in that light by all who remember he circumstances at the period that grand became so valuable. A little animation generally at the close of the week caused the last quotations to stand:—Brazilian Bonds, Five per Cent., 84¾; Ditto, New Bonds, 1829 and 1839, 84; Ditto, Small, 84; Equador Bonds, 3⅝; Grenada, One per Cent., 20, Ditto, Deferred, 3⅝; Mexican Bonds, 1846, Five per Cent., 19⅛; Ditto, for the account, 19⅜; Ditto, Small, 19⅛; Peru, 1844, 84; Russian Bonds, 112; Spanish Bonds, Five per Cent., for the Accou.t, 21½; Ditto, Three per Cent, for the Account, 31½; Venezuela Bonds, Two per Cent., 33; Ditto, Deferred, 8½; Ditto, Small, 8½; Belgian Bonds, 100½.

The Share Market continues heavy, with very little business doing except in a few lines. Aubergne, Nottingham, Boston, and Eastern Counties Junction are more in request, from an expected change in the Board of Direction. It is understood that an alteration in the line, tend.ng to save the shareholders money without in any way lessening its ut lity, is contemplated by the new members of the direction. This, of course, renders the shares more valuable, and they are the last price quoted. At the cl se of the week, prices stood for Birmingham and Oxford Junction, 17¼; Buckinghamshire, ¼ dis.; Eastern Counties, 20; Ditto, York Extension, 6¾; Great Northern, 21; Ditto, London and Yorkshire, 2; Great Southern and Western (Ireland), 30½; Great N r England, New, £40, 60; Great Western, 116; Ditto, Half Shares, 69½; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 19½; Ditto, New, £10, 10; Hull and Selby, 103; Ditto, Leeds and Bradford, 94; London and Blackwall, 7¼; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 55½; London, and North Western, 127; Ditto, New Shares, 11⅝; London and South Western, 67; Ditto, New Canonbie Lights, 6½; Ditto, New Quarter Shares, Scrip £50, 5¾; Manchester and Leeds, –; Ditto, Half Shares, 45¾; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 17⅝; Midland, 125; Do., £50 Shares, 9½; Do. Birmingham and Derby, 96¾; Newcastle and Berwick, 44; Ditto, New, £10, 10¼; North Midland, 74¾; North Britain, Half Shares, 15½; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 4¾; Ditto, Thirds, 2¾; North Staffordshire, £10, Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 18½; Preston and Wyre, Half Shares (A), 18; Ditto, ditto (B), 14; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 8; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, 3; Ditto, Class B, 2¾; South Eastern and Dover, 30¾; Ditto, New, No. 4, 2¾; Windsor, Staines, and South Western, 34¾ prem; York and Newcastle, 87½; Ditto, Extension, 15½; Ditto, Preference, 12; York and North Midland, 85; Ditto, Extension, 42¾; Ditto Preference, 15½; Ditto, East and West Riding Extension, 27; Bodmyan and Aspley, 15½; Dutch Rhenish, 2¾, Great Western Canada, 3½; Lyons and Avignon (Constituted), 3; Northern of France, 12½; Orleans and Bordeaux, 5¾; Paris and Rouen, 3⅝; West Flanders, 4—Bank Stock, London and Westminster, 196.

SATURDAY MORNING.—The English Market was very inactive yesterday, scarcely varying t o quot.ons of the preceding day. Consols closed at 88¾ ⅞ for Money, and 88¾ ⅞ for Account. Shares were flat; and the Foreign Market but little attended to.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, JULY 20TH.

WAR OFFICE, JULY 16

Royal Regiment of Horse Guards.—Charles Sidney Davers Mills to be Cornet, vice Lord Ossulston, dec.

7th Light Dragoons: Captain Edward James Pratt to be Captain, vice James Nixon Moorhouse, Captain Robert Abercromby Torrens to be Captain, vice Power. 16th: Cadet Hugh Manley Power to be Cornet, vice Tuke.

5th Foot: Major J. S. Schonswar o be Lieutenant-Colonel; Capt. F. M. N Gay to be Major, vice Schonswar; Capt. W. Turner to be Captain, vice Gay; Capt. G. Nicholas to be Captain, vice Hamilton; Capt. H. Edmonds to be Captain, vice Jeacke; Lieut. J. W. Coquits to be Captain, vice Turner; Second-Lieut. L. Fitzgerald to be First Lieutenant, vice Colquhi; Gent. Cadet W. T. F. Wallace to be Second Lieutenant, vice Carter; Lieut. Sir Leonard Worsley Holmes, vice Fitzgerald; Second-Lieut. C. Carter to be Adjutant; Colour-Serj. H. M'Donald to be Quarter Master D Hamilton, M.D., to be Assistant-surgeon, vice Bailey. 8th: E Smith to be Ensign, vice Tyrdell 16th C. S Flower to be Ensign vice Blackburn. 27th: Serg.nt T. Mowyer, vice Hallett; C. C Brine to be Ensign, vice Kinloch. 29th: Assistant-Surgeon Stewart to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Young. 31st: Ensign G D. D Pilkington to be Lieutenant, vice Carter. D. L Culthorpe to be Ensign, vice Pilkington. 68th: Lieut. C. A Morbut to be Lieut.-nant vice Dyer. Ensign J Maxsse to be Lieutenant, vice Sebright. C Talk to be Ensign, vice Maxsse 80th: Assist.-Surg B Young to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Stewart. 81st: Lieut. W D Scott to be Ca tain, vice Hamilton. 84th: Ensign H B Worthington to be Lieutenant, vice Scott. Ensign J F Tryde t to be Ensign, vice Westropp. 93d: Colour Serj. Hay to be Quarter Master. Assistant-Surgeon Archibald Cuddie D M More to be Ensign, vice Gahan 94th: Capt H. J. Jeun ey to be Capta n vice Nicholas. 97th: Capt Lt H Hamilton to be Captain, vice Kearney. 98th: Capt. C J Jeacke to be Captain, vice Edmonds. 99d Paymaster S Blake to be Paymaster, vice Wardell

Unattached: Lieut. F. E Lowe to be Lieutenant, vice Symes

Cape Mounted Rifl men: Ensign F Gahan to be Lieutenant, vice Hamilton.

Royal Marines: Lieut. and Paymaster W. H. Pinhorn to be Paymaster, vice Blake.

Royal Malta Fencible R giment: Maj r F Hunter, C M G, to be Lieutenant-Colonel vice the Marquis Dalhousie re Fire C M G., Captain D Cuthbert to be Major, vice Hunter; Lieut. F R ain to be Captain, vice Cuthbert. Ensign G Sealso to be Lieutenant, vice Ramsay G J Tomlinson to be Ensign, vice Sealso

HERVEY -Captain W. Turner to be Major in the Army

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED

J. MEASFIELD, Liverpool, Merchant.

BANKRUPTS

D C H LOMER, London, merchant. J. DUDDING, Sunderland-row, Walworth-road, Ironmonger. H SMITH, Bi ley, Southampton chair-maker. H M-SON, Manche ter shawl, bonnet, and T. WOODCOCK, Mid-ham, Lancashire, cotton-spinner. J. Jenkins to be captain, vice Edmunds. Mid Paymaster S. Blake to be Paymaster, vice Wardell

Unattached: Lieut. F. E Lowe to be Lieutenant, vice Symes

Cape Mounted Rifl men: Ensign F Gahan to be Lieutenant, vice Hamilton.

Royal Marines: Lieut. and Paymaster W. H. Pinhorn to be Paymaster, vice Blake.

Royal Malta Fencible R giment: Maj r F Hunter, C M G, to be Lieutenant-Colonel vice the Marquis Dalhousie re Fire C M G., Captain D Cuthbert to be Major, vice Hunter; Lieut. F R ain to be Captain, vice Cuthbert. Ensign G Sealso to be Lieutenant, vice Ramsay G J Tomlinson to be Ensign, vice Sealso

HERVEY -Captain W. Turner to be Major in the Army

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED

J. MEASFIELD, Liverpool, Merchant.

BANKRUPTS

D C H LOMER, London, merchant. J. DUDDING, Sunderland-row, Walworth-road, Ironmonger. H SMITH, Bi ley, Southampton chair-maker. H M-SON, Manche ter shawl, bonnet, and T. WOODCOCK, Mid-ham, Lancashire, cotton-spinner. J. Jenkins to be captain, vice Edmunds. Mid Paymaster S. Blake to be Paymaster, vice Wardell

Unattached: Lieut. F. E Lowe to be Lieutenant, vice Symes

Cape Mounted Rifl men: Ensign F Gahan to be Lieutenant, vice Hamilton.

Royal Marines: Lieut. and Paymaster W. H. Pinhorn to be Paymaster, vice Blake.

Royal Malta Fencible R giment: Maj r F Hunter, C M G, to be Lieutenant-Colonel vice the Marquis Dalhousie re Fire C M G., Captain D Cuthbert to be Major, vice Hunter; Lieut. F R ain to be Captain, vice Cuthbert. Ensign G Sealso to be Lieutenant, vice Ramsay G J Tomlinson to be Ensign, vice Sealso

HERVEY -Captain W. Turner to be Major in the Army

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED

J. MEASFIELD, Liverpool, Merchant.

BANKRUPTS

D C H LOMER, London, merchant. J. DUDDING, Sunderland-row, Walworth-road, Ironmonger. H SMITH, Bi ley, Southampton chair-maker. H M-SON, Manche ter shawl, bonnet, and T. WOODCOCK, Mid-ham, Lancashire, cotton-spinner. J. Jenkins to be captain, vice Edmunds. Mid

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT-GARDEN.—For the BENEFIT of Signor TAMBURINI —The Nobility, Subscribers, and the Public are respectfully informed that a Grand EXTRA NIGHT will take place on THURSDAY next, JULY 29th, on which occasion will be performed, for the last time this season, DONIZETTI'S LUCIA DI LAMMERMOOR, with the following powerful cast:—Mr netti, Madame Gold; Pippo Molle Alberti; Ardoino, Mr Severi; Fernando, Mr Bartolini; Conductor, Mr Costa. To be followed by LA PERI: in which Mdlle. Pinakott, Mdme. Baderna, Mdlle Serin, Mdlle Rosati, Mdlle Desmonts, Mdlle Bolognesi, & Mr Perrot.

On Saturday with Carati's new Ballet, LA NOSSERA, in which Mdlle. Fuoco will sustain the principal character, supported by a numerous corps de ballet. The doors will be opened at Half-past Seven, and the performance commences at Eight o'Clock.

CASTLE'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE (Proprietor Mr. W. Batty). MONDAY, JULY 26th, by desire of several families; a Festival Night of Lord Byron's passionate Spectacle of MAZEPPA, or the WILD HORSE, will be continued six nights longer, which has been produced with a lit o ical splendour. Entirely new SCENES in the CIRCLE, by the Talented Artistes of the Amphitheatre, in the various Modes of Horsemanship. On Monday, and during the week, Mr Batty will appear in the Act of Acting and Stage Manager, Mr W D Broadfoot In conclusion, an extensive Scene of magnificence, an Original Spectacle, entitled the Siege of Gibraltar, or, the PRINCE OF CYPRUS, or the HORSE of the ELEMENTS, EARTH AIR, FIRE, and WATER

ROYAL GARDENS, VAUXHALL. Patronised by her Majesty and the Royal Family. Open Every Evening (Saturday excepted). Chinese Suspension Bridge—Asiatic Pavilion—Illuminated Cascade, with a Splendid New Series of Tableaux, in which Madame WARTON will appear. The Equestrian from the Garden of Versailles. Grand Scene from the Opera of Norma. Also Actæon, &c &c. Evening Performances at Half-past Eight. Stalls, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 2s.; Promenade, is Admission Half-price. No person admitted in the act of smoking.

JERUSALEM AS IT IS.—Now Exhibiting, at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly EDWIN SMITH'S New and Original Model of JERUSALEM AS IT IS, boasting the rapidity of Two Hundred years, and, embracing Events that have occurred under the name of THE REGISTERED PANORAMA, which appellation they have the right to manufacture and sell, under the provisions of the Copyright of Design Act.

The body exhibits no awful sight regret at having informed the right of the Publicthe to the unenlightened mass, and d thereby agree to pay them the costs f, and hundred to the proprietors thereby by them to establish such right. And I do hereby further agree, on their so doing, to make any affidavit that may be required at on the purchase by me of the Views Cosmorama and the Registered Pa norama, in order to assist the Plaintiffs in proceedings against the wholesale dealers of whom I purchased the same; and I further agree to allow the Plaintiffs the shall be at liberty to make such use of this memorandum as they may be advised.

Dated this 16th day of July, 1847.

FREDERICK WALTER STEWART LACK.

Witness—J. MAYERS, Solicitor, Palace Chambers, St. James's.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.

COLLINS'S ODE on the PASSIONS will be recited by Mr. HOLLINGSHEAD, with Illustrations on a Musical Instrument invented by means of the OPAQUE MICROSCOPE, accompanied by Music by Dr Wall is, on the Morning and Evening of Monday, and on the Morning of Saturday, next. In the Lecture Room. THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH COMPANY has deposited, for the present, a complete Set of their interesting APPARATUS. Dr Bachhoffner's LECTURES on NATURAL PHILOSOPHY, DIORAMA of SCENERY in the Alps, Mont Blanc, Diving Bell, Glees, with a Splendid New Series of Tableaux, in which Madame WARTON will appear. The Equestrian from the Garden of Versailles. Grand Scene from the Opera of Norma. Also Actæon, &c &c. Evening Performances at Half-past Eight. Stalls, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 2s.; Promenade, is Admission Half-price. No person admitted in the act of smoking.

JERUSALEM AS IT IS.—Now Exhibiting, at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly EDWIN SMITH'S New and Original Model of JERUSALEM AS IT IS, boasting the rapidity of Two Hundred years, and, embracing Events that have occurred under the name of THE REGISTERED PANORAMA, which appellation they have the right to manufacture and sell, under the provisions of the Copyright of Design Act.

The body exhibits no awful sight regret at having informed the right of the Publicthe to the unenlightened mass, and d thereby agree to pay them the costs f, and hundred to the proprietors thereby by them to establish such right. And I do hereby further agree, on their so doing, to make any affidavit that may be required at on the purchase by me of the Views Cosmorama and the Registered Pa norama, in order to assist the Plaintiffs in proceedings against the wholesale dealers of whom I purchased the same; and I further agree to allow the Plaintiffs the shall be at liberty to make such use of this memorandum as they may be advised.

Dated this 16th day of July, 1847.

FREDERICK WALTER STEWART LACK.

Witness—J. MAYERS, Solicitor, Palace Chambers, St. James's.

IN CHANCERY.—Between HENRY JOHN NICOLL and DONALD NICOLL, Plaintiffs, and FREDERICK WALTER STEWART LACK, Defendant In consideration of the Plaintiffs' undertaking to prosecute their suit which has been instituted for the purpose of restraining me from selling an Over-Coat under the name of THE REGISTERED PANORAMA, which appellation they have the right to manufacture and sell, under the provisions of the Copyright of Design Act.

I hereby express my awful regret at having informed the right of the Plaintiffs to the unenlightened mass, and d thereby agree to pay them the costs f, and hundred to the proprietors thereby by them to establish such right. And I do hereby further agree, on their so doing, to make any affidavit that may be required at on the purchase by me of the Views Cosmorama and the Registered Pa norama, in order to assist the Plaintiffs in proceedings against the wholesale dealers of whom I purchased the same; and I further agree to allow the Plaintiffs the shall be at liberty to make such use of this memorandum as they may be advised.

Dated this 16th day of July, 1847.

FREDERICK WALTER STEWART LACK.

Witness—J. MAYERS, Solicitor, Palace Chambers, St. James's.

GERMAN HOSPITAL, DALSTON.—A PUBLIC MEETING will be held on MONDAY, JULY 26th, at Half-past Five o'Clock, P.M., at the HANOVER SQUARE ROOMS, to take into consideration the proposed Re-sale of the Asylum Property, in aid of the German Hospital at Dalston; the Surplus of which has not been sufficient to meet the claims of the Institution.—By order of the Committee, HENRY GREAVES, Secretary.

HOUSES.—To be SOLD, a Bargain, Four HOUSES, let at £36 a-year, pay. £8-8s. Eight Houses, let at £176 a-year, price £160. Two at £52 price £40. And a single House, let at £21, price £20. They are close together, well built, and have a brick boundary-wall on each side of them. Term, twenty-two years; Land unfenced, at a low ground rent, and will pay ten per Cent with the Houses.—Apply to Mr. King, Stonebridge House, Acton-street, Kingsland-road, the fourth turning from the Canal Bridge.

TO LET, a very respectable TEA and COFFEE BUSINESS, in a first-rate situation, being opposite the Chinese Pier, 69, Cheyne-walk, Chelsea.—Where an immediate customer can get a very respectable living. £30 for possession. Inquire on the premises.

EDUCATION.—YOUTH are PREPARED for the UNIVERSITIES and CIVIL and PROFESSIONAL LIFE, by the Rev. P. EGAN, assisted by Masters of Eminence in the different departments, comprising the chief Eng ish, Classical, and Oriental Languages. Greek and Latin classics, Mathematics, Natural Philosophy, Hebrew and Arabic. Pupils are taken at two years of age, and are under the more immediate superintendence of Mrs. Egan.—A Preparatory, containing Terms, and a View of the Establishment, may be had by applying at the Institution in the Old Kent-road, A.M.'s Court, Bishopton, between Bath and Bristol.

PARIS.—PROTESTANT ESTABLISHMENT.—Madame MARTIN, No. 1, Rue de Beaune, Faubourg St. Germain, receives a limited number of YOUNG LADIES on the plan of HOME EDUCATION. The studies are conducted by the most eminent Professors of the French capital, under the immediate superintendence of Madame Martin, who, during a residence of twenty-five years at Paris, has been engaged in educating young ladies of rank. Ladies wishing for complete instruction in the French language, to have the advantage of introduction to society, can be received. If required, the pupils may be sent for either by the Steamer or London. The highest references given, both in England and on the Continent. Address as above.

CURRALL and SON, Importers of COGNAC BRANDY, of the highest quality; choice Old Pale at 60s., and Brown at 48s. per Dozen. Bottles, 2s. per Dozen extra.—No. 3, Bradshaw-street, Islington, and 28, Mark-lane, London. Pale High-flavoured Sherry at 36s. per Dozen.—35, Bishopsgate-street Within.

GREEN-GINGER WINE is the most refreshing, wholesome, and palatable cordial that has yet been produced. The original manufacturers of this delicious beverage have the fac-simile of their signature affixed to the labels of each bottle.—Observe the name of "HAYMAN and CO." over the mark of each bottle. May be had, wholesale, at the Manufactory, Bristol, Barge-yard, Bucklersbury; at 26, Duke-street and Henry-street, Liverpool, or of respectable shopkeepers in Town and Country.

TONIC ALE.—The splendid description of Bottled Beer is now ready. It is strongly recommended by the Faculty as possessing the most valuable tonic properties, promoting appetite, &c. Sold in quart and pint bottles, secured by Beat's Patent Capsule. JOSEPH STOCKTON, sole Agent, Stores, No. 1, John-square, Redford-row.

NUMBER ONE, SAINT PAUL'S CHURCHYARD.—
URE TEAS
By purchasing your Teas at Number One, you effect all the saving and the intermediate saving that can possibly be attained.
To have your money back, your time and your temper.
You have your money's worth, for your money, better, and cheaper
You save your time for by dropping a line to the Tea Merchants at St. Paul's, they will be their own deliverer your Tea at your own doorand, or if written at the Counter, while you wait.
Save your temper for when the cabl nating cffs is of drinking really good and pure tea are felt, the temper cannot fail to be cleared and its gained
DAKIN and COMPANY Tea Merchants, Number One, St Paul's Churchyard

BAKER'S PHEASANTRY, Beaufort-street, King's-road, Chelsea, by appointment to her Majesty and H. R. H. Prince Albert).—ORNAMENTAL WATERFOWL, consisting of Black and White Swans, Bernicle Geese, Chilian Geese, Barnacle, Brent, and Laugh ng Geese, Shieldrakes Pintail, Widgeon, Summer and Winter-teal, Golden-eye, Gadwall, Mandarin, Gold and Silver, and Dun Bred, Carolina Ducks, Pied Call, Tufted, and pauche-ed; also Spain, Buenos Ayres, Cochin China, Malay, Poland, Surrey, and Dorking Fowls, and all Half-an-other Sorts, Guinea-hens, Silver, Japan, Pied, and Common Peafowl, and pure Cochin Pigs.

ELEGANT FANS.—Gentlemen desirous of making a handsome and acceptable present to a Lady should pay a visit to MECHI'S, Leadenhall-street, near the India House, where they may inspect a variety of FANS suitable for every purpose, at a Prices. 6d. to the fancy of those who desire take any other direction, Mechi will be found equal to the occasion, as a glance at his well-assorted stock will convince them. A SHOW ROOM will be seen the most perfect Assortment of rare Mechi Manufactures, in Work-tables, Work-boxes, Dressing-cases, Writing-cases, Dressing-bags, Envelope-cases, Portfolios, Note Books, &c. &c. every thing for the Toilet and Work Table may be purchased of Mechi.—It is a fact worthy of notice, and of public interest, that Mechi

AIR GUNS and AIR CANES.—An entirely new and further improved assortment of these portable and silently destructive weapons, now on sale, adapted by HALLY Inn for killing Rabbits, Rooks, Sea Fowl, &c., with Ball, small Shot, Rook shot, Fish with harpoons, &c. Prices commencing at £3 3s. each. Pump, and apparatus complete.—See Practice, price 6d.; by post, 8d.)—HALLY Gun maker to the Admiralty, Rotherhithe.—REMOVED FROM 5, Red Lion-street, Holborn.

CHUBB'S LOCKS, Fire-proof Safes, and Cash Boxes.—CHUBB'S NEW PATENT DETECTOR LOCKS give perfect security from thieves and pick-locks, and also give immediate notice of any attempt to open them. They are made of every size, and for all purposes to which locks are applied, and are strong, simple, and not liable and cannot get out of order. Chubb's Patent Fire-proof Safes, Bankers, Chests, &c. Strong Japan Cash Boxes, and a great variety of other articles made to order, and sold with the Detector Locks. C. CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard.

DEANE'S GUNS are manufactured of no other than the choicest materials, and by none but the most experienced hands, under their immediate inspection, and on the new premises, 3 and 4, Deanes-yard, Westminster. Every Gun that a sportsman can carry with him into the field, and bear first-rate, is to be secure that he is obtaining such, by purchasing one of DEANE and DRAY'S Guns, which are sighted by Mr. Philip Gun and Pistol Barrel Maker to the Queen, and Inventor of the Patent Breech, and the Patent Nipple, and the Patent Gun Sight, and the Detector Locks, and the Patent Gun Sight, and the Patent Gun Sight, and the Patent Gun Sight

SCENE OF THE LATE GUN-COTTON EXPLOSION AT FAVERSHAM.

THE EXPLOSION AT FAVERSHAM.

The explosion of a gun cotton mill, at Faversham, of which we gave an account last week, has proved even more disastrous than was at first stated. So loud was the explosion that the noise was heard within two miles of Maidstone, a distance of seventeen miles. The sound resembled thunder heard at a great distance. The houses within a circumference of a mile were all more or less affected, as if by the shock of an earthquake

The entire number of persons who have suffered is supposed to be thirty-four; of these, twenty have already died. Their funeral, or rather the interment of the fragments of their bodies, took place last Saturday. Of the twenty dead, the remains of ten only have been identified, owing to the dreadfully mangled state of their bodies. Of the fourteen still living, several are not expected to recover. Awfully destructive of human life as the accident has been, it might, and but for a providential circumstance would, have proved more so. It fortunately happened that a considerable number of those usually employed in the works were at the time the catastrophe occurred engaged in haymaking.

At the Coroner's Inquest, held yesterday week, on the bodies of the sufferers nothing that could be relied on as to the cause of the catastrophe was elicited. The inquest was adjourned for a month, in the hope that some of the fourteen still surviving sufferers may be so far recovered as to be able to lay before the Jury more definite information regarding the circumstances under which the catastrophe took place.

In addition to the numerous deaths caused by the explosion, another death took place under very peculiar circumstances. A young man who had been employed in the neighbourhood, having gone to assist in extricating the sufferers, and digging the dead out of the mass of ruins, suddenly felt himself taken ill in consequence of the inhalation of the noxious atmosphere caused by the explosion. He went and represented to a medical gentleman in Faversham how ill he felt, and the medical gentleman told him to walk about for an hour or two in the open air; adding, that if he did not feel better then, he must call on him, and he would prescribe some medecine for him. In the course of three hours the unfortunate man died. An inquest was held on the body, when the medical gentleman referred to gave it as his decided opinion that he had died from the effects of inhaling the noxious air. The Jury returned a verdict to that effect.

We have engraved the locality of the catastrophe, from a sketch by an artist whom we dispatched to Faversham. It shows the stove destroyed; workmen searching the disturbed earth-mounds, in quest of bodies, &c.

The scene of devastation is thus described in the Times report:—

"The extraordinary effect of the explosion on the buildings in the neighbourhood, and on the corn fields in the vicinity, cannot possibly be realised except by an eye-witness. The roofs of all the buildings within about a quarter of a mile of the explosion are completely stripped of their tiles, and the walls are much shaken. Even in the town of Faversham, fully a mile distant from the scene of the disaster, windows were broken, and the houses otherwise damaged in some instances. On the opposite side of the stream which forms the northern boundary of the Marsh Works is a field of wheat of some extent. The explosion has completely blasted this over a space of about two acres, and the ears, drooping and discoloured, present a scene of desolation in perfect character with the adjoining ruins. The willow-trees which skirt the bank of the stream referred to, and, indeed, all the trees within about 50 yards of the buildings Nos. 3 and 4, are torn up by the roots, and scattered about in all directions. Those more distant are less seriously injured, but the foliage of all within a very large circle is wholly destroyed. One of the most remarkable effects of the explosion is the removal, as it appears almost bodily, of the enormous mound of earth skirting the No. 4 stove. Another instance of its power was shown in the forcible ejection from a deep well of two massive pumps, the leaden pipes of which, nearly 20 feet long, were drawn up and thrown to a very considerable distance."

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Parliament was yesterday (Friday) prorogued by her Majesty. The streets leading to the House of Lords presented the same animated appearance as is usual on similar occasions.

Her Majesty, accompanied by Prince Albert, and attended by the usual great Officers of State, entered the Royal carriage, and proceeded from Buckingham Palace to the House of Lords shortly before two o'clock.

As the Royal procession passed through St. James's Park and along the line of road, her Majesty and her illustrious Consort were loudly cheered by the spectators who had assembled to witness this splendid pageant.

On the arrival of the Royal cortège at the House of Lords, it was announced by a discharge of cannon.

Her Majesty having robed, she immediately proceeded to the House, and took her seat on the Throne. Prince Albert occupied a State chair on the right of the Sovereign. The entrance of her Majesty to the House was announced by a flourish of trumpets. The Peers and Peeresses all rose as the Queen entered.

The new House was crowded, and presented a brilliant spectacle. All, or nearly all, the Foreign Ambassadors and Ministers were present. The dresses of the ladies were very elegant.

Her Majesty having taken her seat,

The Lord Chancellor directed Sir Augustus Clifford, Usher of the Black Rod, to summon the House of Commons to hear the Royal Speech on the Prorogation of Parliament.

In a short time the Speaker, accompanied by a number of Members, appeared at the bar, when the right hon. gentleman (as is usual) addressed her Majesty in a short speech, recounting the business of the Session, and concluded by praying the Royal Assent to several bills which had past both Houses.

Her Majesty, who appeared in excellent health and spirits, then read the following Most Gracious Speech:—

"MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,

"I have much satisfaction in being able to release you from the duties of a laborious and anxious Session. I cannot take leave of you without expressing my grateful sense of the assiduity and zeal with which you have applied yourselves to the consideration of the public interests.

"Your attention has been principally directed to the measures of immediate relief which a great and unprecedented calamity rendered necessary.

"I have given my cheerful assent to those laws, which, by allowing the free admission of grain, and by affording facilities for the use of sugar in breweries and distilleries, tend to increase the quantity of human food, and to promote commercial intercourse.

"I rejoice to find that you have in no instance proposed new restrictions, or interfered with the liberty of foreign or internal trade, as a mode of relieving distress. I feel assured that such measures are generally ineffectual, and, in some cases, aggravate the evils for the alleviation of which they are adopted.

"I cordially approve of the acts of large and liberal bounty by which you have assuaged the sufferings of my Irish subjects. I have also readily given my sanction to a law to make better provision for the permanent relief of the destitute in Ireland. I have likewise given my assent to various bills calculated to promote the agriculture and develop the industry of that portion of the United Kingdom. My attention shall be directed to such further measures as may be conducive to those salutary purposes.

"My relations with foreign powers continue to inspire me with confidence in the maintenance of peace.

"It has afforded me great satisfaction to find that the measures which, in concert with the King of the French, the Queen of Spain, and the Queen of Portugal, I have taken for the pacification of Portugal, have been attended with success; and that the civil war which for many months had afflicted that country has at last been brought to a bloodless termination.

"I indulge the hope that future differences between political parties in that country, may be settled without an appeal to arms.

"GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS,

"I thank you for your willingness in granting me the necessary supplies; they shall be applied with due care and economy to the public service.

"I am happy to inform you that, notwithstanding the high price of food, the revenue has, up to the present time, been more productive than I had reason to anticipate. The increased use of articles of general consumption has chiefly contributed to this result. The revenue derived from sugar especially has been greatly augmented by the removal of the prohibitory duties on foreign sugar.

"The various grants which you have made for education in the United Kingdom will, I trust, be conducive to the religious and moral improvement of my people.

"MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,

"I think proper to inform you that it is my intention immediately to dissolve the present Parliament.

"I rely with confidence on the loyalty to the throne, and attachment to the free institutions of this country, which animate the great body of my people. I join with them in supplications to Almighty God that the dearth by which we have been afflicted may, by the Divine blessing, be converted into cheapness and plenty."

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

The Speaker (attired in his state robes) took the chair at a few minutes past one o'clock.

The Lords' amendments to several bills were read and agreed to.

Lord G. BENTINCK gave notice that early next session he should move for a Select Committee to inquire into the state of the West Indies, and to report whether, under the present existing laws, they were able to compete with foreign colonies. The noble Lord addressed the House at some length on the subject.

The House was proceeding with business, when Sir Augustus Clifford, Usher of the Black Rod, appeared at the table, and summoned the House to the House of Lords, to hear her Majesty's most gracious Speech on the Prorogation of Parliament.

IRELAND.

THE ELECTIONS IN IRELAND.

Two Conservatives of mark have already resigned—Mr. E. P. Shirley, in the county of Monaghan, where he will be replaced by a Whig, the Hon. T. V. Dawson; and the Hon. Colonel Dawson Damer, who has resigned his pretensions for the borough of Portarlington, where the field is open for a Liberal, Colonel Dunne. A third Repeal candidate for Mayo has appeared in the person of Mr. V. O'Connor Blake. "Yonghal," says the Cork Examiner, "is in favour of Mr. T. Chisholme Anstey, a well-known Catholic barrister, resident in England." Mr. William Fagan, a proprietor, it is said, of one of the local papers, has consented to stand for the city of Cork in succession to Mr. Daniel Callaghan. Judging from present appearances, there will not be so many contests as might have been expected in Ireland

ADDRESS TO THE LORD LIEUTENANT.—The Lord Mayor of Dublin and a deputation of the Town Council went on Monday to the Castle, to present his Excellency with an Address. His Excellency received them in the state apartment, on the Vice-Regal throne. All the prominent functionaries at the Castle were present. The address, after congratulating his Excellency on his arrival, noticing his character as a statesman, proceeds to discuss the condition of the country. It speaks of the natural advantages of fire-and, and of the famine which desolates the land, as only the aggravation of that destitution under which the country uniformly labours. It describes the universality of the present misery—a misery which has reached all classes—and refers to the circumstance that 50,000 persons in Dublin receive daily rations. The causes of Irish misery are referred to absenteeism, consequent upon the act of Legislative Union, the non-reclamation of waste lands, and the neglect by the British Government and Legislature of the mining and other resources of the country. The Lord Mayor having read the Address, the Earl of Clarendon replied to it. His Excellency admitted that many of the evils of the country were attributable to bad laws, now happily repealed, but, at the same time, he said that the Government could not itself provide the means of prosperity. They must, to a certain extent, be the work of the people. His Excellency then expressed a hope that the present moment might be considered as auspicious for the commencement of a new era, when from various causes party strife has happily subsided; when an awful visitation of Providence has brought different classes and creeds into kindly co-operation and sympathy; when misfortune has taught men, hitherto socially estranged, to know and to appreciate each other.

FRIGHTFUL MURDER IN THE COUNTY OF LIMERICK.—A man, named Hayes, was murdered in the most brutal manner on Wednesday night (last week), in his own house, situate near the village of Toomavara, on the high road between Dublin and Limerick. A party of men, five or six in number, knocked at Hayes's house in the dead of night. He declined to let them enter; and his sister, who, with his mother, dwelt with him, told the marauders he was out. The party then burst in the door, dragged Hayes from the room in which he slept, and commenced beating him. One of his sisters endeavoured to protect him, but she was attacked herself, knocked down, and stunned by blows. Hayes was also knocked down, and, while in that position, some fiend fired a blunderbuss, the contents of which entered his abdomen, and he expired in a few hours. None of the assassins can be identified

FOOD FROM AMERICA.—The American frigate Macedonian dropt anchor in Cove harbour on the 16th, laden with 1800 tons weight of bread-stuffs, the gift of the United States to the poor of Ireland. This superb war vessel has a crew of 600 teetotallers, and, on the approach of Father Mathew, in the Mayor's barge, Commodore De Kay manned the yards, and the gallant yankees gave three thundering cheers for the modern apostle.

THE REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—The weekly gathering of the "Old Ireland" Repeal party was held on Monday, notwithstanding the adjournment on the previous Monday being for a fortnight. The adjournment, however, was in consequence of the expected arrival of Mr. O'Connell's remains from Genoa, the postponement of which enables the association to meet. The attendance was extremely wretched, including Mr. John O'Connell, M.P., Mr. C. M'Tavish, the Repeal candidate for Dundalk, &c. The chair was occupied by Mr. John Reynolds, T.C. The rent was announced to be £50

DEATH OF THE O'CONOR DON.—We regret to have to announce the death of the O'Conor Don, M.P. for Roscommon, and one of the Lords of the Treasury, which melancholy event took place on Wednesday night at his residence in Jermyn-street, St. James's. The disease of which the hon. gentleman died was an illness of the heart.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JULY 24, 1847.

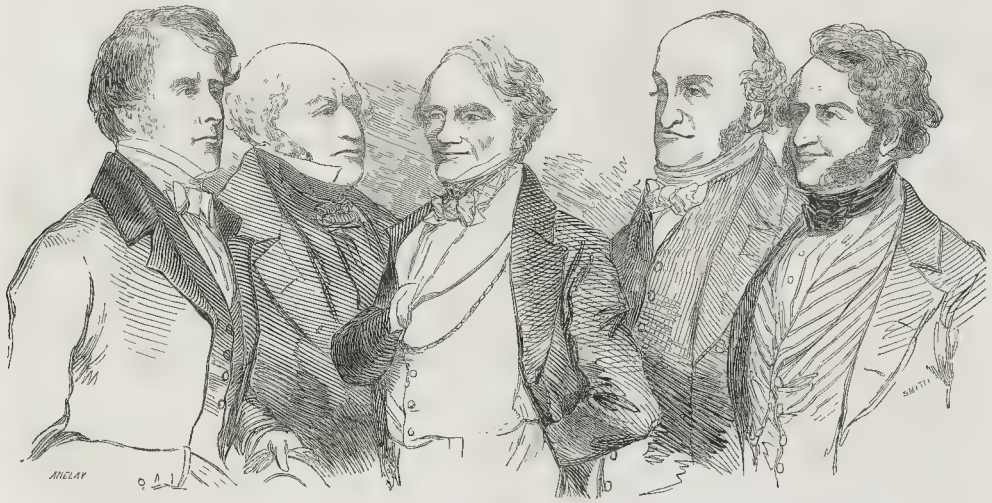
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 274.—Vol. XI.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JULY 31, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE ELECTIONS.

THE absorbing question of the week has been the Elections. Not that party spirit runs as high as on some occasions comparatively recent, or that any one vital question is hanging in the balance, waiting the decision of the Hustings; on the contrary, the two parties have approached, and to some extent exchanged attributes. The Conservatives have abjured Protection; the Whigs are extending the power of the Church. A few years ago, it would have been folly in any one to have predicted such results: the inference is that no party can act continuously up to a fixed and settled policy; they are driven leagues wide of the line of sailing by the cross winds of circumstance. The chances are, therefore, that a party professing the principle of adhesion to one point, will, ere long, be driven from it. As soon as the cry of "No Surrender!" is raised, we may be sure there is a capitulation and compromise pending. When a garrison begins to talk of yielding, though in a tone of defiance, it proves that the enemy is becoming formidable. So, as no great question is tested by the present Election, we augur that the next Parliament will be one of comparatively little change; no long-cherished system will sink in it; and, if the Conservatives gain the numerical preponderance, it is just possible they may merit their name by preserving.

But, though thus shorn of excitement, as compared with former struggles, the Election is, of itself, and for what it involves, an



MR. PAYNE. SIR GEORGE LARPENT. LORD JOHN RUSSELL. MR. PATTISON. BARON ROTHSCHILD.

CITY OF LONDON ELECTION.—THE LIBERAL CANDIDATES.

MR. MASTERMAN. ALDERMAN JOHNSON. MR BEVAN MR. [illegible]

CITY OF LONDON ELECTION.—THE CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATES.

event fraught with interest. We are too apt to think lightly, and lower the estimate of the great appeal to the people, by mixing up with it the extraneous and accidental circumstances by which it is accompanied. The proceedings of the Hustings are a never-failing subject of satire. The platitudes; the ad captandum appeals to prejudice; the gross flattery showered upon the "independent electors" and "enlightened constituencies," who, perhaps, are neither perfectly independent nor superabundantly enlightened; the expedients—we might call them tricks - by which success has sometimes been purchased; the treating, and bribery, and seduction of voters; all this has furnished many a theme to the satirist, whether he wielded the pen or the pencil. Yet, under all this, and in spite of it, there remains the one great, vital principle, that the people have thrown into their hands, fully and certainly, the governing power of the State. Purists and framers of Utopian Constitutions may denounce the working of the system, and point out the faults alluded to. They are defects, and they do diminish our claim to the possession of an ideally perfect system; but, notwithstanding, what could be substituted for it, without infinite loss, and extreme injury to all that free men should value?

Let no one imagine that greater purity, that a higher political morality, is ensured by narrowing the lease on which the Government rests. France, the next great Constitutional State of Europe, has the smallest possible elective constituency, in proportion to its population. Is the standard of public feeling higher than in England? On the contrary: the Government, with the countless offices in its gift, commands the electors; the abuses of the old rotten boroughs in England were as nothing in their effects on the well-being of the people, compared with "the system" in France. In England, the representation was in the hands of the Crown, checked by a great amount of the same influence possessed by the two sections of the Aristocracy; in the conflict between them, the people always gained something; there were also large constituencies, too strong to be coerced, too numerous to be bought, through which "liberal opinions" or "popular principles," whichever Mr. Disraeli may please to call them, always found their way. In France there is but one power, that of the Crown: let those who sneer at the popular element in our Constitution, look at results. The French Deputy is without responsibility to the people, in the true sense of the term; and we find them falling from the rank of Statesmen to the degradation of criminals, convicted of the most vulgar corruption, and subjected to fine, imprisonment, and the loss of civil rights. The Pastes, and Cubières, and Pellapras, are the creation of a narrow and imperfect system of representation. Retreat yet further from the popular form of Government, and what do we find? A people, like that of Prussia, comparatively wealthy, and certainly well educated, subjected to a refined and complicated despotism, but just granted a Public Administration of Justice, and not yet allowed the free interchange of thought. The Government is said to be extravagant in its expenditure, although, at once honest and frugal; but, where no means of detection exist, much of this must be taken for granted. It is neither the French nor the Prussian system, that Englishmen would find better than their own.

There is a class of writers constantly pointing out the corruption, the mean and paltry vices, often found at work within a popular system of representation, by showing that one always accompanies the other: they insist it is inherent in it. We have noticed two cases of more restricted influence on the part of the people, upon the Government, one being more corrupt, and both certainly less free, than ourselves. Where shall we turn to next? To pure despotisms? We have examples before us in Russia and Turkey, and, in each of them, peculation and bribery are not exceptions to the rule—they are the rule itself.

The Emperor Alexander once said that the Admirals would steal his fleet, if they only knew where they could sell it. All the naval and military departments are a mass of embezzlement; and Nicholas has been compelled quite recently to degrade and exile some of his highest officers. He does all that a man of immense energy can do to check it; but where it is the interest of so many to conceal the truth, it is easy to keep him ill informed. The Eastern mode of managing matters is still more undisguised; the Pachas buy their posts, and then grind every grain out of the people by sheer force. Nations unpolicied and barbarous cannot be admitted into the comparison; but we may be pretty sure power will be most abused where there is the least limit to it.

We may go in another direction, and we shall be as far from perfection among universal suffrage and the ballot. If we can take the Americans on their own showing, they are as conscious of abuses and absurdities in their system as we are in ours. What we deduce from this is, that we ought not to allow ourselves to fall into the habit of underrating the institutions under which we live. In our very familiarity with them we overlook half their value. We must go as far back as the republic of Rome to find a state in which the elective principle was so generally carried out; and there are men who can be enthusiastic over the voting of the Tribes and Comitia of Rome, who would not give a moment's thought to the working of the suffrage in Finsbury or Marylebone. Half of what is set upon stilts, and looks grand and dignified in history, is made so only by time: all the petty features have dropped out of sight—we see the results without the processes. What evidence we do possess, shows the Roman form of canvassing to have been ostentatiously servile. Shakspeare has revived one election scene, and in it the candidate points as much confidence in the power of the owner of a rotten borough reduced by the Reform Bill, to beg what he before took without asking -forced to "cog their hearts from them," to parley for the "sweet voices" of the populace, and treat for their "price o' the Consulship."

Let the people keep firm hold of the right of Election, and not suffer themselves to be sneered out of one jot of the power it gives them. They are improving in the power of using it. The gross debauchery and violence of the Elections of former years are becoming traditional. They live in the prints of Hogarth, and the representations of the Westminster hustings of a far more recent period. Drunkenness and fights were the constant accompaniments of a contest; and it was part of the duty of a candidate to submit to a pelting—a practice abated by the abolition of the pillory, to which the hustings bore some resemblance, when both were contemporary. The shortening the duration of Elections, and the division of cities and boroughs into polling districts, have had a most salutary influence. The contest is so soon over, that the passions have scarcely time to get excited by opposition, as in the ten and fifteen days struggles of the good old times. Though the idea lingers in a few places, we are losing the notion that an Election must be a saturnalia, a suspension of all order and decency. It is in the largest constituencies that the fewest excesses are committed; and we have no doubt the spirit in which the Metropolitan Elections is conducted has its effect throughout the country. Indeed, the conduct of the people, where they are most massed together, shows how safely, with advancing knowledge and intelligence, they may be trusted with a power which, to the greater part of Europe, is unknown; and, where it is admitted, is dreaded, granted sparingly, and exercised under suspicion and distrust; but it is the free spirit kept up by her Elective system that has made England what she is. The power invested by it in the body of the people could not safely be given to any form of absolute power, though it were possible for it to be used with absolute wisdom.

THE CITY ELECTION.—PORTRAITS OF THE CANDIDATES.

We have engraved upon the preceding page, Portraits of the Nine Candidates, from sketches, taken by our artist, on the day of Nomination at the Guildhall.

In the centre of the group of Liberals is LORD JOHN RUSSELL whose public life has already been sketched in our columns.

Next is MR. JAMES PATTISON, who represented the City in the Parliaments of 1833 and 1837: was unsuccessful at the general election in 1841, but was elected in October, 1843, filling the vacancy occasioned by the death of Sir Matthew Wood. Mr. Pattison is a merchant; and his father and grandfather were engaged in commercial pursuits; the family estate is at Plumstead, in Kent, where the Pattisons have been settled for nearly a century.

SIR GEORGE-GERARD DE HOCHEPIED LARPENT formerly represented Nottingham in Parliament. He was created a Baronet in 1841.

BARON DE LIONEL ROTHSCHILD is the eldest son of Nathan Mayer Rothschild, the celebrated millionnaire. (A brief sketch of his life will be found at page 76)

MR. WILLIAM PAYNE is the well-known Coroner of London and Southwark.

Of the Conservatives, MR. MASTERMAN is the head of the long-established banking firm in Lombard-street. Mr. Masterman sat for the City in the late Parliament.

MR. JOHN JOHNSON is Alderman of the Ward of Dowgate, and served the office of Lord Mayor in 1845-46

MR. ROBERT COOPER REVAN is the third partner in the banking firm of Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, and Co., in Lombard-street.

MR. JAMES WILLIAM FRESHFIELD is one of the solicitors to the Bank of England, and at the head of the firm of the Messrs. Freshfield, in New Bank Buildings, Lothbury.

THE ELECTIONS FOR THE METROPOLIS.

CITY OF LONDON.—RETURN OF THREE LIBERAL CANDIDATES.

The nomination of candidates for the City of London took place on Wednesday at Guildhall.

Mr. Payne, the Coroner, entered the hall soon after ten o'clock; Mr. Masterman and Mr. Bevan, arrived at eleven, and were warmly received by their friends. Lord John Russell and the other candidates did not make their appearance until after the preliminary proceedings had commenced; they were severally greeted with cheers by their respective adherents.

After the accustomed forms, Jones Loyd, Esq., nominated Lord John Russell, and Wm. Hawes, Esq., seconded the proposal.

Thomas Baring, Esq., nominated John Masterman, Esq.—Russell Ellice, Esq., seconded the nomination.

Wm. Henry Prescott, Esq., proposed James Pattison, Esq., and strongly exhorted the Liberal electors to unite in supporting the four Liberal candidates. (Loud cheers.)—John Dillon, Esq., seconded the nomination.

Thomas Wilson, Esq., proposed J. W. Freshfield, Esq.—The nomination was seconded by Henry Chapman Mackay.

Thomas Hankey, Jun., Esq. proposed Sir George Larpent. -Wm. John Hall, Esq., seconded the nomination.

Horsley Palmer, Esq., proposed Mr. Alderman Johnson—The nomination was seconded by Mr Deputy Brown.

P. A. Taylor, Esq., proposed Baron Lionel Nathan Rothschild -J. Ingram Travers, Esq., seconded the nomination.

Abel Smith, Esq., proposed Mr. Robert Bradbury, Esq., seconded, the nomination of R. L. Bevan, Esq.

J. P. Muller, Esq., proposed W. Payne, Esq., whose nomination was seconded by James Meller, Esq.

Lord John Russell then presented himself, but was unable to proceed for several minutes, in consequence of the repeated cheers with which he was received and the uproar which prevailed. Having succeeded in obtaining a partial hearing, he said "I am here before you in fulfilment of the promise I made a short time since, for it shall not be said that I was ashamed to appear before you. I come before this large and numerous body of electors in the metropolis of this country and the British empire, to ask you whether I am worthy of again solicitingyour suffrages, and of being your representative in Parliament. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, when on a former occasion, six years ago, I solicited your suffrages, I had to contend with those who stood by the principles of protecting native industry. Gentlemen, in the next year the Prime Minister of the Crown proposed the re.axation of a large number of duties. Many of those who were interested in the matter—corn-dealers, corn-growers, and others, called upon me to represent the injury which they would sustain by admitting the principle of Free Trade in articles which they manufactured, while there remained a prohibitory duty on corn. I said to them, 'You may depend upon it that it is principle of Free-Trade cannot be much longer excluded from the article of corn: the whole system will soon become so odious that it must break down." (Loud cheers.) Gentlemen, I find these predictions verified and confirmed in the first place by the event, in the next by the recent address of the Right Hon. Sir Robert Peel to his constituents; in which he declares that, after the great changes in the year 1846, the Corn Law must be considered as the only one of any importance to be maintained. Those predictions are also confirmed by an address which I have seen in the newspapers to-day, in which the candidates who are opposed to us abjure the name of 'Protectionists,' and have altogether cast off the principle which they contended in 1841. (Cheering.) Gentlemen, with respect to other questions I will not now detain you, because, having very recently explained my sentiments to a large assembly, I think that the best mode of proceeding in action; and to-morrow you will have to decide whether or not I am worthy of again becoming your representative. I will only say one word with respect to those who oppose us. Parties there are in the country, and my future endeavours frighten you with vain terrors. Protestantism is in no danger—(cheers mingled with hisses); but while we support Protestantism, let us not altogether overlook or neglect Christianity. It is the duty of every true body of Protestant Dissenters who are opposing me on this occasion, I must say that I think it has altogether arisen from my efforts to promote the great cause of education. If the great body of Dissenters complain of any grant, or of any portion of any grant under which they unjustly suffer, I will use my best endeavours to relieve them from it—(loud cheers); but if they come to me, and ask me to abstain from promoting the progress of education, I am sure that I cannot abstain, because I think the education of the people is connected with the civil and religious liberties of the people, and by that cause I mean to adhere. I will conclude what I have to say to you by stating, that as a Minister of the Crown, I am not ashamed of facing a great body of my fellow-subjects, and that I shall continue to esteem it one of the highest honours if by your suffrages I am again elected as your representative in Parliament." (Cheering.)

Mr. Masterman said: "I am a supporter of the many valuable important public institutions of this country, but, at the same time, am ready, where abuses may have crept into their management, to lend a helping hand for their improvement, but not for their destruction. The Poor Law is so frequently alluded to, that I have no hesitation in saying, my desire has been to render it less offensive to those who come under its provisions, and my future endeavours will be to join in promoting any amelioration that may be brought under the consideration of Parliament. The Currency question is one in which I feel a deep interest, and strongly object to the restrictive regulations in the Bank Charter Bill, considering there should be a power of expanding the circulation in times of pressure, under proper regulations, and believing the inconvenience lately suffered by the commercial community arose entirely from there being no such power. The Navigation Laws, I consider, are so mixed up, not only with the commercial interests, but with that great arm of national prosperity, the Navy, that I should feel very cautious of altering their provisions."

Mr. Pattison said, that in 1841 he was defeated, because he had advocated the principles of Free-Trade, and a repeal of the Corn Laws, in opposition to his adversaries, who had been engaged in the opposite views. If he were again elected as their representative, he should continue to stick to his principles, and would never flinch from them. He had voted for frequent parliaments, and for an increase of the suffrage. He trusted that they would return him again to Parliament, and thereby afford him the opportunity of assisting in the working out of those principles. (Cheers and hisses.)

Mr Freshfield said: His honourable friends who had preceded him had each appealed to their past services. He would not claim their support on precisely those grounds, but he would appeal to them on the ground of long past parliamentary duty. He had had the honour to sit in four Parliaments; and, as something had been said on the subject of political consistency, he would boldly claim for himself the merit of having been a consistent Reformer. He had given a general support to Sir Robert Peel, but he had never voted with him when he brought forward measures that were inconsistent with the liberties of the subject. It had been objected against him, as a candidate, that he was a banker; he hoped, for the character of the law, that that would not be allowed to operate against his being member for the City of London, which, for two hundred years, had been represented by its Recorder.

Sir G. Larpent next presented himself, amidst loud cheers. He said, that though he could boast of no Parliamenta.y experience, or of services rendered them in Parliament, he did not feel that to be any disadvantage, when he considered that he was one of themselves. (Cheers.) They were traders of the City of London, and he was one of its merchants. His interests were, therefore, identified with theirs, and he would do everything in his power to promote the trade and commerce of the city. (Cheers) He stood forward as an advocate of Free-Trade. (Cheers.) He would endeavour to maintain what they had acquired, and to procure what they had not yet obtained. (Cheers.)

Mr. Alderman Johnson said—Gentlemen, I feel that from my long services in the performance of my civic duties I have completely identified myself with your welfare, and from the very fact of my long acquaintance with your rights and privileges, I may be enabled to render to you further public service, upon your electing me one of your representatives; not then being alone in the position of an administrator of the laws, but as a legislator, amending them where I may find them defective. (Groans and cheers.)

Baron Rothschild then came forward, and was greeted with loud cheers and a general waving of hats. He said he came before them to claim their support as a Free-Trader, to ask for their votes as a firm advocate of civil and religious liberty, and a zealous reformer of all abuses. These opinions were now more prevalent than when he first espoused them, but he trusted that he had also personal claims upon their support. The long connection of his family with their great city had given him every opportunity of becoming acquainted with the sources of its prosperity, and his successive intercourse with the Continental States had enabled him to obtain an intimate knowledge of their foreign trade, now more than ever an object of the greatest importance. He did not, however, wish to lay any stress upon his personal merits, and he would only add that all his interests were connected with those of the electors, and that, on every occasion in his private capacity, he had contributed to the utmost of his power to the attainment of those great measures of reform and improvement which had lately been passed. In assisting to the full development of those principles of Free Trade, and in securing perfect freedom of commerce, he should be still more anxious to secure perfect liberty in religion.

Mr. Rothschild, who was frequently interrupted by bursts of cheering and counter-cheering, sat down amidst loud applause.

Mr. Bevan next came forward, and attempted to address the meeting, amidst great confusion and uproar. He said that if they did not feel with him the importance of preserving what remained of Protestantism in their constitution, and the paramount duty of seeking the favour and blessing of the true God upon all their ways as a nation, but if they thought, on the contrary, that such things were only fit subjects for the taverns and disquisitions of no Popery fanatics, and unworthy the attention of enlightened and liberal minds, then he could scarcely expect that they would return him to Parliament. He trusted, however, that there was a deeper religious and Protestant feeling in the bosoms of his Fellow-citizens than some were disposed to give them credit for

Mr. Payne, who was the last of the candidates in addressing the electors, said that he was independent of all parties. He was glad to see them all in such good humour. (Great laughter.) He hoped that those who supported the Government candidates would not be at a loss for good places if they succeeded in returning their friends to Parliament. He trusted that they would never be obliged to go to the poor houses of this country for relief in their necessities, for there was much cruelty practised in them under the existing law. If returned to Parliament, he should endeavour to amend the law, so as to make it more humane and congenial to the feelings of Englishmen.

The show of hands having been made,

Mr. Sheriff Challis came forward, and declared that the election, by show of hands, had fallen upon Lord J Russell, Mr. Pattison, Sir G. Larpent, and Baron Lionel de Rothschild.

A poll was then demanded on behalf of the other candidates, which took place on Thursday.

OFFICIAL DECLARATION.

The official declaration was made yesterday by Mr. Sheriff Challis, as follows:

Russell	..	..	.. 7137	Bevan	 5264
Pattison	..	..	.. 7030	Johnson	 5009
Freshfield	..	..	.. 6759	Freshfield	 4704
Masterman	..	..	.. 6722	Payne	 543
Larpent	..	..	.. 6719

The Sheriff then declared that Lord John Russell, Mr. Pattison, Baron Lionel de Rothschild, and Mr. Masterman were duly elected.

WESTMINSTER

RETURN OF SIR DE LACY EVANS AND MR. LUSHINGTON.

The nomination of candidates for the representation of Westminster took place on Wednesday, at the usual place, St. Paul's, Covent Garden.

A few minutes before twelve o'clock, Sir De Lacy Evans and his friends arrived, and were enthusiastically received by the vast crowds in front of the hustings. At other entrances Mr. Hall and afterwards Mr. Smith made their appearance, and were warmly welcomed by their respective friends and supporters.

Mr. Bambridge proposed (amidst the greatest confusion and uproar) Sir De Lacy Evans. Mr. Henry Ellis seconded the nomination

Mr. Burroughs proposed Mr. C. Cochrane. Mr. Hallett seconded the nomination.

Mr. S. G. Robinson proposed Mr. C. Lushington.

Mr. Elliott then proposed Lord Mandeville on high Conservative and Protectionist principles, and called upon the Conservatives of Westminster to rally round the son of the Duke of Manchester, and return him to Parliament.

Lord Sandon seconded the proposition.

Sir De Lacy Evans then came forward, and was received with general cheering. He said that, as short accounts make long friends, he came before them to yield an account of his stewardship, and to request a renewal of it at their hands ("Bravo! you shall have it"). On the last occasion they had elected him by a majority of nearly a thousand over a distinguished popular candidate, and a member of the Government of the day. (Great cheering.) He had since that contributed in Parliament to that great victory, the Repeal of the Corn-Laws. (Great cheering.) He rejoiced in that victory, because it had annihilated that party which had for so many years opposed every extension of the rights of the people. (Applause.) The great Conservative party had been shattered into fragments. (Renewed applause.) The name of Conservative had become so disgusting, that he was not surprised at gentlemen seeking to get rid of it. Let the noble Lord on the other side explain the distinction between a Tory and a Conservative. (Between a Pestle and a Bentinckite. (Laughter.) Among the measures which he had supported was the Education Grant. (Applause.) That grant was but a commencement. He regretted, from the dissensions of religious parties, that that grant had not been unanimously received. The policy of the Government in respect of that grant was not free from serious error; but, within the last few weeks, they had done something to repair it.

Mr. Cochrane next addressed the meeting, and was enthusiastically cheered by one party, and as vehemently hissed by another, but a much smaller one. The ladies in the balcony of the house waved their pocket handkerchiefs in a very graceful manner, and continued to do so during Mr. Cochrane's speech, probably for the double purpose of exciting the mob to cheer their favourite, and raising a gentle breeze to refresh themselves. He said his motto was fair play and no favour. (Laughter.) He challenged Hilton to meet Mr. Cochrane, and substantiate the charges made against him. One of the charges thrown out against him by these secret parties was that he had assumed the name of Cochrane. He was born for Protestantism. (Cheers.) His name was the name he was born with, the name which he had in infancy, in manhood, and to which he was entitled. (Applause.) He was the son of the Hon. Basil Cochrane, the brother of the late Earl of Dundonald, and his father was the uncle of the present Earl. (Uproar.) In asking for the suffrages of the electors of Westminster, he trusted to acts more than to words.

Mr. Charles Lushington, Esq., next addressed the meeting, enumerating his past services in the Liberal cause, and promising, if they elected him, to pursue the same course, undeviatingly and unflinchingly.

Lord Mandeville was then called upon to speak. He said he should, if elected promote the interests of the city to the utmost of his power. He came forward in order that the Conservative interest might not be swamped in the city

A vast number of hands were held up for General Evans, but the majority were for Mr. Cochrane

The High Bailiff then declared that the show of hands was in favour of Mr. Cochrane and General Evans. A poll was demanded, which took place on Thursday.

OFFICIAL DECLARATION

At two o'clock, yesterday, the High Bailiff declared from the hustings that the true state of the poll at its close was:

Evans	..	..	.. 3139	Cochrane	 2819
Lushington	..	..	.. 2831	Mandeville	 1988

And, therefore, Sir De Lacy Evans and Mr. Lushington were duly elected as the two members for Westminster.

MARYLEBONE

The nomination of the candidates for this borough took place at the hustings in Portland-place, Regent's Park, on Thursday afternoon.

Shortly before three o'clock, Sir J. Hamilton, who comes forward as the Conservative candidate, arrived at the hustings, and was greeted by numerous friends, and was received with enthusiastic cheers. The other candidates, viz. B. Hall, Mr. Sergeant Shee, Lord Dudley Stuart, and Mr. Owen, were received with equal zeal on their arrival by their respective supporters.

Mr. Hovenden came forward, amidst mingled cheers and hisses, and proposed Sir Benjamin Hall. Mr. Smart seconded the motion.

Mr. Kempshead then proposed Sir J. Hamilton. Mr. C. Hyde seconded the motion.

Mr. J. Wood proposed, and Mr. Barnwal seconded, the nomination of Mr. Sergeant Shee.

Mr. G Daniell proposed the nomination of Lord Dudley Stuart, seconded by Mr. Cassel.

Mr. Lloyd Jones then moved, and Mr. Williams seconded, the nomination of Mr. Robert Owen.

Each of the candidates having addressed the assembly,

Mr. Salmons called for a show of hands, which he declared to be in favour of Sir B. Hall and Mr. Sergeant Shee.

A poll was then demanded on the part of Lord D. Stuart and Sir J. Hamilton.

At the final close of the poll yesterday, the numbers were:—

Stuart	..	..	..	..	.. 5122
Hall	..	..	..	..	.. 5005
Hamilton	..	..	..	..	.. 4515
Shee	..	..	..	..	.. 4214

FINSBURY.

The election for this borough commenced so early as nine o'clock on Wednesday, at which hour Mr. Wakley, accompanied by a few friends, presented himself before about a hundred people whose curiosity was strong enough to make them form a little crowd in front of the hustings, which had been erected on Islington-green.

The usual formalities having been observed, Valentine Knight, Esq., proposed Thomas Slingsby Duncombe, Esq. Charles Sturgeon, Esq., seconded the nomination.

James Titmarsh, Esq., nominated Mr. Wakley.—John Maclaren, Esq., seconded the nomination.

No other candidate being proposed, the returning officer declared Messrs. Duncombe and Wakley members for Finsbury, amidst cheering, at a quarter to nine o'clock.

Mr. Wakley, in returning thanks, expressed his regret at the absence of Mr. T. Duncombe from severe indisposition. Mr. Duncombe had been suffering severely for some time; it had been seen by all his friends in the House of Commons, and they also saw that he had sacrificed his health by the great exertions he had made in the cause of the people. (Cheers.) Tommy Duncombe was one of the most gallant men in the House of Commons (cheers, and laughter); and as long as the electors of Finsbury chose that he (Mr. Wakley) should represent them in Parliament, he trusted that he should always have Mr. Duncombe by his side. (Cheers.) He (Mr. Wakley) felt grateful for the manner in which their names had been proposed, and the manner in which they had been received, and although there was very little excitement it was merely because they had no opponent. Where was Sam Warren? (A laugh.) He was a very soft lad, and never had been a candidate at all. He only wrote to the electors of Finsbury to say that he was not a candidate; but he (Mr. Walley) challenged him, and he would be accused of cowardice if he did not come forward and lay his pretensions before the constituency upon another occasion. What was Sam Warren?—a sort of writer for the magazines. He did not suppose that Mr Sam knew a dose of rhubarb from a dose of salts, yet he wrote what he was pleased to call "The Diary of a Physician." He was also the author of "Ten Thousand a Year," not the possessor of it. Now if he (Mr. Walley) had any abilities at all, why did he not write and put them forth in his profession? He suspected that the attempt he had made upon the borough was dictated by feelings of private resentment against him (Mr. Walley). They might all recollect that, during the last year a poor fellow-creature had lost his life from the flesh being torn from his back, while a surgeon was looking on, but who failed in his duty, and never once felt the pulse of the victim: the name of that surgeon was Warren; he believed he was brother to Sam. (A laugh.) Upon that occasion, he disclaimed his duty to the satisfaction of the English public; but, for so doing, he had been most atrociously libelled. Mr. Wakley then referred to the City election, eulogised the public conduct of Lord John Russell, and proceeded to refer to his own exertions in Parliament, in behalf of Radical Reform.

Mr. Armstrong returned thanks on behalf of Mr. Duncombe, and read a letter from an M.D., stating that that gentleman was labouring under an attack of bronchitis, and that it would be dangerous to his life to appear on the hustings.

On the motion of Mr. Wakley, a vote of thanks was awarded to the returning officer, and the election was at an end.

LAMBETH.

The nomination for Lambeth took place on Thursday at Kennington Common. Laurence Redhead, Esq., proposed Mr. R. Hawes, jun., and Mr. Corrie seconded the nomination.

Mr. Carlisle nominated Mr. Tennyson d'Eyncourt. The nomination was seconded by W. F. Hardy, Esq.

Mr. Corderoy proposed Mr. Charles Pearson. Mr. Dunnton seconded the nomination.

Mr. Daniels proposed Mr. Gurney. Mr. Shaw seconded the nomination.

Mr. Hawes, Mr. Tennyson d'Eyncourt, and Mr. Pearson having spoken,

A person of Arch Clubs addressed the electors, by proposing himself as a fit and proper person, amidst a tumult and uproar rarely witnessed even at a contested election.

A procession of men, supposed to be of Mr. Clubb's committee, appeared, one of them carrying the shells of lobsters, another party were engaged on the common carrying a young donkey, as they said, to the poll, as another candidate for Lambeth.

The show of hands was then taken, when the returning officer declared the show to be in favour of the Right Hon. C. T. D'Eyncourt and Charles Pearson. Subsequently Mr Pearson asked whether the returning officer did not think he had the largest show of hands.

The Returning Officer replied—Certainly; and that he had made the declaration supposing that Mr. D'Eyncourt, as the former member, should be declared first.

A poll was then demanded by Mr. Hawes.

At the final close of the poll yesterday the numbers were—

Pearson	4595
D'Eyncourt	3662
Hawes	3348

TOWER HAMLETS.

The nomination of candidates for the Tower Hamlets took place on Thursday, on Stepney Green. Shortly before twelve o'clock Sir William Clay and Mr. George Thompson appeared on the platform. General Fox arrived at twelve o'clock.

Mr. Simpson nominated Sir William Clay; and Mr. Laurence seconded the nomination.

Sir C. N. Buxton proposed Major-General Fox; Mr. Martin seconded the nomination.

Mr. Morley then came forward to propose Mr. George Thompson; Mr. Fry seconded the nomination.

The candidates having addressed the electors,

The Returning Officer called for a show of hands.

About one-third held up their hands for Sir William Clay, about a fourth for General Fox, and a great many hands for Mr George Thompson.

The Returning Officer then declared, amidst loud cheers, that the show of hands was in favour of Mr. Thompson and Sir William Clay.

A poll was then demanded on behalf of General Fox.

At the final close of the poll yesterday, the numbers were—

Thompson	7143
Clay	3774
Fox	2714

GREENWICH.

The nomination for Greenwich also took place on Thursday.

Dr. Rivers nominated Admiral Dundas—Mr. J. Warde seconded the motion, and congratulated the electors upon the opportunity now afforded them of re-electing so useful a member.

Mr. Hayorft then proposed Mr. Barnard.—Mr. Joly seconded the nomination.

Mr. Lewis David proposed Mr. Salomons, who, though a new candidate, was no stranger to any one present. Mr. Jones seconded the nomination.

Mr. Morgan nominated Mr. Samuel Kidd. Mr. Floyd seconded the nomination.

After speeches from the several candidates a show of hands was demanded, and having been declared, by a considerable majority, in favour of Mr Salomons and Mr. Kidd, a poll was demanded on the part of Admiral Dundas and Mr. Barnard.

At the close of the poll yesterday, the numbers were :—

Dundas	2465
Barnard	1424
Salomons	1248

IRELAND.

THE ELECTIONS.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY ELECTION.—This promises to be a close and interesting contest. The candidates are Messrs. Hamilton and Shaw (the late members), Professor M'Cullach, and Mr. Napier, a Conservative barrister.

CITY AND COUNTY OF DUBLIN.—There will be no contest for the city or county of Dublin, and in both the late members will be re elected. The city Sheriff, Mr. George Rose, has received the writ, and will probably fix Monday next for the election BELFAST.—The candidates for the borough of Belfast are reduced to three—namely, Lord John Chichester, one of the present members (High Tory); Mr. Sheriff Duffers, Moderate Conservative, and a Presbyterian); and Mr. Robert James Tennant (Whig).

DUNDALK.—The borough of Dundalk appears to be a peculiar object of attraction for the speculators in Parliamentary seats. In addition to Messrs. M'Tavish and M'Calliagh, a third claimant has entered the arena, in the person of a Mr. David Doud, of Edinburgh, a Repealer.

CONVICTIONS FOR MURDER.—Two men, named John Ryan (Rody) and M'chae. Ryan (Cooter), have been capitally convicted at Clonmel assizes, of the murder of sub-constable Crawley. It appeared that the policeman was travelling on an outside car, on the 31st of January last, with Mr. Wray, one of the pay clerks under the Board of Works, and another policeman, when they were fired at by a party of five men, two of whom were the prisoners, whose object evidently was to rob them of a sum of money which he was then conveying under guard of the two policemen to a certain site of the public works, for the purpose of distribution amongst the labouring poor. Mr. Justice Perrin passed sentence, ordering both the prisoners to be executed on Friday, the 24th of September.

THE SQUADRON OF EXERCISE.—This squadron put to sea on Tuesday. They have received from Sir C. Napier the following rendezvous: Cork, Cape Finisterre, Cape Clear, Lisbon, Cape St. Vincent, Gibraltar. They are to cruise and be at sea about four months. The Undaunted will be substituted for the Dragon, and the Stromboli for the Amphion, as they are not ready. The Iris, 26, is to be sent to Chatham to be paid off. The squadron was seen in Christchurch Bay on Thursday. The sight was a beautiful one, and the calmness of the weather left the vessels for a long time within view.

PLOUGHING WITH ELEPHANTS.—In No. 949 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS we have a fine illustration of the method of ploughing with elephants lately introduced into the East Indies; at the same time that we illustrated the plough made for this purpose, by Messrs. Ransom and May, of Ipswich. In confirmation of this novel employment of the elephant, we find in the Farmers' Times, and Royal Agricultural Society's Reporter, a letter from Leonard Wray, at Singapore, pointing to the elephant, when kindly broken, as "an excellent draught animal, admirably adapted for the prompt and other agricultural implements, obeying every word that is addressed to him, and withstanding, with philosophic self-denial, the strong temptation afforded by the young canes, which surround him, when ploughing our cane-fields." Mr. Wray recommends to the West India planters elephants, to be bought at Ceylon and Bombay, at from £10 to £20 each, young and active, yet tame and domesticated; and he mentions one in his possession, only five years old, which ploughs every day, and can perform better work between the cane rows than could be obtained from forty able-bodied Chinese labourers, with hoes.

THE POPULATION OF PARIS.—The quinquennial census of Paris has just been published. The population was 1,053,897 —viz., 543,492 males, and 510,655 females. The increase over the year 1841, is 118 686; and over 1836, 154,884. In the whole number of men there are 55,460 National Guards, which is not quite 10 per cent. In 1836, the number of National Guards was 18 per cent of the whole population.

RESPITE OF A CONDEMNED CONVICT.—A letter from the Home Office has been received by the Governor of the convict gaol, Stafford, stating that the execution of J. Wilsmore, who was condemned at the last assize for the murder of Fanny, an old man, at Rochford, had been "respited until further signification of her Majesty's pleasure." The extension of the Royal clemency was cautiously communicated to the culprit, soon after the information was received by the Chaplain, and Governor; and, as no hope of mercy had been before held out to him, he was much affected by the grateful intelligence.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

There is nothing of particular note from France this week. The Chamber of Deputies has virtually finished the business of the session, and there is but little to do in the Chamber of Peers.

Last Saturday the King and Queen of the French, and most of the members of their family, as well as the King and Queen of the Belgians, proceeded to Malmaison, and commemorated their sojourney on, Queen Maria Christina, on the occasion of her fête. At six o'clock the Duke and Duchess de Montpensier arrived, and dined with the Queen, and stayed until half-past nine.

King Leopold and his consort left Paris on Monday, on their return to Brussels, where they have arrived.

The Union Monarchique announces that Count Brasson has been definitively appointed Ambassador to Naples, the King of the Two Sicilies having at last written a most gracious letter to assure the French Government that the choice of M. Bresson was nowise disagreeable to him.

In the Chamber of Deputies, the bill authorising the loan of 350,000,000f. has been passed by 305 to 39; and the Chamber has taken up the Budget of Receipts, the last work generally of the Session.

M. Pellapra was tried yesterday week before the Chamber of Peers. The evidence adduced did not add any circumstance of interest to those already known in connection with official corruption in France. It is, however, a singular fact, and one which accounts for M. Teste's confidence that he would not be found guilty, that but for the accidental circumstance of M. Teste having afterwards asked M. Pellapra to invest the money for him, M. Teste would never have been convicted. There were no witnesses called either for the prosecution or defence. M. Delangle, the Procureur-General, called upon the Court to make a severe example of a man who, after having accumulated 2800,000 in the public service, still continued to add to his ill-gained wealth by corrupting the servants of the Crown. M. Chaix d'Est Ange, who appeared for the defence, made a very powerful speech, but merely for the purpose of showing that his client did not originate the plan of corrupting the Minister, and that the part he took in the whole transaction was a very limited and secondary one. The Court decided that the punishment of M. Pellapra should be the same as that of General Cubières and M. Parmentier—namely, civil degradation, a fine of 10,000 francs, and a share of the expenses of process. In the course of an hour after the termination of the trial, the fine, &c., was paid, and M. Pellapra was set at liberty; immediately afterwards M. Pellapra sent a sum of 10,000f. to the Prefect of Police, to be employed in liberating prisoners for debt belonging to the labouring classes.

The thermometer was as high as 38 4-10 degrees (above 101 of Fahrenheit) at Toulouse, on the 16th and 17th, being the greatest heat remarked there for the last twelve years. At Lyons the thermometer marked 88 degrees.

SWITZERLAND.

Letters from Geneva state that, as soon as the news reached Lausanne of the resolution of the Diet in favour of the dissolution of the Sonderbund (Catholic League), the Patriotic Society of that town published a proclamation highly approving of the resolution, and calling on the inhabitants to enrol themselves as volunteers in the corps francs, for the purpose of supporting the Diet. The Council of State upon this immediately met, and adopted a resolution for the dissolution of the Patriotic Society, and on the following day issued an ordinance to that effect. The ordinance produced an immense sensation throughout Switzerland, and the authorities were consequently compelled to disavow the ordinance; but the Prefect, M. Meyzare, who signed it, was neither dismissed nor interfered with.

A curious affair has occurred at Berne, and has caused a good deal of laughter at the expense of M. Bois le Comte, the French Minister in Switzerland. M. Jenni, the editor of the Swiss Charivari, took it into his head to decorate his dog with the insignia of the Legion of Honour. M. Bois le Comte chose to take the matter up very seriously, and sent an angry letter to the President of the Executive Council of Berne, demanding that such should be taken against M. Jenni.

The Government of Berne replied to the Ambassador:—"I. That it could not proceed against M. Jenni ex officio, as the law did not give it any power to do so. 2. That the affair in question did not regard the Grand Council, inasmuch as M. Jenni had not as yet taken the oath, and that his election was impugned; that besides, the regulations of the Grand Council did not authorise any measure of discipline to be taken relative to its members in matters which concerned their private life. 3. That if the Count de Bois le Comte considered himself wronged, he could apply for redress to the courts of law." Hereupon the dog was seen following M. Jenni with two crosses suspended from its collar, one of which the Ambassador pretends was a cross of the Legion of Honour. The dog had, in fact, attached to his collar the pieces of tin, which more or less resembled crosses.

According to later advices the President of the Swiss Diet, M. Ochsenbein, has made the amende honorable to M. Bois le Comte.

BELGIUM

The new Belgian Ministry is not yet definitively formed, but it appears from the Brussels papers that it will be composed as follows

Interior—M. Charles Rogier.	Finances—M. Laurent Veydt.
Justice—M. H. de Brouckere.	Public Works—M. d'Huffschmidt.
Foreign Affairs—Count Leihon.	War—General Chazal.

SPAIN.

The Queen has left Madrid for La Granja. Her Majesty, on her departure, gave orders that no one should be allowed to occupy apartments at the Palace in her absence. It appears that the King, on his return to Madrid, insisted on being furnished with a copy of the Royal decree, which forbade his taking up his residence in the Palace, and that General Cordova having complied with his desire he returned in the evening to the Prado.

Much attention is still devoted by the journals to the quarrel between the Queen and her husband. In justification of the conduct of the Queen, the Heraldo organ, El Correo, has an article of some length, from a passage of which we may conclude that a reconciliation between their Majesties is now considered scarcely possible.

Her Majesty amuses herself at La Granja in driving about the country in company with Count de Santa Colonna and General Rosde Olano, while the King devotes himself to billiards at the Prado.

PORTUGAL.

Lisbon letters to the 19th instant state that tranquillity had been restored in that city.

The Junta of Faro had submitted to the Queen. Whatever was in occupation of that town, and a Te Deum had been sung for the change. The Spanish troops were to retire immediately from the entire of Portugal, with the exception of two brigades which would remain at Oporto till the close of the two months assigned by the protocol

Cordova and thirty officers had arrived at Lisbon from Oporto, to pay their respects to the Queen, and had been received with great distinction.

An expedition of English and French steamers had been sent to Madeira and the Azores, to require their submission; and the English steamer the Terrible had been despatched to Angola, to bring back the prisoners of Torres Vedras.

Marshal Saldanha was at Braga, establishing order in the northern provinces.

The Government had ordered the forts and batteries of Oporto to be dismantled, and the artillery and munitions of war are about being shipped to Lisbon.

ITALY.

Letters from Rome contain an account of the detection of a conspiracy on the part of what are termed the Jesuitico-Austro-Lamburschinian party. The 17th instant having been fixed for the fête of the amnesty, there was to have been a grand display of fireworks on the Square of the Popolo. It had been arranged by the conspirators to take advantage of this circumstance to excite commotion, and it was proposed on for the occasion that every means were several officers of the army, to charge upon the people. These officers were to exclaim "The soldiers are being assassinated!" and this was to be the pretext for the troops to fire. It is added that fifty malefactors were to be let out of prison just before the discharge of the fireworks, and that they were to have been armed with daggers, in order to throw them at the arms of the Pope on the square, and at the feet of soldiers, so as to make it appear that the latter were the first to fire on the people. The infantry and cavalry were then to charge, and amid the horror of the massacre the conspirators were to overpower the friends of the Pope, and get possession of the city. The conspiracy was discovered on the 16th, and the preparations for the fête of the amnesty were immediately countermanded. Cardinal Ferruti, the new Secretary of State, in whom the friends of Pius IX. place great hopes, arrived at Rome on the 16th, and his first act was to dismiss from office and banish M. Grassellni, the Governor of Rome, who is said to be the soul of the Austrian party. He was allowed only twenty-four hours for his preparations; but, fearing that he would be stoned to death by the people, he fled to Naples two hours after the notice of his banishment.

Capital: Muzzarelli, Bertoli, and others, had been arrested, and important papers were found upon them. Colonel Ferruti and the brother of Capital made their escape just as they were on the point of being arrested. Bredda's servants were found busy burning his papers, but some of them were seized. On the 18th the National Guard of Rome were on duty, but the military of all classes fraternised with them and excused themselves for the part which it was understood they were to have played on the 17th, by stating that they were not responsible for the treason of their chiefs, and could not, of course, know the motives of their orders. It is said, that, when the plot was revealed to the Pope, he exclaimed, "The hour of benediction is past, and that of malediction to punishment is come."

Letters from Bologna, of the 20th instant, state, that the conspiracy discovered at Rome had ramifications in the provinces. On the 17th, the day it was to explode, two battalions of Austrian troops, of 800 men each, followed by five pieces of artillery, with lighted matches, entered Ferrara, a city of the Pope's dominions, in the citadel of which the Austrians maintain a garrison. The soldiers had their muskets loaded, their bayonets fixed, and wore green bows in their caps. Their behaviour was most insulting, and they affected all the airs

THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO.

The Britannia has arrived, with New York papers to the 15th instant. They, however, contain but little news of interest, either in regard to the United States or to Mexico. The 4th of July had, as usual, been celebrated throughout the Union unani. In the same style that the 4th of June used to be celebrated in this country about the beginning of the present century. There was an accident and riots in abundance.

The business of the country continued to be flourishing. The grain harvests promised unprecedented abundance. In the Southern states the harvest completed, and the crops were proved above the average

The Chinese junk Keying, and the French steam-ship Poursuivante had arrived at New York.

EPITOME OF NEWS.—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The Manchester Unity of Oddfellows has received an addition [illegible] persons of no less a personage than Lord Dudley Coutts Stuart. It is said that a medal is to be struck commemorative of the event.

A few mornings ago, as two officers of the law were conducting an unfortunate debtor along the Rue Bernard du Bois, at Marseilles, to prison, he suddenly took a dagger which he had concealed about him, and plunging it into his breast dropped down dead.

On the 29nn ult. a disastrous fire broke out at Kasan, in Russia, which entirely destroyed 106 houses and two churches. The [illegible] £4000 to be distributed among the persons whose property was [illegible] 21,000 roubles towards the expense of reconstructing the houses.

George Wilson, Esq., late Chairman of the League, has been elected Chairman of the Manchester and Leeds Railway Company.

A pension of £1500 a-year reverts to the Crown by the death of A. C. Lynch, Esq., late Master in Chancery, and ex-M.P. for the town of Galway.

The most fearful mortality is at this time raging in several parts of Galicia. In one district, where, during the first six months of 1846, the deaths amounted to 1234, they have this year, during the corresponding period, mounted to 8188. This is the result of the distress which has prevailed, and still prevails to an extraordinary degree, in Galicia

A Hull paper states that an association has been formed in that town for the purpose of "keeping journeymen shoemakers honest."

Lord Robert Grosvenor having resigned the Treasurership of her Majesty's Household, is succeeded by Lord Marcus Hill, whose office of Comptroller is filled up by the appointment of the Hon. W. Lascelles.

The Earl of Dalhousie has been recommended to the Court of Directors of the East India Company as Governor-General of India, and Sir Henry Pottinger has been proposed for the Governorship of Madras

Accounts from the fair of Frankfort-on-the-Oder state that the general results as regarded manufactures, was not so satisfactory as could be wished. The quantity of goods on offer was 78,000 cwt., being a less quantity than at the corresponding period of last year. In cloth goods business was brisk, but the quotations were not remunerative to makers. Cotton goods were only in request for the finer qualities. Silk and mixed silk and cotton manufactures were rather quiet.

A remarkable horticultural feat has been performed by the gardener of Lady Rolle, who has succeeded in ripening pine apples in the open air, in Devonshire. After the fruit was set, in May last, the pots containing the plants were placed in a trench, which was sheltered by banks from cold winds and covered with charred hay; and so successfully did these expedients counteract the cold, that the pine apples are said to have been of excellent quality.

The Augsburg Gazette states that on the 8th June a terrible combat took place between a Russian division, commanded by General Lepski, and the mountaineers, under the orders of Mohammed Jube. Nearly 5000 fell on the field, neither party claiming the victory. The Circassians are greatly in want of powder, paying, it is said, 300 Turkish piastres the pound for it.

A German paper mentions, in a letter from New York, that Mr. Vespasian Ellis has succeeded in concluding a treaty with the Republic of Venezuela for eighteen years, by which the United States have acquired the exclusive right of navigating with steam-boats the rivers Orinoco and Apure.

An Agricultural Congress has just been held at Stockholm. It consists of 420 members, and held twenty sittings, at all of which the King was present. On the 12th inst. the members of the Congress dined together, and the King, Queen, and Prince Royal took part in the banquet.

We are sorry to learn, by letters from Glasgow, that Dr. Wardlaw is in a precarious state of health. The opinion of his medical attendants is that any excitement—writing or preaching, or even discharging the ordinary pastoral duties—would endanger his life.

Last week a well-dressed man, supposed to be a Frenchman, threw himself under the wheels of a train on the Belgian Railway near Tubize, and was killed instantaneously. No paper was discovered on him to say who he was, but some money was found in his pocket.

By an Act of Parliament passed in the late Session, which will take effect from the 1st of August, the present restricted weight of letters by the post of 16oz. will be removed, and the Commissioners of the Treasury are empowered to fix the maximum weight of letters to be sent by the post, in order to prevent packets of an unwieldy bulk or of an inconvenient form being transmitted.

The estate of the late Joseph Bonaparte, in America, has been sold for 20,500 dollars to Mr. Thomas Richards, of Philadelphia. The buildings alone originally cost more than 60,000 dollars; the paintings and statues were on the average sold under half price. The only painting that has been sent to Europe is "Napoleon's Expedition Over the Alps," by David, for which the proprietor asked 6000 dollars

A few days since one of the finest oaks in Roughham-park was felled, having been purchased to form the stern of a man of war. The ponderous load was placed on three trucks over the Eastern Union and Eastern Counties Railways to London. Its weight is nine tons. The timber is without a flaw, and is probably one of the noblest trees ever produced in Suffolk, being the growth of upwards of 150 years.

We learn from Naples that some indications of an approaching eruption of Mount Etna have been given. The Neapolitan Government has appointed three members of the Royal Academy to set out for Sicily, in order to visit the crater and make their report.

The Frankfort Journal states that negotiations are now going on which will have the effect of putting an end to all doubt as to the right of successors of the family of Duke William of Brunswick.

The Government of Bavaria has just decided that Jews may exercise the profession of Advocates in that country. Till now there has only been one Jew in all the kingdom permitted to act as an Advocate.

The number of passengers between London and Boulogne during the week ending 25th of July, was 2439. The passengers exceed in number those of the previous week by 403, and also exceed, by 230, the number of the corresponding week last year.

It may be stated as an instance of the increased value of land at Gravesend, that a Jury on Saturday last awarded £6300 for about seven acres, situated to the east of the town, that sum being about six times its value 20 years ago

A letter from Montreal, dated July 15 says: "Ministers have maintained a majority varying from two to seven. They have introduced a College Bill, by which it is proposed to distribute an endowment amounting to £.,6000 a year among four Colleges—one for each of those sects—Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Wesleyans, and Roman Catholics."

A letter from Ulm, dated July 18 says:—"Thanks be to God, the dearth is over. In our last market corn was again at its normal price. At Vilshofen and Deggradorf, and many other places, the prices have sunk, and this general decline must influence the markets at Augsburg and Munich."

Journal des Débats announces the death, at the village of Batgoolie, near Paris, of General Bruno de Sailly, the last survivor of the generals of the army of Egypt.

Bits of paper, an inch and a half square, have been dropped in several of the great railway stations, purporting to be gratuitous orders for pit stalls at Her Majesty's Theatre. These pretended orders bear a forged signature. Measures have been taken with the police to detect the perpetrators.

The Canada papers state that the weather had been excessively hot; thermometer 96 to 98 : 40 to 50 during the night for four hours at the sheds, and some deaths in town. The medical men object to the removal to Boucherville Island, and other accommodations are to be provided above the town.

A Parliamentary return delivered on Wednesday, shows that in 1845 the Trinity House received as tolls for lighthouses £186,968, or deducting expenses of collection £179,987, and expended in maintaining lighthouses £51,163, leaving £124,837 of the money received from the shipowners.

On Tuesday the first conviction under the new act, took place at Manchester. Messrs. Ogden and Sons were fined 20s. each, for several instances in which persons had been employed in their factory for more than eleven hours on the 9th inst.

There is now in bloom at the shrubbery at Horswell, Kingsbridge, the seat of W. R. Ilbert, Esq., a plant of the Phormium tenax, or New Zealand flax, which is a rare occurrence in England.

The Suffolk Herald states that Earl Jermyn was seized with English cholera on Sunday last, and was for some time in an alarming condition, but that he is now much better.

The will of the late Baron Rokeby, who died at Naples on the 7th of April last, was made in 1840, by which he has bequeathed to his brother, the Hon. Spencer Dudley Montagu, £4000 in addition to all other provisions, and has devised to his brother, the Right Hon. Henry Baron Rokeby, all his real estates in the counties of Durham, York, Northumberland, and Cambridge, and in the City of London or elsewhere; and has also left to him the residue of his personal property

The last advices from America are very cheering in reference to the supplies of grain and flour which we may expect; and, as prices are declining on the other side of the Atlantic, our supplies will not be so costly. Indeed, a good harvest here will soon relieve us of the necessity of importing, much more.

There has been a rumour in Paris that Austria and France will, in the affairs of Switzerland, act the part which Austria and the Northern Powers have acted in the affairs of Poland, and that, in the event of intervention, an attempt will be made to partition the Republic.

The portion of the Caledonian Railway extending between Carlisle and Beattock will be opened in August next, probably about the end of the month.

Several of the metropolitan parishes have issued notices that, in consequence of the prevalence of the small-pox at the present season, [illegible] vaccinators will comply with the provisions of the Act of Parliament 7th and 8th Victoria, respecting the vaccination and the penalties attending thereon.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF ENGLAND.

1ST PRIZE SHORT HORNS. 1ST PRIZE HEREFORDS.

We have, this week, engraved Portraits of some of the finest Animals, for which Prizes were awarded by the Royal Agricultural Society, at their late meeting at Northampton. The following are the details, the from the official Prize List:—

First Group.—Short Horns and Herefords.

Class 1.—Bulls calved previously to January 1, 1845.—First prize of £50, awarded to Mr. John Parkinson, of Ley-fields, near Newark, Nottingham, a 4 years 11 months, and 3 days old short-horned bull, bred by Mr. Thomas Lax, of Ravensworth, near Richmond, Yorkshire.

Class 1.—Bulls calved previously to January 1, 1845. First prize of £50 awarded to Mr. Samuel Aston, of Lynch-court, near Leominster, Hereford, a 3 year and 6 months old Hereford bull, bred by himself.

Second Group.—Short Horns and Devons.

Class 2.—Bulls calved since January 1, 1845.—First prize of £20 awarded to Mr. William Smith, of West Rasen, near Market Rasen, Lincolnshire, a 2 years and 6 months old short-horned bull, bred by Mr. Thomas Lax, of Ravensworth, York.

Class 1.—Bulls calved previous to January 1, 1845. First prize of £50 awarded to Mr. Thomas Bond, of Bishop's Lydiard, near Taunton, Somerset, a 3 1ST PRIZE (SECOND CLASS) SHORT HORNS. 1ST PRIZE DEVON.

PRIZES AWARDED AT NORTHAMPTON, 1847.

DRAWN BY HARRISON WEIR.

1ST PRIZE STALLION.

years and 6 months old Devon Bull, bred by Mr. [illegible] Merson, of North Moulton, Devon

Third Group.—Horses and South Down Sheep.

Class 1.—Stallions for Agricultural Purposes.—First prize of £40 awarded to Mr. F. T. Bryan, of Knossington, Leicestershire, near Oakham, Rutland, a cart stallion, 4 years old, bred by Mr. R. Brown, of Elsworth, Cambridgeshire.

1ST PRIZE. SOUTH DOWNS. 2ND PRIZE.

Class 1.—Shearling [illegible].—First prize of £40 awarded to Mr. Jonas Webb, of Babraham, near Cambridge, a South Down ram, 16 months old, bred by himself.

Second prize of £15 awarded to Mr. Jonas Webb, of Babraham, near Cambridge, a South Down ram, [illegible]

Class 4.—Mares and Foals for Agricultural Purposes.—The First prize of £20 awarded to Mr. G. Townshend, of Sapcote, near Hinckley, Leicester a cart mare and foal; sire of foal belonged to Mr. Hipwell, Swinford, Lutterworth, Leicestershire.

Second prize of £10 awarded to Mr. A. Chibnall, of Bromham, near Bedford, a cart mare and foal; sire of foal belonged to himself.

1ST. MARES AND FOALS. 2ND.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, August 1)—Ninth Sunday after Trinity. Lammas Day.
MONDAY, 2 The Sun rises at 4h. 27m.; is due East at 7h. 5m.; and sets at 7h. 44m.
TUESDAY, 3. The Moon enters her Third Quarter at 1h. 59m. p.m.
WEDNESDAY, 4.—Saturn rises at 8h. 49m. p m., near the S.E. by S. point of the horizon
THURSDAY, 5 —Oyster Season begins. Mars rises at 10h. 9m. p.m., near the E. by N.
FRIDAY, 6.—Transfiguration of Our Lord. Prince Alfred born, 1844.
SATURDAY, 7 Name of Jesus. Jupiter rises at 1h. 26m. a.m., near the N.E point of the horizon.
Venus may still be seen near the West horizon, till towards nine o'clock in the evenings, and she is of a crescent form when seen through a good telescope.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 7

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
4 35	5 20	5 45	6 10	6 35	7 0	7 25	7 50	8 15	8 40	9 5	9 30	9 55	10 20
10	11	0 11	0 49

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Justitia."—Yours is a Jury affair—depending upon the nature of the contract rather than any abstract statute. Propose to the farmer that he shall pay one-half the trespass, and you the other; but don't go to law, unless you would rather pay a hundred shillings on the pound than twenty.

"Bryan O'Lynn."—Do you mean the Trades Cup handicap, as at present constituted? There was a Chester Cup a couple of centuries ago.

"B. P."—Received.

"G. W."—The College for Civil Engineers, at Putney, is open to the public. The incidental expenses do not exceed the stipulated sum of £130, by more than £5 or £6 per annum. There are no extras. Letters addressed to the Principal, with enquiries into particulars, will be sure to receive a prompt and explicit reply.

"A Widower"—No enactment has passed the Legislature which legalises the marriage with a deceased wife's sister.

"A Subscriber."—No husband can adopt the supporters of his wife's family. A motto may be assumed at pleasure.

"Trio."—We do not know the surname of Prince Albert—nor if he have one at all.

"Constant Reader and Admirer"—A letter for the Editor of "Burke's Peerage and Baronetage" should be addressed to "Mr. Burke, care of Mr. Colburn, 13, Great Marlborough-street, London."

"Constant Subscriber."—It is not usual to put the Cross of a Companion of the Bath on a coat of arms.

"Constant Reader."—The arms in question may possibly be obtained by an application at the Heralds' Office, Dublin Castle; or by a reference to the "Heraldic Calendar," published by William Skeys, A.M., Registrar of the College of Arms, Ireland.

"T. G."Clapping Norton, is thanked for the correction.

"Kent," Bath. Try Spanish without a Master. Apply to Dulau and Co., Foreign booksellers, Soho-square.

"A Birmingham Native" is thanked.

"An Irishman," Islington.—Apply to Mr. Mitchell, bookseller, Old Bond-street.

"J. S.," Worthing We do not understand the question.

"Peter,"—Address Scratton-street, Piccadilly

"A."—Fossil Human Bones have been found at Guadaloupe, in the West Indies, and, in 1845, Dr. Lund, the Danish Geologist, stated that he had found a quantity of Human Bones in the fossil state, on the province of Minas Geraes, in Brazil.

"J. H. W." South Wales.—"Spoonfuls" is used by Arbuthnot, a sound English writer.

"A Subscriber," Cheapside, is thanked; but, the account of the burning of the steamer Londonderry, on July 1, did not reach us in time for illustration.

"J. N. S." letter is an improvement

"P. H." Mrs Jordan died at St Cloud, near Paris, July 3, 1816.

"A. B." We are not aware of Prince, the Weaver Poet, be still alive.

"T. H. C." Honiton. We do not recommend any Lotteries, Foreign or [illegible], the latter are altogether illegal.

"J. T." Wells, may obtain the requisite information by application at the Stock in question The declaration can only be a matter of form.

P. A." Manchester.—"D." will be liable.

"G. W. T.," Newport. We have not room.

"G.," Cheltenham. Apply to Mr Thomas, Pinch-lane, Cornhill.

"A. P. G."—The construction of the sentence is correct.

"J. T. A" The Sketch has been returned.

"Inthall" should take his "old Farthing" to Mr. Webster, Coin-dealer, 17, Great Russell-street, Covent Garden.

"An Admirer of Albert Smith's Writings," Liverpool, will perceive by his account of his late perilous Balloon Descent, that he received no injury in the catastrophe. (See our Journal for July 10.)

"C. C.," and "J. M. E" Mille Jenny Lind will sing at Brighton, Manchester, and Liverpool, after the close of the Season at Her Majesty's Theatre.

"G. P."—Tamberwell Old Church was burnt early in 1842.

"R. G. B." Newcastle.—The name is Ibbetson.

"J. L." Featham Cross The Great Western Railway was partly opened in 1838.

"Peguenado." The cost of a Special Train on the Great Western Railway is 7s. per mile.

"A Subscriber," Tunbridge Wells, may, probably, obtain the information at Chelsea Hospital.

"M. W." Worcester. Address Brompton-square, near London.

"Salopensis."—Her Majesty's Theatre is expected to close in about a fortnight.

"An Inquirer." For the origin of wearing Weathcocks, see Walker's "Elements Liturgica," page 11.

"W. L.," Llandovery. The charge for supplying our Journal is 26s. per year, payable in advance.

"R. K. J.," near Manchester.—To fix chalk or pencil drawings, pour skimmed milk, (entirely free from cream), into a shallow vessel, lay the drawing upon the milk, and then place it on blotting-paper, in an inclined position to drain and dry.

"J. G. H." We regret that we have not room for the Title Machine

"J. R. G." St. Helen's.—The address of Mr. C. Stephenson, the Engineer, is 24, Great George-street.

"A. D.," Milton street.—We do not know.

"A. B." Malvern.—The current Coins of Sweden and Norway are Gold Ducats, and Silver Rix Dollars: in Turkey, Gold and Silver Piastres: in Egypt, Piastres

"Verbus" had better consult any History of England.

"J. B. T.," Southampton. Apply to a perfumer.

"A Constant Subscriber."—We cannot spare as to either of the Institutions in question.

"Stocktonicus." In Mirage, the accent is on the second syllable.

THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.—Next week, we shall illustrate the very interesting Meeting of the Institute at Norwich, in a series of Engravings of the most attractive object exhibited on the occasion.

 Reviews of several New Books are in type, but are unavoidably deferred.

BOOKS RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK

The Dawn of Love.—Bartlett's Chart of British Ornithology.—Hand-Book to Oxford.—Poems and Songs. By Francis Davis, the Belfast Man.—Men, Women, and Books. By Leigh Hunt.—Russell. By G. R. P. James. 3 vols.—History of Mary Ann Wellington. By the Rev. Richard Cobbold.—Directory of the Consulate and the Empire. Vol. VII.—My Dream Book. By Sophia Isehn.—Modern Agricultural Improvements. By Cuthbert W. Johnson.—Schneider's German Dictionary.—May's Companion Book to Stratford-upon-Avon.

MUSIC. The Student's Piano Forte Companion. By C. B Dussek.—My Home, my Happy Home.—To the Chase, to the Chase Away.—Lanier's Gallant Quadrilles.—The Buffalo Hunters. The Rose Quadrilles.—Un Souvenir des Alps. By Ricardo Linter. - A Musical Service. By C. E. Stephens.

Outlines of the History of Ireland.

BACK NUMBERS.

All Numbers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, one month old, will, in future, be considered "Back Numbers," and be charged each sixpence extra.

The Back Numbers are now reprinted; and any single Number from the commencement may be had by remitting One Shilling to the Office, or to any Bookseller or News-agent.

The Volumes and Parts will be charged the same as usual, viz., Volumes, 18s.; Parts, 2s. 6d.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JULY 31, 1847.

THE immediate plunge made by the Government into the Elections, with no "breathing time" allowed between the end of the old Parliament and the beginning of the new, seems to indicate some intention of a short Session before January. It may be well to be prepared for all emergencies; the Irish difficulties springing from the failure of the potato crop may not be over, though, at present, the general aspect of things is favourable.

The Queen's Speech was a tolerably dexterous production: there were many failures to be passed over lightly, and the few measures passed were expedients of a direful necessity; nevertheless, the Revenue being in a satisfactory state; the settlement of affairs in Portugal—for a time, at least; and the usual friendly assurances from Foreign Powers, furnished matter enough for the Address, without the appearance of being driven to include matters too trifling. The Speaker's harangue referred more plainly to the abandoned measures, but with hope they are cast forth only as seed for the future.

One of the Election Addresses of the week that has a more than usual bearing on the coming Parliament is Lord George Bentinck's address to the electors of Lynn. It is almost as long as Sir Robert Peel's elaborate letter, but not so convincing. The noble Lord attempts to prove that the first famine was only a cry, got up for a purpose. This is a reckless assertion to go to the country with; in 1846, came the first warnings of that calamity for which the abrogation of the Corn Laws was meant to prepare. It does credit to Sir Robert Peel's prescience that he saw in the earlier signs of the disaster, that tendency to spread and increase, which was afterwards so terribly realised. He took his measures accordingly, and no one can say what misery the months so gained, averted. All the attempts to prove the late Premier took an unwarranted step in 1846, only leave on the reader's mind the impression that Sir Robert Peel saw first, and saw farther than Lord George Bentinck, the approach and the extent of one of the greatest calamities of modern times. The noble Lord seems rather more successful in treating the policy of the Bank Charter Bill, as to which there seems a growing opinion that a relaxing power might be added to it with advantage.

THE Hastings intelligence, which speaks for itself, has rendered the week comparatively barren of interest in other directions. Parliament is closed, and all the leading men, of both parties, are engaged in making "their calling and election sure." The commentator is driven back on foreign news, which is varied, if not exciting. The prosecutions of Teste, Cubières, and Pellapra, have closed with the conviction of all the accused, leaving the public persuaded that more remains to be discovered in others who have been luckier in concealing their guilt.

The quarrel between the Queen of Spain and her husband continues to deepen in intensity. He has stayed so long out of the Palace, that now her Majesty thinks he may as well never come back to it. He attempted to take possession of the Royal apartments the other day, during her absence, and a Royal order forthwith expelled him!

The Pope has experienced a check in his work of improvement, and all he had done was nearly destroyed by a plot, luckily discovered in time, intended to produce a reaction. He has been forced, for self-defence, to harsh measures. One high official was ordered to quit Rome immediately, and many arrests have taken place. The victory is so far with him; but Austria will leave no means untried to embarrass him.

THE East India Company has confirmed the grant of a pension to Sir Robert Pollock; it is gratifying to see a great public body a vast power, in fact, thus acknowledging its obligations to those who serve it faithfully. In an Empire like India, won and held by the sword, military skill and courage are the very bulwarks of our authority; and the soldier naturally stands more prominently forward there than in more settled States, which have no apprehension from the wild hordes of warlike races on their frontier. While the Government of India is doing an act of justice to one of its warriors, could it not make that act perfect and complete, by extending a like generous acknowledgment to Sir Harry Smith, whose merits the whole nation is proud to recognise? It is understood that his laurels are nearly all he has earned in the profession of which he is the ornament; except when political offices are joined with military command, the soldier does not find the "gorgeous East" very ready to pour its gold into his lap; hard working, and often hard fighting, against formidable foes, in a climate even more to be dreaded than they, are mostly all that falls to the soldier, unless he has interest to be made a "political agent," or "resident," or whatever the office may be called. Sir Harry Smith never directed his talents into this path, and, consequently, wears the honours won by the sword unaccompanied by the emoluments of less desert and note have gained by the pen.

The Indian Government should remedy this error of Fortune, and rectify her caprice; they are not required to make his means equal to his renown—that would task even their Exchequer; but the very least they can do would be to make the disproportion between his merit and his reward less glaring. As an act of policy, it would be wise in itself; and it would be quite in accordance with the opinion of the nation, which would be decidedly favourable to it.

THE WEATHER.

The weather during the past week has been that of the average of the season. The wind has been light and variable in direction, the sky has been somewhat more than one half clouded, and the temperature, day by day, has been very uniform.

The following are some particulars of each day: Friday, the sky was about one half covered with cumuli, circrostrati, and scud, from 7h. A.M., till 7h. P M. At other times it was cloudless. The direction of the wind was variable. The average temperature of the day was 61°. The highest and lowest thermometrical readings on grass were 111° and 37° respectively. Saturday, the sky was chiefly cloudless till 9h. A.M., and it was principally cloudy after that time. The direction of the wind was N. and N.E., and it was very light. The average temperature of the day was 59½°. The extreme thermometrical readings on grass were 46° and 126°. Sunday, the sky was mostly covered by cloud in the forenoon, and less so after noon. The direction of the wind was N. The average temperature of the day was 62°. The extreme readings on grass were 40° and 96°. Monday, the sky was alternately clear and partially cloudy throughout the day. The direction of the wind was N. The average temperature of the day was 62½° The extreme readings on grass were 42° and 131°. Wednesday, the sky was principal y cloudy throughout the day, being chiefly covered with a thin cirrostratus. The direction of the wind was W.S.W. The average temperature of the day was 60°. The extreme thermometrical readings on grass were 33° and 137°. Thursday, the sky was principally cloudy till 9 A.M., and chiefly cloudless after that time till the evening, but hazy. The air was in slight motion from the west. The average temperature of the day was 58°. The highest reading on grass was 136°. The average temperature of the week was 62°.

Friday,	July 23 the highest during the day was	70 deg.,	and the lowest was 48 deg.
Saturday,	July 24	74	45
Sunday,	July 25	70½	54½
Monday,	July 26	69½	51½
Tuesday,	July 27	78	45½
Wednesday,	July 28	69½	53
Thursday,	July 29	80	58

Blackheath, Friday, July 30, 1847. J. G.

ABERGAVENNY, NOTTINGHAM, BOSTON, AND EASTERN JUNCTION RAILWAY.—A very numerous and highly respectable meeting of the Yorkshire Shareholders in this undertaking, convened by circular, was held at the Scarborough Hotel, Leeds, on Tuesday last. Robert Barr, Esq., having been called to the Chair, and Mr. Wilkinson, one of a deputation from the London Shareholder's Committee, having addressed the meeting, the following resolutions were unanimously agreed to:—That having considered the proceedings and resolutions of the meeting of shareholders, held in London on the 13th of July inst., and the present position of the affairs of the undertaking, this meeting concurs in the opinion expressed in those resolutions, and will heartily co-operate with the London Shareholders in the object which they are seeking to carry into execution. That Mr. Barr, Mr. Jennins, and Mr. Rogers, or any two of them, be a deputation from the meeting to the general meeting of the Shareholders, to be held at Nottingham, 24th August, to act on behalf of the Yorkshire Shareholders, in such manner as the deputation may think fit; and, for that purpose, the Shareholders be requested to transmit to any of them all proxy votes.—A meeting of the Lancashire Shareholders in the above Company was held at Manchester on Thursday last, Thomas Roberts, Esq., in the chair, at which resolutions, approving the policy of the London Shareholders' Committee, were unanimously adopted, and a Committee, consisting of Messrs. Langworthy, Pettigrew, Roberts, &c. &c., were appointed to correspond with the London Committee, &c.

THE NEW PARLIAMENT.

MEMBERS RETURNED.

The following Members have been already returned for the New Parliament, several of them without opposition:

ABINGDON Sir F. Thesiger.
ASHBURTON —Colonel Matheson
ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—Mr C. Hindley.
ANDOVER.—Mr. Coles, Mr. Cubitt
AYLESBURY.—Mr Deering, Lord Nugent.
ARUNDEL. The Earl of Arundel and Surrey.
BEVERLEY. J. Townley, S. L. Fox
BIRMINGHAM.—Scholefield, Muntz
BRIGHTON Pechell, Hervey
BRISTOL.— Hon. H. F. Berkeley, P. Miles.
BUCKINGHAM BOROUGH.—The Marquis of Chandos, Colonel John Hall.
BODMIN.—Wyld, Lacy
BRADFORD.—Busfield, Thompson
BURY (LANCASHIRE). R. Walker.
BATH.—Lord Ashley, Lord Duncan.
BARNSTAPLE.—Bruning, Bertenee
BERWICK.—M. Forster, J. C Benton.
BLACKBURN.—Mr. Hornby, Mr. Pilkington.
BOLTON.—Bowring, W. Bolling.
BAIDGENORTH.—Mr. Whitmore, Sr R. Pigot. Sir J. Easthope rejected.
BRIDGEWATER. C. K. Tynte, H. Broadwood.
BRIDPORT.—Mr. Mitchell, Mr. Cockrane.
CALNE. Earl Shelburne.
CAMBRIDGE (TOWN).—Adair, Campbell.
CANTERBURY.—Conyngham, Smythe.
CARDIFF, &c.—Dr. J. Nicholl.
CHATHAM.—Mr. Byng.
CHESTER.—Sir J Jervis, Earl of Grosvenor.
CHIPPENHAM.—J. Neeld, Captain Boldero.
CIRENCESTER.—Captain D Harris.
CLITHEROE.—Mr. Wilson.
CIRENCESTER.—Lord Villiers, William Cripps, Esq.
COCKERMOUTH.—Aglionby, Horsman.
COLCHESTER South, Harbottle.
COVENTRY.—Mr. Turner, Mr. Ellice.
CARLISLE.—Hodgson, Dixon.
CARMARTHENSHIRE —Hughes
CHELTENHAM Sir W. Jones.
COCKERMOUTH.—Aglionby, Horsman
CRICKLADE.—J. Neeld, J. L. Goddard.
DARTMOUTH.—Mr. Moffat.
DENBIGH.—Mr. West.
DEVIZES. Mr. Ludlow Bruges, Mr. Hussage.
DORCHESTER. Mr. D. Damer, Mr. Sturt.
DOVER. Rice, Clerke.
DUDLEY.—J. Benbow.
DROITWICH.—Sir J. Pakington.
DURHAM.—Grunger, Spearman.
EAST RETFORD and EASTLAW. Hon. R. Duncombe, Lord Galway.
EDINBURGH.—Cowan, Craig
EVESHAM.—Lord H. Hill, Mr. Willoughby.
EXETER. E. Divett, Esq., Sir J. T. B. Duckworth.
EYE. Sir F. Kerrison
FINSBURY. T. S. Duncombe, T. Wakley.
FROME.—The Hon. R. E. Boyle
GATESHEAD.—Mr. Hutt.
GLOUCESTER.—Captain M. F. F. Berkeley, H. F. Hope
GRANTHAM.—G. E Welby, F. J. Tollemache
GREENWICH.—Dundas, Barnard.
GRIMSBY Heneage
GUILDFORD.—Mr. Mangles, Mr. Currie.
HASTINGS.—R. Holland, M. Briscoe.
HALIFAX.—Mr. Wood, Mr. Edwards.
HERTFORD. Lord Mahon, Hon. W. F. Cowper.
HONITON.—Sir J. W. Hogg, Joseph Locke, Esq.
HORSHAM. Mr. Jervis
HULL. Baines, Clay.
HAVWICH. Bagshaw, Attwood.
HUDDERSFIELD. Mandfield
HUNTINGDON.—Col. J. Peel, T. Baring.
IPSWICH. Cobbold, Adair.
KIDDERMINSTER.—R. Gedsem.
KENDAL. Sir E. C. Glyn.
KNARESBOROUGH.—Lascelles, Lawson.
LAUNCESTON.—Admiral Bowles.
LUDLOW.—Clive, Sa.way.
LYME-REGIS.—Addy.
LYMINGTON. Stewart, Keppell.
LYNN REGIS.—Lord George Bentinck, Lord Jocelyn.
LAMBETH.—Pearson, D'Eyncourt,
LEEDS. Mc. Heckell, Mr. Marshall.
LEICESTER.—Mr. Walmsley, Mr. Gardner
LEOMINSTER G Arkwright, Henry Barkly.
LEWES. Mr. Fitzroy, Mr. Lewes.
LICHFIELD. Lord A. Paget, Lord Anson.
LIVERPOOL.—Mr. Birch, Mr. Cardwell.
LONDON. Lord Russell, Baron Rothschild, Mr. Pattison, Mr. Masterman.
MAIDSTONE.—Mr. Hope, Mr. Dodd.
MALMESBURY.—Mr. Howard.
MALTON.—Mr. J. E. Denison, Mr. J. W. Childers.
MANCHESTER.—Mr. Gibson, Mr. Bright.
MARLBOROUGH. —Lord Ernest Bruce, Mr. H. Baring.
MARYLEBONE.—Stuart, Hall.
MERTHYR TYDVILL. Sir J. J. Guest.
MIDHURST Walpole.
MONMOUTH. R. J. Blewitt.
MORPETH. Captain Howard.
NEWARK.—Sutton, Stuart.
NEWPORT (Isle of Wight) Plowden, Martin.
NORTHALLERTON. Mr. Wrightson.
NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—Ord, Headlam.
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.—Mr. Jackson, Mr. Christy.
NORTHAMPTON.—Mr. Smith, Mr. Currie.
NORWICH.—Lord Douro, Mr. Peto.
NOTTINGHAM.—Mr. Walter, Jun., and Mr. Fesrgus O'Connor are returned.

The unsuccessful candidates were Sir J. Hobhouse and Mr. Gisborne

OXFORD, CITY.—Langston and Wood.
OLDHAM.—Fox, Dunnell.
PETERSFIELD. —Sir W. G. H. Joliffe.
PRESTON.—Strickland, Greenfell
PONTEFRACT Martin, Milnes.
POOLE.—Robinson, Phillips
PLYMOUTH.—Lord Ecrington, Palmer.
PETERBOROUGH. Lord Milton, Cavendish.
PORTSMOUTH. Hon. F. T. Baring, Sir G. F. Staunton.
RIPGATE.—T. S. Cocks
RICHMOND (YORKSHIRE).—Mr Rich, Mr. Wyvill, jun.
RIPON.—Sir James Graham, the Hon. Edward Lascelles.
READING.—Pigott, Talfourd.
ROCHDALE.—Mr. S. Crawford.
RYE.—Curteis.
SALFORD. Brotherton.
SALISBURY.—Chaplin, Wall.
SHREWSBURY.—Baldock, Sidney.
STAFFORD.—Urquhart, Sidney.
STROUD.—G. F. Scrope, W. H. Stannton.
SWANSEA. —Vivian.
SCARBOROUGH.—Sir J. R. V. Johnstone, the Earl of Mulgrave.
SHEFFIELD.—Mr. Parker, Mr. Ward.
SHOREHAM.—Sir C. Burrell, G. Goring.
SOUTHWARK.—Sir W. Molesworth, Alderman Humphery.
ST. ALBANS.—G. W. J. Repton, A. Raphael.
STOKE-UPON-TRENT.—Mr. Copeland, Mr. Ricardo.
TAMWORTH.—Sir R. Peel, Yates Peel.
TAUNTON.—Labouchere, Colebrooke.
TEWKESBURY.—Mr. Martin, Mr. Brown.
THETFORD. Hon. W. B. Baring, Earl of Euston.
TOWER HAMLETS.—Thompson, Clay.
TYNEMOUTH. Mr. Grey
TOTNES. Seymour, Baldwin
WAREHAM Sir W. A. B Drax.
WELLS. Blakemore, Haytor.
WESTBURY.—Wilson.
WHITBY. R. Stephenson.
WINCHESTER. Carter, East.
WORCESTER. Ricardo, Bickford.
WAKEFIELD.—Mr. Saunders.
WALSALL.—Mr. Littleton.
WARRINGTON. G. Greenall
WARWICK. Mr. Douglas, Mr. Collins
WENLOCK Hon C. Forester, Mr. Gaskill.
WESTMINSTER.—Sir Do Lacy Evans, Mr. Lushington
WHITEHAVEN.—Mr H. C. Hildyard.
WIGAN.—Colonel J. Lindsay, H. A Thickness.
WINDSOR.—Colonel Reid, Lord Arthur Lennox.
WOLVERHAMPTON. Mr. Villiers, Mr. Thornseley.
WOODSTOCK.—Marquis of Blandford.
WYCOMBE.—G. H Dashwood, M. T. Smith.
YARMOUTH.—Lord A. Lennox, Cooper
YORK, CITY.—R. H. Yorke, J. G. Smyth.

STATE OF POLLS ON THURSDAY.

ABINGDON.

Sir F. Thesiger	153
General Caulfield	151

AYLESBURY.

Mr. Deering	687
Lord Nu sat	620
Mr. Clayton	546

BATH.

Lord Ashley	1987
Lord Duncan	1968
Mr. Roebuck	1120

BARNSTAPLE.

Bremridge	468
Fortescue	390
Hodgson	353

BERWICK.

M. Forster	207
J. C. Renton	192
W. H. Miller	51

BLACKBURN.

Hornby	638
Pilkington	547
Hargrave	373
Roberts	67

BOLTON.

Bolling	710
Bowring	649
Brooks	638

BRIDGENORTH.

Mr. T. C. Whitmore	612
Sir R Pigot	368
Sir J. Easthope	368

BRIDGEWATER.

Tynte	388
Broadwood	247
Gamble	189

BRIDPORT.

Cochrane	274
Mitchell	267
Paire	222
Martin	11

COVENTRY.

Mr. E. Ellice	2663
Mr. Turner	1539
Mr. Williams	1436

EVESHAM.

Lord Marcus Hill	193
Sir W. Willoughby	173
Sir R. Howard	129

GUILDFORD.

Currie	336
Mangles	242
Tanrlow	184

HALIFAX.

Edwards	511
Wood, Sir C.	507
Miall	349
Jones	280

HASTINGS.

Holland	422
Brisco	406
Warre	367
Robertson	347

HORSHAM.

Jervis	164
Fitzgerald	155

HULL.

Baines	2168
Clay	2135
Brown	1705

LANCASTER.

Gregson	724
Green	721
Salisbury	691

LEEDS.

Beckett	2526
Marshall	2181
Sturge	1980

LEICESTER.

Walmsley	1647
Gardner	1602
Parker	1403

LEWES.

Hon. H. Fitzroy	459
Mr. R. Perfect	403
Mr. Godfrey Hudson	206
Lord Henry Lofius	140

LINCOLN.

Colonel Sibthorp	599
C. Seeley	520
Sir E. B. Lytton	437
W. R. Collett	277

LIVERPOOL.

Cardwell	5481
Birch	4882
Mackworth	3089
Manners	2413

NEWCASTLE.

W. Jackson, ...	568
S Christy, ...	570
Lord Brackley	522
Greig	101

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

Ord	2194
Headlam	2068
Hodgson	1880

NORWICH.

Pete	2414
Douro	1723
Parry	1646

NORTHAMPTON.

Smith	641
Carris	896
Humfrey	632
Bayford	614
Epps	139

NOTTINGHAM.

Mr. Walter	1830
Mr. O'Connor	1340
Mr. Gisborne	1030
Sir John Hobhouse	974

PLYMOUTH.

Ebrington	864
Calmady	698
Palmer	777

SHEFFIELD.

Parker	1124
Ward	1104
Clark	328

SHREWSBURY.

R. A. Slaney	774
C. H. Baldock	768
G. Tomline	739

STOKE-UPON-TRENT.

Ricardo	956
Copeland	870
Healy	381

WALSALL.

The Hon. E. R. Littleton	389
C. Forster	282
W. H. Cooke	124

WAKEFIELD.

Saunders	392
Alexander	358

WARRINGTON.

Greenall	227
Allcard	226

WARWICK.

Collins	443
H. Roberts	407

YARMOUTH.

Lennox	332
Cooper	311
Hunnbold	739
Goldsmid	700

POLLS ON FRIDAY (YESTERDAY).

BEWDLEY.

This election has arrived at a most critical point. The votes polled for the two rival candidates, Mr. Ireland (Conservative) and Sir T. E. Winnington (Liberal), are exactly equal. Add to this the fact, that all the votes except four are polled, and that those four are two of each party, and you will perceive the extraordinary position in which the election is placed. It may be that the Mayor will have to give the casting vote.

Townsley	491
Fox	440
Goldsmid	341

BIRMINGHAM.

Scholefield	2792
Munts	2777
Spooner	2295
Allen	90

BODMIN.

Wyld	297
Lacy	259
Spry	117

BRADFORD.

Busfield	935
Colonel Thompson	924
Wickham	869
Hardy	814

BRIGHTON.

Pechell	1571
Hervey	1238
Cuningham	893

BRISTOL

Berkeley	4398
Miles	2600
Fripp	2469
Pallatt	160

CAMBRIDGE (UNIVERSITY).

Law	988
Fielding	765
Goulburn	679
Lefevre	490

CAMBRIDGE TOWN.

Adair	815
Campbell	734
Sutton	468

CANTERBURY.

Conyngham	786
Smythe	761
Vance	696
Clinton	616

CARLISLE.

Hodgson	460
Dixon	459
Howard	419

CHELTENHAM.

Sir W. Jones	1023
Hon. C. Berkeley	910

COLCHESTER.

Smyth	677
Harcastle	595
Sanderson	539

DOVER.

Rice	1104
Clerke	935
Prinsep	894

DURHAM (CITY).

Grainger	598
Spearman	523
Wood	450

EDINBURGH.

Cowan	2053
Craig	1834
Macaulay	1477
Blackburn	980

HARWICH.

Bateshaw	213
Attwood	184
Knight	65
Hill	2

TOTNESS.

Seymour	260
Baldwin	154
Ricardo	153

WESTBURY.

Wilson	170
Higgins	149

WINCHESTER.

Carter	366
East	246
Escott	245

WORCESTER.

Ricardo	1164
Rufford	1142
Hardy	925

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED

O'CONOR DON.

This esteemed and respected gentleman, who represented the county of Roscommon in Parliament, and held office as one of the Lords of the Treasury, died, deeply lamented, on Wednesday night, the 21st instant, at his residence in Jermyn-street, St. James's, of disease of the heart. The Royal House of O'Conor, of which O'Conor Don was the chief, held for a long series of generations the sovereignty of Connaught, and was at one time invested with that of all Ireland. Tordhelbach O'Conor was received as supreme king in 1136, and reigned twenty years. He died in 1156, leaving two sons, Roderick, the last monarch of Ireland, and Cathal Croibh Derg, ancestor of the late O'Conor Don. In the time of Elizabeth, Sir Hugh O'Conor Don, of Ballintobber, submitted to the English Government, compounded with Lord Deputy Perrot for all his estates, and was knighted by Robert, Earl of Essex. In the Tyrone war he joined the Queen's forces, and commanded the horse at the famous battle of the Curlieus. Sir Hugh was the first knight of the shire returned to Parliament by the county of Roscommon. With him may be said to have expired the greatness and power of the O'Conors. What remained of their ancient Royal inheritance, little escaped the political spoliation and religious persecution of Cromwell and William. Major Owen O'Conor, of Balanagare, followed the fortunes of Charles the Second, and, eventually, died a prisoner, in the Castle of Chester, in the year 1692, while his nephew and heir, Denis O'Conor, was involved in the troubles and misfortunes which seemed, at that period, the common lot of all who professed the Catholic religion; he survived, however, to improve considerably his estate, and left, at his decease, a fair property to his son, Charles O'Conor, of Belanagare, a learned and distinguished antiquary, whose two eldest grandsons were Owen O'Conor Don (father of the gentleman whose decease we are recording) and Dr. Charles O'Conor, the accomplished author of "Rerum Hibernicarum Scriptores," "Columbanus' Letters," &c. &c.

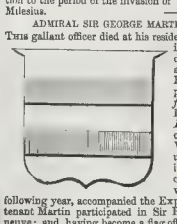
The late O'Conor Don was born in May, 1794, and married, in August, 1824, Mary, daughter of Maurice Blake, Esq., of Tomes Hill, county Mayo, by whom he leaves two sons and five daughters. The singular title of "Don," which he bore, as Chief of the House of O'Conor, is derived, by some antiquaries, from Tirlagh O'Conor, King of Connaught, surnamed "Don," or The Dark, a potent warrior against the English, in the time of Richard the Second, but others carry up the adoption of the designation to the period of the invasion of Ireland by Prince Don, the son of Milesius.

ADMIRAL SIR GEORGE MARTIN, G.C.B., AND G.C.M.G., &c.

This gallant officer died at his residence in Berkeley-square, on the 28th inst., aged 82. At the period of his decease he was Admiral of the Fleet, and Vice-Admiral of the United Kingdom. Sir George Martin was present, as Midshipman of the Suffolk, in Rodney's actions in the West Indies, in 1780; he commanded the Irresistible, at the Defeat of the Spanish fleet off Cape St. Vincent, in 1797. In 1800, he had under his orders the force employed in the blockade of Malta, which he conducted with the greatest perseverance and success; and, in the following year, accompanied the Expedition to Egypt. In 1805, Lieutenant Martin participated in Sir Robert Calder's action with Villeneuve; and, having become a flag-officer in 1807, commanded the naval force employed on the coast of Sicily. At the blockade of Toulon, in 1809, he rendered essential service to the Commander-in-Chief, Lord Collingwood: the following year he was promoted to the rank of Vice-Admiral; and, during the latter part of the Peninsular War, commanded the naval force employed at Lisbon.



In 1814 Admiral Martin received the honour of Knighthood; the following year was made a K.C.B.: and in 1821 obtained the Grand Cross. Besides these distinctions, Sir George had a medal for his services at the battle of St. Vincent, and in 1811 received the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Januarius.

Sir George Martin, who was son of the late Captain William Martin, R.N., by Arabella, his wife, daughter of Sir William Rowley, of Tendring Hall; married first, in 1804, Harriet, sister of Admiral Bentinck; and second, in 1815, Arabella, daughter of William Locke, Esq., of Norbury Park, Surrey.

SIR DAVID POLLOCK.

This gentleman was the eldest of those three brothers whose success in life has been as remarkable as it was meritorious. Through their talents, industry, and perseverance, the name of Pollock is now rendered famous both in arms and in law. Sir David Pollock was born in 1780: he received his education at Edinburgh College. He was called to the bar, by the Honourable Society of the Middle Temple, the 28th Jan., 1805, and had, for many years, a prosperous practice on the Home Circuit; he also obtained considerable business in the Insolvent Debtors' Court, and in Parliamentary Committees. He was a Queen's Counsel, a Bencher of the Middle Temple, and Recorder of Maidstone, Tenterden, and Dymchurch.

A few years ago, he was appointed a Commissioner of the Insolvent Court, and in 1846 he was made Chief Justice of Bombay, and received the honour of Knighthood. His death occurred at Bombay, in May last. Sir David, as is well known, leaves among his surviving brothers Sir Frederick Pollock, the present Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and Sir George Pollock, one of the heroes of the late war in India. Sir David had a numerous family of his own; two of his sons are eminent solicitors, and one of them, we believe, has a legal appointment at Bombay.

JOHN WALTER, ESQ.

We regret to have to record the death of John Walter, Esq., of Bearwood, in the county of Berks, the principal proprietor of the Times newspaper. The immediate cause of Mr. Walter's death was cancer in the face, which made its first appearance rather more than a twelvemonth since; and although he was attended by the first medical aid in the country, the disorder was too deeply rooted to be eradicated. The lamented gentleman died at his residence in Printing-house Square, at a quarter before two o'clock on Wednesday morning, in the seventy-first year of his age. (Next week we shall present our readers with a Portrait of Mr. Walter, and a Memoir of his eventful life.)

DEATH OF ADMIRAL ERSKINE DOUGLAS.—This venerable naval commander died on Sunday last, at his residence, Sparrows, near Watford, at the advanced age of eighty-seven, and after a service of nearly seventy-nine years.

COSSACK, THE WINNER OF THE DERBY.—A faithful and beautifully-executed portrait of this fine animal is just published by Mr. Moore, of St. Martin's-lane, the well-known publisher of sporting pictures, and is certainly a valuable addition, as a work of art, to the previous "Winners of the Derby."

INCREASE OF THE INCOME-TAX.—The Standard of Thursday says—"It is designed at the meeting of the new Parliament to propose an augmentation of the Property and Income-Tax to five per cent. Of this the public may be assured, and the design will explain what has been hinted in some of the hustings speeches of the ministerial candidates."

POSTSCRIPT.

GOODWOOD RACES.—FRIDAY.

Match, 50 sovs, half a mile.—The Widow received forfeit from Outpost.

Match, 50 sovs, T.Y.C.—Bowstring beat Sloth.

Holywell Stakes of 10 sovs each. T.Y.C.

Lord Eglinton's De Witt
Duke of Richmond's Hornpipe	1
	2

Six ran.

Sweepstakes of 300 sovs each for two-yr-olds.

Mr. Mostyn's Surplice	1
Mr. Herbert's Hope	2
Lord Glasgow's Clark of the Council	3

The Mostyn Plate.

Brown Bess	1
Sister to Arkwright	2
Tippet	3

The Nassau Stakes of 50 sovs each.

Clementina	1
Slander	2
Cosachia	3

Sweepstakes of 10 sovs each. T.Y.C.

Bowstring	1
Awkward	2
Christopher	3

The Chesterfield Cup, by 30 Subs, of 15 sovs each.

Mr. Rolt's Collingwood	1
Mr. Irwin's Fairlot	2
Mr. Robertson's Blackbird	3

Fifteen ran.

SHAKESPEARE'S BIRTH-PLACE.—The Commissioners of Woods and Forests have signified their willingness to become conservators of the birth-place of Shakspeare if purchased for preservation. The Stratford-on-Avon Committee, who have this object in view, have already received the promise of very distinguished patronage.

DEATH OF MR. EATON.—Mr. Eaton, late M.P. for Cambridgeshire, died at his seat, Stetchworth Park, on Tuesday last.

ETON AND WESTMINSTER BOAT-RACE.—This interesting event came off on Thursday evening in the presence of a vast concourse of spectators, both on the banks and on the river. The distance selected for the contest was from Barker's rails, Mortlake, to Putney bridge, and at a quarter to seven o'clock the rival crews appeared at the station. Both crews started at the same instant; for a second or advance, and then they were one and one, at an immense speed. They continued at a most rattling pace, and after rowing about two hundred yards, the Etonians began to draw gradually away. The Westminster party put on a fine spurt, but their opponents went further in a trance, maintained it all the way, gradually leaving their adversaries more astern, and won by one minute five seconds, accomplishing the distance, nearly five miles, in twenty-six minutes.

CRICKET. THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS' MATCHES.—The first of these annual matches was commenced at Lords', on Wednesday, and was that between Harrow and Eton Colleges. The affair was brought to a conclusion on Thursday, and terminated in favour of the former, who won in one innings, by twenty-four runs.

FIRE NEAR KEW.—Yesterday morning, about six o'clock, a fire broke out at a boat-builder's at Strand-on-the-Green, near Kew, on the Middlesex side of the Thames. The family had barely time to escape by a back window. Four houses were burned down; the property was insured for about £600.

COUNTRY NEWS.

RETURN OF SIR R. PEEL AND HIS BROTHER FOR TAMWORTH.

The election for Tamworth took place on Wednesday. Mr. Bramall proposed Sir R. Peel, and the nomination was seconded by Mr. Robinson.

Major Bamford proposed Mr. William Yates Peel, and Mr. Farmer seconded the nomination.

Sir R. Peel then made a long speech to the electors, which resembled in substance the address he recently issued to them. In referring to the principles by which he was actuated, the right hon. Baronet said—"Gentlemen, I stand here with the proud consciousness that I have done my duty to my constituents, and to the people of this country—(cheers); that I have had no objects of a personal nature in any of the measures I have proposed. I have been ready to sacrifice power and party connections—I have been ready to endure unjust calumny and reproaches—I have been ready to do this rather than abandon my public duty, and neglect the interests committed to my charge. What have been my public purposes?—have I departed from them? I am a loyal and devoted subject of the Queen. I wish to see every privilege of the monarchy preserved. Have I done anything to encroach on those powers? I wish to see the power of the Crown upheld, and to see loyalty and affectionate devotion displayed towards the Sovereign of this country, which it would be unjustifiable, indeed, if we did not manifest towards the Sovereign who now rules over this country. (Cheers.) Well, gentlemen, I wish to see the Church maintained in all its legitimate influence. I wish to see the Church gaining upon dissent; but I wish to see it gaining upon dissent by extending its ministrations among the people. I do not want to see the Church supported by unjust laws, injuriously affecting those who dissent from its doctrines. I think it perfectly compatible with affectionate attachment to the Church to consult the feelings, and do justice to the rights of those who dissent from her doctrines. These are the objects of true Conservative policy which I wish to uphold. I wish to see the House of Lords in possession of all its just authority. I attach the utmost importance to the maintenance of an hereditary nobility. I believe the aristocracy of this country have done as much at least to vindicate the liberties of England as any class in it, and I believe it would be utterly destructive of that mixed constitution under which we live if the House of Lords ceased to exercise its influence. I wish to discourage the desire for democratic change in the House of Commons. I do not wish to see a democratic body acting in discord with the Throne and the House of Lords."

Sir R. Peel then enumerated the advantages which had been conferred upon the country while he was in power, and defended himself from the attacks made upon him.

After pointing out the advantages of what he termed a liberal system of commercial policy, the right hon. gentleman concluded by saying, "If some military tyrant shall again try to enunciate the false policy of military glory, and disturb the peace of the world for the gratification of his own corrupt ambition, then I hope an enlightened people, flourishing by the interchanges of their own products with the products of other countries—seeing in war but the discouragement of civilisation, the interruption of industry, and the destruction of kindly feelings—I hope that a rational, and intelligent, and powerful people, will rebuke that military tyrant, and refuse to see their wives made widows, and their fathers left without children, and children mourning their fathers, not for the defence of nations against aggression, but for the gratification of those corrupt feelings which are engendered by mere military ambition. And the way to give that power and that influence to public opinion is to remove restrictions on commercial intercourse, and to encourage that interchange of commodities which is the soul and foundation of commerce; to obtain the political and social good of increased revenue, but with it the inestimable moral good of peace confirmed, morals promoted, national prejudices extinguished, the absurd doctrine of hereditary animosity scattered to the winds; to see the people happy and contented under equal laws, enjoying the benefits of their industry, and seeing other nations dealing and trafficking with them in the equal enjoyment of those blessings which we ourselves know how to respect." The right hon. Baronet concluded amidst loud cheering.

Mr. W. Yates Peel then addressed the electors.

No other candidate having been proposed, the Mayor declared the Right Hon. Sir R. Peel, Bart., and the Right Hon. W. Yates Peel, duly elected.

LORD GEORGE BENTINCK AND THE PROTECTIONISTS.

Lord George Bentinck has issued an address to the electors of King's Lynn. It is almost as lengthy as that of Sir Robert Peel; and, indeed, it seems chiefly intended to combat the arguments and professions made by the right hon. Baronet in his recent manifesto to the electors of Tamworth. Lord George indulges in some strictures upon those who "have violated every political principle," maintains his own consistency, and denounces Sir Robert Peel as the Minister "who, by his pernicious example, too well taught a large body of his adherents that to obtain and to keep political power, under false pretences, was nothing worse than a 'pious fraud.'"

THE MURDER AT CHESTERFIELD.

At Derby on Tuesday, Anthony Lount, aged 26, was charged before Lord Denman, with having feloniously received, aided, and comforted John Platts, after he (John Platts) had killed one George Collis.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty

Mr. Humfrey and Mr. Mellon were for the prosecution. Mr. Miller for the defence.

The trial of Platts, at the last Assizes, was given in our paper at the time, when he was convicted and executed for the murder. The prisoner was charged as an accessory after the fact. The facts may be shortly recapitulated. The murder of Collis was in December, 1845, for which Platts suffered. The discovery of the murder took place in August, 1846. On Sunday, the 7th of December, Collis and Platts had made an agreement to meet a person, but Collis was never seen after that day, and it was supposed he had gone to Manchester. Nine months after the body was found in a cesspool in a yard of Mr. Bunting's, and, from parts of a handkerchief, garters, &c., clearly identified to be that of Collis. Circumstances made it clear Platts was concerned in the murder, for which he was afterwards executed. On the Monday night, between ten and eleven, three persons were seen carrying a bundle. It was sworn those persons were Platts, the prisoner, and a third party; the question being whether Lount really was one of the persons there that night, and if so, whether he was cognisant the bundle he was assisting to carry was that of a murdered man.

The jury returned a verdict of "Not Guilty."

RAILWAY TO NEWMARKET.—The works on the line from Chesterford to Newmarket are rapidly approaching completion, and it will be opened for traffic in September next.

HUMOURS OF AN ELECTION.

CANDIDATE

ARRIVAL OF THE CANDIDATES.

CANDIDATE.

ARRIVAL OF CANDIDATES BY RAILROAD.

Hurrah! hurrah! along the brave lines
The candidates rapidly thunder along!
The sun of July on their gay banners shines,
And the special trains whistle their merriest song.
At the terminus—oh! what a scene will be there!
The burghers all lustily roaring their glee.
For, True Blue or Yellow,
Their clays well they mellow—
Election's pure freedom seems glorious to me!

CANVASSING IN THE COUNTRY

Most courtier-like the Candidate
Has enter'd—say a Crispin's shop:
With humblest bow begins to state
His claims and views—Imperial Fop!
He buys a turnip for five pound!
Repeals the tax on malt and hop.
Alas! another year goes round—
From seeds of promise, what a crop!
The country—the country rears many a clown,
But is it eclipsed not by city and town?

CANVASSING IN TOWN.

Hurrah! for our own "little village!"
It ever has given the cue,
To the efforts of Commerce and tillage,
To Freedom in every view.
And the Citizen Canvasser carries
Diogenes' lamp! Is it true?
Go! ask your Lord Georges and Harries
Which sort bears the bell and the blue.
Still—brothers! all brothers! in city or plain
The banner of Britain should never know stain.

COUNTRY CANVASSING.

TOWN CANVASSING.

In what a condescending way,
A visit to the Town they pay,
And with a patronising air,
Kiss Tom Fitzwaddle's son and heir.

And swear he's quite a "duck," a "dear"—
Pourquoi? Because Tom has a vote;
If not, a set of brutes would be
Poor Tom, and all his progeny!

With sweet, conciliating air,
To Hodge's hut they next repair,
And try the old and "artful dodge"
On Mister and on Mistress Hodge;
Declaring if they win the day,
The farmer shall have naught to pay,
And vow they'll have the duty taken
Off butter, poultry, eggs, and bacon.
But Mrs. H., you may perceive,
Is laughing at them in her sleeve;
And tells her husband not to vote,
Unless he gets a ten-pound note.
Her politics appear to be
Merg'd in three letters—L. S. D.

THE COMMITTEE-ROOM.

To take a peep we next presume
Into the "Chief Committee Room,"
Where bottles rang'd along the table,
And noise that would out-babble Babel,
Afford sufficient indication
That Father Mathew's exhortation
'Bout drinking water—in this City—
Is thrown away on this Committee.

No battle-field, where spear and shield
Had done their work, could e'er be prounder

VOTE FOR METHUSELAH AND THE ANCIENT INSTITUTIONS
PLUMP FOR SIR JOHN METHUSELAH
POPULAR PRINCIPLES VERSUS LIBERAL OPINIONS
NO POPERY NO MAYNOOTH GRANT NO MORE CONCESSIONS
BRITISH LION
VOTE FOR THE PRINCIPLES

ELECTION COMMITTEE-ROOM.

HUMOURS OF AN ELECTION.

THE SUCCESSFUL CANDIDATE.

Than that famed room, where hundreds come
And peal the shout of triumph louder.
The placards boldly pace the town,
High in Committee Rooms are seen;

Oh! let us stereotype it down,
The cry of all is "COUNTRY! QUKE N!"
Still, ever let our contests be
For the Land of the lovely, brave, and free.

TO THE HUSTINGS.

Now turn we to the hustings, where
We tremble for the man who dare
Give bold expression to his wishes,
And vote against the "loaves and fishes."
For be the candidate a Jew,
Or Turk, or Gentile, entre nous,
Provided that he has the tin,
'Tis ten to one that he'll get in.
For see, from "John o'Groats" to Dover,
There's not a man when "half seas over"
Cares (conscientiously) a pin
Which of the rival parties win.

THE SUCCESSFUL CANDIDATE.

The struggle o'er, the battle won,
Then comes the hour for mirth and fun.
The victor, with becoming pride,
Begirds the sabre to his side,
And promises (so most men do
But pie-crust like, they break them too),
"Henceforth 't shall be his proud endeavour
To guard their 'vested rights' for ever."
Here echo faintly answers—"Never."

THE UNSUCCESSFUL CANDIDATE.

Joyous and festive is the shout
Of him that's in—but he that's out,
Returns (tho' not returned himself)
A wiser, yet a poorer elf,
And tells his "country cousins" how
He ne'er knew happiness till now;
That, all his views of greatness o'er,
He'll never seek for honours more,
Nor would he give one fig to be ("Sour grapes," quoth Reynard) an M.P.

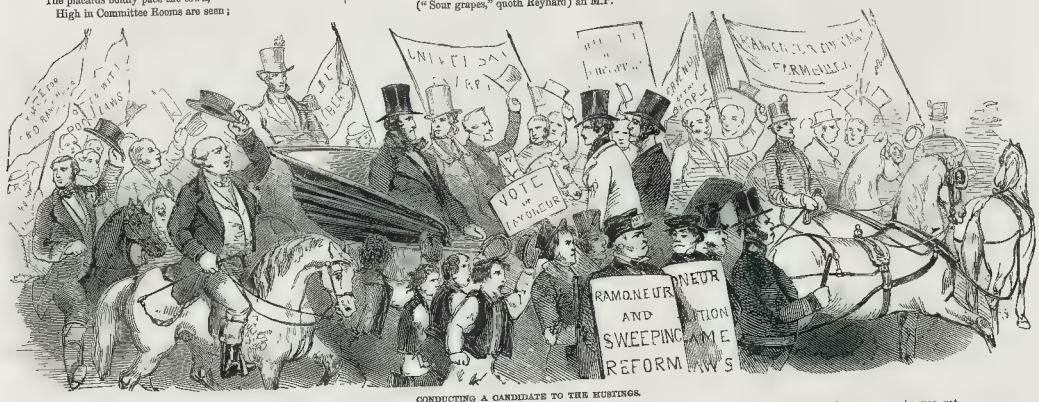
THE UNSUCCESSFUL CANDIDATE.

THE CANVASSER.

With what a servile, cringing mien,
The "canvasser for votes" is seen;



CONDUCTING A CANDIDATE TO THE HUSTINGS.

For your "sweet breath" a suppliant now,
He'll tell you when—and where—and how—

THE CANVASSER.

He'll make your fortune: insincere
The "word of promise to the ear,"

"THE INDEPENDENT VOTER."

He's sure to keep—your vote once got,
And meet him—faith he knows you not!

THE BOARDMAN.

MEETING OF THE BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION, AT WARWICK.

(Concluded from Page 55 of our Journal of last week.)

THE chief event of Thursday was the meeting of the [illegible] at Stratford-upon-Avon, [illegible] Gardens, [illegible] Shakspeare. [illegible] Warwick for the night. [illegible] Kenilworth, [illegible] Leicester.

On Friday morning, a few papers were read; after which the members of the Association left Warwick by railway for Coventry, and proceeded from thence to Coombe Abbey, the seat of the Earl of Craven about five miles from the town. The [illegible] Park, [illegible] Abbey, built in the reign of Henry [illegible], [illegible] Elizabeth, [illegible] Queen of Bohemia, [illegible] Prince Rupert, [illegible] Queen of Louis XIII. [illegible] Queen of Bohemia, and it was hence, when she was but very young, that the attempt to carry her off was made by the conspirators of the Gunpowder Plot. The [illegible] gallery is rich in portraits of the Stuart family; and there are some fine Heenbrandts.

On their return to Coventry, the members of the Association inspected St. Michael's, the tower of the Holy Cherubim, with a spire not four inches higher than a correct oak roof, and of the most ancient pointed [illegible]. Hospitality was likewise extensively dispensed on the same occasion. Handsomely [illegible] it [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] with the [illegible] will the Association [illegible] Lord Leigh's [illegible] and [illegible] restoration, in a most perfect state. From the Charter-house party went to St. Mary's Hall, one of the richest vestiges of the 15th century, with carved oak roof, minstrel gallery, armoury, tapestry, &c. Bablake Hospital, Grey Friars, and other fine old timber houses, were also inspected.

In the evening, the members returned to Warwick, and gave a conversazione and ball, which was fully attended by the principal families of the neighbourhood.

SATURDAY.

The Council and members of the Association held their closing meeting this morning at the Oddfellows' Hall, when Mr Pettigrew officiated as Chairman. The [illegible] were read, [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] meeting and [illegible] the [illegible] Association [illegible] In the [illegible] Lord Leigh's [illegible] Guy's Cliffe, the property of the late Mr Greatheed, [illegible] the contents for the magnificent hospitality with which they had been entertained during their visit. Thanks were given to the Treasurer, the Chairman, and to the Honorary Secretaries, Mr. Roach Smith and Mr. Crofton Croker, upon whom the labour and fatigue of arranging the affairs of the congress principally rested.

The house, shortly after, was visited Warwick [illegible] Castle, which they reached about Guy's Tower, the [illegible] Lark, the [illegible] Mr. Newdegate, [illegible] plain interior: here are preserved the chair and table of the father of Lady Jane Grey. Near the castle most [illegible] the village church, with [illegible] Beauchamp, Greville, and [illegible] Mr Newdegate's [illegible] Arden Park, [illegible] Mr Newdegate [illegible] grounds [illegible] and [illegible] with [illegible] statues, and [illegible] sylvan scenery, of great beauty. Mr. Newdegate received the archæologists, and led the [illegible] through the house and grounds; after which the party partook of a sumptuous [illegible] At the [illegible] Mr Peto [illegible] proposed the health of Mr Newdegate, and his family, [illegible] hospitality he [illegible] remarked that he considered it the duty of archæologists [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] to which [illegible] Chairman was the more [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] preserved and [illegible]. The speech was received with [illegible] Mr Newdegate returned [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] Association [illegible] for [illegible] a most successful [illegible] in which [illegible] many splendid [illegible]

MUSIC.

AMATEUR MUSICAL SOCIETY.—The prospectus for the season 1848, has been issued. The meetings will take place for the future, at the Hanover-square Rooms, the [illegible] having [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] the 21st. The [illegible] Lord [illegible] Lord [illegible] Jervis, Esq., are [illegible] Mr. Hobbs [illegible] Secretaries, and [illegible] Treasurer.

CONCERT AT NORTHAMPTON.—The [illegible] Mr. [illegible] Mr. Mornington Cannon's [illegible] Miss Abbott, Master Cottell, and Signor Ingo-lisco, from the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden, having been engaged. Mdlle. Alboni was rapturously encored in Rossini's "Una voce," and in Donizetti's "Tre Regine, Son," "Polo," [illegible] Signor [illegible] Mr. [illegible] Lindley [illegible] with Mr. [illegible] Mr. [illegible] Mr. [illegible]

during the Queen's residence at Osborne—thus "stealing and giving odour" —from and to that auspicious occasion. In the present season it was arranged to commence on the 26th instant—at the instance of her Majesty and assuredly a lovelier day there could not have been seen for such an occasion. There was a gallant woolsail breeze from the W. N. W., a bright sunshine, and one of those buoyant atmospheres—the more heart-stirring that they are the exceptions in our climate. The experimental fleet had sailed the preceding noon, so there was but a ship at Spithead, except the Iris—about to sail for the river, to pay off—why and wherefore, the Admiralty can tell—and the Dolphin make a shrewd guess. Thus the notice of the regatta was cleared for the annuachus —which was to have commenced at half-past ten, but which actually began at eleven to the instant. Long before the hour, the sweet town of Ryde was filled with holiday company. The pier was the rendezvous of the R.Y.V.C. Ryde was filled with holiday company. The pier was the rendezvous of the R.Y.V.C. House, one of the handsomest structures of the kind extant. It is not quite completed, but enough has been done to show what it will be. All the fashionable world, of course, was there, and the Club will very soon possess a marine mansion, the equal of which, we trust, the Cinque Ports will not long be without. The Royal Yacht squadron, of course, was there to enjoy it. Her Majesty, having accompanied the Experimental Fleet as far as its voyage on Tuesday, was to-day also passed the Needles; and, in the afternoon, came out of harbour with the infanta; and having visited the Queen of the Nab, returned in the Fairy to Ryde, and lay in tention of lying the first in Torbay, returned in the Fairy to Ryde, and lay in tention of lying the first in Torbay, retu ned in the Fairy to Ryde, and lay in tention of lying the first in Torbay, retu ned in the Fairy to Ryde, and lay to off the pier-head for a short time; then, setting on again the Royal Standard, as if for Southampton Water, and running to the eastward of the Nab Tower, as if for Southampton Water, and running to the eastward of the Nab Tower, as if for Southampton Water, and running to the eastward of the Nab Tower high, took its departure. The voyage from Havre to Southampton was performed in the short space of seven and a quarter hours; and, it is due to Captain Paul to acknowledge his attention and urbanity to all on board the ship, which, for speed, beauty, and accommodation is unsurpassed.

MR O'CONNELL'S REMAINS IN THE CHURCH OF NOTRE DAME, AT HAVRE.

At Southampton, the coffin was placed in the hearse, on a railway-train, attended as before, and arrived in town on Sunday evening. The remains were immediately removed in the fourgon to the Euston-square Hotel, where they remained until Monday morning, when, attended by Mr. Daniel O'Connell; Dr. Miley; his valet, Duggan, and about eight Irish gentlemen, including two Roman Catholic clergymen, they were placed upon one of the carriage-trucks of the eleven o'clock direct train for Liverpool. Mr. D. O'Connell, Dr. Miley, and Duggan accompanied the body to Liverpool, where the remains were to be removed to one of the City of Dublin Steam-packet Company's first-class boats, for conveyance across the Channel to Dublin.

BARON ROTHSCHILD.

THE Baron Lionel de Rothschild, and his brother, are the eminent representatives of the Rothschild family in London. Succeeding to their father, the celebrated Nathan Mayer Rothschild, in 1836, their names have since been before the public, not only as the members of a firm whose dealings both in Europe and Asia are of the most extensive character; but also as munificent patrons of art.

The Baron, now one of the representatives of the City of London in Parliament, is the eldest son of Nathan Mayer Rothschild; he passed much of his early life in Frankfort; and married one of his cousins, a daughter of Baron Anselm, the banker, of the above city. The Baron Rothschild is now in the prime of life, and is a worthy representative of his father in all that relates to the interests and charities of the Jewish nation.

The founder of the Rothschild family was Mayer Anselm, the son of a Jew tradesman in humble circumstances, in Frankfort: he was intended to be a Rabbi; but, after the death of his parents, engaged in business as a money-changer: for many years he superintended a house in this business, at Hanover; he, subsequently, founded one on his own account at Frankfort, and rapidly gained connexion and credit by his punctuality and honourable dealing. It was this quality that gave him the chance which led to his amassing an enormous fortune. He was the agent of the Elector of Hesse Cassel, and had in his possession a large sum of money, the private property of the Prince, at the time Frankfort was taken by the French troops in the Revolutionary War. This trust Rothschild preserved, at great risk and loss to his own funds; when peace was restored he gave it back to the Prince, who had looked on it as lost in the wreck of the times. It is said that

BARON ROTHSCHILD.

Rothschild had the advantage of afterwards using this money for some years, at a low rate of interest; and this laid the foundation of one of the largest accumulations of capital that ever came into the hands of a private individual. Mayer Rothschild died at Frankfort, universally respected, in 1812. He left five sons: Anselm, at Frankfort; Solomon, at Berlin and Vienna; Nathan Mayer (the father of the Baron Lionel) at London; Charles, at Naples; and James, at Paris. They carried on the business of bankers and loan contractors for many years with the greatest success, all having a peculiar talent for business. They acted as agents in each of the large cities of Europe, and kept each other constantly informed of the position of affairs, and the rates of exchange: they shared the profits equally. They were all raised to honourable posts by the States of Hesse Cassel and Austria; by the latter power they were presented with patents of nobility, and made Barons of the Empire.

TUSSACK GRASS.

THIS gigantic grass (Dactylis cespitosa) has recently been introduced into this country by Sir James Clark, and the officers of the Antarctic voyage. A fine specimen may be seen in the Royal Botanic Gardens of Kew.

The Tussack grows to the height of six and seven feet on the Falkland Islands; and Sir William Hooker, in his "Popular Guide to Kew Gardens" (just published), considers this to be, unquestionably, one of the most valuable agricultural grasses yet known; and, having braved the droughts and cold of England for two entire years, there is no question that it may with care and patience, be naturalised. Sir William adds: It is well worthy of attention, at the present time, that the wild west coast of Ireland would exactly suit this grass. It is of slow growth, and slower to form its great tussocks, whence is derived the name given where wild cattle find shelter. The young shoots are sweet and nutritious, and, in the Falklands, are eaten boiled, like asparagus, by the better sort of people. It is related by the present Governor of the Islands, that two runaway sailors for a long time subsisted on the growing shoots of this grass.

TUSSACK GRASS AT THE ROYAL BOTANIC GARDENS, AT KEW.

A full history of the Tussack will be found in Sir William Hooker's "Notes on the Botany of the Antarctic Voyage;" and the "Flora Antarctica" of Dr. Hooker; and in the more recently published "Voyage of the Erebus and Terror," by Sir J. C. Ross, R.N

NEW CHURCH OF ST. SIMON ZELOTES, BETHNAL-GREEN.

NEW CHURCH OF ST. SIMON ZELOTES, BETHNAL-GREEN.

THIS exceedingly neat little Church, just completed at Bethnal Green, is an excellent specimen of what may be achieved in Church-building, in point of design, at a very moderate cost.

The Church is divided into a nave, lighted by windows in the clerestory; with aisles, and a chancel. At the junction of the nave with the chancel, rises a boldly-designed bell turret, above the gable of which is a small cross. The windows throughout the building are well designed, in keeping with the style of architecture adopted—that of the Early Decorated; and the east window is especially good. The porch to the northern door is of massive appearance: the buttresses are quite plain in character.

The Church is built of Kentish rag-stone; the dressings, windows, &c., being of Bath stone. Mr. Ferrey is the architect; and the builders are Messrs. Holland.

The Church will hold 950 persons, all the seats being free. The Rev. Mr. Guyon is the Incumbent.

DEATH OF THE HONOURABLE AND REVEREND GEORGE SPENCER. We regret to learn that accounts have been received of Mr. Spencer's death, from fever, caught in the discharge of his duties as a priest. The deceased was brother to the present, as well as to the late Earl Spencer, and was in his forty-eighth year.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

The great object of attraction is still Verdi's new opera, possessing, as it does, so much additional interest from the fact of its being one of the first operas ever written for our Anglo-Italian stage. We hope, however, it will not be the last, and that, the example once set, will be frequently followed. It redounds greatly to the credit of the management that this important step in art should have been taken in a season which all prophesied would be one of extraordinary difficulties for Her Majesty's Theatre, and which, on the contrary, will have been one of the most brilliant in its annals. Such performances as that of the "Masnadieri," a new opera by the first Italian composer, performed under his superintendence, by such artists as [illegible] and Lablache, [illegible] the theatre has been [illegible] calculated to raise the character of the British nation for an enlightened and magnificent patronage of the fine arts.

MDLLE. JENNY LIND. SIG. LABLACHE.

VERDI'S NEW OPERA "I MASNADIERI," AT HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—SCENE VI.

To proceed to Verdi's opera [illegible] perfect and adequate idea the [illegible] mentioned. A [illegible] which begins every part of the [illegible] immediate prominence, while the orchestra and chorus seem as if inspired by one spirit, and work together in perfection. Nothing could be better done. The [illegible] work of pieces which would make an [illegible] other [illegible] written, gives great advantage to its favour. Critics have already pronounced

SIG. GARDONI. MDLLE. JENNY LIND. SIG. LABLACHE.

VERDI'S "I MASNADIERI"—SCENE LAST.

the two first acts of the opera to be the best, and this is undoubtedly the case. The situations themselves in the commencement are more dramatic, and give more scope for the composer's genius; and the last acts have rather too much of the robber's choruses, and present too little perhaps of her who is still the great magnet of attraction, Jenny Lind. The choruses, with the exception of one fine one in the third act, possess less merit than any other part of the opera. The rugged effect of the male voices in unison, which, in the "Lombardi," was a novelty, and was a decidedly dramatic and characteristic one, becomes some what monotonous by repetition; and Verdi must seek for other effects if he would avoid the charge of mannerism. A chorus of female voices, in part, would be a

[illegible] We must also find [illegible] a violoncello solo [illegible]

[illegible] first aria, which is exceedingly d[illegible]ured by him with a force and energy in which we have no hardly recognises the tender melancholy voice and style of the admirable young artist; the two airs of Amalia, "Lo Sguardo avea," and "Carco vive;" the finale of the first act, the duet between Jenny Lind and Coletti, which is more remarkable in a dramatic point of view, however, and as a display of genius on the part of these artists, than in any other respect; and the duet of Gardoni and Lablache, which is beautiful, and beautifully performed, and which many consider the gem of the opera. In two situations in Carlo's address to the setting vow, and in Francesco's scorn—such prominent points in Schiller's tragedy, Verdi has not reached the height of the poet's idea. Perhaps this was impossible, and that these scenes are inflated for musical adaptation. It is, however, almost impossible to give a correct judgment of an opera like "I Masnadieri," without a longer study, and greater number of opportunities of hearing it than we have yet enjoyed—the proof that being that almost all the critics who heard it the second time thought more highly of it than they did the first night of performance; and this has been the case with every one of Verdi's compositions, which have grown into popularity by degrees, and the style of which is gradually supplanting that of works now branded by the new musical school as "rococo." The only thing to be hoped is, that the rising school of music will keep clear of those exaggerations and mannerisms which at last proved the ruin of the former one. But this is, perhaps, too much to expect.

There is so much to be said and remarked, on a new opera, that we have dwelled particularising its performance almost too long for our allotted space. Let it [illegible]s, therefore, at present to say, that those who have not heard it can hardly imagine the beautiful effect of the union of voices such as that of Jenny Lind, Lablache, Lind and Coletti, Gardoni and Lablache, &c. They completely fill the ear with their beauty and fulness, and leave an impression hard to be forgotten.

Lablache as the old Bohemian noble, is splendid, as he always is. Each from his majesty appearance, his glorious voice, and his noble pathetic acting. Gardoni in voice, in look, in manner, is admirably suited to the most conspicuous character of Carlo, and Coletti plays with great talent, a part most discreditable—that of the atrocious villain, Francesco. The music is excellently suited to his voice. One fault only can we find with this otherwise admirable artist; it is a manner he has of observing his words, which has been sound hollow and sepulchral, which in certain situations has a most beautiful effect; the constant habit, however, of such a production of voice would to us be regretted, and even now it occasionally impairs the effect his magnificent organ and his admirable taste produce.

As for Jenny Lind, the effect she creates is what it could not fail to be. Her acting, her exquisite perception of the character, her delicious execution of music within [illegible] suspect, rather with a view to its performance by prima donne of a less extended compass of voice, and therefore not embracing her higher notes, but to which she gives an inexpressible charm; all this would afford matter for a long dissertation, into which our space will not allow us to enter.

Verdi's new opera "I Masnadieri" was repeated on Thursday to a house crowded in every part, and went off with increased éclat and applause. Jenny Lind's execution of the splendid aria "Carlo vive" was received with thunders of applause, and was encored, and the charming duetting in the third act, "Ma un ti di pace," between Lind and Gardoni, obtained the same honour. The other pieces favourably received were as successful on this occasion as on the other representations of the opera. The choruses went admirably. Verdi was advertised to conduct, but Balfe was the conductor of the evening. The principal artistes were received several times, and bouquets innumerable were thrown to the Swedish nonpareil.

The ballet of "Le Jugements de Paris" concluded the entertainments, in which the unrivalled "Pas de Déesses" was danced by Taglioni, Carlotti, and Rosati, who were each applauded to the echo in their variations.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Mozart's "Nozze di [illegible]ro," with its magnificent cast, was repea ed on Saturday and Tuesday, the houses on both occasions being remarkably full On the last mentioned evening, it w as a complete overflow, numbers being unable to obtain admission into the pit, two amphitheatres, and gallery, whilst the [illegible] chairs were placed in the passages for amateurs determined not to lose the anticipated treat. The lady-like and interesting demeanour of Adelina Patti, Steffanoni in the Countess, has won universal admiration, whilst her clever interpretation of the two airs, "Porgi amor" and "Dove Sono" (Sarret's delicious oboe obligato in the latter ought not to be overlooked), has raised her also on an accomplish musicle of every school. Her duo with Grisi, "Sull' aria," has been nightly encored with rapture. The Susa is the most natural and unaffected Susanna we have ever seen—naïve and vivacious—and the Spanish cavatina sung delightfully; combined with her rich luscious tones, he entire performance of Grisi was quite racy and piquant. Her duo with Tamburini, "Crudel perche," was another certain encore. The Italian, Signor Mercuriali, was a good Almaviva, and Madame Belinzi, who gained much applause with Grisi in the duo, "Via resti servita." Cherubino's pranks have been charmingly represented by Alboni, in the manner of whose singing too much cannot be said. The cavatina "Non so piu cosa son cosa sepeta," has been encored every evening. Alboni's animal spirits seem to have a revel in the frolics of the Page. Her by play throughout was most ex hilarating; the Marcellina of Mdlle. Dotti was exceedingly clever, and that of Vedetta" the malicious quaintness of Lavia's Basilio, with the restored tenor aria and the introduced gardener Antonio of Polonini—contributed to the beauty of the whole; whilst the polished Count of Tamburini still preserves its inimitable characteristics

Casati's new ballet of "La Rosière," so charmingly sustained by the mimic power and graceful dancing of Mdlle Pocci, has been one of the greatest choregraphic hits of the season. Her marvellous feats on the pointes are universally applauded.

There are now only eight more subscription nights, the two Thursdays, August 12 and 19, being therein included. On Saturday, the 21st, the season terminates. Mr. Bea.e, the director, is, however, uncasing in his exertions. In addition to Rosalvi's "Lucia di Lamermoor," produced on Thursday night, it is intended to mount the "Donna del Lago" with great splendour, and Signor Grisi, Alboni, Mario, the new tenor; Tagliafico, Lavia, Polinini, and Marini, being included in the cast.

The "Gazza Ladra" was thus sustained. Ninetta, Madame Grisi; Lucia (the farmer's wife), Madame Le Hon; Fernando Villabella (a captain in the army), Signor Tagliafico; Giannetto (his son), Signor Mario; Pippo (a country lad), Mdlle. Alboni. Ismaele Villobella, (the father of Ninetta), Signor Tamburini; Jacco (the Jew pedlar), Signor Lavia. Giorgio, Signor Polonini; Antonio (Polonini; and Gottardo (the magistrate), Signor Marini. Every amateur is, of course, aware that the interesting story of "The Maid and the Magpie" supplied to Rossini the libretto for one of his most celebrated operas, the "Gazza Ladra," which was produced at Milan, in the spring of 1817. Its success was enormous, and it soon became not only European, but universal. The "Di placer" is as familiar all over the world as the "Di tanti palpiti!"

The enthusiasm of an audience was never more strongly evinced than at Thursday's execution. The house was crowded in every part by a lash onable audience, amongst whom we recognised the splendid amateur the Earl of Westmoreland, now on leave of absence from his diplomatic duties at Berlin; the Marchioness of Douro; Lord Dalhousie, the future Governor-General of India, and the Countess Dalhousie, Sir A. Barnard, the Earl of Munster, Lord A Lennox, H. Baring Esq., M.P., &c. The overture electrified the house, and the measure was rapturous. Grisi was called for after "Di placer." Alboni was encored in "Tocchiam," with fervour. The cavatina "Non temer," by Tamburini, and Marini, was also given twice. Marini was greatly cheered and called for, for his opening air, "Il mio piano" In the second act Alboni had the signal honour of receiving an encore for the slow movement in the duo, "Eben per mia memoria." For sentiment and pathos this bit of Alboni's cabaletta is perfection. Tamburini, whose acting and singing of the veteran soldier are equally admirable, gave the cavatina, "Oh! cara memoria," very finely. He looked the picture of Napoleon, in his making up. The trio concluded with the finale quintour, "Che abisso," went splendidly. The excitement during the last scene, the procession to the place of execution, was immense, so beautifully did Grisi sing and enact Ninetta, and Alboni the faithful friend, Pippo. The curtain fell amidst repeated rounds of applause for this superb interpretation. Grisi, Alboni, Tamburini, and Marini were called on the stage, the fair vocalists receiving a plentiful floral shower. The only drawback was Mario's hoarseness; a cabaletta was made for the tenor at the beginning of the evening, and he omitted the a.r, "Vieni fra queste braccia," but sang in all the concerted pieces. The "Gazza Ladra," from the completeness of the cast and the perfection of the ensemble, may be pronounced to be another great hit.

SADLER'S WELLS

The amiable and accomplished vocalist, Miss Rainforth, has commenced the anxieties of managerial responsibility, at this establishment, for a limited number of nights, until the legitimate drama resumes its sway, under Mr Phelps's direction. Bellini's "Somnambula" was the opening opera on Monday, Miss Rainforth being the Amina, Miss Rebecca Isaacs Lisa, Mr. Allen Elvino, Mr. Borrani the Count, and Mr. H. Horncastle the Alcone. Mr. Tully conducted the orchestra and the chorus department was well selected. The house was quite full, and the numerous amateurs proved that they were as enthusiastic for southern music as the most rapturous West-end dilettanti. The execution seemed to gratify the audience in every respect, and the encores and ovations were such as must have highly gratified the hearts of the executants. We wish the fair manager every success in her undertaking.

PRINCESS'

It is smart work to produce two successful pieces in one week, yet the new farce of "Early Closing, or, a Night at the Casino," is the second piece brought out by Messrs. Angus Reach and Hamilton within six days, "Fleur de Lys," which was notiled last week, having been produced on Saturday, and favourably received. It is quite a treat at this house, after the style of vapid translations with which the theatre has been deluged, to get something like an original farce on a home subject; and "Early Closing" assuredly is. Miss Jemima Deckerbird (Miss Emma Stanley) is a species of English grisette a collarmaker in the employ of Mr. Linenhall (Mr. Granby), a silk mercer, with whose head shopman, Mr. Standgyll (Mr. Cowell), the young lady is in love. But Mr. Linenhall is a sly old fox, and wishes to establish a flirtation with the fair employée. She is, however, true to her admirer; and the two lay their heads together, with a view to aid of Mrs. Linenhall (Mrs. Fosbrook), to play the old man a trick There is to be a Bal Masqué at the Casino, and Miss Deckerbird persuades Mr. Linenhall to take her there; all the others going, as well as Mr. Velcetpall (Mr. Compton), an auctioneer, who is to play cavalier to Mrs. Linenhall. At the Casino, Mr Linenhall gets in a row, and when taken by the police, gives his name as Standgyll, which brings about a smart burlesque of the celebrated scene in "Don Cæsar de Bazan," wherein the hero mocks the King of Spain. All is here "blown;" and Mr. Linenhall has a disagreeable session read to him the audience at the same time foreseeing that he will be subjected to further punishment in the "Candlemas" Court. They will reserve at home. The piece was very well played. Mr. Compton, as the undertaker, was delicious; it was just one of those dry quaint character parts in which he is inimitable. His dreary lungs alone denote the undertaker. Miss Stanley, Miss Cleveland, and Mr. Granby are as two decorateurs; and the other ladies and gentlemen exerted themselves to the utmost, and kept the audience lively, in spite of the lateness of the hour, which, to a less amusing piece, would have been certain condemnation. The general applause of the house ratified the complete success of "Early Closing," which we shall be mistaken, if it do not prove a money-drawing and effective bagatelle.

ADELPHI.

Mr. Stirling Coyne is the happiest of farce writers for the Adelphi. He understands the taste of the audience so well, and knows so thoroughly in what elements to place his dramatis personæ to the best advantage, that a uniform success a vails his productions And it is a success of the most genuine kind. Every sally and applause are so continuous and hearty that nobody has any time to reflect on probabilities or truth. The audience are literally falling due, in whole scenes, to ferociously awkward predicament: the greater his distress the higher our grafification seemed, until we get so exhausted, that, did not our practised dramatist know well how to drop the curtain always at the right moment, we should barely have strength left to cheer its fall, or acknowledge the announcement of its repetition every evening until further notice "How to Settle Accounts with your Landlords" is the broadest of broad farces—one that it is positively cruel to produce this weather in the hottest of hot theatres, into such convulsions are the audience thrown. We despair of telling the plot, for the absurd situations come so closely upon one another that it is impossible to follow them. All we can inform the reader that Mr. Whittington Weigets (Mr. Wright) is an aspiring tailor who formerly owed his young landroas, Mary White (Miss Woolgar), a small account. He intended to liquidate by marrying her. But, with an increase of luck, he forgets his old flame, and aspiring to theatrical acquaintances, establishes a flirtation with an opera dancer, Mademoiselle Clara Bonnet (Miss S. Hardy). But Mary, in a fury at such a slight, appears at supper about to come off, plays him a trick. She dresses up a dummy as herself, and pretends to commit suicide in the water-butt—so unnerving Whittington, that he takes his place at the supper table in man's clothes. The last event by this is explained; and a hair-dresser at the opera, Jacob Brown (Mr Munyard), assists in bringing about a satisfactory denouement. This sketch gives but a faint notion of the fun by which the audience are each moment shaken to pieces with laughter. Mr. Wright's dreadful terror and agonising expedients are well seconded by Miss Woolgar's archness and mischief-making expression: and the other ladies and gentlemen partake of the epidemic, and go their utmost to keep the piece moving. It is scarcely necessary to say that the farce is unequivocally successful; and that those unfortunate mortals who are puzzled just at present how to settle their accounts with their landlords, will find an opportunity of learning for many evenings to come—much longer, for certain, than she will take to wait.

SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.

Taking advantage of a popular topic, the proprietor of this charming al fresco resort has added a great attraction to those already noticed by us, in the shape of an exact model of Shakspeare's birth-place at Stratford-upon-Avon, from sketches and admeasurements kindly furnished by Mr. Fairholt, a gentleman better known to the public as "Alfred Crowquill." The elevation is exactly on the same scale as the original, and nothing can exceed the minuteness of the copy, down to the smallest particulars. There are the old broken foot pavement of Harley-street, in front of the house, is carefully reproduced, as well as the irregular flags which form the floor of the butcher's shop, which the actor will recollect. Even the very identical stone which forms the step over the open window "The immortal Shakspeare was born in this house" is reproduced, with the old faded yellow letters on the black ground, in a manner actually surprising. The roof is thatched with straw, and the panes of glass is old and discoloured; the timbers blackened and worm-eaten—not imitated, but really so; and the patches of brick-work cleverly preserved. Indeed, to those who cannot go to Stratford, and who have not seen the original on Avon, we recommend a visit to the Surrey Zoological Gardens; and they will have a most perfect idea of the interesting old building in which our great poet is said to have first seen the light. Even the interior has been copied, and some the e ago we gave a sketch of the Shakspeare house, and it would merely be a reproduction of that view. It was a great feature in the attractions, and was surrounded at all hours by crowds of visitors.

Mr. Ty.er has it in contemplation, we believe, to hold a Fancy Fair at his Shakspeare House, the proceeds of which will go towards a fund for purchasing the original house, and converting it into a National Property. If such an undertaking, and the present fine weather ought to be taken advantage of, as the grounds are confident, might be raised; and every one assisting at the fête might have something to show for their generosity in the shape of the monument, in plaster, or likenesses; views, and cheap editions of Shakspeare's works, would have a ready sale, and return at the same time a good profit.

Several of the members of the late Sadler's Wells company have been playing at the Surrey during the last week or two, performing the legitimate drama very creditably, and, considering all things, to tolerable houses. It is a kind of after-season for the theatre, and under the management of Mr. Kerschner.

THE MARKETS.

Corn Exchange, Friday).—An increased supply of English wheat has been received up to our market this week, it having amounted to 32,0 quarters To-day the stands were fully supplied with samples, several of which were the refuse of [illegible]nday, owing to which the influence of fine weather for the ripening of the corn, a very large [illegible] demand for [illegible] at which of home produce was extensively heavy, and to [illegible] cted sales, and to the quotations of Friday in no part quarter last week was realised. But the transactions were so limited that prices were almost nominal. In foreign wheat next to nothing was doing, and, in the few sales recorded, the rates declined quite 2s per quarter. Most of the cargoes now arriving are going into granary. Grinding barley was la 2s per quarter cheaper, and malting 1s dearer. The supply arriving was very moderate. The malt trade was dull, and the rates had a downward tendency. Oats and peas were lower to [illegible]

[illegible] Wheat, 3810; barley, 40; malt, 4340; oats, 250 Irish; Wheat [illegible] 2s malting barley, 2os 6s to 28s; [illegible] 15,790 [illegible]

[illegible] 2s; ditto white, 27s to 28s; ditto white, 23s to 26s; Norfolk and Scotch [illegible] 2s malting barley, 20s 6s to 28s; [illegible] 2s; grinding barley, 18s to 20s; [illegible] 2s; malt, 50s to 55s; Kingston and Ware, 56s to 58s; [illegible] 2s; oats, 15s to 17s; potato ditto, 16s to 23s; Youghal and Cork, black, —s to —s; ditto [illegible] 26s; 14s to 16s; ditto ditto, —s to —s; ditto ditto, 20s to 24s; [illegible] 2s; beans, [illegible] 2s; tick wheat, —s to —s, boilers, 30s to 32s; per quarter Town-made flour, 48s to 50s, ditto per sack, 27s to 28s; Yorkshire ditto, 23s to 25s per [illegible] Foreign—a large [illegible] wheat, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; barley, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; and peas, —s to —s per quarter. Town-made flour, 45s to 46s; ditto per sack, 25s to 26s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—Several parcels of new canaryseed and rapeseed have been on offer this week. The former have sold at from 38s to 40s per cwt; the latter, £30 to £39 per last. In old seeds, as well as cakes, a little [illegible] has occurred [illegible]

Linseed, English, sowing, 56s to 60s; Baltic, crushing, 46s to 48s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 44s to 46s. Hempseed, 34s to 36s per quarter. Coriander, 18s to 21s per cwt. Brown mustard, 9s to 10s; white ditto, 7s to 8s; tares, 38s to 40s per bushel. English [illegible] £71 to £73 per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes, English, £13 to £13 10s; [illegible] 2s £10 to £10 10s; Mediterranean and Odessa, £9 10s to £9 [illegible] Canary, 60s to 62s; rapeseed, English Clover-seed, red, — to —; extra, —s to —; white, —s to —; [illegible] 60 to —. Foreign, [illegible] 2s 40s per cwt for [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT-GARDEN.—LAST NIGHT BUT ONE.

The Nobility, Subscribers, and the Public are respectfully informed that the LAST EXTRA NIGHT will take place on THURSDAY NEXT, AUGUST 5th, on which occasion a GRAND OPERA will be performed, in which the following eminent artistes will appear:—Mlle. Grisi, Mme. Castellan, Mlle. Adolphine Nissen, Mlle. Steffanoni, Mlle. Corbari, Sig. Mario, Sig. Marini, Sig. Ronconi, Sig. Tamburini, and Sig. Lablache.

To conclude with a popular BALLET. The principal characters by Mdlle. Taglioni, Mlle. Fanny Cerito, Mlle. Desmoulins, Mlle. Duvernay, Mlle. Carlotta Grisi, Mlle. Adeline Plunkett, Mlle. Rosati, Mlle. Guy, Mlle. Lucile Grahn, Mlle. Rosa Taglioni, Mlle. Matilde, Mlle. Coste, and supported by a numerous corps de ballet.

Tickets, Stalls, and Boxes, to be obtained at the Box-office (in the theatre), Bow-street, and at Messrs. Cramer, Addison, and Beale, 201, Regent-street.

Doors will be opened at Half-past Seven, and the performance commence at eight o'clock precisely.

OVERFLOWED NIGHTLY at ASTLEY'S AMPHITHEATRE, to witness the Grand Spectacle of Lord Byron's MAZEPPA; or, The Wild Horse of the Desert—In consequence of the numerous applications at the Box-office daily, it is with pleasure announced for SIX MORE NIGHTS; when it must positively conclude for the Grand Spectacle, which will be produced on MONDAY, the 9th of AUGUST, written by Mr. Maclaren, entitled the PRINCE OF CYPRUS; or, The Vow of the Element; with three Incidents. Among the visitors were many of our highest aristocracy. Mr. L. Nathan, of Castle-street, has been appointed contractor. The entire of the arrangements are under the superintendence of the celebrated Tom Matthews, late of Drury Lane Theatre. Tickets, 1s., 2s., ladies', 2s. 6d.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—

COLLINS'S ODE on the PASSIONS will be recited by Mr. J. RUSSELL, with illustrations in a Series of DRAWINGS, suggested by some of the effects of the Magic Lantern, at a Selected Morning Lecture by Dr. Woods, on the Mornings of Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, and on the Evenings of Tuesday and Thursday, at Eight o'clock. The LECTURES on NATURAL PHILOSOPHY will comprise the Subject of the ELECTRIC TELEGRAPHS, as CHEMICAL LECTURES by Dr. M. Noad, Esq., on Tuesday, Thursday, Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. The beautiful OPTICAL EFFECTS include the last DISSOLVING VIEWS, DIVING BELL and DIVER, with EXPERIMENTS, &c.

Admission, 1s.; Schools, Half-Price.

WALHALLA, late Miss Linwood's Gallery, Leicester-square. RETURN of MADAME WATSON from her Provincial Engagements and Revival of the WHITE MARBLE STATUES.—Madame Warton will have the honour of appearing every Morning and Evening on a splendid New Stage in Each Apartment, in consequence of the numerous applications for revival of the inimitable White Marble Statue Groupings, they will be produced, with additional Poses Plastiques, Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, at the Noon, in the Novel Cameos. Light by Mr G. Southby, of the Royal Surrey Zoological Gardens. On Monday, July 26, they will be executed, embracing the strength of the company. Morning Performances at Three o'Clock; Evening, at Half-past Eight. Stalls, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 2s.; Promenade, 1s.

JERUSALEM AS IT IS.—NOW EXHIBITING, at the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, EDWIN SMITH'S New and Original MODEL OF JERUSALEM AS IT IS; measuring nearly 150 square feet, enlarged from the Model executed by command of her Majesty Queen Adelaide, and presented by her to the late King, and a member of the Nobility and Corps. Open from Ten in the Morning till Nine at Night and a member of the Nobility and Corps. Open from Ten in the Morning till Nine at Night and a member of the Nobility and Corps. Open from Ten in the Morning till Nine at Night and a member of the Nobility and Corps. Open from Ten in the Morning till Nine at Night and Admittance, 1s.; Children, Half-Price. A Description at the commencement of every hour Printed Description and Key, 6d.

ELEGANCE and ECONOMY in PAPER-HANGINGS.—French Satins, 2s. 6d. per piece; Flock, 6d. per yard; 20,000 pieces in Stock. Panel Decorations, Borders, or Ink, as cheap as other Papers. Terms, Cash. Established 20 years by CROSBY, 22, Lowther Arcade. N.B.—Three doors from the Strand entrance.

SHIRTS.—WHITELOCK and SON, 166, Strand, solicit the attention of Gentlemen to the Shirts they supply from 30s. to 42s. each. They are made in the Corsair or Sailor-row style, have Linen fronts and Long-cloth, with fine Linen Backs, Cuffs, and are superior to those usually sold at 8s. 6d.; also, all Pure Linen, 10s. 6d., usual price 14s. 6d. One and a sample, by upon receipt of the measure, and 1s., as part payment of postage. The measure required is the neck, chest, and wrist, tight.

PATRONS of NICOLL'S REGISTERED PALETOT.—His Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Royal Highness Prince George of Cambridge, the Royal Highness Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar, his Grace the Duke of Wellington, and the several Royal visitors to the British Court, with almost every Foreign Nobleman, have given this costume the best test of the satisfactory qualities of this fashionable overcoat in the constant removal of this high patronage.

TROUSERS!—A good fit in this garment can be seldom obtained. S. GRAVES, fashionable Trousers-maker and Tailor, 3, High Holborn, is determined to effect it, and is desirous to assert, without fear of contradiction, that in many years experience and study, is studied to assert, without fear of contradiction, that in many years experience and study, is studied to assert, without fear of contradiction, that no man sit gentlemen with this garment better than any other person for stooping, sitting, walking, private or public, or riding. A well-assorted Stock of the newest designs to select from.—S. GRAVES, 3, High Holborn.

BERDOE'S LIGHT OVER-COAT, for the SUMMER intended also, in warm weather, in lieu of an under-coat.) The WATERPROOF PALLIUM possesses especial claims to the attention of the Equestrian Classes, in consequence of its graceful appearance, well-known coolness, and tendency to prevent cold, continue (UNLIKE BY ANY MERELY CLAM-TRAP PRETENSIONS), to sustain its established reputation, as being the most convenient, economical, and permanently popular Garment ever introduced. An extensive assortment kept to select from, or made to order at a day's notice. A particular style of the above made expressly for CAPTAIN BERDOE, Tailor and Patentee, 69, Cornhill (north side).

PROTOBOLIC HATS.—JOHNSON and Co., 173, Regent-street, corner of Vigo-street, Hatters to her Majesty and the Royal Family, Patentees for the sale of their Waterproof and Air Conductors in Hats.—The invention of the Hats which is placed on the Crown of the Hat, giving free exit to heat and perspiration, and of a grooved space for the forming a series of small Tubules in the back part of the Hat, are fully known by which air is admitted into the crown of the hat by the perforations 20. See Book, Price 2s. 6d., usual price 3s. 6d. The introduction of air sculpturesque composition and beauty of ornament, we consider him never to have produced anything superior to these Cups. They have been exquisitely manufactured by Messrs. Garrard, of the Haymarket.

THE GOODWOOD PRIZE PLATE.

The Third Prize is from a design by Mr. Frank Howard, modeled by Mr. Alfred Brown, and manufactured by Messrs. Hunt and Roskill, of Bond-street. It is not a Cup, but a group of Statuettes, representing Charles Lennox, Duke of Richmond, acting as Aide-de-Camp to William the Third, at the memorable Siege of Namur, in the year 1695. The Duke, after this service, became one of the Lords of the Bedchamber to George the First, and died at Goodwood, on May 27, 1723. The choice of the above incident in the life of an ancestor of the present noble owner of Goodwood, is peculiarly felicitous, for to his Grace's liberality are the public indebted for the sports there. The Group is spirited, life like throughout, and is a very fine specimen of this class of composition. The portraiture, character, and costume are excellent; the King, whose horse is comparatively quiet, is giving his final orders to the Duke of Richmond, whose steed impatiently struggles to carry the noble rider on his mission.

THE STARTING TELEGRAPH.

THIS most useful and simple addition to the practical matériel of the Turf, is the invention of Cornelius Stovin, Esq., of the South Western Railway, a gentleman of great experience in the application of signals to the general purposes of locomotion. In the present instance, he has adapted the system to racing—and there cannot be a doubt about its success.

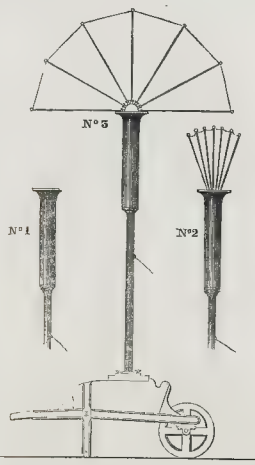

FIG. 1. FIG. 3. FIG. 2.

THE STARTING TELEGRAPH.

Our Sketches—for which we are indebted to the courtesy of the inventor—represent, first, the machine as it is seen when out of work—a tube of brass, affixed to a wheelbarrow, for the better facility of moving it from place to place. The second Sketch shows the descent of the fan into the tube, when the spring which supports it is withdrawn. The third Sketch represents the fan—set—previous to the start. It is placed a hundred yards or so in front of the person employed to start the horses. From the spring supporting the rod from which the fan branches, a thin line passes to the starter. The jockeys look to this fan alone for the signal to go; so long as it remains up, they must keep behind the post. When the starter is satisfied with the order of his field, he draws the line, and, in consequence of a heavy weight being attached to the rod, the fan collapses and falls into the tube instantly.

Such is the mere outline of the principle, a most ingenious and welcome addition to the improvements in the business of the Turf, which the last few years have introduced. It will be seen that this invention made its début this week at Goodwood.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR AUGUST.

THE extreme heat of the last few days has literally driven nearly all the beau monde out of Paris. Every post-chaise has been put in requisition for this migration of fashion, which has been so general that we can but recollect the most brilliant toilettes.

Among the light materials, recommended by their coolness and fineness, is the Grenadine, or silk gauze, which has the suppleness and elasticity of silk, without its substance. Amidst these indispensable summer materials are many novelties, as Mousselinette, la toille fille de Marie, &c.; most of which are printed with elegant patterns.

The form of the robe has varied with the great heat of the season; and the high corsages have been lowered in the bosom, and even to the breast; the sleeves are necessarily short; and in town, net is worn over the arms; or long and large sleeves of lace, tulle, or worked muslin, are worn.

These light robes have five or six deep volants; but the silk robes have fewer volants, which are sometimes cut upon the bias.

Richly embroidered mantelets of silk, muslin, and lace, are in high request; and lace shawls of magnificent design are in great favour.

The chapeaux are of paille de riz and d'Italie.

The costumes we have selected for illustration are a robe of India muslin, with a double jupe, richly embroidered; in the cap are worn spring flowers. The other costume is a chapeau of paille d'Italie; lace mantelet; and robe of silk gauze, trimmed with a deep single volant.

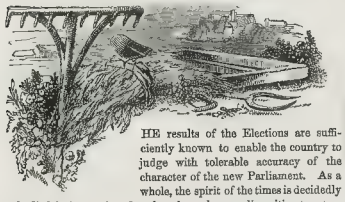
PARIS FASHIONS FOR AUGUST.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JULY 31, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 275.—Vol. XI.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, AUGUST 7, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE NEW PARLIAMENT.



THE results of the Elections are sufficiently known to enable the country to judge with tolerable accuracy of the character of the new Parliament. As a whole, the spirit of the times is decidedly embodied in it; nowhere has there been shown a disposition to retrograde. Personal and individual changes there have been, but the new men come in under the same principles as their predecessors, or perhaps with opinions a little freer and more advanced. The Whigs, up to the close of the Borough Elections, had secured a majority of about three to one compared with that party of neutrals which has taken the name of Peelite, and who, in action, will certainly oftener be found by the side of the Liberals than against them. The Protectionists, unless they make up their numbers in the counties, are dead beaten: their numbers, ranging between sixty and eighty, can make no stand by themselves in favour of the "reaction" promised by Lord George Bentinck. If the hatreds of the old Parliament are carried over into the new one, the Peelites and the Protectionists will stand aloof scowling at each other, divided—

Like cliffs that have been torn asunder—

a whole ocean of grudges and recollections, fraught with the bitterness that always accompanies the quarrels of allies and friends. The accidents of policy or debate may throw them together in action, without combining them; but even then the Whigs, with the large infusion of Radicalism the Election has given them, will be more than equal to the emergency. In the new Parliament Lord John Russell will have the materials for a strong Government, if he uses the chance wisely, and does not throw it away or fritter it down to division, distrust, and weakness. He is now more than a Minister "on sufferance" and the forbearance of foes.

The predominance the appeal to the hustings has given to the Liberals as a party, is a fair and just tribute to the success of their principles. They were beaten at the last General Election; but time and circumstances avenged them, and forced their opponents to do even more than the Whigs proposed to effect. It is well that the founders of a policy should have the reward of being the instruments of carrying it into effect. There is a justice which dictates the rendering to every man his own, which it is gratifying to find operating in the mind of a whole nation. The people have, in fact, at this Election reversed their decision of 1841, and said practically, We were wrong in rejecting you and your opinions then; we give you power and office now as an atonement.

But, though this is the result of the Elections to the Whig party as a body, in some individual cases there has been shown a most discreditable amount of caprice or ingratitude. Personal piques, or petty jealousies, have overborne the memory of many years of constant and efficient service; nay, qualities that are in some cases public virtues, are resented, and have been visited on their possessor, as though they were defects or crimes. Bath has disgraced itself by rejecting Mr. Roebuck for Lord Ashley; it has withdrawn its confidence from the man who for fifteen years has battled for the cause of progress in every branch of policy, whose eloquence and ability are universally acknowledged, whose honesty has never been questioned, for one of the rawest recruits of Liberalism; one of the band who never thought independently on the great commercial questions of the day till his Leader made it safe and popular to do so. However useful these "convertites" may have been to the country, by taking themselves out of the way of improvement, and turning from being impeders to helpers, we do not greatly respect them; and when they make their tardy wisdom, and their enlightenment that comes so late and so suspiciously, the ground of preference over abler and better men, who began their career with the knowledge which the renegades of the Protectionist creed have only gained at the end of one, we confess we lose our equanimity. We hold in contempt all time-servers and opportune converts, the ready adherents of the winning side, who come so readily in to share the prizes of victory, without ever having struck a blow in the long and arduous struggle. To see these self-sufficient praters of an adopted creed, of the very alphabet of which they were, two years ago, either naturally or wilfully ignorant, dispossessing the veterans of freedom of thought and commerce of their places, and that by the aid of the popular voice, is an exhibition that casts a stain on the very system of Representation itself. Is there no need of men who will point out the errors and short comings of Ministries, though composed of those with whom they, in the main, agree? Are eloquence, ability, and the moral courage to use both for the public alone, such ordinary qualities, that a constituency can afford to throw them aside like common things? Is an energetic advocacy of popular rights in every phase, social and political, exercised with a sternness and disregard of official quietude and convenience that almost revived the traditions of the functions of the Tribunes of Roman history, well exchanged for aristocratic amiabilities, and opinions only recently diluted into liberality? Bath is answerable for the vacancy left in the foremost rank of debaters in the House of Commons, for Lord Ashley, with his position, rank, and popularity, might have easily found a Peelite constituency elsewhere.

There have been other instances of fickleness in the electors; Mr. Macaulay, the most brilliant of modern historical and political writers, bold in announcing principles, and unswerving in his adherence to them, is rejected at Edinburgh for no perceptible reason. Something has been stated about personal demeanour and a want of gracious manners, which might be obstacles to success in a drawing-room, but have little to do with public questions; or, perhaps he would not promise impossibilities, and give up to a locality the powers that were "meant for mankind."

THE MIDDLESEX ELECTION—THE HUSTINGS AT BRENTFORD AT THE NOMINATION ON WEDNESDAY.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

It is for the sake of the people themselves we regret to see intellect and abilities unsupported by the popular voice, over which mere rank and wealth have such an easy influence will weigh as down. Is it not plain which is the weaker side when a Sibthorp, a mere privileged buffoon, laughed at and pitied, can command a constituency where a Bulwer, whose works are translated into all the tongues of Europe, is rejected? These things lower us in the eyes of the world, and furnish Despotism with an argument against the representative system that need not be furnished it.

Rank and property are not eminently represented, and in some cases, reputation and long services have been so ill requited, that it is comparatively satisfactory to meet with a few instances of selections which may rank as compensations. The election of Col. Peyronnet Thompson is one of them; he may be called the father of Free Trade, for he is certainly the oldest of the living writers and advocates of it; years before some of the recent "Free Trade" candidates were born—long ere Lord John Russell and the Whigs were converted even to the "Fixed Duty" theory—years and years before Cobden spoke, or the League was formed, or a famine falling on millions compelled Sir Robert Peel to think, and thinking, to obey them both, Col. Thompson was at work, denouncing an unnatural system, and exposing its mischievous effects, with a clearness, eloquence, and humour, to which we can find no parallel in the productions of any tariff-monger. He is one of the thinkers of the age, one of that class of minds that impress themselves on their generation, and, if blessed with long life, see their theories developed into practice. They are the unacknowledged legislators of the world, and it is right they should have their place, from which only the want of wealth, rank, and pliability of manner and principles to suit the hour, exclude them. The author of the "Political Exercise" has been the instructor of all our statesmen; it is right he should sit with them, that they may be becomingly humble in the presence of their Mentor. In the new Parliament, the veteran politician, with his grey hair and lofty brow, will appear like a seer of the past, in the midst of a younger race, who are fulfilling his predictions.

Mr. Macgregor is another of the men on whose great knowledge statesmen have built reputation—who have been the real preparers of the facts and arguments that have converted Senates. He can now thanks to the electors of Glasgow—speak for himself. Mr. Macculloch should have been by his side.

More visibly active workers in the cause have also found their reward. The triumphs of the public assembly have been remembered beyond the hour of excitement; and

> Action, utterance, and the power of speech,
> To move men's minds—

the gift of eloquence, in short, have placed George Thompson and Mr. W. J. Fox in Parliament. Many shake their heads, and talk of want of "standing," and "weight in society," and other things, indicating dissatisfaction and distrust. They forget that in all free states eloquence alone is power: those who spend the best years of their lives in mastering the orators of antiquity ought not to be surprised at the influence gained by the same talent, even with the most respectful acknowledgment of the superiority of the classics. Both everybody makes, as a matter of course, but of which we are sometimes dubious. Demosthenes did but persuade and excite, and the moderns do the same in a community far less impressionable. If character is to be strictly inquired into, the scrutiny must be imposed on all, or it would be an oppressive hypocrisy; and, if imposed, it would vacate many a titled seat and throw out many an influential man." Qualities above good public integrity must be tested by time: dependence on professional exertions is never objected to the lawyers and military and naval officers who abound in the House: why should it to others? There is no reason why the unestated and talented men elected by the people in the few cases that are exceptions to the rule should not be as honest and independent representatives as the scores of needy scions of nobility, whom the people choose from such merits, or from any talents whatever, either for speaking or anything else. Is there anything particularly dignified in such squabbles about a tailor's bill as that which edified the public the other day, between those territorial magnates the Berkeleys? Oldham and the Tower Hamlets are not likely to produce anything half as contemptible. There is no fear for the "dignity" of the new Parliament from the new importations, though there is some danger of their not bearing out the expectations formed of them by the public—a matter which may very safely be left to themselves and the future.

COUNTRY NEWS.

COUNTY NOMINATIONS.

MIDDLESEX.

The election for the metropolitan county commenced on Wednesday, at the accustomed hustings, Brentford Butts, Brentford. There, with roads across the narrow streets, rustics bearing green boughs, the softer sex adorned with the favours of the respective candidates; and, ever and anon, and from various corners, the reassuring discords of rival bands, were more animation than harmony to the scene. The crowd assembled about the hustings was tremendous, and it was with difficulty that Lord Robert Grosvenor and Mr. R. Osborne, with their respective cavalcades, got to the platform.

Mr. W. Paynter proposed Colonel Thomas Wood, and Mr. John Davis seconded the nomination.

Mr. W. Sturge nominated Lord Robert Grosvenor. The nomination was seconded by Mr. Hanbury.

Sir W. Molesworth proposed Mr Osborne. Mr. Hall seconded the nomination.

Colonel Wood then came forward, and was greeted with mingled cheers and hisses. He maintained, that he had not gone to Parliament pledged to protection. When they were visited with that dire calamity [illegible], and did they mean to say that it was not then necessary to bring an undivided mind to the full consideration of the whole subject? Was it not then necessary to relieve the industry of the country, and to afford the means of supplying the wants of the country by the only resources left, viz., the produce of the land? He would now ask them whether he had not also been true to his pledges with respect to the Established Church? He highly approved of the principles of Sir R. Peel, and of his measures in relation to the Church of England. He thought that his plan of appropriating the surplus of collegiate contributions, and which were not necessary for their maintenance, in order to the increase of small livings, and to supplying additional wants in destitute places, which he carried out by a measure passed in 1843, for the creation of 218 new livings in places where before the people were destitute of religious instructors, was of the greatest advantage to the best interests of the Church of this country. (Cheers.) Then, with respect to the interests of the working classes, he had the pleasure of voting with Sir Robert Peel for the reduction of the duties on coffee, sugar, timber, cheese, butter, lard, hams, and for the abolition of all minor duties of customs, which, instead of affording any revenue, only impeded the commerce of the country, to the amount of 700 or 800 articles, the duties upon which had now been all swept away. (Cheers.) He was indeed, therefore, to ask whether this opposition really arose from the ingratitude of the Free-Traders? He never expected to receive from them any confirmation of the course which he had adopted; but he did expect from the enlightened, the liberal, and the intelligent of the working classes of Middlesex, a warm approval of the course which he had adopted, and a full acquittal of the charge of political apostacy. (Cheers and hisses.)

Lord R. Grosvenor said he had been advised by some of his friends, who were getting a little impatient, to content himself with saying, "More I am; nobody has attacked me for anything I may have done; I stand now precisely as I did before." (Cheers.) But such a course would have been respectful to [illegible] (Hear, Hear.) He stood in the position of the hero of the "Seasons [illegible] although neither of his competitors died the other, neither, he believed, had any objection to him. A. had made some professions the last time he had the honour of meeting his constituents, he would now call their attention to the manner in which he had fulfilled them. He had stated that he was a Free-Trader. (Loud cheers.) He had since supported all the reductions in Customs, with which the present Government were so ably following in the steps of their predecessors. He had had the pleasure of voting for the Committee to inquire into the operation of the Navigation Laws; and, although he would not take any step injurious to our commercial marine, there were many anomalies in the law [illegible] ting it which he should wish to see removed. He was anxious for a reduction in the duty on tobacco, the luxury of the poor; but he did not hope for a repeal of the Malt-Tax. He hoped that a long time would not elapse before the Window-Tax was repealed, as such repeal would be one of the most efficient "Health of Towns Bills" that could be proposed. (Hear, and cheers.) He would [illegible] to the sweating man, and would tell them how he had come for the [illegible] valuable member of the community. He had voted for the limitation of [illegible] of labour in factories—(hear, hear)—and also for a limitation in the term of the soldier's enlistment. (Cheers.)

Mr. R. Osborne, the new candidate, then came forward, and was received with lively demonstrations of welcome. He said "Fellow-citizens, electors, and nonelectors of the great county of Middlesex, you have honoured me in the animated and eloquent address of my noble friend Lord Robert Grosvenor, and you will have remarked that he commenced that address by likening himself to a high-wayman prosecuted by two lads—Polly and Lucy. (A laugh.) I hope that on this occasion I may be the political Polly, because you who have read the play will recollect, that in the end she was united to Macheath. (Cheers and laughter.) In any event, if I cannot claim myself in the sporting circle, I trust you will give it to me as being, according to my noble friend, one of the softer sex—(laughter)—and when I assure you that during the whole contest I shall use no acerbity, no reproach, that no private aspersion shall be cast by me, that I mean to conduct my election solely on public grounds, I trust that I shall disarm even my opponents, and that they will grant me that bearing which my friends have conceded to them. No man entertains a higher respect for my gallant opponent, Colonel Wood, than the individual who stands before you. I know him to be a good, I believe him to be an amiable man; but, while I am bound to respect the hereditary successor of the sons of Middlesex, I am not called upon to approve the re-election of the late member for Middlesex, however qualified he may be to represent those ancestral virtues which we have been informed are hereditary in his family. I do not know why he has ceased visiting us in Parliament as has a right to claim your sympathy, or to ask you again to return him as your member. I do not mean to make use of any hard words. I do not believe that Col. Wood was a political apostate, but I am prepared with the fullest proof—(laughter)—that he did not give that free play to his ability you have seen to day. ("Oh!") and that he was content to trust his political conscience to the keeping of Sir R. Peel. (Laughter.) Pardon me, I adjure the word apostate. No doubt that, like many members of Parliament, the gallant Colonel never examined the subject; for, if he had, he could not have let himself be elected in 1837 pledged to carry protection. (Col. Wood: "I did.") Then, but I believe there are many unfortunate farmers who, through some obscurity of style in the gallant Colonel perhaps through his not bringing his papers in his pocket, as he has done to-day—went away from the hustings with the impression that he was in Parliament as has a right to claim your sympathy, or to ask you again to return him as your member. I do not mean to make use of any hard words. I do not believe that Col. Wood was a political apostate, but I am prepared with the fullest proof—(laughter) —that he did not give that free play to his ability you have seen to day

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE

FRANCE.

The French papers do not notice any event of political importance this week, with the exception of a vague intimation of a probable change of Ministry. According to the Patrie, a new Cabinet is about to be formed, either by M Guizot or M. Duchatel; but, on the other hand, the Commerce professes to know that the two Ministers just named, and their colleagues, MM. Dumon and Hebert, have determined to make common cause together

The Paris papers of Tuesday are taken up with the speeches of Count Montalembert and M. Guizot in the Chamber of Peers. The noble Count, following the precedent established by Lord Lyndhurst, and followed by Lord Brougham, rested the discussion of the question in a speech which he not inaptly called a "funeral oration." He showed, or essayed to show, that nothing had been done in the way of legislation, notwithstanding the promises held out by Ministers in their hustings speeches, while, in lieu thereof, corruption had become the order of the day. M. Guizot replied in a speech of considerable length, acknowledging that many measures had not been carried, owing to the difficulties attending a new Parliament and unexpected divisions of parties. Yet he contended that several important acts had been studied and matured, and would become, at no distant period, the law of the land—such measures, in fact, as education reform, prison discipline, the tariff bill, postage and salt bills. As regarded corruption, he denied that it was at all practised in the way alleged. The same charges were habitually made in other countries—those familiar with the proceedings of "Tom Jones" knew how Sheriffs managed elections in England—and, turning to America, it should be recollected that even Washington had been accused of having sold his country to England. Count Montalembert observed that the difference between France and England lay in this—that while corruption was practised in the latter country, as in every other, yet that the Government and men high placed were free from all suspicion; while in France it was the Government that corrupted, and its instrument was the budget.

In the sitting of the Chamber of Peers, of the same day, M. Guizot was again under the necessity of ascending the tribune, in consequence of some questions from M. de Flavigny, on the affairs of Switzerland and of Italy. The French Minister denied that the French Government had any intention whatever of interfering in the internal affairs of Switzerland, and of abetting foreign intervention. "If war, however, be right," he said, "to be prepared for the future, as Radicalism would soon be supplanted in Switzerland by Communism, if the present movement were allowed to continue unrepressed."

SPAIN.

There is nothing of consequence from Spain this week. Her Majesty still remained at La Granja.

The Madrid papers represent the dispute between the King and Queen to be daily increasing. The Faro says, that orders have been given not to allow any servant at the Palace to obey the King's orders, except by the express authority of her Majesty.

A Carlist conspiracy has been detected at Saragossa, and a large depôt of arms has been discovered. The Carlist bands in the mountainous parts of Catalonia appear to be on the increase.

The Madrid Gazette publishes a Royal ordinance revoking the order, issued by the Government on the 14th and 23rd of last March, against the exportation of corn. All agricultural produce can now be exported on the same terms as previous to the prohibition.

PORTUGAL.

We have Lisbon news to the 29th ult. Rumours prevailed of an approaching change of Ministry.

The Duke of Saldanha had dissolved and dispersed his army of operations, and he himself had departed on a tour through the two northern provinces, to superintend the re-establishment of the legitimate authorities, and to restore confidence among the people. He was expected in Lisbon on the 31st ult., the anniversary of the swearing to the charter.

All the officers of the insurgent army have been removed from active service by a Royal decree. Some persons impeding the installation of the new authorities at Ruivaes, in Minho, were killed, and others wounded, by the military. A report had reached Lisbon that the Algarve battalion killed three persons, and committed other outrages, on their arrival at Faro.

The Spanish troops were, on the 30th ult., still in possession of Oporto, but were daily leaving, three battalions, it was said, being about to re-enter Spain. The conduct of the Spanish soldiers was excellent, and rendered them popular. The batteries about the town were being dismantled, for the purpose. It was supposed, of weakening the place in anticipation of future outbreaks. General Concha, the Spanish commander, had left Oporto on the 27th, for the frontier.

The commercial news at Oporto was not important. A large supply of manufactured goods was looked for, but orders from the provinces were coming in slowly, so little was the confidence which people placed in the future conduct of the Government. The liberty of the press was still in abeyance, and likely to continue so.

ITALY.

We have accounts from Bologna and other parts of Italy, to the 23rd ult. The people remained tranquil, up to the date of the last advices, at Ferrara, Forli, Bologna, and Ravenna. But, more extensive reinforcements of the Austrian troops were announced to be on the march

A letter from Ferrara, dated the 21st ult., says that the Austrian troops which arrived there were adopting measures to goad the population to a tumult. On the 19th, some Austrian soldiers insulted the portrait of Pius IX., and tried to provoke a quarrel with the citizens of the Spanish Square. Others outraged a lady in the streets, and stopped the carriage of a physician (Dr. Zacchetti) who was visiting his patients. It was said that the Austrian commander had orders to attack the population without mercy, on the manifestation of the slightest disorder. The National Guard, however, continued to be enrolled, and was regularly drilled in the square of Prospero.

Agents of Austria, as was supposed, were employed to excite disorder at Bologna, during the anniversary of the amnesty. A Corsican, named Crisbna, began to utter exclamations against Pius IX. The people were exasperated, but contented themselves with conducting the man in charge of the police. Austrian emissaries are running through Romagna, stimulating the people to disorder.

The Cologne Gazette has the following from Vienna, of the 27th ult:—"The demonstrations in favour of Italy continue. A large quantity of artillery and ammunition has been sent off from this place and from Gratz."

The Gazette du Midi, of the 1st instant, mentions that it was reported on the Marseilles Exchange that an attempt had been made against the Pope's life. This Gazette, however, discredits the accuracy of the rumour.

SWITZERLAND.

The news from Switzerland is still rather important. On the 29th ult., the Popular Association, an association which extends all over Switzerland, held its first meeting at Berne, and made a strong demonstration in favour of the resolution recently adopted by the Diet for the dissolution of the Catholic alliance. The association, which is now for the first time established, has two objects in view, the first of which is to assist the Diet in dissolving the Sonderbund and expelling the Jesuits, and the other to carry such reforms in the institutions of the Confederation as may be thought necessary. The association declares that it is determined to carry these objects by legal means, and by legal means only; and it particularly recommends to its members to make use of their powers of persuasion for that purpose.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

We have received Cape papers to the 19th of May, but there is very little in them worth notice

Sir H. E. Young had entered on his duties as Lieutenant-Governor of the Eastern District. The great attendance to the progress of the eastern districts has been, hitherto, their remoteness from the seat of Government, and great hopes are entertained from this new appointment

The Lieutenant-Governor had arrived at Graham's Town from his visit to his Excellency Sir Henry Pottinger at Fort Peddie.

Since Sir George Berkeley has assumed the command of the troops in Kaffirland all has remained quiet, and the whole country to the Buffalo was abandoned by the enemy.

There is no intelligence from the front, except the capture of ten spans of oxen from Colonel Van der Meulen's camp, at the Buffalo mouth. It is supposed that these were taken by friendly Kaffirs.

MEXICO AND THE WEST INDIES.

The Avon steamer arrived on Thursday at Southampton with the West India Mail

The accounts brought by this vessel from the city of Mexico are to the 29th of June, at which date Santa Anna, taking advantage of General Scott's delay in advancing from Puebla, where the American leader still remained, had assembled in assembling an army of 15,000 men, which were already equipped and advantageously posted for the defence of the capital. As the American forces, 10,000 strong, were preparing to move forwards, a battle was looked for at El Penon. The result of this engagement would influence the Mexicans, either to sustain the contest or negotiate a peace, but, pending the issue, no arrangement was expected, though a communication from the Cabinet at Washington had been received by the Mexican Government, intimating that Mr. Twiste, who accompanied the American army, was empowered to treat upon amicable terms. "No surrender" was the condition upon which Santa Anna was permitted to hold power, and he appeared determined to take the chances of another fight. The Mmistry had been remodelled, by the appointment of General Alcorta, as Minister of War; Don Domingo Ybarra to the Department of Foreign Affairs, and Don Ignacio Romero as Minister of Justice. Rondero remained at the head of the Finance Department. A forced loan of a million dollars had been levied, from which foreigners were not exempt. According to the despatches, Vera Cruz was in a state of the most awful destruction from the ravages of disease, and it was made by the American Government public its determination of hostilities.

The disorders were continuing to feel the effects of the Mexican climate. Several deaths had taken place.

At Vera Cruz the fever was raging dreadfully, especially in the American army; there were between six and seven hundred in the hospitals, or church converted into hospitals. By the medical reports, twenty died daily; however, rumour said between twenty-five and thirty daily.

The accounts from the West Indian colonies are not quite so favourable, the weather having recently been rather dry for the young canes. This will, however, have little or no influence on the crop of sugar for the present season, whatever it may have upon that of the ensuing year

THE OVERLAND INDIA MAIL.

In part of our impression last week, we announced the arrival of the Overland Bombay Mail. The dates are—Bombay, June 19; Calcutta, June 10; Delhi, June 8. There is no intelligence of later date than that which we published on the arrival of the last Calcutta mail.

The most point of political importance is the state of Hyderabad, in the Deccan. Violence and bloodshed were the order of the day there. The troops of the Rohillas, whom General Fraser had unfortunately to induce to leave the Nizam's country, were returning by degrees to it. They were implicated in several gang robberies, and ordered to be deported. They came near the encampment, quarrelled amongst themselves, when Russeh-ood-Dowlah Khan was killed; his assassin was cut to pieces.

The summary of the Bombay Times notices, as one of the most remarkable events of the month, a further reduction of our army, which, for the first time within these eight years, promises to make our income equal to our expenditure. By reductions which had occurred since March last, sanctioned under 40,000 troops had been struck off the strength of the army—effecting a saving of about £300,000. Leaving us about £30,000 in all, or 70,000 more on our muster roll than we possessed from 1831 to 1838. Six regiments of the Royal army, whose service, it is supposed, can be dispensed with, are now to be sent home. This will save us from £230,000 to £300,000 a year more, or considerably above £500,000 on the whole reduction; leaving us still 64,000 men above our former peace establishment.

The Goomsoor country is again in a blaze from end to end; the sacrifice of human beings, for a length of time past a stop to under our late system, is now to be again practised; and villages are being burnt and plundered in all directions; and this at a time when we have only one native regiment in the district. The Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief continues at Simla. Lord Hardinge will return to Calcutta in October, and leave for England early next year. Everything continues tranquil in the Punjaub, the only alteration in our arrangements that has been made being the dispersion of the troops formerly stationed at the cantonments of Lahore, when Runeels-sool-Khan was killed; his assasin was cut to pieces.

The summary of the Bombay Times notices, as one of the most remarkable events of the month, a further reduction of our army, which, for the first time within these eight years, promises to make our income equal to our expenditure. By reductions which had occurred since March last, sanctioned under 40,000 troops had been struck off the strength of the army—effecting a saving of about £300,000. Leaving us about £30,000 in all, or 70,000 more on our muster roll than we possessed from 1831 to 1838. Six regiments of the Royal army, whose service, it is supposed, can be dispensed with, are now to be sent home. This will save us from £230,000 to £300,000 a year more, or considerably above £500,000 on the whole reduction; leaving us still 64,000 men above our former peace establishment.

The Goomsoor country is again in a blaze from end to end; the sacrifice of human beings, for a length of time past a stop to under our late system, is now to be again practised; and villages are being burnt and plundered in all directions; and this at a time when we have only one native regiment in the district. The Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief continues at Simla. Lord Hardinge will return to Calcutta in October, and leave for England early next year. Everything continues tranquil in the Punjaub, the only alteration in our arrangements that has been made being the dispersion of the troops formerly stationed at the cantonments of Lahore, when Runeels-sool-Khan was killed; his assasin was cut to pieces.

The following are some particulars of each day:—Friday, the sky was chiefly free from cloud during the morning, and mostly covered by cloud during the afternoon. The direction of the wind was S.W.; the average temperature of the day was 69°; the extreme thermometrical readings on grass were 43° and 125°. Saturday, the sky was principally free from cloud throughout the day; the direction of the wind was W.S.W.; the average temperature of the day was 68°; the extreme thermometrical readings on grass were 42° and 123°. Sunday, the sky was principally cloudless; the wind was light and from the S.W. The day was hot; its average temperature was 70°; the nights of Saturday and of Sunday were cold; during the latter, the thermometer sank to 49°, whilst during the afternoon of Sunday the reading was above 80° for some hours. The extreme thermometrical readings on grass during the day were 40° and 146°. Monday, the sky was partially covered, by cumuli till 8 A.M., and cloudless from that time till towards 6 P.M., at which time the sky became suddenly covered by black clouds, and there were appearances of a storm, but none occurred; a few drops only of rain fell; the direction of the wind was W.S.W. till towards 6 P.M.; at this time it suddenly veered to the N., and the temperature fell rapidly. The average temperature of the day was 67°; the extreme thermometrical readings on grass were 40° and 140°. Tuesday, the day was principally cloudless, yet, at times, there were detached cumulus clouds scattered about the sky; the night was clear; the direction of the wind was N.; the average temperature of the day was 69½°; the extreme thermometrical readings on grass were 32° and 132°. Wednesday, the sky, early in the morning, was cloudless, and its appearance afterwards was variable; the direction of the wind was S.W.; the temperature in the morning was as low as 40°; at 6h A.M. it was only 42°, this increased to 67° by 9h A.M.; the average temperature of the day was 77½°; the extreme thermometrical readings on grass were 39° and 125°. Thursday, with the exception of a few trifling breaks in the clouds, the sky was covered throughout the day, which was cull; the direction of the wind was W.; there were occasional slight showers of rain; the average temperature of the day was 61½°; and that of the week was 69½.

The average temperature of the month of July was 68½°. The depth of rain fallen during the month of July was seven-tenths of an inch only.

The extreme thermometrical readings each day were:—

Friday,	July 30, the highest during the day was	78	deg., and the lowest was	57½ deg.
Saturday,	July 31	.....	83	 58
Sunday,	Aug. 1	.....	88	 58
Monday,	Aug. 2	.....	88	 59
Tuesday,	Aug. 3	.....	74½	 55
Wednesday,	Aug. 4	.....	74½	..... 45½
Thursday,	Aug. 5	.....	70½	..... 42½

Blackheath, Friday, August 6, 1847. J. G.

ON THE WEATHER

DURING THE QUARTER ENDING JUNE 30, 1847.

The Report of the Registrar-General, for the past quarter, contains, as usual, the results of meteorological observations, made at many different places in England. These have been systematically examined, reduced, and discussed, by Mr. Glaisher, of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, the hygrometrical results being deduced from the observations, by the use of his own hygrometrical tables.

In Mr. Glaisher's remarks upon the weather he says that the cold weather which prevailed during the whole of the preceding quarter continued, with slight exceptions, till the end of the first week in May. On the 9th of May a period of warm weather set in; and, from that day till June 7th, the average excess of daily temperature above that of the season was rather more than 5°, and that the average temperature of every day between June 7 and the end of the quarter, was less than the average of the season. Mr. Glaisher remarks that the period from May 9 to June 7 was very remarkable, on account of its great heat, and particularly so on Sunday, May 23, and on Friday, May 28. (See remarks on the weather of those days in our paper.) On those days the temperature rose higher at Greenwich than any on record as occurring in the month of May; and, from the numbers contained in the Report, such seems to have been the case at all places inland, and south of the Thames. On the 28th the thermometer readings were from 80° to 87°. Mr. Glaisher says he believes there is no example on record of such high readings in the month of May

The mean temperature of the quarter, at Greenwich, was 53° 2, which is 2° below that of the corresponding quarter of 1846; 1° 3 above that of 1845; 1° 8 below that of 1844; and 0° 2 above that of the quarter for twenty-five years. The mean temperature at all the places situated some distance from the sea and south of Durham, was nearly the same as at Greenwich, except those situated in the counties of Cornwall and Devonshire. In our paper of May 15, 1847, will be found an extract from the Registrar General's Report upon the previous quarter, that all places situated in those counties were much warmer than other places in January, February, and March; and it would seem that in April they were the warmest; in May they were nearly the same; and in June they were colder than in other places. Mr. Glaisher accounts for this alleviation of the winter's cold, and lowering of the summer's heat, as follows:—In winter, when the sea or other water is warmer than the land, a portion of heat from the surface of the water, which, being cooled by being thus brought into contact with the cold air, sank, and made room for the warmer portion beneath, whilst the vapour formed was taken up and carried off by the wind, the pressure of the atmosphere, and is of the utmost importance with reference to barometrical variations.

The pressure of the atmosphere at Greenwich was less than that in the corresponding quarter of the preceding years.

The weight of water suspended in the air was, in April, such as to balance more than a quarter of an inch of the mercurial column; and in June more than seven-tenths of an inch, and it would seem from the report that the increased weight of water in the summer months almost exactly equals the loss of weight of air which takes place in the same months.

The hygrometrical state of the air was less than that of the corresponding quarter in the three preceding years.

The sky was rather more clouded than usual: the horizontal movement of the air was about 800 miles weekly.

The highest and lowest readings of the thermometer in the air, at the height of four feet above the ground, in England, during the quarter, were 81° and 19° respectively. The highest reading of a thermometer, with its bulb placed in the full rays of the sun, and protected from lateral wind striking it, was 114° 8; the highest reading on grass was nearly the same, 150°, and the lowest reading was 14°; the lowest reading on flax on grass was 8° 3.

In April, the reading of the thermometer on grass, was below 32° on twenty-one nights; in May, on seven nights; and in June, on two nights.

We have not room to insert more of this valuable report, but we strongly recommend the meteorological part of it to all persons at all engaged in meteorological researches.

We cannot help remarking, however, that a great step has been made in advance in meteorology, if we can correctly, from the simple readings of two thermometers, the one with a wetened bulb, determine so correctly the amount of water mixed with the air and determine so accurately its effect upon barometer readings as would seem to be the case in this report

We observe that some valuable instructions for making and registers of meteorological observations are appended to the report.

SUDDEN DEATH.—As J. Pilcher, Esq., of Crabble, was returning from the polling booth at Charlton, after giving his vote at the Dover election, yesterday week, he was seen to stagger in crossing a field, and instantly fell and expired.

THE LATE J. WALTER, ESQ.

On Wednesday, the 28th ult., John Walter, Esq., of Hearwood, Berks, died at his town residence, Printing House-square. He was, during a long life, the conductor of the Times newspaper, which, by his energy and perseverance, has attained a rank and influence unexampled in the history of journalism; an influence, indeed, impossible, except in a country of free institutions and great commercial wealth. Its growth has kept pace with the requirements of the age, till, in its crowded columns, may be found something that appeals to or interests every rank in life. It is a necessity, an actual instrument indispensable for carrying on or joining in the business of the day; it connects London and the empire at large with the remotest parts of the world, by a perfect chain of intelligence. It is almost a State in itself, with a home and foreign department, its ambassadors and agents apprised of every movement in its information, it frequently anticipates the statesman, and places the public on a level with Courts and Cabinets, the sole employers of "intelligencers" in former days. It more than realises, for facts, that "Staple of News" devised by the fancy of Ben Jonson, for factions, to meet the craving appetite of the public "for some new thing." Such a fabric could be reared by no ordinary effort, and no common mind.

Mr. Walter acted undeviatingly on two principles from the beginning of his management: he never permitted any Government to obtain the slightest control over his journal, by the acceptation of that assistance which a Government, before the means of communication were so perfect, could more frequently give, and which was therefore more valuable; and he sought out and drew to his service the ablest writers and contributors in their several departments, by liberal remuneration. The result was a perfect journal—bold and untrammelled in its opinions, full and extensive as an organ of news; the two merits combined, commanded its great circulation, which only acted as an incentive to greater efforts. It is more difficult to sustain a course of prosperity than to begin it; but success never abated the energy or slackened the enterprise of the conductor of the Times. That success was not the work of a day; on the contrary, it appears, from the memoir of Mr. Walter, given in the Times of Thursday week, that he had to struggle with all the opposition that the Governments of the first decade of the present century—which were by no means scrupulous as to what they did could offer him. He refused their aid, offered for his support; and they persecuted his family and endeavoured to destroy his property. In 1810, Mr. Walter has denounced the conductors and editors of the daily press, as a body; and this drew forth an article which narrates some of the early struggles of Mr. Walter with his powerful opponents. It says:—

"The joint proprietor and exclusive manager of this paper became so in the beginning of the year 1803, and from that date it is that he undertakes to justify the independent spirit with which it has been conducted. On his commencing his business, he gave his conscientious and disinterested support to the existing Administration—that of Lord Sidmouth. The paper continued that support of the men in power, but without suffering them to repay its partiality by contributions calculated to produce any reduction whatsoever in the expense of managing the concern; because, by such admission, the editor was conscious he should have sacrificed the right of condemning any act which he might esteem detrimental to the public welfare. This Ministry was dissolved in the spring of 1804, when the places of Lord Sidmouth, Lord St. Vincent, &c, were supplied by Mr. Pitt, Lord Melville, &c. It was not long before the Catamaran expedition was undertaken by Lord Melville; and again, at a subsequent period, his Lordship's practices in the Navy Department were brought to light by the Tenth Report of the commissioners of Naval Inquiry. The Minister's father held at that time, and had held for eighteen years before, the situation of printer to the Customs. The editor knew the disposition of the man whose conduct he found himself obliged to condemn; yet he never refrained a moment, on that account, from speaking of the Catamaran expedition as it merited, or from bestowing on the practices disclosed in the Tenth Report the terms of reprobation with which they were greeted by the general sense of the country. The result was as he had apprehended. Without the slightest cause of public complaint, his family was deprived of the business, which had been so long discharged by it, of printing for the Customs a business which was performed by contract, and which, he will venture to say, was executed with an economy and a precision that have not since been exceeded. The Government advertisements were at the same time withdrawn."

The next Government offered to restore the contract; but, after some correspondence, it was refused, the Ministry seeming to attach some condition to the grant. After this the Government used all its authority to stop the couriers and delay the correspondence of the journal. "First, in relation to the war of 1805, the editor's packages from abroad were always stopped by Government at the outports, while those for the Ministerial journals were allowed to pass. The foreign articles were always asked by a Government officer at Gravesend, if they had papers for the Times. These, when acknowledged, were as regularly stopped.

The Gravesend officer, on being spoken to on the subject, replied, that he would transmit to the editor his papers with the same punctuality as he did those addressed to the publishers of the journals just alluded to, but that he was not allowed. This led to a complaint at the Home Secretary's office, where the editor after repeated delays, was informed, by the Under Secretary, that the matter did not rest with him, but that it was, even then, in discussion, whether Government should throw the whole open, or reserve an exclusive channel for the favoured journals; yet was the editor informed that he might receive his foreign papers an hour from Government. This, of course, implying the expectation of a corresponding favour from him in the spirit and tone of his publication, was firmly rejected. In consequence, he suffered for a time (by the loss or delay of important packets) for this resolution to maintain, at all hazards, his independence." Mr. Walter, however, persevered, and, "among other acts of his fairly exertions for the press, may be mentioned his successful competition for priority of intelligence with the Government during the European war, which (to mention a single instance) enabled the journal to announce the capitulation of Flushing forty-eight hours before the news had arrived through any other channel; and the extinction of what before his time had been an invariable practice with the General Post-office, strange as it may now appear—the withholding information of foreign intelligence, and the public sale of foreign papers for the benefit of the Lombard-street officials."

But the greatest change wrought by Mr. Walter was one that is as rare in the history of the world, an improvement in importance second only to the invention of printing itself. He was the first who applied the power of steam to the operations of the Press. The circulation of the Times became more than could be supplied by hand labour, and a more rapid process was imperatively wanted. In the memoir before quoted gives an interesting account of the first attempt and the final achievements:—

"Early in the year 1804 an ingenious compositor, named Thomas Martyn, had invented a self-acting machine for working the press, and had produced a model which satisfied Mr. Walter of the feasibility of the scheme. Being satisfied with the invention, he made considerable progress towards the completion of his work, in the course of which he was exposed to much personal danger from the hostility of the pressmen, who vowed vengeance against the man whose ingenious threatened destruction to their craft. To such a height was their opposition carried, that it was found necessary to introduce the various places or the machine into the premises with the utmost possible secrecy, while Martyn was obliged to shelter himself under various disguises in order to escape their fury. Mr. Walter, however, was not yet permitted to reap the fruits of his enterprise. On the very eve of success he was doomed to bitter disappointment. His means were exhausted in the attempt, and his father, who had hitherto assisted him, became disheartened, and refused him any further aid. The project was therefore for the time abandoned.

"Mr. Walter, however, was not the man to be deterred from what he had once resolved to do. He gave his mind incessantly to the subject, and carried aid from all quarters, with his usual munificence. In the year 1814, he was induced by a clerical friend, in whose judgment he confided, to make a fresh experiment; and, accordingly, the machinery of the available and ingenious Koenig, assisted by his young friend Bauer, was introduced into, indeed, at first the Times office, but into the adjoining premises, such caution being thought necessary, from the threatened violence of the pressmen. Here the work advanced, under the frequent inspection and advice of the friend alluded to. At one period these two able mechanics suspended their anxious toil, and left the premises in disgust. After the lapse, however, of about three days, the same gentleman discovered their retreat, indicted them to return, shamed them, to their surprise, their difficulty conquered, and the work still in progress. The night on which this curious machine was first brought into use in its new abode was one of great anxiety and even alarm. The suspicious pressmen had surrounded the premises, and the most ominous mutterings might suspend their employment—"destruction to him and his traps." They were directed to wait for expected news from the Continent. It was about six o'clock in the forenoon when Mr. Walter went into the press-room, and astonished its occupants by telling them that 'the Times was already printed by steam! That, if they attempted violence, there was a force ready to suppress it; but that, if they remained peaceable, no wages should be continued to every one of them till similar employment could be procured'—a promise which was, no doubt, faithfully performed; and, having so said, he distributed several copies among them. Thus was this most hazardous enterprise undertaken and successfully carried through, and printing by steam on an almost gigantic scale given to the world.'

The Times of the 28th of November, 1814, was the first newspaper printed in England by steam. The use of the steam-press is now general; without it an efficient daily journal could not exist; and such has been the increase in the demand for newspapers, that a still greater speed than 5000 or 6000 an hour is now required, and will soon be effected.

The Times has also had several conflicts with individuals as well as Governments; the exposure of criminality is by no means a safe proceeding, and under the old Law of Libel was still more dangerous than it is at present. A few years ago, the journal destroyed a complicated and well-laid system of fraud that would have inflicted serious injury on the bankers of London and the Continent. An action of libel afterwards brought against the publisher by one of the parties implicated, failed, but involved the paper in heavy expenses. A public subscription was raised in the City to defray them, but the money was devoted by Mr. Walter to the foundation of a perpetual Scholarship in the City of London School. The circumstances of the case are recorded on a marble tablet in the Royal Exchange.

THE LATE JOHN WALTER, ESQ.—FROM A BUST AT BEARWOOD.

Mr Walter was returned to Parliament for the county of Berks, but resigned his seat in 1837. He was subsequently elected for Nottingham. His political life was distinguished by an uncompromising hostility to the New Poor Law; against it the influence of the Times has been steadily directed, and with immense effect. The attacks on it made Mr. Walter by no means a favourite with the last Government, and there was a marked hostility between him and Sir James Graham. It is difficult to prove such allegations, but it is said that the Ministry of that day were not above having recourse to sundry Parliamentary manœuvres, well known to election agents, to unseat the member for Nottingham; and it was at last effected.

Mr. Walter was not a party politician; he constantly advocated the interests and rights of the people, independently of all party considerations. He lived to see the beginning of the end of that system he had so long exposed. Towards the close of his life he heard of the breaking up and remodelling of the once powerful Commission, on the basis of responsibility; "and it was almost in his last hours that he was told there was scarcely a Parliamentary candidate who did not pledge himself to some extent against the inhumanities of that law against which for so many years he had waged a single-handed war. He died with the news of victory in his ear."

His devotion to the cause which by day and by night engrossed his interest and his powers, and never allowed him the needful repose, probably cost Mr. Walter not only his ease and his comfort, but his health and his life. His early perceived the dangerous character of the symptoms, which made their first appearance rather more than a twelvemonth since.

Early in the progress of the complaint, which was a cancer in the face, Mr Walter, for the sake of medical attendance, took up his abode at his residence in Printing-house-square, where, after many months of suffering, he expired at a quarter before two o'clock, A.M., on the 24th of July.

In the neighbourhood in which he resided, Mr. Walter was universally esteemed for the active part he took in ameliorating the condition of the poor; he contributed generously to their necessities. His private acts were quite in keeping with the powerful public advocacy of the cause he supported in public. The new church he built at his own cost at Bearwood, will ever be a monument of his munificence.

Mr. Walter died in the midst of the General Election, and the respect in which his memory is held, was shown by a circumstance almost without a parallel in Parliamentary history. The electors of Nottingham, on the day after his decease, without canvass or preparation, returned his son, Mr. J. Walter, to the House of Commons, by an immense majority.

BEARWOOD, NEAR READING.

ARRIVAL OF THE UNITED STATES FRIGATE, "MACEDONIAN," AT CORK, WITH PROVISIONS FOR THE DISTRESSED IRISH.

(Supposed to be spoken by one of the crew.)

"BROTHERS! although the ocean rolls between
Our homes, no ocean rolls between our hearts.
With suffering soul Columbia hath seen
Pale Erin's wretchedness; and soon her marts
Were crowded with her offerings of free,
Full, tearful aid. Swart Labour's horny hand
Gave his last dollar, or sent o'er the sea
'Bread stuffs,' the staff of life in scury land.
Hence comes the Macedonian—noble bark,
The smile of Heaven is 'lumining her sails,
Which wave like Mercy's wings o'er famine stark,
And heals the wound where Pestilence prevails.
Brothers in tongue, arts, bravery, and blood,
Let us be rivals strong—in doing good."

L.

THIS noble vessel arrived in the Cove on the 16th ult., after a fair voyage of twenty-seven days; and anchored at Hawbowline.

The Macedonian is a very large and beautiful frigate, carrying forty-four guns, when in commission, and upwards of 1700 tons; she is commanded by Commodore De Kay, Argentine Navy. The cargo, which consisted of corn-meal, Indian meal, rice, beans, and a quantity of clothing, has been generously contributed by the Middle States and Relief Committees of the inhabitants of Boston the contributions of the city of New York alone amounting the immense number of 1018 barrels of corn-meal! The cargo is estimated at from 60,000 to 80,000 dollars; half to be discharged at Hawbowline, and the remainder between Belfast and Glasgow. It was through the interest and so initiation of Commodore De Kay, that Congress granted the use of the Macedonian for her present mission of peace and charity; the gallant and philanthropic gentleman bearing all th expense of victualling, manning, loading, &c., amounting to something over £3000. An American journal, dated June 13, 1847, says:—"The brave and noble De Kay, with a liberality which entitles him to the gratitude of Ireland, and the admiration of the world, has carried out this magnificent undertaking at his own expense; and the cargo, commenced by the Corporation of New York, has been completed by the patriotic sense and good feeling of the citizens of Boston."

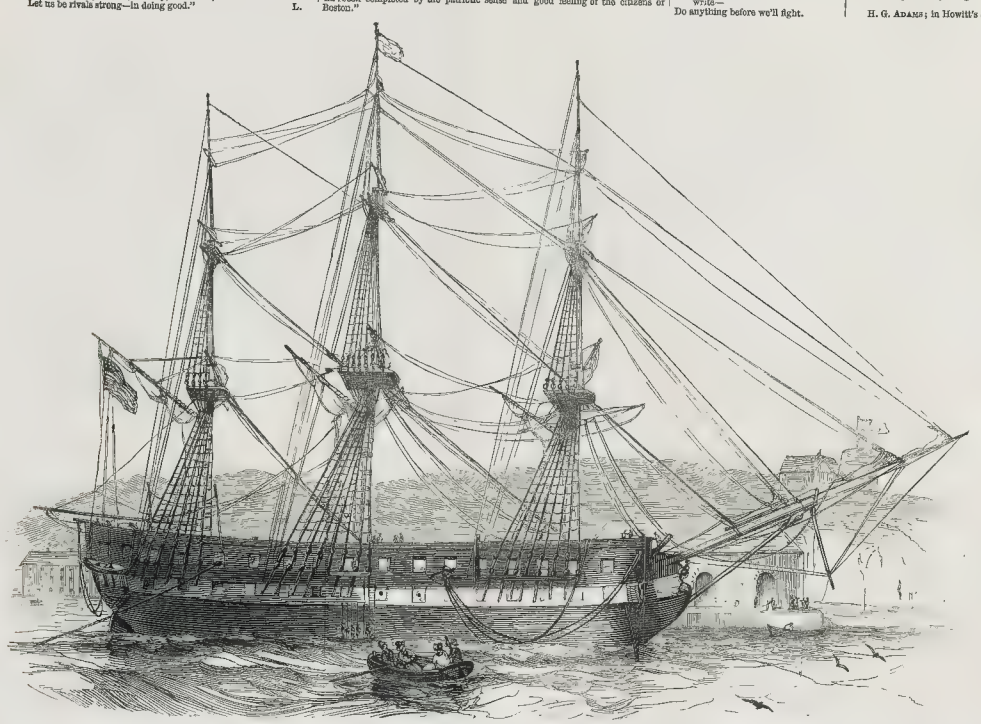
The Macedonian is a fine specimen of the naval architecture of the United States. she worked beautifully during her voyage, although six feet deeper than if she had in her armament. The white flag of the Jamestown, with a wreath of shamrock, and the rose and thistle in the centre, floated from the mainmast of the Macedonian, whilst the "star-spangled banner" waved from her mizen.

Nothing can exceed the gratitude of the citizens of Cork to the American people, for their practical and generous sympathy.

"Go back, thou messenger of good,
Freighted with words of brotherhood,
And say, if ever cause should move
Our hearts to thoughts of deadly strife,
With those who sent thee here in love,
When Famine walked abroad, and life
Withered beneath his touch, as grass
Wherethrough the scorching flames do pass—
We'll pause, reflect, and speak, and write—
Do anything before we'll fight.

Go, plough the intervening sea,
Shake loose thy canvas to the breeze
Thou link of unity between
Two kindred nations, that should ne'er
In hostile attitude have been;
It matters not whose flag ye bear!
Though warlike be thy look and name,
We care not; for henceforth thy fame
Is holy, as an ark wherein
The dove of peace may refuge wi . '

H. G. ADAMS; in Howitt's Journal



THE "MACEDONIAN," UNITED STATES FRIGATE, LADEN WITH PROVISIONS FOR THE DESTITUTE IRISH

THE BISHOP OF NORWICH, PRESIDENT OF THE INSTITUTE.

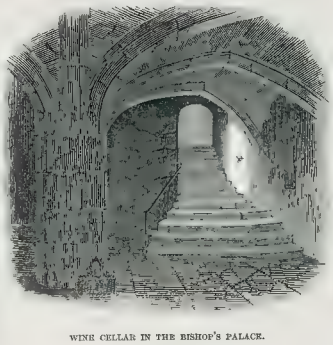
THURSDAY.

This morning, the Fourth Annual Meeting of the Archæological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland commenced in St. Andrew's Hall, Norwich. The business of the meeting was opened by the Marquis of Northampton, who introduced the Bishop of Norwich, the new President, to his chair. The Bishop, in a very eloquent speech of nearly half an hour, enlarged upon the advantages to be derived from the careful study of antiquities, and the good that had been effected by the Archæological Institute. A vote of thanks to the late Chairman was next agreed to; and then the Rev. J. Hunter proceeded to read a learned and elaborate paper upon the subject of English topography. A vote of thanks to Mr. Hunter was moved by the Master of Trinity; and the proceedings terminated with an exhibition of the last of the Whifflers—two men, with swords, and dressed in antique dresses, performing a variety of evolutions in a picturesque and elegant style. When the members left St. Andrew's Hall, the Whifflers preceded the Bishop, the Marquis, and the Master of Trinity, and continued their pioneer evolutions among the mob of electors of the Marquis of Douro and Mr. Peto, till the members of the Institute were fairly out of sight of St. Andrew's Hall.

A large party of the Members of the Institute next left Norwich, on an excursion to Caistor Camp, returning in time to hear a paper read on "Norwich and the Venta Icenorum," a contribution by Mr. Hudson Gurney. In the evening, the Bishop of Norwich had a large dinner party at the Palace, to which the leading members of the Institute were invited.

FRIDAY.

To-day, the several Sections met:—the Historical Section (Henry Hallam, Esq., in the chair) in the court-room of the Guildhall; the Early and Medieval Section (the Marquis of Northampton in the chair) in the Council-room of the Guildhall; and the Architectural Section (the Master of Trinity in the chair) in the public library. The great feature of the day was Professor Willis's discourse on the Cathedral—his peripatetic supplement to his lecture delivered in the cathedral itself. On no occasion has Professor Willis been listened to with greater attention, and, though Norwich Cathedral is somewhat deficient in variety of interest, the Professor succeeded in explaining many of the obscurer points to the satisfaction of the Bishops and the Canons who heard him. In the Close, as all Norfolk readers will remember, is an interesting ruin, evidently a part of the monastic buildings attached to the Cathedral, but what particular part, has puzzled all our antiquaries. Professor Willis, however, has settled the point, it was a part of the Infirmary. Another interesting ruin, the early porch, in the Bishop's garden, was, Professor Willis observed, the porch of the great hall attached to the Palace.



WINE CELLAR IN THE BISHOP'S PALACE.

In the evening, there was a conversazione at the Palace, which was attended by upwards of three hundred ladies and gentlemen. The Bishop had liberally invited all who took part in the proceedings of the Institute, and a very interesting evening was spent: among the visitors were the Marquis of Northampton, the Master of Trinity, the Dean of Westminster, Mr. Bancroft, Sir Richard Westmacott, and all the leading men in the Institute. Amongst the ladies was Amelia Opie, the widow of the celebrated painter. The spacious apartments in the Palace were thrown open, and the visitors received by the Bishop, his lady, and daughters, in the great drawing room. This, though not an architecturally decorated apartment, is a noble room, and two sides of it have cases filled with the best of decorations—books. The furniture presents an assemblage of ancient and modern tastes, and, from the many fashions in style of carving, has a picturesque air. A noble window, of admirable design, has been introduced on one side of the apartment, by the good taste of the present Bishop, and it adds materially to the general appearance of the room. Several madrigals and glees were excellently sung by the choristers of the Cathedral, and, from some of the pieces being strictly antiquarian in point of date, the music was quite in keeping with the Archæological pursuits of most of the company.

The great features of the evening were the Kitchen and Cellars of the Palace—as their antiquity and character render them especial objects of interest; and they are highly prized by the Bishop. They were lighted up for the occasion, and as every one in the course of the evening visited the lower regions, it was amusing to see ladies in silks and satins, and gentlemen in full costume, prying into kitchen, cellar, and larder; examining the groined arches, brickwork, and modern innovations with scrupulous attention; and, indeed, we query whether so much company had ever visited the old vaulted rooms since they were built, and certainly never so talented an assemblage as swept along the different ways on Friday evening. One "bit," a great favourite of the Bishop's, was kept closed, on account of its small size and the inconvenient staircase in it. This was the Wine Cellar, represented in one of our illustrations, and which is of great character and effect. Its inconvenient staircase, and its not holding more than a dozen persons at a time, however, effectually excluded its being open as one of the "sights" of the evening.

SATURDAY.

This day was wholly engrossed by a pilgrimage to Walsingham and Binham Abbey, taking East Barsham Hall, and the Chapel at Houghton-in-the-Dale, in the way. At Walsingham, the Institute was most kindly received by the proprietor of the Priory and Wishing Wells, James Lee Warner, Esq., who had prepared a handsome champagne luncheon. At Binham, a second luncheon had been provided by Mr. Richard England, to which a second section did ample justice.

THE SILVER-GILT CORPORATION EWER, IN THE MUSEUM OF THE INSTITUTE.

KITCHEN IN THE BISHOP'S PALACE.

FELLOWS, IN THE MUSEUM OF THE INSTITUTE.

MONDAY.

This day was completely taken up by a visit to Burgh Castle, the church at Yarmouth, Caistor Castle, and by a dinner at the Town Hall. Wherever the Institute has gone, the hospitality has been unbounded. Yesterday's excursion included three hearty luncheons—one from Mr. Green, the incumbent of Burgh; another from Mr. Everett, the tenant at Caistor; and a third from the Rev. Henry Mackenzie, the incumbent of the fine old church of St. Nicholas, Yarmouth. The ruins of Burgh were explained by the Rev. Charles Hartshorne; the church at Yarmouth, by Professor Willis; and Fastolfe's mansion at Caistor, by the Marquis of Northampton and Sir Richard Westmacott. The dinner, at six, in the Town Hall, and at which 130 sat down, included the Mayor of Yarmouth (who occupied the chair), the President of the Institute (the Bishop of Norwich), the American Minister (Mr. Bancroft), the Marquis of Northampton, Lord Braybrooke, Sir J. Bolleau (the munificent purchaser of the barren scarss of Burgh), Sir R. Westmacott, the Deans of Westminster and Hereford; Mr. Hallam, the historian; Mr. Milman, the poet; Professor Willis; Mr. Stanley, the biographer of Dr. Arnold; elected and rejected Members of Parliament, county candidates, and antiquaries of every class and description.

The dinner over, some of the company retired to Mr. Dawson Turner's; others to Mr. C. J. Palmer's Elizabethan house upon the quay (so well known by Shaw's illustration), where coffee was served, and conversation carried on till it was time to start.

We have abridged these details from the report of the meeting in the Daily News. We shall continue our account of the Congress next week, with additional illustrations.

One of the great attractions of the meeting has been the opening of a large and curious temporary museum, containing an assemblage of antiquities chiefly relating to Norfolk, contributed by the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Bedford, the Lady Suffield (quite an emptying of Blickling), Mr. Hudson Gurney, Sir John Boileau, Rev. James Bulwer, and others. One side of the great room at the Swan Inn is lined with a succession of glass-cases containing rings, cameos, gems, locks, keys, gloves, and a long et cetera of curiosities; while the other is hung with the richest embroidered hangings, and varied with partisans, halberds, and swords. One of the great curiosities is a case of chain mail, possibly a bauberk of the fourteenth century, found embedded in the chalk basin of the Seine, in the excavations for the Paris and Rouen Railway. The rowelled spurs remain embedded in the mass, a perfect coating of chain-mail surrounded by a spur. Another curiosity is the buff coat, under vest, and embroidered belt of Jacob Lord Astley, of Reading, sergeant-major of the forces under Charles I. The chimney of the room is most adroitly and completely concealed by the Jessica, Lorenzo, chimney-piece, formerly the chimney-piece in the sitting-room of the celebrated Sir Thomas Brown.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

The head-piece to our Illustrations this week, is composed of richly traceried Gothic panels from the Cathedral, containing within the centre panel a portrait of the Bishop of Norwich, beneath which are his armorial bearings; and in those on either side views of the Cathedral and of the Town Hall.

The Kitchen is a remarkably fine specimen of Gothic graining, springing from a central pillar, and is a truly interesting apartment. The fire-place, however, is sadly shorn of its original character; the modern range but ill assorting with the wide gaping chimney, up which, crawhile, rolled volumes of smoke from the huge piles of faggots blazing on the hearth. On one side of the fire-place, a small portion of the seat, which was usual on either hand of the fire-place, is still remaining; but all the other portions of the characteristic features of the chimney have been stopped up, to make the place suitable to modern requirements.

The Wine Cellar, which is entered from the Kitchen, is an excessively picturesque "bit." Like the Kitchen, the groining springs from a central pillar, and its whole character bespeaks its antiquity. So dark is the place, that a candle but just serves by its glimmering light to point out its architectural features.

Amongst the rarities left in the Museum of the Institute, the Ewer, of which we give a representation, is one of the most beautiful, and is a very fine work of art of the 16th century. It is of silver, gilt, and the subjects round the body, neck, and foot of the vessel, are groups of Tritons, mermaids, and sea nymphs, with dolphins, &c., all most beautifully wrought. The handle is of fine ontline, composed of a dolphin near the nock of the Ewer, then a winged figure, terminating in a graceful scroll, having a grotesque mask on it. The junction of the dolphin with the winged figure is very cleverly designed. The lip of the Ewer has been broken and not very skilfully repaired, giving an angular expression to that portion by no means agreeable to the eye. The Basin belonging to this Ewer is most exquisitely wrought with similar subjects of sea nymphs, Tritons, &c., and the workmanship is admirable. The Ewer and Basin are part of the plate belonging to the Corporation of Norwich, to which body they were presented, in the 16th century, by Lord Henry Howard.

The Bellows, which were contributed to the Museum of the Institute by Lord Stafford, are admirable both for design and for execution. They are of the date of the 17th century, and are supposed to be of Flemish workmanship.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, August 8.—Tenth Sunday after Trinity.

MONDAY, 9. Shooting stars.—The Sun rises at 4h. 38m.; is due East at 6h. 59m.; and sets at 7h. 20m.

TUESDAY, 10.—St. Lawrence. The Length of the Day is 14h. 51m.

WEDNESDAY, 11.—Dog Days end.—At 0h. 28m., a.m., New Moon.—Half Quarter.

THURSDAY, 12.—Grouse Shooting begins.—The day has decreased 1h. 49m. since the Longest Day

FRIDAY, 13.—Birth of Dowager Queen Adelaide, 1792.—Old Lammas Day.

SATURDAY, 14.—Saturn rises at 8h. 6m., p.m.; Mars rises at 9h. 39m., p.m.; and Jupiter, at 0h. 56m., a.m.

The nights of the 9th, 10th, and 11th of August are believed to be, by some persons, particularly distinguished by an unusual display of meteors, or shooting stars. It is doubtful whether these meteors take place within the limits of the Earth's atmosphere, or beyond it; or, in other words, whether they are from the Earth at the time of their appearance. This can be determined by two persons in different places noticing the time and place of the appearances, or of the disappearance, of the same meteor.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 14

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Friday		Saturday
M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
s 9	10	0	1	1	22	2	25	3	28	4	32

* * On Sunday the 8th, there will be no high tide during the morning

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"J. P. S."—Manchester.—Provost, Sax. profust. is the chief magistrate of a town, having the same functions as the Mayor of other cities. Mayor is from the French Maire, Norm. Maëir, Mair, Meyre. The statement as to the relative use of London and Glasgow is, we believe, correct.

"F. B." Probably

"Cantab" is thanked for the Sketch, which want of space prevents our inserting.

"X. X. X." will find the veritable name of the author of the "Comic History of England," in its title-page.

"W. H.," Watford, Dunsinny.—Received.

"G. S."—The Index to Vol. X. of our Journal was given on July 10.

"Henrietta" is mistaken: no alteration has taken place.

"Sunday" will be entitled to vote.

"H.," Bilston, can recover by summons, but cannot legally quit without notice.

"H. C.," Swansea.—Address the letter to Dublin. The name is pronounced as spell

"H. R. R." is thanked; but we had not room for the Sketch.

"Paul Dombey."—Knightley's or Gleig's History of England is a good abridgment.

"Cumberland."—On Nelson's arrival at Alexandria, August 1, 1798, he found the French fleet lying moored in the Bay of Aboukir, where the memorable "Battle of the Nile" commenced on August 12

"A Constant Subscriber," Merthyr.—Programme is pronounced Program.

"J. G.," Worthing, is assured that in the City, the fidelity of the Portraits of the Candidates, in our Journal of last week, was very generally recognised.

"J. H.," Milton-street, is thanked; but we have room for the subject.

"A Chesterfield Subscriber."—Normal Schools are those in which children are instructed in the elementary branches of education.

"R. I.," may obtain the light green covers for our Journal, by order, of any bookseller.

"R. P.," Jersey.—We are not aware of the conditions of the Prize Essay.

"A Lady," Stoke Newington.—The Office of the Commissioners on Lunacy is 19, New-street, Spring-gardens.

"A Subscriber," Teignmouth, is thanked; but, we cannot promise the Sketch insertion

"A Practical Potter."—The Duke of Bedford's "Medici Vase" is, probably, at Woburn.

"A Reader," Redruth.—Read "The Emigrant's Guide in Australia," published by Orr and Co

"Q. T. T." will find a carefully drawn-up resumé of the History of English Carriages, by Mr. Fairholt, F.S.A., in Vol. 106, 107, and 109 of the "Art-Union Journal." Among the illustrations of this paper is a coach similar to the Duke's carriage, in Chapter 2 of Sir Walter Scott's "Old Mortality;" so that the description is correct enough.

"A Subscriber," Woodbridge. The length of the London and Blackwall Railway is 5¼ miles

"J. B.," Everton, Liverpool.—The reason why the public so generally believe that the variations of the weather depend upon the Moon, is their ready obedience to a bold assertion, not founded upon facts. Our reason for the contrary assertion is based entirely upon observations, and these properly reduced and discussed. At the Royal Observatory, at Greenwich, an uninterrupted series of meteorological observations have been taken with the best instruments, at every two hours, night and day, since the year 1840. These observations have been reduced and fully discussed at a very great expense of labour, indeed; and no connection has been found to have existed between the variable phases or positions of the Moon, and the variations of the weather.—(J. G.)

"W. B."—T. H. Fielding's Treatise on Oil and Water-Colour Painting, published by Ackermann, Strand.

"A Three Months' Subscriber."—The lines inscribed upon a board, placed on a tree in Richmond Park, we think, bear a signature. Mr. Brayley's new "History of Surrey" has not elucidated the matter, as we expected. The passage:

"England, with all thy faults I love thee still,—
My country! and, while yet a nook is left,
Where English minds and manners may be found," &c.

is from the Tears of France, (or Book 2), of Cowper's "Task," from which Byron has quoted it

"A First Subscriber," Leeds, is thanked.

"J. F.," Bradford. The most direct way to Wisconsin, in North America, (i.e., the nearest), is by landing at Philadelphia, or New York, and proceeding thence, in a straight line, to the south point of Lake Michigan, which bounds Wisconsin, on the east: but, others might prefer crossing some of the Lakes. Sir Richard Bonnycastle's last work on Canada is an excellent Emigration Guide.

"J. T."—We cannot engrave the Picture in question. The Windsor Castle Illustrations still be resumed.

"T. W.," Wordsley.—The Art-Union Print and Outline, for the present year, are not yet distributed.

"A Well-wisher" is thanked for the Sketch; but our own artist is busy at Dublin.

"A Constant Reader," Stratford.—The person must wait on the Registrar.

"W. S.," Devonshire.—We cannot give the information.

"E. B." Finsbury-square.—Apply to Mr. Bell, bookseller, Fleet-street.

"S. V. C.," Vauxhall.—We are not aware that the will of the founder of Guy's Hospital provides any medical education free of expense.

"A. A.," Enfield.—Money in Savings' Banks can be bequeathed by Will, in the same form as other investments.

"J. H. B.," Carmarthen, is thanked for his excellent Sketch of the Sea King.

"R. O. M."—Dr. Faraday's address is the Royal Institution, Albemarle-street.

"A Subscriber," Egremont, is recommended to read a capital paper on Vandyke, in the "Fraser's Magazine" for the present month.

"Gracchus." Gwilt's "Encyclopædia of Architecture."

"J. F. S."—Apply respecting permission to copy Pictures in the Dulwich Gallery, at either of the places where Tickets are obtainable.

"Ignoramus."—Mdlle. Lind, it is expected, will sing six nights more, at Her Majesty's Theatre.

CITY ELECTION.—We cannot spare room for the letters explaining "the grounds upon which Mr. Payne allowed himself to be put in nomination."

FUNERAL OBSEQUIES OF MR. O'CONNELL.—Next week we shall illustrate, in a Series of faithful Engravings, the last honours paid to the Remains of Mr. O'Connell, from Sketches by Mr. James Mahony.

BOOKS RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Haverstock. No. 1.—Sports, Pastimes, and Customs of London.—Geographical Progress by the Rev. T. Price.—Robinson Crusoe Illustrated.—Guide to the Isle of Wight.—Robertson's Guide to the Buxton Waters.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, AUGUST 7, 1847.

WERE Louis Philippe a younger man, we should not despair of seeing him once more a resident at Twickenham, as a private individual; but, as it is, he will probably die King of the French; his dynasty will last his time, and he may defer a convulsion till the reign of his successor; it was a former King of France, we believe, who said après nous le deluge. But much longer it will not be ere the face of affairs must change in France. The uneasy symptoms that precede a storm are becoming daily more visible. The total neglect of commercial and financial policy which the Government exhibits, while exhausting all its energies to some wretched diplomatic intrigue, is beginning to produce its consequences. The embarrassment of the public Revenue is but a reflex of the difficulties of the people. The accounts of the state of Paris are positively alarming; shops standing empty, establishments idle, acting at liberty a destitute population, irritated and ready for any outbreak; the Government overpowered with debt, and the most glaring proofs given that some of its members are destitute of common honesty; all this is fuel to the flames of discontent that are burning slowly but fiercely beneath the surface. All the forts of Paris and the expedients that place the people and the ruler in the position of open enemies will not save the dynasty if it do not act with more wisdom. The insatiable grasping of the King at all he can get for his family seems perfectly fatuous; thrones, dowers, alliances, engross his faculties, and in the meantime, the resources of the kingdom are shrinking and the springs of prosperity drying up. There is not a State in Europe that cannot show a better balance sheet than France; Prussia, Russia, Austria, all have their revenues tolerably well administered, and all are progressing. In the great development of railroads, that first element of the prosperity of modern states, they are all going a-head of France, who will soon be isolated and fettered from action by her material deficiencies. And all this is the result of seventeen years of peace and a Government of order and liberty! If order leads to insolvency and exhaustion, the sooner the policy is changed the better.

The celebration of the Fêtes of July this year was watched with all the precautions of a state of war: amusements were provided for the populace with one hand and cannon pointed at them with the other: musketry and Mâts de Cocagne were equally ready: a whole army was gathered into Paris and another round it: the police visited every gunsmith's shop and unscrewed the locks from all fowling-pieces and pistols—a piece of wisdom taught by the days of the Barricades and now used to prevent the chance of their recurrence. But what a wretched prospect is this scene of hatred and mistrust between the governing power and the governed: the rulers treat the people as a beast of prey to be hunted for the gain of flesh and fur; and the people are always ready to hunt the rulers if they get the chance. This is not civilisation, but barbarism using its forms: it is mere despotism in disguise, and despotism deprived of sagacity. There is not one Government of France during the present century to which the Administration of Louis Philippe does not furnish an unfavourable contrast. The sway of Napoleon and the Empire was not more costly, and it had triumphs and victories, in the midst of which the wonderful energy of the Emperor could still find time to attend to the material interests of the country. The Government of the Restoration was less costly, and not a whit more oppressive. The system of the Monarchy of July has resulted in the supremacy of military force, a girdle of fortresses, enormous revenues spent without effect, or absorbed or wasted; and, as to movement or progress, a total negation and apathy, a mere vulgar struggle to take all we can and keep all we get, without doing a single act in return. It is a sordid policy and will end in ruin.

THE Elections still continue to absorb public attention, though they present no very marked incidents. Lord Palmerston has given a long explanation of his foreign policy to the electors of Tiverton, in an easy and familiar style, that reminds one of the books said to be "adapted to the meanest capacity." It is worth noting that Lord Palmerston's inveterate foe, Mr. Urquhart, who thinks impeachment and beheading the slightest punishment due to the Foreign Secretary's enormities, has been returned to Parliament. Some sharp attacks may be anticipated; but we never knew hostile explanation of his foreign policy to the electors of Tiverton, in an easy and familiar style, that reminds one of the Lord. He invariably settles his opponents with a cool, easy air, peculiarly his own; and so will it be with Mr. Urquhart.

There has been an amusing Election at Wallingford, where the candidate had to surround himself with a body guard against the sheriff's officers; the dodging and manœuvring furnished a scene as extravagantly comic as a Haymarket farce, but of which the moral effect is very questionable. The Gloucestershire Election has brought out the family feud of the Berkeleys in a strong light; a constituency electing any one at the bidding of their master, and a candidate saying openly he would have voted on a great question, "but Earl Fitzhardinge would not let him," form a spectacle to wonder at beyond most wondering. Is there no power of disfranchising counties?

THE NEW PARLIAMENT.

[In our first impression last week we gave an accurate list of the members returned for the New Parliament up to the time of going to press, and in our late edition, the returns received up to Saturday evening were added. The elections for English cities and towns are now all concluded. The following is a perfect list of the returns. We have compiled them carefully from various sources, and made as accurate a calculation as possible of the opinions of each member. The general result of the elections for the 239 cities and boroughs of England and Wales, and two Universities, is, that of the members elected 146 are Conservatives and 154 Whigs.]

RETURNS FOR ENGLISH CITIES AND BOROUGHS.

	Prev.	Whig.	Peel.
Abingdon
Sir P. Thesiger	..	0	.. 1
Andover
J. H. Coles	..	1	.. 0
W. Dobbs	..	..	0 .. 1
Anglesea
Lord G. Paget	..	0	.. 1
Arundel
Earl of Arundel	..	0	.. 1
Ashburton
Colonel Mathason	..	0	.. 1
Ashton-under-Lyne
C. Hindley	..	0	.. 1
Aylesbury
J. P. Dearing	..	1	.. 0
Lord Nugent	..	0	.. 1
Banbury
H. W. Tancred	..	0	.. 1
Barnstaple
John Babridge	..	1	.. 0
Hon. J. W. Fortescue	..	0	.. 1
Bath
Lord Ashley	..	0	.. 0
Lord Duncan	..	0	.. 1
Beaumaris
Lord G. A. P. Paget	..	1	.. 0
Bedford
Sir M. Varney	..	0	.. 1
H. Wilson	..	1	.. 0
Berwick
M. Forster ..	..	0	.. 1
J. G. Renton	..	0	.. 1
Beverley
J. Towneley	..	0	.. 1
S. Lane Fox	..	0	.. 0
Bewdley
W. Ireland	..	1	.. 0
Buckingham
G. F. Muntz	..	0	.. 1
W. Scholefield	..	0	.. 1
Blackburn
J. Hornby ..	..	0	.. 0
J. Pilkington	..	0	.. 1
Bodmin
J. Wyld ..	..	0	.. 0
G. Bell ..	..	0	.. 1
Bolton
W. Bolling	..	1	.. 0
Dr. Bowring	..	0	.. 1
Boston
Sir J. Duke	..	0	.. 1
B. B. Cabbell	..	1	.. 0
Bradford
W. Hustler ..	..	0	.. 1
W. P. Thompson	..	0	.. 1
Brecon
J. E. Vaughan	..	1	.. 0
Bridgewater
H. Broadwood	..	1	.. 0
C. K. Tynte	..	0	.. 1
Bridgnorth
T. C. Whitmore	..	0	.. 0
Sir R. Pigot	..	1	.. 0
Bridport
T. A. Mitchell	..	0	.. 1
B. Cochrane	..	0	.. 0
Brighton
Capt. Pechell	..	0	.. 1
Lord A. Hervey	..	0	.. 0
Bristol
P. H. Berkeley	..	0	.. 1
P. W. Miles	..	0	.. 1
Buckingham
Marquis of Chandos	..	1	.. 0
Col. John Hall	..	1	.. 0
Bury
H. Walker	..	0	.. 1
Bury St. Edmund's
Earl Jermyn	..	0	.. 0
E. H. Bunbury	..	0	.. 1
Calne
Earl of Shelburne	..	0	.. 1
Cambridge
A. S. Ayde ..	..	0	.. 1
Hon. W. Campbell	..	1	.. 0
Cambridge University
Hon. E. Law	..	1	.. 0
Right Hon. H. Goulburn	..	0	.. 0
Canterbury
Lord A. Conyngham	..	0	.. 1
Hon. G. P. S. Smythe	..	0	.. 0
Cardiff
P. Pryse ..	..	0	.. 1
Cardigan
Dr. J. Nicholl ..	..	0	.. 0
Carlisle
W. N. Hodgson ..	..	1	.. 0
J. Dixon ..	..	1	.. 0
Carmarthen
D. Pugh ..	..	0	.. 1
Carnarvon
W. R. Hughes ..	..	0	.. 1
Chatham
G. R. Pryng ..	..	0	.. 1
Cheltenham
Sir W. Jones ..	..	1	.. 0
Chester
Sir J. Jervis ..	..	0	.. 1
Lord Grosvenor ..	..	0	.. 1
Chichester
Lord H. G. Lennox	..	1	.. 0
J. A. Smith ..	..	0	.. 1
Chippenham
Joseph Neeld ..	..	1	.. 0
Lord Edward Bruce	..	1	.. 0
Christchurch
Hon. E. J. Harris	..	1	.. 0
Cirencester
W. Cripps ..	..	1	.. 0
Viscount Villiers	..	0	.. 1
Clitheroe
M. Wilson ..	..	0	.. 1
Cockermouth
H. C. Mulcahy ..	..	0	.. 1
G. Howman ..	..	0	.. 1
Colchester
J. A. Hardcastle ..	..	0	.. 1
Sir C. B. Smyth ..	..	1	.. 0
Coventry
E. Ellis ..	..	0	.. 1
S. J. Turner ..	..	0	.. 1
Cricklade
Lord Ashley ..	..	0	.. 1
A. Lethbridge ..	..	1	.. 0
Darlington
Joseph Sadd ..	..	1	.. 0
A. Pease ..	..	1	.. 0
Dartmouth
Sir P. H. Wrot..	..	0	.. 1
Derby
Right Hon. E. Strutt	..	0	.. 1
Hon. G. H. Bower ..	..	0	.. 1
Devizes
C. H. W. Hendegr..	..	1	.. 0
W. H. L. Bruges ..	..	0	.. 1
Devonport
B. Bidwell ..	..	0	.. 1
J. Rowe ..	..	0	.. 1
Dorchester
Hon. Col. D. Damer	..	0	.. 1
H. G. Bond, Esq. ..	..	1	.. 0
Dover
E. B. Rice ..	..	0	.. 1
Sir G. Clark ..	..	0	.. 0
Droitwich
Sir J. Pakington ..	..	1	.. 0
Dudley
J. Boubow ..	..	0	.. 0
Durham City
J. Bowlinger ..	..	0	.. 1
R. J. Chapman ..	..	0	.. 1
Evesham
Lord M. Hill ..	..	0	.. 1
Hon. C. Willoughby	..	1	.. 0
Exeter
Sir J. T. B. Duckworth	..	1	.. 0
S. Divett ..	..	0	.. 1
Eye
Sir E. K. Tilson ..	..	1	.. 0
Finsbury
T. S. Duncombe ..	..	0	.. 1
T. Wakley ..	..	0	.. 1
Flint
Sir J. Hanmer ..	..	0	.. 1
Frome
Hon. Mr. or Boyle ..	..	0	.. 1
Gatton
W. Hutt ..	..	0	.. 1
Gloucester
H. T. Hope ..	..	0	.. 0
M. P. Berkeley ..	..	0	.. 1
Grantham
G. T. Welby ..	..	1	.. 0
H. J. T. Mackenzie	..	0	.. 0
Great Grimsby
E. Heneage ..	..	0	.. 1
Greenwich
Admiral Dundas..	..	0	.. 1
E. J. Barnard ..	..	0	.. 1

Brought Forward	Prev.	Whig.	Peel.
	21	62	22
Guilford
H. Currie ..	..	1	.. 0
R. D. Mangles ..	..	0	.. 1
Halifax
Sir C. Wood ..	..	0	.. 1
H. Edwards ..	..	1	.. 0
Harwich
J. Attwood ..	..	0	.. 1
Bagshawe ..	..	0	.. 0
Hastings
B. Holland ..	..	0	.. 1
M. Brisco ..	..	1	.. 0
Haverfordwest
Evans ..	..	0	.. 1
Helston
Sir R. H. Vyvyan..	..	1	.. 0
Hereford
Sir R. Price ..	..	0	.. 1
Lord Clifford ..	..	0	.. 1
Hertford
Lord Malton ..	..	0	.. 1
Hon. W. F. Cowper	..	0	.. 1
Honiton
J. Locke ..	..	0	.. 1
Sir J. W. Hogg ..	..	0	.. 0
Horsham
J. Jervis ..	..	0	.. 1
Huddersfield
W. C. R. Stansfield	..	0	.. 1
Hull
M. T. Baines ..	..	0	.. 1
J. Clay ..	..	0	.. 1
Huntingdon
Col. J. Peel.. ..	..	0	.. 1
T. Baring ..	..	0	.. 0
Hythe
E. D. Brockman ..	..	0	.. 1
Ipswich
R. C. Cobbold ..	..	1	.. 0
H. K. Adair ..	..	0	.. 1
Kendal
R. O. Glyn ..	..	0	.. 1
Kidderminster
R. Godson ..	..	0	.. 0
King's Lynn
Lord G. Bentinck	..	1	.. 0
Lord Jocelyn ..	..	0	.. 0
Knaresborough
Hon. W. J. Lascelles	..	0	.. 0
Lawson ..	..	1	.. 0
Lambeth
C. Pearson ..	..	0	.. 1
T. D. Eyncourt ..	..	0	.. 0
Launceston
M. Gregson ..	..	0	.. 1
T. Greene ..	..	0	.. 1
Launceston
Rear-Admiral Bowles ..	..	0	.. 0
Leeds
W. Beckett ..	..	0	.. 0
J. G. Marshall ..	..	0	.. 1
Leicester
Sir J. Walmsley ..	..	0	.. 1
Michael Gardner ..	..	0	.. 1
Lewes
G. Arkwright ..	..	1	.. 0
H. Hack ..	..	0	.. 1
Lewes
Hon. H. Fitzroy ..	..	0	.. 0
R. Perfect ..	..	0	.. 1
Lichfield
Lord A. Paget ..	..	0	.. 1
Lord Anson ..	..	0	.. 1
Lincoln
Colonel Ricbcrp.	..	0	.. 0
C. Seeley ..	..	0	.. 1
Liskeard
C. Buller ..	..	0	.. 1
Liverpool
E. Cardwell ..	..	0	.. 1
Sir T. Birch ..	..	0	.. 1
London
Lord J. Russell ..	..	0	.. 1
J. Pattison ..	..	0	.. 1
Baron L. Rothschild	..	0	.. 1
J. Masterman ..	..	0	.. 1
Ludlow
R. H. Clive ..	..	0	.. 0
Col. sir. Salway ..	..	0	.. 1
Lyme Regis
T. S. Addy ..	..	0	.. 1
Lymington
Colonel Keppel ..	..	0	.. 1
W. A. Mackinnan ..	..	0	.. 0
Macclesfield
J. Brocklehurst ..	..	0	.. 1
J. Williams ..	..	0	.. 1
Maidstone
A. J. B. Hope ..	..	1	.. 0
G. Dodd	..	1	.. 0
Malton
D. Waddington ..	..	1	.. 0
T. B. Leonard ..	..	0	.. 1
Malmesbury
J. K. Howard ..	..	0	.. 1
Marlow
J. E. Denison ..	..	0	.. 1
J. W. Childers ..	..	0	.. 1
Manchester
T. M. Gibson ..	..	0	.. 1
J. Bright	..	0	.. 1
Marlborough
Lord Ernest Bruce	..	0	.. 0
Right Hon. H. B. Baring	..	0	.. 0
Marlow (Great)
J. P. Williams ..	..	0	.. 1
Col. B. Knox ..	..	1	.. 0
Marylebone
Lord Dudley Stuart	..	0	.. 1
Sir B. Hall ..	..	0	.. 1
Merthyr Tydvil
Sir J. J. Guest ..	..	0	.. 1
Midhurst
S. H. Walpole ..	..	1	.. 0
Monmouth
R. J. Hewitt ..	..	0	.. 1
Montgomery
Hon. R. Cholmondely	..	1	.. 0
Morpeth
Hon. R. G. Howard	..	0	.. 1
Newark
J. Smart	..	1	.. 0
M. Sutton	..	0	.. 1
Newcastle-under-Lyme
W. Jackson ..	..	0	.. 1
J. Bailey	..	1	.. 0
Newcastle-upon-Tyne
W. Ord	..	1	.. 0
T. M. Headlam ..	..	0	.. 1
Newport (Isle of Wight)
W. H. Plowden ..	..	1	.. 0
W. Smith	..	0	.. 1
Northallerton
W. B. Wrightson..	..	0	.. 1
Northampton
R. V. Smith ..	..	0	.. 1
R. Currie	..	0	.. 1
Norwich
Viscounts of Douro	..	0	.. 0
S. M. Peto ..	..	0	.. 1
Nottingham
J. Walter ..	..	0	.. 1
F. O'Connor ..	..	0	.. 1
Oldham
J. T. Fox	..	0	.. 0
J. Dunnett ..	..	0	.. 1
Oxford
J. H. Langston ..	..	0	.. 1
W. P. Wood ..	..	0	.. 1
Oxford University
Sir R. Inglis ..	..	1	.. 0
W. F. Hendricken ..	..	1	.. 0
Pembroke
Sir J. Owen ..	..	1	.. 0
Penryn and Falmouth
E. Magnay ..	..	0	.. 1
F. Maxwell ..	..	0	.. 1
Peterborough
Hon. Brudenell ..	..	0	.. 1
W. Cavendish ..	..	0	.. 1
Petersfield
Sir W. Gil Jolliffe	..	1	.. 0
Plymouth
Lord Ebrington ..	..	1	.. 0
H. Labouch	..	1	.. 0
Pontefract
E. Marsh	..	0	.. 1
R. M. Milnes ..	..	0	.. 1
Poole
G. R. Hodgson ..	..	0	.. 1
S. R. Phillips ..	..	0	.. 1
Portsmouth
F. T. Baring ..	..	1	.. 0
Sir G. Staunton ..	..	0	.. 1
Preston
Sir G. Strickland..	..	0	.. 1
P. W. Grenfell ..	..	0	.. 0
	54	131	51
	31	63	22

	Prot.	Whig.	Prot.
Brought Forward	84	131	41
Madras
Sir T H Lewis	0	.. 1 ..	0
Reading
F Pigott	0	.. 1 ..	0
Sergeant Talfourd ..	0	.. 1 ..	0
Rutland
T S Cocks	0	.. 0 ..	1
Retford (East)
Hon A Dunsombe ..	1	.. 0 ..	0
Viscount Galway ..	1	.. 0 ..	0
Richmond (Yorkshire)
H Bligh	0	.. 1 ..	0
M Wyvill	0	.. 1 ..	0
Ripon
Hon R Lascelles ..	0	.. 0 ..	1
Sir C Graham	0	.. 1 ..	0
Rochdale
S Crawford	0	.. 1 ..	0
Rochester
R Bernal	0	.. 1 ..	0
T Hodges	0	.. 1 ..	0
Rye
H B Curteis	0	.. 1 ..	0
Salford
J Brotherton	0	.. 1 ..	0
Salisbury
W J Chaplin	0	.. 1 ..	0
C B Wall	0	.. 1 ..	0
Sandwich
Lord G Paget	0	.. 1 ..	0
C W Grenfell	0	.. 1 ..	0
Scarborough
Sir J W Johnstone ..	0	.. 0 ..	1
Lord Mulgrave	0	.. 0 ..	1
Shaftesbury
R B Sheridan	0	.. 1 ..	0
Sheffield
J Parker	0	.. 1 ..	0
G Ward	0	.. 1 ..	0
Shoreham
Sir C Burrell	1	.. 0 ..	0
G Goring	1	.. 0 ..	0
Shrewsbury
E H Baldock	0	.. 0 ..	1
R A Slaney	0	.. 0 ..	1
Southampton
A J E Cockburn ..	0	.. 1 ..	0
J M Weeks	0	.. 1 ..	0
South Shields
J T Wawn	0	.. 1 ..	0
Scarborough
Alderman Humphery ..	0	.. 1 ..	0
Sir W Molesworth ..	0	.. 1 ..	0
Stafford
H Urquhart	1	.. 0 ..	0
Alderman Sidney ..	0	.. 1 ..	0
St Albans
J Raphael	0	.. 1 ..	0
G W J Repton	1	.. 0 ..	0
Stamford
Marquis of Granby ..	1	.. 0 ..	0
Sir H J O Harries ..	0	.. 1 ..	0
St Ives
Lord W Paulett	0	.. 1 ..	0
Stockport
R Gholden	0	.. 1 ..	0
J Heald	0	.. 1 ..	0
Stoke-upon-Trent
W T Copeland	0	.. 0 ..	1
R L Ricardo	0	.. 0 ..	1
Stroud
G P Scrope	0	.. 1 ..	0
W H Stanton	0	.. 1 ..	0
Sunderland
B Barclay	1	.. 0 ..	0
G Hudson	0	.. 0 ..	1
Swansea
J H Vivian	0	.. 1 ..	0
Tamworth
Sir R Peel	0	.. 0 ..	1
W Y Peel	0	.. 0 ..	1
Taunton
H Labouchere	0	.. 1 ..	0
Sir T Colebrooke ..	0	.. 1 ..	0
	63	155	60

	Prot.	Whig.	Prot.
Brought Forward	63	155	60
Tavistock
W Russell	0	.. 1 ..	0
J S Trelawny	0	.. 1 ..	0
Tewkesbury
C Mathe	0	.. 0 ..	1
H Brownrd	0	.. 1 ..	0
Thetford
Hon W B Baring ..	0	.. 0 ..	1
The Earl of Euston ..	0	.. 1 ..	0
Tiverton
J Ball	0	.. 1 ..	0
Tiverton
Lord Palmerston ..	0	.. 1 ..	0
J Heathcote	0	.. 1 ..	0
Totnes
Lord Seymour	0	.. 1 ..	0
G B Baldwin	0	.. 1 ..	0
Tower Hamlets
G Thompson	0	.. 1 ..	0
Sir W Clay	0	.. 1 ..	0
Truro
J E Vivian	0	.. 1 ..	0
E Turner	0	.. 1 ..	0
Tynemouth
R Grey	0	.. 1 ..	0
Wakefield
C Gaskara	0	.. 0 ..	1
Wallingford
W B Backestone ..	1	.. 0 ..	0
Walsall
R E Littleton	0	.. 1 ..	0
Wareham
J S W Drax	0	.. 1 ..	0
Warrington
G Greenall	1	.. 0 ..	0
Warwick
W Collins	0	.. 1 ..	0
Sir G Douglas	1	.. 0 ..	0
Wells
W G Hayter	0	.. 1 ..	0
R Blakemore	0	.. 0 ..	1
Wenlock
C C Forester	1	.. 0 ..	0
J M Gaskell	0	.. 1 ..	0
Westbury
J Pearse	0	.. 1 ..	0
Westminster
De Lacy Evans	0	.. 1 ..	0
C Hallgarten	0	.. 1 ..	0
Weymouth
Colonel Freestun ..	1	.. 0 ..	0
W D Christie	0	.. 1 ..	0
Whitby
W G Hayter	0	.. 1 ..	0
R Blakemore	0	.. 0 ..	1
Wexford
Colonel Lindsay ..	0	.. 0 ..	1
R A Tickborne	0	.. 0 ..	1
Wilton
Viscount Somerton ..	0	.. 0 ..	1
Winchester
B Carter	0	.. 1 ..	0
Sir J B Eady	0	.. 1 ..	0
Windsor
Colonel Reid	0	.. 1 ..	0
Lord J Hay	0	.. 0 ..	1
Wolverhampton
C Villiers	0	.. 1 ..	0
T Thornley	0	.. 1 ..	0
Woodstock
Marquis of Blandford ..	1	.. 0 ..	0
Worcester
H Rivardo	0	.. 1 ..	0
F Rufford	0	.. 1 ..	0
Wycombe
G H Dashwood ..	0	.. 1 ..	0
M T Smith	0	.. 1 ..	0
Yarmouth
Lord A Lennox	0	.. 1 ..	0
H Cospe	0	.. 1 ..	0
York
H B Yorke	0	.. 1 ..	0
J G Smyth	0	.. 1 ..	0
	73	194	73

[There is a double return for Montgomery. The numbers were equal (389) for Cholmondeley and Pugh.]

COUNTY MEMBERS RETURNED.

BERKSHIRE.—Robert Palmer, Philip Fusey, and Viscount Barrington.
BERWICKSHIRE.—Hon. F. Scott.
BRECON.—Joseph Bailey.
BUCKINGHAMSHIRE.—Rt. Hon. B. Disraeli, C. G. Dupre, Hon. C. C. Cavendish.
CARNARVONSHIRE.—Pennant.
CHESHIRE (NORTH).—W. T. Egerton, Hon. E. J. Stanley.
DERBYSHIRE (NORTH).—The Hon. G. Cavendish and Mr. Evans.
DERBYSHIRE (SOUTH).—E. M. Munday, Esq., and C. R. Colville, Esq.
DEVON (EAST).—Lord Courtenay and Sir J. Y. Buller.
DORSETSHIRE.—G. Bankes, F. K. Seymer, J. Floyer.
DURHAM (SOUTH).—Lord Harry Vane and J. Fetter, Esq.
FLINT COUNTY.—The Hon. E. M. Lloyd Mostyn.
GLAMORGANSHIRE.—C. R. M. Talbot, Lord Adare.
GLOUCESTERSHIRE (EAST).—Sir W. Codrington, Marquis of Worcester.
HAMPSHIRE (NORTH).—The Right Hon. Shaw Lefevre and Sir W. Heathcote.
HEREFORDSHIRE.—Sir H. Meux and Halsey and Brend.
HEREFORDSHIRE.—Messrs. Bailey, Lewis, and Haggitt.
KENT (EAST).—J. P. Plumptre, W. Deedes
LANCASHIRE (NORTH).—J. W. Patten and J. Heywood.
LANCASHIRE (SOUTH).—Hon. C. P. Villiers,* W. Brown.

* Returned also for Wolverhampton.

MEMBERS RETURNED FOR SCOTLAND.

ABERDEEN.—Capt. Fordyce.
BERWICKSHIRE.—The Hon. F. Scott.
DUMFRIES BURGHS.—W. Ewart.
DUMFRIESSHIRE.—Drumlanrig.
DUNDEE.—G. Duncan.
DUNFERMLINE BURGHS.—Smith
EDINBURGH.—Cowan, W. G. Craig.
FALKIRK BURGHS.—Lord Lincoln.
GLASGOW.—M'Gregor, Hastie.
GREENOCK.—Lord Molgund.
HADDINGTON.—Sir H. F. Davie.
KILMARNOCK, &c.—Bouverie.
KIRKALDY BURGHS.—Colonel Ferguson.
LANARKSHIRE.—W. Lockhart.
LEITH, &c.—Rutherfurd
PERTH.—F. Maule.
PAISLEY.—A. Hastie.
RENFREWSHIRE.—E. P. Bouverie.
ST ANDREWS, &c.—E. Ellice, Jun.
STIRLING BURGHS.—J. B. Smith.
WIGTOWN BURGHS.—Sir J. M'Taggart.

MEMBERS RETURNED FOR IRELAND.

ARMAGH.—Colonel Rawdon.
BANDON BOROUGH.—Viscount Bernard
CARRICKFERGUS.—Hon. Capt. Wellington Colton
CASHEL.—T. O'Brien
COLRAINE.—Sir H. Bruce.
DROGHEDA. Sir W. Somerville.
DUNGARVON.—Lord Northland.
ENNIS.—James O'Gorman Mahon.
ENNISKILLEN.—Hon. A. Cole.
GALWAY TOWN.—Blake and O'Flaherty.
KILKENNY. —J. O'Connell.
LONDONDERRY.—Sir R. Ferguson, Bart.
NEWRY.—Lord Newry, Lord Morne.
PORTARLINGTON.—Lieut.-Col. Dunne.
SLIGO.—Somers
TRALEE. Maurice O'Connell.
WEXFORD.—Devereux.

CLOSE OF POLLS.

We give the numbers at the close of the polls for the following places, as some of them were undecided last week, and as the exact decision will be looked to with interest:—

ABERDEEN.

Capt. Fordyce ..	918	Strutt	908
Col. Sykes ..	422	Gower	824

BEDFORD BOROUGH.

Sir H. Verney ..	453	M'Grath	228
H. Stewart ..	432

Captain Polhill .. 392

BOSTON (LINCOLNSHIRE).

Duke	580
Cabbell	466
Wire	339

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.

Law	1486
Goulburn ..	1189
Fielding ..	1147
Lefevre	890

DERBY.

Strutt	908
Gower	824
Ralkes	836
M'Grath	228

DROGHEDA.

WEDNESDAY (3 o'clock).

Sir W. Somerville.	161
Murray	124

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY.

WEDNESDAY (3 past 5).

Hamilton	220
Napier	158
Shaw	151
M'Cullagh	109

ST. IVES.

Lord Paulet ..	262
Bortlwick ..	145

EDINBURGH.

Cowan	2063
Craig	1854
Macaulay ..	1477
Jeffrey	980

OXFORD UNIVERSITY.

Inglis	1700
Gladstone ..	997
Round	824

SUNDERLAND.

Hudson	870
Barclay	643
Wilkinson ..	568

WEYMOUTH.

Christie	274
Freestun	274
Villiers	272
Butt	271

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

THE BRITISH MUSEUM.—On Monday, several cases of Assyrian sculpture, from the ruins of the city of Nineveh, were deposited in the gallery of antiquities at the British Museum. They were originally intended for the French Government, but, from a misunderstanding that arose between the collector and the French authorities, they were offered to the trustees of the British Museum, who became the purchasers; they are considered the finest specimens yet discovered. The Assyrian collection of sculptures and architectural remains is now nearly complete, and will be opened to the public in a few days.

FURTHER REDUCTION IN THE PRICE OF BREAD. Nearly all the bakers in the metropolis have reduced the price of their bread 1d. per 4lb., or 9d. per 4lb. loaf. In the neighbourhood of Oxford-street and St. Giles's, many bakers are selling their bread as low as 6d. per 4lb

PUBLIC BATHS AND WASHHOUSES.—On Tuesday the Commissioners appointed to construct baths and washhouses for the labouring classes, commenced the erection of a spacious building for that purpose on a plot of ground granted by the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, in Grange-street, Leicester-square. Two hundred private baths for both sexes, a spacious washing room, with hot closets for drying, and steam apparatus for the supply of hot and cold water, are to be constructed, the estimated cost of these works being £5000, which will be paid on the inhabitants of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. The water for the use of the establishment will be obtained from the Artesian wells supplying Trafalgar-square, and it is anticipated that these arrangements will not only be self-supporting, but will also yield a considerable profit to the parish

THE OYSTER SEASON.—On Wednesday morning, at six o'clock, the oyster season commenced at Billingsgate and Hungerford Markets, the boats being plentifully supply at both places of the article. At the former fish-market there were above thirty vessels, some of a large size, from Rochester, Whitstable, &c. There was a ready sale, the buyers being very numerous. The prices varied from 12s. to 22s. and upwards per bushel, according to the quality, the Chyne Rocks being those which realised the best sums. A large quantity was purchased to be sent to the country, the sale for them having greatly increased in the inland towns, owing to the rapid transit by railway communication.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS IN THE METROPOLIS. The number of births in the metropolis for the week ending July 24, was—Boys, 1,010; Females, 965; females, 699; total, 1924. Deaths—Males, 494; females, 470; total, 964.

IRELAND.

THE ELECTIONS.

DUBLIN.

The election for the city of Dublin took place on Monday amid the usual uproar on such occasions. At ten o'clock, George Roe, Esq., the High Sheriff, opened the court in Green's-court; and after the writ was read, Hugh Barton, Esq., proposed Mr. Hume. On both members, Edward Grogan, Esq. Alexander Doyle, Esq., seconded the nomination.

Mr Gregory was then proposed by B. M. Tabuteau, Esq., and seconded by Joshua Porter, Esq.

The Rev. Tresham Gregy delivered a lengthy address, in the course of which he denounced Sir Robert Peel as the greatest traitor since Judas Iscariot, and Mr Gregory as a partisan and deceitful statesman. He concluded by proposing William Busfield Ferrand, Esq , amidst great cheers, hisses, and uproar.

Mr. Ferrand was seconded by Charles Hyndham, Esq , M.D.

Mr J. A. Curran (barrister), then rose to propose Mr. John Reynolds as a fit and proper representative for Dublin. The Repealers cheered lustily, while the Conservatives remained silent. The learned gentleman spoke at length in support of his friend. Mr. Peter Steven seconded the nomination

A poll was demanded, which commenced on Wednesday. The assessor, the Sheriff, and the contending candidates, met on Thursday morning for the purpose of deciding the objections made to the votes. A few on each side were settled, and at twelve o'clock all adjourned. Mr. Reynolds claims a considerable majority over both Mr Gregory and Mr. Grogan ; but these gentlemen appear to think that before the scrutiny proceeds much further he must be in a minority.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY.

On Tuesday the election commenced. Mr. F. Shaw was proposed by the Rev. Dr. Wall, and seconded by Mr Sergeant Warren.—Mr. S. A. Hamilton was proposed by the Rev. Dr. Macdonnell, and seconded by Dr. Gayer, Q.C.—Mr. Professor M'Cullagh was proposed by Dr. M'Neece, and seconded by Mr. Whiteside, Q.C. —Mr. J. Napier, Q.C., was proposed by Mr. A. S. Hart, Junior Fellow, and seconded by the Rev. Mortimer O'Sullivan.—Mr. H. S. Kyle was proposed by Professor Longfield, and seconded by the Rev. H. B. Macartney.—Dr. Stanley (editor of the Standard) was proposed by Mr. Butt, Q.C., and seconded by the Rev. R. Murray, Dean of Ardagh

Mr Napier, Mr. Kyle, Dr. Gilfard, and Mr. Butt addressed the electors as candidates. The three last-named gentlemen declined going to the poll. The show of hands was declared to be in favour of Mr. M'Cullagh and Mr. Napier, and a poll was demanded on the part of Messrs. Shaw and Hamilton.

SIX O'CLOCK. THURSDAY EVENING.

At the close of this, the second day's poll, the numbers stood

Hamilton	230	Napier	230
Shaw..	225	M'Cullagh	169

COUNTY OF LIMERICK.—The most unexpected movement effected by the dissolution is the retirement from Parliament of Mr. Wm. Smith O'Brien. His letter of resignation appears in the Limerick Reporter, and it is now believed that the Conservative, Mr. Monsell, of Tervoe, will be returned through the influence, to a great measure, of the Roman Catholic priesthood.

ARRIVAL OF THE REMAINS OF O'CONNELL IN DUBLIN.—On Monday morning, vast crowds of persons assembled near the river, awaiting the appearance of the vessel bearing the remains of the late Mr. O'Connell. About twelve o'clock, one of the steamers of the City of Dublin Company, with the body on board, approached the mouth of the river, and took up her station near the Light-house, where she remained until half-past two o'clock, when she came up to the quay. About three, a hearse being in waiting, the coffin was landed and conveyed to the Roman Catholic Cathedral, in Marlborough-street, which was attended with difficulty, owing to the immense crowds.

TWO MORE MURDERS.—On the night of yesterday week a SERVANT MAN, in the employ of Mr. Jones, of Clinn Cottage, county Limerick, whilst riding home, was met by a gang of men upon the road, knocked off his horse, robbed, and murdered. On the morning of the same day a son of Mr. Richard White, of Abbeyville, county Tipperary, was shot dead, near Granaher, while making a seizure of cattle from a relative and namesake of his own.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

FATAL ACCIDENTS ON THE RIVER THAMES.

Last Saturday morning a sad accident occurred on the Thames, near Battersea-bridge. A party of five persons, named William Day, 7, Garden-row, College-street, Chelsea, Mary Eyles, a simple woman, of Queen-street; George Cox, a Chelsea pensioner, who resided near the College ; and James Ingram, who lived in the same neighbourhood ; and a youth named Charles Foke, living near Battersea-bridge, had been out to a party celebrating the Grand Regatta, in which one of their friends had won a prize. They got into a small sailing boat, sufficiently capacious to carry with safety from two to three persons. Whilst they were getting along the shore to the vessel, the young woman Ingram slipped down into the boat. As soon as the party had taken their seats in the boat, which was a young woman Foke, with the assistance of Mr. Davies, a coal-merchant, and a person named John Bull, and Jane Ingram were saved, but unfortunately Mary Eyles, who was seen clinging to Day and Cox, kept her hold of them so tight that they were unable to do anything to effect their escape, and all three sank together.

Another accident, attended with the loss of life, occurred on the river on Sunday evening, near the High-bridge, Mortlake. A wherry, containing four men and a woman, was capsized in the middle of the stream. The boat having shipped some water, the woman was baling it out, when the unbalanced herself and fell overboard. In their endeavours to save her, the men caused the boat to lean too much on her side, and they were upset. Two boats that were passing came to their assistance, and succeeded in saving two of the men, but the two others and the woman were drowned. The names of the parties lost are—W. Seager, Jane Seager (his sister), and Wm. Boulton ; respectively aged, eighteen, twenty, and two-and-twenty years.

EXTRAORDINARY CASE OF SUDDEN DEATH.—Yesterday evening week, as Miss Relsy Barry, aged only seventeen, daughter of Mr. George Barry, landlord of the White Horse Inn, Leeds Road, Halifax, was standing near a table conversing with a sister, she, without any previous complaint, suddenly fell to the floor a breathless corpse. On Saturday an inquest was held on her remains, and the Jury gave a verdict, "Died by the visitation of God." It is a singular circumstance that on the morning of the day on which she so awfully terminated her mortal earthly journey, she had gone into the garden, where she had a mound of earth shaped (curiously enough for the place) in form of a coffin, upon which she left, taken from her dress, a large black breast pin or brooch, which she placed in that part of the coffin mound where the breast plate is usually affixed, and left it there

TWO CHILDREN MURDERED BY THEIR FATHER.—Last Saturday morning a shocking murder was committed at Hulme, near Manchester, on two children, the one being about four years old, the other an infant of nine months old, by their father. The facts of the case seem to be these. The murderer is Joseph Speed, a man about thirty-four years of age, who has been accustomed to work in the factory, but has been out of employment for a long time past. About ten o'clock his wife went out, leaving him in charge of the two children. She was not long out, but on her return she found both the children lying under the bed with their throats cut, almost from ear to ear, and quite dead. On perceiving his wife approach, he made a most furious onslaught upon her with a heavy iron hammer. The wife, however, is still alive and sensible, but in far too dangerous a state to permit of being questioned. He then walked deliberately to the police-station in Great Jackson-street, and surrendered himself, and stated that he had just murdered his wife and two children. The unfortunate man seems to be labouring under some serious mental derangement, as he has always been a good husband and an affectionate father. An inquest was held on Monday, and at the close of the evidence a verdict of "Wilful murder" was returned against him.

POSTSCRIPT.

O'CONNELL'S FUNERAL.

The interment of Mr. O'Connell took place on Thursday. His remains were removed from the Roman Catholic church in Marlborough-street, Dublin, to the cemetery of Glasnevin. They were brought along a line of road which must be at the least eight Irish miles, and were made the leading attraction of a funeral procession, such as never before has been exhibited in Ireland. This procession was so arranged as to pass through the finest portions of the city, and to afford to the greatest advantage a view of that which was really a spectacle of what may be deemed "a nations lmourning;" for, wherever it passed, all business was suspended, the shops closed, and the windows occupied by those who seemed to take a deep interest in the scene before them. The enmity which hundreds had entertained against Mr. O'Connell appeared to have been forgotten; and the only recollection of him that predominated was that he had been possessed of pre-eminent talents, and had attracted towards his country a large portion of the regards and interest of Europe. This might be considered as the cause why his funeral procession was the most extraordinary exhibition that has ever taken place in Ireland. The mourners were to be reckoned by thousands; and more actually took part in the ceremonies of the day than there were persons to look upon them. There were various confraternities, many trade associations, the representatives of corporations from all parts of Ireland, Catholic clergymen, and Catholic Bishops from the most remote parts of the Kingdom; the Commissioners even of the smallest towns; the members of temperance societies, and, in addition to these testimonies of democratic, or Roman Catholic sympathy, there were to be seen the carriages even of persons connected with the Government and the law. It may be added that this procession, greater than the greatest of those political demonstrations in which the deceased so much delighted, passed off without the least disorder occurring to mar the solemnities of the day.

MONTROSE BURGHS.—The nomination of candidates for the Montrose burghs took place at Montrose on Wednesday, when the town was thrown into a state of great excitement, in consequence of an unexpected opposition to Mr. Hume. Provost Jamieson, of Montrose, nominated, and Provost Gibson, of Arbroath, seconded the nomination of Mr. Hume. Baillie Brevie, ship owner, seconded by Dr. Burnie, of Arbroath, nominated Mr. D. Greenhill, of Fearn. Mr. Hume's proposers based his claims to the suffrages of the constituency on the fact of his long-tried character and consistent conduct as the ablest advocate of popular rights. Mr. Greenhill's nominators objected to Mr. Hume chiefly because he would repeal the Navigation Laws, had not been charitable to local institutions, and afforded but little reason to hope that any of the district would "toast themselves at his seals" Mr. Hume defended his conduct. Mr. Greenhill addressed the meeting very briefly, and could scarcely obtain a hearing. The Sheriff then took a show of hands for the respective candidates, and declared that the choice had fallen on Mr. Hume. There were very few hands held up for Mr. Greenhill. The Sheriff then fixed the poll for Tuesday next.

THE SHAKSPEARE FUND.—A communication has been addressed to the committee of the Shaksperian Society, at Stratford-upon Avon, by command of Prince Albert, intimating that it is the intention of his Royal Highness to contribute a donation of £200 to the fund which it is proposed to raise for the purchase of Shakspeare's house. This munificent contribution has been rendered still more valuable to the committee by the assurance which accompanies it of the strong interest felt by his Royal Highness in the preservation, as national property, of a dwelling which is connected with the greatest name in English literature.

COLLISION ON THE THAMES. A collision took place on Wednesday morning, has occurred on board the Royal steamer, one of the Diamond Company's boats, and the Star steamer. The former of these two left Gravesend at Half-past seven o'clock, and was nearing the Pier at Rotherhithe, when she was run by the Star. The bulwarks of the Pearl, the cooking-houses, and paddle-box were injured, and the passengers thrown into a state of consternation, some of them in their attempt to escape the threatened danger being thrown down and trampled upon. It does not appear as yet, to whom the blame of this collision and the danger produced by it are to be attributed FATAL EXPLOSION OF STEAM ON BOARD A FRENCH STEAMER A lamentable accident has occurred on board the Royal steamer the Comte d'Eu. This vessel quitted Havre on Monday for Cherbourg, where her machinery was to be inspected and tried by a special commission At about half-past six in the evening, when off Barfleur, part of one of her boilers gave way, and the boiling water rushed into the engine-room. Twenty men were victims of this accident. Seven of them had died when the account left, and thirteen were seriously injured. Of the seven who are dead, three were stokers, one an engineer, and three seamen. Of the thirteen wounded, four are stokers, one is an engineer, one a man employed to put up the machinery, and the rest seamen. The Minister of Marine has ordered an inquiry, at which the makers of the engine will be examined.

POLICE.

JOSEPH'S ADY'S CORRESPONDENCE.

Sir Peter Laurie waited upon the Lord Mayor at the Mansion House, on Tuesday, for the purpose, he said, of putting into his Lordship's possession a correspondence of which Joseph Ady was the principal party concerned, and the reading of which caused a great deal of laughter.

The Lord Mayor said he believed he had himself some letters on the subject of Mr. Ady's late endeavours to carry on the old game of inducing the public to pay him for false intelligence, and it would no doubt be exceedingly serviceable to the public to catch the gentleman in the midst of his operations.

Sir Peter Laurie said the new Post Office Act, some of the clauses of which appeared to have been suggested to the administration by the conduct of Joseph Ady, came into force on the 1st of August. In that Act there were three clauses of very great importance, by which power was given to compel the senders of rejected letters to pay the postage, the post office stamps to be evidence of letters being rejected ; and in proceedings for postage it was provided that the apparent hand-writing should be deemed to be the sender of a letter. The Act was lifted by the ingenuity of Joseph Ady, and he thought it necessary to call the attention of the public to the fact, in order that every means might be adopted to abate such a nuisance.

The first letter produced by Sir Peter Laurie was directed "To the Wife of ——, Esq., Moorhouse-street, Cavendish-square," and was as follows :—

Madam,—Your husband is embarked in an undertaking rendered illegal by various Acts of Parliament, subjecting him, parties and abettors, to severe liabilities and results. He may be dragged from his house any time of the day or night, to be confined in a felon's cell The police may enter your apartment, take possession of your money, jewels, and paraphernalia, and leave you to the tender mercies of the law. On receipt of 20s., I will point out the disease and the remedy.

JOSEPH ADY, Accountant, 3, York-street, Charlotte-street, Whitechapel

Sir Peter Laurie said that Mr. Ady having committed a mistake in supposing that the gentleman to whose house the letter was directed had a wife, the distress which such a communication might have occasioned if the conjecture had been correct did not occur. The next letter to which it was proper to draw his Lordship's attention was from Vienna. It was addressed to him by a gentleman to whom Mr. Ady had written, and was as follows :—

To the Right Hon. Sir Peter Laurie, Knight, Deputy Lord Mayor, London.

Vienna, July 17, 1847

SIR,—Pray excuse the liberty I take in addressing myself to you on a subject which interests me and my family very materially; and I should not have used your interference had I known where to write. The annexed letter is written and made use of your humble name. Mr Joseph Ady, the accountant, is a perfect stranger to me, consequently I hope he will not take it amiss my treating the veracity of his intelligence. Should you, however, find on inquiry the sum coming to me right, you will kindly pay him his demanded fee. An order by Messrs Rothschild, London, on their house here, I have signed me here, having returned from Hungary last October, in consequence of the ill-health of myself and family. The Rev. George Woods, Chaplain to the British Embassy, will give you every evidence of identity of respectability. I may look your honour will excuse the liberty I have herewith taken, I beg to subscribe myself

Your most obedient servant,
THOS. M. TATLOCK, 960, Alla Casse Wieden, Vienna.

Mr. Christopher Friezer, formerly of Finsbury-square, now of the Globe Life Assurance Office, of Mr. Randal Vance, of Hendon, are also give you the information of me. My declared lines to Mr. Ady authorise your honour to receive the amount. That the names of the parties (if such a name) could be divulged would greatly gratify our curiosity.

Copy of the letter of Mr. Joseph Ady, accountant, London.

"As you would that men shou d do to you, do you even so unto them." (Signed "Peter Laurie.") If your Lordship's magistrate is able to inform you of something to your advantage (value £100 and upwards), on receipt of 20s. by order on Whitechapel Post-office (as also equivalent for any expenses), I will make great exertions, to serve your honour's welfare, unless immediate attention is paid hereto; and should you find any difficulty, the Right Hon. Sir Peter Laurie, Knt., perpetual Deputy Lord Mayor of London, will see justice done you, and will thank you from a sincere, except postage, which you may pay both ways.

(Signed) JOSEPH ADY, Accountant,
Respectfully yours,

No. 5, York-street, Charlotte-street, quarter of a mile east of Whitechapel Church, London.
May 10, 1847.

The third letter to which Sir Peter Laurie alluded was directed to a gentleman at Cambridge-heath, near Hackney-road, informing him that the property which was to be had for twenty shillings amounted to £1000, and was the third communication which had been sent to him on the subject by Ady. The writer maintained that although he believed the statement to be without foundation, and that Sir Peter Laurie had never authorised any reference to be made to him on such a matter, still there were people who thought Mr. Ady could never have the audacity of acting in matters so important without the sanction of the honourable gentleman of whom so much mention had been made—that the reference was bold and wholly without disguise—and that if there were any deception practised, the most complete exposure ought to take place as speedily as possible.

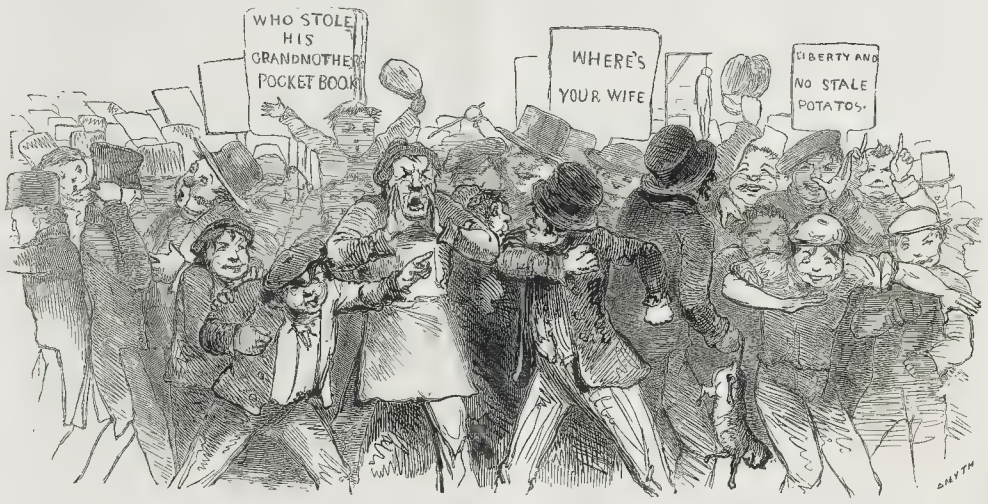
The Lord Mayor said there was no doubt of the active efforts of Joseph Ady, as the correspondence lately received at the Mansion-house amply testified ; and he evidence that the deceased was a laundress, and generally enjoyed most excellent health. On Friday evening (last week) she was engaged at a person's house, in St. Andrew's-road, and whilst in the act of ironing a dress she was suddenly seized with a fit. She was raised up by her mistress and placed in a chair, but was apparently in a lifeless state. Mr. Nolan, a surgeon, was called in, who at once pronounced life quite extinct. Death had probably arisen from an affection of the heart, resulting from natural causes. The Jury returned a verdict accordingly.

SUDDEN DEATH On Monday, Mr. Carter held an inquest at the George the Fourth Tavern, Newington, respecting the death of Rebecca Smith, aged forty-three years, residing at No. 12, Gray-street, Blackfriars-road. It appeared in evidence that the deceased was a laundress, and generally enjoyed most excellent health. On Friday evening (last week) she was engaged at a person's house, in St. Andrew's-road, and whilst in the act of ironing a dress she was suddenly seized with a fit. She was raised up by her mistress and placed in a chair, but was apparently in a lifeless state. Mr. Nolan, a surgeon, was called in, who at once pronounced life quite extinct. Death had probably arisen from an affection of the heart, resulting from natural causes. The Jury returned a verdict accordingly.

METROPOLITAN ELECTION SKETCHES.—BY KENNY MEADOWS.

THE LADY CANVASSER.

THE SHOW OF HANDS.



THE CROWD AT THE HUSTINGS.

THE LADY CANVASSER.—SHOW OF HANDS.

AIR.—"Woman's Heart."

A gallant Knight, whose hopes were bent,
To represent the shire,
Arrayed himself and forth he went
Their plumpers to desire.
But finding many did not choose,
A new attack he tries
With weapons no man could refuse,
And these were—Woman's Eyes!

The nomination day arrives,
And all hold up their hands.
The opposition clearly thrives:
A poll he now demands.
Each lady bright takes up the fight,
And tough electors plies,
Until he finds he's made "all right,"
Returned by—Woman's Eyes!

THE HUSTINGS.—THE CAB ORATOR.

AIR.—"The Four-Leaved Shamrock."

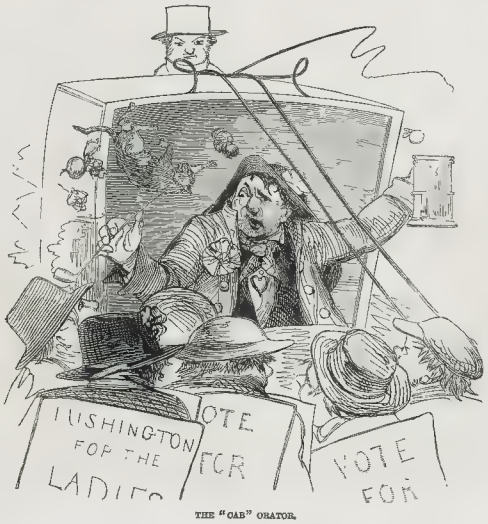
I'll seek a four-wheeled cabriolet,
On which my form I'll rise,
And when I find a chance to speak,
Oh I how I'll tell them lies!
I will not waste my precious voice
On taxes or Bank gold;
But swear, if I should be their choice,
I'll do whate'er I'm told.
And thus I'll play the deluder's part,
And order beer around,
Till every fly, cab, coach, or cart,
Shall for my votes be bound!

To farmers I'll Protection give;
And to the mob, free corn;
I'll promise that the poor shall live
Like those to fortunes born;
And Education I'll defend,
Or strangle, as may suit;
And different creeds treat as a friend,
Or crush them like a brute!
And thus I'll play the deluder's part, &c.



THE "CAB" ORATOR.

THE POPULAR CANDIDATE.

AIR.—"The Gipsy King."

Oh! I am the popular man,
And where is another like me?
Just mention him now if you can,
So sure of becoming M.P.
Petitions I swear I am able
To bring to the foot of the throne;
If I can, they are laid on the table;
If I can't—why, I leave them alone!
(Chorus) For I am the Popular Man, ha! ha!
For I am the Popular Man.

VARIATION.—"The Monks of Old."

Many have told that M.P.s of old
Were a wonderful downy set;
But 'tis more true, that the Members new
Are a great deal downier yet:
For our word is chaff—in our sleeve we laugh—
And gammon them all, high and low;
But they laugh, ha! ha! and they quaff, ha! ha!
And cheer us, wherever we go.
(Chorus) For they laugh, ha! ha! and they quaff, ha! ha!
And cheer us wherever we go.

THE UNPOPULAR CANDIDATE.

AIR.—"I Remember, I Remember."

I remember, I remember,
How the poll-day flitted by.
And he, who's now the member,
Poll'd some hundreds more than I.
On my brow, on my brow, love,
Still smiles of hope I wore;
But I knew ther'd be a row, love,
When the polling was all o'er.
I remember, I remember,
How they swore till all was blue,
That I ne'er should be their member—
And it turn'd out they were true.

I remember, I remember,
How I thought about my bones,
And I look'd, with some misgiving,
On the cabbage-stalks and stones.

METROPOLITAN ELECTION SKETCHES.—BY KENNY MEADOWS.

THE POPULAR CANDIDATE.

And I came upon the hustings,
And exposed my shrinking form,
To the yells, and knocks, and thrustings
Of the people's pelting storm.

THE UNPOPULAR CANDIDATE.

I remember, I remember,
How unpopular was I;
And had it been November,
They'd have burnt me for a Guy!

ANNOUNCING THE POLL, AND THE BUTCHERS.

Air.—"Wreath the Bowl."

Read the poll—
Let every soul,
In anxious waiting meet us.
Some say we've won,
And some we're done,
And both Committees cheat us.

THE MARROW-BONES AND CLEAVERS,

TOO LATE FOR THE POLL.—PAST FOUR O'CLOCK.

THANKING THE ELECTORS.

But, if we win,
We'll make a din
With bells, and bands, and clashing;
And, if we find
Our cause behind,
The hustings we'll be smashing.
So read the poll, &c.

There's no doubt
Our man's thrown out—
Voters are deceivers.

Clear the hall,
The butchers call,
With marrow-bones and cleavers.
Laugh he may
Who's gained the day
With those who elect him;
But, we'll try
Scrutiny,
And again reject him.
So read the poll, &c.

TOO LATE FOR THE POLL.—PAST FOUR O'CLOCK.

AIR.—"Old Dan Tucker."

I went to open the other night,
To see the noise, and hear the sight;
The folks were running all about,
And said our member was thrown out.
Get out of the way—you've been dosing—
You're too late, the poll is closing

To register I was most willing,
But now my vote's not worth the shilling.
If ever I have to poll any more,
I wont delay till the clock goes four.
Get out of the way—you're out of luck, Sir,
You're too late—the hour has struck, Sir.

THE THEATRES.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

"La Gazza Ladra" was repeated on Saturday—the new theatre being fully and fashionably attended. Grisi was in superb voice, and acted the arduous character of Ninetta with untiring energy. It is one of her best parts, both vocally and histrionically. Her singing of the cavatina, "Di Piacer," is marked with the most exquisite fioriture; and, for intense pathos, nothing can be finer than her delivery of the prayer in the last scene. Alboni's Pippo has created as great a furore as her Arsace. Her delineation of the semi-bearded peasant-boy is charming. Joyous in the early scenes, the passion in the moments when his friend Ninetta is wrongfully accused, was touchingly depicted. The drinking-song, "Tocchiamo," a restored gem, was rapturously encored, as also her aria in the duo "Eben per memoria," as well as the andante with Grisi. Mario gave as much importance to Gennaro as the slight materials for the tenor would admit of. Tamburini's Fernando was splendid, and deserved the hearty plaudits bestowed upon him. In the trial scene, the parting between him and Grisi received the honour of a separate ovation. We have heard Marini in better voice than on Saturday. We understand that he was indisposed, and that it was doubtful up to the last moment whether he would be able to sing at all. His acting of the malicious Podesta is admirable. Tagliafico's Fabrizio was carefully performed, and his fine bass voice told well in the concerted pieces. Rossini's masterpiece will be repeated for the last time this season on Tuesday next.

Donizetti's "Maria di Rohan" was given on Tuesday night, for the purpose of affording Madame Ronconi another opportunity of trying her fortune in the principal part, her friends attributing her failure, on the first representation, to nervousness. Madame Ronconi, since her début, has been singing at concerts with great success; but, as we have had frequent occasion to remark, the qualities which will constitute a good room singer are very opposite to those required for the lyric drama. Madame Ronconi was well received, but we see no reason to modify our opinion as to her merits. We think that she ought to abandon the stage altogether; or, at all events, it is quite absurd for her to suppose that she can hold the rank of prima donna in the presence of London dilettanti. Her engagement has been a mistake, and a misfortune, and her unfavourable appearance an act of weakness on the part of the management. It was a great drawback to Ronconi's marvellous acting and singing of Chevreuse, not to have been sustained by a first-rate Marie, but still the house rang with the cheering bestowed on his powerful exertions, proclaimed by Charles Young, the celebrated tragedian, to be equal to the finest displays of a Kemble, a Cooke, or a Kean. Ronconi's last scene, when Chevreuse learns, as he supposes, his wife's dishonour, and watches the door through which he expects Chalais, the lover, to enter, is something stupendous in histrionic genius as well as vocal supremacy. Battini was the Chalais, but did not fill the gap left by Salvi's absence. Battini has a powerful tenore voice, but he will have to acquire a better method and more refinement before he can claim the first position as an artist. Alboni's Armanda di Gondi was most gracefully enacted. She received encores in both his airs—"Per non listare" and "Son leggero nell' amore." It was impossible for any audience to refuse greater rapture than at these two vocal triumphs of the popular Alboni! If Grisi were to play Maria di Rohan next season with Ronconi and Alboni, this opera, which is full of beautiful melody, and is a most soul stirring drama, would be certain of great success.

On Thursday next, Rossini's famous opera, "La Donna del Lago," will be produced, Grisi being the Elena; Madame Bellini, Albina; Alboni, Malcolm Graeme; Mario, Jacas the Fifth; Bettini, Rodrigo; and Tamburini, Douglas. In Barbi will be sung by Tagliafico, Polonini, Tulli, Lavia, Piacentini, &c. In addition to the usual orchestra, there will be a full military band, and some of our best harp players. The mise en scène will be on the grandest scale. The grand production will be the last of the lyric works brought out this season, which terminates on the 21st inst.

On Thursday night, the "Nozze di Figaro" was given for the fourth time. As usual on such Mozartian occasions, there was a brilliant attendance, and the enthusiasm of the audience was unbounded. The encores were for the overture, the "Non più andrai" so wonderful by Marini; the "Voi che sapete" so exquisitely rendered by Alboni; the duo "Crudel Perche," between Grisi and Tamburini, and the duo "Sull'aria" so charmingly interpreted by Steffanoni and Grisi. Grisi's Susanna is the perfection of vocal and dramatic art; her splendid organ was as fresh and vigorous at the close of the opera as at the beginning. Marini was quite mercurial in his movements; his Figaro has gained immensely since the first night, in animation—in short, he never has been equalled. Tamburini's Count has always been a remarkable performance, both for its finesse and polish. All the artists were quite at home in their parts, and played into each other's hands, as to constitute the most attractive ensemble, unprecedented in the recollection of the oldest Mozartian.

HAYMARKET.

On Saturday, Mr. Webster, the indefatigable lessee of this establishment, took his benefit, when the house was crowded to the ceiling. The performances commenced with "The Love Chase," "Popping the Question," and "The Invisible Prince." In addition to these entertainments, Mr. Chatterton's three youthful pupils played on the harp, John Parry sang two of his songs, and Mr. Webster and Miss Adelaide Addis danced a Bolero. Mr. Webster has had a brilliant night of the season, Mr. Webster delivered the farewell address, of much pith and point, in the course of which, after referring to the little Haymarket's arduous struggle of ten months, and thanking the company for "the state of the poll," the lessee said—

> Permit me to say, ladies and gentlemen, this is the only theatre in which, at the present moment, the legitimate drama has found a constant refuge. I have always pledged myself to that course, and it is for you to decide whether or not I have redeemed my pledges. Within seven months three original five-act comedies have been produced; and, throughout the season, there has been a rapid succession of comedietias, musical dramas, and revivals, all of which have been successful. We have not to record a single failure. I have had the gratification, also, of producing amongst the happiest instances of this season the return to the stage of your accomplished favourite, Mrs Nisbett. Nothing, indeed, has been left unattempted to render the productions of this house worthy of your patronage. Since last Christmas the outlay considerably more than £2000 have been expended on the authorship of new pieces, in addition to a general expenditure of upwards of £30,000. I have endeavoured to do my part, as far as the resources within my reach, and untiring zeal in the employment of them, could enable me. But, this, your vernacular stage, has a higher mission to perform—one which it may be said to be devoted to the pursuit of the English drama under difficulties. Two Italian Operas, French Plays, musical soirées, and ballooning, bear weather, and out-of-door amusements are formidable competitors. * * * * * *
>
> But, believing the drama to possess a permanent vitality which must outlive all depressing circumstances, I look forward confidently to the future. English comedy cannot perish it shall not, as long as I possess the power to establish it. Amongst the measures arranged for the next session, independent of the eminent members at present attached to my company, are engagements with artists of the highest talents, Miss Helen Faucit, Mr and Mrs. C. Kean, Mr Macready, Mr and Mrs Keeley, and others, including some new to these boards. Original plays by distinguished authors shall be early brought under your consideration, and it is hoped that, when the whole policy of our Establishment has become developed, we may safely rely confidently on your support.

The theatre will be re-opened towards the end of September.

"The Duchess" Theatre will close a season of chequered success this evening; and, on the 12th, will be re-opened for the benefit of the family of the late Mr Walton, the Assistant Stage-Manager; when Mrs. Butler, and the leading artists in town, have proffered their gratuitous aid

The Colosseum continues to be well attended, the public delighting to escape from the great oven of London to the refreshancement of its illuminated conservatories and cool grots, alternating with the artistic triumphs of its moon-lit panoramas, and its gas-lit colours of sculpture.

At Astley's, a new grand drama and fury legend is promised on Monday

Vauxhall has become once more fashionable; and the rank of the company on Thursday was of better description, of "the loyalty of the property."

At the Surrey Zoological Gardens, Shakspeare's House proves very attractive to thousands who cannot make the pilgrimage to Stratford.

Apropos of the Hanover-square Rooms, is announced for Friday evening next, at the Hanover-square Rooms, to concert means for the purchase of the property.

Rost, Williams, and Jones. A letter has been received from Hobart Town, by a person in Monmouth, from which the following is an extract, whence it will be seen they have uncontrolled liberty in Van Diemen's Land:—"I now the Chartists, Frost, Jones, and Williams, not one since. Williams is at New Norfolk, in good health, but unhappy; wants to get to England; he talked of opening a shop in the general line, if he does not bear favourable news soon from home. Jones is in partnership with a watchmaker named Duchesne, a Frenchman, at Launceston, far better off than ever he was in England; I saw him a few weeks since, extravagantly dressed. I believe Frost is living at Bagdad, some miles from here, with Geach and his wife. She keeps a very respectable boarding school there, in the name of Mrs. Foster. They have all very great indulgences."

OUR MAGAZINE COLUMN FOR AUGUST.

CHARACTER OF QUEEN MARY.

If we were to draw a faithful picture of this Princess, we need do nothing more than upset our inkstand over our paper, and cause the saturated manuscript to be transferred to our pages in one enormous black blot; for we are sure that no printer's type could furnish a type of the person whom we have the horribly black job of rendering down—or rather knocking down—to posterity. Those indefatigable readers who are desirous of having the appropriate epithets which Mary's character deserves, are requested to take down the dictionary, and, having selected from it all the adjectives expressive of badness that the language contains, place them in a string or a series of strings, before the name of Mary. To look for her virtues would require the aid of one of those solar microscopes which give visibility to the minutest atoms, and be particle, if any discovered, might be deposited in the mental eye without its being susceptible of anything having entered it. She seems to have possessed some sincerity; but this only gave a certain degree of vigour to her evil propensities. She was, perhaps, susceptible of some attachments, but so is a boa constrictor, though few would conceive it a privilege to be held in the firm embraces of that paragon of tenacity towards those with whom she is in contact itself. She had a certain vigour of mind, just as the tiger has a certain vigour of spring—a pabulist, the force of which her victims very frequently experienced. The Comic History of England.

AN IRISH ELECTION IN THE TIME OF THE FORTIES.

The ingenuity exhibited in some of these atrocities was extraordinary, and a proof that, in whatever qualities our people are deficient, natural intellect is certainly not among them. As the electors came in, and voted either for this person or that, they were assailed by hissings and execrations, or by cheerings and exclamations, from the respective mobs. But this was not all; ruffians were stationed among the friends of the popular candidate, with pieces of red and white chalk in their hands, who, as the electors passed out, took care to score their backs with either colour, in proportion to the political enormity of their crime. A score of white chalk, for instance, was a signal to that portion of the crowd that the person thus marked had voted [illegible] candidate, and deserved to be well beaten: whereas, the red mark intimated a still more fearful punishment—to wit, that the individual bearing it might have his brains knocked out, or be beaten to death.—Dublin University Magazine.

HERR FINCKERST.

Herr Finckerst was a professor of the pianoforte. Similar professors are not persons whose talents have been crowned by that title by any learned assembly: they give themselves their own degree, and print "Professor" on their cards, for the sufficient reason that they practise or play on an instrument. On the same principle, Mrs. Twigg, the mangling woman, who lived next door to Tom, in the Cut, was a professor of starch, because she professed to use Baker's Patent Mangle, although all the time she well knew that she didn't. Cartwheeler Tadpole.

HOW TO TELL A STORY THAT IS NO STORY.

If I was to be so bold as to offer my advice, I should tell it short. this way: "Once upon a time, when pigs were swine, and turkeys chewed tobacco, and little birds built their nests in old men's beards, a certain man had no hand wont cut a hunting. He thought he could shoot, but couldn't; for he fired at a carboo and missed it: was frightened to see the tracks of wild beasts instead of the same ones in the woods; after his supper made another hunted rare cooked; got the nightmare; fancied he saw three hungry wolves, woke up and found but one, and that was himself. Now, there is the hair and head, body and bones, and sum and substance, of your everlasting 'long story.'" Fraser's Magazine.

LIFE IN WAPPING.

There is an eastern district of the metropolis called Wapping. It is redolent with tar and oakum, and the multifarious stores of shipping. It is decidedly nautical in appearance, and possesses a character of its own, unique and unmistakable. The black dolls, with white and tinseled drapery, flaunt in majestic splendour from many an emporium of wife and strays, where anything may be purchased, from a penny whistle up to a mariner-boy or a distant lead-stripping. It is a district utterly unknown to fashionable life, save when they take the steamers to Rotterdam or Hamburg, or any other place of continental resort. The narrow winding streets are generally filled with sea-faring men, embrowned by foreign suns. Lascars troop about in scores, shivering and uncomfortable in their dingy calico clothing. Long variegated poles project from little dreary shops, and dance to the measure of lather and scrubbing brushes. Women, too, are prowling about, or, like spiders, awaiting in their boozing kens to entrap the unfortunate seaman on his return from a foreign cruise, and ease him of his hard earned cash. Dirk, too, of smaller age, makes his appearance in the shape of bonnets or caps, or of any vestige of feminine decency of thought or speech. The dram-shops are frequent, and full of dusky customers. Fleets of collars nestle on the shining backs of fellows, who are keeping time to the music, and the hum and the bustle of human industry give ceaseless evidence of unremitting toil Dolman's Magazine.

AN UNHAPPY HOME.

Amidst this opulence of comfort, there is something in the general air that is not well. Is it that the carpets and the cushions are too soft and noiseless, so that there is no more presence of existence? Is it that the chairs are too easy? Is it that the prints and pictures do not commemmorate great thoughts or deeds, or render nature in the poetry of landscape, hall, or hut, but are of one voluptuous cast—more shows of form and less of mind? Is it that the books, if such there be, have all their gold outside, and that the titles of the greater part qualify them to be companions of the prints and pictures? Is it that the completeness and the beauty of the place is the result of money, and not an affectation of humility, in some unimportant and inexpensive regard, which is as false as the face of the too truly painted portrait hanging yonder, or its original at breakfast in his easy chair below? Or is it that the fire, in the dearly bought coal, and crushed and ground of all here, there issues forth some subtle portion of himself, which gives a vague expression of himself to everything about him?—Dombey and Son.

NAPOLEON'S RETURN FROM ELBA.

Those who like to have a History-book in their room to speculate upon what might have happened in the world, but for the fatal occurrence of what actually did take place (a most puzzling, amusing, ingenious, and profitable kind of meditation), have no doubt often thought of the moment when the world's time Napoleon took to come back from Elba, and to let loose his eagle from Gulf San Juan to Notre Dame. The historians on our side tell us that the armies of the allied powers were already in France; and we cannot suppose that bear deaf at a moment's notice upon the Elban Emperor. The august jobbers assembled at Vienna, and carving out the kingdoms of Europe according to their wisdom, had each cause of quarrel among themselves as might have set the armies which had overcome Napoleon to fight against each other, but for the return of the object of unanimous hatred and fear. This Monarch had an army in full force because he had jobbed to himself Poland, and was determined to keep it: another had robbed half Saxony, and was bent upon maintaining his acquisition: Italy was the object of a third's solicitude. Each was protesting against the rapacity of the other; and could the Corsican but have waited in his prison until all these parties were by the ears, he might have returned and reigned unmolested. But what would have become of our story and all our friends, then? If all the drops in it were dried up, what would become of the sea?—Vanity Fair.

MR. STRAGGLES'S WHITE-BAIT DINNER.

Mr. Straggles commenced with water-sauchée (which at first he conceived to be flounder-broth), and all the parsley and butter in that preparation he ate, and the imposing waiter who came to change his plate, and said he preferred the same. But this the man would not allow by any means, and took it away with a grand-gratuitous air, observing that "Gentlemen always took fish after soup." He frowned scale: and in wonder at the pickles which nestled amidst the salmon cutlets: and in fear at the pyramid of whitebait which soon made its appearance. so much so, that he gravely put bunch to his eye, in the presence of mind. And then he watched Mr. Flitter closely,—how he slanted his plate with a wedge of bread, whilst he squeezed the lemon over the cayenne pepper,—how he helped himself twice to the brown bread and butter,—and how he ate them as voraciously. All this Mr. Straggles did, even to slapping one bit of brown bread and butter upon another, face to face, as carelessly as though he had done so for years. "Well, Straggles," said Flitter, "supper will be presently. What are they like?" "I can't make out," replied his friend "Baked curl-papers, I should say, were the nearest things to them. But the bread and butter's fractate." "More bait," ordered Mr. Flitter, and more bread and butter swelled bait: and the Badminton. Capital stuff it was, too. "I'll tell you how to make that," said that gentleman. "Pour out a bottle of Vin Ordinaire into a large dish, and put a whole wine-glass full of sugar and some sugar and some knobs of Wenham ice. Put a suspicion of your favourite liqueur, or a phantom of lemon-peel into it, and there you are. Ah!" The last expression accompanied a deep draught, which left the ingredients limited to perfection, as the devilled bait had made his throat all of a blaze. And upon this he put pale ale, finishing with champagne, which Mr. Flitter would order. "I don't seem to care much about anything more to eat," said Mr. Straggles, as he took the white-bait almost up to his throat. "Oh, but you must. Here are lovely peas: and duck too: or perhaps you'd like some of this ham." Mr. Straggles thought he would; it was less to eat. But it was so all the same obliged to have some more Badminton, and soon got very jolly indeed.—Bentley's Miscellany.

ACOSTIC BY LORD ELDON.

The following acrostic, addressed to the late Mr. Bliss, on his adornment of Brandon, is said to be the pen of Sir Harry Inglis, and not Lord Eldon:—

E-nchanted, I view the scene with surprise
D-oes not illusion deceive my wrapt eyes?
W-here are the sands, and where is the warren?
A-re not these scenes to my memory foreign?
H-abbits and conies were lords of the soil,
D-eep sedge made the rabbit-warren a toil;
B-ut now the smooth turnpike invites to proceed;
L-o, the warren is changed to a sweet verdant mead!
I-nstead of the furze like a noble ground,
S-ee a Palace adorns, and forests abound.
S-ee Bliss has created a Paradise round. The Patrician.

And these miserable animals are going to the Derby to morrow; and, if you are in town, you'll see hundreds more spending their substance, their eighteen shillings per week, in endeavouring to appear what they are not. Why don't they try not to be that which they appear?—egregious blockheads. The Derby never was intended for them. Racing is a treat to the Yorkshire tyke, to the happy rustic, the honest and industrious tradesman; and the Derby-day should be a happy holiday to millions; but phaetons, and cigars, and iced-champagne, and cutting whips, and cut-away coats, and betting-books, are not the things for tailors' apprentices and lawyers' clerks.—Sporting Review.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

News has been received of the death of Capt. George Maclean, Governor of Cape Coast Castle, on the west coast of Africa. Capt. Maclean was the husband of Miss Landon, better known as L. E. L., whose unfortunate death some years since excited so much sympathy.

We are exceedingly happy to learn that the report of the Hon. and Rev. G. Spencer's death is premature.

During the week ending on Saturday last, the number of persons passing between England and France at the under-named places was—at Boulogne, 2326; at Calais, 467; total, 2793.

Accounts have been received at Constantinople of a complete victory having been gained at Dergui over the insurgents, in which more than 1200 Kurds were left on the field of battle.

A baker of Haxon, near Amesbury, Wiltshire, has engaged to supply a respectable farmer with flour for the use of his labourers at "1s." per gallon, from Michaelmas to Christmas next

Letters from Rumelia state that a very destructive fire had broken out at [illegible] (Rumelia), in the bazaar. Fortunately, there was not much wind at the time, and it was got under without other damage than the destruction of from 30 to 40 miserable old houses. In the bazaar, the depôt of jewellery, goods, and other merchandize, was very great, on account of the approaching fair of Ourounguiza, and the loss to the merchants must considerably exceed £400,000. Upwards of 600 houses and shops were destroyed during the three hours the fire raged.

Mr. Cobden arrived at Berlin last week, and was expected to remain for a few days, in order to acquire more minute information on the actual relations of the Zollverein. After that he intends to visit St. Petersburg, and, either on his journey thither or on his return, will visit the city of Hamburg. The Free-Traders of Berlin were about to give Mr. Cobden a grand entertainment.

There was a very violent hailstorm at Leipsic on the 18th ult., which did much damage. The storm travelled on, and committed the most fearful damage in many hamlets and villages. The ripe corn suffered considerable injury, and the oats were completely thrashed out by the hail, so that the people gathered them up with their hands. The hailstorm pursued its devastating course from Greisheim to Hugelheim. Fields and gardens are destroyed, the corn is beaten to the ground; the ears are thrashed out by the violence of the storm; fruit and leaves have been torn from their branches, and the vines are utterly destroyed. Potatoes have on the whole suffered least.

About three weeks ago a sailor at Constantinople was struck with apoplexy, and being pronounced dead by the surgeons, was put into a coffin, and on the following day taken to the burial ground for interment. On [illegible] there blood was seen to flow from the coffin from the incision made in his arm the preceding day in a vain attempt to bleed him. The coffin was opened, and the man was found alive, and with his eyes open. He died, however, in a few minutes afterwards.

The suit against the Great Western Railway Company by the sufferers on the Stoke Canon fire, by which a loss of between £6000 and £8000 was sustained, and the finest part of the village destroyed, has been compromised. The case stood for trial at Exeter during the present assizes, but the defendants have consented to pay half the damages sustained and the costs.

A shocking murder was committed in the Greco-Catholic Church, Vienna, on the 22nd ult., on the person of the clergyman there. He had gone out, as usual, early to read mass, and, not returning home at noon, search was made for him, when he was found, by the sexton, lying at the foot of the steps of the altar. Suspicion points to a certain Theador K., a native of Poland, a shoemaker of the church.

The late Duke of Northumberland's personal and funded property of which he died possessed within the province of Canterbury alone has been valued at £160,000, and the executors have paid to the Stamp-office the sum of £1100 on the probate

The Prussian State Gazette announces the discovery, in the library of the Ossolinski at Lemberg, of a fragment of the history of Trogus Pompeius. This manuscript, which treats of it yria and the war against the Dacians, has created considerable interest amongst the German philologists and geographers

On Monday, between eleven and twelve o'clock, the turf and fancy fair at Hastings-in-Sussex was discovered to be on fire. A body of police and a great number of persons were promptly on the spot, and succeeded in stopping the flames chiefly by clearing a space round the burning portion. As soon, parts were cut off in the same time it is supposed it had been set fire to wilfully.

Several successful experiments have been recently made in France on the etherisation of bees, so as to be able to take their honey whilst they are in a state of inaction, without the necessity of destroying their lives

A few days ago the Prussian Ambassador at the Court of Bavaria, on his return to Munich from the Franzenbrunn, discovered that during his absence his house had been robbed of plate, &c., to the value of 70,000f.

The Secretaryship of Hull, vacant by the resignation of Matthew Talbot Baines, Esq., M.P., has been conferred upon Thomas C. Granger, Esq., M.P. for Durham

John Ramsay, who has been several times examined at Clerkenwell, on a police-court, charged, on his own confession, with the wilful murder of Mr. H. Williams, was, on Tuesday, after an investigation of much of the evidence given on former occasions, fully committed for trial.

A vessel has arrived at Gravesend with an entire cargo of lobsters, from Bergen, in Norway, and has also brought three horses, an unusual article of import from that country

Letters from Athens, of the 20th ult., announce that the Greek Chambers were to meet on the 22nd inst., and that, although M. Coletti would have a majority of two-thirds in the Chamber of Deputies, there was a misgiving that he would not be able to maintain himself in office. One source of difficulty to him was the still unsettled relations between Greece and Turkey, added to which the Porte was not in the British Government was determined to exact the full amount of the interest of the debt now due, and the future instalments as they shall become due

The ship Ellenborough, which sailed on Monday for Calcutta and the Cape of Good Hope, took out upwards of £100,000 in specie on account of the Government. This shipment has most probably been rendered necessary by the expenses of the Kaffir war at the Cape.

A Court of Directors was held at the East India House, on Wednesday, when the Earl of Dalhousie was appointed Governor-General of India, and Major-General the Right Hon. Sir Henry Pottinger, Bart., G.C.B., Governor of Madras.

Accounts from Constantinople, of the 20th ult., announce the overthrow of Mehemet Ali Pacha, the brother-in-law of the Sultan, and Grand Admiral, who has been replaced by Halil Pacha, a supporter of the present Government. The ex-Admiral was accused of peculation to a great extent.

A few days ago a large meteor, in the form of a globe, with a long train of fire, was seen near Carlsbad. On the same day an aerolite fell at Canana, after an explosion like that of a cannon. The aerolite had the appearance of a mass of cast iron

A person named Felix Jarratt was charged before the magistrate at Hastings, on Sunday, with having given a bribe to Stephen Davies, a broker, at the late election in that town, for the purpose of inducing him to vote for Messrs. Brisco and Robertson. Instead, however, of voting as asked, Davies gave information of the alleged bribery, and Jarratt was arrested on a warrant. The case has been sent for trial to the assizes.

A slight shock of earthquake was felt last week at Aix, (France.) It was of a very short duration, and caused no damage.

The highest price at which American flour has been this year, was 54s per barrel, which is about 100 per cent above what it was last year. At present it is about 30s.

By an official document it is shown that in five years to 1826 there were 8267 persons convicted and executed, and 807 were executed; in the next five years, 7077 persons were convicted, and 324 executed; in the next, 3877, out of which 175 were executed; in the next, 767, out of which 44 were executed; and in the five years ending 1846, the convictions were 346, and the executions 36.

At Barnstaple, in Devonshire, on the announcement of the poll last week, there were three votes for Sir Bruce Chichester; a solitary one for the Duke of Cleveland (the announcement of which caused no little merriment) for Pope Pius the Ninth

Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton has just placed himself under the care of Dr. Edward Johnson, at the Hydropathic Establisement, Umberslade, near Birmingham.

Mr. A. Stafford O'Brien, the member for North Northamptonshire, has assumed the name of "Stafford," so as to be now Mr. Augustus Stafford.

A monster pleasure train from Edinburgh and Glasgow, the first that has ever taken place from Scotland to London, arrived on Wednesday at noon with upwards of 600 persons, who appeared greatly delighted with the trip.

It is stated in a letter from Cadiz that two piratical vessels have been fitted out at Tetuan, and are now cruising under command of a notorious pirate, named Maddu Ali.

From a Parliamentary document, printed within the last few days, it appears that in the two years ending on the 31st of December, 1844, the committals on criminal charges numbered 56,183, and in the two subsequent years 49,441—a thus showing a difference, in the two years, of 6,723 committals.

Some of the papers have given an account of the execution of a woman named Mary Milner, at Lincoln, yesterday week. The execution, however, did not take place. The unfortunate woman hung herself in her cell a few hours before the appointed time. An inquest was held on the body on the following day, and a verdict of felo de se was returned

A report has been in circulation in the City during the week, to the effect that, after all, Sir G. Larpent is a member for London, and not Mr. Masterman, there being an error in the poll-books.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"S. B.," Hull.—In a work so restricted in size, there must needs be many omissions. Whether the one spoken of occurs we cannot say, not having a copy of the volume to refer to.

"W. A. C." The Black King is in check, and he must be moved, or a man interposed, or the checking piece captured.

"Muff." No correction will be made till a second edition is published, and all applications on the subject should be addressed to the publisher of the work.

"A Young Chess-Player." We cannot understand the question. Send a diagram of the position alluded to.

"G. A. H." Having resigned the game, Black cannot demand its renewal. That would be as bad as retracting a move.

"J. T." Solutions of Enigmas 179 and 181 will be found in our last Number. Those of 174 and 175, both which positions we warrant to be correct, you must again endeavour to discover. No one can hope to make any figure as a Chess-player who "gives up" Problems three and four moves deep only

"B. O. T. C. H."—1. There is no law to prevent a person fingering the squares while calculating his move, but it is a very bad habit, and one which should be got rid of as soon as possible. 2. Consult the new "Handbook." 3. While your opponent retains his hold of the piece, he is at liberty to play it to any square he chooses

"Carolus." The Match between Mr. Harwicke and Mr. Medley has terminated in favour of the former, who won eleven games to his adversary's seven.

"J. C. T.," Midhurst.—Join the Brighton Chess Club. A note directed to the Honorary Secretary, Dr. Turner, 20, Regency-square, will obtain you the entrée.

"H——y G.," Hastings.—Lord Hervey and Captain Pechell, the two members for the town, are members of the Brighton Chess Club. Captain Kennedy is President. There is no Chess Club at Lewes.

"J. Mc. Combe." You should address the Publisher, Mr. H. Bohn, of Covent-garden.

"S.," Enfield. Give up all idea of composing Chess Problems until you have devoted two or three years to the study of the most famous masters in this department of the game. At present you have no conception of what constitutes a clever stratagem at Chess.

"Melo." The pamphlet of Games between Messrs. Stanley and Rousseau, together with Volume 7 of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle," are obtainable at the Office of the latter.

"Druid."—If published in a single volume, the Games and Problems given in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS during the last two years, would form a remarkably valuable collection of Chess curiosities

"Eboracum." Hardly subtle enough for our column, yet not without promise. Try again, remembering—"Ars consummata celare artem videtur."

"S.," Dublin Chess Club.—The games shall have early publicity.

"Ove."—Judging by the intelligence of your "criticisms and expositions," we should say no appellanon could be more appropriate than the one you have adopted.

"Phiz."—The quarterly subscription to the "Chess-Player's Chronicle" is only 4*s. 4d., postage included. We thank Mr. Horwitz the better player, but he has little time for practice, and is very deficient in nerve.*

"A. B. C."—We believe it is Mr. Lewis's intention to publish another edition of his "Second Series of Lessons," shortly.

"R. F. W."—Mr. G. Perigal is the Honorary Secretary of the London Chess Club, and one of the most accomplished Chess-players of the day.

"M. R." Your solution of the Indian Problem is right.

Solutions by "G. A. H.," "Sopracliffe," "Phiz," "Dombey," "J. D. C.," "M. T.," "Templar," "Rugby," and "Eboracum," are correct.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM NO. 184.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. B to Kt 6th	K to Kt 4th or (a)	3. Q to K 4th	P takes B
2. Q to K Kt 3d (ch)	K to R 3d or (b)	4. Q mates

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1.	(a) P takes B	1.	(b) K to B 4th
2. Q to her 5th		2. K to Q 6th	P takes B
And mates next move.		3. Q mates

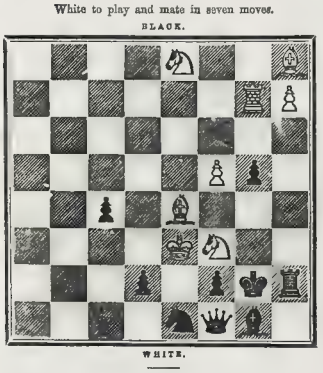
PROBLEM, NO. 185.

By HERR HANSTEIN.

(From the Berlin Schachzeitung.)

White to play and mate in seven moves.

BLACK.



WHITE.

CHESS IN GERMANY.

MR. HANSTEIN GIVES THE QUEEN'S ROOK TO A MEMBER OF THE BERLIN CHESS CIRCLE.

(Remove White's Q's R from the board),

WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. S.)	WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. S.)
1. K P two	K P two	17. B to Q 5th	P takes P
2. K B P two	P takes P	18. P takes P	B to K Kt 2d (b)
3. K B to Q B 4th	Q checks	19. P to K 6th	P takes P
4. K to B sq	K Kt P two	20. Q to her 3d -	K Kt to K 4th
5. Q Kt to B 3d	K Kt to K 2d (a)	21. R takes Kt	B takes R
6. Q P one	Q P one	22. Q to K Kt 6th (ch)	K to his 2d
7. K Kt to B 3d	Q to K R 4th	23. Q B takes P	B takes B
8. K R P two	Q B to K Kt 5th	24. Kt takes B	Kt to Q B 4th
9. K B to K 2d	K B P one	25. Q to K Kt 7th (ch)	K to Q 3d
10. K to his Kt sq	B takes Kt	26. B to K B 3d	Q to K Kt 4th
11. B takes B	Q to K Kt 3d	27. Kt to K 4th	Q to K 6th (ch)
12. P takes P	Q takes P	28. K to R 2d	Kt to K 5th (c)
13. Kt to K 2d	Kt to K Kt 3d	29. Q to K 7th (ch)	K to B 3d
14. Kt to K R 5th	Q to K B 3d	30. Q takes K P (ch)	K to Q Kt 4th
15. P one	Q to her sq	31. B takes Kt	Q to her R 4th
16. B takes Q Kt P	Q Kt to Q 2d	32. B to Q 3d (ch)	And wins.

(a) The accepted move at this stage is—5. K B to K Kt 3d

(b) B to Q B 4th (ch appears a better move

(c) Black should now have played K B to K sq.

CHESS IN AMERICA.

GAME BETWEEN TWO OF THE STRONGEST PLAYERS IN PHILADELPHIA.

(From Stanley's American Chess Magazine.

WHITE (Mr. T.)	BLACK (Mr V.)	WHITE (Mr. T.)	BLACK (Mr. D.)
1. K P two	K P two	15. K Kt to Q 4th	Q takes Q B
2. K B P two	P takes P	16. K B takes K B P	Q to K 3d
3. K B to Q B 4th	Q (ch)	17. K Kt to K 6th (ch)	K to Q B sq
4. K to B sq	K Kt P two	18. Q Kt to Q 5th	Q takes Q Kt P (a)
5. Q P two	Q P one	19. B takes Kt	Q Kt to B 3d (b)
6. Q Kt to B 3d	K B to Kt 2d	20. Q R to Kt sq	Q takes Q R P
7. K Kt to B 3d	Q to K 4th	21. Q Kt to K 7th, ch (c)	Kt takes Kt
8. K P one	P takes P	22. K Kt to Q B 5th (d)	B to Q 5th (ch)
9. Q Kt to Q b3th	K to Q sq	23. Q takes B (e)	Q takes B P (ch)
10. P takes P	Q B to Q 2d	24. K to his sq	Q takes R (ch)
11. K B P one	Q to K Kt 3d	25. K to Q 2d	Q to K B 4th
12. Q B to Q 3d	K R P one	26. Q takes R	Q to K Kt 4th (ch)
13. Q B to Q Kt 4th	K Kt P one	27. K to his 2nd	Q takes B
14. Q Kt takes Gambit P	Q to her Kt 3d (ch)	White wins.

(a) Q to her 3rd would have been better play In that case, if White had been led to take the Q B P with either of his Knights he must have lost a piece.

(b) Had he taken the B with R, or the R with his Q, he would have been mated on the move.

(c) This sacrifice is well conceived.

(d) The attack looks formidable, but Black has still a wave of resource, which relieves him from all danger.

(e) He has no better move.

CHESS IN FRANCE.

GAME BETWEEN MR. KIESERITZKY AND M. DELANNOY,

The former playing another Game at the same time, and both Games without seeing the Chess-board.

WHITE (Mr. D.)	BLACK (Mr. K.)	WHITE (Mr. D.)	BLACK (Mr. K.)
1. K P two	K P two	25. Kt to K 3d 6th	B to K Kt 2d
2. Q P two	P takes P	26. Q Kt to K Kt 4th	B to K Kt 2d
3. K Kt to B 3d	Q B P two	27. K R P one	Q to K 2d
4. B to Q B 4th	Q Kt P two	28. Q Kt to K 3d	Q P one
5. K B to Q 5th (a)	Q Kt to B 3d	29. Q Kt to Q 5th	Q P one
6. Q B P one	P takes P	30. Q to her 2d	Q to her B 4th
7. Q Kt P takes P	Q R to Kt sq	31. Kt takes R	B takes K P
8. Castles	K Kt to B 3d	32. Q R to Q Kt sq	B takes K P
9. K Kt to K sq (b)	K B to K 2d	33. Q to K R 6th	Kt to K B sq
10. B to K Kt 5th	Castles	34. Kt to his 4th (d)	B to K Kt 2d
11. Q B takes K Kt	B takes B	35. Kt the K B P (ch)	K to Kt sq
12. K P one	K B to K 2d	36. Q to K B 4th	Q P one
13. Q Kt to Q 2d	Q B to Kt 3d	37. K to B sq	Q to K 2d (e)
14. Q Kt to K 4th	Q B to Kt 3d	38. Kt to K 5th (f)	B takes Kt
15. Q to her 3d	Q to her Kt sq	39. Q to K 4th	B takes Q B P
16. Q Kt to K Kt 3d	Kt to Q sq	40. K B P one	Q takes Q
17. Q Kt to B 5th	K R to K sq	41. R takes Q	R takes R
18. K R to K 4th	B takes B	42. P takes R	P to Q Kt 5th
19. Q takes B	Q to her Kt 2d	43. K to his 2d	Kt to K 3d
20. Q to her 3d (c)	Q B P one	44. K P one	Kt to Q 5th (ch)
21. Q to her B 2d	Kt to K 3d	45. K to his 3d	Kt to Q Kt 4th
22. R to K Kt 4th	K to R sq	46. K to his 4th	B to Q Kt 7th
23. Q R to K sq	B to K B sq	47. K to Q 5th	B to Q B 6th
24. K R to R 4th	K Kt P one

And Black wins.

(a) He must obviously lose a piece by taking the Pawn.

(b) A good move. If Black now takes the B he would lose two pieces in return.

(c) White might now have gained a Pawn by taking the Bishop (ch), and then the Q B P

(d) This move loses the game

(e) All this is very cleverly conducted by the unseeing player.

(f) Disastrous as this is, he has no better way to prolong the game.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

(WITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.)

No. 188.—By HERR KLING.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q B 5th	K at his 4th	K at K B sq	Q 5th, and Q B 5th
B at K B 8th	P's at K R 6th, K B 5th, K 6th,	P's at K R 2d, K Kt 4th, & K B 2d
Kt at K R 6th	White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 189.—By MR. S. BODEN.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q 6th	K at Q 6th	B at Q 2d
Kt at Q B 4th	P's at K B 2d, K 3rd and 4th	P's at K B 5th, K 4th, Q 5th, Q Kt 2d & 3d
B at Q sq	White, playing first, can mate in five moves.

No. 190.—By the SAME.

(From an actual end game.)

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q R 2d	K at his Kt sq	Kt at K B 7th	Kt at Q 4th
R at K R sq	R at K B sq	and K 4th	P's at K B 2d, K Kt 2d, & K B 3d
R at Q Kt sq	R at K 2d	P at Q B 2d
B at K R 8th	B at Q B 6th

White to play, and mate in five moves.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Carry on, carry on; roof none, boys, none;
Hang her out on a flowing sail.
Gunnel is, gunnel is, for the race we'll win,
While the lad-bubbers go pale
Are frubbing at their paints, no, no,
For fear of the coming gale.

The metropolis has left town; a portion of it for the Continent; a part for their own good halls; many for the coast; some for the ocean itself. For these latter appropriate reception is made, according to their respective tastes. The merely miscellaneous, "after bathing in the sea," return to such attacks upon the enemy as watering places furnish means for, killing time, or fencing with it —anything to be rid on't. The yachting people are, especially, in their element; here cruising about, and discussing four luncheons a-day; there inwardly contending for such prizes as the various sea clubs offer to the emulation of the amateur mariner. These, passing strange to say, are more plentiful than champions. The last regatta of the Royal Thames Yacht Club was a failure, for lack of vessels to sail in it; and, many of the crack cups offered by the coast clubs have been turned over to next season, the entries for them not having filled. The apathy of the sailors for such contests is extraordinary; for, of all the soul-stirring things in the world, is sailing a match in a craft of which you are "all as one as a part." Compare a schooner-race, with a sparkling breeze, round the Wight, to a passage of book-making at Hyde-park Corner—nectar to the basest of bass swipes! To say nothing of the risk, imagine a man backing one horse against the field at these presents for the Leger, and then speaking of the Goodwin sands or the needles as points of peril.

Turning tail on Tattersall's and gulping down by anticipation the elixir of life which forms the atmosphere of the silver Solent—we bent our way for Gosport—what time the first letter in the of the South Western departed thitherward on the first day of this instant week. From Spithead to Cowes Castle was one fleet of yachts of all sorts, from all directions, and on all kinds of things intent. At Portsmouth there was a regatta afloat and a pleasure fair ashore; the latter indeed on South Sea Common where an amount of fun and frolic was under way, of which your inland districts have no idea. The sailing, it must be admitted, was not of a very high degree—so we pass over to Ryde, a place having a pier which carries its passengers out to sea—with this eminent advantage, that they run no hazard of discomposing their stomachs. It was as full as Drury-lane used to be on "Boxing" night. You were lucky if you found a table—or a place of one, at the Pier Hotel. We say you were lucky, for there you fell in with good cheer and agreeable gossip. You heard, perseverture, the last news from Russia—how the St. Petersburgh yachtsmen recently celebrated the Autocratical regatta whereat the noble schooner of the Czar—lately built and sent out by White, of Cowes, was beaten by the Ranadeer, a cutter that couldn't "move" at home. How at Chubourgh, the Tremi and the Lily of Devon—barks of high renown in their native waters—met for the Cup, and the latter was awarded the prize forsuntch as the former "fouil'd her whisker," and similar nonsense of magnitude knowledge. And on Wednesday you passed over to Southampton Water, whereupon the Southern Yacht Club that day opened their sports. The Earl of Cardigan had just been elected Commodore by acclamation; by some mischance, however, his flag did not brave the breeze, notwithstanding the Secretary took the trouble of carrying it all the way to Portsmouth to present it to its noble proprietor.

The Royal pier was a galaxy of beauty and fashion, and only for the ubiquitous Gent, who smoked the genuine Whitechapel cheroots, it would have been perfect. The Club House was gorgeous with bunting, as many-hued as the rainbow; and the flag-bedecked vessels in the rivers and the docks quietly added to the effect of the pageant.

The sailing was to have commenced in the forenoon, but it didn't—which, to be sure, is nothing new in the matter of yacht-sailing. There was "A Silver Tea Kettle and Stand," for schooners, of any tonnage, belonging to the Royal Southampton Yacht Club, which didn't fill —the match, not the tea-kettle; and a Silver Cup, for cutters not exceeding sixteen tons, O. M., which was similarly situated. The chief event of the day was the race for a Silver Cup, value £40, for cutters, of not less than thirty nor more than fifty tons. The Eclipse, Hermione, and *Dart*ng, started in the order aforesaid, with what is professionally termed "a soldier's wind;" a sky influence, whereby vessels are enabled to run both out and in again. This, as the breeze was lively, was a very animating contest, ending as the wager craft are placed.

The Eclipse thus won her maiden race, beating, by a minute and a half, the fastest boat—up to that time in our amateur marine. The Hermione has beaten the Ariadne squal main and chance—and was booked as the invincible. They said it was her first defeat; but hadn't she once before the worst of it—at Plymouth? Three also started for a Silver Salver, namely—the Zuleika, Snake, and Little Harum. The first of the trio was the victor, in a very dashing style. On time race, for a Piece of Plate, the Don Juan won, beating the Enchantress and the Pet; but for the most part the third vessels were only put in to fill according to the conditions. Which said, "three yachts or no race." The Regatta ball at the Club House in the evening—a very pretty affair—all streamers and ladies fair; and, though the second day dawned "heavily with clouds," and warned us to make our adieu, the water board was astir with demonstrations of a second gala.

BRIGHTON RACES. WEDNESDAY.

The Pavilion Stakes of 30 sovs each, 20 ft; for two yr old colts, 8st 7lb; and fillies, 8st 3lb; winners of a sweeps of 200 sovs value, 5lb extra; twice, 7lb extra. T.Y.C. (8 Subs.)

Mr. R. H. Neville's Dover	..	..	(J. Matson) 1
Duke of Richmond's Reflection	..	..	.. (Nat) 2
Count Bathyany's Egremont	..	..	.. (Mann) 3

The Brighton Stakes of 25 sovs each, 12 ft, and 5 only if declared, with 100 added; the second to save his stake. The Old Course, two miles. (26 Subs., 23 of whom declared.)

Lord Stradbroke's Lyncens, 4 yrs, 8st 7lb	..	..	(F. Butler) 1
Lord Chesterfield's f by Don John, out of Game Lass, 3 yrs, 7st 10lb			2
Sir J. Hawley's Vanity, 3 yrs, 7st 6lb	..	..	.. 3

The Town Plate of £50, added to a sweepstakes of 5 sovs each; for three-yr-olds, 7st 4lb; four, 8st 7lb; five, 9st 1lb; six and aged, 9st 4lb, &c.; the winner to be sold for £250, &c. Heats, the New Course

Mr. Gratwicke's Lady Cecilia, 4 yrs, 7st 12lb	..	(Nat)	2 1 1
Mr. G. Hobson's Chatham, 5 yrs, 9st 11lb	..	(Crouch)	1 3 2
Mr. Bond's Cast-off, 3 yrs, 6st 6lb	..	.. (Planner)	3 2 dis

The Marine Stakes of five Sovereigns each, with 40 added; three-yr-olds, 7st 5lb; four, 8st 5lb; five and upwards, 8st 12lb; the winner to be sold for £100, &c. Heats, one mile.

Mr. Shelley's Millwood, 3 yrs, 7st 5lb	..	.. (Mann)	1 1
Mr. G. Hobson's Blanacle, 4 yrs, 8st 5lb	..	..(Crouch)	4 2
Mr. Worley's Headsman, 4 yrs, 8st 4lb	..	.. (Sly)	2 3

THURSDAY.

The Selling Stakes of 15 sovs each, 5 ft, and 25 added, for two-yr-olds, 7st 8lb; three, 9st. The winner to be sold for £200, &c. T.Y.C. (4 Subs.)

Mr. Worley's Caversham, 2 yrs, 6st 9lb	..	(Hornsby, Jun.)	0 1
Duke of Richmond's Outpost, 3 yrs, 8st 4lb	..	(Nat)	0 2
Mr. Osbaldeston's b by Lanercost, out of Mountain Sylph's dam, 2 yrs, 6st 4lb	..	.. (Prince)	0 3
Her Majesty's Plate of One Hundred Guineas. Heats. Two miles.
Lord Stradbroke's Lyncens, 4 yrs, 8st	..	.. (Butler)	1 1
Mr. Montyn's King of Morven, 3 yrs, 7st 3lb	..	(Kinclaner)	2 3
Mr. Elwes's Miss Ellis, 5 yrs, 9st 2lb	..	(A. Day)	3 3

The Tradesmen's Plate, by subs of £3 each, with 30 added; three-yr-olds, 7st 4lb; four, 8st 5lb; five, 8st 9lb, &c. Heats, One Mile. (10 Subs.)

Mr Meiklam's Duncan, 3 yrs	..	(Watkins)	0 0 1 1
Mr. Osbaldeston's Sis. to Sorolla, 3 yrs	..	.. (Prince)	3 1 0 2
Mr. Winch's Comedy, 3 yrs	..	(Gs. Brown)	1 0 0 3

The South Down Stakes of 10 sovs each, h ft, and 25 added; gentlemen riders. Heats, the New Course. (6 Subs.)

Mr. Elwes's Massender, 4 yrs, 11st 4lb	..	.. (Owner)	1
Mr. Hobson's Bunnacle, 4 yrs, 10st 4lb	..	..	2
Count Bathyany's Master Stephen, 5 yrs, 11st	..	..	3

Mr. Elwes's Massender, gentlemen riders. Mr. Matthew's Outcast, 10st 7lb (Mr. P. Rolt), beat Mr. Hobson's Craven, 11st.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—The badness of the settling for Goodwood Races prevented any extensive betting on future events; indeed, it was with some difficulty that we gathered the following brief list of prices:

	KROH HANDICAP.
4 to 1 agst Mathematician	8 to 1 agst Sir Martin	10 to 1 agst Grimston
7 to 1 agst Lunatione	8 to 1 agst Jerry
	ST. LEGER
Even on Cossack	12 to 1 agst Van Tromp	20 to 1 agst Forcelopine
7 to 2 agst Lord Eglinton's two (taken)	15 to 1 —— Planet (t)	1000 to 15 —— Red Hart (t)
7 to 1 —— Eryx	15 to 1 —— Sir Martin	1000 to 15 —— Liberator (t)

THAMES GRAND REGATTA.—SATURDAY, JULY 31.

On Saturday afternoon the river presented an extremely animated appearance, and thousands had assembled on the water, and the banks on either side, to witness the races, which came off as follow:—The Amateur Pair-oar Match, for the Presentation Silver Cups, was won by Messrs. Fothergill and Gregory, College of Civil Engineers.

The Tradesmen's Challenge Plate was won by the Lambeth Aquatic Club.

The Watermen's Scullers Match, for money prizes, was very spiritedly and severely contested. The first heat was won by R. Dowsden, the second by T. Coombes, and the final heat by R. Doubledee, who won by about ten lengths.

The Amateur Eight-oar Match, for the Gold Challenge Cup, value 130 guineas, was contested by the Thames Club and the Eton. It was evident in a very short time that the Etonians had no chance whatever. They were easily beaten by their more experienced competitors.

DOGGETT'S COAT AND BADGE.

The competitors for this race were, as usual, young watermen, whose term of apprenticeship had expired since the last year's race, and the distance, as usual, from the Swan, at London-bridge, to the Swan, at Chelsea, against tide. They came in in the following order:—

William H. Ellis, Westminster	..	..	.. 1
John H. Dewey, Rotherhithe	..	..	.. 2
J. H. Kane, Old Barge House	..	..	.. 3
Richard James Mee, Greenwich	..	..	.. 0
T. J. Williamson, Somer's Quay	..	..	.. 0
William Perry, Lambeth	..	..	.. 0

HAVRE REGATTA.

Havre Regatta took place yesterday week. The following races came off: -

The Pleasure Boats' Prize; an object of art; value 1000 francs, or £50; six competitors. Gained by the sloop Horace Vernet, belonging to Mr Car

The Second Course for Row Boats; five competitors; prize given by his Royal Highness the Prince de Joinville of 1000 francs. Gained by the Carmar Delaware, rowed by Butler, of Gosport. Every prize offered by the Prince has been won by the English.

Decked Sailing Boats; six competitors. Gained by the Hirondelle. Prize of 1000 francs, given by the town.

The Course for Amateurs; five competitors. Prizes given by the Society; objects of art; value 1100 francs. Won by La Petite Rouge. Patron, M. de Tourville.

Sailing Boats Not Decked; fifteen competitors. Won by English boat Alarm, belonging to John Main; value, 800 francs.

Whaling Boats; five competitors; prizes given by the Caen Steam-boat Company, 800 francs. Won by Butler, of Gosport, in the Bernardine, St. Pierre.

This closed the Regatta, in which, of six boats, the English gained three.

CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE THAMES.—The great contest, for the silver sculls, the symbol of championship amongst gentlemen amateurs, came off on Tuesday. The distance was, as usual, from Westminster-bridge to Putney; and the start was, as heretofore, caused the most lively interest, Mr. Walmsley being the favourite. The match was won by Mr. Walmsley, with great ease, by nearly half a mile. The umpire couched his decision on the race in the following words:—"The umpire, in deciding that Mr. Walmsley has won the silver sculls, remarks that he has highly to deprecate the conduct of his two accompanying boats, chiefly occasioned by watermen, who manifestly prejudiced the other competitors; further, the umpire has to protest against gentlemen rowing for the silver sculls taking their competitors' water too soon; and adds, that he awards the prize, not having seen any such intentional fouling as is mentioned in the articles."

CRICKET. KENT v. ENGLAND. This interesting match was on Wednesday brought to a conclusion, Kent winning by three wickets. The score stood thus: —England, 1st innings, 67; second, 184; total, 221. Kent, 1st innings, 171; second, 53; total, 224.

EXHIBITION OF DOMESTIC POULTRY, &c.,

AT THE GARDENS OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY, REGENT'S PARK.

It seems strange that so important a source of profit and food, as Domestic Poultry, should have been entirely overlooked, while science, wealth, and aristocratic influence, have long united all their resources to aid practical skill in perfecting the breeds of almost every other domestic animal. So long ago as 1835, France exported into England upward of 76 millions of eggs; and Ireland is beginning to learn how easily and advantageously she may supply the manufactories of Manchester, in which the albumen, the white of egg, is used to glaze cotton goods. From the port of Derry alone, the average export of eggs is 90 tons per week, during the season; these are collected at the rate of 3d. to 4d. per dozen from the peasantry, who may thus increase their comforts, or supply their necessities without at all interfering with their daily labour. So great is the effect of an improvement of the breed of fowl on the quality as well as quantity of the eggs, that the value of eggs in a district in Ireland has been raised 1d. per dozen by the distribution of the produce of a single Dorking hen.

The encouragement, and incentive to, and opportunities for, competition, which have been so beneficial to the breeds of other animals, have at length been supplied where so much needed, to the breeders of poultry, by the Zoological Society of London. This society annually prizes for Domestic Fowls, Bantams, Turkeys, Pigeons, Pheasants, Ducks and Geese; and for any gallinaceous birds, or water-fowl not hitherto bred in this country.

To increase the resources of domestic economy, and of commerce, by acclimatising and introducing among animals appropriated of old by man, others, at present unreclaimed, was one of the objects for which the Zoological Society was originally formed.

The Annual Show took place at the Gardens in the Regent's Park, last week. We have engraved the most striking Prizes

In Class 2, Mr. Sphyens exhibited a very remarkable Cambridge Turkey, a beautiful bird of immense size, which well deserved the first prize, which was awarded for it. Mr. Jamrach's large Spanish Runts, weighing 4½ lbs. each, and also prized, were very large specimens of the well-known and handsome breed. The show of Ducks was very good. Mr. Weston, of Oxford-road, Aylesbury, obtained a second prize by his excellent lot of Aylesbury Ducks; and a prize was also given for a very large Cayuga breed known as the Labrador Duck. A first prize was awarded for a very large and fine Goose from the Shannon, sent by Mr. Nolan, of Dublin. It is gratifying to find that the benefits of these exhibitions extend so directly to land, when the increasing of poultry as to secure a regularly important. In Class 8, no less than four kinds of Birds were shown, not hitherto bred in this country, three of which received first prizes. One was the wild American Turkey, bred by Mr. Thompson, of Knowsley, a splendid bird of excellent points and magnificent plumage. The judges considered that the domesticated breeds might be very advantageously crossed with this original stock; and if it be true that the wild birds are sometimes shot as much as 40 lbs. in weight, a report which there is in the English specimen exhibited everything to confirm, the introduction of this American bird must be most important. The Oronoco Geese to have been appreciated, and, as far as might be in so short a time, answered. For the most approved sorts, the Dorking, Surrey, Sussex, and Kent, formed a much larger part of this than of former Shows; and the improvement in size, quality, and purity of breed, formed from the judges a very decided expression of approbation. The present show has, too, an advantage gained over preceding ones—by being fixed later in the Season—in containing numerous lots of chickens of the present year. The coops exhibited by Mr. Spriggens, of Leadenhall Market, were remarkably fine, to one of which—perhaps the best lot shown of any sort—as no reward had been offered for birds of 1847, an extra first prize was awarded; and an extra second prize to Mr Baker, of Chelsea, for a lot of Dorking. The first and second prizes of the class containing Dorking, Surrey, Sussex, and Kent fowls, were obtained by two lots of splendid birds, bred by Mr. Lowry, of Cuckfield, Sussex. Only a second prize was awarded the Hamburg fowls, for a lot shown by Mr. Baker. The show of Spanish was not so good as usual. A second prize was given for Mr. Baker's black Polish, and a first prize for his very fine lot of Malays, the hens in which were highly commanded by the judges. No Bantams were exhibited which deserved a first prize; a second prize was given for Mr. Baker's lot of black.

PRIZE POULTRY, ETC., AT THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY'S GARDENS.

AYLESBURY DUCKS.—2ND PRIZE, MR. WESTON. IRISH GOOSE, FROM THE SHANNON.—1ST PRIZE, MR. NOLAN. ORONOCO GOOSE.—1ST PRIZE, MR. THOMPSON.

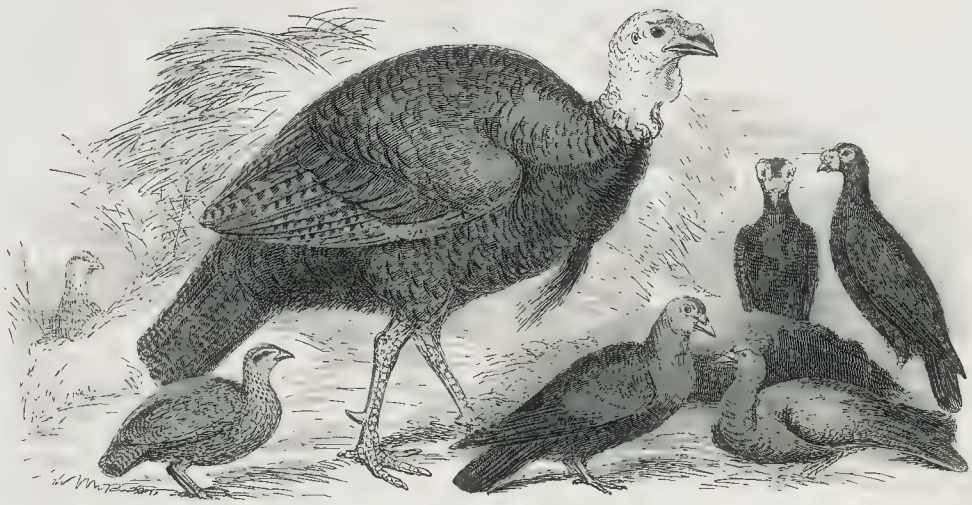
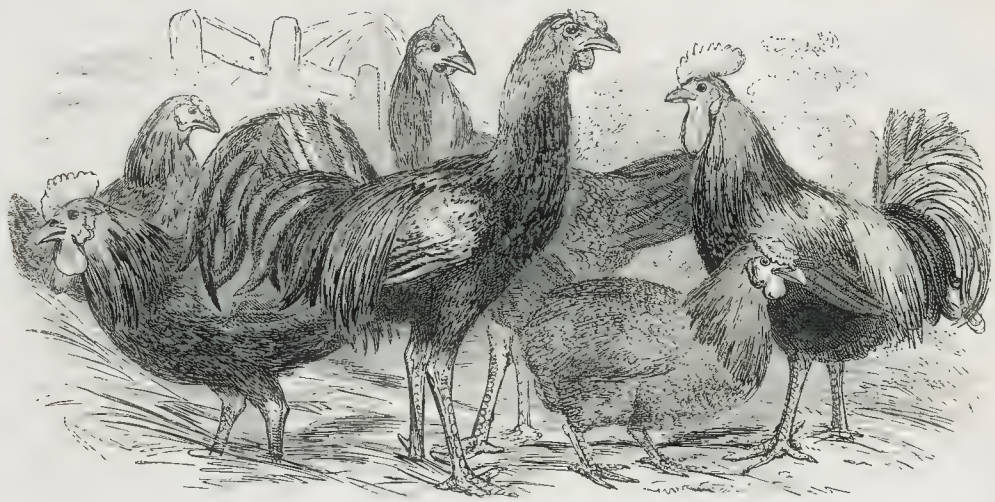
We are happy to find that very nearly all the best birds in the show have been sold. Altogether, there appears much to congratulate the Society upon; not only from the present good arising, but from the promise of greater benefit in future years.



CLAPPERTON PARTRIDGES.—1ST PRIZE, MR. THOMPSON. WILD TURKEY.—1ST PRIZE, MR. THOMPSON. LEGHORN PIGEONS.—2ND PRIZE, MR. JAMRACH. BLACK CARRIER PIGEON.—1ST PRIZE, MR. J. ENAGGS.



KENT FOWLS.—1ST PRIZE, MR. SPRIGENS. MALAY FOWLS.—1ST PRIZE, MR. BAKER. OLD SUSSEX FOWLS.—1ST PRIZE, MR. LEWRY.

OYSTER DREDGING IN WHITSTABLE BAY.—DRAWN BY DUNCAN.

OYSTER DREDGING.

The excellence of the Oysters of Britain is of ancient celebrity. The old Roman epicure knew their value (Juvenal iv., 140), nor have they lost their fame in modern times.

THE DREDGE.

The London consumption of Oysters, at this day, is immense; and, Mr. Duncan has taken one of the great nurseries or feeding grounds for its supply, as the locality of the accompanying beautiful Illustration. The scene is an estuary of the Thames, known as Whitstable Bay, a few miles east of which lies the new watering-place, Herne Bay. The inhabitants of Whitstable are chiefly employed in the Oyster Fishery, which is regulated by laws made by a Company of Free Fishermen and Free Dredgermen. The practice is for each boat in the Fishery, according to its tonnage, to contribute a certain quota of Oysters to a boat stationed in the centre of the Bay, for their reception. The fish are taken by an iron dredge (See the Engraving), let down from the boat, whilst sailing; and before the dredge is hauled up, the boat lies to. In Whitstable Bay, round the rock called the "Pudding Pan," is a noted place for dredging; and here have been found many pieces of Roman pottery; thus carrying the mind's eye back to the days when poor Britain enjoyed but an ostreal fame.

The Oyster-Dredging season has just commenced; though this information may be superfluous to any one who traversed the streets of London on Wednesday, the 4th—"Oyster Day," as it is called in the calendar of Cockneydom.

MURDER AT GREENHITHE. On the evening of Saturday last, between seven and eight o'clock, Greenhithe was alarmed by the report that a man had been killed, which was very shortly found to be too true. The murdered man, it appears, had come across the water from Essex, harvesting, and in a state of intoxication lay down in the road to sleep, near the turning from Greenhithe to the London-road. Dawes, a contractor on the London and Rochester railroad, was riding to Dartford from Greenhithe; his horse, it is said, was frightened by the man lying in the road, and refused to pass, when it was put back by the rider, and high words ensued between the two men. Dawes attempted to ride over the other man, but failed in doing so, the horse refusing to proceed. Dawes then dismounted, and with the handle of his whip commenced beating the poor fellow on the ground, and after a very few blows (some say two or three) it was found the man was a corpse. Dawes then mounted his horse and galloped away, but was quickly followed by a mounted coast-guard officer, who was passing, and overtook him at Galley-hill, where he was taken into custody, and lodged in the lock-up at Dartford

"PASSAGE OF ARMS" AT WILLIS'S ROOMS.

This noble fencing assaut was given on Thursday week, in Willis's Rooms, St. James's, in the presence of a numerous and highly respectable company, by Signor Gandini, from Milan; and Monsieur Léon Gillemand, from Paris. Both these professors have shown themselves to be profound adepts in the noble art of Fencing. In all the attacks and defences, they maintained the steadiness, dignity, and distances required by the theoretical rules of the science. Signor Gandini developed a muscular energy far superior to his delicate appearance, and a rapidity in his movements really astonishing. Monsieur Léon, on the contrary, is a firmly-built man, and solid on his guard: he sustained all the attacks with great coolness, and showed himself worthy a competitor to his redoubted adversary.

There were several assauts, besides that depicted in our Illustration. The bénéficiaires, Mr. Shury (an excellent English Professor), and Messrs. Chapman and James Tenniel (amateurs), severally contended, and displayed peculiar science and skill in the use of the small sword. A sabre assault, between Mons. Léon and Signor Gandini, concluded the entertainment. We almost imagined ourselves to be really witnessing a duel. The sabres were not imitated, in the form of sticks, but were in solid wrought iron; and the "fendents and tranchants" followed each other, and were parried with remarkable celerity and skill by the two antagonists. The talent which Signor Gandini demonstrated in this assault has proved him worthy of the reputation of an excellent "Sabreur;" and of the post of instructor to the corps of officers of an Hungarian Regiment, to which he was attached during four years.

The room at Willis's was well adapted to the purpose; and Mr. G. Laurent's band, which was in attendance, played several appropriate pieces.

FRENCH JESTING. The French are so lively a people, that they jest upon everything: "Murder in jest," as Hamlet has it. Of two American missionaries destroyed by the savages, they say that they fulfilled their mission, and supplied the cannibals with Christian nourishment.

M. LEON GILLEMAND. SIG. GANDINI.

"PASSAGE OF ARMS," AT WILLIS'S ROOMS.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

THE REV. WHITWORTH RUSSELL.

THE gentleman was the fourth son of the late Sir Henry Russell, Bart., Chief Justice of Bengal. Mr. Russell, who was in holy orders, was born on the 17th September, 1795; he married, the 6th April, 1824, Frances, daughter of Vice Admiral Carpenter, by whom he leaves two sons and a daughter. Mr. Russell held the appointment of Inspector of Prisons for more than seventeen years, having been nominated to it by the Duke of Wellington. He was a man of great humanity, and took much interest in the welfare of criminals, particularly in the juvenile portion of them. His death has occurred under circumstances of the most melancholy nature. While visiting Milbank Prison, pursuant to the duties of his office, and while labouring under a fit of derangement, he committed suicide, by shooting himself, in the Boardroom of the jail. A Coroner's inquest has since brought in a verdict to that effect. The Rev. Mr. Russell's eldest brother is the present Sir Henry Russell, Bart., of Swallowfield Place, Berks; his second brother is Charles Russell, Esq., Chairman of the Great Western Railway Company, who lost his seat in Parliament for Reading at the late contested election there.

COLONEL NATHAN WILSON.

THIS gallant officer entered the British service in 1795, and rose through the different grades to that of Colonel in 1837; he served in 1799, with the 4th Light Dragoons, in the Mysore, and was at the battle of Malavilly, and the siege of Seringapatam; he was wounded at the latter place, at the famous battle of Assaye by a grape shot. He wore a medal for Seringapatam, and was a Knight Companion of the Hanoverian Order. Col. Wilson readied for many years past at Boulogne. The Colonel met his death in London, in consequence of being knocked down by a cabriolet, near the United Service Club: he expired at Islington on the 1st instant, aged sixty-eight.

DUKE ADAM OF WIRTEMBURG.

ADAM CHARLES WILLIAM STANISLAUS EUGENE PAUL LOUIS, a Prince of the Ducal Family of Wirtemburg, was born the 16th Jan. 1792; he was the son of Duke Louis by his first wife Mary, daughter of Prince Adam Czartorisky. Duke Adam was a Lieut.-General in the Russian service, and Aide-de-Camp to the Emperor: he died on the 27th ult. at Langenschwalbach, in Nassau.

RICHARD FOUNTAYNE WILSON, ESQ., OF MELTON, COUNTY YORK.

COLONEL FOUNTAYNE WILSON, whose death occurred at his seat at Melton, on the 24th ult., was probably the richest commoner in the empire. He possessed very extensive estates in Yorkshire, and inherited, besides, considerable landed property in several other counties, principally by the marriage of his father, Richard Wilson, Esq., with Elizabeth, daughter and co-heir of the Very Rev. John Fountayne, D.D., Dean of York, by Anne, his wife, only daughter of Charles Montagu, Esq., of Papplewick. The Melton estate came to the Fountaynes by the heiress of the Moncktons of that place.

The gentleman whose decease we are recording was grandson of Christopher Wilson, D.D., Bishop of Bristol, and great grandson of Dr. Edmund Gibson, Bishop of London. He was born in June, 1783, and had consequently just completed his sixty-fourth year. By Sophia, his wife, third daughter of George Osbaldeston, Esq., of Hutton Bushel, he leaves two surviving sons and several daughters. Andrew, the elder son, assumed, by Royal license, in 1826, the surname and arms of Mountagu only, in pursuance of the testamentary injunction of the Right Hon. Frederick Montagu, of Papplewick. Mr. Fountayne Wilson represented, for some time, the county of York in Parliament; served as its High Sheriff in 1807, and was Colonel of the First West Yorkshire Regiment of Militia.

RICHARD JEFFERSON EATON, ESQ., OF HETCHWORTH PARK, CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

CAPTAIN EATON died on the 27th ult., aged 46. He formerly represented the County of Cambridge in Parliament, and acted with the Conservative party. His father, Richard Eaton, Esq., was a banker at Newmarket, and possessed a good estate near that town.

Captain Eaton married, 26th Nov., 1830, Charlotte Elizabeth, second daughter of Henry John Conyers, Esq., of Copped Hall, Essex, and has left issue.

THE POTATO DISEASE.—EXTENSIVE DISAPPEARANCE OF APHIDES.

At various times I have had occasion to call the attention of the public to facts connected with this destructive disease of the potato, and, in the present instance, have to relate other circumstances connected with their natural history which cannot fail to gratify the people. The importance of bringing every fact before the agriculturist as it ceases to be apparent, if for it is upon a correct knowledge of the habits of these creatures that the farmer must estimate the probable damage when his crops are unfortunately attacked.

During the year the Aphis has not committed most serious damage. It has killed plants in some places to such an extent that not one pod is left; and even over large fields the crop will not nearly yield the seed sown. This insects continued to increase up to a certain date, then suddenly commenced the destruction of the plants on which they were located, took wing, and formed an army formidable from their numerical strength, which appeared completely to fill the atmosphere. The entire multitude assumed the winged state within a few days, and left nothing behind but their cast skins. The winged insects settled upon any palatable food. They died by thousands upon the beet-root, on which I have observed them feed in a former year. When they alighted, the destruction of the plants on which they were located, took wing, and formed an army formidable from their numerical strength, which appeared completely to fill the atmosphere. The entire multitude assumed the winged state within a few days, and left nothing behind but their cast skins. The winged insects settled upon any palatable food. They died by thousands upon the beet-root, on which I have observed them feed in a former year. When they alighted, the destruction of the plants in the ordinary manner, and sometimes killed the leaf of the plant, which exhibited dark, black blotches. They, however, were not doomed to remain long in this situation; they speedily died, and have not, in many cases, left a solitary individual to continue the brood. Those which alighted upon the outdoor cucumbers were singularly destructive. They settled upon the under surface of the leaves in great numbers, and fed upon the plant. Some of the attacked plants died from the injury they sustained; in others the leaf alone was damaged. I have been much interested in watching the destruction of the cucumber; for I have heard that during the two or three last years this plant has gone off in some mysterious manner for which the farmer could not account. In the instances which have come within my observation, every insect has perished, and but a few of the whole plants were destroyed, on account of the short duration of the attack.

The Bean Aphis also alighted upon scarlet runners, French beans, parsnips, onions, and various other plants this week. Great and large masses of dead winged insects may also be observed, although scarce one live insect exists.

The Aphis Vastator has also, in those districts which I have examined, become scarce. I do not know what has become of them all, but many have been devoured by ladybirds, some have been killed by ichneumons, others became unhealthy and perished. In proportion as the potato plant is strong and healthy, so does it resist the attack of this parasite. The puncture of the Aphis brace in some instances merely followed by a little black spot; in others by a large black blotch; and again, it may be followed by a more or less complete destruction of the entire plant. In every instance the leaves would wither and die, although they have now disappeared, it will be found that the leaves are apt to perish, and the dying potatoes may be frequently observed to be covered with a white down, which is really a beautiful appearance of the Botrytis Infestans. In consequence of these appearances following the attack of the Aphis, hasty investigators are sometimes led to the belief that the potato disease occurs without the insect—a delusion now highly prized by those who prefer the marvellous, and delight to speculate in aërial, comet, and cholera theories.

The early kinds of potatoes are now, in most instances, ripening to satisfaction, and the golden yellow colour of the foliage demonstrates that the leaf is performing its last functions, and that the tuber is being well filled with starch and other nutritive matters. The late kinds still look well, and scarce any insects now exist in many situations. Great numbers of large masses of dead winged insects may also be observed, although scarce one live insect exists.

The Aphis Vastator has also, in those districts which I have examined, become scarce. I do not know what has become of them all, but many have been devoured by ladybirds, some have been killed by ichneumons, others became unhealthy and perished. In proportion as the potato plant is strong and healthy, so does it resist the attack of this parasite. The puncture of the Aphis brace in some instances merely followed by a little black spot; in others by a large black blotch; and again, it may be followed by a more or less complete destruction of the entire plant. In every instance the leaves would wither and die, although they have now disappeared, it will be found that the leaves are apt to perish, and the dying potatoes may be frequently observed to be covered with a white down, which is really a beautiful appearance of the Botrytis Infestans. In consequence of these appearances following the attack of the Aphis, hasty investigators are sometimes led to the belief that the potato disease occurs without the insect—a delusion now highly prized by those who prefer the marvellous, and delight to speculate in aërial, comet, and cholera theories.

The early kinds of potatoes are now, in most instances, ripening to satisfaction, and the golden yellow colour of the foliage demonstrates that the leaf is performing its last functions, and that the tuber is being well filled with starch and other nutritive matters. The late kinds still look well, and scarce any insects now exist in many situations. Great and

MUSICAL UNION, July 24, 1847.—Resolved—That the thanks of the Committee be tendered to Mr. Ella for the ability and judgment with which he has directed the performances at the Musical Union during the past season
(Signed) FALMOUTH (Chairman), A. P. Hayter, G. Cadogan, Saltoun, C. Clark, J. Clark, R. B. Phillips, A. F. Barnard, C. Stanforth, A. G. Legge, John Campbell, S. Shirley, Jr., Secretary. WESTMORELAND, Vice-President

BAKER'S PHEASANTRY, Beaufort-street, King's-road, Chelsea (by appointment to her Majesty and H. R. H. Prince Albert).—ORNAMENTAL WATERFOWL, consisting of Black and White Swans, Egyptian, Canada, China, Barnacle, Brent, and Laughing Geese, Shelducks, Pintail, Widgeon, Sargasso and Wiener Ducks, Bernicle, Call, Golden, Shovellers, Gold-eyed and Dun Diver, Carolina Ducks, &c., domesticated and ministered also Spanish, Dorking, China, Malay, Poland, Bantam, and Breaking Fowls, and all 3, Half-moon-passage, Gracechurch-street. White, Japan, Fleet, and Common Pigeons, and pure China Pigs.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPHS.—We beg to notify to all Rail-way Companies that having secured the services of Mr. [illegible] we shall be able to execute orders for Electric Telegraphs, with the least possible delay, and on the most reasonable terms. We shall be happy to communicate the principles on which we propose to carry out the system, and to demonstrate its efficiency, power, and simplicity, at the Model Rooms of the Company, and through a large number of instruments that can be brought into operation.
After what has already been said by us and others on the subject, it is quite unnecessary to enter into any detailed explanation of the principles of Electric Telegraphs. We shall therefore merely add, that the Electric Telegraph Company have purchased the Patent Rights of Messrs. Cooke and Wheatstone, and have secured the services of the latter gentleman.
By order of the Board of Directors,
FOR THE CONVENIENCE OF LADIES RESIDING IN THE COUNTRY.
KING AND SHEATH SEND PATTERNS Of all the NEW FRENCH SILKS, for Walking, Wedding, and Dinner Dresses, Free of Expense.
The Richest Satin Tuscs and Gros au bal, at 2s 6d per yard
The Richest Glace Silk Gros du Rhone, at 2s 6d, 2s 9d, 3s, 3s 6d, 4s, 4s 6d, 5s, 5s 6d, 6s, 7s 6d, 8s, 9s, 10s 6d, 12s 6d, 15s, 16s, 18s, 20s, 21s, 25s, 30s, 35s, 40s, 45s, 50s, 55s, 60s, 65s, 70s, 75s, 80s, 85s, 90s, 95s, 100s, 105s, 110s, 115s, 120s, 125s, 130s, 135s, 140s, 145s, 150s, 155s, 160s, 165s, 170s, 175s, 180s, 185s, 190s, 195s, 200s, 205s, 210s, 215s, 220s, they have uniformly experienced at his hands, and of their estimation of his successful exertions.

The fund for the purchase of the Testimonial has been raised by a subscription, not exceeding two guineas each; and the design records the variety and combination of talent, by which Mr. Lumley's management has been characterized.

The base, which is triangular, is classically enriched with musical emblems. Above, seated on a rock, are the three figures of Melpomene, Thalia, and Terpsichore. From amidst this groupe sprugs a column ornamented by the bay-tree, dedicated to the Muses. Three bassi-relievi enrich the column; one representing the scene in "Norma," where the stern Druidical Priestess contemplates the death of her children; the second, a scene from the "Barber of Seville;" and, the other, the famed "Pas de Quatre." Around the summit of the column float three winged boys, bearing garlands of flowers, surmounted by a figure of Euterpe.

This is, unquestionably, one of the finest works of art ever executed in silver. The design is strictly classical, yet relieved from all severity. The proportions are truly beautiful; and the perfect execution adds to the reputation of the manufacturers, Messrs. Hunt and Roskell, of New Bond-street. The height of the Testimonial is 36 inches; and the weight 700 oz.

The Inscription is as follows:—

In record of the Zeal, Judgment, and Liberality,
Evinced in the Management of Her Majesty's Theatre,
This Testimonial is Presented
To B. LUMLEY, Esq.,
by
His Friends and Subscribers.
1846.

In the Subscription List are the Prince Lieven, the Prince Radzivil, the Prince Troubetskoy, the Count Ste. Aulaire, the Baron de Brumow, Count Gustavus Batthyany, the Chambellan de Berg, the Count Esterhazy, the Count de Jarnac, M. de Koudriaffsky, the Count de Laski, and the Baron de Nicolay. The Dukes of Wellington, Bedford, Cleveland, Devonshire, Leinster, and Somerset. The Marquises of Clanricarde, Donegal, Granby, Huntley, and Lansdowne. Earls Bective, Harrington, Kenmare, Lonsdale, and Pembroke. Viscounts Ranelagh, Somerton, and Templetown. Lords Aylmer, Ernest Bruce, Adolphus Fitzclarence, William Lennox, and Harry Vane. Also, Lieut.-Gen. Sir A. F. Barnard, the Hon. Spencer Cowper, the Hon. P. E. Freke, Sir John Guest, Bart., Sir Ralph Howard, Bart., Sir John Lowther, Bart., Sir H. Meux, Bart., the Hon. Col. Leicester Stanhope, Sir F. Shuckborough, Bart., the Hon. O. F. Tobler, Sir Henry Webb, Bart., Col. Sir H. Webster, Sir George Wombwell, Bart.; several Members of Parliament, and other distinguished frequenters of Her Majesty's Theatre.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

SUMMARY

OF THE SUBSCRIPTION SEASON.

LAST Tuesday and Thursday terminated the subscription season at Her Majesty's Theatre; the latter, when the "Figlia" was selected, being an additional performance given gratis to the subscribers, in consideration of the non-appearance of Mdlle. Lind on Saturday. On Tuesday, when the due number of subscription-nights had run out, the National Anthem was sung, and "La Sonnambula" performed, before, perhaps, the most crowded and enthusiastic audience that ever assembled on a "last night." The subscription season has closed in a manner worthy of its commencement, of the brilliant promises held out, of the liberal spirit which has marked it throughout, and of the indomitable energy of a management which has not only kept afloat in spite of unprecedented difficulties, but has actually achieved even more than had been previously deem when there were comparatively no impediments in the way. No season has, perhaps, presented so many interesting facts to record, novelties so numerous and so brilliant, triumphs so great—and, moreover, materials so rich to furnish forth a next year's campaign. In no season, too, have there been fewer of those disappointments and casualties which no previous precautions can avoid, and nothing could run more smoothly than the tide of good-fortune which has poured in. In addition to the immense attraction of the Swedish Nightingale, the director engaged in his troupe both lyrical and choregraphic artists nowhere surpassed, and produced novelty after novelty; winding up the whole with the great "fact" of the season's campaign, and the one that, perhaps, does him more credit than all the remainder, the engaging the first Italian composer to write an opera specially for our Anglo-Italian stage.

In fact, the only fault that could be found with the management of Her Majesty's Theatre this year is, that too much has been done. So great a number of first-rate artists have been engaged, that room could hardly be found for the due display of all. It was scarcely possible, for example, to find worthy parts for five bassi like Lablache, Coletti, Standigl, Superchi, and Bouché. Less than half the number have more than sufficed in previous seasons; and the consequence is, some of them have not been heard to the extent as we should have desired. Let us, however, as fully as our space will admit, review the doings of the season in due order. Amongst the novelties stands pre-eminent that which will render this season memorable in the annals of the Opera—the début of Mdlle. Lind. Immense and wholly unprecedented as is the sensation she produced, it is yet our conviction that her popularity has not reached its acme; and that, if she returns to this country, is yet in store for her to be more thoroughly understood and appreciated than she now is. The rich depth of thought, feeling, and sentiment, which she reveals in her acting as in her singing (for both with her are as one thing), is a mine more deep than any as yet she have been able to make. Her performance of characters of the more lofty and passionate cast has not been yet perfectly appreciated. Her Norma is a wonderful display of talent; in a dramatic point of view she could, perhaps, a more astonishing and admirable performance than that of any other of her parts, incomparable as she is in all.

The fair Swede has given her name to every species of article of toilette, and her fame has extended from the highest to the lowest classes of society. Let us add that no artist has ever enjoyed more signal tokens of Royal favour; and her excellent private character, the qualities of heart and mind the Swedish Nightingale is known to possess, added to her wonderful genius in her vocation, rendered her not unworthy of such distinction. Her Majesty hardly missed a single performance of Jenny Lind while in town; and gave an evident token of her appreciation of the genius of this wonderful artist, by commanding "Norma" to be performed on the night when she visited the theatre in state.

Amongst the prime donne of the season have been the graceful, sweet-voiced Castellan; Sanchioli, who, after appearing with a greatly improved voice and style at the beginning of the season, was taken with a dangerous illness, which robbed Her Majesty's Theatre of her services and Madame Montenegro—the latter a novelty on these boards. This artist made her début in "I Due Foscari," an opera in which, though unsuited to her voice, her excellent taste and style and spirited acting produced a fine effect. We regret that it has not been possible for Madame Montenegro to appear in a part where her fine middle tones could have been heard to greater advantage. She has enjoyed the highest reputation on the Continent. Her performance of paris demanding far more exertion than that of Lucrezia Contarini, have produced the greatest effect at Milan, at Rome, and at Vienna. She is evidently a woman of great dramatic genius: she has a noble presence and most ladylike manner; and, had there been less superfluity of talent, would have been a highly valuable acquisition to Her Majesty's Theatre.

This year has, besides, introduced to us a tenor and a baritone, who have enjoyed a success which has firmly established their popularity in England—Gardoni and Coletti. To the former—young, handsome, talented, possessed of a beautiful voice, and great feeling—is assured a brilliant career, to forward him in which his triumphant début in England will have not a little contributed. In "La Favorita," "La Sonnambula," the little part of Raimbaut, in "Robert le Diable," "I Lombardi," and in "I Masnadieri," he was especially admirable, in a dramatic as well as in a musical point of view. Coletti, who returned, after an absence of several years, immensely improved, is amongst the greatest of living baritones. In voice, perhaps, he excels them all. His finest display was in "I Due Foscari," in which he produced the most triumphant effect. Standigl, so well known in this country, appeared for the first time on the Italian operatic stage this season, and his admirable performance of Enrique in "Robert le Diable" worthily sustained the great reputation for dramatic and vocal talent he enjoys amongst us. Superchi was another novelty, and one who was likewise inevitably prevented by the great strength of the troupe from appearing so frequently as we could have wished. For taste, feeling, and thorough knowledge of the art of singing, he was surpassed by none of the other bassi or baritone of the company, while he added to these qualities much dramatic energy. His voice, though good, is not equal to his talent were it so, we could hardly point out a single living baritone who would take precedence of him. Bouché is another excellent and most useful addition to the company. We have somewhat inverted the due order of things by delaying mention of the début of Fraschini among the musical novelties of the season. This tenor who came to this country with a great reputation acquired at some of the most notoriously fastidious capitals of Europe, such as Vienna, has not the sweetness and tenderness of Gardoni; on the other hand, he has a fiery energy, much dramatic power, and great strength of voice. We suspect he does not give much, time to study, and he has got into certain bad habits in his production of voice, which somewhat impair the effect his undoubted talents would otherwise produce. In "I Due Foscari," he was admirable, this being a part which we believe he studied carefully, and which proved what he might effect if he chose to take the pains. It would be unjust not to mention likewise his performance of Lucca, the part in which he made his début, and which gained for him abroad the appellation of "Il Tenore della Maledizione." In the scene to which this singular nickname refers, he was always certain of a rapturous encore. We have not space to dilate on the performance of old established favourites like Lablache, who, besides, cannot be raised in public favour by any praise that could be bestowed on him. Perhaps no artist has ever gained such universal suffrage, and a good will besides from all parts, which almost amounts to a personal regard.

A greater number of new operas has been produced during the past year than n any previous one we remember. The season commenced with "La Favorite," which was new to the Italian stage here, though it had been given at the English theatres. The next novelty was Verdi's "Due Foscari," which was highly successful. After that, an Italian version of Meyerbeer's magnificent "Robert le Dia..le;" Donizetti's "Figlia," brought out to display Mdlle. Lind in one of her favourite comic parts; and last, not least, "I Masnadieri," a work written expressly for this stage by Verdi. All of them were eminently successful; and the two first, be it remarked, had not the prestige given to whatever she undertook by Mdlle. Lind, whose name alone sufficed to attract crowds.

Never was the ballet more magnificent than this year at Her Majesty's Theatre. As if the combination of Taglioni, Grahn, Carlotta Grisi, and Cerito had not been sufficient, two new danseuse made their appearance, who each obtained the most brilliant success, and one of whom, Rosati, remaining till the end of the season, was placed on a par with the four celebrated ballerine before mentioned. Rosati has a style of her own already a great merit; and for the elegance and precision of her execution of a succession of small rapid steps, she is unsurpassed. The young, almost child-like Marie Taglioni, gives, we think, even greater promise than Rosati. With care and practice, she may achieve the highest position in her art. The graceful Perrot, the agile St. Leon, and a new importation, Paul Taglioni, completed the choregraphic troupe.

The most striking chorographic productions of the season have been "Corrall," brought out at the commencement; "Thea," a charming composition, and one of the most effective of the kind produced for a long time; "Les Elémens," a new divertissement, combining Carlotta Grisi, Cerito, and Rosati; the "Pas de Quatre," which added to them Taglioni; the "Pas de Déesse," presenting the three last; and the "Sylphide," in which Taglioni won her brightest laurels; the latter was produced on Thursday for the last subscription night. In such a case as this facts are a sufficient eulogium, and let us add again that these exertions on the part of the management were gratuitous.

Notwithstanding the lateness of the season, the crowds that thronged Her Majesty's Theatre on Thursday, were as great as ever, attracted to hear the charming opera "La Figlia del Reggimento;" and Jenny Lind. The Swedish songstress was in splendid voice, and introduced on this occasion several novel and exquisite ornaments into the music of her rôle. The encores were as numerous as ever, and she was recalled five times during the evening. Gardoni and F. Lablache sung with their accustomed excellence. A "Pas de Deux" was danced by Rosati and Louis D'Or between the acts of the opera; and the second act of the beautiful ballet, "La Sylphide," with the charming Taglioni, concluded the entertainments.

TESTIMONIAL PRESENTED TO MR. LUMLEY, OF HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

MUSIC.

MR. GERHARD TAYLOR.—This extraordinary harpist gave an Evening Concert on Monday last, at the Hanover-square Rooms, principally for the purpose of making his talents known to the public, as it was too late in the season to make a profitable speculation. In various works, composed by himself, Gerhard Taylor proved that he was thoroughly master of every executive facility, and perhaps his wonderful execution tempts him to out-of-the-way feats not in character with the instrument. He displayed, however, so much feeling at times in his style, as to indicate that, in the legitimate resources afforded by the harp, he may take his place as one of the most accomplished players. Mr. H. S. May played pieces on the piano, and Miss Taylor and Miss Townsend were the vocalists.

THE GLOUCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL.—Great exertions are making to render this meeting attractive. The days of performance are fixed for the 21st, 22nd, and 23rd of September.

ACADEMIE ROYALE DE MUSIQUE IN PARIS.—M. Duponchel's stay in London was very brief. The only engagement that has transpired has been that of Cerito and M. St. Leon, her husband. Verdi, Roger (the tenor), and Mdme. Dorus Gras had returned from London to Paris.

LISZT.—The Sultan has given to this pianist the Order of Nischan Istchar, in brilliants. Liszt gave a morning performance in aid of the poor at Pera. An Armenian theatre has been started at Constantinople, at which pantomime pieces, founded on historical and biblical subjects, are played.

PESTH.—The new theatre was opened with the "Barber of Seville." It will contain 2000 persons. There are 92 private boxes and 400 stalls.

FINE ARTS.

STATUETTE OF JENNY LIND.

MR. SIMPSON, of Regent-street, has published an admirable statuette of Mademoiselle Jenny Lind, in "La Figlia del Reggimento," modelled in England by Monsieur Jeannest. It is by far the most successful likeness of the Swedish Nightingale that has yet been given to the public. The likeness is singularly correct, not being in any degree flattered; and the style of the entire figure very happily caught, even to the very feet. She is represented singing the famous Rataplan song, and imitating the roll on the drum, as she marches backwards and forwards across the stage. The figure is thirteen inches high, and the circular pedestal on which it stands about five, so that it is by no means too large for a chefionier or side-table. We do not at present remember any statuette of an artiste made and published in London; but we think were a series produced, as Dantan has done in Paris, they would command a ready sale. That the present clever cast will be bought eagerly, there can be little doubt; more especially as the original is now about to leave us, although, as we trust, only for a time.

BERTHE FEZE.—On Saturday last, the Park of Brumham Hall, Bedfordshire was the scene of great activity. A dinner of roast beef and plum pudding was served to upwards of 1200 poor of Brumham, Biddenham, and Stagsden, by the tenantry and other residents in those parishes, in commemoration of the Hon. George Rice Trevor taking possession of the Brumham estate, pursuant to a recent decision in the House of Lords. Triumphal arches were erected on the occasion, and the church bells rung, and flags waved throughout the day, which was, indeed, a joyous one for the village poor.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand aforesaid.—SATURDAY, AUGUST 7, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 276.—Vol. XI.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, AUGUST 14, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE HARVEST.

BLESSINGS are always welcomed, but never so warmly as after a period during which we have been deprived of them. The importance of an abundant Harvest is never so well appreciated as after the sufferings caused by a deficient one; it is the memory of last year, and the pressure of loans and taxation which sprung out of its scarcity, that make the accounts of the present abundant crops pouring in from all quarters so especially gratifying. And we receive the glad tidings of plenty from all zones, climes, and countries; our own valleys are rich with grain, now falling beneath the hand of the reaper; the fields of France, the wide plains of Germany, are waving with golden harvests; from Belgium, from Hungary, from Poland, from Russia, the same intelligence is brought, and it is heard with genuine rejoicing. The day has passed when the abundance of one land was considered the bane of another; and he would be a bold man who should venture to talk of the ruin preparing for England on the shores of the Baltic or the Black Sea, or the "Plains of Poland," as it was not unusual to talk some, and that not many, years ago. Certainly, the hustings which have just been so fertile of speeches, have seen no "Tamboff" terrors, have heard no dreadful pictures of the country perishing beneath cataracts of grain, of the "sun of England sinking for ever" behind pyramids of food, piled in ruinous superfluity on our shores by the hostile hands of "the Foreigner." Every age has its peculiar popular fear; once it was the "French King;" once it was the Spaniard; but, from the Peace downwards, nearly up to the present time, the dread of Englishmen has been "the Foreigner" in the abstract, who was supposed to be bent on our destruction, by over-feeding us with the surplus of his harvests. It is a singular fact that Englishmen are much more easily excited by some vague, imaginary terror, than a real danger. During the whole of the last war, when we were fighting against half Europe at land and sea, and when the modern Charlemagne devoted a power as great as that of Cæsar to our peculiar and special ruin, such a thing as doubting whether we could "compete with the Foreigner" was never heard of; we did compete with him in every way, and got the best of it.

The apprehension of the foreigner was never expressed till after some years of peace, and then we, who had contemplated fleets, and battalions, and parks of artillery, and hostile alliances with perfect coolness, thinking it very possible we might sink the fleets, and break the battalions, and spike the artillery, became panic-struck at the idea of being destroyed by competition in the produce of corn! The corn of the Ukraine and the fertility of Poland, we are certain, have caused more anxious thoughts among us than ever did Napoleon's bulletins of victory or his Berlin decrees. The alarm has had its day, and it is now seen that history presents no instance of a people ruined by too great abundance, whether purchased or its own, while it is full of the fatalities of scarcity. The spectacle of almost the whole world reduced by a mysterious disease in a single vegetable to anxiety as to the means of subsistence, is too awfully impressive not to silence all who speak with fear of abundance, or dare name it in the same breath with anything that hints misfortune.

There was a mistake in speaking in terms liable to be misunderstood of abundance. To appear to dread cheapness was, at least, expressing a fear of one of the results of plenty; and this was a perversion of an instinct of mankind which in all ages and nations has rejoiced at it, even as it rejoices at this moment with one accord over the entire earth. And we may rely on it, the instinctive feeling, of abundance being an unmixed good which we can trace through all generations from the earliest ages of the world, is a true and just sentiment; whole nations have based their policy on it, have made the gratitude it awakened the better part of their religion, have founded on it feasts, and days of celebration and sacrifice. Through all the countless laws, forms, solemnities, and festal rites, ascending through Paganism, with its adoration of Ceres and the "bounteous Pan," to the Jewish dispensation, in which the "promise" itself was that of dwelling in a land of plenty, a "land flowing with milk and honey," with its ritual full of sacrifices and offerings, like the "waving of the sheaf," and precepts of a kindred spirit with that which told the Israelite not to make "clean riddance of the corners of the field when thou reapest, neither to gather any gleaning of the harvest," but to "leave them to the poor and stranger"—every rite, whether Jewish or Pagan, is expressive of hope of increase, joy at the realization of that hope, or thankfulness for the blessing that comes hand in hand with it. Going still farther back into the recesses of time, we find the same spirit pervading the rites of Egypt. There the political importance of a plentiful harvest was fully recognised, at a very early period of the world's history, as it has been in every densely peopled country in all ages. The valley of the Nile was a land of fertility in the days of the Patriarchs, and the rise and fall of that mysterious river was the index and promise of abundance to the subjects of the Pharoahs, just as it is at the present hour to the Fellahs of Mehemet Ali. The dream that Joseph interpreted, the warning to provide against famine in the season of plenty, conveyed in the vision of the fat and lean kine, and the full and withered ears of corn, produced the earliest recorded legislation as to the supply of food. And so unvarying are the works of Nature, though all else changes, that the "Land of Egypt" is still a granary and storehouse from which nations draw their corn. The pale mechanic weaving in Manchester has an interest in the rise of the Nile, almost as direct as the Hebrew who toiled in the house of bondage before, has always been accompanied with festivity, rude it may be, but earnest and sincere, even when those who reap the harvest are not those who most enjoy it. In Italy and on the Rhine, the vintagers still sing as they bear the grapes to the wine-press, and even [illegible], where the toil of life is too serious a business to be [illegible] with pleasure, the usages of Harvest Home are not wholly forgotten.

FUNERAL OF MR. O'CONNELL.—THE HEARSE.—(SEE PAGE 104.)

There is nothing statesmen watch with so keen an interest as the prospects of the harvest. All other failures may be retrieved by gold or policy; but for a scarcity of food there is no human remedy. A battle lost, a negotiation broken, even a threatened invasion, are as nothing to this awful calamity. All the treasuries of all the States of Europe could not create a grain of corn. Fortunately, a famine equally severe over the whole world is of very rare occurrence—the difference of climates and seasons seems to render it improbable; and with the rapid means of communication men now possess, the abundance of one hemisphere can be brought in aid of the deficiency in the other. But still the toil necessary to convey the food of millions through a space of thousands of miles, is an awful one; and statesmen who have to study the effect of certain circumstances on whole masses of mankind, dread the great disturbance of that natural process by which a people is usually able to raise the food of the year, on the surface they inhabit, by their own industry. If they totally fail in doing so, then a struggle for existence is as inevitable in a nation as in a besieged town,—death is certain, unless there comes aid from without, as we have seen too distinctly proved during the past year in Ireland.

But this present sun of August shines upon a more hopeful state of things; over the whole surface of England we hear of plenteousness, of as fine a harvest as ever ripened on our thousand hills. We see again renewed that annual "miracle of the Divine mercy," when, in the beautiful language of Jeremy Taylor, "the circles of Heaven are bowed down to wrap us in a bosom of care and nourishment, and feel the truth of the promise, that "seed time and harvest shall not fail," but that

Spring shall plant
And Autumn garner in, unto the end.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Paris papers of Wednesday state that a serious nature had broken out at Troyes, owing to the high price of bread; the troops were called out, and the cavalry had to charge to clear the streets.

The price of bread on the day following the riots was reduced five centimes the Kilog.

The Journals are chiefly engaged in commenting upon the recent dissolution of the French Chambers. Some of them, in reviewing the results of the Session, argue that it has been very barren of results, and that the Government had broken all its pledges.

During the discussion on the Loan Bill in the Chamber of Peers, some questions were put by Viscount Mortemar, in answer to which M. Dumon, the Minister of Finances, entered into some interesting explanations regarding the financial position and prospects of France. M. Dumon began by reminding the Chamber of the various loans and sums of money which had been voted by the Chambers in 1841. A loan of 450,000,000 was voted, the cost of the said works being calculated at 496,000,000; the surplus of 46,000,000, it was hoped, would be carried out of the receipts. In point of fact, that credit the [illegible] tions of Paris were completed, harbours deepened and improved, roads [illegible], and the general works of the country added to. In 1842, the Government asked the Chambers, by the same law, for certain fresh designs as [illegible] enormous, when the financial burthens of the country were regarded, voted a great network of railways. The Chamber did not feel any alarm at fixing the first credits necessary for those works at 250,000,000, as evident that so gigantic an undertaking as the execution of these railways could not be defrayed from the resources of the budget. As extraordinary funds were to be created, it was determined to use part of the revenue of the sinking fund for the carrying out of the railway scheme. Yet these reserves were not at the moment available. The politics events of 1840 had forced all Europe, France included, to extraordinary expenses; the budget of that year showed a deficit that of 1841 was in the same position; and a similar state of things was anticipated for 1842; and it was only in 1843 that it was expected to be able to use the reserves of the sinking fund in paying for the great works. It was not now possible to withdraw from or defend the determination come to to execute these works—the increasing prosperity of the country fully justified them. From 1816 to 1830 the increase of the indirect revenue of the State had amounted to about 9,000,000 a year. From 1830 to [illegible] the period when the great public works commenced, to 1846, the increase was very nearly 24,000,000 a-year. The hope of the Government to have the equilibrium [illegible] re'd at in 1843 was not realised: it was only in 1844 that this event took place, the deficit being then not more than 18,000f. The equilibrium was passed in 1845, as the receipts were then superior to the expenses by about 4,000,000 and a half. Matters were going on favourably, the reserves of the sinking fund being at last applied to defray the expenses of the public works, when, in 1846, there occurred the double misfortune of the inundations and of the scarcity of food; the year 1846 naturally presented a deficit, and, without doubt, 1847 would be in a similar position. This circumstance of course disarranged the combinations which had been established in 1842, that from 1843 the reserves of the sinking fund would be disposable; they could not be available now before 1849, perhaps 1850. It was evident that the system of resources established in 1842 ought to be altered by the new circumstances that had occurred. The deficits to be paid amounted to 945,000,000, and no doubt the reserves of the sinking fund could defray that amount, if sufficient time were allowed for the purpose. M. Dumon entered into some other calculations with a view to prove that the loan of 350,000,000 was indispensable, and then made a satisfactory statement respecting present prospects. The month of June, he said, showed an advance of 760,000f. over the corresponding period of last year; and the month of July, though not yet fully made up, presented an improvement of 1,200,000f. It was, therefore, allowable to again look for a return of that public prosperity which had never failed, since 1830, to be the result of the loans that had been passed. The Chamber might now like to know what were the sums to be paid by private industry in executing the great railway system of communication in France. That sum had been by some estimated at 1,000,000,000, but that sum was an exaggeration. The real amount was 1,209,000,000, from which must be deducted the capital of the Caisse Hypothécaire Company, which was now winding up its affairs. That would leave the whole sum of 1,047,000,000f. [illegible] sums had already been made up their capital, and were at work, which would [illegible] 585,000,000, the sum for the companies not yet having got together all [illegible] of that sum had been paid to the amount of 347,000,000f.; [illegible] sum still to be paid at 303,000,000. In conclusion, M. Dumon concluded [illegible] they succeeded in [illegible] the ordinary budget, they would be [illegible] capital of 124 to 7; the Budget of Expenses for 1848 was also [illegible] and thus virtually ended the session of 1847, which the Marquis de Boissy pronounced, amidst the clamour of his colleagues, a "calamitous and a prolonged" one.

The Chamber of Peers has voted the Paris and Lyons, the Montereau and Troyes, and the Versailles and Chartres Railroad bills, and rejected the Lyons and Avignon project of law. The Chamber having brought its business to a close on Saturday, the two Chambers met on Monday to hear the Royal ordinance read, [illegible] on of the session, and any ceremony beyond the reading of the ordinance by [illegible].

The Journal des Chemins de Fer announces that the Dieppe branch of the Havre Railroad will be completed in March, 1848.

The Corsaire has the following:—"We have to relate a fruit in these days. [illegible] Minister, M. Teste rendered great service to the trade by [illegible] [illegible] Sentiments to him, this person has remembered the kindness of M. [illegible] a moment when others thought they had a right to forget him. He has paid M. Teste's fine, and it was with difficulty he was forced to accept the money. The state of M. Teste is still alarming. The physicians are unable to check the flow of blood to the head."

We see by the Paris papers, that in spite of the result of a harvest abundant beyond any example in the memory of living man, a rise has taken place in the corn markets, which will occasion a corresponding rise in the price of bread for the last fortnight of August. This is ascribed to the facts that the dampness of the harvest have called every labourer from the fields, that the winds are hushed [illegible] did weather, and the sails no longer revolve, and that the waterwheels are dry and the wheels are stationary; in addition to all which, the municipality of Paris has intended against throwing into the market any portion of the reserve which it has in the public granaries.

The inauguration of the statue of the Duke of Orleans (1st Oct., took place on Sunday last, with great pomp).

SPAIN.

We have accounts from Madrid to the 30th inst., but they are unimportant [illegible] Espanol mentions that on the 28th of July, the anniversary of the raising [illegible] of Seville by Generals Espartero and Van Halen, a solemn Te Deum was [illegible] cathedral of that city, and prayers offered for the repose of the souls of the victims of the intestine dissensions of Spain. On the same day, at half-past eleven o'clock P.M., a violent shock of an earthquake was felt at Seville, but fortunately without producing any accident. The shock was experienced at the same moment at Badajoz.

About midnight, on the 30th ult., shocks of an earthquake were felt at Madrid. [illegible] shakings, which lasted about twenty-five seconds, were from north east to [illegible]-west, and were three in number. [illegible] houses took to be ringing, and [illegible] furnitures was deranged. At about one o'clock the next day there was a new shock of short duration, but which was sensibly felt. At a chocolate manufactory some bags of cocoa and sugar, which were placed in rows, fell down, and caused the people in the house to rush forth in alarm.

Some of the Madrid correspondents allude to a letter sent with great haste, by [illegible] letter, from Paris to the Queen, which the Duke of Glucksberg brought. It is necessary in person to deliver into her Majesty's hands [illegible] contents are not known, but the effect upon the young Queen was such that her Majesty is said to have declared her determination to abdicate the throne.

The Bayonne letters state that another horrible act of cruelty has been committed by the Carlists in Catalonia. On the evening of the 30th, a fire of musketry was heard from the town of Manresa, eleven leagues from Barcelona, and on the reserve the authorities of the former town discovered with consternation that a fruitful massacre had been committed by the faceless in the vicinity—fifteen corpses, two of them headless, and the remainder mangled with bayonet stabs, and pierced with bullets, lay upon the high road; they were recognised as the remains of the unfortunate soldiers of the Union regiment, who with Lieutenant Colonel Zavala were made prisoners on the 26th ult., at Llasuns, by the Montemolinist chief Calotras. General Zavala's lieutenants have shown no mercy to these faceless who fell into their hands; they have even shot boys of fourteen and fifteen for being found in company with the insurgents. The above facetious act is by no means a single act of retaliation on the part of the Carlists.

The Phare des Pyrénées states, that, in order to avenge the atrocity at Manresa, General Pavia caused, on the 31st ult., Don Manuel Herrera, and fifteen other Montemolinist insurgents, to be executed. These men had been made on the Queen's birth-day, at Tarragona, and General Pavia had sent to Madrid to demand that their lives should be spared.

PORTUGAL.

We have Lisbon letters of the 3rd inst. The Marquis of Saldanha had returned from Oporto, but had been received rather coldly by the Queen.

The suspension of the press ceased on the 31st ult., and the periodicals accordingly appeared on the following day.

No new Ministry has been formed, nor does there seem to be any prospect of it, as the Queen refuses to call the Cortes immediately, and no one will take office but upon that condition. The British Minister continues to claim the fulfilment of that article of the protocol, but it is evident that the Queen is determined not to convoke the Chambers until everything is put in train to destroy all freedom of election, and secure a Cortes, which, like the last, shall be completely at the beck of the Government.

A Portuguese steamer from Madeira had brought to Lisbon the gratifying intelligence that, on the 26th ult., shortly after the arrival of the allied squadron, the island returned to its allegiance, the Junta became dissolved, and the authority of the possession was placed in the hands of the English and French commanders, Captains Codrington and Deguels, who immediately resigned it to Senhor Ribeiro, the former civil governor.

Count Das Antas was still in Lisbon. He had obtained his passports, and was to have left by the last packet, but suddenly changed his determination, it is said, in consequence of an intimation which he received from the French Minister, Baron de Varenne.

The heat for some days in Lisbon had been excessive, and the thermometer had frequently stood at 100 degrees Fahrenheit in the shade. Fruit, as well as the various crops of this summer, is of unusual excellence.

ASSIZE INTELLIGENCE.

RAILWAY LIABILITIES.

A case was tried at Warwick, on Saturday last, London v. Dale, in which some further points were decided connected with railway liabilities. It was an action brought by the plaintiff, a civil engineer, against the defendant, an independent gentleman, residing at Cheltenham (the Chairman of the Provisional Committee of the projected Trent Valley Continuation Railway), to recover upwards of £750, for work and labour done and materials found.

The principal witness called was Mr. John Smith, solicitor, of Birmingham, who deposed that he was solicitor to the company, and that by order of the Provisional Committee, of which the defendant was Chairman, he had an interview in London with the plaintiff to take a survey of the line, at the rate of £30 per mile. The survey was made, and the maps duly prepared. Mr. Smith admitted that he had himself a bill against the defendant, and he had received a letter of demand against every member, the defendant amongst the rest.

Lord Denman, in summing up, thought the case an extremely clear one. The order was given by the defendant, who, as a small body, of which each member was equally liable. It was a fallacious idea to suppose that there was any particular Lordship in a plaintiff selecting any one particular individual as responsible for the debt which was contracted by the body at every person entering into such undertakings to see that his colleagues were equally competent and responsible with himself. The best way, in his opinion, for parties, when they found the undertaking had been embarked was unsuccessful, was to meet together and come to some equitable settlement; but if they did not do so, persons claiming against them had a perfect right to adopt any legal means for the enforcement of their claims. The plaintiff in this case could make any of the members of the committee who acted with him contribute to the loss which he sustained.

Verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount sought to be recovered.

CONVICTION FOR MURDER.

At Hertford-water, on Monday, Morris Perry was tried by the Lord Chief Justice Wilde for the wilful murder of John Bailey, at the parish of Bathampton somerset-shire, on the 28th of May last.

It appeared from the evidence of the witnesses on the part of the prosecution, that, at, on the evening of the 28th of May last, a number of men, principally labourers on the Wells, Somerset, and Weymouth Railway, now in the course of construction, which passes through the large forest of Bathampton, were drinking in the tap room of the George Inn public house in that parish, a quarrel took place between two men named Dainton and Potter, and they agreed to fight. They left the public house about seven o'clock, and went into an adjoining field called the Cow pen, accompanied by 60 or 70 people, where they commenced fighting. The prisoner Perry seconded Potter, and a man called Samuel Crowley (against [illegible] the Crowley had also featured a true bill for murder, but who was not in custody) seconded Dainton; a ring was formed, and several rounds fought, when a man named Thomas Smith, a constable, came into the field; he called out that he was a constable, and that they must give over fighting; upon that he was immediately knocked down, and severely beaten. Just at that time the deceased, John Bailey, came into the field, and went into the ring where the men were fighting, and put his hand on Perry's shoulder, and said, "You must stop his fighting; I am a constable, and cannot allow it; if you do not stop fighting, I must take you into custody." Perry said, "I don't care for you or any constable," and struck the deceased a violent blow, when he was kicked in the stomach by Perry, the prisoner. The deceased then said, "The Lord have mercy upon me in the midst of my sins," and immediately died. As to this part of the transaction there was no dispute. Several witnesses, including Crowley, who was called by the crown for the purpose of identification, then stated that Samuel Crowley struck the first blow, and others the prisoner. The night was a fine moonlight night, and quite light. The deceased was a very quiet and [illegible] man, and had been called from his supper on the [illegible] to stop the fighting.

The case for the prosecution having been closed,

Mr. Sanders addressed the Jury for the prisoner.

The Lord Chief Justice Wilde, in summing up, told the Jury that the principal question for their consideration was whether the prisoner was one of several persons assaulted together by the deceased, or whether he was [illegible] corrupted by the peace officers, had resolved to resist them, and prevent them by violent means from executing their duty in keeping the peace and stopping the fight. If he was, then he was guilty of unlawfully assembling the concourse, and would be guilty of the crime of murder; and this, although his might not be the hand which actually caused the death of the unfortunate deceased.

The Jury returned a verdict of Guilty.

Sentence of death was then passed in the usual form.

This case created intense interest, and lasted nearly eight hours.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE BIRMINGHAM AND GLOUCESTER RAILWAY.—On the night of yesterday week an accident, which has been attended with losses of life, occurred on the above line. It appears that as the mail train which arrives at Birmingham shortly after eleven o'clock, was travelling at a rapid pace, in a cutting near Lifford, the engine ran off the rails, dragging the tender and luggage van after it with great violence. It continued its course for several yards, ploughing up the earth on each side, and in consequence of the engine and machinery, but, unfortunately, until John Warburton, the engine-driver, was forced between the tender and the engine, and crushed to death, in a most awful manner. Watkinson, the luggage-guard, was dreadfully scalded, and otherwise injured. He was in the van attached to the tender, in charge of upwards of thirty parcels, many of considerable weight; and, although both ends of the van were smashed in, and myself thrown violently down amongst the goods, he escaped with slight injuries. A first-class carriage, attached to the tender, was partially thrown off the rails, but none of the passengers in that or any of the other carriages were hurt. An inquest has since been [illegible] ested two days. After a patient inquiry the Jury found the following [illegible] that the deceased, John Warburton, [illegible] which he was driving along the Bristol and Birmingham Railway running off the line; the same accident being caused by the engine itself being of much too heavy a description to be used on the present light road, at the rate at which it was travelling, and with the light train to which it was attached.'

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

A private letter from Constantinople of the 22nd ult. mentions that the Circassians had cut off the ears of a Russian General taken prisoner at Gorzobil, and sent them as a present to Count Woronzow.

Major-General Sir Harry Smith, the hero of Aliwal, has been appointed to succeed Sir Henry Pottinger as Governor of the Cape of Good Hope. Major-General Staveley succeeds Major-General D'Aguilar on the Staff at Hong Kong, and Sir Henry Pottinger is to be the new Governor of Madras.

The Parisian Universal Gazette publishes a Royal decree, not only strictly prohibiting all lotteries in Russia, but condemning all parties aiding or abetting in the sale of the tickets of foreign lotteries to pay a heavy fine.

The herring fishery in Scotland, which has been rather backward, has taken a sudden turn at Wick; in one day the extraordinary number of 20,000 barrels were landed.

Letters from Rome of the 29th ult. state that the Prince of Joinville arrived in that city on the 27th, and immediately afterwards took post route to the Pope. The Austrian troops, after having, contrary to treaty, occupied the town of Ferrara for three days, had retired within the citadel.

We have additional papers from the Cape of Good Hope to the 13th of June. Sir Henry Pottinger seems still to have many obstacles to overcome in order to get any satisfactory arrangement with the Kaffir chiefs; and, in the meanwhile, petty depredations are continued on the frontier, despite all the efforts made by the small garrisons occupying the blockhouses.

Accounts from New York have reached us via Havre to the 24th ult., but [illegible] do not contain any news of interest either regarding the Union or the war in Mexico.

A package has recently arrived from the West Coast of Africa, containing an African club, cap, and some other articles of a similar character, for presentation to the Queen.

Mr. M'Gregor has resigned his office as Principal Secretary of the Board of Trade, and his election to the representation of Glasgow, and will be replaced by Mr. John Shaw Lefevre, who in his turn will be succeeded by Mr. Porter.

The cholera is still raging in the Russian army; it has carried off General Kowalewski and Colonel Prince Orbelian. It is also said that the disease has made its appearance in the countries non-subject to the Russian command; but, according to official news from Berlin, we learn, that out of 60,000 inhabitants, the mortality was only six per day during the height of the cholera.

Mr. Thomas Duncombe, the Member for Finsbury, has been exceedingly ill with bronchitis, but we are glad to hear that he is now much better.

The Swabian Mercury of the 7th states that the Austrian Government are determined to make serious demonstrations against Radicalism both in Switzerland and in Italy. Twelve battalions of infantry have received orders to march forthwith. One battalion of infantry and several squadrons of cavalry had entered Ferrara.

The West Valley Railway, which is about twelve miles in length, was opened last week. The line is a continuation of the Bishop Auckland and Weardale Railway, which it joins near Witton-le-Wear, and extends by Wolsingham to Frosterley, a mile or two from Stanhope.

An opinion has been taken respecting the legality of the election [illegible] on Thursday, the 29th ultimo, and it is stated that the Mayor, the returning officer, on that occasion has committed a mistake. The votes were not taken in the way directed by the statute, the polling-booths were not properly placed, and the election, consequently, is null and void.

On Tuesday an Act of the late Parliament came into force, by which the attendance of a Master in Chancery at the public office is dispensed with, and the duties transferred to the Chancery Affidavit Office.

On Sunday, during the thunder-storm, as a man, his wife, and two children were driving a chaise in the neighbourhood of Highgate, a flash of lightning struck the horse and killed him instantly. The party were thrown from the chaise, but luckily escaped injury.

A fine sample of Jenny Lind potatoes, with blue eyes, were cried up with that name through the streets of Exeter last week, at 10d. per score.

The works on the North Staffordshire line are being rapidly pressed forward. It is said the Churnet Valley branch will be completed by October, 1848.

By a Parliamentary return just printed, it appears that to the 31st ult. £2,765,765 4s. 8d. was paid out of £1,636,761 13s. 3d. remained to be paid by the several railway companies having had purchase, sale, lease, or amalgamation bills before Parliament in the late Session.

The services of Dr. Lardner have been secured at length been called into requisition for the purposes of the press. The second edition of the Manchester Times of Saturday last contains a report of a public meeting supplied by the above means; being the first time that the electric telegraph has been made available for such a purpose.

The Leicester Chronicle states that after some of the voters, at the late election for that borough, had taken their coffee before proceeding to the poll-books, a reverend gentleman handed round in the room a tract on the corn question; it was no other than a golden sovereign, which had probably been considered as an excellent substitute for sugar by those who provided the coffee.

The general movement in the Board, in consequence of the exercising of the power to issue transport of corn and grain, was extremely active in 1846 as well as in the first six months of 1847:—1845, 15,933 ships; 1846, 18,710; difference in favour of 1846, 2765. First six months of 1846, 7173; 1847, 9911; difference in favour of first six months of 1847, 2737.

An Act was passed in the late Parliament to transfer the collection and the management of the duties in respect of stage carriages, hackney carriages, and railway passengers, from the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes to the Commissioners of Excise. The duties mentioned, which from time immemorial have been collected by the office of stamps and taxes, are, on the 5th September next, to be collected by the Excise.

It was stated last week on the hustings at Darlington, that John Bowes, Esq., the former member, had spent the large sum of £30,000 in two contests for South Durham.

The Duke of Northumberland has presented to the Royal Surrey Zoological Gardens, three beautiful monkeys (Grivet, Cercopithecus grisco-viridis, which have been bred at Sion House. It is a rare occurrence that monkeys breed in a confined state, and these are most splendid specimens of the species. A consignment of animals, consisting of kangaroos, emus, black swans, &c., also arrived within the last week.

The Correctional Tribunal of Liege was engaged on the 30th and 31st ult., in trying the chief guard, Vantriest, the engineer, Mortuar, and the stoker, Lepiet, accused of being the cause of the accident on the Brussels railroad, to the Queen's special train, on May 10, at the Aux station, through which unfortunate the King's wife and son Alfred, the Queen of the Belgians and M. Carbonnel were seriously injured. After a long investigation, the whole of the accused were acquitted.

The friends of Mr. Hawes, in the Borough of Lambeth, are endeavouring to get up a "testimonial," to be presented to that gentleman, as a mark of their esteem for his public services.

There are now in the St. Katherine's Docks, the great quantity of 60,000 barrels of wheat and flour alone, awaiting quay-room to discharge; besides a large quantity of Indian corn-meal and corn.

The King of Denmark has conferred the Grand Cross of the Order of Dannebrog on Baron Berzelius, the celebrated chemist, to which dignity the order of Nordstjerne is attached; Retzius and Ekstrom, the Swedish physiologists, also received at the same time from his Majesty the cross of Chevalier of Dannebrog. The King of the Belgians has made the following fine example of the King of Denmark, by creating M. Ortlia an officer of the Civil Order of Leopold.

Mr. Andrew Dalziel, one of the eight gentlemen who originated the Manchester Anti-Corn-Law Association, out of which sprang the League, died at Manchester a few days since.

A letter from Athens states, on the authority of accounts from Constantinople, that the Russian Ambassador in that capital has, in accord with the British Ambassador, succeeded in obtaining the pardon of the Porte to the qualified concessions offered by M. Coletti in the affair of M. Musurus.

A brutal duel with knives took place on Sunday evening last, near the Dingle, Lancashire, between two Neapolitan sailors. Six of their comrades stood by as seconds, and none of them have been arrested. The combatants, who are frightfully gashed by each other's knives, are in separate hospitals in Liverpool.

On Monday the branch line of the Eastern Counties Railway from Cambridge to St. Ives and Huntingdon was completed, and having undergone the usual Government inspection, it is expected to be opened for public traffic on Tuesday.

During the week ending on Sunday last, the number of persons passing between England and France, was—At Boulogne, 2784; at Calais, 376; total, 316.

The Prince de Canino, son of Lucien Bonaparte, arrived on the 26th ult. at Stockholm. The Prince is come to the King of Sweden by his marriage with a niece of the Queen Dowager.

Letters have been received announcing a fearful collision at sea, by which the Albatross, belonging to Plymouth, was lost, and nearly all the crew sacrificed. The vessel which came in contact with the Albatross was a Spanish ship called the Neptune, bound for Port-au-Prince in the island of St. Domingo.

Mr. Cobden left Berlin on the 7th, on his way to St. Petersburgh, Moscow, Sweden, and the Hanse Towns. Owing to the abundant returns of the harvest, a considerable fall in the price of grain was expected.

The King of Hanover has offered to subscribe annually the sum of £50 to the Society of Friends of Foreigners in Distress.

In Switzerland the President of the Diet has announced the protest of the Diet against the separate league of the Cantons of Lucerne, Uri, Schwytz, Unterwald, Zug, Fribourg, and Valais. These cantons are warned to desist from their military preparations.

COUNTRY NEWS.

COUNTY ELECTIONS.

YORKSHIRE (WEST RIDING).—RETURN OF LORD MORPETH AND MR. CORDEN.

Saturday was the day appointed for the election at Wakefield, of members for the West Riding, with its million of inhabitants and its 30,000 electors. The proposition to nominate Mr. Cobden, announced at so late a period, was at first opposed by many to be scarce, if not in earnest, but it was soon perceived that his cause was espoused by men who meant anything but trifling, and who were working with vast spirit and energy. The news had spread over the whole of the county in the course of Friday, and there was a great deal of enthusiasm in the large towns.

Wakefield became very full on Friday night, but there was no sign of much exertion on the part of Mr. Denison's friends. On Saturday morning, however, the partisans of all the candidates mustered more strongly.

Mr. W. M. Milner nominated Lord Morpeth. Mr. Alderman Dunn, of Sheffield, was the noble Lord's seconder.

The Hon. E. Lascelles, M.P., in proposing Mr. Beckett Denison, said he felt it unnecessary to call the attention of the Freeholders to his parliamentary career. Mr. J. Rand, of Bradford, seconded the nomination of Mr. Denison.

Mr. Goodman (Mayor of Leeds) said he came forward to propose one of the most distinguished, one of the most celebrated men of the age—Mr. Cobden. (Loud and long cheering.) The West Riding was prepared to fight one of its celebrated fights—such as sealed the doom of slavery, and of the Test and Corporation Acts, and carried Catholic Emancipation, and the Reform Bill. (Cheers.) They had been told, indeed, that Mr Cobden was not known in the riding; where was there a man more known in the wide world? (Cheers.) His life had nearly been lost in the cause of the people, and in recovering his health he had passed his time in trying to spread the principles of Free-Trade amongst other nations.

Mr. W. Rand, of Bradford, seconded the nomination.

Lord Morpeth addressed the electors amid much enthusiasm. The noble Lord dwelt much upon the important rank held by the electors of the West Riding of Yorkshire. "Although," said the noble Lord, "I may have incurred some slight failures elsewhere, yet, as soon as I have been brought front to front with the West Riding constituency, and within the hearty ringing of West Riding cheers, I have regained the full measure of my stature, and have obtained a full warrant to speak, ay, even with authority, to all my countrymen. (Cheers.) I then venture here to tell them that I think one of their prominent dangers at the present hour is—I do not say their only danger—I do not say that there may not be even more—but one dangers which they ought to guard against—but one of their present dangers is a revival of religious bigotry. (Hear, hear.) I do not mean that we are in any danger of seeing bigotry re-illumining its extinct fires, or re-sharpening its blunted sword its weapons are not now of that coarse temper. (Hear, hear.) I do not expect to hear it even talking of coercive restrictions or arbitrary exclusions. It may now and then try to make a stand against a Jew (laughter and cheers); but these are rather rare exercises of its caprices. (Hear.) I do not either quarrel with persons who say, 'We will not endow.' I think that persons and denominations not endowed themselves have a positive right to object to any enlargement of the endowment we already have (cheers), though I may not think that Churchmen can insist upon the principle of absolute resistance to all further endowments with a very good grace. (Hear, hear.) However, I believe endowment is not now in even the remote contemplation of any person, or of any party. (Hear, hear.) But, then, I think it necessary, for my own consistency, to make some reservation when I hear it said that the State shall not endow (hear, hear)—when I hear it said, 'We will not be privy to promote or disseminate error—we will sanction nothing but the teaching of truth.' (Hear.) Why, gentlemen, 'truth' and 'error' what words, what mockeries, are those on the lips of such as us, and of all like us! Truth and error, which, perhaps, may escape the accurate discernment of even angelic natures—

'Of the tare and the wheat in these sedges and bares.'

I doubt whether, even if we could summon before us some bright inhabitant of the upper sphere, he might not be the foremost to tell us that no human hand made all his creatures to love Him, and none to comprehend Him (Hear.) At all events, man has been distinctly told that the sum of his religion consists in two points—the undeviating piety to his Maker, and unbounded love to his fellow-men. (Cheers.) And then, with respect to such a question as endowment, for instance, though I am not prepared to consent to any endowment of the Roman Catholic clergy—though I believe that no person or party is prepared to favour such a proposal, yet I must frankly say that bringing forward such a proposal would, in my humble judgment, be a folly—be an insanity—but it would not be a crime (hear.) and while I am upon this myself to object to such a proposal being made at the present time, or at any time which I conceive likely to occur, yet my objection does not rest, like that of many well-meaning and excellent people, upon religious grounds. Mr. Morpeth must dwell upon the necessity for some such measure as the Health of Towns Bill, and, in referring to Free-Trade, said—"If I ever gave a vote with the most unbounding assurance that it was a proper one to give, it was the vote I gave for the immediate abolition of the Corn Laws. (Cheers.) But I remember that it was after making the declaration that I was prepared to give that vote that I was elected for the West Riding in January, 1846; I remember that it was after giving that vote that I was re-elected for the West Riding in July, 1846, and upon both occasions without meeting a single opponent (cheers); there can, then, be no question what is the feeling of the West Riding upon the subject of Free-Trade (cheers); and I am flatter myself there can be no question either that on that subject I am in harmony with the West Riding" (Renewed cheers

Mr. E. B. Denison defended his conduct in regard to the Corn Laws, and said that, although he was in favour of protection, he thought a man would be a madman to propose the re-enactment of the old bill. (Cheers.) Years must elapse before the true and full efficacy of the late bill could be tested.

Mr. Bright spoke on behalf of Mr. Cobden. He said:—"I am proud to live in the country which has produced a man like him who has been proposed for your selection. (Applause.) Born of parents in your own walk of life, he has risen, by the vast majority here, he, by his own exertions, by his own ability, by his own honest following of honest convictions, has made himself what he is, and has become a great and most distinguished citizen of a country which is not bound to its own but as a citizen. (Hear, hear.) I have been a fellow-labourer with him for many years; and there are hundreds in this great meeting who have seconded his efforts, my efforts, and the efforts of every labourer in the great cause—the cause; and it is a proud thing now, at this general election, to see how firm a hold the principles of Free-Trade have taken upon the public mind of this country. (Cheers.) Every man who is unacquainted for his return to connection with the Anti Corn Law League almost every man who has solicited it, and some who have not solicited it—have been returned to Parliament on this occasion Mr. J. B. Smith, originally the chairman of the League, is returned for a Scotch borough. I have been returned for Manchester without opposition. (Cheers.) Colonel Thompson has been returned for Bradford. (Applause.) Mr Fox, the man whose eloquence in the Free-Trade cause will never be forgotten by those who heard him, has been returned for Oldham. (Cheers.) George Thompson, whose eloquence is perhaps not less remarkable than that of Mr. Fox (and it was often exerted in the same great cause), has been returned by an enormous majority for the metropolitan borough of the Tower Hamlets. (Applause.) If the principles of the great constituency were in favour of protection, you could have no better representative than Mr. Denison (hear); but the whole country—the whole world—would lose its faith in the system of popular representation if you were to send Lord Morpeth to Parliament, to say "Ay," and Mr. Denison along with him, to say "No" (Laughter.

The show of hands was then taken. There were, probably, four thousand people within sight of the hustings. Lord Morpeth and Mr. Corden had four hands for Lord Morpeth, nearly one-fifth for Mr. Denison, and above four-fifths for Mr. Cobden.

Mr Lascelles, on the part of Mr. Denison, declined to ask for a poll.

The High Sheriff therefore declared Viscount Morpeth and Mr. R. Cobden duly elected. The announcement was received with several rounds of cheering.

NORTHUMBERLAND (NORTH).

The nomination of candidates took place at Alnwick on Saturday morning.

C. W. Ord, Esq., proposed the Hon. Charles Bennett, commonly called Lord Ossulston. Mr. Tyrrell, Esq., seconded the nomination.

C. B. Crawwell, Esq., proposed the Hon. George Algernon Percy, commonly called Lord Lovaine. F. Sitwell, Esq., seconded the nomination.

Lord F. Fitzclarence proposed Sir George Grey. —Fridenx, Esq., of Selby, seconded the nomination.

Lord Ossulston and Lord Lovaine having addressed the electors, Sir George Grey presented himself, and was received with great enthusiasm. It was with no light feeling of the responsibilities attached to the office of their representative that he presented himself as a candidate for their favour. He had the honour then of addressing them as an agricultural constituency, professing himself a Whig, and with fifteen years' experience, during which he had taken a more than ordinary share in the discussion of the many important subjects which had come under the notice of the Legislature. (Cheers.) He did not wish for a seat in Parliament, for he had been six times returned for the borough of Devonport, and would have been still, he had no doubt, honoured with their confidence. In speaking with respect to projects for native industry, the noble Lord (Ossulston) had said that he had resisted the contagion of Sir R. Peel. Now there was one way of resisting contagion, and that was by keeping a long distance from it—the one adopted by the noble Lord, who most effectually escaped the contagion raging in the House of Commons, by remaining on the Continent (laughter) until near the close of the session. He would not oppose his noble friend on that account, or venture to disparage the claims of such a worthy member of the House. City and to back beneath an Italian sky, in preference to undergoing the drudgery of the House of Commons; more particularly as, since his return, and during the last few weeks of the session, his influence and zeal (laughter), and all his votes were, with one exception, in favour of the measures of the Government. (Cheers.) The only protection which the tenant-farmer should hereafter look to could be security of tenure, by means of leases, at fair and reasonable rents; not low rents, but such as would allow reasonable returns to the landlord, and a comfortable living to the tenant. With respect to the Game Laws, he thought no one was justified in keeping a large quantity of game, destroying human food, and apparently for no other purpose than to have published once a year in the newspapers that he and his friends had, on a given day, slaughtered so many head at a battue. (Cheers.) The tenant was entitled to full and liberal aid from his landlord, for without it he could do but little He must cultivate the land better, and be allowed all costs of improvement, but to talk of any other protection in these times was absurd. The greatest discouragement to Protection was the present facility of communication all over Europe, as well as throughout England; and Mr. Hudson, though he professed to be a Protectionist, had done more to render the maintenance of Protection utterly impossible than any man in the kingdom.

The show of hands was declared to be in favour of Sir George Grey and Lord Lovaine. A poll was demanded on the part of Lord Ossulston.

CAMBRIDGE (COUNTY).

The election of three members to serve in Parliament for the County of Cambridge and the Isle of Ely, took place on Monday at Cambridge.

Mr. J. H. St. Quintin proposed for the fourth time the Hon. Eliot Thomas Yorke as a candidate. Mr R. D. Fysen seconded the nomination.

The Rev. Algernon Peyton, on presenting himself, was received with deafening cheers. After contrasting the difficult political aspects of the years 1841 and 1847, he proceeded to say that being in the former year the Chairman of Mr. Townley's Committee, he had calmly withdrawn that gentleman's name from the list of the candidates, in obedience to the expressed opinion of the freeholders, acting in a way he knew to be congenial to Mr. Townley's feelings by not carrying on a factious opposition. He now met with his reward. An 8s. Rent Bill had been proposed; that duty would probably have advanced to 10s.; it was passed by the country, and Mr. Townley rubbed rather than join the ranks of Sir Robert Peel, knowing that Lord John Russell was to be trusted in preference. Shortly before this, Sir R. Peel and the Duke of Buckingham, meeting at the entrance to the Carlton Club, "I will," said the Duke, "you would do something to turn out these Whigs." "So I will," replied Sir Robert, "if you will give up the Corn Laws." (Laughter.) Mr. Peyton concluded by proposing their old and tried representative, Mr. Richard Greaves Townley. (Cheers.) Mr. Julian Skrine seconded the nomination.

Mr. John Dobede proposed Lord George John Manners. Mr. J. Marshall seconded the nomination.

The High Sheriff called upon any other gentleman who had a candidate to propose to come forward and do so.

The call not having been responded to, Mr. E. Hicks wished to ask a question of the candidates, relative to the propriety of the introduction of the Jews into a Christian Legislature? (Uproar, and cries of "Three cheers for Rothschild, the Jew." Then were given so heartily as to make the house ring.

Mr. E. Yorke replied that it was now admitted that persons of all religious opinions were eligible. Mr. Rothschild was elected, and it now only remained to decide whether or not he could sit. To the question whether he, his duty to record his vote against it. He felt that the Government could not stand; but, could he have been assured that the amount of protection then proposed by Lord John would have been secured, or even less, he would have voted with his party with pleasure. He did not think that all the evil predicted from Free-Trade would follow, nor that all the good expected would result, at any rate, not for a long period. He trusted that the vital importance of education would be brought home to every man, however humble, and made manifest, if not in his own family, at least in that of his more peaceful, happy, and thriving neighbour.

Lord George John Manners addressed the meeting at some length, amid many interruption. He should, he said, be returned untried, unpledged, and, he feared, unknown, he knew too well to what influence that return was to be ascribed—(cry of "the Duke of Rutland") quite right—to legitimate and honourable family influence, and not that of property or wealth (pshaw), to the result of a long and honourable confidence between the electors of Cambridgeshire and the Isle of Ely and the family to which he belonged. Although they might find a more able, brilliant, or effective member, they would not find a more honest one. His Lordship next avowed himself a Protectionist, and gave as a reason his belief in the incapability of Britain to compete with the high and rivalry of foreign countries, and the bad policy of relying on them for our supplies of food in the event of a failure in the harvest, producing wealth, which was chiefly comprised of the town's people, dispersed.

SUSSEX (EAST).

The election of two Knights of the Shire, to represent the eastern division of Sussex in Parliament, took place at Lewes, on Monday morning.

Sir H. Shiffner, Bart., proposed Mr. Augustus Elliot Fuller. and Lucas Shadwell, Esq., of Hastings, seconded the nomination.

Sir Charles Blount, Bart., proposed Mr. Gage Rayner Tay Frewen, Esq., John Ellman, Esq., seconded the nomination. At the present moment he had no hesitation in saying Free-Trade carried a great many elections. But he would put this question to them suppose, in a year or two, the Government they sent to support Free-Trade were to turn round and vote against it, what could they do with them? ("Kick them out.") That was precisely what they ought to do. But Sir Robert Peel beat Lord John Russell on a matter garden by a majority of 300, and he was placed in power; and then he turned round and went further than Lord John had proposed to go. He (Mr. Ellman) should support Lord John Russell in preference to Sir R. Peel, as being the honester man.

No other candidate being proposed,

The Under-Sheriff declared Mr. Frewen and Mr. Fuller duly elected.

SOMERSETSHIRE (EAST).

The nomination of candidates for the Eastern Division of Somerset took place on Tuesday, at Wells, and resulted in the unopposed re-election of the old members, Mr. W. Pinney and Mr. W. Miles. The former gentleman is a Liberal, the latter a Protectionist.

Mr. Knatchbull proposed Mr. William Miles; Mr. R. C. Tudway seconded the nomination.

Captain Scobell proposed William Pinney, Esq., of Somerton Erleigh. Mr. Gore Langton seconded the nomination.

The High Sheriff inquired whether any elector was prepared to nominate a third candidate? None appeared, and he accordingly declared Mr. Miles and Mr. Pinney duly elected

Mr Miles, in addressing the electors, reviewed the course he had taken during the late session, and vindicated his conduct in resisting the Free-Trade policy of the late Premier. That talented but unprincipled man had made the word "Conservative" a by-word and a phrase of scorn throughout the land. He had turned his back on every principle he once professed to hold dear, but he had been punished for his perfidy and tergiversation, for he was ejected from power, and in the next Parliament would not, in all probability, have more than one hundred followers. (Hear, hear.) Now, however, that Free-Trade had been made the law of the land, he (Mr. Miles) should not further resist it, but he had had a fair trial, but he would prophesy that it would come to no good. He was resolved to give Lord John Russell a fair trial, for he believed that the interests of his consistency and of the country at large were very much safer in the hands of that statesman than in those of Sir Robert Peel.

Mr. Pinney said, he would go to Parliament free and unshackled, to discharge his duty towards his constituents to the best of his ability and discretion, or he would not go there at all.

SURREY (EAST).

The nomination for the eastern division of the county of Surrey took place on Wednesday, at Croydon

Sir W. Molesworth nominated the Right Hon. Peter John Locke King. Mr. Hyde Parker seconded the nomination.

Captain Harvey Tower proposed Mr. Alcock, and Sir H. Colebrooke seconded the nomination

No other candidate being proposed, the High Sheriff declared the Hon. Peter John Locke King and Thomas Alcock, Esqrs., duly elected members to represent the eastern division of the county of Surrey in the next Parliament.

SOMERSET (WEST).

The nomination of members for the western division of Somerset took place on Wednesday. The candidates were Sir A. Hood, Mr. G. A. Moody (Conservatives), and the Hon. F. Scott, Mr. Escott, and Mr. Reed (Whigs).

Sir T. B. Lethbridge, Bart., proposed the Hon. P. P. Bouverie, and was seconded by Mr. E. A. Sanford.

Sir A. Hood was proposed by Mr. F. Popham, and seconded by Mr. T. Hoskins.

Mr. G. A. Moody was proposed by Mr. Wood, and seconded by Capt. Harbin.

Mr. R. Escott was proposed by Mr. A. Crosse, and seconded by Col. Hamilton

The show of hands was declared in favour of Escott and Bouverie. A poll was demanded, and the election is to take place on Monday and Tuesday next.

MR. WALTER AT NOTTINGHAM.—On Tuesday Mr. J. Walter, one of the newly-elected members for Nottingham, made a public entrée into the town, and met with a most enthusiastic reception. Shortly before eleven o'clock horsemen, carriages, and pedestrians, in immense numbers, with flags and music, began to set out to meet Mr. Walter on his way from Cotnell, a village about five miles distant from Nottingham. At twelve the cavalcade entered the market-place, amid the vociferous cheering of the assembled multitude, the bands playing "See, the conquering hero comes!" The new member, with his nominators (Mr. Bowley and Mr. Redgate), and the Chairman of his Committee (Mr. T. H. Smith), occupied a splendid open carriage, gaily decorated with laurels and evergreens, and drawn by four beautiful greys. After parading some of the principal streets the procession again entered the market-place about two o'clock, and Mr. Walter and his friends proceeded to the Exchange Hall, where Mr. Bowley read an appropriate congratulatory address to Mr. Walter, who then presented himself at a window, and was greeted with a burst of applause from the dense mass of human beings congregated beneath. He addressed the electors, avowing himself the supporter of similar principles to those advocated by his late father, and warmly denouncing the new Poor-Law. On Tuesday night a public dinner was given to Mr. Walter by his constituents, to celebrate his triumphant return at the recent election for that borough. The entertainment, at which about 150 gentlemen were present, took place in the Exchange-rooms, which were lent by the Mayor.

CUSTOMS REVENUE OF LIVERPOOL.—The quarter's revenue of Liverpool, up to the 5th of July last, amounted to £785,179, against £844,468, the receipts of the corresponding quarter in 1846. The decrease may be accounted for by the fact that in the quarter of 1847 we had no corn duties to assist us, the falling off from this source having been, in the month of June to July 5th, £140,000. The receipts to the 5th were £234,222, against £254,336 in the same period in 1846.

IRELAND.

THE ELECTIONS

LORD HEAT.—The nomination for this borough last week was made in rather a curious form. The court-house is a miserable room, and it was filled to suffocation. Dr. George Gumbleton Rogers proposed the Honourable Charles Ponsonby as a fit and proper person to represent the borough of Youghal (Cheers.) Mr. Robert Hudson seconded the nomination. Mr. George Gaggin: I rise to propose the Hon. Mr. Thomas—Thomas—Chis—Chis—(Laughter.) A Protestant: Chisholm. Mr. George Gaggin: Chisholm. (A laugh.) Chisle'em. Prompter: Chisholm. Mr. George Gaggin: Chisle'em. (A laugh.) Chisle'em. A voice: That he will. (Laughter.) Prompter: Ansley. Mr. Gaggin: Ansley, and I think you will—that is generally find generally find. (Down the set amidst laughter.) Dr. Richard Rogers seconded the motion. Mr. Ponsonby and Mr. Ansley having addressed the electors, the High Sheriff declared the show of hands in favour of Mr. Ansley, and a poll was then demanded on behalf of the Hon. Mr. Ponsonby.

COUNTY OF LIMERICK.—The nomination took place on Monday, and a fearful scene of riot and turbulence took place between Old and Young Ireland. Four candidates were proposed. Mr. Dowling, of Newcastle, quite unexpectedly put Mr. Smith O'Brien in nomination. The other candidates were Mr. Caleb Powell (Liberal Conservative), and Mr. George J. O'Connell (Repealer). The court-house and the passages to it presented a shocking scene of riot. Mr. Monsell, on his way to the court, was hustled, and it is said thrown down. Within the court the rival parties contended desperately, and it is said pistols were exhibited. The Rev. Mr. Kenyon, the Young Ireland clergyman, was roughly used, and the coat nearly torn from his back. Owing to the confusion, it was difficult to ascertain anything with correctness; and the result of the show of hands could not be ascertained. The polling was fixed for Tuesday. The general impression was that Smith O'Brien and Monsell would be returned, but that there would be a desperate contest.

SERIOUS RIOTING AT THE WATERFORD ELECTION.—There was some serious rioting at the election for the City of Waterford last week. The house of Sir Thomas Barron's proposer was attacked, and every window broken, and although there was a police force of nearly 200, and two troops of dragoons and infantry, yet no attempt was made to repress the many riots that occurred. On the polling day, the voters were compelled in the most barefaced manner to vote for Sir Thomas's voters were either compelled to remain within doors besieged by the mob, or if they had the courage to appear they were instantly pursued, pelted, and violently assaulted, the mob at the same time keeping a large number of persons impotent, who sent to the defeated candidates to say they dared not venture to the booths. Many of Barron's voters were carried off and shut up in the Town Hall against their will, and forced to the poll by the Repealers, and upwards of 200 voters were forced to break their promises. A most respectable tradesman, a member of Barron's committee, had his house attacked the day before the polling, and to appease the mob, rather than endanger the life of his wife, who took to her bed terrified and on the point of her confinement, he went forward and polled for Meagher and O'Connell. During the whole of Friday (last week) the town was literally in the hands of the mob, to the utter disgrace of the authorities. The late members were defeated, but a petition is spoken of.

ANOTHER MURDER.—A shocking murder, deliberately planned for the purpose of more securely plundering the victim, has just been discovered in Galway. The victim was named Lowry, a pig-jobber, and the murderer a man named Monahan, in whose house Lowry took lodgings for the night.

POLICE.

THE CHARGES OF FORGERY AGAINST A CLERK IN SOMERSET-HOUSE.

On Wednesday William Gates, chief clerk in the Receiver-General's Office, Somerset-House, was re-examined at Bow-street, charged with committing several forgeries, by means of which he obtained considerable sums of money, which he appropriated to his own use.

Mr. Timm, solicitor to the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, attended for the prosecution; and Mr. Seaman for the prisoner.

The first charge was for forging an order and receipt for £137, purporting to be signed by the commissioners for special claims under the Income and property Tax, and by Mr. Lumley, Landlord, solicitor to the Dragoon Company, on behalf of the charity connected with that institution, claiming an exemption, the particulars of which have already appeared; and the evidence, which was principally of an official character, being completed, the prisoner was fully committed for trial

The next charge was for forging an order and receipt for £78 19s., as an exemption from property and income tax for certain dividends described in a claim made on the 24th of June, 1846, purporting to be signed by the commissioners and the solicitor to the Salford and Stanley Burn Charity

Upon this charge the prisoner was also committed for trial.

He was then charged with forging a certain order and receipt for the payment of £92 8s., purporting to be signed by one Benjamin Hirst, secretary to the Christian Faith Society.

The witnesses were then examined over, and the prisoner was committed for trial.

TRICKS OF BILL DISCOUNTERS.

At the MANSION-HOUSE, on Wednesday, a man named John Dull underwent a second examination on a charge of having, under false pretences, obtained the acceptance of John Alexander, draper, of Kelso, for £200 Mr. Jones attended for the prosecution, and Mr. Wolff appeared for the prisoner.

The prisoner had, it appears, obtained two acceptances for £200 each from Mr. Alexander, having applied for the second in consequence, as he said, of some trouble at the Bank in the first, which rendered it unavailable as an instrument to be discounted.

Mr. Wolff submitted to the Lord Mayor that there was not the slightest probability that a Jury would, upon such evidence, convict the prisoner, and that nothing had been adduced calculated to show that he had contemplated a fraud.

The Lord Mayor said the impression upon his mind was, that a very gross fraud had been committed by the prisoner, and that a Jury should have the opportunity of deciding upon the merits of the case.

The prisoner was then committed to Newgate.

DEATH OF THE IMPERIAL PRINCE OF BRAZIL.—We are sorry to announce the death of Don Affonso, only son of Don Pedro II., and lately heir-apparent to the throne of Brazil. No particulars are stated of the nature of the disease.

DEATH OF VICE-ADMIRAL LITTLEHALES. We are sorry to announce the death of Vice-Admiral of the Red S. R. Littlehales.

DEATH OF THE RIGHT REV. DR. GRIFFITHS.—The Right Rev. Dr. Griffiths, Roman Catholic Bishop of the London district, died on Thursday, at his residence in Golden-square.

DEATH.—Within the last few days, the sale of the magnificent domain of Stowe has been announced by one of our contemporaries, so circumstantially as to be "like truth." We are assured, however, that there is no authority whatever for the statement; in addition to the contradiction of the announcement by the auctioneers to whom the sale of the property was stated to have been delegated.

SHAKESPEARE'S HOUSE.—The Royal Shakspearean Club, at Stratford-upon-Avon, have issued a circular, in which they announce that their annual dinner, within the last few days, for the sum of £820, of four tenements; the fourth, "from the continuation of the framed timber front, and from the old doorways, communicating internally, evidently forming part of Shakspeare's birthplace, for which, in 1721, was separated from it." The price which the Committee have given for this part of the property, and for the advantage of at once securing it, may, probably, be considered fair, with the addition of the amount required for the purchase of the larger and more valuable portion of it, which, they understand, realises from the rental of the inn (the Swan and Maidenhead), and the exhibition of the Birthplace, about £90 to £100 of annual income. The premises are in a sound state, and if protected, may last for centuries. To the fund for the purchase, his Royal Highness Prince Albert has been graciously pleased to contribute £250, and her Majesty Queen Adelaide, £100. The Committee conclude by soliciting "the aid of their countrymen to enable them to purchase, protect, and preserve all that remains of the dwelling in which was born and nurtured William Shakspeare." Meanwhile, Lord Morpeth and Lord Ellesmere have consented to act as President and Vice-President of the London Committee of the Club; and, in the capacity of the purchasers, the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, "would willingly take charge of Shakspeare's House, as a last object of national care." The sale of the property is announced for September 16th; and Mr. Robins has issued the descriptive particulars, to which he has appended a copy from the Register at Stratford, of the Baptisms, Marriages, and Burials of the Shakspeare Family, a plan of the property originally possessed by them, &c. On the same day with the House will be sold the Books of Visitors' Autographs, from 1821 to the present time; and a few lots of old-fashioned walnut-tree furniture, busts, portraits, &c. Too much praise cannot be given to the Shakspearean Club, at Stratford, for their activity in this matter. They have done, since 1835, attempting to preserve and renovate the memorials of the Poet and his family; but their funds had only enabled them to restore the tomb and monument in the chancel of Stratford Church, until the above purchase of part of the said house. We trust their patriotic movement will be liberally seconded by the public.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

(Concluded from page 86.)

ONE of the most picturesque incidents connected with the recent visit of the Archæological Institute at Norwich, was the gathering of Antiquaries on the walls of Burgh Castle, in Suffolk. The day was a very sunny one, and the attendance larger than was expected. Without the walls was a field of corn ready for the sickle, and within a fine full crop of Swedish turnips. The scene was extremely picturesque. Here were the Marquis of Northampton and Mr. Tucker Brooke Hallam (the historian of the Middle Ages), and Mr. Milman (the historian of Gibbon), philosophizing among the ruins—Sir John Boileau, the recent public spirited purchaser of the Castle, explaining the excavations he had made; Mr. Hartshorne, lecturing on Roman Ashlar Work and Roman Bonding-courses; Mr. Bancroft, the American Minister, wandering delighted amid these interesting memorials, with which he seemed to claim an equal feeling of antiquarian enthusiasm; Mr. Cunningham, the Secretary, hurrying to and fro to keep his company together, that no time might be lost in completing the excursions they contemplated; and the Dean of Westminster, quitting archæology for geology, with his hammer, his bag, and his note-book, breaking, gathering, and describing the nature and qualities of the materials of which the Castle was composed. Nor were ladies wanting to add to the picturesque beauty of the scene. Here were Mrs. Hilman and Mrs. Way, the Misses Stanley (daughters of the Bishop), and numerous ladies from Yarmouth and Norwich attracted by something more than female curiosity.

MEETING OF THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE, AT NORWICH.

Another picturesque incident connected with the same meeting, and of which we also supply a Sketch, was the part of the Lecture on Norwich Cathedral, delivered by Professor Willis in the Close of the Cathedral. Professor Willis is one of the clearest and most admirable lecturers that ever undertook to lecture. There is no misunderstanding him—he is thoroughly acquainted with his subject—has a lucid arrangement—a good voice, and a clear articulation. Whatever he illustrates he invests with interest; and the principles of Gothic Architecture in his hands is a subject which even interests ladies, who are not all of them, by the way, Mrs. Somervilles in science. The first part of the lecture was delivered in the Public Library, and explained by plans; the second part within and without the Cathedral, and explained upon the spot.

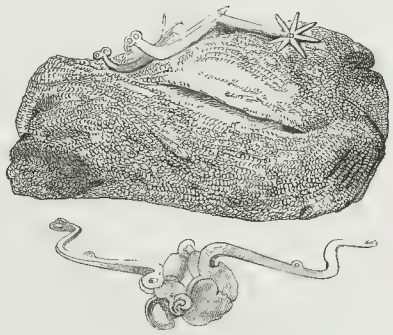
Our Third Engraving represents the Castle of Norwich, a Norman structure, recently recased in what was called twenty years ago, good old Norman; but now we know a good deal better, and can see the gross defects of the restoration. The Castle occupies a fine site, and really commands the city and surrounding country. Some good old genuine Norman work remains within, sufficient to create a wish that the Castle itself had been let alone. Norwich Castle was of a very different character Burgh Castle may be briefly described as an oblong Roman Castle, with round towers at the angles, and at intervals along the walls. The construction is of flint rubble, very massive, with layers of tiles at intervals of about ten feet; the tiles in layers of three, with a space of mortar between each layer, equal to the thickness of the tiles. In the towers, the intervals are not quite regular, the layers being sometimes closer, sometimes wider apart. The mortar has had pounded brick mixed with it. On the side next the river there was no wall; the overhanging cliff forming a sufficient protection.

NORWICH CASTLE.

The Museum collected for the occasion, and exhibited in a very large room at the Swan, in the Market-place, was one of the very best the Institute has as yet brought together. The multiplicity of objects assembled in the same room—their great antiquarian importance and rarity, to say nothing of their intrinsic value—many being of gold and silver—combined to form a most attractive exhibition. It is a disgrace to the British nation that we have not a collection of the same kind in the British Museum; but it is the fault of this country to refuse to collect when things are proffered, and only to begin to collect when they are dear, and not to be had.

The interest felt in the Museum has induced the Committee of the Institute to keep it open for a week longer—charging one shilling each for the first three days, and making it a free exhibition for the three last. We cordially congratulate the Institute on this very proper step. Nothing they could do else have done, would lend to a better result. Common people begin to consider that there is something of real importance in these old by-gone curiosities: our forefathers knew as much perhaps more, than ourselves, and that much may be obtained from a careful study of the fabrics of an earlier period. The collection, in many ways, is one of extraordinary interest to the mechanic, the jeweller, the artist, the house decorator, the historian, and the poet. Why should such a collection be dispersed?

A mass of Chain Mail found imbedded in the chalk bed of the Seine, and exhibited by Lord Hastings, was one of the chief curiosities of the Museum. A greater curiosity it would be difficult to find, even in the well stored collection of Sir Samuel R. Meyrick. Of this we give an Engraving.



MASS OF CHAIN MAIL, IN THE MUSEUM OF THE INSTITUTE, BELONGING TO THE LORD HASTINGS.

The next meeting of the Institute will be held at Lincoln, in the summer of 1848. Lord Brownlow has consented to preside.

PROFESSOR WILLIS'S LECTURE ON NORWICH CATHEDRAL.

THE EXCURSION TO BURGH CASTLE.

SIR CHARLES NAPIER'S SQUADRON IN PLYMOUTH SOUND.—DRAWN BY MR. N. M. CONDY.

SIR CHARLES NAPIER'S SQUADRON.

The Squadron, under the command of Sir Charles Napier, consisting of her Majesty's ships, St. Vincent (Flag), Vengeance, Queen, and Howe, arrived in Plymouth Sound on the 30th ult. A more lovely sight can scarcely be imagined than these splendid ships presented, entering the beautiful sheet of water that forms the Sound. On passing the Breakwater Light-house, each ship clewed up her sails in succession, as they rounded to, to take up their position in line. No sooner was the anchor gone, than "Way aloft" was the word; and, almost as soon as the cable had run out, the sails were furled, and the men piped down. Where all are smart, it is invidious to draw a distinction; but the Queen appeared to be a little quicker than the others. This is from having been longer in commission; and, no doubt, in the course of a month, it will be difficult to draw a line.

This beautiful Scene has been sketched by Mr. N. M. Condy; and engraved above; showing the St. Vincent leading in, and the Vengeance saluting; the Queen and Howe following.

The Squadron were joined, next day, by the Avenger and Stromboli steamers; and on Sunday morning sailed for Torbay, to meet the Caledonia, 120, Captain Dixon. Some other ships were expected to join them at Cork, where they were to proceed in a few days.

FRASCATI.

BY A LADY OF RANK.

At this season of the year, les bains de mer are the point of attraction, not only to those who study health, but also to many who, not weary of the gaiety they have been enjoying, seek to prolong the charms of a London Season, while escaping from its dense and heated atmospheres, by repairing to some spot where, without the sacrifice of health, society may still be found. Society, bien entendue, under another and more fascinating phase—no longer encumbered with dresses à la Pompadour, nor coiffures à la Renaissance, but society en dishabille, en peignoirs de mousseline, ou de barèges. In a word, society, arrayed in that charming simplicity of toilette which, unknowingly, banishes restraint, and induces that species of intimacy almost, as it were, indigenous to all visitors aux bains de mer in every part of the known world, save in England, where self-imposed etiquette is preferred to social intercourse. In explanation, or extenuation of this national peculiarity, it must be considered that at none of our watering-places can be found any establishment so conducted that persons of rank and fashion may venture to make it their domicile. This want of a general habitation obliges each family to reside in separate houses, in which houses they live as much to themselves, and as little in common with their neighbours, as though they were still resident in their London mansions. But, how differently, and how far more agreeably do our neighbours across the Channel arrange for the amusement of those visitors who frequent their coasts to enjoy the bathing season. Nowhere, perhaps, has this system of uniting the charms of agreeable society with the pursuit of health been better understood, nor brought to greater perfection, than at the Etablissement Frascati, at Ingouville, which is built, as it were, on the edge of the ocean, the waves of which, at high tide, are often seen to lash against its walls. As a sea view, it is difficult to imagine anything grander or more interesting than this front of the Hôtel presents to the visitor—in the broad ocean, covered with innumerable vessels of all denominations making their way to or from the harbour of Hâvre, as they may be returning from, or going to near or distant parts of the world.

On the opposite side of the building, which is quadrangular, there is a large garden for the use of the residents, and where the town's people are only admitted by paying a certain sum on the evenings when the military band plays, or when there is a ball or concert in the salon of the establishment. This salon, which is always open to the residents, is one of the most beautiful rooms, both as to its graceful and perfect proportions, as well as to its unique and elegant style of decoration that can anywhere be beheld. Here impromptu concerts and soirées dansantes nightly form the délices of the young, after the children have retired to rest, weary of all the pleasures, suited to their age, such as swings, wooden horses, &c., &c., which they have been enjoying in the garden.

Contiguous to the salon is the salle-de-billards, and beyond it a reading-room, in which all the journals of the day are to be found. These three buildings form nearly one side of the quadrangle. Another side is occupied below by the salons appropriated for the table d'hôte, where covers are sometimes laid in the full season for 140 persons; the average number during the summer months being about eighty. At this table d'hôte, which is served every day at half-past five, at the moderate charge of 3 francs ten sous (under 3*s.*), M. Brédart, the proprietor of the establishment, always presides; and the order, comfort, and bonne cuisine it daily presents, render it absurd for any one residing in the hotel to dine in his own apartment. One of the frequent habitués of the table d'hôte every season, though of course not a resident in the establishment, is the Russian Consul, M. Poggenpohl, whose name, and whose amiable courtesy will be remembered by all who had the honour of Prince Lieven's acquaintance during his embassy to London, at which period M. Poggenpohl was the Prince's secretary. There are three separate salles all communicating à volonté for the service of the table d'hôte. The smallest of these is at present set apart for the dinner of Queen Christina, her family, and suite, who are here pour les bains. But, nothing can exceed the simplicity of her Majesty's style of living here. She crosses the garden from her private apartments at all hours of the day in company with her children and their attendants, and proceeds to the beach, or wherever she may be going, without the slightest parade or ostentation. Her Majesty is said to be much pleased with her séjour, and means to prolong it for a month.

The Princesse de Ligne has just left the establishment, after a visit of some weeks; Madame la Comtesse de la Redoute, whose brother, the Duc d' Albufera, is married to the daughter of the still handsome Madame Sheiklar; and Madame Montaud, one of the most amiable and charming élégantes of Parisian society, are also among the departures; but their apartments have long since been engaged for fresh comers, whose arrivals have only been delayed from the impossibility of being lodged in the establishment. Mademoiselle de Bethune is still here, and still lame from the accident she met with on her journey hither. It appears that this lady's dread of steam is so invincible, that nothing could persuade her to venture on the chemin-de-fer, or trust herself on board the bateau-à-vapeur, and she therefore came from Paris in the now almost obsolete style of travelling—her own carriage, with post horses. Either from want of habit in the horses, or the postilion, or from some other cause which has not been assigned, a trifling accident occurred; and Mdlle. de Bethune, too terrified to reflect on the danger of the act she was committing, jumped out of the carriage, and received such severe injury that she is now only able to walk with the aid of crutches, after being carried about in a chair for some weeks.

Those individuals who partake of this lady's aversion to steam will not feel themselves reassured by the deplorable accident that happened to his Majesty Louis Philippe's new yacht, the Comte d'Eu, which had been built here, during the night after she left the harbour to proceed to Cherbourg. It seems almost incredible that a vessel built under such circumstances, for such a purpose, and with such peculiar care bestowed on each part of her construction, should have numbered among her crew one so totally careless or ignorant of the duties of his department as the unhappy man whose inattention caused the death of so many brave comrades. Some persons, on recovering from their first dismay, could not avoid seeing in the circumstances of this explosion—when his Majesty was not on board—another manifestation of that special Providence which seems to avert all evil from him personally, and argue that this accident will ensure double caution before Louis Philippe embarks in his yacht; while others, on seeing her towed back into harbour with her masts half lowered, in mournful token that she was bearing back the dead and the dying, looked on her with a shudder, and seemed to consider her as a doomed vessel, placed for ever, by her early scene of death and desolation, beyond the pale of service for pleasure or amusement. . . . .

FRASCATI.—LES BAINS DE MER.

But, to resume the subject of this article. It would be unfair, while speaking of the Hôtel Frascati, not to remark, that, independent of all the comfort and agrémens this establishment ensures to its visitors, from its peculiar situation, and its own resources, how many other charms are offered to strangers by the delightful rides and drives, the picturesque Sites, and the almost unrivalled prospects with which its immediate vicinity, half plain, half mountain, abounds. The view from the Côte d'Ingouville must be seen to be properly appreciated. It would be impossible to imagine anything more brilliant, more splendid, or more enchanting, as a coup-d'œil—than the sort of upper town built on the sides of this Côte, crowned with flowers and verdure, and reflecting itself in the broad ocean.

Here and there may be seen a palace—a model of grace and good taste—raising majestically its Italian roof, or its graceful cupola, above its richly-wooded terraces; appearing to look with disdain on the mercantile town, which, nevertheless, holds in its warehouses and its entrepôts, all the fortunes which enrich and adorn these villas. At a short distance from the above-mentioned palaces may be seen a modest pavilion, with its white walls and its green blinds—probably belonging to some speculator, who has not yet realised his enterprise—or affording a peaceful retreat to some quiet English family.

There are several ways by which this "mountain town" may be reached. There is a narrow, winding road, by which equestrians venture; and even the carts loaded with vegetables, fruit, and flowers from this banlieue to the Havre market descend. There are occasionally flights of steps roughly cut in the side of the mountain, which in places rises almost perpendicularly—an ascent by which saves the traveller a quarter of an hour's time in his eager walk to the summit of this verdant hill. Somewhat further distant from the town will be found an excellent road, accessible to any sort of equipage. This road is lined with houses, at first somewhat close to each other, belonging to persons still engaged in trade, but becoming further separate as they grow into pavilions and palaces. It is impossible for description to do justice to the view from the summit of this mountain, of which a French poet has observed—

Après Constantinople, il n'est rien de plus beau.

Nor is it only to the lover of picturesque sites and romantic scenery that the vicinity of Hâvre offers pleasure and amusement. The historian and the antiquary would find much matter, with ancient lore, well worthy of their attention; while the colossal wealth, and the gigantic mercantile speculations of its inhabitants, would render a sojourn, even in the town itself, desirable and agreeable to many in this age of speculation and invention.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, August 15.—Eleventh Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 16. The Sun rises at 4h. 48m., is due East at 6h. 49m.; and sets at 7h. 19m.
TUESDAY, 17. Duchess of Kent born, 1786
WEDNESDAY, 18.—The Length of the Day is 14h. 24m.; and that of the Night is 9h 36m
THURSDAY, 19.—The Moon enters her first Quarter at 5h. 1m. a m
FRIDAY, 20 —Venus sets at 8h. 42m. p.m., Mars rises at 9h 23m. p.m.; and Souths at 4h. 29m. after midnight
SATURDAY, 21.—Saturn rises at 7h. 37m. p.m.; and Souths at 52m. after 12 o'clock.

Venus is now fast approaching the Sun, but may still be seen near the western horizon in the evening twilight, and appears of a fine crescent form, when viewed through a telescope.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 21.

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
4 36	4 53	5 9	5 26	5 53	6 09	6 48	7 04	7 60	7 46	8 17	8 33	9 10	9 27

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"M.P."—In the months of August and September, the sun is in the signs Virgo and Libra, the moon, therefore, when near full in these months, is in the signs Pisces and Aries. These signs make a much less angle with the horizon of places having considerable latitude, than the opposite part of the Ecliptic; therefore, a greater portion of them rises in a given time than an equal portion of any other part of the Ecliptic, consequently, there will be less difference between the times of the moon's rising day by day, when she is in these signs. This must, however, happen every time she is in this part of her orbit, yet it is only remarkable when she happens to be full; and this can only be in the harvest months.—See "Illustrated London Almanack," 1846 and 1847, September.

"G. T., Dumfries, is thanked.

"Trio"—The surname of France Albert is Buzot.

"A Constant Reader" should apply, respecting the Paris journal, to Mr. Thomas, news agent, Catherine-street, Strand

"Peter," Ironwater.—It is a popular error to suppose that the circumstance of a funeral passing along a private pathway gives a public right of way. (See "Popular Errors Explained and Illustrated," p. 253.) The document should be stamped.

"A Sportsman."—The price of Mr. Scrope's work on deer-stalking has been reduced to twenty shillings. It is an improved edition of the work published at £2 2s.

"J. A."—Try. —Address, Woolwich. The patronage of the Royal Navy is lodged solely with the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.

"Wigney."—Rubbers and Paper for taking fac-similes of Monumental Brasses may be purchased of Mr. Bell, bookseller, Fleet-street

"A Subscriber," Glasgow. We cannot speak as to the "Distribution Society" in question; but, if the plan be by lottery, it is illegal.

"Charles." The yearly rent of Chambers in the principal Inns of Court varies from £20 to £100. In the smaller Inns the rent is, in some cases, as low as £12.

"Sportsman," Liverpool. The Engraving in question cannot now appear.

"A Constant Reader" should address either of the Artists named, at one of the publishers of the works illustrated by them

"A Correspondent" informs us (in correction of our statement at page 96) that Mr Freshfield, one of the candidates at the recent City election, resigned the appointment of Solicitor to the Bank, in 1840, and was succeeded by his son, of the same Christian name. At the same time, Mr. Freshfield retired from the firm of Banbridge, and was called to the bar

"P.," of Plumstead, is thanked for the Sketch, which shall be engraved in the course of our series of Illustrations of the Royal Year.

"Ignoramus."—Lord J. Russell was born 19th August, 1792 He was first returned to Parliament in 1820.

"Omega."—The written and printed character used by the Russians is not the Roman letter employed by the English, French, and Italians. It is a character almost as distinct and peculiar as the Greek.

"Louise," A marriage may be solemnized in London, by special license, although the parties are not residents of that city. The expense of a license is two or three pounds. The ceremony may be performed immediately after the license is obtained.

"W. S. B.," Liverpool.—Mr. A., marrying Miss B., an only child, is entitled to bear her arms on an escutcheon of pretence, and the husband of their only child should carry the quartered arms of A. and B. also on escutcheon of pretence. If the parties could not prove their descent from the families whose arms they have adopted, an application to the Herald's Office would obtain for them a grant of the same emblems, with certain differences to mark their particular house.

"D. M. P." We do not know of any work on German Heraldry similar to "Burke's General Armory."

"Mickey Free." The late Duchess of Wellington was Catherine, third daughter of Edward Michael Pakenham, second Lord Longford. Her Grace was born in 1772, married in 1806, and died in 1831. "Hart's Army List," published by Murray, is the best guide to the information required by our Correspondent.

"R. and C." of Speenhamland. Ung ie servirai, "One will I serve," is the motto of the Earl of Carnarvon. Ung is the old way of spelling Un

"L. L." Lord Granville Somerset is nephew of Lord William Somerset, and only brother of the present Duke of Beaufort.

"A Young Astronomer," Ipswich.—No comet was seen with the naked eye near the sun, but, the day was very cloudy, or it very probably would have been so seen. It was seen by two persons, with the assistance of telescopes, when very near the sun.

"A Midshipman" Companion of the Bath" informs us that the Cross of a C.B. is almost invariably used as an addition to the coat of arms; and brings to our notice the reformed statutes, published in the Supplement to the London Gazette of the 25th May, 1847, for the government of the Order of the Bath; whereby it is ordained "that it shall be lawful for the Companions of this Most Honourable Order to suspend a representation of their ribband and badge, and or insignia, as the case may be, from the bottom of the escutcheon containing their armorial bearings."

"J. H." Hull. The Government Annuity Office, Old Jewry.

"Pat," Rye We do not undertake to decide wagers

"P. C. G. W." The present system of Penny Postage first came into operation in the year 1839.

"Lyra"—Certainly.

"A. J. V."—To the best of our remembrance, the narrative is not biblical.

"Reuben's" defence will be a valid one

"T. F. C.," a Sailor The Macedonian, an our last Number, was drawn by a first-rate Marine Artist.

"D. T." City-road, states that the Macedonian is not an American but British built frigate; and that she was captured by the Americans nearly about the same time that we took the Chesapeake (in 1813).

"A Stotcher" and "Y. Z." should apply to the School of Design, Somerset House.

"A Subscriber," Stockton, is thanked for the Sketch; but we have not room to engrave it.

"J. W. K.," Ireland.—The address of Messrs. Stephenson and Bidder, the engineers, is 24, Great George-street, Westminster.

"J. W. M. L.," Leith.—Received.

"L. G.," Dublin, is thanked; but we had previously received the Drawings from our own Artist at Dublin.

"R.," Exeter.—The Salesmen Exhibitors live mostly in Leadenhall Market.

"A Young Gentleman."—On behalf of the progress of J. J., who died intestate, goes to his widow, and the remaining half to his sister.

"J. M. O." she did consult Harris's Post-Office Guide.

"A Constant Subscriber."—The address of the British Association for the Relief of the Distressed Irish and Scotch is South Sea House, Threadneedle-street.

"Miles" Any sum, to the Funds.

"Tantor."—"A reasonable time"—we think, one month.

Mr. Richard Payne Knight, the munificent patron of learning and the fine arts, bequeathed his collection of ancient bronzes, medals, pictures, and drawings, worth £30,000, to the British Museum.

"Halfeck."—Like many other terms. Translation cannot be briefly defined. (See an excellent article on the term, in the "Penny Cyclopædia.")

"A Well-wisher" is thanked, but we have not room for the Sketch.

"A Constant Subscriber," Falmouth, should address his inquiry to Mr. Wright, agricultural bookseller, 31, Haymarket.

"J. G."—Enough—declined.

"T. H." We have not room for the long letter.

"Q. E. Z."—For tests of the wholesomeness of Mushrooms, see the "Cyclopædia of Practical Receipts."

"A Subscriber," Hillingdon, is recommended to write to Sir Wm. Hooker, Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, respecting the Tussack Grass.

"Emily," Farnham.—Sonnet declined.

"W. J." should apply to the proprietor of a swimming bath.

"An Annuitier Subscriber."—The parties have a right to vote.

"W. J. M." Apply for the Accordion Instructor, to Mr. Cocks, May's-buildings, St. Martin's-lane.

"J. M.," Neath. The old superstition of the preservative effect of the child's caul is not yet worn out.

"J. H. J.," Bristol.—To prepare copying ink, add a little sugar to ordinary black ink

"G. B. S."—Apply for the Order of Confirmation to Messrs. Rivington, St. Paul's Churchyard. There are few Nos. in each Half-crown Part of our Journal.

"J. W. W.," Gloucester.—We are not in possession of the address

"S. S." may find a complete description of the Automaton Chess-Player in Sir David Brewster's "Natural Magic."

"J. W. Y.," Arnold; and "Guild Nunc."—The Queen's Speech was unavoidably omitted in a small portion of the Country Edition of our Journal of July 24.

"E. W.," Southsea, Hants.—We quite agree that "the Aphis has existed for ages past." Some commentators consider that the Hebrew word which is rendered in our translation of Joel, "caterpillar," and in the Septuagint, "ερυσιβη," is equivalent to "Aphis and Fungus." In former Numbers we have figured the insects which mostly tend to keep these creatures within due bounds, and we have full confidence in the perfection of Nature's works to feel assured that their excessive appearance is but as temporary a calamity as any former insect plague.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO SCOTLAND.—Next week, we shall commence a Series of PICTURESQUE ENGRAVINGS of the ROYAL TOUR AND VISIT; from Sketches by MR. LANDELLS.

BACK NUMBERS.

All Numbers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, one month old, will, in future, be considered "Back Numbers," and be charged each sixpence extra.

The Back Numbers are now reprinted; and any single Number from the commencement may be had by remitting One Shilling to the Office, or to any Bookseller or News-agent.

The Volumes and Parts will be charged the same as usual, viz., Volumes, 18s.; Parts, 2s. 6d.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, AUGUST 14, 1847.

THE return of Mr. Cobden for the West Riding of Yorkshire is the event of the week, and one of the most significant results of the Election. It was a spontaneous tribute to the Leader of the last great popular movement, and the return puts an end altogether to the idea of a Protectionist reaction. The party that defeated Lord Morpeth on the very question of Free-Trade, confess that they cannot make the least resistance to the man in whom that principle is embodied. It is one of those great changes in public opinion which are resistless. The representation of Yorkshire has always been one of the most honourable of the roll of Parliament: the population, energy, extent, and wealth of the district give its member a degree of power and influence few other constituencies can bestow. Thus, when Mr. Denison unseated Lord Morpeth at the last General Election, the victory was thought almost a decisive blow to his party and their policy of removing restrictions. So it was—for a time. But it is much easier to scatter a party than to annihilate a principle: the two are combined something like body and spirit—the latter surviving to avenge the murder done upon the first. The "trenchèd gashes" on the head of Banquo did not prevent his ghost from taking his place at the festival, and pushing the usurper from his stool; and what was ignominiously slain in the person of Lord Morpeth in 1841, revives in the person of Mr. Cobden in 1847 so strong and powerful, that resistance to it is impossible. Every member of the newly chosen Legislature should adopt Lord Morpeth's words, and remember them constantly, for they include the whole duty of a Government: "I trust that the Parliament now about to be called together, to take counsel for the good of the realm, may so advise and so act as to preserve peace without and concord within—as to deepen the springs of the nation's health, wealth, and strength—to devise the free interchange of commodities and of good offices among all the countries of the earth—to make the world's exuberance our own—to improve the comfort, to refine the habits, and to raise the character of the great bulk of our whole community—and, in a word, to keep our people as great as they are, and to make them happier than they ever have been before."

THERE must be something oppressive in the duties of Royalty; for, if we can credit common rumour, there are no less than four European Monarchs at this moment thinking or talking of abdication. They are the Kings of Holland and Belgium, the Emperor of Russia, and the Queen of Spain. From what we have seen, even in recent times, there is nothing in this way absolutely impossible. The father of the present King of Holland resigned his throne in his old age—for love; but the present King can hardly have the same motive. His father-in-law is quite alarmed at the bold these ideas of renunciation have got in the family, and has arrived at a stratagem expressly to dissuade him from uncrowning himself and unqueening his wife. His neighbour the King of the Belgians leads bad health; but he is so closely connected with the old diplomatist of the Tuileries that no one believes him. The idea of any King married to a daughter of Louis Philippe abdicating, is too monstrous to be credited. There is more probability of such an act from the Emperor of Russia: there is madness lurking in the blood of the Romanoffs; and we have in Charles the Fifth an example of absolute power abandoned in disgust. Constantine, the brother of Nicholas, refused to ascend the throne, conscious of the mental defect that sank him at times into a mere savage, as bloody as any of the monsters who have been the rulers of Russia—and they are many. The admission of incapacity and the refusal to be placed in a position where it might have worked such fearful mischief, are the best points in Constantine's character—almost the only redeeming ones. Has Nicholas grown weary of power? It is unlikely, but still not impossible. To be the one point and pivot on which the whole fabric of the empire of Russia rests is enough to break down any intellect, and make it long for repose. The abdication of the Queen of Spain would excite less surprise than any: that everything has been done to disgust and drive her into a false position is evident. She seems to be completely in the toils; and, if it is the object of the intrigue to make the throne vacant, it may be better done by persuading her to abdicate than by stronger measures. She is quite deprived of advisers; her husband is a sullen idiot; her mother is leagued with her arch-persecutor; and she has so many sources of vexation, that she may well say—

'Tis better to be lowly born,
And range with humble livers in content,
Than to be perk'd up in a glittering grief,
And wear a golden sorrow.

FRENCH OPINION.

WE last week remarked on the threatening appearance of public affairs in France. The Paris journals, though their language is restrained by the operation of laws that can be and are most arbitrarily enforced, speak in terms of great severity of the Government and its system, and utter truths of the people themselves, which, if stated by a foreigner, would probably be resented. Here is an extract from the Presse:—

Oh Robert Peel! why are you not Minister in France, if it were only for one session? What prodigies so easy to be accomplished would you not perform! England at present is outstanding against the entire world, the cobe hering become too small for her. France, on the contrary, is still too great in comparison with her population, which may be doubled without danger to her agriculture, deficient in credit, and deficient in enterprise, in manufactures, in confidence, in commerce, in her marine, without activity, without commerce. England is 80 years of age, if we calculate by the date of her manufactures. France is but 25. Will she still longer waste her youth, which might be so fruitfully and so nobly employed? What a valuable time she has lost! What immense resources she has neglected! No, it is not to the magnitude of her public works, nor to the too great number of railroads conceded, that the present crisis is to be attributed. We must ascribe it to other causes more various and more profound. We must attribute it first, and above all, to the paucity of men of capacity amongst us, and to the little value we set upon original ideas. We possess brilliant wit, but we are deficient in sound understanding. Common sense has forgotten to become naturalized in France. In every case we set the plough before the oxen, art before science, manufactures before agriculture, superfluities before necessaries, luxury before comfort, private credit before public credit! Our farmers become proprietors when our proprietors ought to become farmers. The children of our wealthy business, manufacturers learn Greek and Latin, when they ought to learn German and English. They become barristers, physicians, and writers, through contempt of their paternal professions, whilst a contrary disposition would lead them to fortune more honourably and more surely. As soon as a company is formed we exclaim against coalitions; as soon as speculation appears we treat it as jobbing, as if the most exquisite wine did not commence by being the produce of fermentation—as if the maturity of the grape had not generally the effervescence of youth for its prelude. We too frequently forget that many eccentricities are repressed of themselves, and that many dangers have ceased to exist solely because they had arisen. We know not where our Government is leading us, nor does itself know, and when we ask the question, it escapes the difficulty of giving a precise answer by the vagueness of gr.nd speeches. We have no object in view. We suffer the peace we enjoy to be fallow that fertile soil which would return a hundredfold all that we could expend upon it.

The Constitutionnel says.—

Everything around us progresses towards liberty; everywhere Governments are obliged to reckon with that power of ideas, which increases every day. France alone has not her part in the rich harvest which she herself has sown, and which appears to be reaped altogether by the labourers of the eleventh hour. What is the conduct of the French Government? At home, it is endeavouring to root out, one after another, all the germs of liberty and progress; it recalls before the employment of any means, however wretched they may be, to put down in the heart of the populations every generous aspiration, every disinterested idea; it infuses into the country egotism, sordid calculations, and the disdain of every patriotic sentiment, it makes use of corruption as of opium to lull to sleep a people which was the missionary of liberty. As Ireland was its martyr. Abroad, not being able to force liberty back, it endeavours to impede its course. In England it eulogised the leaders of the Tories until the day they became Liberals; it sought the alliance of the ultra-Tories, in the hope of overcoming the Whigs, still tottering in power.

After sketching the policy of France in Belgium, Switzerland, and Italy—in all repressive and retrograde—it continues: —

Is it necessary for us to say what French diplomacy has effected in Spain, and what part it desired to play in Portugal? Slavery, abortion, or scandal are the fruits produced everywhere by the policy of October 29; could it be otherwise? A Libera. Government which denies liberty, a Government raised to power by intrigue and which imitates all those which have emerged from a reaction against the political influence of the clergy, and which endeavours at present to revive for its profit that influence, cannot find any other means of action than corruption, and cannot produce anything but what it touches. The effects are similar to the causes.

THE WEATHER.

The weather during the past week has been cold and dull; the sky has been principally covered by cloud. The wind has been from the S.W. The temperature has been somewhat below the average of the season.

The following are some particulars of each day: Friday, the sky was generally overcast, till 4 p.m., and nearly cloudy afterwards, but that time, till midnight. Rain was falling during the previous night, and part of the afternoon of Thursday. the amount collected was nearly one inch. The direction of the wind, on Friday, was N.W. The average temperature of the day was 64°. The extreme thermometrical readings on grass were 49° and 106°. Saturday, the sky was mostly covered by clouds throughout the day. The direction of the wind was S.W., the average temperature of the day, 64°; the extreme thermometrical readings on grass were 43° and 122°. Sunday, the amount of cloud was variable; at times, the sky was wholly covered, at other times only partially; the least cloud prevailed during the evening. At about half-past two o'clock, several claps of thunder were heard in the N.W. One very vivid flash of lightning was seen at 2h. 34m. 28s., followed by thunder in 5 seconds afterwards; so that the storm approached within one mile of the spot. The direction of the wind was chiefly S W. The average temperature of the day was 58½°. Monday the sky was nearly wholly covered by clouds throughout the day: their principal modifications were cumulus, scud, and heavy clouds. The direction of the wind was S S W: the average temperature of the day was 58½°. The extreme thermometrical readings on grass were 40° and 92° Tuesday, the sky was cloudy throughout the day. Rain was falling occasionally. The wind was S.W. the day was 64°. The extreme thermometrical readings on grass were 43° and 124°. Wednesday night was close and very warm. The lowest reading during the night was 62½° Thursday, the sky was chiefly cloudy till 8h. A.M.; and, after this time the amount was variable, mostly consisting of detached cumuli The direction of the wind was W.S.W. The day was warm: its average temperature was 71°. The extreme thermometrical readings on grass were 127° and 50°. The average temperature of the week was 61½°

The extreme thermometrical readings of each day were:

Friday,	Aug. 6	the highest reading on the day was 91 deg., and the lowest was 56½ deg.
Saturday,	7	.....	73 ..... 50½
Sunday,	8	.....	65 39
Monday,	9	.....	66½ 50
Tuesday,	10	.....	64½ 48
Wednesday,	11	.....	75 53
Thursday,	12	.....	82 60

Blackheath, Friday, Aug. 13, 1847. J. G.

CHURCH. UNIVERSITIES &c.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.

FIRST EXAMINATION FOR THE DEGREE OF BACHELOR OF MEDICINE, 1847.

The following is a list of the candidates who have passed this examination:—

FIRST DIVISION.

Ball, R. B., University College	Devenish, S. W., Guy's Hospital
Beck, J. S., University College	Drew, J., Royal Medical and Chirurgical School of Medicine
Bowman, W., School of Medicine	Griffith, R., King's College
Bramwell, C. C., University College	Jago, F. W. P., London Hospital
Bridgwater, T., King's College	Lovell, J. C., King's College
Chichester, B. C., University College	Morris, J., University College
Edge, W. F., University College	Pearse, W. G., Middlesex Hospital
Cubitt, G. B., King's College	Willett, J., Guy's Hospital.

SECOND DIVISION.

Bailey, J., University College	Cross, W., St. George's Hospital
Bowman, J. E., St. Bartholomew's Hospital	Pardii, H., King's College
Brooke, Reginald, Royal Medical and Chirurgical School of Medicine	Parker, W. C., St. Bartholomew's Hospital
Kingdon, G. H., St. Thomas's Hospital	Whittaker, R. J., Royal Manchester School of Medicine

THE LATE MR BETTS. THE DISTILLER. The late Mr. J. T Betts, formerly distiller of Smithfield Bars, late of Broomfield House, Clapham, Surrey, died possessed of personal property valued at £20,000. His business he has relinquished to his four sons at a valuation of £20,000. He has bequeathed to his wife, who is the sole acting executrix, the interest of £30,000, and leaves her the carriages, horses, plate, &c., absolutely, and a specific sum. To his son William £1,000, for services rendered in the business, beyond his share. The books to be divided equally among his six children, who are the residuary legatees over all his property.

THE NEW PARLIAMENT.

MEMBERS ELECTED FOR ENGLISH COUNTIES.

[In last week's paper we gave a list of all the returns for English Counties received up to the time of going to press, and now furnish the whole of the returns, with the exception of North Warwick and West Somerset, which have not yet been received.] W. denotes Whig; C. Conservative.

Bedfordshire
Lord Alfred .. .. W
H Russell .. W
Berkshire
Palmer C
Pusey C
Lord Barrington
Buckinghamshire
Carrington .. .. W
Du Pré C
Disraeli C
Cambridgeshire
Yorke .. .. W
Townsley .. W
Lord G Manners .. C
Cheshire (North)
Egerton C
Stanley C
Cheshire (South)
Sir P Egerton .. C
Tollemache .. C
Cornwall (East)
Carew .. .. W
Rolleston .. .. W
Cornwall (West)
Pendarves .. W
Sir C Lemon .. W
Cumberland (East)
Howard .. .. W
Marshall .. .. W
Cumberland (West)
Stanley C
Lowther C
Derbyshire (North)
Hon G H Cavendish W
Evans .. .. W
Derbyshire (South)
Colville .. .. W
Mundy C
Devonshire (North)
Sir T D Acland .. C
L W Buck .. W
Devonshire (South)
Lord Courtenay .. W
Sir J D Y Buller
Dorsetshire
Hanbro C
Bernor C
Fooyer C
Durham (North)
R D Shafto .. W
Lord Seaham .. C
Durham (South)
Lord R Vane .. W
Farrer C
Essex (South)
Branston C
Bramston .. W
Gloucestershire (East)
Sir W Codrington .. C
Marquis Worcester .. C
Gloucestershire (West)
Granley Berkeley .. C
Hale C
Hampshire (North)
C S Lefevre .. W
Sir W Heathcote .. C

Hampshire (South)
Lord C Wellesley .. C
Harcourt C
Herefordshire
C O Lewis .. .. W
Bailey C
Haggard C
Hertfordshire
Heard .. .. W
Halsey C
Sir H Meux .. C
Huntingdonshire
Fellowes .. .. W
Thornhill .. .. W
Isle of Wight
Simeon .. .. W
Kent (East)
Deedes .. .. W
Plumptre C
Kent (West)
Filmer C
Hodges .. .. W
Lancashire (North)
Patten .. .. W
Heywood .. .. W
Lancashire (South
Villiers .. .. W
Brown .. .. W
Leicestershire (North)
Lord G Manners .. C
Pochin C
Leicestershire (South)
Halford C
Packe C
Lincolnshire (North)
Christopher .. C
Chaplin C
Lincolnshire (South)
Sir J Trollope .. C
Lord Burghley .. C
Middlesex
Lord B Grosvenor W
Mr B Osborne .. W
Norfolk (East)
Wodehouse C
Durrington C
Northamptonshire (North)
T P Maunell .. C
Ashe C
Northamptonshire (South)
Sir C Knightley .. C
Vyse .. .. W
Northumberland (North)
Grey .. .. W
Lord Ossulston .. C
Northumberland (South)
Beaumont .. .. W
Sir H Ogle .. W
Nottinghamshire (North)
Lord H Bentinck .. C
Houldsworth .. W
Nottinghamshire (South)
Hildyard .. .. W
Not elected .. ..
Oxfordshire
Lord Norreys C
Harcourt .. .. W
Henley C
Shropshire (North)
Vint Clive C
W O Gore C
Shropshire (South)
Hon R H Clive .. C
Viset Newport .. C
Somersetshire (East)
Miles .. .. W
Pinney .. .. W
Staffordshire (North)
C B Adderley .. C
Lord Brackley .. C
Staffordshire (South)
Col Anson .. .. W
Lord Ingestre .. C
Suffolk (East)
Lord Rendlesham .. C
H S Cocks C
Suffolk (West)
Waddington C
Benyon C
Surrey (East)
King .. .. W
Alcock .. .. W
Surrey (West)
Denison .. .. W
Drummond C
Sussex (East)
Fuller C
Frewen C
Sussex (West)
Earl of Marsh .. C
Prime C
Warwickshire (South)
Shirley C
Lord Guernsey .. C
Westmoreland
Hon H C Lowther .. C
Ald Thompson .. C
Wiltshire (North)
Long C
Calcraft C
Wilts (South)
Sidney Herbert .. C
Secretary to the Admiralty
Captain Hamilton .. C
Foley .. .. W
Worcestershire (W)
General Lygon .. C
Knight C
Yorkshire (East)
Lord Hotham .. C
Broadley C
Yorkshire (North)
Gayley .. .. W
O'Ormsonbe .. W
Yorkshire (West Rid)
Lord Morpeth .. W
Cobden .. .. W

* Returned also for Wolverhampton. † Elected also for Stockport.

MEMBERS RETURNED FOR WALES.

Anglesea
Lord G P Paget .. W
Anglesea, County
Sir R B W Bulkeley W
Brecon
Watkins .. .. W
Breconshire
Bailey C
Cardiff
De Ricbell .. C
Cardigan
Pryse .. .. W
Carmarthen
Morris .. .. W
Carnarvon
Pendas .. .. W
Carnarthenshire
Trevor C
Davies C

Carnarvonshire
Pennant C
Denbighshire
Sir W W Wynn .. C
Hon. W Bagot .. C
Denbigh
West .. .. W
Flint Boroughs
Hanmer .. .. W
Flintshire
Hon E L Mostyn W
Glamorganshire
Lord Adare C
Talbot C
Haverfordwest
Evans C
Merionethshire
Wynn C
Merthyr Tydvil
Sir J Guest .. W

Monmouthshire
C O Morgan C
Lord G Somerset .. C
Monmouth
Hon. W Bagot .. C
Montgomeryshire
Wynn C
Montgomery
Cholmondeley .. C
Pugh C
Pembroke
Sir J Owen C
Pembrokeshire
Vincent Lewis .. C
Radnorshire
Sir W Pearse .. C
Radnor, &c
Sir T F Lewis .. W
Swansea
Vivian .. .. W

* A double return.

MEMBERS RETURNED FOR SCOTLAND.

Aberdeenshire
Admiral Gordon .. C
Arcyllshy
D M'Neill C
Ayr
Lord J Stuart .. W
Ayrshire
Oswald .. .. W
Banff, County
J Duff .. .. W
Berwickshire
Hon F Scott .. W
Buteshire
Wortley C
Caithness-shire
Traill .. .. W
Clackmannan and Kinross
Gre Bouverie .. W
Dumfriesshire
Lord Drum anrig .. C
Dumfries, Burghs
Ewart .. .. W
Dundee
G Duncan .. W
Edinburgh
Cowan .. .. W
W G Craig
Edinburghshire
Sir Hope C
Elgin and Nairn, Counties
Bruce .. .. W

Elgin, Burghs
Duff .. .. W
Falkirk, Burghs
Lord Linc C
Fifeshire
Forgan .. .. W
Forfarshire
Lord Ruthyen .. W
Glasgow
Dunlop .. .. W
Hastie .. .. W
Haddingtonshire
Lord Melgund .. W
Haddington
Sir H Y Davie .. W
Haddingtonshire
Charteris C
Inverness, Burghs
A Matheson .. C
Inverness-shire
W Baillie .. .. W
Kilmarnock, &c
Dalrymple .. .. W
Kincardineshire
Hon H Arbuthnot W
Kirkcaldy, &c
Col Ferguson .. W
Kirkcudbright
Sir Hugh Macdonald W
Lanarkshire
W Lockhart C

Leith, &c
Rutherfurd .. .. W
Linlithgowshire
Johnstone .. .. W
Montrose
Joseph Hume .. W
Paisley
A Hastie .. .. W
Perth
F Maule .. .. W
Perthshire
D Drummond .. C
Renfrewshire
Col Mure C
Roxburghshire
J E Elliot .. .. W
Selkirkshire
Lockhart C
St Andrews, &c
E Ellice, jun .. W
Stirling, Burghs
Smith .. .. W
Stirlingshire
Forbes C
Wick Boroughs
Loch .. .. W
Wigton, Burghs
Sir J M Stewart .. W
Wigtonshire
Capt T Dalrymple W

MEMBERS RETURNED FOR IRELAND.

Armagh, County
Sir W Verner C
Caulfield .. .. W
Armagh
Col Rawdon .. W
Antrim, County
N Alexander C
Sir E M Macnaghten .. C
Antrim Boroughs
Vise Bernard .. C
Belfast
Tennant .. .. W
Lord J Chichester .. C
Carrickfergus
Hon W H Cotton .. C
Carlow, County
Col Bruen C
Capt M Clintock .. C
Carlow
Raphe .. .. W
Cashel
T O Bras .. .. W
Cavan
Young C
Col Maxwell .. C
Clonmel
Hon C Lawless .. W
Cloughs
Dr Boyd C
Cork
Pigou .. .. W
Callaghan .. .. W
Donegal
Col Connolly .. C
Sir R Hayes .. W
Downpatrick
Kor C
Downshire
Vise Castlereagh .. C
Lord E Hill .. C
Drogheda
Sir W Somerville W
Dublin, City
F Grogan C
J Reynolds .. W
Dublin, County
Hamilton C
Le Hunte C

Dublin University
Hamilton C
Shaw C
Dundalk
Hon Cavendish .. W
Dungannon
Lord Northland .. C
Dungarvan
R L Shell .. W
Ennis
Sir Edward Mahon W
Enniskillen
Cole C
Fermanagh
Sir A Brooke .. C
Hon J Cole .. C
Galway, County
Galway, Town
Blake .. .. W
Galway
Galway, County
H M St George .. C
Sir Burke .. W
Kerry, County
M O'Connell .. W
Herbert .. .. W
Kilkenny (City)
J O'Connell .. W
Kilkenny
King's County
Westenra C
Armstrong .. W
Kinsale
R L Guinness .. C
Leitrim
Hon C Clements .. W
E G Tomlinson .. W
Limerick (City)
Lundy .. .. W
Limerick, County
Lundy .. .. W
Sir H Seymour .. C
Londonderry, City
Sir A A Ferguson W
Louth
H M Bellew .. W
O'Ferrall .. .. W
Londonderry, County
Sir R Jackson .. C
Capt Jones C

Mallow
Norreys .. .. W
Meath
M E Corbally .. W
M Gratian .. W
Monaghan
Hon V Dawson .. W
A P Lecale .. W
New Ross
Talbot .. .. W
Newry
Mark Newry .. C
Portarlington
Col Dunne .. W
Queen's County
Hon T Vesey .. C
Fitzpatrick .. W
Ross
Lambert .. .. W
Sligo, County
J O'Dowda .. W
J Gore C
Tipperary
Richard Maher .. W
Francis Scully .. W
Tralee
M O'Connell .. W
Tyrone
Lord C Hamilton .. C
Right Hon G Corry .. C
Waterford, City
T Meagher .. W
D O'Connell .. W
Waterford, County
Power .. .. W
L Keating .. W
Wexford, County
Sir J Power .. W
Jas Fagan .. W
Wexford
Devereux .. W
Westmeath
Sir P Nugent .. W
H Meares .. W
Wicklow, County
Lord Milton .. W
Howard .. .. W
Wicklow
Tottenham .. W

CLOSE AND PROGRESS OF POLLS.

CLONMEL.

Lawless 174
Monaghan 0

DENBIGHSHIRE.

Wynn 2055
Bagot 1630
Biddulph 1394

DUBLIN CITY.

Grogan 3457
Reynolds 3315
Gregory 3209

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY.

Hamilton 738
Shaw 572
Napier 540
M'Cullagh 374

ESSEX (NORTH).

Tyrrell 5479
Beresford 2292
Rebow 1555
Harrison 86

FIFESHIRE.

SECOND DAY'S POLL.

Fergus 826
Balfour 750

GLOUCESTERSHIRE (WEST).

R J Hale 4240
Hon. G. Berkeley .. 3741
G. Berkeley 2123

LEITRIM COUNTY.

FIRST DAY, 5 O'CLOCK.

Tennison (Repealer) 53
Godley 30
Clements 46

LIMERICK COUNTY.

WEDNESDAY, 5 O'CLOCK.

Monsell 236
W. S. O'Brien 122
Powell 135
O'Connell 129

LONGFORD COUNTY.

WEDNESDAY, 5 O'CLOCK.

Blacknall 326
Fox 321
Lefroy 167
Harman 167

MEATH.

FIRST DAY'S POLL.

Corbally 231
Reynolds 227
Singleton 119

MONMOUTHSHIRE.

SECOND DAY, 4 O'CLOCK.

Morgan 2949
Lord G Somerset .. 2233
Capt Somerset 2182

KENT (WEST).

Filmer 3.7
Hodges .. .. .. 3...
Austen 368

MIDDLESEX.

Lord B. Grosvenor 4944
Osborne 417
Col. Wood .. .. .. 3...
NORTHAMPTONSHIR
Knightly .. .. .. 2...
Vyse 4000
Cohen .. .. .. 2...
Henley .. .. .. 1...
MONTROSE BURGHS.
Hume 553
Greenhill .. .. .. 4...
NORTHUMBERLAND
(NORTH).
Grey 136
Ossulston .. .. .. 1...
Lovaine .. .. .. 1...
PEEBLESSHIRE.
French .. .. .. 3...
Grant .. .. .. 2...
Blake 115
STAFFORDSHIRE
(NORTH).
Adderley 4783
Brackley 4071
Buller 3306

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

THE HEALTH OF THE METROPOLIS.—A meeting was held on Tuesday evening, in the Literary and Scientific Institution, Leicester-square, to consider the best means of preventing a pestilence in the metropolis. Sir C. Aldis having taken the chair, Mr. C. Kenrance spoke to the following effect:—He shared the apprehensions which were excited last year by a letter from the Lord Mayor, stating that cholera had made its appearance, and recommending an appeal to the New River Company to direct a flow of water during the night, so as to flush and clear the gullies and drains with their districts. Those apprehensions had been wholly removed by the memorable thunder storm, which rendered such an appeal unnecessary. Having attended to the duties of the Health of Towns Bill, from which, he observed, the first Minister of the Crown had been induced, by fits of intimidation, to omit the metropolis, and having pointed out the evils arising from the want of such a measure, particularly during unusually warm weather, Mr. Cochrane addressed such an appeal as was last year suggested by the Lord Mayor to the various water companies. He also advised the inhabitants of the respective parishes of the metropolis to press upon the parochial authorities the advantage of establishing baths and washhouses for the poor. On the authority of Government officers, it appeared that no less than 60,000 persons were killed annually by imperfect sanatory regulations. As soon as those institutions were then adopted, having for object the purification of the metropolis.

THE NEW COAL EXCHANGE.—On Tuesday, by order of the Committee of the City Improvements, the first portion of the buildings, consisting of seven houses in St. Mary-at-Hill, and Upper Thames-street, Billingsgate, were disposed of by auction, for the purpose of being removed, to form the site of the new Coal Exchange. In a few days the old Exchange, and some other buildings, will come under the hammer, when the erection of the new structure will be forthwith commenced. This will be after an elegant design which was in the Royal Institution, Trafalgar-square, and the completion of which will cost about £100,000. A temporary building has been raised on the Custom House Quay, by permission of the Commissioners of Customs, for the accommodation of the coal merchants, factors, &c.

OPPOSITION TO THE ERECTION OF BATHS AND WASHHOUSES.—The rate-payers of the united parishes of St. Andrew, Holborn, above bars, and St. George the Martyr, containing a population of 43,000, have determined to resist the proposition of erecting baths and washhouses within their boundaries. A petition for their establishment was brought before the parishioners on Monday evening, and was rejected by a large majority. Mr. John Bond Taylor, the proposer, then demanded a poll, which terminated on Wednesday afternoon, when the clerk to the union announced the state of the gross poll to be as follows: For Mr Taylor's resolution, 1819, against it, 854: majority against the resolution, 965.

ANOTHER FALL IN THE PRICE OF BREAD.—On Wednesday morning the bakers of the metropolis reduced the price of the 4lbs loaf to 7d.: second-hour bread of most excellent quality was also procurable for 6½d. in the neighbourhoods of Lambeth, the Borough, Whitechapel, and other places.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS IN THE METROPOLIS.—The number of births which took place during the week ending August 7, was 1,666 of the male sex, and 1,586 females, making a total of 3,252. This number is less by 84 than that of the previous week. The number of deaths was 996, the number of males and females being equal, of each 499. This number exceeds by 34 that of the preceding week, and by 68 the weekly average of the last five summers.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

THE LATE FATAL GUN-COTTON EXPLOSION AT FAVERSHAM.

The adjourned inquiry into this disastrous accident was resumed, on Monday morning, at Faversham, before Mr. Hinde, Coroner for East Kent, and the Jury impanelled on the 16th ultimo.

Several witnesses were examined. Their evidence generally went to prove that the most praiseworthy solicitude was always manifested by Mr Hall, the managing proprietor, for the safety of his workpeople, who were exposed to no greater risk than he himself daily encountered; and it was proved that the man who had the immediate regulation of the temperature in the works was careful and steady. None even of the witnesses who sustained injuries were able to assign any cause for the explosion.

The Jury unanimously agreed to the following verdict:—"That the deceased Henry Topping was killed by the explosion of a certain gun-cotton factory, but how that explosion arose no evidence appears."

The Coroner said, the Jury attributed no blame whatever, either to Messrs. Hall or to any other person employed in the factory.

The sufferers are going on as favourably as can be desired. The total number of deaths resulting from the accident has been twenty-one. Only seven bodies have been discovered, the remaining ten having been blown to atoms. Portions of the human frame are still found in the corn-fields, at a great distance from the scene of the catastrophe.

FATAL ACCIDENT FROM FIRE-ARMS.—On Sunday evening the following deplorable and fatal occurrence took place in Battersea-fields:—David Day, a young man, about twenty years of age, who was employed in Mr. Wilson's cane manufactory, at Wandsworth, had been out with some of his fellow-workmen shooting at the small birds in Battersea-fields the greater part of the day, when in making his way through a hedge in Mr. Graham's barn-yard, which he was dragging by the muzzle, exploded, and the contents passed through his nose, causing almost instantaneous death.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT AN ELECTION IN SCOTLAND.—An alarming accident took place at the nomination for Peebles county, on Thursday (last week), by which between thirty and forty persons were more or less injured, though fortunately no lives were lost. The hustings were erected in the court of the Town-Hall, and were raised to the height of about twelve feet above the level of the ground. The Sheriff had concluded the reading of the writ, &c., and Mr. Forbes, of Pitsperfield, was in the act of proposing Mr. Mackenzie, the late member, when, in an instant, the entire flooring of the hustings became separated from the front and back supports, and came down with a fearful crash, precipitating the whole of its occupants to the ground, with the exception of the gentleman who was speaking and another, who saved themselves by clinging to the front rail. The reporters, who were seated at a table in front, as well as a elevation of about half the height of the hustings, were overthrown by the shock, and considerably injured. Among the persons hurt by the accident were Mr. Mackenzie (one of the candidates) who is bruised on the shoulder; Mr. C. Cowan (the new member for Edinburgh), who has received a sprained ankle; Mr. John Veitch, of Woodside, who has sustained a compound fracture of the tibia and dislocation of the ankle-joint, and who is hardly expected to survive; Mr. J. M. Macmurray has had his kneecap fractured; and Mr. T. Horsburgh, of Fern, his left leg broken. Several other persons were severely cut and bruised. About thirteen or fourteen persons only escaped uninjured.

DESTRUCTION OF A PAPER MILL BY FIRE.—On the night of Monday last, at one of the workmen in the paper mill of Messrs. Nathaniel Grace and Co., at Sonthwood, near Newcastle-upon-Tyne, was lighting the gas, the flame communicated with some rope, and quickly spread over the whole premises. The fabric of the mill being chiefly wood, and the stock of rope and paper highly combustible, the whole was destroyed. The loss has been stated at £10,000, and is partially insured.

FIRE IN FLEET-STREET.—Shortly after one o'clock on Thursday morning, a fire attended with much loss of property, took place in Fleet-street, opposite, near Temple-bar. It originated in the shop, and by the time the family were aroused, the flames had spread considerably, and although the engines were soon on the spot, and an abundance of water supplied, the fire was not got under before the shop-stock was consumed, and the building greatly damaged. The property destroyed is insured in the Sun Fire office.

AWFULLY SUDDEN DEATH.—The Rev. Thomas Blackburne, Rector of Prestwich, died suddenly, at Liverpool, on Thursday evening (last week). He had gone over to that town to attend the annual meeting of the Clergy Orphans' Charity. After being present at divine service, at St. Peter's Church, and dinner which, subsequently, was provided at the Adelphi Hotel, he returned, in company with his host, the Rev. W. Hesketh, to the dwelling of the latter, at St. Michael's Hamlet, Toxteth-park. A party of friends had assembled there to meet them, and the evening was spent very pleasantly till about a quarter to eleven o'clock, when Mr. Blackburne breathed heavily two or three, sank back in his chair, and fell to the floor. Mrs. Blackburne ran to him in the greatest consternation and alarm. Medical assistance was promptly sent for, and, in the mean time, various remedies were resorted to, but without effect, as, on the arrival of Mr. Hodgson, surgeon, he had breathed his last. Dr. Formby arrived almost directly after, but both concurred in the opinion that nothing could have saved Mr. Blackburne, the attack being apoplexy.

POSTSCRIPT.

SERIOUS FIRE AT MANCHESTER.

A fire, which did very great damage, broke out at Manchester on Wednesday evening, in a block of buildings bounded by Market-street, New Brow-street, Fen-street, and Swan-lane. This pile consisted of three shops in Market-street, and several warehouses and manufactories fronting, some of which extended over the shops in Market-street. The entire block of buildings was five stories above ground, and a cellar underneath was occupied as warehouse. The fire was discovered about half-past seven o'clock, and though five fire-engines were quickly brought to the spot, it extended with such rapidity, that in about an hour the whole pile was in a blaze, and there was no chance of saving the property. Ultimately there was nothing but the bare walls of the building left standing. The amount of damage sustained is not known, but it is estimated at not less than £40,000. The pile of buildings above described, in which the fire broke out, which is covered by insurance. Mr. Thomas Haigh, woollen-cloth manufacturer, estimates his loss at nearly £6,000. The loss of Messrs. Cunliffes and Brooks, to whom the building belongs in which Mr. Hewitt and Messrs. Fortons and Co.'s shops were situated, is estimated at £1,500 for the building.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.—The Gazette of last night contains a proclamation, agreed to at the Privy Council, at Osborne House, on Wednesday, proroguing the Parliament from September 21, to the 12th of October.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

The most interesting circumstance mentioned in the latest Paris papers is the departure of the King and the Royal Family for Eu, by the Great Northern Railway. The National has the old story that his Majesty was looking far from well. The Princess de Joinville and the Duchesse d'Aumale are still at the Tuileries.

SPAIN.

In consequence of the very favourable accounts received by the Spanish Government respecting the state of the grain harvest in all the provinces of Spain, the Government has issued a decree authorising the exportation of grain of all kinds.

POLAND.

The Poles, Theophilus Wisniewski and Joseph Kapuszinski were executed on the 31st of July, at Lemberg. The execution was looked on as a martyrdom. On the scaffold the victims urged the people to persevere for the liberation of Poland. Crowns of flowers were showered upon them as they proceeded to their death. It was a triumph rather than an execution.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

The Queen held a Privy Council at one o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, at Osborne. It was attended by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, the Lord Chancellor, the Lord President of the Council, the Lord Privy Seal, the Lord Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Lord of the Treasury, the Secretaries of State for the Foreign and Colonial Departments, the First Lord of the Admiralty, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, and the Master of the Horse. Her Majesty in Council was pleased to order that Parliament should be prorogued until 12th of October. Her Majesty afterwards took an excursion to sea in the Fairy. The Royal dinner party, on Tuesday, included his Serene Highness the Prince of Leiningen, Earl Cowley, and Lord John Russell.

On Wednesday morning her Majesty and her Royal Consort took their usual early walk. The Princess Royal, and the Princess Alice rode on the beach, and the Prince of Wales, Prince Alfred, and the Princess Helena, took airings in the pleasure grounds.

THE QUEEN'S VISIT TO SCOTLAND.

At six o'clock on Wednesday evening her Majesty, Prince Albert, and a portion of the Royal Family, accompanied by the Prince of Leiningen and suite, embarked in the Royal yacht, from Osborne-pier, under salutes from the Royal yacht squadron, battery, West Cowes Castle, and Portsmouth Harbour, on the trip to Scotland. The Royal squadron consisted of the two Royal yachts, the Undine, Black Eagle, Scourge, and Garland. The squadron made all speed, passing through Cowes Roads. The night was passed in Yarmouth Roads. Her Majesty was to sleep on board the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert on the 12th, at Dartmouth; on the 13th, at Milford Haven; on the 14th, at the Menai Straits; on the 15th, at Leighton. On the 16th, her Majesty will proceed up the Clyde as far as Dumbarton, and thence to Loch Long, on the 17th, she will go to Inveraray, and return to Lochgilp, passing through the Crinan Canal to Crinan, in a barge belonging to Messrs Thomson and M'Connel, and Messrs. G. and J. Burns. On the 18th, her Majesty will sail from Crinan to Staffa and Iona, and thence to Fort-William.

According to present arrangements, her Majesty may be expected on the Clyde on Monday next. As no place in the kingdom is better calculated for an aquatic display than the firth of Clyde, and, as one-half of the population of Scotland resort, each season, to the coast, the turn-out, it may be safely stated, will exceed everything of the kind that has ever hitherto been witnessed in Scotland. A fleet of Clyde steamers are to be specially engaged for the conveyance of several thousands who, we doubt not, will attest themselves of this opportunity of giving their Sovereign a loyal and hearty welcome.

Messrs. Thomson and M'Connell, and G. and J. Burns, in order to make her Majesty's tour through the Highlands equal in comfort and splendour to what she enjoys while in her passages along the English railway lines, are now fitting up one of their Crinan Canal swift passage boats—the Sunbeam—as a royal barge, in an elegant style to that of the royal railway carriages. The cabins will be fettooned with crimson, and a handsome canopy will be thrown over the after part of the vessel, in which will be placed an elegant ottoman, for the use of her Majesty and the royal children.

Messrs. M'Connell and Burns have likewise obtained from the Great Canal Company, in addition to their own excellent stud, the use of four very fine grey horses, which will be ridden by jockeys dressed in the royal livery of scarlet and gold. All the steamboat owners on the Clyde have made an arrangement amongst themselves to go out with their vessels under the command of a commodore, to welcome her Majesty and accompany the royal squadron up the Clyde. This will allow their passengers not only a full view of the royal party, but will conduce to the comfort of her Majesty and the safety of her subjects, by placing the order that will be maintained in consequence. The use of all firearms on board the steamers will be forbidden, and the number of passengers in each boat will be limited.

The Royal squadron arrived off Dartmouth at four P.M. on Thursday, taking the good folks completely by surprise. They were seen for a little distance off, and only just in time for the loyal authorities to make a respectable salutation by firing the gun at the Castle in honour of Royalty.

They arrived in the following order: The Victoria and Albert, with the Royal standard flying at the main, then the Garland, then the Fairy tender, followed by the Black Eagle and Undine.

The Royal squadron, at their night berth at Yarmouth, Isle of Wight, got up steam at the first streak of daylight, and the Scourge steam-sloop was dispatched to immediately to Falmouth. At five o'clock the squadron was in motion at full speed towards the Needles; but in consequence of the very thick weather, the Victoria and Albert cast anchor in Alum Bay, just under the Needles rocks, where they remained until a little past eight. The others did not anchor, and at half past eight o'clock the Royal yacht having weighed, they left at full speed for Dalmouth, as it was supposed. About six or seven miles off the north of the Dart, however, a signal was made to put in there, and consequently they have arrived to delight the inhabitants with the distinguished honour, for the first time, of a Royal visit.

At the hour in question, bells were ringing, and the joyous inhabitants were cheering from the river's banks and the windows of the houses near which, comparatively speaking, the Royal squadron was anchored.

DEPARTURE OF THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE.

Greatly to the disappointment of her Majesty and the Grand Duke Constantine, as well as of the officers of the Russian Embassy and suite, the weather became so very bad on Tuesday evening as to prevent the Royal visit to the Russian frigate at Portsmouth. About five o'clock his Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Sir Stephens Lushington and Lord Alphus Fitzclarence, went on board the Pallas, and was received by the Grand Duke Constantine, the Duke of Nassau, the Baron Brunnow, and several members of the Russian Embassy, Vice-Admiral Lütke, and Capt. Modle, and the officers of the ship. The Prince expressed to his Imperial Highness her Majesty's regret that the unpropitious state of the weather prevented her Majesty from accepting the invitation—a disappointment felt by all parties. After going over the Pallas, viewing the state cabins, &c., the illustrious party returned to the Fairy. On Wednesday morning, soon after day-light, the Russian squadron, consisting of the Pallas, a corvette, a steamer, and a 6-rater, put to sea, bound to Cronstadt.

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON.—H.R. Grace the Duke of Wellington proceeded to Windsor Castle by special train for Deal on Tuesday. His Grace was accompanied by the Hon. C. Arbuthnot.

ARISTOCRATIC MARRIAGE.—The marriage of the Hon. Fanny Mary Stuart, second daughter of the Dowager Lady Blantyre, with Mr. Herrand, was solemnised at St. James's Church, on Thursday.

DIET OF DEBTORS.—Sir George Grey has communicated to the various prison authorities a copy of regulations for the prison diet of persons committed under the Small Debts Act for fraudulent or dishonest conduct, or wilful disobedience to the orders of a court of law, who are to be confined in county gaols or houses of correction. It is provided that: 1. Small debtors shall, as far as the construction of the prison will allow thereof, be separated from other debtors; but they shall not be placed in separate confinement, or with any class of criminal prisoners.—2. They shall not be permitted to maintain themselves, but shall be restricted to the following prison diet:—

	MALES.	FEMALES.
Monday, Wednesday, Friday	Breakfast—1 pint of oatmeal gruel, 6 oz. of bread. Dinner—1 pint of soup, 6 oz. of bread.	1 pint of oatmeal gruel, 6 oz. of bread. 1 pint of soup, 6 oz. of bread.
Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday	3 oz. of cooked meat without bone, 8 oz. of potatoes, 8 oz. of bread.	3 oz. of cooked meat without bone, 8 oz. of potatoes 6 oz. of bread.

3. Except on the care of the surgeon, they shall be allowed such diet as he may order. 4. Small debtors shall not be allowed wine, beer, or fermented liquor, except by order of the surgeon on the ground of health.

FUNERAL OBSEQUIES of Mr O'CONNELL.

In our Journal of last week, we briefly recorded the arrival of the Remains of Mr. O'Connell, in Dublin, on the 2nd inst.; and, in the journal of the preceding week, we illustrated the resting of the Remains in the Church of Nôtre Dame, at Havre. From the latter point we now propose to commence our graphic memorial of the Last Honours paid to the Remains of "the Liberator;" necessarily selecting only the leading details of the Obsequies, and more especially those of the Scenes and Incidents pictured by our Artist, Mr. James Mahony.

It appears that the Remains, instead of being sent from London through Liverpool, as we stated, were, on Monday evening, the 26th ult., received at Chester, by railway, and there deposited in the Roman Catholic chapel. They were next placed in the outer coffin, which had been prepared by Mr. Gardner, cabinet-maker; but as the homeward journey had been performed more rapidly than had been anticipated, the body rested at Chester until Sunday. Four masses were then celebrated at the Chapel, where also a sermon was preached.

At half-past one, P.M., on Sunday, the Remains were removed from the Chapel, and placed on a special train to be conveyed to Birkenhead. They reached here in about an hour, and were immediately embarked on board the City of Dublin Company's steamer, the Duchess of Kent, Captain Jones, then lying in the Birkenhead Dock. The steamer sailed for Dublin at three o'clock, on Monday morning, the 2nd instant.

ARRIVAL OF THE REMAINS AT DUBLIN.

The hour named for the arrival of the Duchess of Kent steamer in the Bay was two o'clock, and for some hours previously, every barge in the harbour was crowded with people. Early in the morning, Mr John O'Connell, accompanied by his son Daniel, proceeded to sea from Kingstown, in his yacht, the Nimrod, to meet the steamer which bore the remains of his lamented father, and to apprise the parties on board of the arrangements made for their reception. At about half-past eleven, the Duchess of Kent hove in sight in the offing, on which the Nimrod (which had been bore down and boarded her. The steamer (as did also the yacht) carried colours half-mast high. She was, when hailed by the yacht, steering direct for Kingstown harbour; but, on being boarded by Mr. John O'Connell, changed her course, and headed up the bay, taking the Nimrod in tow. As the flotilla neared and passed the harbour of Kingstown, all the vessels at anchor there hoisted their colours, and instantly lowered them half-mast high. Signal guns were fired from the steamer, which were answered from the harbour. The Nimrod, on approaching the Duchess of Kent, in addition to lowering her flag, gave the usual naval mourning salute, firing minute guns to the number of seventy-one, corresponding with the years of the deceased. As the Duchess of Kent proceeded at half speed up the Bay, she was met and boarded by Mr. Maurice O'Connell, Mr. Morgan O'Connell, the Right Rev. Dr. Whelan, the Very Rev. Dr. Tore, and several of the relatives and friends of the Liberator.

THE OBSEQUIES IN MARLBOROUGH-STREET CHAPEL.

FUNERAL OF MR. O'CONNELL.—THE SKETCHES BY MR. JAMES MAHONY.

who were on board the Arran Castle. The Duchess of Kent was at once recognised by her bearing the usual mourning insignia. From her foretop-mast floated the green burgee, with the Irish harp; the union jack, hung from the peak, and the red ensign at the mainmast, all half-mast high.

At half-past one o'clock, the Arran Castle was within speaking distance, but not a word was uttered on either deck. Even the captain, impressed with the solemn scene before him, gave his directions by signal. All on board the Arran Castle stood on deck uncovered, whilst she slowly passed round the stern of the Duchess of Kent, and was hauled to alongside.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell stood at the gangway to receive his brothers, and the relatives and friends who accompanied them. Mr. John O'Connell stood at his side, having, as we have already mentioned, boarded the steamer in the offing at an early hour in the morning: behind them stood the Liberator's servant, Duggan, the other persons on board standing apart, uncovered.

Mr. Maurice O'Connell was the first to enter the vessel—but we must not even attempt to describe the scene that followed the meeting of the brothers on this solemn occasion. Mr. Morgan O'Connell, and the other members of the family, and friends, followed, and proceeded to erected on the quarter-deck of the Duchess of Kent, under the direction of Mr. Mullen, of Liverpool. It occupied a space of about ten feet square: its height was nine feet, the roof tapering to the centre. Over a strong waterproof covering on the roof and sides was spread a cover of black cloth, draped at the sides into regular festoons, looped with rich tassels. Within this was fastened the side drapery of fine black cashmere, which fell around in graceful folds, tastefully looped, at various points, with rosettes. Facing the stern was the entrance to the Chapel, immediately opposite which, at the other end, was affixed a large cross in white satinet. Except this cross, the interior of the structure bore no device

THE SEA CHAPEL,

THE "SEA CHAPEL"
ON THE DECK OF THE "DUCHESS OF KENT" STEAMER.

or ornament of any kind. Each of the four exterior angles was surmounted by a rich sable plume, and over the entrance was placed a small square flag, perusnently extended, on which was a red cross. The floor of the Chapel was covered with a rich carpet of black and crimson. Within this Chapel lay—resting on three trestles, covered with a rich under-pall of fine cloth in alternate breadths of green and purple, barred across with gold lace, and richly fringed. From each of the trestles underneath projected a kneeling-stool, over each of which was folded the border of the under-pall, so arranged that a prie-Dieu is massive and covered with crimson velvet of rich crimson, with a triple row of broad gilt nails round the edges. The mountings are double-gilt and the shield each bearing national devices. At the corners are affixed richly-gilt plates having for their device each an open missal, and other Christian emblems. The Coffin lid is ornamented at each corner with gilt clasps, within which are fixed the screws, each hidden by a leaf and hinge. The inscription plate is of silver-gilt, surrounded by an outer plate of brass. The following is the inscription.

THE COFFIN,

INTERIOR OF THE "SEA CHAPEL."—THE O'CONNELL FAMILY RECEIVING THE REMAINS.

"DANIEL O'CONNELL,
HIBERNIÆ LIBERATOR,
AD LIMINA APOSTOLORUM PERGENS
DIE XV MAII, ANNO MDCCCXLVII.
GENIÆ ORDINEM IN DOMINO.
VIXIT ANNOS LXXI. MENSES IX. DIES IX.
R. I. P."

The following is the translation of the inscription:—

DANIEL O'CONNELL,
LIBERATOR OF IRELAND,
Walks on his journey to the feast of the Apostles,
Fell asleep in the Lord at Genoa,
On the 15th of May, in the year 1847.
He lived seventy-one years, nine months, and nine days.
May he rest in peace.

The lid of the coffin is decorated with various symbols; among them, a beautifully-executed design, in gilt material, representing in relief an obelisk and a weeping female figure, with the legend "Resurgam" underneath.

Around the coffin were placed lofty candelabra, covered with crape, three at each side, bearing wax tapers, kept burning

On reaching the entrance to the chapel, the Right Rev Dr Phelan, Dr Yore, and the relatives of the deceased entered, and, kneeling round the coffin, joined the Rev Dr Miley and the monks of the deceased in fervent devotion, for a considerable time

A large number of Liverpool gentlemen were desirous of having the sad consolation of accompanying the Remains, but the arrangements only permitted this distinction to be conferred on the six under-named gentlemen James Lovegrove, John F. Duffy, James Clow, John Mullen, Michael Duffy, and James Keating, Esqrs

At a quarter past three o'clock, the Duchess of Kent was again put in motion, and proceeded at a slow rate of speed up the river. She was accompanied by the river steamers, which were crowded to the tops of the paddle-boxes with silent, but deeply anxious, spectators.

As the steamer neared the Custom House, opposite to which it was arranged that the debarkation of the Remains should take place, the quays presented from end to end one vast mass of human beings; yet, save occasionally a low wail which broke from the multitude, not a sound issued from amongst them. It was all sad and respectful silence. The arrangements for the reception of the Remains were very complete. An open bier, without canopy, drawn by six black horses, was in attendance, with mutes and wand-bearers, under the superintendence of the undertaker, Mr. Lawlor, of Henry-street. The Members of the Associated Trades were drawn up in procession order, each Member bearing a wand tied with love ribbon.

Preparations were now made for the debarkation. The side curtains of the Chapel were thrown up, exposing to public view the coffin within, surrounded by its lighted tapers. And then, of that vast crowd not one remained standing where room was left to kneel. The scene was solemn and impressive beyond description, many on board the vessel, as well as on the quays, were moved to tears.

Previous to the removal of the coffin, a large body of Clergy came on board the steamer. Amongst them were the Very Rev. Dean Coll, Limerick; Rev Dr. Maher, Carlow; Rev Mr Browne, Rev J. Hayes, O.S.F., Cork; the Very Rev Dr Callan, Rev Mr Burke, St Augustine's, the Rev. J. Hamilton, Blackrock; Rev Dr Lyne, Bridge-street, the Rev Mr Behan, the Rev Mr Tierney (one of the Bopea Martyrs), Rev James Ryan, Rev D Burke, P.P., Rev T Cary, Rev Mr Cole, Rev L Carr, P.P., Rev T Browne, Rev John Murray, Rev P Reilly, Rev Thomas O'Donnell, Rev Mr. Ford, &c., &c

The Coffin was next placed on the bier, and the procession having formed, the Remains, preceded by the Trades, headed by Thomas Reynolds, Esq., the City Marshal, and followed by sons, relatives, and friends, moved through the dense crowd along the quay, and up Marlborough-street, to the chapel. The great gate was opened, and displayed a partial view of the interior, with its numerous lights and dark drapery. The Rev. Mr. Cooper, robed in cope and surplice, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Maher, the Rev. Mr. Mullen, and the Rev. Mr. Smith, proceeded to the outer entrance, and there met the coffin.

THE FUNERAL PROCESSION IN WESTMORELAND STREET, DUBLIN

It was then borne into the chapel, and surrounded by the acolytes, bearing torches; whilst a Sub-Deacon, in a white surplice and scutan, held the lofty cross aloft at the foot. The procession having the Rev. Mr. Cooper and the antiphoner and, the procession, followed by the mourners, proceeded up the nave towards the catafalque, which was then inclosed by the full choir; after which were sung the "De Profundis" and the "Miserer.

At the conclusion of the ceremonial, the officiating Clergy and the choir retired to the vestry, leaving the Remains lying in [illegible]. The doors round the catafalque were lit, and the anxious people were allowed to enter the church, and view its splendid arrangements, until eleven o'clock, when the doors were closed.

THE OBSEQUIES IN THE CHAPEL.

On Wednesday, the funeral rites of the Catholic Church were solemnized over the remains of Mr. O'Connell, in the Metropolitan Chapel, in Marlborough-street.

The rain fell in torrents; but, for more than two hours before the commencement of the solemnities, every approach to the Chapel was crowded with Priests, and gentry, to be admitted by tickets.

THE INTERIOR OF THE CHAPEL

was fitted up for the occasion, very appropriately, by Mr. Crooke, of Sackville-street. The nave was clothed from floor to ceiling with sable drapery. The pillars surrounding the nave were covered with black cloth—the arches between the columns were festooned with the same—the windows partially darkened by a lighter description of black drapery. The entire of the interior was clad in mourning, except the white marble altar, which was left uncovered. The catafalque, on which rested the coffin, consisted of a dais, elevated on four steps, covered with fine black cloth; from which sprung four pillars, supporting a canopy surmounted by a ball and cross. Upon the dais, and between the pillars, was placed the platform, about after the model of a Grecian altar. The canopy supported a magnificent drapery, looped with rich black cordage and tassels. To each pillar was attached a splendid ormolu chandelier. The catafalque occupied the centre of the chapel, midway between the high altar and the upper end of the nave, where were placed the seats of the Archbishop and the Prelates assisting at the holy office. Immediately in front were the desk and seats for the leader of the choir, and at either side two deep forms for the clergy.

The front gallery was set apart for the immediate friends and relatives of the illustrious deceased. In it were seated the four sons of the Liberator—Maurice, John, Morgan, and Daniel—with many other relatives, and several of the ladies of the family. Mr. Steele also occupied a seat in the gallery. In front of it was suspended the O'Connell arms, with the supporters, motto, and crest, beautifully executed in the form of a banner. On its sides and ends of the platform of the catafalque, the arms of the family were emblazoned. Over the front door they were also on stained glass, on a white ground, dispersed with shamrocks, and surrounded with a border of the same national emblem. In the corners of this stained glass were the Irish Harp, and the initials D. O. C. in ornamental letters of golden hue. In front of the organ-loft, and round the catafalque, were suspended scrolls, on which were written in Latin the inscriptions adopted at the Obsequies in Rome.

Before eleven o'clock, the Chapel was filled. The aisles and galleries were occupied by the laity. The nave was reserved for the clergy. The ladies present generally were some emblem of mourning. Of the highest order of the clergy there were present The Metropolitan The Most Rev. Dr. Murray. The Most Rev Dr. Mac Hale; Dr. Richardson, Corfu; Dr. Feilding, Australia; Dr. Cantwell, Dr. O'Higgins, Dr. Keating, Dr. Maginn, Dr. M'Nally; Dr. Murphy, Hyderabad; Dr. O'Connor, Salem, and Dr. Wiselan, Bombay. The clergymen of the second order appeared in surplices and surplices, in the choir they numbered nearly 1500, and their names almost fill an entire column of the Weekly Freeman's Journal; to the admirable report in which Journal our acknowledgments are due for the substance of these details.

The Office commenced a little after eleven. The nine lessons of the Nocturns were read by nine of the prelates present. Peculiarly mournful was the low deep chant of the solemn office for the dead. The responses, notes of the organ, were touched. Nothing was heard but the saddest tones of the human voice, and ever and anon the tolling of the death-bell. The Grand High Mass, at which Dr. Wiseman acted as celebrant, and the Venerable Archbishop presided, commenced; as soon as the Office had terminated

The Funeral Oration was preached by Dr. Miles. It will be found reported entire, in the Weekly Freeman's Journal for Saturday last.

The Absolution, a ceremony but rarely celebrated, and which raised O'Connell to the dignity of a Prince in the Catholic church of his native land, was then performed. The five senior Bishops left the choir, and, escorted by the Deacons, followed the Master of the Ceremonies to the catafalque, and took their positions at the respective corners, the celebrant remaining at the head. Each in turn then gave the usual absolution, prescribed in the Roman pontifical. And thus ended the Obsequies.

Our Artist has depicted this impressive solemnity in the large Illustration at page 104.

THE FUNERAL PROCESSION.

Many hours before the time appointed for the Procession to move on Thursday morning, every street leading to the Metropolitan Church, presented a stream of well dressed persons, men, women, and children, thronging towards the points from which the pageant would be seen; and great numbers had even taken the precaution to bivouac a few days previously, in the neighbourhood of Marlborough street, in situations where the best view of the cavalcade could be obtained. Coaches, cars, and conveyances of various descriptions, also brought many thousands; and the railway companies caused special trains to run, for the accommodation of persons anxious to take part in the funeral. The cities and towns send their municipal authorities; and prelates and clergy attended from the extreme points of the country. In the vicinity of the chapel, the house-tops and windows were filled with occupants, and the streets, save immediately opposite, where there were strong barriers erected, were wholly impassable. Sackville-street, North Earl-street, Abbey-street, and all passages leading thereto, were thronged in like manner.

"Notwithstanding the immense assemblage," says the Weekly Freeman's Journal, "no sound was to be heard—all was silent unutterable sorrow; the stillness of death seemed to pervade the living mass, and even the dark and lowering appearance of the forenoon added in no inconsiderable degree to the general appearance of the desolation.

At eleven o'clock the hearse, drawn by six horses, arrived, and was admitted within the barrier. The canopy was so reptsely ornamented; large velvets draped from the side of each horse, the centres bearing escutcheons of O'Connell. Soon after the arrival of the hearse, the mourning coaches, in which were the John O'Connell, Mr. Morgan O'Connell, Mr. Maurice O'Connell, Mr. D. O'Connell, Mr. C. Fitzsimon, and other friends and relatives of the deceased arrived, and were also admitted within the barrier. The members of the family then entered the chapel, and having spent a short time in devotion, the coffin was taken from off the catafalque, and borne to the hearse amidst the wailing of many hundred persons who had previously obtained admission. This was preceded by twelve coupes bearing robed clergymen; after these came the Rev. Mr. Cooper (celebrant), and the Rev Messrs. Burke, Pope, Meagher, O'Brien, Murphy, and Keogh, who, moving slowly down the aisle, chanted the "Miserere." On the appearance of the coffin in the building, all the vast assemblage simultaneously uncovered their heads—many knelt down in the streets—some offered up prayers, and many uttered loud wails and lamentations. The coffin was then placed on the hearse, and the procession moved on, the clergymen chanting the antiphone.

Meanwhile, the Procession had formed, and now moved on, headed by the City Marshal, on horseback.

Then walked the Associated Trades, Fifty Guilds; each body bearing mourning banneretts, with inscriptions, emblematic figures, &c. &c.

After the Associated Trades came, covered with deep mourning, the Triumphal Car, used on the occasion of the release from Richmond Prison.

In the funeral pageant, the Car was an object of great interest, for it was scarcely possible to avoid contrasting the liberation—the gale of glory—with the mournful end of frail mortality.

The Car was drawn by six horses, led by mutes, and supported by the Vice-Presidents and Committee of the Trades' Political Union.

Then followed the Religious Confraternities, with rich and costly banners of cloth, silk and tabinet, and those of The Confraternity of Mount Carmel was preceded by a splendid banner of rich dark silk, surmounted by a gilt frame and cross, on the obverse of which was painted the figure of Erin weeping at the Tomb of O'Connell

On the gate being opened, the religious orders, preceded by the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, entered the Cemetery, and took their places ranged at either side of the vault

Next were the Members of the Christian Schools, North Richmond street; followed by the Christian Brothers, the Clergy on foot, Physician, Secretary, and Chaplain. Then came drawn by six horses, richly caparisoned in sable; the coffin, with its crimson covering, and superb mountings, was open to view, placed upon a platform, on the sides of which were emblazoned the O'Connell arms; the lower part was draped, and above was a massive canopy, with draperies trimmed with fringe and white ribbon; above the summit was a heavy cord, from which hung large tassels: the whole surmounted with plumes of feathers

THE HEARSE,

Next the hearse were the members of Mr. O'Connell's family in mourning coaches, drawn by four horses, each horse led by a mute. In the first carriage were the four sons of the Liberator, Maurice O'Connell, Morgan O'Connell, John O'Connell, Daniel O'Connell, and Dr. Miley.

In the second carriage, Mr James O'Connell, Lakeview; Mr. W. F. Finn, Mr. C. Fitzsimon, and Mr. Charles O'Conne.

Third carriage, Dr. Nicholson, Archbishop of Corfu; P. V. Fitzpatrick, Rev. C. O Connell, and Vincent Ve

Fourth carriage, Maurice John O'Connell, D. James O'Connell, of Lakeview, Daniel Moynahan, and Thomas Steele

Fifth carriage, Captain Roche, Nicholas Markey, D. O'Connell, Kenmare, and Maurice Leyn

Next came—

The Members of the Cemetery Committee with Sashes, and in Mourning Coaches.

O'CONNELL'S COACH—Blinds up.
The Lord Mayor in his State Coach.
The Aldermen and Town Councillors, &c.
The Archbishops, Bishops, and Clergy in Carriages.

The Procession moved in its way from the Metropolitan Chapel to the Cemetery, through Earl-street, and thence to Sackville street, where the scene was very imposing. The houses, Nelson's Pillar, the windows as far as the eye could reach—the roof of the General Post Office—in fact, every available spot from which a view of the Procession could be had, possessed its occupants. The route then lay over Carlisle Bridge. All the vessels in the river had their flags lowered to half-mast, and were manned to the very topmast. The quays on either side of the Liffey presented dense masses of human beings, whilst D'Olier-street, Westmoreland-street, and the other streets within view were equally crowded. Our Artist has depicted

THE CORTEGE ADVANCING UP WESTMORELAND-STREET, BY THE BANK AND COLLEGE.

At College-green and Nassau-street the splendid Trades' banners had a very imposing effect.

The next point was

MERRION-SQUARE, AND MR. O'CONNELL'S MANSION,

whither all eyes were turned: the shutters were closed, the blinds were down, and between the windows of the first and second floor was placed a table [illegible] ment, with the arms of O'Connell, splendidly emblazoned. The cleared avenue to the doorway, the vacant balcony, whence the Liberator was accustomed to pour forth his eloquence—the closed windows—all indicated a melancholy blank.

Our Artist has portrayed that stage of the pageant at which "the Triumphal Car" reached the door of the popular idol.

The Procession then wended its progress through Merrion-street, Merrion-row, to St. Stephen's Green, on to Redmond's Hill, where the crowd was so dense that the cavalcade could not pass until a way had been cleared for it. There appeared an intense local interest attached to the spot, inasmuch as a noble arch of triumph was erected here on O'Connell's liberation from imprisonment. In association, it now became Janus Morris. As the hearse passed, a vast crowd of women set up the death wail, peculiar to the Irish.

The Procession then passed by Leander-street, and South Great George-street, into Dame-street, where the Royal Exchange, as well as the other buildings, were crowded with spectators. The rain now began to fall, and continued incessantly for more than an hour; but, not a man left the ranks.

The cavalcade then advanced by King's Bridge, along the North Quays, through Capel-street, where the rain ceased, and the sun again shone forth on the mournful train. It next entered Bolton-street, and thus passed by Blessington-street, to Circular Road. Here, almost every dwelling bore testimony of sorrow; and many of the windows were hung with black drapery. At length was reached

(Continued on page 108.)

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

JAMES, LORD DUNSANDLE.

His Lordship, an account of whose decease at his seat Dunsandle, County Galway, reached us last week, represented for many years his native county in Parliament, and was created a Peer of Ireland 6th June, 1845. He possessed a valuable landed property in the west of Ireland, and was highly esteemed as a worthy country gentleman, and a kind and excellent landlord. His father the late Right Hon. Denis Daly, of Dunsandle, Master-Master-General of Ireland, sat for a lengthened period in the Irish Parliament, in which he became eminently distinguished for his eloquence and ability; he was a leading statesman of those days so prolific in illustrious names; and is described by Grattan as "one of the best and brightest characters he ever produced:" his wife was only daughter and heiress of Robert, Earl of Farnham, and, through that lady, Lord Dunsandle derived in direct descent from the Plantagenets as well as from the Kings of Scotland and Robert Bruce. The present Peer married in 1803 Marie, daughter and heir of the late Right Honourable Sir Edward Skeffington Smyth, Bart., and has left two daughters and five sons, the eldest of whom, Denis, succeeds as second Lord Dunsandle

The Right Rev. Robert Daly, the eloquent Bishop of Cashel, is only brother of the late Lord.

SIR JOHN COLMAN RASHLEIGH, BART.

This lamented gentleman died on the 4th inst., in the 75th year of his age. He was the eldest son of the late John Rashleigh, Esq., of Penquite, Cornwall, first Commissioner of Greenwich Hospital, by Catherine his wife, daughter and co-heir of William Battie, M.D., of Court Gardens, Bucks, and grandson of Jonathan Rashleigh, Esq., of Menabilly, M.P. for Fowey—the representative of the Cornish branch of the Rashleighs, of Rashleigh, in Devon. The deceased Baronet took, for many years, an active part in politics, and was long distinguished for his unflinching advocacy of Reform. He received his patent of Baronetcy from Lord Grey's Government, in 1831. Sir John married, first, in 1808, Harriet, second daughter of Robert Williams, Esq., of Bridehead, in Dorsetshire, and, secondly, in 1838, Martha, youngest daughter of the late John Carbonell. By the former of whom he has left, with two daughters, one son, the present Sir John Colman Rashleigh, Bart., of Prideaux, born in 1819, and married, in 1845, to Mary Anne, only daughter of Nicholas Kendall, Esq., of Pelyn

In the recently published new edition of Burke's "History of the Royal Families of England" appears the Royal descent of the Rashleighs, by which it is shown that the late Sir John Colman Rashleigh, Bart., was 17th in direct descent from EDWARD I., King of England.

SIR JOHN HALKETT, BART., OF PITFIRRANE.

SIR JOHN HALKETT, the seventh Baronet of Pitfirrane, died at Southampton the 4th inst., aged 42. He entered the navy in 1821, obtained his commission in 1827, and was appointed Commander in 1837.

The Halketts of Pitfirrane rank amongst the most ancient families in North Britain, and can show an unbroken line of descent from Dav[illegible] Halkett, living in the time of King David Bruce. The Baronetcy dates from the year 1697. Sir Peter Halkett, second Baronet, Lieut.-Colonel of Lee's Regiment at the battle of Glatsmuir, in 1745, was taken prisoner by the Chevalier's troops, but dismissed on his parole; and was one of the five officers who refused, in the following year, to rejoin their regiments on the Duke of Cumberland's command and the [illegible] feating their commissions. Their reply, "That his Royal Highness was master of their swords, but not of their honour," was approved by government; and Sir Peter, in 1754, embarked for America, in command of the 44th Regiment. He fell, with his youngest son, James, in General Braddock's defeat by the Indians.

The late Sir John Halkett was the son of Admiral Sir Peter Halkett, Bart., G.C.H., grandson of Sir John Wedderburn Halkett, Bart., of Pitfirrane, who was nephew of the gallant Sir Peter Halkett, beforementioned. He leaves by Amelia Hood, his wife, daughter of Colonel Conway, three sons and one daughter; the eldest of the former being the present Sir Peter Arthur Halkett, eighth Baronet of Pitfirrane, born in 1824.

GENERAL SIR JOHN DELVES BROUGHTON, BART., OF BROUGHTON, COUNTY STAFFORD.

SIR JOHN DELVES BROUGHTON, the seventh Baronet of Broughton, whose death occurred on the 9th instant, at Bank Farm, Kingston-upon-Thames, possessed considerable estates in the counties of Stafford, Chester, and Lincoln. He entered the army at the age of 16, in 1785, and became a full General in 1837. He was the eldest son of the Rev Sir Thomas Broughton, sixth Baronet of Broughton, and grandson of Sir Brian Broughton, fifth Baronet, who assumed the additional surname of Delves, in compliance with the will of his maternal grandfather, Sir Thomas Delves, Bart., of Doddington.

Paternally, the deceased Baronet derived from Richard de Vernon, Lord of Broughton, fourth son of Hugh de Vernon, Baron of Shipbrook, who came over at the Conquest. His ancestors in the female line, the Delves', were of consideration for centuries in the counties of Stafford and Chester, and derived in direct descent from Sir Henry Delves, of Delves Hall, brother and heir of Sir John Delves, who, in the 20th of Edward III., was one of the four Esquires who attended James, Lord Audley, K.G., in the French wars of the Black Prince, and who, for their services at the Battle of Poictiers, were rewarded with an annuity of five hundred marks among them, and were allowed an addition to their arms bearing a similitude to their Captain, Lord Audley's coat.

The Baronet now decease we are recording was born in 1769, and married, in 1792, Elizabeth, sister of Sir John Egerton, Bart, of Oulton Park, county Chester, but leaves no issue. His successor in the title is his brother, the present Rev. Sir Henry Delves Broughton, eighth Baronet, who is married, and has several children.

MRS. EGERTON.

This distinguished actress, of the Kemble school and period, was the daughter of the Rev. Peter Fisher, Rector of Torrington, in Devonshire. She was born there in 1782. Her introduction to the stage took place at the Bath Theatre, in 1803, where the late Mr. Egerton, afterwards her husband, was then an actor also. In 1810 she appeared at Covent Garden Theatre, as Juliet, one year after the retirement of Mrs. Siddons. The splendid début, however, of Miss O'Neill, soon deprived Mrs. Egerton of further hope of maintaining her position in the tragic drama. She then devoted herself to melodrama, and for many years enjoyed in that department an eminent reputation. Her performance of Ravina, in "The Miller and his Men," and her representation of Scott's masculine heroines, Helen Macgregor, Madge Wildfire, and Meg Merrilies, were regarded as masterpieces of histrionic art. At Sadler's Wells, in a drama called "Joan of Arc," she acted the part of the Pucelle so effectively, that the play ran a whole season.

She subsequently was in great vogue at the [illegible]ry and Olympic theatres, and, returning again for a short time to the superior stage, she played Lady de Montford, in Joanna Baillie's tragedy of "De Montford," when it was revived for Edmund Kean. Her last course of performances was at the Victoria Theatre, in 1832, under the lesseeship of her husband and Mr. Abbott; her chief part there was that of Queen Elizabeth, in Sheridan Knowles's play of "The Beggar of Bethnal-green." After this, she retired from the stage.

Mrs. Egerton died at her residence, in Chelsea, on the 3rd instant, aged 65. Of unblemished fame, and of much mental acquirements, this excellent lady enjoyed the friendship and esteem of a large and respectable circle of acquaintance. Her death removes another relic of the departed greatness of the English stage.

LITERATURE.

A GUIDE TO THE BIRTH-TOWN OF SHAKSPEARE, AND THE POET'S RURAL HAUNTS. By GEORGE MAY. May.

Thousands of pilgrims have wended their way to the lowly tenement at Stratford, which tradition, assisted by popular credulous to be the birthplace of Shakspeare. The ceiling and walls of the natal room are covered with pencilled autographs, as tokens of homage borne from all parts of the civilised world; yet, for many years past, it had been a growing want that there existed not a Guide-Book, which, while shunning diffuseness, should furnish to the venerator of Shakspeare a brief memorial, directing him particularly to those localities which can never be dissociated from the Poet's name. This want Mr. May appears to have successfully supplied in his well-timed Companion-Book. He is not a mere retailer of out-and-did matters, nor does he lose himself in incontrollable rhapsody; but, in what he writes, he writes as one who had been already attested by his well-known, accredited, and tasteful "History of Evesham." He has collected his materials upon the spot, and refreshing his memory by occasional visits to the Poet's birth-town. The contents of the Companion-Book comprises a Survey of Stratford, the Birthplace of the Poet, his School, his Residence, his Grave. Next are described the Church, the College, the Gild and Chapel of Holy Cross; then the Poet's Rural Haunts Shottery and Luddington, Charlcote, Hampton Lucy and Alveston, Clopton, and Welcombe Hill; and, lastly, ancient and modern Stratford, and its Spa, at Bishopton; though the neighbourhood needed not such an attraction to prize it celebrity. The Companion-Book is illustrated with several picturesque views, nicely engraved, by Samuel Williams; and is published at a price which no reasonable tourist can complain of.

THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL JOURNAL. No. VII. Published for the Archæological Institute.

This part of the Journal of the Institute appeared opportunely enough, just at the time of their meeting at Norwich. It opens with a paper of carefully-written Architectural Notes in the neighbourhood of Cheltenham where valuable specimens of construction, painted glass, woodwork, and monumental remains, are very numerous: the contribution is liberally illustrated with etchings and woodcuts. The next paper, by Mr. Hawkins, describes and illustrates the Coins and Treasure found in Cornwall during the several years since; it is profusely embellished. St. Mary's Church, New-Monkton, Yorkshire, is the subject of the next paper; its west front combines a tower and high pitched roof, in one very singular design: the Sculptured Coffin-lids of the western doorway, of Early English, are admirably engraved among the illustrations of the paper. Of the Archæological Intelligence, perhaps, the most striking is the account of some curious glass vases, found in a Roman vessel, ring, &c., found in repairing the Bishop's Palace at Auddesden. Of the Proceedings of the Institute, the most attractive are Professor Willis's investigation on the Conventual building attached to the Cathedral at Canterbury; and Mr. Turner's remarks on Seals—the latter full of entertaining research. An able review of a new and important work on Glass Painting concludes this excellent Number.

IMPROVEMENTS IN AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS. By CUTHBERT W. JOHNSON, F.R.S. Baldwin.

This work is intended to include a record of the chief practical improvements which have been made in Agricultural Implements since the publication of the "British Husbandry," by the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge. It comprises the Hiring of a Farm; and Relations with the Cultivators, the Labourers; Farming and Gardening; Inclosures; Draining; Saving of Animal Labour by Machines; various new Manures; Live Stock; the Potato Murrain; Seed Sowing, &c.

The subject of new modes of Fertilising the Soil is especially valuable. Of course, such a work would be comparatively valueless without authorities, and there are abundantly given, and in a large amount of labour and research, compiled by the compilator. The Chapter on the Potato Murrain is well-timed. Mr Johnson considers it almost fruitless to inquire into the origin of the disease or its cause, for we are still in the region of conjecture and difficulties. This is somewhat cheerless and scarcely sound in theory; for, surely our acquaintance with the cause of the disease may be the means of suggesting the best practical remedy for the future, as well as for present relief. Mr. Johnson's own opinion is the most reasonable of all the suggestions as to the cause to be digging up the potatoes in the autumn, and keeping them half the year in pits and other places foreign to the natural habits of the plant.

A TREATISE ON A METHOD OF MANAGING THE POTATO PLANT, WITH A VIEW TO SAVING THE PRESENT STATE. By H. L. MAYER. Simpkin, Marshall, and Co.

The author of this little pamphlet, without entering upon the consideration of the cause of the malady in the Potato plant, thus suggests a method of protection somewhat novel, which deserves consideration. "I propose a system of protection, which I think may be equally effective against any one of the above-mentioned causes of disease—whether animal, vegetable, atmospheric, or electric. I propose to cover up the plant with the readiest material at hand, namely, the soil it grows in. The manner in which this must be done is by laying down the haulm, and covering it over with earth from the root to within a few inches of the extremity, leaving only the tops of the plant exposed to the benefits of the light and air. A field, when thus treated, presents to view a succession of ridges of earth and valleys; the ridges containing the potatoes and the stems of the plants covered over, and in the valleys or furrows lie securely the tips of the foliage." (Page 4.) As a mere question of protection, we should be inclined to think that it would be cheaper to cover the plants with the waste straw, pea or bean haulm, or other refuse of the field. But we do not think that in protection lies the merit of our author's plan. It has been known to some persons that a single tuber will yield enormous produce, if the haulm be carefully layered. In fact, even a cultivator should not suppose he will give tubers, if planted sufficiently early in the year, and a system of layering effects that object more completely. From these facts we are inclined to think that the potato may be made to assume an enormous production caused by being earthed up in the same way as the celery plant is ordinarily treated, particularly if the set be early planted. At the present moment, the early kinds are in a state for such a process to admit of this mode of treatment; and we have noticed underground shoots, three or four feet long, from the wild Mexican plants. It, therefore, appears to us not at all unnatural to adopt the author's system, and we should recommend it to be cautiously tried on a small scale, to ascertain whether it may be commonly pursued with safety; and, if so, whether the quality and quantity of produce is equivalent to the increased cost of labour.

A CLASS OF BRITISH ORNITHOLOGY. By T. W. BARLOW. Robinson.

Among the many laudable attempts to popularise Science, the Chart and Synopsis are, perhaps, the most successful forms. They give, at least, the vertebræ of the subject, with methodical accuracy, and induce an exactness of observation, which is very important to right progress in any study. The Chart before us is "designed for popular use," in describing a Systematic Catalogue of the Birds of Great Britain, and in a single form, and available as at one glance to refer to its own Order, Family, and Genus, any species which may come under notice. The Natural System and Nomenclature employed by Mr. Yarrell have been adopted; and, by means of abbreviations, the generic characteristics of the birds are lucidly described; and habits are given under the column, "If migratory, period of residence in Britain." In this way are specially layered 387 Species of Migratory, Constant Residents, or Occasional Visitors, of the British Fauna. The disproportionate number of the Natatores, or Swimming Birds, (says Mr Barlow,) is explained by the insular position of the country. The majority of our Summer Visitors are of the Insessorial Order, and embraces that which arises from the Birds inhabiting Southern Europe, and the nearest coasts of Asia and Africa making the British Islands the extreme of their northward migration; and the majority of our Winter Visitors are found among the Grallatores and Natatores, from an opposite cause." The Chart is dedicated by Mr. Barlow to his fellow-members of the Wernerian Club.

INSECT CHANGES. THE CHILD'S FIRST BOOK OF ENTOMOLOGY. Grant and Griffith.

This little book explains and illustrates the transformations of some of the most common of our British Moths and Butterflies, commencing with the caterpillar and chrysalis of the Painted Lady. The illustrations are exquisitely printed in colours, upon a gold ground, with a border which ranges with the letter-press description. Of these strips, there are seven, which contain twice as many varieties of Moths and Butterflies, they are, indeed, illuminated, as is also the title-page; the effect is novel and beautiful, and must prove attractive to young folks especially. One of the most beneficial effects this little work may have, will be, by impressing children with the beauty of the insect world, to render them less addicted to cruelty towards these painted beauties.

"SYLVAN'S PICTORIAL HAND-BOOK TO THE ENGLISH LAKES. Johnstone.

"Intending" tourists may be gratified to learn that, in about twelve hours, they may be set down in Kendal, direct from London—as the very gate of the Lake District. This is adduced by the author of the Hand-book as a justification of his addition to the stock of Guide-books. Sylvan starts from the ancient town of Lancaster, by railway, to Kendal; his itinerary then takes the distinct form of Rambles from the centres of interest; the whole being illustrated with a profusion of picturesque wood-cuts, by the Messrs Gilks; and Maps, by Mr. Wyld. The book appears to be produced with equal regard to utility and to taste. Correct railway information alternates with lyric quotation, and architectural lore; whilst there is an abundance of what tourists are likely to require—how to "get about."

PICTORIAL GUIDE TO WOOLWICH, AND LEITH AND GREENWITH. Orr and Co.

These are two of a series of Guide-books, similar in their character, and containing an unusually large amount of information as to the resources of localities, conveyed in an agreeable manner, somewhat too flowingly written, though the subjects are tempting. The Woolwich book comprises a detailed account of the Royal Arsenal, Dock-yard, and Barracks; the Military Repository and its numerous models; and other sights which are constantly attracting foreigners as British lions. The Rotunda, by the way, contains a very heterogeneous assemblage: for here are "the funeral car of Napoleon, the oven in which his bread was baked whilst in the field, the spoils of the Armada, and the cradle which is the residue of fifty-six millions of bank-notes, burnt when one-pound notes were called in." The Leith and Greenhithe Guide will introduce the reader to many nooks and corners which may be unknown to him: they are usually appreciated only as river-side villages, but this little book discourses of a host of antiquarian attractions, and pleasant walks to reach them, which must prove attractives to those in quest of healthful recreation of body and mind. A country walk is all very well in its way; but, an object at the end of that walk redoubles the enjoyment.

CHEMICAL RECREATIONS: A POPULAR COMPENDIUM OF EXPERIMENTAL CHEMISTRY, FOR THE USE OF BEGINNERS. By JOHN JOSEPH GRIFFIN. Ninth Edition. Griffin and Co., Glasgow.

The first edition of this work was a thin volume, which appeared about the time that Parkes's "Chemical Catechism" was in the zenith of its popularity. Mr. Griffin's little book was then a string of experiments of the "endless amusement" class: it has increased, edition after edition, until we find it here a bulky volume of some 600 pages, as closely packed with details as any portable work could be devised for cramming chemistry into the memories of those who have to learn it. Of this description of bulk there has been a like extension of plan; and the book is now offered as a Manual, specially fitted for two classes—Students attending Lectures, and Schoolmasters teaching Chemistry, which we are living fast to see become a stated branch of liberal education. The work before us is not, however, a System of Chemistry, but a Book of Experiments, arranged in order, and connected by an outline of the science. The latter conditions render it more attractive than a systematic treatise. The selected experiments recommended for the Course of Preliminary Experiments shows how practical chemistry can be taught to large classes of students in schools; and its sequel, on the "Qualitative Analysis of Salts," is for the use of very young chemists. The section on "Chemical Statics" comprehends the theories, general doctrines, and mathematical arrangements of chemistry: the tables in this branch are laboriously compiled. Mr Griffin's book, it should be added, is not confined to chemical recreations, or experiments of demonstration, but embraces analytical processes of novelty, as well as utility, to students, and persons engaged in the chemical arts.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

The performances on the three extra nights, now on our last, have proved the attraction of Mdlle. Lind to be still unabated. On Saturday, as Alice, in "Robert le Diable;" on Tuesday, as Amalia, in "I Masnadieri;" and, on Thursday, as Amina, in "La Sonnambula;" this unrivalled singer and actress was received with the same furore as was created by her earlier achievements: the audiences evincing their enthusiasm by repeated calls for Mdlle. Lind, anxious to be in constant recognition of her genius, and to show their high appreciation of so rare a combination of vocal and histrionic art, as each of her performances, unquestionably, presents.

On Thursday, the house was densely crowded. The charming cantatrice was in excellent voice, and displayed all the exquisite beauty of her singing and acting to the highest degree: every homage that the enraptured audience could imagine was frequently accorded to her; and the unrivalled singer and actress was received with the same furore as was created by her earlier achievements: the audiences evincing their enthusiasm by repeated calls for Mdlle. Lind, anxious to be in constant recognition of her genius, and to show their high appreciation of so rare a combination of vocal and histrionic art, as each of her performances, unquestionably, presents.

On Thursday, the house was densely crowded. The charming cantatrice was in excellent voice, and displayed all the exquisite beauty of her singing and acting to the highest degree;

F U N E R A L O F M R. O'C O N N E L L.

THE FUNERAL PROCESSION PASSING MR. O'CONNELL'S HOUSE, IN MERRION-SQUARE.

(Continued from page 106.)

THE CEMETERY OF GLASNEVIN.

a tranquil resting-place for the dead, mainly established by O'Connell. Within a circular plot of ground, enclosed by a sunk fence, and planted with exotics and flowering shrubs, is the Vault; and, beneath a mound covered with verdant turf there opens a flight of twelve steps leading to O'Connell's tomb. The Vault is fourteen feet long by eight broad, and seven high; in the midst is placed a slab of granite. At the extreme end, fronting the entrance, was erected a low stand bearing two gilt candelabra at each side, with a large wax taper burning in each. Between the candelabra, and affixed to the wall facing the door, was a splendid crucifix. The door is of solid wrought iron, and bears on the outside a plate of brass, inscribed simply with the name, "O'Connell."

As the procession approached the Cemetery, thousands poured in from the adjoining fields; and the Trades lined the passage to the Vault; their gorgeous banners being now exchanged for mourning flags of silk, and tabinets, inscribed with emblems.

THE BURIAL.

On the arrival of the Remains at the gate of the Cemetery, a procession was formed, three Clergymen, headed by the Rev. Mr. Pope, leading the various Clergy and dignitaries, all in their pontifical robes, immediately preceding the coffin.

On entering the gateway, the solemn rite for the dead commenced with the antiphone, "Ego sum resurrectio et vita." The choir still advancing towards the Vault chanted the "Miserere mei Deus."

After the coffin came the sons of the Liberator, followed by his immediate relations and friends. The Society of St. Vincent de Paul, of which Mr. O'Connell was a prominent member, had the high privilege accorded to them of being admitted to follow his remains to the door of his tomb. Numbers of the clergy, loyal friends of O'Connell, were also there.

On the arrival of the Procession at the Vault, the prelates, robed in pontificals, descended, and the coffin was conveyed within the tomb. The sons of the deceased followed. The choir of dignitaries and priests assembled outside. Then was heard from the Vault the opening chant of the "Benedictus," followed by the response of the choir without. The weeping of many around was audible. The "De Profundis" was then sung—the responses being given by the body of priests without. The silence which then followed, whilst the prelates repeated the final prayer of the ritual, was only broken by the sobs of many around, who felt they had seen the last on earth of Daniel O'Connell!

All was now finished. The Prelates, one by one, ascended from the "narrow home." The mourners took a last look. Slowly the vast assemblage departed. But hundreds who had not previously had the opportunity, rushed downward, before the Vault was closed, to look for the last time on the Remains. One hour more, and all was silent.

We should notice that, for the occasion, a splendid bell was erected in the Cemetery, by Mr. Sheridan, of Dublin; and its deep tones pealing through that City of Tombs, added not a little to the solemnity of the last sad scene.

It is gratifying to add that, notwithstanding the vast assemblage of spectators, through the excellent arrangements made by the sub-inspectors of the constabulary, regularity and order were preserved throughout the day. It is computed that the number of spectators and persons in the Ceremonies exceeded 100,000.

We understand that it has not yet been decided whether the remains of Mr O'Connell shall continue in Glasnevin Cemetery or be removed to Darrynane.

From Genoa's streets of palaces,
Which sparkle o'er the azure deep,
The sad corrège at length arrives
Where Liffey's waters calmly sleep.
Then voicelessly the myriads weep,
Who lately shouted forth his name;
Deeming their lives a world too cheap
To vindicate O'Connell's fame.

'Neath the Conception's sacred dome
The reliques of the great are laid;
And, ere they reach their lowly home,
The mass and eulogy are said;
The holy, tearful tribute paid,
Along the noble streets proceeds
The multitude of every shade,
Of politics, race, rank, or creeds.

Alas! what mockery of the dead!
Before the hearse the triumph car!
Death smiles in triumph o'er the head
Of him, whose great heart sleeps afar
Broken, when fell his fiery star
From the ascendant, and the Land
Saw Pestilence and Famine war
Triumphantly on Erin's strand.

Thus ends the fitful, gorgeous dream!
It died with him now sleeping there;
In lone Glasnevin Trophies beam
Of marble o'er him, pure and fair.
Whate'er his faults, yet virtues rare
Shone like a halo through the gloom;
And every generous breast will spare
To plant one nettle near his tomb.—L.

THE BURIAL IN GLASNEVIN CEMETERY.

HEADS OF THE MONTHS.—DRAWN BY KENNY MEADOWS.

AUGUST.

All gloriously the brow of August beams
Over the surging gold of Ceres' plain,
Which with the bounty of th' Eternal teems
Exuberantly. . . . On! to the campaign
Of Peace and Plenty! War's fell scythe hath slain
His human hecatombs; but now his trade
No more is Kingly; and the sickle's reign
Succeeds the gory vintage of the blade!
Carols the lusty conqueror of the sheaf,
Returning homeward from his worthy toil;
The gleaning widow smiles o'er the relief
Gain'd for her orphans from no niggard soil,
And the fair fields are breathing from each sod
Anthems and incense to the throne of God!

Oh! it is beautiful and blest that sight!
When visibly the air waves o'er the field,
Whose wheaten treasures to the reapers' might
And skilful sickle in abundance yield.
When flourishes the vintage and the Weald
Of Kent, "th' unvanquish'd shows," the hop, her pride,
Worthy to ornament a Baron's shield,
Twin'd with the wheat-ear glowing at its side.
August! thou art august, if ever year
Honour'd with blazonry his children twelve;
For thou art father of all earthly cheer
To those who rule and those who dig and delve—
Blake, Blenheim, Albert, owe to thee their days—
Printing—Napoleon—well may crown thy praise.—L.

Mr. Cobden's Speech at Berlin.—At the late dinner given in honour of Mr. Cobden, at Berlin, that gentleman made the following brief but emphatic speech:—"Allow me, gentlemen, he said, to express to you my warmest thanks for the honour you have conferred upon me. It is with heartfelt satisfaction that I find myself surrounded by so many learned men of this enlightened capital who participate in my views in favour of Free Trade. Gentlemen, during my long sojourn on the continent, I laid down the rule, and I have always acted up to it, of never meddling in the internal policy of the different countries I have visited, and it would be an ungracious act if I were to deviate from that rule in the present instance. Your land is too rich in patriots, too rich in talents and learning, to need the aid of a foreigner to instruct you on a question so intimately connected with German interests; nor can I forget that it was Prussia's statesmen, who, thirty years ago, gave the example of a liberal commercial policy. Unhappily, at that period England did not come forward to meet these enlightened views. Since then all Europe has gone backwards in commercial legislation, nor did Germany resist the universal impulse. Public opinion may be compared to the waves of the ocean, subject to ebb and tide—for now again a reaction in favour of the principles of Free Trade is visible both in Europe and in America; and it were strange if it were not so, living as we do in an age of universal peace, when the progress of the arts and sciences strives mightily to frame fraternal bands between all nations. What are railways, steam-boats, and electric telegraphs, but so many startling proofs against a restricted commercial policy? Under the influence of these speedy means of intercommunication, nations are in a certain sense reduced to provinces, and an entire continent is contracted into one nation. Under such circumstances, nothing can impede the circulation of wholesome ideas, and no barrier is high enough to obstruct the progress of good example. Gentlemen, during our long and hardly-contested struggle for Free-Trade in England, we endeavoured to offer to the world the spectacle of the triumph of a great principle attained by no other weapons than those of persuasion, and strictly confining ourselves within the boundaries prescribed by order and the laws. We trust our example will be followed by other nations in a similar manner. I have full confidence that the principles of Free-Trade will strike deep root in every soil, inwardly convinced that they harmonize with the laws of nature, and that they tend to promote the peace, the happiness, and the welfare of mankind. Let it not be thought disrespectful if, in conclusion, I quote the words of your great German reformer, 'If our doctrine is from God, it will live—if not, it is doomed to perish.'"

Health of the Emperor of Russia.—St. Petersburg letters of the 30th ult., state that h.s Majesty the Emperor is still suffering from the remains of his late severe attack, and is by no means restored to health. The reviews and martial exercises and experiments which are now being made by the troops, encamped at Krasnoie-Selo, have repeatedly been postponed for several days in consequence of these attacks of the Emperor.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO SCOTLAND.

The wave is sparkling bright and proud
Singing its summer song
Exultingly, in every shroud
While dash the prows along.
The chalky cliffs, the iron rocks,
Ring out in gallant glee;
And freeborn Nature's voice evokes
A blessing on the Free.

The free, the fair, the fearless Queen
Sails o'er her own domain.
Old ocean's plain where England's reign
Hails aye victorious born.
On to the heather hills She wends,
Where battled the Montrose,
The noble Graham who flung to shame
The numbers of his foes.

Scarcely a century has fled
Since dire Culloden's day,
When Highland-men in battle bled
To crush the Brunswicks' sway.
When War and Famine brooded o'er
Those hills: and vengeance spared
Nor age, nor sex, from shore to shore,
All in the fell curse shared.

But now—oh! blessèd is the change!
The star of Brunswick breathes
The breezes of each mountain range,
The incense of the heaths.
All fearlessly—for loyal peace
O'er the brave land presides!
Her Commerce, with a thousand sails,
Free o'er the ocean rides.—L.

GREAT BOAT RACE.—THE THAMES AGAINST THE TYNE.

The great race between Robert and Thomas Coombes, (the champion of the Thames, and his brother), and Henry and Robert Clasper, (of Newcastle-upon-Tyne,) for £100 a side, came off on Wednesday. The distance was from Putney-bridge to Barker's-rails, Mortlake, a distance of 4¼ miles, with the tide. The novelty in the race was there being coxswains in a pair-oared race, frequent in provincial regattas, but of rare occurrence upon the London water.

It was obvious, by the appearance of the approaches to the starting-place, and the course itself, that the interest created by this great event was of no ordinary character. The shore on the Surrey side was one moving mass of anxious spectators; Putney-bridge was almost impassable, and the broad reach of water was thickly studded with boats.

At twenty minutes to three, Mr Geddes, as umpire for the Coombeses; Mr. J. Clayton, umpire for the Claspers; and Mr. Layton, many years member of the Leander Club, the referee, took their places on the paddle-box of the Childe Harold.

The Coombeses first made their appearance afloat in a very beautiful outrigger built by Cownden. They exhibited the effects of fine training. Robert Coombes, weighing 9st., setting on the bow thwart, and his brother, who weighs 8st. 10lb., being aft; their coxswain, Henry Cownden, 13 years of age, weighing 4st. 9lb. In the Claspers' boat, Robert was forward. They were steered by their brother, Thomas Clasper, 13 years of age, and weighing 5st. 7lb. They also both looked well, and rowed in a boat built by Henry Clasper; or rather on the boat, the sitting thwart, as it might be termed, being on deck.

The men started at a quarter to three, Coombes being on the Surrey side of the centre arch, and his opponent on the Middlesex side of it. At the instant of starting, Coombes jumped away with a lead; and, stroke by stroke, gradually drew away; and between the Star and Garter and Messrs. Searle's (not more than one hundred and fifty yards from the starting place), had drawn his length clear. Off the Crab-tree, the Coombeses had got five lengths' lead; and about ten, at Haun-mersmith-bridge. The Coombeses with the greatest ease went on in advance, and won by forty-six seconds, accomplishing the distance in twenty-eight minutes and a half.

THE GREAT BOAT RACE ON THE THAMES, ON WEDNESDAY.

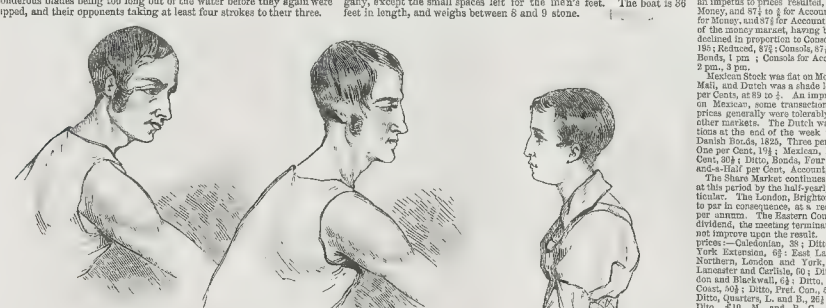
The Claspers gallantly endeavoured throughout to mend their position, but without effect. Their style differed materially from their former efforts; there was a want of alacrity in the stroke, the wide and ponderous blades being too long out of the water before they again were dipped, and their opponents taking at least four strokes to their three.

Betting had been strictly even before the start, but three minutes after it, 6 and 7 to 1 could find no takers. The style of the Coombeses was beautiful.

We have engraved sketches of the Winners, (the Coombeses,) and their coxswain; and a general view of the M arch, showing somewhat prominently, the Claspers' boat. It is covere d throughout with mahogany, except the small spaces left for the men's feet. The boat is 36 feet in length, and weighs between 8 and 9 stone.



T. COOMBES R. COOMBES. H COWDEN

THE WINNERS.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Too much zeal is cruel;
There's over shoar in changing.
We tyro by too much trust.
So we'll be up and ranging.—Old Song

It was but a few days ago that, on the supposition of its being a grateful observance to the Queen of these Isles, a Russian squadron, on the wings of an much wind as the chivalry of its mariners could have required, flew from the Thames to the Solent. On Wednesday evening last, at six, P M., the Royal standard was lowered from the tower, at Osborne, and unfurled on board the Victoria and Albert, in the Cowes Roads. The occasion was the departure of the Sovereign on an aquatic excursion to Scotland. Save the flotilla, commanded to convoy the Royal progress the squadron of honour, consisting of the Fawn, Royal tender, Scourge, steam-frigate, Undine, Garland to lead the van, and the Black Eagle, there was not a streamer to do grace to the Monarch of the Waters; always excepting the banner of the gallant Anglesey. Of the whole Royal Yacht Squadron fleet the Pearl was the only keel that was under way, obviously to take part in the ceremony of leave-taking. As the cortège passed the Royal Squadron House a Royal salute was fired of nada fuit. It's odds that the noble lady for whom this token was meant took in better part the less aristocratic, but quite as cordial, homage offered from the deck of a passago vessel at the same moment. It's fit, indeed, to say that the Commodore of the R. Y. S. has not a stick from whence to display his burgee of office -which, whether it be his misfortune or his fault, -s against the ship-shape working of his station. It was a fair sight—the numerous stately and peerless barques; and whose gazed upon them, and bethought him in what state my Lord Mayor navigateth between London and Westminster, might have gone further and sped worse, for an illustration or the sublime and ridiculous. The Royal squadron anchored for the night in the Yarmouth Roads, proceeding, next morning, through the Needles, and on its western way

If it should be asked what all this has to do with National Sporting, we beg, in answer, to inquire wh t more could the most fastidious of the craft desire, than to see the Queen of this land and her Consort set out in such array, to take t.eir autumn pleasure among "the bonny Highland Moors"?

The past week has been the most amp.itheatre of the season. The Cowes Regatta began "to drag its slow length along;" nine days and nine runs. And than such queer races, too! The little boats sent to circumnavigate the Wight, and the big ones to sail up and down between Calshot Caste and Ryde Pier

But still the affair was not without its poetry; ladies in P jackets, with fans gaung as gracefully as at Almack's, are not objects wanting in the picturesque, drifting about in schooners, cutters, and such like marine contrivances. To pass, however, from these generalities to matters of fact, it is our pleasant duty to record that his Grace of Anglesey's cup, the Gordonian landing gear, at Cowes, at the service of the members of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, and that there is still balm in Gilead. Of the racing at Cowes, we shall speak at full when the end has crowned the whole

In rowing there was a great passage nearer home. This was brought about by a defiance from "Thames to cnaly Tyne," whereupon the respective champions met at Putney, and the Adelphi Coombes caused the brothers Clasper signal defeat. This was a novel match, wherein, for the first time in river wagers, coxswains were vouchsafed pair-oars' crews So, let it be known to sporting cuvies of all kinds and conditions, that London is the best place under the sun to find the best of everything.

If they want live stock, from a field mouse to an elephant, there's the r market: if they require crack hands over the course for over the country, over the cricket ground, over fresh water or salt, over moor or stubble, to go down in a diving-bell or up in a balloon, to drive a car and four thousand gallons of gas—or to sit and grin their hack in a parachute with its wrong end foremost let them go to Cocksyne, for that's the mart—for everything—and all else beside. . .

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY The absence of several of the influenti.ls on electioneering affa rs, keeps Lobbiness as flat at t e Corner as it is in the City, and the tightness of the Money Market promises to keep it so for some time to come. We have but a sorry list of prices to submit for this day:

7 to 4 agst Mathematician (t)	10 to 1 agst Masterpiece
8 to 1 — Sir Martin (t)
7 to 5 agst The Cossack	14 to 1 agst Mr Martin
7 to 1 — Eryx	40 to 1 — Sir Martin
12 to 1 — Van Tromp (t)	1000 to 15 — Liberator (t)
13 to 1 on The field	25 to 1 agst Flatcatcher
20 to 1 agst Loadstone	25 to 1 — Bewilder

10 to 1 agst Grimston (t)
100 to 10 agst Red Hart (t)
1000 to 10 Jovial (t)
40 to 1 agst Stingaree (t)

2000 even between Bewilder and Loadstone

THURSDAY.—So many of the subscribers were absent at Wolverhampton, Reading, or the Moors, that business was almost at a stand still. Our quotations must be very short.

7 to 4 agst Mathematician	8 to 1 agst Sir Martin
7 to 1 Grimston	10 to 1 — Deloraine

Even on Cossack	14 to 1 agst Mr. Martin
9 to 1 agst Van Tromp	33 to 1 — Black Dwarf

CRICKET. SUSSEX V. THE MARYLEBONE CLUB AND GROUNDS. This match of cricket was commenced on Monday, in Box's Ground, Brighton, and terminated on Tuesday, greatly in favour of Sussex. This is the second time Sussex has beaten Marylebone this season. Sussex, first inning-, with six wide and ten byes, 187. Marylebone, first innings, with one wide and three byes, 86; second innings, with one wide and three byes, 67.

CAMBERWELL ST. GEORGE'S AND HON ARTILLERY COMPANY'S CLUBS.—These clubs played a match at the Rosemary Branch, Peckham, on Monday last, which stood at the close of the game: St. George's, 97 and 165—Total, 262; Hon. Artillery, 94 and 42 —Total 136, with five wickets to go down. The very fast underhand bowling of G. Rattray, Esq., was remarkably effective, and the batting of Lieut. Walmisley, Pugden, Archer, and F. Corbett, Esqrs., was very much admired.

OPENING OF THE MODEL LODGING-HOUSE, ST. GILES'S.—On Monday the society for the improvement of the condition of the laboring classes opened their new model lodging-house in George-street, St. Giles's, which they have just completed at a cost of £6000. It is exclusively intended to accommodate single men of the working classes. The building covers an area of about 9000 square feet, and is six stories from the basement; the ground-floor is partly occupied by the manager, and the remainder fitted as a living-room for the use of the lodgers, having tables and settees, similar to a coffee-house, with crockery and cooking utensils. The upper floors are divided into eight dormitories, each separated by wainscot seven feet high into thirteen separate berths, each berth furnished with decent furniture. The entire building is thoroughly ventilated, and lighted throughout with gas, the common staircase being fire-proof. The total number that can be accommodated is 104, each paying 4d. per night, or 2s per week. It is intended to fit the basement with baths, and provide a library for the use of the inmates.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE.—This week's arrival of English wheat—almost wholly of the present year's growth—has been small, and the show of samples here to-day was trifling. Previously to the close of the market a good clearance was effected, at Monday's prices. Nearly 50,000 quarters of foreign wheat have come in since Saturday last. The best qualities were in moderate request, at full currencies, but all other kinds were in per quarter cheaper. In barley very little business was passing, but prices ruled about stationary. The same remark may be applied to malt. There was a fair demand for oats, the prices of which were well supported. Beans, peas, and Indian corn were heavy, and rather lower. Flour was dull, and some few sales were effected, on easier terms. Nearly 30,000 barrels of foreign have come in this week

ARRIVALS. English Wheat, 320; barley, 30; malt, 1190; oats, 750. Irish: Wheat ——; barley, malt, ——; oats, ——. Foreign: Wheat, 49,670; barley, 4410; malt, —— oats, 1710. Flour: 300 sacks, 580 barrels

English. Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 36s to 45s; ditto white, 44s to 52s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 36s to 44s, ditto white, 44s to 50s; rye, 32s to 40s; grinding barly, 24s to 28s; distilling, 31s to 32s; malting ditto, —s to —; Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 68s to 71s; brown do., 62s to 65s; Kingston and Ware, 68s to 71s; Chevalier, 70s to 77s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire red oats, 21s to 23s; potato ditto, 23s to 25s; Tweed and Cork, blacks, 23s to 25s; ditto maple, 25s to 26s; white, —s to —s; Scotch and Irish feed, 22s to 24s; potato ditto, 23s to 25s; Scotch, 25s to 27s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 40s to 45s per 240lbs. Foreign.—Danzig red wheat, —s to —s; white, —s to —s. barley, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; and peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 28s to 30s per barrel, Baltic, 25s to —s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—Scarcely any transactions have taken place in this market, at about stationary prices

LINSEED, English, scowing, 56s to 60s; Baltic, crushing, 42s to 46s; Mediterranean and Bombay, 46s to 48s. Rapeseed, 36s to 38s per quarter. Coriander, 18s to 20s per cwt. Brown Mustard seed, 9s to 10s; white ditto, 8s to 10s. Tares, 5s 6d to 6s 6d per bushel. English Rapeseed (new) £31 to £32 per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes, English, £13 to £13 10s; do. foreign, £8 10s to £10 per 1000; Rapeseed cakes, £7 10s to £9 0s per ton. Canary, 60s to 64s per quarter. English Clover-seed, red, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; trefoil, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; extra, 52s to —s. Foreign, red, —s to —s; extra, —s; white, —s to —s; extra, —s per cwt.

Bread.—The price of wheaten bread in the Metropolis are from 8½d to 9d; of household ditto, 7d to 8d per 4lb loaf

Imperial Weekly Average. Wheat, 75s 8d; barley, 43s 11d; oats, 31s 1d; rye, 49s 2d, beans, 54s 6d; peas, 52s 3d

The Six Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 79s 7d; barley, 47s 1d; oats, 31s 2d; rye, 50s 6d; beans, 55s 6d, peas, 52s 3d

Tea.—A good business is doing in the common kinds of Congou, at 9½d; but all other kinds of tea command very little attention.

Sugar.—Raw sugar is tolerably steady, at late rates; but refined goods are very dull—brown ones selling at 53s, and standard ditto 55s 6d to 56s per cwt.

Coffee.—In half-a-dozen lots, at late rates

Rice.—So little a doing in rice, that prices are almost nominal.

Provisions.—Only a moderate business has been done in Irish butter this week, yet prices are fully supported. Carlow, Clonmel, and Carrick, landed, 90s to 92s; Limerick, 88s to 89s; and Waterford, 86s to 88s per cwt. Dutch butter is steady, at 98s to 100s for the best qualities, and 74s to 80s per cwt for the middling and inferior. Home-make is firm, at 96s to 100s for the best dairies: 84s to 88s for middling: 72s to 80s for fine Devon, and 8s to 8s per dozen lbs for fresh Bacon has again advanced is to 3s per cwt. Prime singeble Waterford, 52s to 56s; singed ditto, 50s to 52s; heavy, 46s to 50s per cwt. On board, or for forward delivery, exceedingly little is doing. Most other kinds of provisions command late rates.

Tallow. The demand for all kinds of tallow owing to the large shipments going on at St Petersburg, is heavy, at barely late rates. P Y C., on the spot, is 46s 3d; and town tallow 40s 9d per cwt net cash. Rough fat, 2s 10d per 8lb.

Oils.—We have no alteration to notice in prices. A moderate business is passing in most kinds.

Hay and Straw.—Old meadow hay, £3 to £4; new ditto, £2 2s to £3 5s; oat clover, £4 to £5; new ditto, £3 to £4 4s; and straw, £1 12s to £1 16s per load

Potatoes.—Although the supplies of potatoes are large, the demand is active, at prices varying from 4s to 8s 6d per cwt.

COAL (Friday).—Tees, 18s 3d; Adelaide, 16s; Hasewell, 19s; Stewart's, 18s 9d., and Lambton, 18s 9d per ton

Hops. (Friday).—The receipts of very favourable plantation accounts causes our market to rule exceedingly heavy, and, to effect sales, lower rates must be submitted to. The supply of hops is somewhat on the increase, and the duty is estimated at from £,80,000 to £200,000

Sussex pockets £3 16s to £4 4s; Weald of Kent ditto, £4 to £5 5s, Mid and East Kent ditto, £5 5s to £7 7s per cwt

Smithfield (Friday).—Nearly a moety of the bullock supply here to-day was derived from abroad. On the whole, the attendance of beasts were large, but of very inferior quality; while the demand for all breeds was in a very depressed state, in some instances, a decline in the quotations of 2d per 8 lb. There were in the market 494 beasts, 2950 sheep and lambs, and 731 calves from Holland, Germany and France; as also 350 beasts from Scotland. Prime Downs sheep, which were scarce, moved off steadily at full prices; but the middling and inferior qualities of mutton were a shade neglected. Lambs were in full average supply, and fluctuated in value at late rates. In calves the number of which is 600, an extensive business was doing, at full prices. The sales are by the head, as our quotations. Milch cows sold slowly, at from £16 to £18 each, including their small calf

Per 8lb. to sink the offal—Inferior beasts, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; second quality ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; prime large oxen, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; prime Scots, &c., 4s 4d to 4s 6d; coarse and inferior sheep, 3s 10d to 4s 2d; second quality ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; prime coarse-woolled ditto, 4s 8d to 4s 10d; prime South Down ditto, 5s 0d to 5s 4d; large coarse calves, 4s 0d to 4s 6d; prime small ditto, 4s 8d to 5s 0d; large hogs, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; neat small porkers, 4s 8d to 4s 10d; lambs, 5s 0d to 6s 2d. Suckling calves, 18s to 28s; and quarter old store pigs, 16s to 18s each. Beasts, 1,010; sores, 181; sheep and lambs, 12,060, calves, 599; pigs, 280.

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday).—We have had a very dull trade this morning, on the following terms:

Per 8lb by the carcase—Inferior beef 3s 2d to 3s 4d; middling ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; prime large ditto, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; prime small ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; large pork, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; inferior mutton, 3s 10d to 4s 2d; middling ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; prime ditto, 4s 10d to 5s 0d; veal, 3s 10d to 4s 10d; small pork, 4s 8d to 4s 10d; lamb, 4s 0d to 6s 0d.

ROBERT HERBERT

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The announcement in last week's impression of two extensive failures in the Corn Market, has not only been confirmed, but materially added to, during the present week. The two firms alluded to last week, were Messrs. Douglas and Sons, and Loseby, Alexander and Co. Since which the unfortunate catalogue has been enlarged by the addition of Messrs. Coventry and Sheppard, and Messrs. King and Melvil.

Although various estimates of the separate and aggregate extents of the failures have been freely intruded in, at present it is too early to arrive at any definite information. The efforts made in support of the falling firms, through various sources so powerfully enabled to effect the end, that proving unavailing affords but too clear a belief that the losses were beyond the reach of temporary assistance. This, in fact, may be considered the principal cause why the price of corn is considered. A fall of nearly one-half its value, within three months, must necessarily entail a loss so heavy as to put it beyond hope of retrieval without the intervention of another harvest. Strong hopes have been indulged in at the termination at what appears, at first glance, to be a gigantic effort to raise prices. It must, however, be remembered that without the enterprise and risk that these parties voluntarily undertook, the price of corn must by the high price of bread during the spring, would have been at a point far too painful to contemplate. Much of the corn now to be paid for was purchased at these enhanced rates; it is, therefore, perfectly reasonable to expect that every endeavour would be made to realise not merely the outlay, but a profit proportioned to the risk; and these considerations offer great excuses for what might otherwise be considered the mere results of grasping avarice. It is, however, certain that the ruinousness of the Money Market has precipitated these failures; but, although no relaxation has occurred in rates during the week, anticipations of any further suspensions (with the exception of the Corn Market) are not for a moment indulged in.

Consols opened heavily on Monday, the quotations being 86⅞ 87, or about ¼ per cent. reduction on Saturday's prices. Towards the close of the day a further decline occurred, and the last quotations were 86¾ ⅞ for Account. A better tone however, prevailed on Tuesday, and an advance of ¼ per cent. was registered, at the close of the Market. Money was in considerable demand during the day, the Bank advancing several sums upon the security of Stock. This favourably influenced prices on Wednesday, and, joined to the speculators for a fall, purchasing in many instances preparatory to settling the account, an impetus to prices resulted, the market closing with Consols at 87⅛ ¼ for Money, and 87¼ ⅜ for Account. Prices have since fluctuated between 87⅛ to 87⅜ for Money, and 87⅜ for Account. Exchequer Bills have been depressed by the state of the money market, having been done at 2s. discount. Securities have generally declined in proportion to Consols, and at closing the market stood, for Bank Stock, 195; Reduced, 87⅛ ⅜ Consols, 87¼ ⅜ New 3½ per Cent, 89¾; Long Annuities 9⅞; India Bonds, 1 pm; Consols for Account, 87¼; Exchequer Bills, £1,000, 1 dis; Small, 2 pm., 3 pm.

Mexican Stock was flat on Monday, consequent upon the arrival of the American Mail, and Dutch was a shade lower. Mexican closed at 17⅜ to 18; Dutch Four per Cents, at 89 to ½. An improvement of ¼ per cent. was registered on Tuesday on Mexican, and some transactions for money effected the rest, and on Wednesday prices generally were tolerably firm, taking into consideration the state of the other markets. The Dutch was again flat on Thursday, and the official quotations at the end of the week were, for Spanish Active Bonds, Six per Cent, 28; Danish Bonds, 1825, Three per Cent, 87¾; Equador Bonds, 3¾; Grenada Bonds, One per Cent, 10¾; Mexican, Five per Cent, 1846, 17¾; Portuguese Three per Cent, 30¾; Ditto, Bonds, Four per Cent, 39; Ditto, Account, 38¾; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cent, Account, 56¾; Ditto, Four per Cent, Certificates, 89¾.

The Share Market continues depressed, while the excitement usually produced at this period by the half-yearly meetings, has scarcely been evinced in any particular. The London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Shares have receded to par in consequence, at a reduction in the dividend equivalent to 3 per cent. per annum. The Eastern Counties Railway, on Thursday, declared the usual dividend, the meeting terminating with great unanimity Prices, however, did not improve upon the result. The market closed rather firmly, at the following prices:—Caledonian, 38; Ditto, Half Shares, 19; Eastern Counties, 16¾; Ditto, York Extension, 6⅝; East Lancashire, New, 8¾; Great Northern, 3¾; Great Northern, London and York, 1¾; Great North of England, New, £30, 6⅝; Lancaster and Carlisle, 60; Ditto, Thirds, 13⅜; Leeds and Bradford, 99⅝; London and Blackwall, 6¾; Ditto, New, No. 2, ½ dis.; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 90⅝; Ditto, Pref. Con., 6 per Cent., 59¾; London and North Western, 170; Ditto, Quarters, L. and B., 26¾; Ditto, Fifths, 14¾; Ditto, £40, M. and B., 67¼ Ditto, £10, M. and B. C., 6; London and South Western, 64¾; London and South Western, New, £30, 31; Ditto, Scrip, £10, 8; Ditto, ditto, £40, 4¾; Midland, 119⅛; Ditto, £40 Shares, 47¾; Ditto, £50 Shares, 8; Newcastle and Berwick, 27¾; Ditto, New, 8¾; North British, Half Shares, 14¾; Ditto, Thirds, 9¾; North Staffordshire, 7¾; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 17¾; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 8¾; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, 24; Shropshire Union, 2; South Eastern and Dover, No. 4, 6¾; South Yorkshire, Doncaster, and River, 12¾; York and Newcastle, 36¼; Ditto, Extension, 14¾; Ditto, Preference, 14¾; York and North Midland, 82; Ditto, Extension, 40; Ditto, Preference, 14¾; Ditto, East and West Rid ng Extension, 25; Manchester and Leeds, Fifths, 10; Boulogne and Amiens, 14; Central of France (Orleans and Vierzon), 15¾; Dutch Rhenish, 2¾.

SATURDAY MORNING.—There was no important alteration occurred yesterday, Consols being rather firmer, at a slight advance. The closing quotation was 87¼ ⅜ for Account; for Money, 87⅛. In the foreign Market, Spanish advanced a point; and the Share Market was quiet, with little doing. A large failure in the Corn Markét was announced towards the close of the day. The firm has been of long standing and high repute, and the extent of the transactions are larger than any of the firms previously mentioned.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 10

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

W. T. COOKE, Aylsham, Norfolk, ironmonger

BANKRUPTS.

T. THOMSON and W. YARIN, Rochester-row, Westminster, brewers. E. G. SHACKEL, Leadenhall-street, grocer R. P. HARDY, Hackney, butcher. R. BAKER, Cheapside, baker. J. OSBORN, Caldecott, Rutlandshire, glass-dealer. J. RATCLIFF, Derby, wine-merchant. J. RICHARDSON, Hull, ship-broker. W. F. WHITE, and J. WHITE, Leeds, cloth merchants. W. BLAKEMORE, Rotherham, York, grocer. J. HOLDSWORTH, Lidget Halifax, farmer W. WARD, Liverpool, cloth-dresser. S. RUNDLE, Rathbone Place, Dorset, cheese-factor. J. HOEFLER, Manchester, commission-merchant. E. ROBERTSON, Chester, grocer. T. HILL, Liverpool, ironmonger

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS

J MACKIE, Greenock, draper J ANDERSON, Nelston, baker. A. M'ALLISTER, Glasgow, spirit-dealer

FRIDAY, AUGUST 13.

WAR-OFFICE, AUG 13.

1st Lif Guards: Cornet and Sub Lieut J. M. Heap to be Lieutenant, vice the Marquess of Worcester, F J Lewis to be Cornet and Sub Lieutenant, vice Heap

4th Light Dragoons: Lieut W Hamilton to be Captain, vice Travers; Cornet G. Briggs to be Lieutenant, vice Blathwayt. 7th Captain J. H. Gray to be Captain, vice J. R. Heaton. 9th Lieut J. Stephenson, Lieut. W. Adjutant, vice Campbell; Cornet Sir A. Chichester, Bart. 9th, Cornet R. W. Rugg to be Lieutenant, vice Anderton, F. Ellis to be Cornet, vice Lord Gifford. 12th Cornet T. H. Goad to be Lieutenant, vice Clements, H. Moseman to be Cornet, vice Goad. 14th Lieut. T. L. Mayo to be Lieutenant, vice Cooper, Lieut. J. Cooper to be Lieutenant, vice Hartley.

16th Foot: Lieut. J. J. Hore to be Captain, vice Otter, 7th Lieut G. Harriott to be Lieutenant, vice Mayne; Lieut M. W. Holt to be Lieutenant, vice Newnes. 31st: Capt. W. J. Verner to be Major, vice Hillier. 32nd: Lieut. and Adjutant H. Campbell to be Captain, vice Lieut. H. S. Douglas to be Captain, vice Bruce Hunt; Ensign W J Cuninghame to be Lieutenant, vice Campbell. 33rd: Lieut. and Adjutant H. Campbell to be Lieut. and Ensign F. S. Williamson to be Lieutenant, vice Wasp; L. Graham to be Ensign, vice Wilkinson, Lieut J. Bright resigns the office of Adjutant, vice Campbell 34th: Lieut. and Adjutant G. Campbell to be Captain, vice Peacock; Ensign A Kinloch to be Lieutenant, vice Campbell; F Duncan to be Ensign, vice Kinloch. 36th: Lieut. and Adjutant J. Darcy to be Captain, vice Darcy; Darcy to be Ensign, vice Page. 55th: Capt. G. S. Hillier to be Captain, vice Verner; Ensign F. D. Gray to be Lieutenant, vice Vincent, vice Vincent, vice Hillier; Ensign C. Vere Gwyn, 57th: Lieut H. F. Drummond to be Ensign, vice Moore. 61st: Capt C. J. Otter to be Captain, vice Hore; Ensign G. A. Race to be Lieutenant, vice Sutton; Ensign F. M. Moore to be Lieutenant, vice Otter. 63rd: Lieut. and Adjutant W. Bruce to be Captain, vice Lieut. W. G. Pratt to be Captain, vice Brevet-Major Bowman, Ensign W. D Arey to be Lieut., vice Pratt; W. A Arnold to be Ensign, vice D'Arcy. 79th: Lieut. R. Worsley to be Paymaster, vice Johnston. 84th: Lieut. R. F. O'Shea to be Lieut., vice W. W. H. Peacock; Ensign A. G. St. John Mildmay to be Lieut., vice Bowles; Ensign C. Nugent to be Ensign, vice Gwyn. 97th: Lieut H. Brunton to be Assist.-Surg to S. Willis, M D., to be Assist.-Surg., vice Dods. 99th: Lieut J. M Walter to be Lieut., vice Davies

21 West India Reg ment: R. S. W. Jones to be Ensign, vice Campbell.

31 West India Regiment: Capt. C Sutherland to be Paymaster, vice Abbott; Lieut. W. F. Vidal to be Adjutant, vice Brevet-Major Bowman, Ensign W D Arey to be Lieut., vice Pratt; W. A Arnold to be Ensign, vice D'Arcy. 79th: Lieut. R. Worsley to be Paymaster, vice Johnston. 84th: Lieut. R. F. O'Shea to be Lieut., vice W. W. H. Peacock; Ensign A. G. St. John Mildmay to be Lieut., vice Bowles; Ensign C. Nugent to be Ensign, vice Gwyn. 97th: Lieut H. Brunton to be Assist.-Surg to S. Willis, M D., to be Assist.-Surg., vice Dods. 99th: Lieut J. M Walter to be Lieut., vice Davies

BREVET.—Major T. Pothergil, to be Lieutenant-Colonel in the Army. To be Majors in the Army: Captain T. Pothergil, Captain J. Woodhouse, 97th.

GARRISON: Brevet Major C. D. Jackson, to be Town Major of Gibraltar, vice Col D. Falls.

WAR-OFFICE, OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, AUG 10

Royal Artillery.—Second Captain J. Hellard to be Captain, vice Hellard First Lieut A. Lawrence to be Second Captain, vice W. E. Crofton; Second Lieut G. R. C Young to be First Lieutenant, vice Hazel

ADMIRALTY, AUG. 11.

Corps of Royal Marines.—First Lieut. R. H. March to be Captain, vice Law Second Lieut. H. T. Fox to be First Lieutenant, vice March

BANKRUPTS.

A. CARROLL, Jun., Strand, newspaper-agent. J. TAYLOR Tunbridge Wells, plumber. T. BROOKS, Horton-O'Shaw, Yorkshire, cotton-spinner. C. MILLS, H. H and Sidford, Southampton, dyers. T. N. HUME, Cheltenham, Gloucestershire, builder. J. LEWIS, Charing Cross, pianoforte. W. PEACE, St. Dyrde, Cornwall, surgeon. T. MARKS, Westbury-upon-Trym, Bristol, carpenter. J. SWITCHER, Bristol, wine-merchant. J. JOHNSTON, Liverpool, flour-dealer. C. H. HEWLAT, Leamington Priors, grocer. A. TURNER, Huddersfield, grocer. T. WOODWARD, Chapel-en-le-Frith, Derbyshire, innkeeper.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.

W. RICHMOND and CO., Glasgow, merchants. R. MOSS, Airdrie, grocer. R. MUIRHEAD, Dundee, merchant. R. FERGUSON, Balgownie, Aberdeenshire. T. MASON and CO., Glasgow, manufacturers. J. LAMB, Dundee, manufacturer

BIRTHS

In the Countess Dowie of a son, At Jamaica, the Hon. Mrs. Price, the lady of George Price, Esq., of Spanish-town.—On the 7th inst., Mrs. Jones, of Bryn-y-Neuadd, Llanfair, N. Wales, of a son.—On the 9th inst., Mrs. John J. Chalmers, of a son.—At Weymouth, the lady of Charles Purdon Coote, Esq., of a son.—At Gibraltar, on the 25th of July, the wife of Lieut. Thomas Power, Esq., of a son.

MARRIAGES

At St. George's, Hanover-square, George Wyse Melville, Esq., to the Hon. Charlotte Bateman Hanbury, second daughter of the late, and sister of the present Lord Bateman.—At Dublin, George Hodgson, Esq., to Frances Isabella, second daughter of Captain Francis Huddleston.—At Oxford, the Rev. Thomas Senentary, to Isabel Lloyd, third daughter of the late Bishop of Oxford.—At Paddington, Lieut. Charles Ashe, of the late Admiral Preston, to Mary Salisbury, third daughter of John Dalton, Esq.—At Pimlico, the Duc de Mofort, &c., to Susan Henrietta, widow of the late Colonel Harrington.—At Wandsworth, Henry Twining, Esq., to Mary Matilda, eldest daughter of William Saunders, Esq.—At St. James's, Piccadilly, Major Hay Drummond Hay, of the Royal Horse Guards, to Lady Caroline Wellesley, second daughter of the Duke of Wellington.—At St. James's Church, William Russell, Fernand, Esq., to the Hon Fanny Mary Stuart, second daughter of Lieutenant-General the late Lord Blantyre.—On the 5th inst., at St George's, Hanover-square, John J. F. Senhouse, Esq., Royal Artillery, second son of the late Major Senhouse, Superintendent-General of the Barrack Department in Ireland, to Emma, only daughter of Mrs. Dutch, widow of Thomas Dutch, Esq., and of the late William Turner, Esq.—At Ruan-Stone Mr. John Hawkins of Wyboston, to Susan, second daughter of Mr. F Adington, of Ruan-Stone.—At Paddington, Alexander Allen, of the late Admiral Preston, third son of the late Mr. W. Atkinson of St. Neot's to Rebecca, daughter of Mr. John Emery, of Dover, in the parish of Saint-Sepulchre.—At Stillington, Yorkshire, Mr. Wilfrid Hodgson, Jun., to Sarah Mabel, eldest daughter of the Rev. G. Hill, Vicar of Stillington to the Rev. Frederick Watkins, B.D., son of the Government Inspectors of schools for the Northern District.

DEATHS

At Bognor-place, Kent, Thomas Lister, Esq., in his 82nd year.—At Hayler-street, the Lady Nugent, widow of Sir Charles Edmund Nugent, Bart., late Admiral of the Blue.—At Bath, Mrs. Bertram Bunbury, M.P.—At St. Leonard's-on-Sea, Joseph Jeffries, Esq., late of Brecknockshire House, Havant, Hampshire.—At Ramsgate, Mrs. Fanny Boyntun, aged 68.—At Bury, Mrs. Ann Gulliver, aged 68.—At Bury, Mrs. Ann Gulliver, aged 68.—At Bury, Mrs. Ann Gulliver

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT-GARDEN.—The Nobility, Subscribers, and the Public, are respectfully informed, that, on THURSDAY next, AUGUST 19th (being a Subscription Night), will be performed a GRAND OPERA, in which all the principal Artistes will appear Conductor, M. Costa. To be followed by a NEW DIVERTISSEMENT; and to conclude with a GRAND BALLET, in which Mdlle Fanny Cerrito and Mdlle Taglioni will take the principal Characters; assisted by Mdlles Badoureau, De Hoffmann, Delussary, M. Mabille, M. Gosnie, &c., and a numerous Corps de Ballet.—Tickets, Stalls, and Boxes, to be obtained at the Box-office (in the Theatre), Mr. Ebers's, and at Mitchell's, Old Bond Street, and Co.'s, 191, Regent-street.—The Doors will be opened at Half-past Seven, and the Performances will commence at Eight o'Clock.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. Batty. Great Success of the new Spectacle, every Evening, and TO-DAY, AUGUST 16, and during the Week. The Highly Successful Equestrian Spectacle, and Equestrian Spectacle, and Grand Fairy Legend, embracing the United Attraction of Song, Dance, and Action, with Unequalled Effects and Mechanical Changes, entitled the CHILD OF THE REGIMENT; or, the Grandeur of Ancient Greece, with Extensive New Scenery, Machinery, and Wardrobe. Unequalled Feats of Horsemanship will present a Brilliant Assemblage of Talent. Mr. Batty and Troupe in their Varied Diversities of Equitation with Batty's Trained Steeds, &c. Gymnastic Exercises. The whole concluding with a Favourite Afterpiece. Box-office open from 11 to 5 daily, and Singe Manager, Mr. W. D. Broadfoot.

ROYAL POLYPHONIC INSTITUTION.

COLLINS'S ODE on the PASSIONS will be recited by Mr J. RUSSELL, with Illustrations on the Polyphonic Lyre, at the Royal Polyphonic Institution, Regent-street, every Evening at Eight, and on Thursday and Tuesday at Three. In addition to the OPAQUE MICROSCOPE, accompanied by Music by Dr. Wallis, on the Moving Phenomena of the Blood, and on the Structure of the Wing of the Bee, Dr. Bachhoffner will deliver LECTURES on NATURAL PHILOSOPHY with especial reference to the Subjects of the TELEGRAPHS, &c. CHEMICAL LECTURES by F. B. Hodges, Esq., on the Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday Evenings at Eight o'Clock. Lectures on Geology on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. The beautiful OPTICAL EFFECTS include the last DISSOLVING VIEWS, DIVING BELL and DIVER, with EXPERIMENTS, &c. &c. Admission, 1s.; Schools Half-price.

WALHALLA, late Miss Linwood's Gallery, Leicester-square.—MADAME WARTON'S Unequalled TABLEAUX VIVANS,—School & Combination of Nine—and the Inimitable WHITE MARBLE STATUE GROUPINGS, when the novel effect produced by the new chemical light, by Mr. G. Southby, of the Royal Surrey Theatre and Saloons, and on the Evenings of Tuesday and Thursday. Dr. Bachhoffner's LECTURES on NATURAL PHILOSOPHY will complete the Subject of the TELEGRAPHS, &c. CHEMICAL LECTURES by F. B. Hodges, Esq., on the Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday Evenings at Eight o'Clock. Lectures on Geology on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. The beautiful OPTICAL EFFECTS include the last DISSOLVING VIEWS, DIVING BELL and DIVER, with EXPERIMENTS, &c. &c. Admission, 1s.; Schools Half-price.

BRIT and LITTLE'S TELEGRAPH may be seen in full actual operation through SEVENTEEN INSTRUMENTS, and only of wire equal to ONE THOUSAND MILES, and the Simplicity and Certainty of the principle proved to demonstration at 307, Tottenham-court-road. It will be found to be unequalled.

A PAPER MILL to be SOLD, by PRIVATE CONTRACT, with immediate possession, with a Five Feet Fourdrinier Machine, by Donkin and Co., the Original Makers, and Supplied by Them. Lock Dues, Fifteen Acres of Land, Dwelling House, Cottages, &c. The Mill is capable of producing, on the average, 9001b. of paper per week, and is in full work. It is situate within 20 miles of a railway station, and about two hours from London. The whole in excellent order, and in full work. The Water Power is such as to allow of the power of the Mill being doubled, if desired. Application may be made to Messrs. Bailey, in the Sun Insurance, to Messrs. Bevan Donkin and Co. Engineers, Bermondsey, London.

HOUSES TO BE SOLD, a BARGAIN.—To those having Spare Capital, and wishing to increase their means, without the trouble; Trustees, and others, wishing to invest; or any Lady, having a small income, and wishing to increase it, the following Property is safely recommended. Either Lot will be sold at private Four Houses, let at £96 a year, price £800. Eight Houses, let at £176 a year, price £1600. Three Houses, let at £86, price £600 Cottage, and a Single House, let at £52, price £360. They are close together, and about a mile from the City. Lease Street from the Freeholder, for 72 years, at a low ground rent. They are well built, and nearly new, and are a very eligible Investment. Apply to Mr. Hall, Surveyor, 3, Bedford-row, Holborn. Persons, and an agent would collect them at a small per centage.—Direct or apply to Mr. Stonebridge, Beach, Street-street, Kingsland-road, London, who will show them.

SPECTACLES.

	£ s. d.
Solid Gold Spectacles	1 5 0
Standard Silver Ditto	0 9 0
Best Steel Ditto	0 2 6
Ditto Ditto Ditto	0 5 0

Suited to every sight and the frames properly adapted to the face by MILLARD, Practical Optician, 3, Cornhill, London.

SHIRTS.—Gentlemen are reminded that the Cheapest, most durable, and best fitting SHIRTS are supplied by WHITLOCK and SON, 168, Those most recommended are long cloth, with the linen fronts, 6s. 6d., and all linen, Gentlemen are requested to say part of bosom, or if collar and wristbands are required, upon receipt of the amount, and in. as part payment of postage. The measure required is neck, chest, and wrist, thick.

NICOLL'S SHOOTING, FISHING, or RACKET JACKET (Registered), is equally well adapted for a sea-side or country stroll as for field or athletic sports. In moderate price of One Guinea, and the easy sensation experienced by the wearer, together with much convenience of pockets, sustains its superiority. A Pamphlet, sent if also for the merchant's counting-house or student's library. Suitable waistcoats are made to correspond, and the jacket in cloths, &c., as used for the Yacht Club of 1847, and to recognised Provincial Agents, and in London only at 114, Regent-street.

TROUSERS.—A good fit in this garment can be secured only by a knowledge of the figure, combined with practical experience and study, is enabled to assert, without fear of contradiction, that no garment better than any other person in the trade of his fitting is a gentlemanly style, with ease in walking or riding. A well-assorted Stock of the newest Cottons to select from. J. CRAVES, 3, 3, High Holborn.

BERDOE'S LIGHT OVER-COAT and SHOOTING JACKETS.—The WATERPROOF PALLIUM, by its superior anchey, gentlemanly appearance, well-known efficiency, and moderate cost, commends itself to every CLAN-TRAP, BUT NOW KNOWN, PATRONISED to sustain its established reputation, as the most complete, economical, and perfect garment ever invented, combining all that can secure the super at attention of the respectable classes.—W. B. s SHOOTING JACKETS are also REALLY WATERPROOF, and many gentlemen have long been celebrated for the extensive Assortment of both fabrics kept to select from, or made to order at a day's notice.—Waterproof CLOAKS, HABITS, &c., for LADIES.—W. BERDOE, Tailor, &c., 96, New Bond-street, and 69, Cornhill!

WINDOW BLINDS.—TYLOR and PACE, general window blind manufacturers, 3, Queen-street, three doors from Cheapside. Venetian blinds, 8d. per square foot; Holland roller blinds, 6d.; Holland spring ditto, 8d.; Dutton roller blinds, 4d.; perforated zinc blinds, in mahogany frames, 1s. 8d.; gauze wire ditto, 1s. 10d.; cretonne blinds of every kind, 1s. 3d.; transparent blinds, each, 18s., 18s., 20s., 23s., and upwards. Detailed lists of prices forwarded on application. post free.

FENDER and CUTLERY WAREHOUSE.—Families furnishing may effect a great saving by purchasing at R. and J. SLACK'S Old Established Ironmongery Warehouse, where a large assortment of Stoves, Fenders, Fire-irons, Dish Covers, Table Cutlery, Nickel silver Wares, &c., at prices 25 per cent. under other houses. Books of Drawings and Prices Gratis, or sent Free by Post. Established 1818.

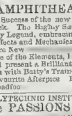
CHUBB'S LOCKS, Fire-proof Safes, and Cash Boxes.—CHUBBS'S NEW PATENT DETECTOR LOCKS give perfect security from false keys and picklocks, and also give immediate notice of any attempt to open them. They are made of every size, and for purposes to which safety is applied, and are the most simple, secure, and durable. Chubb's Patent Fire-proof Safes, Bankers, Chests, &c., Strong Japan Cash Boxes, and Deed Boxes of all sizes, on sale, and made to order, fitted with the Detector Locks.—CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard.

NEW PATENT OIL.—G. M. CLARKE begs respectfully to call the attention of the Nobility and Gentry to his New Patent Oil called PATENT ALBANY OIL price 3s. 6d. per gallon. The Oil will be found superior to the best Sperm, at little more than half the cost. It will burn in any lamps in very safe, free from any smell, and from every description of impurity. It will not require half the wick, and warranted never to injure the lamps. Can be obtained only at the Patentee's, 22, Old Bond-street, Piccadilly, Regent-street, Queen's Place, Brixton; by order, executed within two hours of the receipt.—A large assortment of Oil and Candle Lamps, Chandeliers, &c., of the newest patterns, always in stock.

FOR EXPORTATION.—NIGHT LIGHTS.—The breakage and consequent hoarding of real lights render them useless. They are, moreover, smelt from and is very disagreeable. The inconvenience is not being able to move the common water lest their heads should not be kept. and is very disagreeable. The inconvenience is not being able to move the common water lest their heads should not be kept. and should not be used. All these defects are remedied in MONTAR LAMPS and LAMP MONTARS, which are clean, a space of non-smell and safety there is no light in all matches when used in these lamps, and the greatest economy is effected, the liquid burning the light, and have neither smell, nor smoke. Parsons burning night-lights should not use any other. The Lamps are made in Japan 3s. 6d., and in Bronze and Japan, 5s. 6d., and are beautifully painted flame, and in paper mashé, from 6d. each. Montars, 6d. per box. May be obtained wholesale and retail at the Patentee's Lamp Manufactory, 55, Albany-street Regent's-park.

POWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL.—For the Growth, Preservation, and Beautifying the Human Hair.—Price 3s. 6d., 7s., formerly 10s. 6d., 21s., and 42s. per bottle. The 7s. and double that size, 21s. per bottle.—ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, for Improving and Beautifying the Skin and Complexion. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle. ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or Pearl Dentifrice, for Preserving and Beautifying the Teeth. Price 2s. 9d. per box. Beware of spurious imitations. Some are offered under the implied sanction of Royalty, and the Government Stamp is counterfeited. Another fraud is also practised. The only genuine of each bears the name of "Rowland's," preceding that of the article, on the wrapper, and "A. Rowland and Son," at the back, thus: "A. ROWLAND and SON" 20, Hatton-garden, London, and by every respectable Chemist and Perfumer throughout the kingdom.

LADIES' RIDING HABITS.



An Equestrian Lady, with grace and with ease,
Has certain attractions which cannot but please;
Especially so, if the Fair One she rides
In the thoroughly beautiful Habits of MOSES.

RIDING HABITS.—The greatest care has been evinced in the selecting of Cottons of First rate, Talent, and of considerable experience, at the Habit Department of H. MOSES and SONS' Establishment, CLOTHING HALL. A HABIT ROOM has also fitted up exclusively for Ladies, in which to ensure every degree of privacy whilst Ladies are assisting their Clothes and during the time of their being measured. The Subscriber during the present week will guarantee a saving of full 50 per Cent., as will be seen from the following list:—

	£ s. d.		£ s. d.
Summer Cloth Habits, with 3 Gratis Skirts	2 0 0	Superfine Cloth Habits	3 10 0
Ditto Ditto	1 10 0	Superfine Quality	4 4 0
Ditto, Cassimere	2 15 0

[illegible] Habits, to be had on application, or will be forwarded to any part of the country.

[illegible]-makers, Tailors, Woollen drapers, Hatters, Hosiers, and General Outfitters for Ladies and Gentlemen, 154, 155, 156, and 157, Regent-street.

To prevent disappointment, observe—The Establishment of H. MOSES and SON has no connection with any other House, in or out of London; and those who do so are Gratuitous and Cheap Clothing, &c., should, to prevent disappointment, call at, or send to, the above address.

NOTICE.—The Establishment closes from Saturday till Monday.

Business is transacted till Twelve o'Clock.

 The Entrance to the Bespoke or Measurement Department, is at the Private Hall, 83, Aldgate.

FOUR FIRES FOR ONE PENNY!!! by EDWARDS'S PATENT FIREWOOD.—It lights instantly, and saves money, time, and trouble. Sold by oilmen and grocers. Families in the country may have it sent with 20s. parcel, or on receipt of a post-office order for 5s., payable to Thomas Stevenson, No. 16, Wharf-road, City-road.

PUBLICATIONS, &c.

THE HOLY LAND
Just Published, price 2s. 6d. (Proof Impressions, on India paper, mounted),
PANORAMIC PICTURE OF THE HOLY LAND; [illegible] Model Views of the principal Cities and Places mentioned in the Old and [illegible]s of the Plate, 28 in. by [illegible]. No. 26, Strand, and sold by [illegible] booksellers.

ZENON, THE MARTYR; A Record of the Piety, Patience, and Persecution of the Early Christian Nobles. Together with some warning admonitions to Christian Noblemen of the present day. By the Rev. RICHARD COBBOLD, M.A., B.D., Rector of Wortham.
"Not many mighty; not mighty: not mighty."—1 Cor. i. 26.
HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

HANS ANDERSEN'S TALES FOR THE YOUNG. By HANS C. ANDERSEN. With Engravings after the German, 3s. This Volume contains Sixteen of the most beautiful of the characteristic Tales of this celebrated Author, and is got up in a style combining [illegible]
Lists of other Volumes of "Burns Cheap Literature" [illegible] on application.
London: J. BURNS, 17, Portman-street.

Just Published,
ROBINSON CRUSOE (Select Library Edition), with Preface, [illegible] Notes, and Illustrations. The Text revised, will be found the most correct and cheapest [illegible]. Price 4s. 6d., handsome Cloth; or 6s. half-bound Morocco.
A List of the previous volumes of the Select Library may be had on application.
London: JAMES BURNS, 17, Portman-street.

ALL JENNY LIND'S SONGS.—"The PIANISTA, for AUGUST, No. 63, contains all the Songs sung by Jenny Lind, with her own underlinements, in the opera of "La Figlia del Reggimento," for 3s. No. 61, all those sung by her in "Robert le Diable," 2s. No. 62, her Portrait, and the six Swedish Songs, 3s. No. 77, "Mary Stone," and ten other Eidolphian Songs. Either No., 2s.; or post-free, 26 stamps.—Pianista Office, 67, Paternoster-row.

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS; History of, the Succession of the Ancient Roman Emperors, with the Prices of their Coins, bearing Portraits, their Dates and Mottoes, is just published by P. WILLIAM, Dealer in Ancient Coins, 66, Strand, London, price 1s.; by post, 1s. 2d. Coins sent by post, Bought, Chattigned, &c.

UNCLAIMED DIVIDENDS. — THE UNCLAIMED DIVIDEND BOOKS of the BANK of ENGLAND; containing the names, addresses, and descriptions of upwards of 18,000 persons, entitled to unclaimed dividends, and doubled in the last edition, 7s. 6d.
PRACTICE OF [illegible] an Outline Course of English Poetry, 5s. cloth.
[illegible] Plays arranged for Family Reading. 6s cloth
[illegible] Readings in Literature, 3s. 6d.
NEW SCHOOL to METAPHYSICS, on Investigation of the true Relations [illegible]
[illegible]ish, and Grammar, Logic, and Rhetoric to each other. 12s. cloth.
[illegible]; RIVINGTON, Waterloo-place, and other Booksellers.

[illegible]cious Volumes, beautifully Illustrated, price 31s.,
THE ANNALS of HORTICULTURE.—This Work contains the entire system of Practical Gardening, and includes, in plain and familiar language, full instructions for the Cultivation of every kind of Flower, Fruit, and Vegetable; the Management of Greenhouses, Stoves, Frames, Pits, &c.; a Calendar of Gardening Operations for every Month in the Year; a description of every New Flower in Cultivation; a list of every Improvement in the Science and Practice of Gardening; to the general Management of every subject of interest or utility connected with Horticulture, and Natural History; together with the concisely COMPLETE and PERFECTLY CLEAR TREATISES, [illegible] time previously for the Work
Culture of the Rose; of Hardy Lily; of Balsams; of Flowering Thorns; of Tropeolums; of Hardy Evergreens; of Hardy Annuals; of Stocks; of Wall-flowers; of Hardy Perennials; of Passion Flowers, of Fuchsias; of Neapolitan Violets; of the Achimenes, of Geraniums; [illegible] of the Campanula, of the Holly; of the Clematis; of the Ground [illegible] of Hardy Heaths; of the Polyanthus, of Aquatic Plants of the [illegible]s of the Pansy; of Grasses, of Gardening over the Sea; of the Calceolaria or Grape Vines of Melons; of the Fantasm Trees of Pear Trees; of Asparagus; of the Potato; of Carrots and Parsnips; of the Garden Pea; of Cucumbers and to-mid Salads, &c. &c.
Published by HOULSTON and STONEMAN, 65, Paternoster-row. Sold by all Booksellers in the Kingdom.

BOOKS ON KNITTING AND NETTING,
One Shilling each; or by post, One and sixpence.
THE KNITTER'S FRIEND.
II. TENTH THOUSAND.
THE KNITTER'S CASKET.
III. FIFTEENTH THOUSAND.
THE ART OF CROCHET.
Being Plain Instructions for Self Fashion and Elegant and Useful Accessories.
IV. SIXTH THOUSAND.
MY WORKING FRIEND.
A Manual of Instruction in Common Work and Dressmaking.
Also,
Sixpence each; or by post, Eightpence,
THE BABY'S WARDROBE.
V. FIFTEENTH THOUSAND.
A KNITTING BOOK for POLKA DRESSES.
BY MRS. BOOTH.
"The directions are clear, correct, and well-arranged, and the result is comprehended by the novice."—Mdlle. Riego on the Lady's Work-Box, p. 3.
"We know none more worthy of public favor than this series."—Ladies' Gazette of Fashion.
The contents have evidently undergone a most jealous scrutiny by one [illegible] correspondent with the works.—Mrs. [illegible]
Be careful in the titles. Every dealer in Berlin Wool has, or can get them.
[illegible] Publisher, Ramsgate, Kent.

ELEGANCE and ECONOMY in PAPER-HANGINGS.—French Satins, 2s. 6d. per piece. Flock, 6d. per yard; 20,000 pieces in Stock. Penal Decorations, Flowers or Oak, as cheap as common Papers. Tortes, Cash. Established 20 years. W. CROSBY, 22 Lowther Arcade. N.B. There are no connections with this entrance.

LADIES WHO CROCHET may have forwarded free for [illegible] Sixty Fashion Stamps, a gradiated set of [illegible] Jessie Hooker, in a rich Morocco Case, together with a Book containing Plain Instructions on the Art of Crochet. Illustrated by a Book with instructions for making the Jessie Hat and three [illegible]

THE CLOSE OF THE LONDON SEASON.—LADIES leaving for the Country and visiting the Seaside, will find at SILWELL and Co.'s Fashion House, seven thousand [illegible] Bareges, and Muslin de-laine Dresses, with many [illegible] Dresses, Mantles, Bonnets, Hats, and Millinery, at the usual entrance.
[illegible] and 44, 45, and 46, Conduit-street.

CHEAP SILKS, 38s. 3d. the Dress of 17 Yards.—During the SELLING OFF of which will continue at GEORGE SMITH'S, of Ludgate-hill. For one month, the magnificent Stock of rich and fancy-coloured Silks, will be sold at 38s. 3d. per Dress, instead of 2s. 6d. to 3s. 3d. The Shawls, Gloves, Embroidered and Printed Dresses, Fancy Goods, and new Textile Fabrics, are selling at the same reduction of prices. The Public are invited to inspect, but on no pretence whatever, constrained to purchase. Goods not approved exchanged or the right, not as they are, and their prices are marked in plain figures.—37, Ludgate-hill (late Tyndall and Bragg).

CAUTION.—[illegible] LINERY and DRESS-MAKING.—[illegible] Inventress of Tuscan Straw Art of Dress making is [illegible] Public is also NOT removed, nor has at any establishment what[illegible] to obtain it, or to give information as heretofore in Cutting, Fitting, &c. [illegible] most Polished Style, in 8 Lessons, for One Guinea. The [illegible] tion fairly substantiates by reference to Pupils.—Apprentices Wanted.

THE LONDON [illegible] MOURNING WAREHOUSE, 247, W.C. JAY [illegible] Jays saved, by [illegible] to THE LONDON [illegible] Ladies to its great skill. [illegible] Mourning Orders [illegible] Mourning Millinery, and the [illegible] Gloves, and Hosiery pos[illegible] complete Outfit of [illegible] shortest notice. may be found on the [illegible] and reasonable [illegible] more terms. Widows and Family Mourning, [illegible] Dresses, Shawls, Bonnets, Caps, Collars, &c. [illegible] Experienced Assistants, with the strictest [illegible] and economy, is always Kept made by skilled Ladies upon the [illegible] Mourning required (for any Establishment in the Trade). Where [illegible] themselves or households, have it for use or to turn at town or country immediately. Scale of Prices, and Patterns of all descriptions, for Morning or Evening, in the greatest variety. The SILVER ROOMS contain a beautiful assortment of Millinery, Head-dresses, Flowers, Crape, and Muslin Collars, &c.; with every description of Jewellery for Mourning, and are carefully supplied with the choicest Modes of most approved Novelties of both the Parisian and London Fashions.

UNDER THE ESPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
THE ROYAL NAVAL, MILITARY, EAST INDIA, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 13, WATERLOO-[illegible]

CHAIRMAN—[illegible]-dale Smith, K.H.
DEPUTY CHAIRMAN—Major-General [illegible] Gowan, C.B.
Admiral the Right Hon. Sir C. Cockburn, G.C.B. [illegible] Lieut.-Gen. H. Bunbury, K.H., late R.H.G.
Major-Gen. Sir J. Cockburn, Bt., G.C.H. [illegible] Lieut.-Col. Purchase, K.L.S.
[illegible] Sir Thomas Brisbane, G.C.B., G.C.H. [illegible] Lieut.-Col. Riddell, K.H.
Major-Gen. Sir F. Ross, G.C.H.S., K.C.H. [illegible] Major Chadwell Cluthero, K.H., F.R.S.
[illegible] Sir Gore Langton, Bt. [illegible] Hale, late R.H.G.
[illegible] Sir Hew D. Ross, K.C.B. [illegible] William Langley, K.H.
[illegible] Edward Vernon Utterson, K.H.
[illegible] Arnold, K.H., [illegible] Graham Taylor, Esq.

ACTUARY—John Finlaison, Esq., the Government Calculator.
Assurances are granted upon the lives of persons in every climate in the habitable parts of the world, [illegible] particularly [illegible] Persons [illegible] from one country to another without forfeiting their [illegible] on the [illegible] ness, was approbated to [illegible] Policies effected [illegible] ing the present year, on one [illegible] ring reals of premiums, will entitle the assured to a proportionate Share of the Profits at the next Septennial Division, in the year 1854.
JOSEPH C. HUTCHELL, Secretary

WHAT is the cause of Pickles not keeping? Bad Vinegar. How and whence can we insure getting a genuine and unadult nated? By sending the Works. Bet be sure see name is on the label. Extra Strong Pickling Vinegar, 5s. per gallon. Table, 2s.; Common, 1s. 6d.—HENRY BARRON, Vinegar Maker, Retail Department, near the Turnpike, City-road. Orders by post punctually attended to.

PURE ST. JULIEN CLARET, 28s. per Dozen; Pints, 18s.; imported direct by REDGES and BUTLER, Wine Merchants, &c., 155, Regent-street; can be confidently recommended. Also, some superior Gordon's Golden Sherry, 36s. per Dozen. On the receipt of a Post-office Order, or reference, will be immediately forwarded.

TONIC ALE.—This splendid description of Bottled Beer is now to perfection. It is strongly recommended by the Faculty as possessing pure [illegible] unadulterated, invigorating quality, &c. Sold in quart and pint bottles, secured with a Patent Capsule, JOSEPH STOCKTON, Sole Agent, Stores, No. 1, John's-mews, Bedford-row.

PIANOFORTES.—The cheapest house in London to purchase [illegible] Pianofortes is at H. TOLKIEN'S, manufacturer, 26, King William-street, London Bridge. [illegible] Pianofortes, by the most eminent makers, beg his friends to view his splendid stock of [illegible] and can assure them that no price charged by H. [illegible] Old instruments taken in exchange.—TOLKIEN, 26, King William-street, London Bridge.

PIANOFORTES for SALE or HIRE in TOWN or COUNTRY, WARRANTED.—G. PEACHEY (by appointment Maker to the Queen), 73, Bishopsgate-street Within, opposite the Marine Society, respectfully solicits the attention of the public to his elegant assortment of improved CABINET, COTTAGE, PICCOLO, and SQUARE PIANOFORTES, New Scale, 6½ Octaves C to C, at the lowest possible prices for instruments that can really be warranted. One hundred Pianofortes for general inspection, with a variety of second-hand. G. PEACHEY (opposite the Marine Society), 73, Bishopsgate-street Within.

PARTRIDGE SHOOTING—Previous to which, Sportsmen about to equip themselves, are solicited to try the qualities of GEORGE and JOHN DEANE'S GUNS, at their Shooting Ground. The first-rate shooting qualities, and superior workmanship of these celebrated Guns, have obtained for them the unanimous approbation of all the leading sportsmen. GEORGE and JOHN DEANE, Gun Makers, 30, King William-street, London-bridge.

AIR GUNS and AIR CANES.—An entirely new and further [illegible] of these [illegible] can be made, now on sale, adapted by REILLY Jun., for killing Rabbits, Rooks, Sea Fowl, &c., with ball, small shot, or powder with shot, Fish with harpoons, &c. &c. Prices commencing at £3. Cash, pump and apparatus complete.—See Treatise, price 6d. by post, 8d.)—REILLY Gun-maker, Philadelphia Building, 5, New Oxford-street—Removed from 315, Holborn.

JONES'S £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. They comprise every modern improvement, and are warranted to perform well for any time from one to five years. The great reduction of price at once sets aside all rivalry, either of the Swiss manufacturers, or any other house. On receipt of a Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 4s., one will be sent Free. Mr. John Jones's Sketch of Watchmen, sent free for 2 Postage Stamps.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—A Pamphlet, explaining the various constructions, and the advantages of each, with a List of Prices, will be forwarded, Gratis, by post, if applied for by a Country Letter.—T. COX SAVORY and CO., Goldsmiths, and Jewellers to the Queen, 47, Cornhill, London.

ORNAMENTAL CLOCKS.—Recently received from Paris, an unusual large variety of FOURTEEN-DAY CLOCKS, to strike the hours and half-hours, in Ormolu, Bronze, and China. The designs are Classical and Historical, and for both a few of great merit in the style of Louis XIV. The price is four, five, and seven guineas each.—T. COX SAVORY and SONS, 47, Cornhill, London, opposite the Statue of the Duke of Wellington.

MUSICAL BOXES.—A large stock of the first quality, [illegible] upwards of 600 airs, overture, &c., including selections from the works of the following eminent composers: Mozart, Rossini, Donizetti, Auber, Strauss, &c. &c. A Catalogue of the Music is now published, and may be had gratis, on application to T. COX SAVORY and CO., Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

SILVER PLATE, New and Second-hand.—T. COX SAVORY and CO.'s Pamphlet of Prices, with outlines, may be had gratis, or will be sent, free of applied for by a paid letter. The contents are the prices, weights, and patterns of new and second-hand silver spoons and forks, new and second-hand Tea and Coffee Services, Waiters, Silver-edged Plated Goods, the new plate on which metal spoons and forks, Watches, Clocks, Jewellery, Ladies Gold Neck Chains and Jewellery.
T. COX SAVORY and CO., seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

SILVER TEA SERVICES, of New Patterns.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Working Silversmiths, 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank, respectfully inform Lady customers that they have recently finished a few new designs in tea services with the present improved taste, and that they are sold at reduced prices from those customary in the trade.

Urnside Pattern.			Thistle Pattern.
Strong Silver Tea-pot	£10 18 0		Strong Silver Tea-pot	£8 0 0
Ditto Sugar-basin	8 14 0		Ditto Sugar-basin	7 7 0
Ditto Cream-jug	4 10 0		Ditto Cream-ewer	4 15 0
Ditto Coffee-pot	4 17 0		Ditto Coffee	5 17 0
Complete	29 7 0		Complete	26 19 0

A variety of upwards of 50 [illegible] per ounce
With an application to the [illegible] the prices of recent designs, will be [illegible] sent of bread Basin, Ireland, India, or the Colonies.

BED FEATHERS, PURIFIED by STEAM with PATENT MACHINERY, whereby they are rendered perfectly sweet and free from dust.

Mixed	1s. 8d. per lb.	Best Living Bird	2s. per lb.
Grey Goose	1s. 4d.	Best Irish White Ditto	2s. 6d.
Foreign Ditto	2s. 8d.	Best Down	3s. 6d.

HEAL and SON'S List of Bedding, containing particulars of weights, sizes, and prices, sent free by post on application to their Factory 196 Tottenham-court-road.

RESTORATION OF HAIR.—Many a Gentleman [illegible] whom would was rapidly losing its natural ornament has, by the use of OLDRIDGE'S BALM of COLUMBIA, restored his locks, and found them continue to increase their wonted luxuriance, and imparting an elegant vivacity to the countenance at the sunrise of an invaluable decoration. Sold by applying this active restorative, imparted a salutary vigour to her tresses, which have again waved and wantoned in luxuriance and beauty by the use of this, her bottle, no other prices. Oldridge's Balm, 1, Wellington-street, the second house from the Strand.

THE TOILET of BEAUTY furnishes innumerable proofs of the high estimation in which GOWLAND'S LOTION is held by the most distinguished [illegible]tours of brilliant complexions. The elegant preparation comprehends the preservation of the complexion, both from the effects of cutaneous malady and the operation of atmospheric temperature, by rendering it delicacy, and preserving the brightest tints with which beauty is adorned. The Government Stamp. Price 2s. 9d. and 5s. 6d., quarts, 8s. 6d. Sold by all Perfumers and Chemists.

TO LADIES.—On the drive, the ride, the promenade, or the [illegible] excursion, Ladies should ever be provided with ROWLANDS KALYDOR, which will be found invaluable to the cool, refreshing, dissipating the chief of annoyance and relaxation, allaying [illegible] irritability and heat, and immediately affording the pleasing sensation of delightful freshness to the skin. As a specific for the skin, in producing and restorer of the Hair, Rowland's Macassar Oil will be found a few effusions, guarding it from [illegible] and preserving it in the vivid dark.—* * * It is highly necessary on purchasing to see that the word "ROWLANDS" precedes the name of the article on the wrapper of each, as spurious imitations are abroad.

CHURCHER'S PRESERVATIVE HAIR-WASH is a Medicated Preparation for the Hair. It will be found most effective in all cases of premature Decay, and it operates by removing from the skin every obstruction to the development of the Hair. Price 2s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. each.—CHURCHER'S COMPOUND CREAM imparts a rich tint to the Hair, gives it elasticity and pliability to the most rigid, and a fine glossy appearance to the harshest. Price 1s. 6d. each; or, in glass-squeezed jars, 2s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. each.
[illegible] Wigs, Toupees, and Scalps, [illegible] to order.

ASHLEY'S ANTI-DEPILATORY EXTRACT, the cheapest [illegible] and most speedily efficacious remedy offered to the public, warranted to stop the hair from [illegible] soon, thicken the same, and to [illegible] the most unmanageable beard or whisker by Ashley, post-office, Birkdale, in bottles, half-pints, 2s. 6d.; pints, 4s. 6d.; quarts, 7s. 6d.; and may be had of all Chemists and Perfumers in the country. Ashley's Depôt, 4, Shoe-lane, London. Ashley's Rouge, Ashley, Brixton; Barclay, Farringdon-street; Edwards, 37, St. Paul's Churchyard; Hannay, 154, [illegible]-street; Duval, Strand, near Temple-bar; Keating, 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, and all [illegible]-street, Dublin. Numerous Testimonials with each [illegible]

NEURALGIA or TIC-DOULOUREUX.—A complete victory may be said to have been obtained over these distressing affections in cases of [illegible] one of the many reports lately arising [illegible] to persons who were suffering [illegible] dated many others to enable them to [illegible] general inquiry amongst its forms has gained such credit and approval in our [illegible] Public, that the demand increases month. It is made [illegible] by JAMES MAY, No. 40, High-street, Worcester, August 11, 1846. [illegible] JESSOP'S Celebrated Cure for Tic-Douloureux, Sick Headache, Rheumatism, and Pains in the Limbs, &c.; which may be had, the oil in bottles, at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each.—Of Mr. Gibbons's Depository, No. 1, King's-cross, and of all respectable Patent Medicine Vendors.

THE EXHIBITION IN WESTMINSTER HALL.

WE resume our illustrations of this [illegible] Exhibition, with the Specimens of Sculpture—the Statues of HAMPDEN, CLARENDON, and FALKLAND. These are, to our thinking, the finest portrait-statues which have ever been executed by British sculptors. In attitude, expression, and character, they are eminently indicative of the art; and of such general merit, that it is difficult to prefer one to the other. Of the three, Clarendon is the only one worked in marble; and that is in an unfinished state; the others being the plaster models from which the marbles will be executed.

HAMPDEN, by J. H. Foley, is a splendidly conceived representation of the warrior statesman; and, in his decided yet serene brow, and slightly compressed lips, as well as in the firm attitude in which he stands, resting his right hand on his upsheathed sword, his cloak being disposed in graceful folds over his left arm, we have the true type of the stout-hearted man who resisted, with so much determination, Charles the First's illegal claims to ship money—indeed, it is difficult to [illegible] a more speaking figure than this, or one that would more clearly express the character of John Hampden.

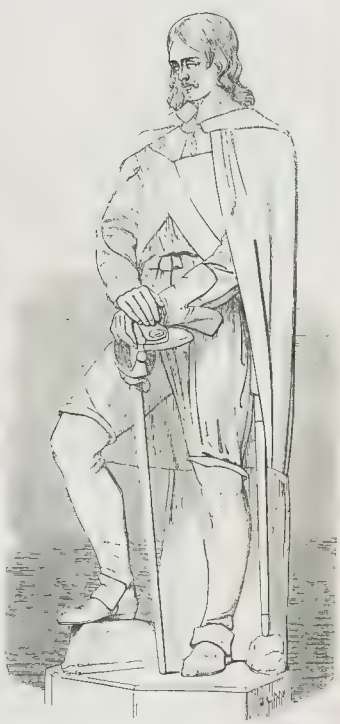
The statue of LORD CLARENDON, by W. Calder Marshall, R.A., is a finely-imagined and beautifully-executed representation of the wise Chancellor. It represents the man, [illegible] in the act of [illegible] doking than his portraits generally show him to have been, and is, therefore a poetic yet truthful image; yet that [illegible]error, as Clarendon could not always have been corpulent. Habited in the robes of office, as Lord High [illegible] his right hand a patent, whence hangs the [illegible] London is at once a truly picturesque and imposing statue, full of dignity and impressiveness.

LORD FALKLAND, by John Bell, is a peculiarly happy figure, [illegible] thoroughly the artist's conception of the kind of sadness and dejection of spirit, which he had never been used to; but which, Clarendon says, stole upon Falkland at the commencement of the civil war. He

THE WESTMINSTER HALL EXHIBITION.

MODEL FOR A STATUE OF JOHN HAMPDEN.—BY J. H. FOLEY

MARBLE STATUE OF THE EARL OF CLARENDON.—BY W. C. MARSHALL, A.R.A.



MODEL FOR A STATUE OF LORD FALKLAND.—BY JOHN BELL.

is represented leaning on his sword, mourning that he has to bare it against his countrymen in defence of his King. The sorrowful expression in the countenance of Falkland, and in the whole bearing of the figure, is most exquisitely produced, and speaking.

These statues are ordered by the Commissioners of Fine Arts for rebuilding the Palace of Westminster, and are three of sixteen which are to grace St. Stephen's Hall. They will be placed on octagonal pedestals of four feet in height, in front of clustered columns, which will support the roof of the Hall. When in their destined places, they will be of surpassing effect, as the light thrown upon them will be from windows twenty-two feet from the floor; consequently, the lights and shadows of the figures will be defined with exquisite picturesqueness.

The accompanying illustration is Mr. Paton's exquisite picture—"The Reconciliation of Oberon and Titania;" with the following epigraph:—

Titania. My Oberon! what visions have I seen!
Methought I was enamoured of an ass.
Oberon. There lies your love.
Titania. How came these things to pass?
O, how mine eyes do loath his visage now!
Oberon. Silence awhile. Robin, take off this head.
Titania, music call; and strike more dead
Than common sleep, of all these five the sense.
Titania. Music, ho! music, such as charmeth sleep.
Puck. Now, when thou wak'st, with thine own fool's eyes peep.

Midsummer Night's Dream, act iv. scene 1.

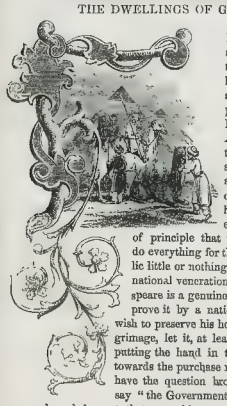
"THE RECONCILIATION OF OBERON AND TITANIA."—PAINTED BY J. NOEL PATON.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, AUGUST 14, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 277.—Vol. XI.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE DWELLINGS OF GENIUS.



FROM present appearances, we should augur that the steps which have been taken to raise a public fund to purchase Shakspeare's House at Stratford-on-Avon, seem more likely to be successful than such propositions usually are. We are glad of this, because we have an objection to establishing it as a sort of principle that the Government must do everything for the public, and the public little or nothing for themselves. If the national veneration for the name of Shakspeare is a genuine feeling, let the nation prove it by a national act: if the public wish to preserve his house as a shrine of pilgrimage, let it, at least, take the trouble of putting the hand in the pocket for a trifle towards the purchase money. We shall then have the question brought to a test; but to say "the Government ought to do it" is a mere acknowledgment that something ought to be done, without the spirit to sacrifice a penny or a moment's time to effect it. We are, therefore, glad the subscription is filling; we are glad that the Prince Consort stands at the head of it; it is a graceful tribute to the great name of the land of his adoption; and it is not a mere compliment to an English feeling, for Shakspeare is, we verily believe, as widely read, and more frequently acted, in Germany than in England: unquestionably, his works are more profoundly studied. There are, we believe, nearly twenty different translations of his dramas, independently of those single plays which such men as Schiller and Voss have reproduced. The translation of Tieck and Schlegel is all that a translation can ever hope to be; and, as to criticism, that of German writers on our great bard is perfectly overwhelming in quantity and minuteness—to develop his principles of art, his purposes, his meanings, has been the labour of love to grave Professors, University Doctors, whose profundity is something awful, and not to be comprehended save by those who have lost themselves therein, or accompanied the learned men into the very depths of their obscurity. Germany, therefore, has a right to be represented in a Shakspearean subscription; it is a nation that has adopted the wise expounder of all moods of the human heart. Germany treats the name of Shakspeare with a reverence and ceremony that become the homage of the Foreigner. But, in England, we are born to him, and regard him as a familiar friend, a possession, part of ourselves; and we shall be excused for saying that the familiarity has not been wholly without its proverbial consequence; it has made us less conscious of the power that is always working among us; sitting at the feet of the giant, we never think of his colossal proportions; nor can we disguise from ourselves the fact that many more people admire Shakspeare than read him. There are thousands who never went deeper into his writings than the specimens in the "Elegant Extracts" or "Enfield's Speaker," or those volumes of "Beauties" where the gems are spoiled by being torn out of their settings, and thrown together in a disordered heap. Like all the higher intellectual enjoyments, the poetry of Shakspeare is only open to those who are educated, in the truer and higher sense of the word. Whether it has been by their own efforts, through toil and hardship, or whether they have received it as the natural consequence of their position and wealth, matters not a straw. Shakspeare is for the man of awakened faculties, who can read and feel; he is still more for him who can analyse as well as feel, and the greater perfection in which he can do both, the more will he find to admire.

But if we dare look fact in the face, and describe what we see there, we must admit that it is but too easy to explain why we fear a proceeding like the subscription to purchase the house of Shakspeare cannot be a national one. That feeling of admiration which, like Ben Jonson's, is just "this side of idolatry," is the sentiment of few in numbers. It influences the mind and colours the language of a far wider sphere; nay, we believe it impossible to estimate the indirect influence the works of the great poet have had on the people at large, through those who give the tone of thought to the nation. But Poetry does not govern the world; it only delights a small part of it. Science, strength, and wealth, are the rulers of the earth, and to these and their works men are compelled to bow. Nothing commands the universal homage of mankind but visible results. We may rely on it that what has been the case in all ages among all nations, has a principle under it that cannot be changed. Men have always showered wealth and rewards on the soldier, the statesman, the men of action who have impelled society onward, or upheld it from falling. In a world of stern realities, the ideal must often "suffer not thinking on." Men must dig always, and sometimes fight, or they would cease to exist; and in the toil, struggles, ignorance, and misery in which the bulk of all nations have to pass their days, it is impossible such a flower as the perception of poetic beauty can lift its head or open its bosom; nay, things more divine than poetry can scarcely struggle upward to existence. When a writer says that the admiration of Shakspeare is a national feeling, he means it is the sentiment of the part of it he represents and addresses. But what an abyss beneath, where the light has not yet penetrated ?

HER MAJESTY'S MARINE EXCURSION.—THE ROYAL SQUADRON ENTERING DARTMOUTH HARBOUR.—(SEE PAGE 120.)

Wherefore, we entreat the reader who sees thousands spent on statues to a Wellington, and tens of thousands given by men to a Cobden, or even to a Hudson, while for the house of a Shakspeare it is difficult to raise as many hundreds, not to marvel at the matter, or to be wrath and indignant, or to think worse of the world on that account. The Cobdens and Hudsons are the men of their age, doing its work, which is of a kind perceptible and tangible, a material service, materially acknowledged. The feeling that would preserve the birth-place of Shakspeare is a sentiment, a kin to the feeling of the devotee for the shrine of his saint ; but a whole people never indulges in such a refinement of admiration ; the subscription therefore will not express a national feeling in the widest meaning of the term ; it will be the homage of a number, comparatively small, but we hope large enough fully to ensure success; it is not the less fitting a thing should be done though it may not come within the province of the Government, and does not excite the efforts of the whole of the people. We do not insist on the Government employing the public funds to purchase the dwellings of great names ; it might sometimes give rise to strange debates. As doing honour to the memory of the man, it would be protested against by those who abhor the actions on which that greatness may have been built. Religious and political enmities survive to the latest generations; yet in the conflicts of creeds and parties, some of the greatest names have been won. A Government could no more purchase the "house of Cromwell," without raising a storm of opposition, than they could place his "statue" among those of the Sovereigns of England. The King of Bavaria excludes the bust of Luther from his Saxon Walhalla ; we could multiply instances of moral or controversial reasons sufficing to repress the homage to intellectual greatness. Governments avoid such questions as carrels over the ashes of the dead. But a people can divide or unite, and express their feeling of the man they delight to honour, unfettered.

Admitting the policy of a Government refraining from interference in some cases, when in others public opinion would make it impossible, there is yet something it might do cheaply, without offence, and with great advantage. As a memorial that "great men have been among us," their birth-place, their dwelling, or the house in which they died, might surely be distinguished from the common mass by some recording tablet; a name, a few letters, and a date, would be enough to make many a street in this metropolis a place of pilgrimage ; the statement of a fact can offend no opinion ; the expense of a few shillings not the most rigid economy could cavil at. The French do this even in their provincial towns, and it has a happy effect. We shall never forget the pleasure with which we once, in a ramble through Havre, stumbled on the house where Bernardin St. Pierre was born, the writer of "Paul and Virginia," and the "Studies of Nature :" in the same manner, we found unexpectedly the birth-place of Rosseau, in Geneva. Thus much a Government might surely do, on something of a complete system. The humble abodes in front of which a great name might then be found, would be continual lessons of humility—or hope : at present they must be learned from books, that but faintly impress them. Is it too much to ask this of Lord Morpeth ? Leigh Hunt might be his Lordship's "Indicator."

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

There is no political news of consequence from F[illegible] and Royal Family are at Eu. The Prince de [illegible] command of the Mediterranean squadron to [illegible] Paris on Sunday night in rather ill health. With the exception of the Jupiter and the Jena, and the steam frigate Macellan, which have been sent to Tunis, the number of the squadron lately commanded by Admiral Parseval, lay at anchor off Naples.

Great excitement was caused in Paris on Wednesday by the murder of the Duchesse de Praslin, daughter of Marshal Sebastiani. She had just arrived from Havre at her town residence, No. 29, Faubourg St. Honoré, and was found murdered in her bed early in the morning. The unhappy lady, although the mother of several children, was only about 40 years of age. The Procureur General aided by several police and legal authority at once instituted an inquiry by an examination of the servants, and in an investigation of this mysterious affair several arrests had been made in consequence. That no robbery had been committed is acknowledged, and in consequence, it was conjectured at first that either private vengeance or resistance against some meditated violence led to this catastrophe.

The Echo Agricole says that the harvest had been gathered throughout the east and south of France, and that it would require another week to be completed in the west and north, where the rain had occasioned some delay. "Our accounts from every quarter," says L'Echo, "concur in describing the crops as abundant; and, including the rye and other inferior grain, which had almost totally failed last year, our farmers will be able to sell for the home consumption nearly double what they sold in 1846." The fall in the price of wheat, in all the markets adjoining Paris, is now felt in the capital, where a corresponding diminution has taken place.

M. Perrin Auber, whose name was connected with the events of the fire ? lation, died a few days ago at Arpères, a small village in the neighbourhood of Paris, at an advanced age and in a condition bordering on infirmity. He was nephew of the Conventionalist Perrin (de l'Aube), who, having been implicated in some fraudulent transactions relative to a Government contract was sentenced to hard labour for life and the pillory. He was so affected by his condemnation that he suffered himself to die of hunger, and prevented his removal to the last. His nephew, immediately after the overthrow of Robespierre, called for the revision of his trial, and succeeded in clearing his character. M. Perrin Auber himself held important offices, and acted a conspicuous part in the revolution.

A painful interest has been created in Paris by a trial exhibiting a lamentable instance of perjury and deception on the part of the accused. It will be remembered that about a year and a half ago, M. Dujarrier, one of the managers of the Paris journal called the Presse, was killed in a duel by a journalist named de Beauvallon. The quarrel which led to the duel took place at cards in a party composed of actresses and young men, many of them of some rank, and closely connected with literature. M. de Beauvallon was tried for the murder of Dujarrier, and acquitted, but it appeared upon the trial that the duel had not taken place according to what are called the rules of honour. Amongst other things, it was proven that, when on the ground, one of the seconds of Dujarrier, M. Bixio, had, having a suspicion that the pistols, which were supplied by M. d'Equeuilles (or, as he calls himself, the Viscount d'Equilles), one of Beauvallon's seconds, had been tried, and were well known to Beauvallon, objected to their being used, until he was assured by d'Equeuilles, on his honour, that they had not been tried by Beauvallon, that they were the property of d'Equeuilles, and that Beauvallon knew nothing about them. On the trial, d'Equeuilles swore positively that his principal knew nothing of the pistols, which, however, it was proved were the property of M. Granier de Cassagnac, also a journalist, and brother-in-law of Beauvallon. A short time after the trial, it was stated by a friend of de Maynard, another journalist, to his friends, that the pistols had been tried in his presence early on the morning of the day on which the duel took place, by Beauvallon, who fired several shots with them, and stated that he knew them well, as he had practised with them during the entire summer, in the country. This report reaching the ears of justice, De Maynard was interrogated, and having repeated his statement, d'Equeuilles was indicted for perjury.

The trial so announced on Thursday (last week) before the Paris Court of Assize, when De Maynard deposed to the above facts, and was confirmed by several witnesses. On Friday Granier de Cassagnac himself appeared as a witness for d'Equeuilles, and swore that the whole of De Maynard's statement was false. This led to the arrest, in court, of Beauvallon, by order of the President, on a charge of perjury. The trial of d'Equeuilles was terminated on Saturday, when d'Equeuilles was convicted of perjury, and was sentenced to ten years imprisonment. Nearly all the parties in this affair are directly or indirectly connected with the public press, and an impression is conveyed, from some of the evidence, that Dujarrier was provoked into a duel, he having no skill as a shot, from a feeling of dislike and jealousy connected with his occupation as manager of a rival paper.

M. d'Equeuilles has since appealed against the sentence.

The evidence of the medical man who attended the parties to the ground, is peculiarly important, for he states that Beauvallon delayed his fire in order to take deliberate aim, and that all the rules of honour in duels were on this occasion violated.

The Judge remarked with great severity upon the language used by M. de Beauvallon, as applied to M. Bertrand, the friend of Dujarrier. Beauvallon hinted, in fact, that he would call M. Bertrand also to account; and the Judge, in commenting upon the conduct of the parties, observed that no man could notice a challenge from Beauvallon, who had used armes fraduleuses

The trial of M. de Beauvallon for perjury will take place in September next.

The preliminary steps have been taken, and the prin[illegible] to be examined. They are the same who appeared against M d'Equeuilley.

SPAIN.

Some of the Ministerial papers of Madrid hint at the probability of a speedy reconciliation between the King and Queen. On this expected reconciliation most of the other journals dwell; and it was very generally reported at Madrid that if such did not take place immediately after the Cabinet Council, which is to assemble on the 13th, M. Pacheco would resign the Presidency of the Council, and M. Salamanca would probably be entrusted with the formation of another Administration.

The Pays says, that the dissolution in the Cabinet is wider than ever, and that it seems irremediable. It adds, that M. Pacheco, M. [illegible], and some other members of the Cabinet, are determined not to remain in office, except upon two conditions; first, that the separation of the King and Queen shall terminate: and, secondly, that the Cortes shall be called together immediately. On the first of these questions, M. Salamanca appears indifferent; and as to the second, he declares openly, that if he should be called on to form a new Ministry, the first thing he will do will be to dissolve the present Cortes.

One of the Progressista papers announces that General O'Donnell has been recalled from the Governor-Generalship of Cuba, and that the Ministry, along with his letter of recall, sent him a passport, allowing him to travel in foreign countries for two years, or, in other words, banished him for that period. If this Ministerial papers admit that General O'Donnell has been recalled, but they say it is merely because his three years of service have expired, and they deny the story of the banishment, which they say is an absurdity.

The neighbourhood of Alcobendas, about four leagues from Madrid, has been devastated by a most furious hail-storm. The inhabitants were of enormous size, several weighing half a pound. The peasants working in the open country only escaped destruction by taking refuge under the lee of walls and enclosures, or beneath their carts ; and, as it was, several got severely bruised about the head and shoulders. Numbers of oxen and sheep were killed, and hundreds of dead rabbits, hares, and birds were picked up the day after, stoned to death. An immense quantity of grapes have been entirely destroyed. The Bayonne diligence was overturned at this same time by the wind.

SWITZERLAND.

A letter from Berne, of the 13th, in the Constitutionnel, says : "It was expected in the sitting of the Diet of this day, that the deputies of the Sonderbund would have demanded a collective protest to be inserted against the decision come to the day before yesterday wil.; respect to the warlike preparations of the League ; but the deputy of Lucerne merely demanded that it should be stated in the minutes, that he did not recognise the decision in question, inasmuch as it seems denied the right of the Diet to pass measures of the kind.

The Presse, in a letter from Berne of the same date, says :—"There is great talk of a note from Lord Palmerston, transmitted to the President of the Diet, by an English Chargé d'Affaires, in an audience demanded for that purpose, which took place yesterday forenoon. The note says, in substance, first, that England will not interfere in the affairs of Switzerland; secondly, Switzerland has the right to constitute and reorganise itself just as she chooses, in so far as regards her internal affairs; thirdly, that England reckons sufficiently on the energy of the present President of the Diet, to believe that he will cause the resolutions adopted by the Diet to be executed, and that, in consequence of this note, the Diet, whose ordinary labours will finish about the end of the month, will have an extraordinary meeting at the end of October, for the purpose of putting its resolutions in execution. The Catholic Cantons should not, before that time, learn the danger of obstinate resistance. Berne has already 30,000 men ready organised and exercised.

The note of Lord Palmerston may be regarded as a protest against the proceedings of Austria and France towards Switzerland.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

THE FATAL DUEL AT CAMDEN-TOWN.—CONVICTION OF LIEUTENANT MUNRO

On Wednesday, Alexander Thomas Munro was tried on an indictment charging him with the wilful murder of David Lynor Fawcett.

He pleaded not guilty.

He was also arraigned upon the Coroner's inquisition with the like offence, and to that he also pleaded not guilty.

The indictment accused the prisoner of having, on the 1st of July, 1843, at the parish of St. Mary, Islington, made an assault upon David Lynor Fawcett, and that he discharged a pistol at him, loaded with powder and a leaden bullet, thereby inflicting a mortal wound, of which he languished until the 3rd of July, and then died.

The Attorney-General, Mr. Waddington, and Mr. [illegible] appeared for the Crown; the prisoner was defended by Mr. Clarkson and Mr. Bodkin.

The Attorney-General stated the case to the Jury. The mere mention of the names of Lieut. Munro and Col. Fawcett would recall to their recollection the circumstances connected with the fatal duel which took place about four years ago. The circumstances which at the time were made the subject of much discussion in the public newspapers. He was sorry to say that the circumstances of this melancholy case were very similar to those of the former. On the 1st of July, 1843, the prisoner at the bar was a gentleman of distinguished valour and of high character, whose conduct in the service of his country had raised him from the ranks to the honourable post of Lieutenant and Adjutant of the Royal Horse Guards Blue. The unfortunate deceased, Colonel Fawcett, had been well known in the service. He had served with great reputation abroad, and had risen to the rank of Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel in the Army, and of Major of the 58th regiment of Foot. These two gentlemen were connected by marriage with two sisters, and [illegible] sequence of some disagreement, the nature of which he (the Attorney-General) should not be able to enter, and upon which he should not speculate between them, on the Thursday or Friday preceding the fatal Saturday, the 1st of July, 1843, the prisoner at the bar, in the gentlemanly manner, had proved to have been seen, at an early hour of the morning of that day, in a field near the Brecknock Arms, in the neighbourhood of London, where the fatal encounter between the [illegible] took place. It appeared that the deceased had been challenged by the prisoner at the bar at his opponent, Colonel Fawcett fell to the ground, and lingered until the following Monday, when he expired from the effects of the wound [illegible] had received. This was a state of things and facts, then shortly stated to [illegible], he (the Attorney General) had learned, and month, his life for a length of time having been despaired of. His wife, when questioned, avowed that she it was who had committed the outrage, and she said she was "only sorry that she had not done more for him." The prisoner, in her defence, spoke of the very bad conduct of which her husband had been guilty, and which had driven her to distraction. This treatment was borne on by evidence. The learned Chief Baron told the Jury that the prosecutor's treatment of his wife was calculated to diminish the strong feeling that might otherwise have been entertained towards her; but, however these might call for their sympathy, one could not conceive anything that would justify the strange unheard of mode of dealing out revenge—tying a man down in bed, then throwing upon him boiling water. There was nothing could palliate so strange and unexampled a crime. The Jury immediately returned a verdict of "Guilty," under circumstances of great provocation.—The prisoner was sentenced to ten years' transportation.

COUNTRY NEWS.

THE NORTH WARWICKSHIRE ELECTION.

After the official declaration of the poll on Monday, at Colshill,

Mr. Newdegate addressed the electors. He said he felt that in having chosen him as their representative, they had singled out an humble individual for the impersonation of a great and deep feeling. They had chosen him as the object by which they could testify their adherence to those great principles by which this country had been governed through a series of events sometimes most disastrous—sometimes marked by every change of circumstances and seasons—sometimes marked by changes in administrations—sometimes changes in the constitution of the country—still these great principles had been adhered to, and by them England had risen to her present proud distinction amongst the nations of the earth. He rejoiced most heartily in the result of the present contest, because he found himself associated with the gentleman, Mr. Spooner, who was then beside him. (Loud cheers.) He rejoiced that they had placed him beside that hon. gentleman as their representative in Parliament, because it had proved that the electors of North Warwickshire were determined to hold out the hand of fellowship to Birmingham. (Loud cheers.) The landed aristocracy, the farmers, and the manufacturers of the northern division had proved that they would seek an alliance with the wealth and the intelligence of Birmingham, and Birmingham had proved that at least they would reciprocate that kind feeling—they had proved that they looked to them for co-operation (hear, hear); that they were identified in feeling and in interest with them, and that their happiness was inseparable; that there was a great bond of union which must be kept up in order to the security and defence of that common interest. (Cheers.) They had felt that that bond of union was to be found in that true Conservative principle, in that true English feeling of neighbourhood, which had distinguished this country for centuries. He did rejoice that the contest and its result had happened at this particular crisis, when they had seen political events which every man must lament, when they looked forth to the meeting of a Parliament the nature of which it was extremely difficult to form an opinion of, and when they could not but feel that if the institutions of the country were to be held sacred and upheld, that result did not depend upon any party, but upon the sound good sense of the people. (Cheers.) He hailed the result of that election, because it proved that the feelings of the different classes were not antagonistic—he hailed it because it had been endeavoured by some to persuade one class that their interests were not identified with the other. It proved that let leaders err as they might, representatives change as they had done, let parties be weak, the heart of England was still sound (cheers), and that the people of England were fit to govern themselves, and that they would do it. (Renewed cheers.) He should, in conclusion, observe that their decision would go forth to the country as evidence that men connected with various interests—men amongst whom it had been sought to create division, had met and decided upon the great principle, that they would see the industry of the country was defended, and that they would expect that defence from the Government of the country; that they would maintain the Church with tolerance to every other creed, and that nothing would separate them from that Constitution which they believed to be the pride of this country, and the preservation of the liberty of every other.

The hon. gentleman retired amidst renewed cheering, and gave way for

Richard Spooner, Esq., who was also greeted with the most rapturous applause. The hon. gentleman then addressed the electors, and after thanking them for the manner in which they had conducted the election in his regard, proceeded to notice the leading political points upon which he had solicited their suffrages; and argued upon what he termed the evils of the present system of Free Trade, and the necessity of such an alteration as would enable them to compete with foreigners.

THE TAMWORTH BIBLE SOCIETY.

Sir Robert Peel presided on Wednesday at the annual meeting of the Tamworth Bible Society. After a general eulogium upon such societies, the right hon. Baronet said, "It is impossible to look at the condition of society in this country without being convinced that great and important changes have taken place in many districts. By the spread of manufactures many villages of little importance, and scarcely known by name, have become populous towns; districts once comprising thousands and tens of thousands of population, and it must be quite obvious that the means of pastoral superintendence in these districts are exceedingly limited in proportion to the population, and I know no mode in which we can so effectually aid the exertions of those who are labouring night and day in the performance of their spiritual duties than by giving them that assistance which the Bible Society proposes to give, by enabling them to circulate amongst that population the Divine Scriptures. Independently of that there is another consideration which calls for increased exertions and assistance. I have alluded to one of the great works in progress in this neighbourhood. I mean the railway to connect Rugby and Stafford, and throughout the whole of this land similar works are in progress. Now one of the effects of such undertakings is to diminish very much the force and efficacy of pastoral superintendence over a large portion of the population. The effect is to bring together a great mass of the population, who will not be under that pastoral superintendence to which they have been accustomed. To have congregated together thousands who are now deprived of that restraint naturally attaching to a fixed residence, who may, perhaps, have ceased to feel the responsibility of that character, which they would retain in a fixed spot: that portion of the population in the enjoyment of many of those comforts others are deprived of, because enabled to demand ample remuneration for their labour, are deficient of pastoral superintendence. Depend upon it, you cannot remedy the defect more effectually than by enabling the ministers of religion, who are daily devoting their exertions to the spiritual care of their fellow-creatures, to supply that portion of the population at the cheapest rate, if necessary, with copies of the Word of God. (Hear, hear.) There is another matter of still greater importance, requiring great exertion and consideration. There is a great movement of the public mind relative to public education; all parties, of whatever creed or religious denomination, are beginning to be convinced that there has been upon the part of all of us a great deficiency in that respect—we have permitted our religious differences to operate against education, and it has now become necessary that that great object of national education shall be obtained by a sacrifice on the part of all of us of some of those scruples which have hitherto prevented it. Be the character of that education what it may—whether complete religious instruction constitutes a part of it, whether, to accommodate some, the religious instruction may not be so extensive, whether the instruction be complete or deficient—believe me it is absolutely necessary to provide for the distribution of the Word of God. But the object of the Bible Society is to circulate the word of God in the most remote regions; and you are aware that in consequence of recent relations with the Chinese Government, we have received increased facilities for the distribution of the Word of God in that country. In New Zealand, and other parts of the world, we are laying the foundation of new and large societies; and the future character and moral tendency of those societies, which are springing up into great kingdoms, may be, and no doubt will be, determined by the basis of moral and religious instruction upon which we now establish them. I cannot conclude these observations without expressing my most cordial satisfaction that this meeting is not composed exclusively of any one denomination of Christians. I do most cordially rejoice that all those connected in this bond of unity and adherence, in the comprehensive sense, to the Protestant faith—I rejoice, I say, that we are met here, forgetting mere differences, and aiding in this common object. I avow that I am most decidedly in favour of the United Established Church; I am in favour of that form of Christianity established in this country; I give a decided preference to its forms, to its doctrines, and its episcopal order; and I trust no sacrifice of any principles by cordially uniting with others who differ with me upon these points, but concur with me in that high principle that the Bible contains the word of God."

ALLEGED BRIBERY IN GLOUCESTERSHIRE.—A public dinner was given on Monday last at Dursley, West Gloucester, to celebrate the return of the Hon. Grantley Berkeley, who made a speech on the occasion, in which he entered into lengthened details of the different measures taken by his adversaries to oppose his return. It was no use to assert (said the honourable gentleman) that the Duke of Beaufort did not direct his tenants to vote against me, for I saw the order. (Hear, hear, and Shame.) Lord Ducie did the same. An elector wrote to me and said, "When you write to me again disguise your hand, for the postmaster here in Grenville Berkeley is informed, and will report your correspondence ith me to Lord Ducie." (Shame.) On hearing this, I wrote to Lord Ducie, and received a reply from Lady Ducie, stating that her lord was ill, and declined listening to electioneering matters. I then wrote to Lady Ducie, telling her that if the Earl was ill he could say, sy or nay, would he leave his tenants free to vote for Grantley Berkeley if they pleased. The only answer I got to this straightforward question was an insolent letter from Mr. Morton, the Earl's steward. The Lord-Lieutenant—you all know what he has done. He brought down my brother Augustus, who had not been at his castle for fourteen years, to vote against me. He attempted to induce my brother Henry to take the same course, but he remained neutral, and Craven plumped against me, his brother. (Shame.) You all know that the most disgusting scenes of debauchery, corruption, and bribery ever witnessed in this country took place at Berkeley. He never will have purity of election so long as the golden sceptre of the Peer can make pocket members subservient to the point of its own indication. The time, however, is coming when Lords will be compelled to lay aside the pressure of the coronet, and act for the good of the people. (Loud cheers.) Gloucestershire and Monmouthshire have taught the three Lords a lesson. Gentlemen (concluded the honourable gentleman) allow me to thank you again for our proud position. Gratitude will cause me to take a more prominent part in all that concerns your interest and the country at large than I have hitherto done. Trust me, I will do everything that is free in principle and correct in purpose. Give me a fair trial, and you will not find me wanting. (Great cheering.)

EPITOME OF NEWS.—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The funds of King's College Hospital have just received an addition of £1000, by a legacy under the will of the late Miss Colyer, of Farningham, Kent

A Vienna letter of the 6th announces that Mr. David Montefiore, son of Sir Moses, died, a few days before, at the waters of Ischl, in the Tyrol, aged 33. Baron Solomon de Rothschild, who is related to the family of Montefiore, has had the body embalmed to be sent to London.

A few days ago Mr. Cobden was received at the railway terminus at Stettin by a number of his admirers. The same evening a banquet was given to him in the Hotel de Prusse. In a short speech Mr. Cobden said that the Corn-Laws, the corner-stone of the edifice of Protection, having been knocked away, the whole building would soon fall, and that the Navigation Act would soon share the same fate. This called forth loud applause.

Advices from Dresden, of the 3rd, announce that bread riots of a serious nature had occurred at Chemnitz. The bakers' shops had been pillaged, and it was found necessary to send for a reinforcement of troops. Order was re-established on the 1st of last Session.

The house in which Shakspeare, the great poet of England, was born, is now in the market. It is rather a curious coincidence that the house in which Burns, the great poet of Scotland, lived for many years, and in which he died, is in the market at the same time.

Mr. Twisleton, who has been for some time the Assistant-Commissioner for administering the Poor-Law in Ireland, is appointed to the head of the Irish Board, in conjunction with the Secretary for Ireland, in pursuance of the Amended Act of last Session.

The last accounts from Albania, in the German papers, are of an alarming nature. The insurrection had gained Upper and Lower Albania, and the Scientific Congress of France will open its fifteenth Session at Tours on the 1st September

The advices from New Zealand to the 20th of March are interesting. The land question between the natives and the Governor had been adjusted. The amount of compensation to be received by the natives is £5000; namely, £2900 for the disputed lands at Parrau, and £3600 for the Wairau. The money was to be paid down in five yearly instalments. By this concession, the Government obtain all the land from Wairau to the farms comprised in the New Zealand Company's limits.

The Preston Pilot mentions an instance of one of the electors having been bribed with a "Bank of Elegance" note!

A proposal has been made in Glasgow for the institution of a fund for the purchase of an annuity to Mr. Sheridan Knowles. No definitive method of raising it has yet been resolved on; but an amateur theatrical performance is one of the schemes talked of. Mr. Knowles gave lessons in elocution in Glasgow many years ago, and has numerous pupils at the bar, in the pulpit, and in other walks of professional life in Scotland.

It is said that Mr. Vernon, the celebrated collector and patron of English art, has given the better and larger portion of his pictures to the National Gallery

Among the latest arrivals of vessels from foreign ports is one named the Jenny Lind, from Miramichi, with a cargo of wood goods.

During the last year there were issued in the United Kingdom 3,616,597 money orders, the amount of which came to £7,471,056 16s. 3d. The number paid in the same time was 3,609,803, amount £7,044,297 3s. 6d. Total issues and paid, 7,054,983, amount, £14,125,452 19s. 9d. Of the number of seven millions issued and paid within the year, about one million and a half are issued and paid at the office in London alone.

Letters from Odessa, of the 5th inst., are given by the Augsburg Gazette, which say that after M. Coletti had intimated that the £23,000 half-year's interest was ready to be paid Sir Edmund Lyons, the further sum of £3000, due in 1844, was demanded, and that our Minister was prepared to insist upon the payment.

Accounts from all parts of the Continent denote a fall in the price of grain. Letters from Stettin, of the 2nd of August, speak of a progressive fall in the prices there. In Saxony the harvest is not quite finished, but of a superior quality; the potato crop also promised well, though the disease has manifested itself in a few districts. In Silesia this year's harvest is at least double that of last year, and should the potato crop fail, no fears are entertained of a scarcity.

Byron's statue, by Thorwaldsen, about which so much dispute took place, ending in its rejection from Westminster Abbey and Trinity College, Cambridge, has been placed in the library there, and been an interesting object to the numerous visitors whom the election has called to the spot.

Divine service by the Jews was celebrated for the first time on a Sunday, on the 8th inst., at Koningen-straat, Amsterdam, when about 600 Jews in the Synagogue, and more than 200 Christians, among whom were several eminent functionaries of the town, including the Director of Police, who strongly opposed the intention of the Jews to transfer the celebration of the Sabbath from Saturdays to Sundays.

A man who has been employed as a card-room hand at Messrs. Knott's mill, Ashton, near Manchester, had the pleasing intelligence brought to him on Tuesday that an estate in Wales, value £5000, had been left him by a relative, and that he was wanted to take possession. He has been in extreme poverty for a long time, not being able to purchase a pair of shoes during the last seven years.

Mr. Cunard has entered into a contract with the British Government to run a line of steamers from Halifax to Bermuda, and to place a steamer on the route between Halifax and St. John's, Newfoundland. The contract has no connexion direct or indirect with the British North American Royal Mail Company.

The extension of the Eastern Counties Railway to Huntingdon and St. Ives was on Tuesday opened for public traffic. There will in future be four trains each way daily.

The opening of the section of the Swiss Northern Railway between Baden and Zurich took place on the 7th inst

One day last week, the Essex locomotive engine took from Bury St. Edmund's, or Stowmarket, to Ipswich, the amazing number of one hundred and forty-nine loaded goods waggons at one time; and when the engine reached the Ipswich station, the other extremity of the line of waggons was close to the bridge on the London-road, a distance of nearly a mile!

Upwards of 300 of the out-pensioners of Chelsea Hospital, together with their wives and families, are about to embark from Belfast for Auckland, in New Zealand.

A Nonconformist League is proposed to be started at Manchester, and a preliminary meeting was held at the Town-hall on Tuesday evening, at which resolutions were passed, agreeing to form a board of deputies, representing the entire body.

A letter from Rome states that the railroad question has been definitively settled by the Pontifical Government. The privilege for the road from Rome to Cabrano, by Albano, has been granted to a company which has at its head Prince Altieri and M. Rosetti, and that from Bologna to Ancona is to be given to a company formed at the latter place.

Mr. Adderley, of Doctors'-commons and Upper Clapton, who died on the 2nd of August, has left a legacy to Sir Peter Laurie of £800, as a mark of esteem and respect for, what he considers, his important public services as a Magistrate.

Mr. Wells, of Redleaf, Kent, who died a few days ago, has bequeathed to the country his famous picture of "The Glorification," by Guido, which he purchased from the late Sir Thomas Lawrence for 1900 guineas.

The passengers between England and Boulogne, during the week ending the 15th inst., were 2507, against 3683 in the corresponding week of last year; the passengers between England and Dover were 543, against 444.

Prince Napoleon Bonaparte, son of the ex-King of Westphalia, arrived last week at Rotterdam.

According to accounts from Tiflis, to the middle of July, the Russians were making great preparations to possess themselves of the village of Gergebi. The Commander-in-Chief was determined to bombard the village, and to surround it in such a manner that not a man of the garrison should escape. A corps of 15,000 men, with 30 pieces of artillery, are to be employed against it.

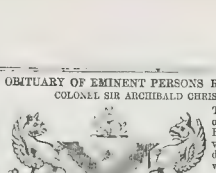
A Vienna letter of the 8th states that the Emperor and Empress of Austria will leave that capital at the end of this month, and take an excursion in Styria and the Tyrol, visiting the works on the railroads, which are being formed as the expense of the State. Their Majesties will be attended by Prince Metternich, and their absence will be for about a month.

The Severn steamer, with the West India Mail, arrived on Thursday at Southampton, bringing the usual mails and 43 passengers. The want of rain was still much felt in all the islands. Freights were still very high. From Madeira and the Azores all had quietly acknowledged the authority of the Queen of Portugal.

The Allgemeine Zeitung mentions from Hanover, August 7th, a rumour that the presence of the Duke of Cambridge there is not merely meant as a family visit, but has for its object a far more important question, the final alteration and settlement of the succession to the throne.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

COLONEL SIR ARCHIBALD CHRISTIE, KT., K.C.H.



THE gallant officer, Colonel of the 1st Royal Veteran Battalion, and Deputy-Governor of Stirling Castle, died on the 10th inst. He was born in 1774, the eldest son of the late James Christie, Esq., of Riddry, county Lanark, by Lucy, his wife, daughter of John Beardsley, Esq., of Glascot, county Warwick. At the age of nineteen he entered the army, by purchase, as Ensign in the Royal Highlanders, and served in Flanders and Holland, where he was wounded. In 1811 he received the appointment of Commandant-General of Army Hospitals; from 1821 to 1831 acted as Commandant of Chatham; and in the latter year was made Deputy-Governor of Stirling Castle.

The family from which the deceased gentleman descended—the Christies of Stenton, county Haddington—was one of considerable respectability in East Lothian. Sir Archibald's immediate progenitor, James Christie, Esq., of Stenton, married Jane, daughter of James Foulis, Esq., of Ratho, and was grandfather of Archibald Christie, Esq., of Ratho, who wedded Anne, daughter of Sir Alexander Gordon, Bart., of Lesmore, and had a son, the late James Christie, Esq., of Riddry. Sir Archibald himself married Jane, only child of George Dwyer, Esq., third son of John Dwyer, Esq., of Singland, county Limerick; and has left a son, Frederick Gordon, and two daughters.

VICE-ADMIRAL LITTLEHALES.

BENDAL ROBERT LITTLEHALES, Vice-Admiral, R.N., died a few days since at Compton Bishop, County Somerset, at the advanced age of eighty-two. His naval career commenced so far back as 1778, when, as Midshipman on board the Vigilant, he fought in the engagement off Brest, between Admiral Keppel and the French Admiral D'Orvilliers. In the following year he was removed to the Royal Oak, and participated in the action off Grenada. In 1790, he obtained his commission, as Lieutenant; and in 1794 assisted in the Rose at the storming of Fort Louis, Martinique. He subsequently gained great distinction in the West Indies, particularly by his gallant action, in the Beaulieu, with a French store-ship of eighteen guns, which he boarded immediately under the batteries of Guadaloupe. Shortly after, he was given the command of the Amazon; and in 1797 fought a brilliant engagement with the Droits de l'homme, a ship of eighty guns. In 1800 he was promoted to the rank of Captain; and in 1803 took part with his ship, the Centaur, in the capture of St. Lucia. In 1830 he became a flag officer, and in 1840 was promoted to rank of Vice-Admiral.

Admiral Littlehales was next brother of the late Sir Edward Littlehales Baker, Bart., and second son of Baker John Littlehales, Esq., of Moulsey, in the County of Surrey, by Maria, his wife, daughter and sole heir of Bendal Martin, Esq. He was married to Mary Anne, daughter of Thomas Cleather, Esq., of Plymouth.

LADY ELEANOR FORTESCUE.

HER Ladyship, whose death occurred within the last week, was fifth daughter of Hugh first Earl Fortescue, by Hester, his wife, third daughter of the late Right Hon. George Grenville. Lady Eleanor was the only daughter who remained unmarried, and continued till her decease to reside with her venerable parent, the Countess Dowager. Her elder brother is the present Earl Fortescue; and, of her sisters, the eldest is the Dowager Lady King; the second, the wife of the Hon. Newton Fellowes; the third is married to George Wilbraham, Esq., late M.P. for Cheshire; the fourth, wife of Sir James Hamlyn Williams, Bart.; and the youngest, of Lord Courtenay.

At the period of her decease, Lady Eleanor was in her fiftieth year.

THE RIGHT REV. DR. GRIFFITHS, V.A.L.D.

THIS Right Rev. Prelate, Titular Bishop of Olena, and Vicar Apostolic of the London District, died at his residence in Golden-square, on the 12th instant, aged fifty-six.

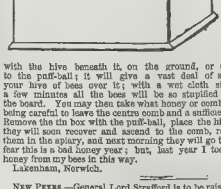
Dr. Griffiths was the first Catholic Bishop of the London District appointed since the passing of the Emancipation Act; and, though his administration lasted during a period of calm and tranquillity, it was marked by distinguished zeal, energy, and piety. During the period many new Catholic houses of worship have been built, and several new Catholic benevolent institutions established. Previously to his selection as Vicar Apostolic of the London District, in 1836, he acted for three years as coadjutor to the late Bishop Bramston. At an earlier period he had filled, for some time, the President's chair at St. Edmund's College.

Dr. Griffiths was, we believe, an Irishman; and, some years ago, held high office in the famous College of Maynooth.

KEEPING BEES.

(From a Correspondent.)

SEEING, in your Journal, mention of many successful attempts or experiments that have recently been made in France in the etherisation of bees to obtain their honey, I am induced to send you the following:—I have been a bee-keeper for more than twenty years, and have never destroyed any bees, but yet have frequently obtained large quantities of honey. Some I obtain from my boxes, which are made on the double or treble strata principle; so that, I can take off the top cape or box, and obtain the honey, without hurting even a single bee. In July, or about this season of the year, if the bees have filled my top boxes or capes with virgin honey, on a fine day I take off the top and carry it to a few yards' distance from the hive or apiary; I then turn it up in the sun, and in a short time the bees which are in it will leave one by one, and return to the hive; and, in an hour or two, I find in my box from fifteen to twenty pounds of the purest honey that can be imagined. My hives are filled with a large swarm of bees, with part of an old hive: when all is ready, set this tin box,



A A is a tin box, about two inches deep; B about four inches diameter; B B is a conical lid or cover which fits the box, and is perforated with small holes; and, in the bottom of the box, are, also, a few small perforations to admit of air to pass through the box when in use. To use this box for fumigating the bees put into it a small piece of the fungus Lycoperdon Bovista, or puff-ball, which, on a red hot coal or piece of wood, will give a vast deal of smoke. Immediately, place your hive of bees over it; with a wet cloth stop in all the fume, and in a few minutes all the bees will be so stupified that they all fall down on the board. You may then take what honey or comb you please from the stock, being careful to leave the centre comb and a sufficient quantity for their support. Remove the tin box with the puff-ball, place the hive again over the bees, and they will soon recover and ascend to the comb, remaining in the hive; place them in the apiary, and next morning they will go to work with fresh energy. I for three years have done so; but, last year I took upwards of three stone of honey from my bees in this way.

Lakenham, Norwich. R. S.

NEW PEERS.—General Lord Strafford is to be raised to the Earldom, and Lords Acheson and Cremorne and Sir R. Bulkeley Philipps, Bart., will be created Peers of the realm. Lieutenant-General Sir John Macdonald, Lord Fitzroy Somerset, and Sir Colin Halkett are soon to receive the Grand Cross of the Bath. The revival of the Earldom of Strafford, by the elevation of General Lord Strafford to that title, is a revival which takes place for the third time. The first occurred in the reign of Charles II., who restored the title to the son of the great Earl of Strafford, sacrificed by Charles I. to the popular hatred. The second revival of the title was made by Queen Anne, who conferred it on a male relative of the same family; and the third takes place under Queen Victoria, by whom it is now conferred on the brother of the late member for Middlesex.

SKETCHES IN MEXICO.

MEXICAN GUERILLAS.

The intelligence received by the Britannia, and given in our late edition of last week, states that a good deal of skirmishing had taken place between the Americans and Mexicans in the districts adjoining the coast. De Russy appears to have been dispatched up the river, to the aid of some liberated American prisoners; he landed sixty miles above Tampico, and made his way to the vicinity of Huejutla, where he was surrounded by 1200 or 1400 Mexicans, through whom,

TRAVELLING IN MEXICO.—BRIDGE AT TEMALAUCAN.

MEXICAN PRIESTS.

THE WESTMINSTER HALL EXHIBITION.

"EDWARD'S GENEROSITY TO THE PEOPLE OF CALAIS DURING THE SIEGE OF 1346."—(PRIZE, £300.)—PAINTED BY PAUL FALCONER POOLE.

with 120 men, he cut his way, and returned to the river to wait for reinforcements.

Vera Cruz was in a state of great excitement. Gen. Pearce was stated to have reached Puente Nacional with 2500 men and 150 waggons on his march towards Puebla; was in fact encamped only ten miles from the city, and his scouts reported a large force of Mexicans at Puente Nacional, advancing towards him. Vera Cruz was placed in a state of defence, the shipping was removed from between the castle and the town, and Gen. Pearce came in, and, having obtained a reinforcement of 700 men, returned to his camp. De Russy had made good his retreat to the town, with a loss of 20 killed, 10 wounded, and two missing, together with some mules and pack-horses

The communication between Vera Cruz and the interior was very precarious. General Scott's express from Puebla had been attacked, and killed, after a desperate resistance; an express of the Peacock had been robbed of his letters, and left [illegible]

General Scott was at Puebla on the 3rd of July: and had received intelligence, on the 2nd, that the Mexicans had appointed Commissioners to meet Mr. Trist on the 8th, at St. Martin Tesmalaucan, to learn from him the terms he was authorised to offer to the President. The peace party was understood to be gaining the ascendancy among the Mexicans. Santa Anna was represented by some as inclining to peace: by others it was thought that he merely affected such a leaning to gain time. The progress of events in Mexico, however, precludes the supposition of a united and protracted resistance to the Americans.

General Taylor on the 29th of June, was still at Walnut Springs, waiting for reinforcements. He had collected 120,000 natives, 800 waggons, and 2000 mules, but still the men promised by his Government were not forthcoming. General Wool had only 2000 at Buena Vista. The Mexican troops at San Luis were variously reported at from 4000 to 14,000.

Throughout the war the Priests had taken a very active part. The first of our Illustrations shows an Ecclesiastical Dignitary riding to his Convent; a party of Monks, &c.

The second Scene is at the Bridge at Tesmalaucan, where the mode of travelling is illustrated.

The third Tableau shows the Guerilla mode of warfare, now common in the Mexican States

For these characteristic Scenes we are indebted to Mr. James Mortier, the distinguished traveller, who has obligingly placed his Sketch-book at our Art [illegible] disposal.

Election Amenities in Ireland.—At the Dublin University election, Mr. Butt, the well-known political barrister, made a poignant retort upon Mr. Shaw. On the day of nomination, after Mr. Butt had addressed the electors, Mr Shaw said: "Speaking, not as an Oxford graduate, but as an Irish gentleman, I will say that Mr Butt's speech proves nothing but the vulgarity of his own nature, which not even an education at this university could refine." Mr. Butt had no opportunity of replying till some time after, when he took care to tell the Recorder "that it was a great pity when he had secured a retiring pension of three thousand per annum on the consolidated fund, that he had not also managed to put his tongue upon the civil list."

A Shark in the Mediterranean.—An accident, extraordinary for the Mediterranean, recently occurred at Corfu. A short time ago her Majesty's steam packet Ardent had a part of her crew bathing alongside—other persons of the place were bathing among them—when the dorsal fin of a large fish (no doubt a shark) appeared above the water. The shark struck a lad of the Ardent on the breast; it immediately afterwards seized a man (not belonging to the Ardent) by the back of the neck, and bore him down. The Ardent instantly lowered a boat, but the sufferer did not rise again. The lad who had been struck was taken on board his ship, and soon recovered.

Jones, the Palace Intruder.—The "boy Jones," whose name became so ancillar to the public ear by his intrusive pranks at [illegible] Ingham House, and frequently baffled the utmost [illegible] palace guard, is now trumpeter in the 8th Hussars in Limerick [illegible] fectly cured of his wayward disposition, and one of the best [illegible] men in the regiment. To the men and officers of the 8th he continues to be known by no other appellation than that of "boy Jones," which acquire him such celebrity three or four years ago in London and Windsor.

The Force of Imagination.—Captain Corbin, the captain of a Ramsgate steamer, recently gave the following narrative indicative of the force of imagination. The Captain went his rounds among the passengers to receive their fares. Upon taking the amount demanded from two ladies, one of them discovered in consequence that she was on her way to Ramsgate, and not, as she thought, to Margate. Captain Corbin, seeing her sudden alarm, assured her that the difference was comparatively nothing, as the weather was fine, and the sea as smooth as glass. She, however, expressed the utmost dread of the North Foreland. Captain Corbin heard but little further on the subject, naturally imagining that in a little time she would laugh at her ill-grounded fears. Upon being told by her companion that she was off the North Foreland, the lady in question fell back into a fainting fit, from which she never recovered. She was removed from out of the steamer (the Little Western) upon its arrival at Ramsgate, and placed in a fly by order of the captain, who himself obtained apartments for the insensible lady and her distracted sister. Every care and attention was paid her, but she died the same evening—an extraordinary instance of the folly of allowing the mind to be overcome by horrors of its own creating.

THE WESTMINSTER HALL EXHIBITION.

The Hall continues to be crowded on the public or free days; and the receipts on Saturdays are very considerable.

We have this week engraved Mr. Poole's noble Picture—"Edward's Generosity to the People of Calais during the Siege of 1346." The figures in the centre of the Picture represent Edward and the Black Prince distributing alms. The incident is told in the following epigraph:—"Shortly after the battle of Cressy, Edward III. sent to England for a supply of provisions, and on the 3rd of September encamped before Calais to besiege it. He resolved to starve it into a surrender. The Governor, Jean de Vienne, perceiving his project, sent 1700 of the poor persons out of the town; and Edward, with a high-souled compassion, let them go, giving them a hearty dinner as they passed, and two sterlings to each individual—a rare instance of generous warfare."—

The town has render'd; and the valiant King,
With the boy-conqueror of Cressy's plain,
Go forth on Mercy's mission; succours bring
To the wan habitants, who long had lain
Groaning beneath stark Famine's gnawing chain!
But now, as a parched field when the sweet shower
Descends, they smile revivified again
The sap of life, its blessings and its power.
Oh! truly, "Mercy is the brightest gem
That ever shone upon a Monarch's crown;"
But when it beams upon War's diadem,
Then, then indeed, it calls God's blessing down.
And well the city of brave St. Pierre
May homage to the blessed maxim bear.—L.

A Fortunate County.—In consequence of there being no prisoners, nor business of any kind to transact, at the last Assizes for the county of Radnor, the High Sheriff, Henry Miles, Esq., had to present the Judge, Mr. Justice Cresswell, with a pair of white kid gloves, embroidered in gold. A similar event has not taken place for a considerable number of years in that county. His Lordship remarked that it was the first time it had occurred to him since he had been on the bench.

BIRTHPLACE OF MR. COBDEN, M.P.

One of the appeals of Mr. Cobden to the agriculturists of England during the Corn-Law agitation, was that he, by birth, was one of themselves; that he was the son of a farmer; and there is no doubt it had considerable effect. Mr. Cobden was born on a farm called Dunford, in the immediate vicinity of Midhurst, in Sussex. He did not follow his father's profession; but his career is too well known to require recapitulation here. The property had passed out of his family, but it is understood that it has just been repurchased by him, or for him, and that he is again the owner of his patrimonial estate.

BIRTHPLACE OF MR. COBDEN, M.P., NEAR MIDHURST, SUSSEX.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, August 22.—Twelfth Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 23.—The Sun rises at 4h. 59m.; is due East at 9h. 41m.; and sets at 7h. 59m.
TUESDAY, 24.—St. Bartholomew. Mercury rises at 3h. 23m., a.m.
WEDNESDAY, 25. The length of the Day is 13h. 59m.; and that of the Night is 10h. 1m.
THURSDAY, 26.—Prince Albert born, 1819. Full Moon at 9h. 3m. p.m. in the morning.
FRIDAY, 27.—Mars rises at 9h. 5m. p.m.; and Souths at 4h. 12m. after midnight.
SATURDAY, 28.—St. Augustin. Saturn rises at 7h. 13m. p.m.; and Souths at 37m. after midnight.
Saturn is due South, about midnight; Mars, at the same time, is situated East of the meridian; and Jupiter is rising near the North-East. The planet Mercury is favourably situated for observing him during the hour preceding the time of Sun-rise.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 28.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. A. 10 5	M. A. 10 40	M. A. 11 22	M. A. 11 59	M. A. 0 25	M. A. 0 50	M. A. 1 20
M. A. 11 19	M. A. 11 54	M. A. 0 36	M. A. 1 5	M. A. 1 40	M. A. 2 21	M. A. 3 10
M. A. 11 39	M. A. 0 14	M. A. 0 50	M. A. 1 29	M. A. 2 20	M. A. 3 20	M. A. 4 25

* * During the morning of Tuesday there will be no high tide.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"C. P."—Gordon-square.—The architect of the Church building at Alexandria (engraved in No. 230 of our Journal) is Mr. J. W. Wild, 9, Argyll-place, Regent-street, of whom the address of the Committee for receiving subscriptions may be learned.

"C. W. L."—Louth.—Sir Richard Bonnycastle's last work on Canada is an excellent authority for emigrants.

"An Old Indian" may find the Canadian receipt for Sherry Cobbler in "The Illustrated London Almanack" for 1847.

"V. R. I." Semper Eadem.—The price of our Journal, from Jan. 1, 1846, to April 27, 1849, is One Shilling per Number.

"D. J. L." Dalston.—We have not room.

"F. C. L."—Use Delcroix's Powder Subtile, or any other Depilatory. The Engraving referred to is a Test of London from the Thames, by French Artists.

"A Subscriber and a Blue."—We cannot undertake to engrave rejected Candidates.

"Nora Anne" had better consult a Physician.

"A Constant Reader and Admirer's" Letter has been forwarded to Windsor for reply

"Dubiosus," in appreciating "the depth of poetic feeling, and keen appreciation of the mandate of genius," which characterise the the critiques referred to, in our Journal, we are persuaded bespeak the opinion of our readers; at least, as far as we can judge by the many approvals we have received of them.

"A Constant Reader" will find the rule for ascertaining the Harvest Moon, in our Replies, on August 8.

"Pylia."—The authors of that successful piece of domestic satire, "The Greatest Plague of Life," are the Brothers H. and A. Mayhew.

"A Subscriber."—See "Outlines of Astronomy." (Parker, West Strand.)

"J. O." Malden.—The Saratoga Waters are purgative and stimulant, and are chiefly useful in dyspepsia, chronic rheumatism, and diseases of the skin.

"A. Z." Newry, will not be liable for the payment of the Newspaper, if he have strictly ordered the publisher or agent to discontinue sending it, and he (the subscriber) has refused to receive it.

"J. G." Bloo, is thanked; but we have not room.

"A Constant Subscriber, Islington," is thanked for his clever sketch, but the locality has no immediate interest; at least, not sufficient to warrant our engraving the subject.

"Veritas."—Britzschа is the correct name of the German carriage first brought to England by the Earl of Clanwilliam. See "Adams, on Pleasure Carriages."

"D. P." City road.—The Macedonian, after all, a American built; in Portsmouth Dockyard, Virginia, not Bank, as the Admiral pretended, "W. H. S.," Southampton, was the last of the English Macedonian cut up.

"J. R. A." Chelsea.—Declined.

"A Correspondent," Brighton.—"Bonnycastle's Mensuration" will, probably, suit our Correspondent.

"Castacus"—Apply at the Admiralty.

"A Native of Karnamna" is thanked; but the verses will not suit our Journal.

"W. R. N. C." Newcastle. We have not room.

"L. L. L." Bungay.—We do not undertake to decide wagers

"L. T." Gloucester.—We recommend "The Publisher's Circular" to Book Societies and book buyers generally. It is published on the 1st and 15th of each month, and it contains a list of all new works published in Great Britain, and every work of interest published abroad.

"Alpha," Glasgow, is thanked for his offer, but our Artist is sketching on the spot.

"L. A. C." "Cook's Shipping and Craft" is a capital work; but we have in One Guinea and a Half.

"S. C." The Salmarsh Collection of Pictures was collected by Edmund Higginson, Esq., and named after his seat, Salmarsh Castle. The Pictures consisted principally of M. Bourrasht's well-known collection, purchased some time since by Mr. Aristaria, and by him sold to Mr Higginson.

"R. T." Dublin.—Rosalba Carriera's Works are very numerous, and of little value; at Dresden, alone, there are no less than 187 pictures and crayon drawings by her. Sold well, at "a good sale," the "Four Seasons," in crayon, by this artist, would, probably, bring £15 or £20.

"A Constant Subscriber," Lasmade.—Probably our Correspondent has omitted the M; if so, the letters would indicate 1606, the time at which lived Giles Sadeler, the engraver of the Prints in question The contractions of dates, such as the above, are generally thus:—

Cl.——1000	or sometimes	Cl.Cl.Cl.——1600
I.——500		M.Cl.C.——1600

"A Constant Reader."—We have no ready means of obtaining the information required as to the regimental colours.

"A Subscriber," Bedale.—The coupont amount is about £400,000 per annum.

"James." Truro.—We cannot interfere in the matter.

"W. H. P.," Aberdeen.—Consult "Palgrave's History of England" (Anglo-Saxon period).

"G. G."—The Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge University is Henry Philpott, B.D., Canterbury Hall Elected in 1846.

"N. C." The first steam-packet that crossed the Atlantic was the Sirius, of London, in 1838, yet, almost simultaneously, the same passage was accomplished by the Great Western, of Bristol.

"S. W. B.," Kingland. Were we to comply with our Correspondent's request, the same would be expected by numerous other "Lodges."

"Mario," Cork.—The incognito of the author of the "New Timon" is still maintained.

"Francesca."—The non-liability is unquestionable.

"Victor," Douglas, is thanked.

"A Student of History."—Mosheim takes higher rank than Milner. Mosheim's "History" extends from the birth of Christ to the beginning of the 18*th century; and Milner's from the rise of Christianity to the Reformation.*

"A Constant Subscriber." We do not think there would be any illegality in the arrangement about the situation.

"A."—A Maid of Honour bears the title of "Honourable" during her tenure of office only.

"J. E. A."—The stamping an envelope in the way submitted to us, would not, in our opinion, subject our Correspondent to the tax on armorial bearings.

"A Lincoln Subscriber,"—Lord John Russell is third son of John, sixth and late Duke of Bedford, by Georgiana Elizabeth, his first wife, daughter of George, Viscount Torrington.

"A Young Lady."—A. D., as applied to the Prince of Wales, in the report of the Queen's marriage ceremonies, signifies "Alle-Bohrd Seaman;" those being the ciphers technically used in a ship's rating.

"A. B. C." will find the information he seeks in the Army List, under the heading of each regiment

"G. T. A. W. F."—An illegitimate child can become entitled to arms by one proceeding only -the obtaining a grant from the Earl Marshal, through the Herald's College.

"Square," Southampton. It is found that changes in the weather have occurred as frequently at every age of the Moon, as when she has been 7, 14, 21, or 28 days old. (See the publish'd series of "Greenwich Observations.") The belief of the Moon's influence in this respect is a popular prejudice, and should be removed. The Moon influences the tides, such, that when she is near the Sun (or new Moon) the sum of the attractive forces of the two bodies causes the following tides to be the highest, particularly if she is at her least distance from the earth at the time. Your four questions with respect to Neptune we cannot reply to, for the want of room. All these particulars will be given in the next "Illustrated London Almanack." We do not know that any sum was offered for the complete measurement of the circle

"A. G.," Ipswich.—Mr. Balfe is the composer of "The Light of other Days." He wrote it for Mr. H Phillips.

"Amicus."—Coletti's voice extends from G, the first line of the stave, to F above the bass-staff-note. Tamburini's voice extends a note higher, in his natural register, but he has a falsetto.

"Cetus." The question has been answered. We cannot give the other information.

"Louise Mary."—"Blaxam's Manual of Gothic Architecture."

"A Correspondent" is thanked but we cannot send ourselves of his "rough sketch"

"A Constant Reader."—Our details of the Waterford Election were taken from a contemporary: our Correspondent, who was in Waterford, states the whole affair to have been a quiet one.

"I. O U, Mansfield." See the Mexican News, in the present Number.

"An enthusiast," Hertford. Probably "Peter's Account of New Zealand."

"Jean Jones."—A sheet's work on "Friesn Discipline," lately published.

"Caulton" will be entitled to the Print.

"E. V." We regret that we have not room.

"An Old Subscriber."—See any Pigeon Fancier's Guide

THE QUEEN'S VISIT TO THE HIGHLANDS.—The circumstance of a day being lost in the arrival of the Royal Party, has prevented us from this week presenting to our readers several interesting Engravings, in the course of preparation. The Series will, however, be resumed in our next.

BOOKS RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Zenon, the Martyr.——The Fast, the Present, and the Future.——The Siege.——Maxwell's Victories of the British Armies.——Pedigree of the Portalat of Prince Charles, by Velasquez.
MUSIC.—"I've a home reared for thee."——"The Ocean."

BACK NUMBERS.

All Numbers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, one month old, will, in future, be considered "Back Numbers," and be charged each sixpence extra.

The Back Numbers are now reprinted; and any single Number from the commencement may be had by remitting One Shilling to the Office or to any Bookseller or News-agent.

The Volumes and Parts will be charged the same as usual, viz. Volumes, 18s.; Parts, 2s. 6d.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1847.

WHILE fever and disease were raging in Liverpool during the influx of fugitives from Ireland, those who held official situations, which compelled them to be in constant communication with the sufferers, encountered the greatest risk from infection. Nineteen persons—surgeons and relieving officers—have died in the discharge of their duties; and a general wish has been expressed that the Government should provide for the destitute families of these courageous men, either by a direct pension, as in the case of soldiers' widows, or by instructing the Poor Law Commissioners to allow a certain sum yearly to be taken out of the poor-rates for the same purpose.

We have no doubt that Government will accede to this very moderate request. The very least it can do is not to stand in the way of the public when they wish to lighten the sufferings of the survivors of those who sacrifice their lives in the public service. But the Commissioners too often abide by the letter of the law, however harsh the consequences; and in all cases where a new precedent has to be set, the Government requires to be supported by public opinion, even when it has not to be urged by it. Hitherto the only sacrifices recognised as deserving of posthumous acknowledgment are those rendered in war; but the struggles and conflicts of peace have been left unheeded. Granting most freely all the high and ennobling qualities that the profession of arms can claim—the devotion of self, the courage, the endurance, and the risk of death -granting all that forms the redeeming points of contemplation in the records of war, we must contend for an equality of merit in those who display the same devotion in a time of peace, and in the midst of the everyday events of life. The duty of a soldier is discharged in the eyes of the world, in the midst of every incentive to action; and if these are not enough to lead and excite, there are terrible penalties attached to the shrinking from the task, or avoiding it. But the clergyman and the surgeon must face death, surrounded by no glitter, splendour, or applause; if he escape the peril, there are no Gazettes to give him public praise; no despatches to recommend him to worldly preferment or promotion; and, if he fall, there is no assured support for those he leaves behind, though the destitution of the survivors is frequently the bitterest pang of the bed of death. It is only by chance the facts are fully known, and there is no organisation of means, no funds, from which anything can be given. If the circumstances are published, public opinion does justice to the sacrifice; but public opinion has no treasury, or one whose only issues are notes of praise. In such cases as this calamity at Liverpool, something more is required; there was no wealth to be gained by visiting the dens of poverty, rendered more hideous by the presence of contagion and disease; the service was disinterested, and the danger great; yet the duty was done. Those who discharged it are beyond earthly rewards; but to those who remain, there is a debt of gratitude due from society; and it ought to be paid, even if on no higher ground than that of policy.

THE domestic intelligence of the week is interesting, in some respects painfully so. The Assizes reveal some cases of crime more like what one reads of in the middle ages, than what can be conceived as happening in the midst of modern cultivation. Poisoning has become frequent among a humble class, and has been carried on with a craft and dissimulation worthy of the Borgias and the drug mixers of Italy. The last case is absolutely awful; a man has been poisoned at Warrington, by his wife, in order to obtain the money his death would enable her to draw from several "Burial Clubs!" This is not the first time the same crime, with the same cause, has been heard of: in previous cases, the victims have been children. It is time a stop should be put to this hideous criminality. That a man who can do little more than gain a living should deny himself necessaries, in order that his family may have £20 or £30 to spend on his funeral, is of itself an absurd excess; but, it is more probable, these clubs are rather Life Insurance Offices on a petty scale. If they are only Burial Societies, we think the dreadful temptation they hold out might be prevented by prohibiting them from giving money to the family of a deceased member at all. Let them provide the funeral and nothing else. If they are Insurance offices under another name, they will be more difficult to deal with; but some control like that exercised over Saving Banks is not impossible. It is usual to say that these crimes increase in spite of Education; we apprehend a fallacy here; they are not committed among those whom Education has reached, but in the sphere to which it does not extend; instead of being an argument against educating the people it is a proof of the necessity of doing so more widely—and better. The population is fast out-growing the means of teaching it. The machinery that applied to thousands breaks down under the pressure of millions.

The trial of Lieut. Munro brings us to another class of crime in a higher sphere, which, though wanting the deadly cunning and secrecy of murder by poison, is not less fatal in its result. The code of honour is one established by the higher ranks themselves, and now that its victims are fewer than formerly, the fall of one excites greater reprobation. But, allowing for every necessity of this law of honour, we can see no one redeeming feature in the case of Munro and Fawcett. They were near relatives—the quarrel and insult was passed in private—and, had there been a grain of common sense on either side, in principle or seconds, the catastrophe could not have happened. We do not attach much weight to the testimonies to the high character of the prisoner. In all such cases, friends are always ready to come forward, and speak to the virtues of the man; and they are sure to endow him with the very qualities, the want of which, in the special instance, was the most complete. Thus, he who can coolly take his stand, and shoot his brother-in-law, is gifted with particular "mildness and forbearance." They speak as far as they know; the exceptional case is out of their cognizance; and what is the use of virtues that fail the moment they are deeply tried? So Mr. Justice Erle seems to have thought, for, in summing up, he naturally observed, "the spirit of forbearance, which it has been stated you are possessed of, if exercised, might almost always prevent such a tragic result." The tendency of the whole case is to bring the practice of duelling into still greater disrepute; nor has the crime been unattended by a most severe punishment.

THE WEATHER.

The weather during the past week has been dull; the sky has been nearly wholly covered by cloud: a good deal of rain has fallen, and there has been much lightning. The wind has been very light, and chiefly from the north. The following are some particulars during each day:—Friday, the sky was wholly covered by cloud till 9h. A.M., and partially covered between that time and 9h. P.M.; after the latter time it was cloudless. The direction of the wind was variable, but chiefly from the W., the S.E., and the N. by E. The average temperature of the day was 68°. Saturday, the sky was mostly cloudless early in the morning, and partially covered by cloud afterwards till 10h. P.M., and after that time it was quite overcast. The direction of the wind was N.E. and E.N.E. The average temperature of the day was 64°. Sunday, the sky was overcast till evening, and it suddenly became partially clear at 9h. P.M. There was a good deal of lightning at night from the S. and S.E. The average temperature of the day was 67°. Monday, the sky was covered by cloud throughout the day; there were frequent flashes of lightning at night, and rain was falling heavily early in the morning. The average temperature of the day was 68°. Tuesday the sky was wholly covered throughout the day, and the air was in a calm state. The average temperature of the day was 64½°. Wednesday the sky was cloudy throughout the day, at times very heavily, so as to cast a great gloom. The sun's place was, however, just visible at times in the morning. The wind was light and from the N. The average temperature of the day was 64½°. Thursday the sky was nearly covered by cloud throughout the day, with some few trifling exceptions. Some rain fell in the afternoon. The direction of the wind was E.N.E., but very light; the average temperature of the day was 65½°, and that of the week was 65¼°.

The extreme thermometrical readings each day were:

Friday,	Aug. 13, the highest during the day was	81½ deg.,	and the lowest was 54½ deg.
Saturday,	Aug. 14	76	52½
Sunday,	Aug. 15	80	54
Monday,	Aug. 16	74	58
Tuesday,	Aug. 17	70½	58
Wednesday,	Aug. 18	69	60
Thursday,	Aug. 19	71½	60

Blackheath, Friday, August 20, 1847. J. G.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE.—His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge has arrived at Hanover, on a visit to the King and Crown Prince, and Princess, from Rumpenheim, the Duchess of Cambridge's seat, near Frankfort, where her Royal Highness and the Princess Mary are residing during the ill of residence.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER.—The Queen Dowager, attended by a limited retinue will leave this country for Madeira at the close of the ensuing month. Her Majesty arrived at Marlborough House on Tuesday afternoon, from Bushy Park. In the evening, her Majesty attended by her suite, honoured the performance at Her Majesty's Theatre with her presence.

BIRTHDAY OF THE DUCHESS OF KENT.—Tuesday was the sixty-first anniversary of the birthday of the Duchess of Kent. Her Royal Highness' tradesmen dined together, and, in the evening, illuminated their houses. The Bachelors of Windsor gave a revel in their town in honour of the occasion, consisting of nearly every variety of rural sports, the expenses being defrayed by public subscription. Amongst the subscribers to the revel fund were, her Majesty, £10; Prince Albert, £5; the Duchess of Kent, £5; Lord John Hay and Colonel Reid, members for the Borough, £5 each; the Officers of the Royal Horse Guards, £5; the Windsor, Staines, and South-Western Railway, £5, &c. A Royal salute was fired at eight o'clock in the morning from the corporation ordnance, after which the Bachelors perambulated the town in procession, preceded by a brass band. A fireworks display of fireworks concluded the sports of the day.

MARRIAGES AMONG THE ARISTOCRACY. The marriage of the Marquis of Kildare, eldest son of the Duke of Leinster, with Caroline Leveson Gower, third daughter of the Duke of Sutherland, has been postponed until the end of the month.—The nuptials of the Earl of Portarlington and Lady Alexandrina Vane, second daughter of the Marquis of Londonderry, will take place on September 1st, at Wynyard Park. The marriage of the Dowager Countess of Waldegrave, daughter of Mr. Braham, the vocalist, with George Granville Harcourt, Esq., M.P., eldest son of his Grace the Archbishop of York, is appointed to take place on the 3d of October.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

THE NEW HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT.—The following are the subjects chosen for the eight frescoes painting which are to be in the Queen's Corridor, in the New Houses:—1. "Charles I. erecting his Standard at Nottingham." 2. "Basing House Defended by the Cavaliers against the Parliamentary Army." 3 "The Covenanters in the Cause of Religion" 4 "Charles I. refusing to sign the Covenant." 4. "The Burial of Charles I." These are the Cavalier side of the question. The four on the opposite are—5. "Speaker Lenthal asserting the privileges of the Commons against the arbitrary encroachments of the Stuart monarchs" 6. "Prince Rupert and his dog members." 6. "The Setting Out of the Trained Bands from London, to raise the Siege of Gloucester." 7. "The Embarkation of a Puritan Family for New England." 8. "The Parting of Lord and Lady Russell." We find in the Report of the Commissioners of the Fine Arts with reference to the building of the New Houses of Parliament, that of the twelve panels in the Royal antechamber, that proposed to be done by the late Sir Benjamin Haydon—his spreading his cloak as a carpet for the Queen, and his landing in Virginia: between these two a third panel is to intervene, the subject of which is Queen Elizabeth knighting Sir Francis Drake.

THE LATE DR. LYNCH.—On Tuesday a public meeting was held at the London Coffeehouse, for the purpose of promoting a subscription for the widow and family of the late Dr. J. H. Lynch, who for so long a period had devoted himself to the development of means for the prevention of disease and to the improvement of the sanatory condition of the labouring population. The chair was taken by Mr. E. Chadwick. Mr. Anderton, Dr. Simpson, and other gentlemen having addressed the meeting, and advocated the peculiar claims which the widow and children of the deceased gentleman had upon the public, but more especially on the citizens of London, for his great exertions in the cause of sanatory reform, resolutions were unanimously passed, pledging the meeting to impress upon the Government and the Corporation of London the necessity of providing for his survivors. A committee was then appointed to confer with the Government and the City authorities. The following subscriptions were announced:—Lord J. Russell, £10; the Duke of Buccleuch, £10; the Earl of Ellesmere, £10; Lord Ashley, £10; the Bishop of Norwich, £10; Lord Morpeth, £10; Lord Ebrington, £10; Mr. Slaney, M.P., £10; Mr. Farrar, £5; Mr. Chadwick, £5; Dr. Walker, £5 5s.; &c.

REMOVAL OF THE WOOD PAVEMENT.—On Monday the whole of the wood pavement from Northumberland House to Charing-cross Hospital was removed and carried into St. Martin's Workhouse; it is being replaced with granite.

IRELAND.

THE ELECTIONS.

There are more than forty changes of men in the Irish election returns; but the state of parties, nevertheless, is not materially affected.

The Conservatives have gained two seats from the Liberals in the borough of Athlone, by the substitution of Mr. Keogh for Mr. J. Collett, and in the borough of Kinsale, by the substitution of Mr. Guinness for Mr. Watson. But the Whigs have gained five seats from the Conservatives, viz.: In Longford County, Mr. Fox for Mr. Lefroy; Dundalk County, Mr. Dawson for Mr. Shirley; Portarlington Borough, Colonel Dunne for Colonel Dawson Damer; Dublin City, Mr. Reynolds for Mr. Gregory; Galway County, Mr. Fitzpatrick for Sir Charles Coote. This leaves a difference of three seats in favour of the Liberals; but if Mr. Burke should be returned for Kildare, the gain of the Liberals would be only two. Then there is a doubtful return for Galway County, in the person of Mr. St. George, who is claimed by the Conservatives. Altogether, the Irish representation remains in pretty much the same position as regards Whigs and Conservatives as it was in the last Parliament. The Repealers, however, have declared and carried into St. Martin's Workhouse; it is being replaced with granite.

IRELAND.

THE ELECTIONS.

There are more than forty changes of men in the Irish election returns; but the state of parties, nevertheless, is not materially affected.

The Conservatives have gained two seats from the Liberals in the borough of Athlone, by the substitution of Mr. Keogh for Mr. J. Collett, and in the borough of Kinsale, by the substitution of Mr. Guinness for Mr. Watson. But the Whigs have gained five seats from the Conservatives, viz.: In Longford County, Mr. Fox for Mr. Lefroy; Dundalk County, Mr. Dawson for Mr. Shirley; Portarlington Borough, Colonel Dunne for Colonel Dawson Damer; Dublin City, Mr. Reynolds for Mr. Gregory; Galway County, Mr. Fitzpatrick for Sir Charles Coote. This leaves a difference of three seats in favour of the Liberals; but if Mr. Burke should be returned for Kildare, the gain of the Liberals would be only two. Then there is a doubtful return for Galway County, in the person of Mr. St. George, who is claimed by the Conservatives. Altogether, the Irish representation remains in pretty much the same position as regards Whigs and Conservatives as it was in the last Parliament. The Repealers, however, have declared, and carried into St. Martin's Workhouse; it is being replaced with granite.

THE REPEAL ASSOCIATION.—Mr. Maurice O'Connell took the chair at the meeting in Conciliation Hall, on Monday, which was much crowded. The Chairman made a long address, and suggested to the assemblage of the Irish representatives of all politics to take counsel together previous to the meeting of Parliament. The proposition was well received. Among the accessions to the Repeal cause, was Mr. Kiely, who unsuccessfully contested New Ross as a non-repealer. The Repeal rent amounted to £80.

A CHILD BURNED ALIVE BY ITS FATHER. A military pensioner, named Darmody, rider to a posting establishment at Bird Hall near Nenagh, returned home one night last week in a state of drunkenness, when he went into the bedroom where his two children slept, and, it is said, threw them, a little girl, out of bed, put her on the fire, and there kept her until she was burned to death. The other child rushed screaming out of the house to the police-barrack, and gave information of the dreadful act; but before the constables arrived, the police entering the house, they saw the wretch stupidly gazing upon his daughter's calcined remains, and apparently unconscious of what he had done. The brute has been committed to Nenagh gaol.

DEATH OF ANOTHER ROMAN CATHOLIC BISHOP.—In addition to the death of the Right Rev. Dr. Griffiths, we have to announce the decease of the Right Rev. Dr. Mostyn, the Roman Catholic Bishop of Durham, which took place at Old Elvet, Durham.

THE DIEPPE RAILWAY.—The Journal des Chemins de Fer states that the directors of the Dieppe Railway have sent out circulars to the shareholders, announcing that the line will be terminated next spring.

POSTSCRIPT,

YORK MEETING. THURSDAY.

Old Three-year-old Produce Sweepstakes of 100 sovs each, h ft; for colts, 8st 7lb; and fillies, 8st 2lb. 2 miles. (9 Subs.)

Major Yarburgh's Sally Muggs	1
Mr. Stephenson's Victress	2
Chesterfield Handicap, of 10 sovs each, and 60 added. 1 mile. (14 Subs.)
Sir C. Monck's Vanish	1
Mr. Taylor's George Hudson	2
Free Handicap of 10 sovs each, and 50 added. 1¼ miles. (9 Subs.)
Mr. Robertson's Blackbird	1
Mr. L. Fox's Hannah Raine	2

County Cup of £150, added to a sweepstakes of 20 sovs each; for three-year-olds and upwards; the second to receive £30. Two miles. (14 Subs.)

Mr. Gully's Mathematician	1
Lord Zetland's Cobetress	2
Mr. Meiklam's Godfrey	0
Mr. Meiklam's Poynton	3

Bremham Park Stakes of 100 sovs each; 20 ft; for colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 5lb. One mile and a half. (7 Subs.)

Mr. Featherstonhaugh's Quicksand	1
Mr. Brook's Luminous	2

The Constitution Stakes of 20 sovs each, and 50 added, for four-yr-olds. Two Miles.

Mr. B. Green's The Conjuror	(Edwards) 1
Sir T. Gerard's Grimaston	0

The Amateur Purse of £50, added to a handicap of 10 sovs. each. Gentlemen Riders. Two miles.

Mr. Dawson's Grim Con, 5 yrs	(Capt. Williams) 1
Mr. Nicoll's Cameleopard, 5 yrs	2

Great Yorkshire Stakes.

Ellerdale	1
Maid of Motherwell	2

READING, GUILDFORD, AND REIGATE RAILWAY. Yesterday, the first sod of this Railway was cut in a field adjoining Broome Park, Betchworth, Surrey, with the accustomed ceremony, by David Salomons, Esq., Chairman of the Company. There were present a great number of the gentry of the county, at the commencement, as well as at the dejeuner, in Broome Park; where, also, the "navigators" were regaled. [We intend, next week, to illustrate this event in railway history.]

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE

Under the head of France, in page 114, will be found an account of the murder of the Duchess of Praslin. The Paris papers of Thursday contain the following additional particulars

The Duke and Duchess of Praslin, when they reside at Paris, occupy, with their numerous family, consisting of nine children, the hotel of Marshal Sebastiani, in the Faubourg St. Honoré, the most fashionable quarter of Paris, and only a few doors off the British embassy. On Tuesday evening, at nine o'clock, they arrived from the country, with the intention of remaining only a few days at Paris; and, as their sojourn in the country was to be a long one, most of the domestics being absent on leave, their suite consisted only of two or three persons. The Duke and Duchess retired at an early hour to their respective apartments, after having sent the children to bed; and the servants, tired from the day's journey, soon followed their master's example, and soon after the hotel was wrapped in silence. At about two in the morning (another account says four), the sound of a bell, violently rung in the Duchess' chamber, aroused one of the servants, who hastened to the door, and on knocking, and tried to open the door. Finding that the door was fastened, he was about to retire, when he heard two or three groans, and fearing that the Duchess' was taken ill, he burst open the door, and a horrible sight was presented to his view. The Duchess of Praslin was stretched on the floor in a pool of blood, which was flowing rapidly from some deep and large wounds in her neck and throat, and the only signs of life she gave was a rattle in the throat; the hands of the unfortunate lady were dripping with blood, and the impression of a bloody hand upon the bell rope indicated that she had not pulled the bell till she had been struck by the murderer. Her scattered hair and dress denoted that she had struggled hard with the assassin. No marks of robbery or pillage were visible; but some chairs and small tables were upset, denoting that her struggle for life had been a fierce one, of that the murderer had taken a precipitate flight.

More dead than alive the servant reeled out of the room, and called out for help. The Duke was instantly on the spot, and clasped the body of his murdered wife in his arms. Medical assistance was immediately procured, but in two hours she breathed her last.

The Commissary of Police was on the spot as soon as the medical men, and at six in the morning M. Delangle, the Procureur-General, the Procureur du Roi, and the authorities, were present at the investigation commenced. Every apartment and outhouse was searched to discover how the assassin had effected his entrance and escape, and the investigation was still going on at two o'clock in the afternoon. The wounds are numerous and deep that they must have been done with a large kitchen-knife or razor.

It is presumed that the murderer entered by the back of the house, which looks on the Champs Elysées, and where a large mansion is now under course of construction

The noble lady who has thus met so untimely and was forty years of age, the only daughter of Marshal Count Sebastiani, Peer of the France, and Lieutenant-General of Lieutenant-General Tiburce Sebastiani. She was a lady distinguished alike for the beauty of her person and the adornments of her mind, was an excellent mother, and a kind friend to the poor.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

ATTEMPTED MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Last Saturday afternoon, a Mr. John Ovenstone attempted to murder Mr. George Crawley, and then endeavoured to commit suicide. Mr. Crawley is a wine merchant, residing at No. 12, Mark-lane, formerly opposite the Corn Exchange. The intended assassin, Mr. Ovenstone, has for some time past carried on business as an upholsterer, in Great Titchfield-street, Marylebone

It seems that Ovenstone was greatly exasperated by an execution having been sent into his house. Ovenstone being—in conjunction with a Mr. Cromer, the assignee of a bankrupt—manager of an inn in Holborn, to whom Mr. Crawley had supplied wine and spirits, and Ovenstone's co-assignee failing, Mr. Crawley proceeded at law against him for the amount due to the estate, about £150. Writs have been transpired in the course of the action is not at present known, but it is certain that those proceedings influenced him in making the murderous attempt

The details of the occurrence will be best understood by the following statement made by Mr. Crawley, at St. Thomas's Hospital

"Yesterday (Saturday) afternoon, about half-past three o'clock, while conversing with a friend in my wine trade, my clerk came to me, and said that Mr. Ovenstone, of Great Titchfield-street, wanted to speak to me. I immediately went into my room, where I found Mr. Ovenstone, to whom I said, 'Well, Mr Ovenstone, I understand you want to see me?' He replied, 'Yes, sir, I do.' I inquired what his business was with me? He shewed me, 'What do you mean by doing what you have done? You are a pretty fellow, I think.' My impressions was, that he was in a sale (but had taken place at his house. I told him that I had nothing to do with it, that I had left my case in my solicitor's hands. I had no sooner uttered these words than he put his hands into his pocket, as I imagined for the purpose of drawing out his handkerchief, instead of which he pulled out a pistol, presented the mouth at me, and, before I had time to get away, he discharged the contents in my face. I immediately ran out into the street and called out, 'Murder!' I went to Mr. Harris's surgery, and from thence I came to this hospital in a cab."

It appears that a ball entered Mr. Crawley's mouth, and tore away a portion of the roof, lodging in the cavity. The narrative is continued by Mr. Crawley's clerk, who, when he saw his master was wounded, locked the attempted murderer in the office, and had hardly done so when a second report of fire-arms was heard. Two constables entered, and found Ovenstone sitting in a chair, with a couple of pistols near him, and blood flowing in copious streams from his head and face. They immediately secured both the pistols and Ovenstone, and took him to Guy's Hospital, where two of the house-surgeons were in instant attendance. They found that the injuries he had inflicted on himself were of a serious character; the ball appeared to have entered at the mouth, passed in an oblique direction, and lodged over the left temple. The medical gentlemen have been successful in extricating the ball which had lodged in Ovenstone's head. There is no to be no doubt about its having been the intention of the wretched man to kill Mr. Crawley and then destroy himself, as, in addition to the fact of his having with him two heavily loaded pistols, a written statement was found in his coat pocket, which was evidently drawn up so as to give a full explanation of the several reasons that had actuated him to attempt the commission of the crime.

Ovenstone is a single man; he lived with his sister, who kept house for him. It appears that Mr. Ovenstone was much respected in the neighbourhood where he resided. He has been patronised by many of the nobility, in consequence of his taste in the arrangement of furniture, and has supplied pictures to most of the gallery throughout the kingdom. Ovenstone was greatly distressed by Mr. Crawley's suit against him; and, finding himself pressed, had sent a circular to the nobility and patrons of art, descriptive of some choice pieces of furniture manufactured from the piles of Old London Bridge, hoping by the sale of these articles, which were much prized by him, to meet the demands of Mr. Crawley. These letters, it seems, had not met with the response he expected

On Thursday (last week), upon his return, after what he had hoped to have been a satisfactory arrangement for the disposal of the greater portion of his collection, he found the Sheriff's men in possession of his house. His sister, alarmed at the proceedings, fled from the house. No communication from his sister, to whom he was tenderly attached, being received, and conceiving that her absence was occasioned by the rudeness of the men, he became highly excited.

It appears that the unfortunate man has for many years carried loaded pistols about his person, in consequence of having been attacked by robbers some few years ago on his way from his house at West Ham, when he saved his life by his presence of mind, and at the sacrifice of the property about him. As he was obliged, in pursuit of his business, to travel over unfrequented places at all hours, he ever after carried the weapons which have so unhappily tended to the calamitous event which is now before the public.

Ovenstone's are wounds are fast healing, but he seems to betray considerable excitement at his awful position. Mr Crawley is progressing most favourably. He is under the care of Mr. Solly and the assistant surgeons, who have been unremitting in their attention to the unfortunate gentleman.

THE POISONING CASE AT WARRINGTON.

The inquest on the body of Job Mather, whose death was suspected to have been caused by the administration of arsenic, was resumed on Monday last. Ann Mather, his wife, the party accused, was present, having been apprehended at Ashton-under-Lyne.

John Davis, M.D., said he had examined the body. He had no doubt the deceased died from inflammation of the stomach and intestines, but what it arose from poison or from natural causes he was not able to state.

James Jonas, chief constable, said. In consequence of information received, I apprehended the prisoner Ann Mather, at Ashton-under-Lyne. I found her at the house of her father, and told her that she must prepare to come to Warrington with me. She immediately replied, she supposed it was in consequence of the rumours that had got out that she had poisoned Job. I said it was partly in consequence of that. I further added, that I had received information from Jane Houghton that she had been with her twice to purchase arsenic. The prisoner replied she had been with her, once to Mr. Barton's, and once to Mr. Wood's, the druggist; but that she (the prisoner) had purchased it to kill bugs. Witness saw portions of the body sealed up in two jars by Dr Davis

Dr. Brett said he examined the contents of the jars. On analysing a portion of the stomach and intestines he discovered the presence of arsenic sufficient to cause the death of an adult

Jane Houghton resided in having accompanied the prisoner when she bought the arsenic. She said it was to kill bugs with. The prisoner desired her not to mention that she had bought arsenic a second time.

Eliza Taylor said she had seen deceased quite well on the Monday morning in the evening he was taken ill. She saw him on Wednesday, when he said he was better, having got rid of the burning pain in his stomach. Mrs. Mather seemed to pay him every attention.

The stewards of the different sick clubs of which the deceased was a member, then proved the payment of the sums to the widow, altogether £21. This closed the evidence. The prisoner declined making any statement, and the jury having consulted together for a few minutes returned a verdict of "Wilful murder," whereupon the prisoner was committed to take her trial.

FIRE IN THE KENT-ROAD. On Tuesday night, shortly before twelve o'clock, a fire, involving a serious destruction of property, broke out in the premises of Mr. Morgan, a carpenter, builder, and joiner, on the bank of the Grand Surrey Canal, near the bridge, in the Old Kent-road. The flames originated in the manufactory, a range of premises about 100 feet long, and of proportionable width. At the time the discovery was made, the fire had obtained a strong hold of the place, and, owing to the inflammable nature of the stock deposited therein, the flames extended with more than usual rapidity. Engines soon reached the spot, but before water could be obtained, the flames had extended into another large pile of premises, the property of Mr. Dalton, a stone merchant, and also into the buildings tenanted by Mr. Saunders, a brewer. By one o'clock the flames were nearly extinguished; but by that hour Mr. Morgan's factory, together with its stock in trade, the men's working tools, &c., were reduced to ashes, Mr. Dalton's premises almost gutted, and the property of Mr. Saunders severely damaged by fire. The total loss is very considerable

ROBBERY IN AN OMNIBUS. On Monday afternoon the Rev. Mr. Grey, of Don Chapel, Lower Chalk-road, Islington, was robbed of a silver sacramental service and his purse, containing fourteen sovereigns and some silver, whilst riding in an omnibus between Charing-cross and the Bank, returning from visiting a dying member of his congregation. The Rev. gentleman was seated between two well-dressed females, who suddenly recognised their father as the vehicle passed Wellington-street, and which they immediately left to join him

MURDER OF AN ED EDINBURGH HANGMAN.—A drunken broker, named James Edie, attacked the executioner Scott, while standing at the bottom of a close, at Edinburgh, on Thursday (last week). He was, it is presumed, obnoxious to Edie from his profession. Edie assaulted him in the most violent manner, knocking him down by repeated blows on the breast; and on Scott being carried to an adjoining shop he was pursued thither by he assailant, who again struck him on the head, which produced immediate insensibility, and resulted in death in a few minutes afterwards. Edie was immediately taken into custody, and, after an investigation of the case by the authorities, he was committed to take his trial for the offence. Scott's appointment as hangman took place in July, 1844, immediately after the execution of Bell, a soldier in the 5th Dragoon Guards, who had shot his sergeant-major. On that occasion Scott's predecessor mismanaged his revolting employment so much as to bring down the execration of the crowd, and he never afterwards dared to appear in public

FATAL ACCIDENT AT STALEY-BRIDGE.—On Sunday morning, some men in the employ of the Huddersfield and Manchester Railway Company were in a temporary wooden building, erected near the tunnel which is being made under the town, and which serves as a storehouse and stables. The men were sunning at the rats that haunted the place, and for this purpose got some gunpowder down the holes, and set fire to it. Unfortunately, a cask containing a large quantity of powder was in the building, and the fire having communicated with it, an explosion of a most fearful character ensued, shaking the buildings in the neighbourhood, and burning several of the unfortunate men in a frightful manner. Two of the number contrived to scramble out of the place, and jump into a pit of water adjoining, with their clothes on fire, and the others were blown away almost lifeless. The building contained a large quantity of oil and tallow, and was set fire and burned to the ground. Two of the sufferers, named Matthew Gomersall, aged 34, who was "gaffer" over the hands, and on Sunday afternoon, leaving a wife and three children. William Shirt, and Thomas Smith, were so much burned that they are not expected to recover. The sufferers had every attention paid them. An inquest on Matthew Gomersall and James Platt, two of the sufferers, who died on Monday before Mr. Rutter. From the evidence, it appeared that the quantity of gunpowder which exploded was about three-quarters of a barrel, or from a hundred to a hundred and fifty pounds. "I had got wet, and went in for a nornbit before, it was not fit for use." Sarah Platt, wife of James Platt, said "My husband told me, when he was got to bed, that he went down and saw Mr Shirt and Mr Gomersall near the store-room. They told him to come in, and they locked the door, to prevent any other person coming in. He said the powder was damp and would not go off. They got a red hot iron, and then it went off. Gomersall, he said, had dropped the iron in the confusion, and they could not find it, so as to get out. The Coroner remarked that the whole of the witness's mind upon the main points, and were corroborated by the sufferers. It evidently appeared to have been their own act and accident, and no one was to blame in the matter but themselves. The Jury unanimously returned a verdict of "Accidental death."

POLICE.

THREATENING LETTERS

AT SOUTHWARK-office, on Monday, Henry Joseph Killerby, a young man, nineteen years of age, was brought before Mr. Cottingham, charged with sending a letter threatening to murder Elizabeth Pugh, a young female, residing in a street in Bermondsey, a tradesman, in White-street, Southwark.

The prisoner is the same young man who was brought up to this court about eighteen months ago on charges of sending threatening letters, some of them containing poison, to different persons residing in the district

The letter was as follows, addressed to the complainant's mother:

"Mrs Pugh,—As I have been so long and have spoken you, that you are the residence of your daughter Elizabeth, and I safely promise you, that before another month has passed away, your daughter shall be in her grave; for as there is a God to save, I am determined to murder her before that time has passed, be the consequences what they may.

Signed, "HENRY KILLERBY."

The prisoner had been forbidden to visit the complainant some time since, and this led to his threat. He told the magistrate that he never intended to carry the threat into execution. He was ordered to find two sureties of £5 each to be of good behaviour for two years, or in default to be imprisoned for that time.

MORE OF JOSEPH ADY

The indefatigable Joseph Ady seems to gain fresh vigour from every exposure. The Lord Mayor caused much amusement at the MANSION HOUSE, on Tuesday, by reading some correspondence which he had just received upon the subject of the old Cheapside Cross.

The following answer was sent by a gentleman to Ady, who had transmitted to him one of the well-known circulars, offering information worth hundreds, for the small sum of twenty-one shillings:—

Worchester-street, Old Broad-street

Sir,—In reply to your note, I have had some experience in such cases like the one you offer me and the parties have always been satisfied with an undertaking that a per centage shall be a reward on the amount recovered. Upon the above I am ready to agree with you viz. 10 per cent.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

Joseph Ady, Esq. H. WELCH

Next day, Mr. Welch received back his letter to Joseph Ady, Esq., with the following little comment at the end of it, in the well-known handwriting of the dispenser of unclaimed dividends:—

"No. No.—So sent to be, but such a one as many unfaithful promises that I could not live, as I abhor all lawsuits, and am too old (73, to run after my debtors; consequently, I have gone into partnership with a person who brings knowledge into the concern, and a connexion to enable us to give our labs credit, and he is a person who prefers twenty one shillings in hand to any promise whatever. Respectfully,

Mr. Welch. J. ADY

In another letter, which his Lordship received from a Vicar and Prebendary, the reverend gentleman offered to undertake the enquiry of the owner of the missing 20s on the receipt of a copy of the lithographed circulars, stating that her husband had embarked in a most dangerous undertaking, and that on the receipt of 20s the writer would point out the means and the remedy. To that letter was annexed the following postscript, to which the writer claimed the attention of the lady:—

"One of the Bishops was in a similar case. He paid my fee, took my advice, and escaped unscathed. Go thou and do likewise. Respectfully, J. ADY

The Lord Mayor, in alluding to the labours of Mr Ady, said he had good reason for believing that the press had nearly brought these labours to a close, as the partnership indicated an alliance that promised to be fatal to the business.

GREAT FALL IN THE PRICE OF BREAD.—On Thursday, the bakers throughout the metropolis lowered the price of the four pounds loaf one penny.

SUGAR USED IN DISTILLERIES.—877,4lbs. of sugar were used by Licensed brewers in the United Kingdom, from the passing of the Act 10 Vic., cap. 57, to the 5th of July last. The quantity of sugar taken into stock by distillers during the same period amounted to 11,410 cwts.; the quantity actually conveyed to the mash-tun, to 10,926 cwts.; the quantity of proof spirits made therefrom, to 105,168 gallons; the average produce of gallons of spirits per cwt. of sugar, to 10.49. and the total amount of drawback allowed on such spirits, to £36671.

THE NEW PARLIAMENT.

We last week gave the returns for all the English Counties, with the exception of two which were undecided (North Warwickshire and West Somersetshire). Our list this week comprises the returns for these Counties, and the few other returns which have since been made. The only election now undecided is that for Orkney and Shetland. Sudbury is disfranchised.

RETURNS SINCE LAST WEEK.

CARDIGANSHIRE.—Powell
CLARE, County. Sir L. O'Brien, Macdonnell
CORK, County. Roche, Power
CLONMEGANSHIRE.—Talbot, Lord Adare.
KILDARE, County. Marquis of Kildare, Burke.
KILKENNY, County.—Greene, Butler.
LONGFORD, County. Fox, Blackall.
LINCOLNSHIRE, County.—W. Monsell, W. O'Brien
MAYO. Moore, R. D. Browne.
MEATH, County. Corbally, H. Craftan.
MONTGOMERYSHIRE.—C. W. Wynn.
NORFOLK, West. Hegan, Coke
ROSS and CROMARTY.—Matheson.
SOMERSETSHIRE. Sir D. Dundas
SLIGO, County.—Gore, Feilkott.
SOMERSETSHIRE (WEST). — Moody, Hood.
WARWICKSHIRE, North.—Newdegate, Spooner

CLOSE OF POLLS.

CLARE, COUNTY.

Gross poll:

Sir Lucius O'Brien	..	..	774
Macnamara	..	..	712
C O'Brien	..	..	578

KILKENNY, COUNTY.
CLOSE OF THE POLL.

Greene	..	..	276
Butler	..	..	261
Hely	..	..	243

LONGFORD, COUNTY.

The final state of the poll was as follows:—

Fox (Repealer)	..	..	418
Blackall (Repealer)	..	..	411
Lefroy (Conservative)	..	..	412
Hannat (Conservative)	..	..	364

MAYO, COUNTY.
CLOSE OF THE POLL.

Moore	..	..	473
R. D. Browne	..	..	247
M'Donnell	..	..	69
J. D. Browne	..	..	11

KILDARE COUNTY.
CLOSE OF THE POLL.

Marquis of Kildare	..	..	535
Bourke	..	..	406
O'Neill	..	..	300

NORFOLK (WEST).

The official declaration by the High Sheriff took place on Monday, at Swaffham, as follows —

Bagge	..	..	3112
Coke	..	..	3064
Hamond	..	..	2435
L'Estrange	..	..	2674

WARWICKSHIRE (NORTH).

On Monday morning the official declaration of the poll was made at Coleshill, by the High Sheriff, as follows:

Mr C N Newdegate	..	..	2715
Sir Richard Spooner	..	..	2441
Hon Mr Leigh	..	..	2252

SOMERSETSHIRE (WEST).
OFFICIAL DECLARATION

C. N. Moody	..	..	3503
Sir A. Hood	..	..	3311
H. P. Bouverie	..	..	2783
B. Escott	..	..	2624

ORKNEY.—The nomination of candidates for the representation of Orkney and Shetland, took place at Kirkwall on Thursday (last week). On a show of hands being required by the Sheriff, an overwhelming proportion was shown for Mr. Anderson, upon which a poll was demanded on the part of Mr. Dundas. The polling does not take place till the 30th.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

It happened on a Summer's holy day,
That was the greenwood shade he took his way.
Cymon and Iphigenia.

The Londoner's Summer holy days commence when Parliament is up, which is generally the case at the close of July or early in the present month. The season of his short moral life—that wherein he despises him after the fashion of his taste—or ascendant for the pleasure of his means—now in lusty existence. We are speaking of the cockney—that is to say the citizen of the metropolis of the world (the term is one of honour where the English only hold it one of discourtesy). He is not of high sanitary merit—neither of research, or, indeed, of sporting of any kind. He would as lieve shoot a fieldfare as a pheasant, and you may see him circumventing a gudgeon at Teddington or Ditton, the dimensions whereof do not exceed those of his little finger, with as per fect a gusto as his West-End countryman baffles a twenty pound salmon in the Tweed. Grace to the inducement, whatever it may be, that leads him to look to flood or field for enjoyment, rather than waste his energies, or any other portion of his substance, in heated chambers, or "loosel companie." The journals tell him, indeed, that places of popular entertainment are likely to repay him badly, should he affect them alluding to the fact with regret and reproach against the degeneracy of modern times. To the latter they are unjust to the days we live in. Steele has just the same complaint in a paper of his which appeared in the Spectator in the year 1711.—"People of good sense lament the depravity or poverty of taste the town is fallen into, with relation to plays and public spectacles. It is, indeed, prodigious to observe how little notice is taken of the most exalted parts of the best tragedies in Shakspeare." The same complaint have been written for a nation of Julius having become lessee of Drury Lane.

Our paper is dedicated to the denizen of the Great City. We bid him welcome to the free air: we grasp his hand in congratulation if we meet him a-field—or lead him by it—should we haply forgather in the haunts of busy men, towards some avenue whereby he may pass to the "greenwood shade." We do not circumscribe our National Sports to the conventional series understood by the general term "sporting." All loan recreations and exercises deserve to be so classed. But a few afternoons ago we passed a delightful hour at the Hampton Court Regatta! The Royal Yacht Squadron steals and suspends the offending "news" a mare adunco," as friend Falcons has it. Nevertheless, the service was one that an eye with an English heart in it could gladly have witnessed without honest satisfaction. It was a rural fête champêtre. Here the band of the 12th Lancers makes martial music, to which the oars of their wherry keep time; there, in war-like varieties of naval architecture,

Some o'er the Thames row the rival boat's fair

The matches excited no ill-will—if they gave birth to no other emotion. The winner rejoiced, and so did the loser. "An fresh," cries the reader. Alas! no! The motto of that country is low, "I'll will towards all men."... We offer no comment on the racing at York, for your London particular gosh not so far north; neither do we allude to the festival at Cowes a line wherein one society at the least is applicable, though one would not desire oneself for the stake. And, apropos of harmony, how our Derby citizen may congratulate himself that he is not of those whom the pressure of speculation as regards sporting, concerns. He goeth about with a mind unruffled and an unchequered countenance, not looking as if he was escaping from some distant mashing love to his only daughter's fortune. Eschew the demon of the Turf, O Cockney of pure conscience and creature comforts. So shall thou not jeopardy those goodly items in the smaller side of life's ledger.

In linked sweetness long drawn out;

There are plenty of fools in the world without thy volunteering to join the company. Does some "lurking devil" whisper you to buy a ticket in a Leger Sweep? Listen not to his wiles, but, with the rest of mankind, swing those you love as partners of your pleasure, up and away to angle for gudgeons at Teddington or Ditton. Suppose you catch nothing but a hearty appetite, is not that worth a sovereign for the retreat of trees, followed by a quiet cigar at one of the dainty hostels on its banks? He thus advised, and you will mark as one of the green spots on the chart of life the occasion on which

It happened on a Summer's holy day,
That to the greenwood shade you took your way.

THE YORK AUGUST MEETING. WEDNESDAY.

The Dundas Stakes, of 15 Sovs each, 10 ft, with 30 added, for three-yr-olds, 6st 9lb; four, 8st 2lb; five, 8st 9lb; six and aged, 9st. Mares and geldings allowed 3lb. One mile and a quarter (11 subs.)

Mr Meiklam's Inheritress, aged	..	..	1
Mr S. L. Fox's Maud, 4 yrs	..	..	2
Mr. G. L. Fox named Enna, 4 yrs	..	..	3

Won by a head. Three ran.

The Colt Sapling Stakes, of 10 Sovs each, 20 ft, for two-yr-old colts, 8st 7lb each. One mile (9 subs.)

Mr J More's The Prince	..	..	1
Mr Osbaldeston's b c by Lanercost, out of Mountain Sylph's dam	..	..	2
Mr. Jaques's Referee	..	..	3

The Great Liver Handicap of 100 Sovs, added to a Sweepstake of 20 Sovs each, in ft, and only 5 ft, if declared; the second to receive £50. One mile and three-quarters. (135 Subs: 103 of whom declared.)

Mr. Gully's Mathematician, 3 yrs, 5st 9lb	..	..	1
Mr J. Gerard's Grimston, 4 yrs, 7st 12lb	..	..	2
Mr. Cope and's Arthur, 5 yrs, 7st 7lb	..	..	3

Eight started.

The Queen's Plate of 100 Guineas. 2 miles.

Mr. Meiklam's Inheritress, aged, 8st 9lb	..	..	1
Sir C Cockerell's Congress, 3 yrs, 7st 9lb	..	..	2

Won in a canter. Three ran.

The Prince of Wales's Stakes of 10 Sovs each, and 50 added; for two-yr-old colts 8st 7lb, and fillies 8st 2lb. Winners 2lb extra. T.Y.C. (57 Subs.)

Mr Bowes's Spring Jack	..	..	1
Mr B Green's Assault	..	..	2
Mr Holgate's Queen of the May	..	..	3

Nine ran. Won by a head.

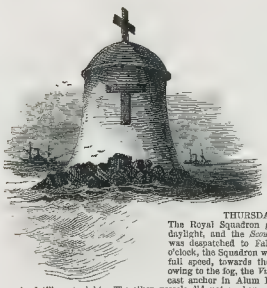
The Knavesmire Stakes, of 100 sovs each, 30 ft, for three-yr-olds. One mile and three quarters. (5 Subs.)

Walked over

Mr. L. Fox's Philosopher .. ..

HER MAJESTY'S MARINE EXCURSION.

THE ROYAL SQUADRON IN ST. MARY'S ROADSTEAD, SCILLY.



THE rearrangements for Her Majesty's Visit were detailed in our Journal of last week; as was, also, in the greater part of our edition, the embarkation of the Queen, Prince Albert, the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, the Prince of Leiningen, and suite, from Osborne Pier, at six o'clock on Wednesday evening.

THURSDAY,

The Royal Squadron got up steam at daylight, and the Scourge steam-sloop was despatched to Falmouth. At five o'clock, the Squadron was in motion, at full speed, towards the Needles; but, owing to the fog, the Victoria and Albert cast anchor in Alum Bay, where they remained till past eight. The other vessels did not anchor; and at half-past eight, the Royal yacht having waved, they left at full speed, it was supposed, for Falmouth.

During the day, many persons were on the hills, round Dartmouth, in the expectation of seeing the Royal Squadron, with her Majesty, pass down the Channel; but, to the surprise of all, about three o'clock the Royal Yacht was seen steering for the harbour, in which she was safely moored before four o'clock, the Fawn, Undine, Black Eagle, and Garland packets following in succession. The boats of the town were soon in requisition, and the Royal Yacht surrounded by persons, who continually cheered. The afternoon was fine and her Majesty, with the Prince of Wales, and Princess Royal, appeared gratified with the scene which surrounded them. Mr. J. E. Smith, an old inhabitant and solicitor of Dartmouth, immediately went alongside the yacht, and Lord A. Fitzclarence having come down to him, he requested to be allowed to present a dish of very fine mulberries to the Queen. His wish was made known to her Majesty, and he was requested to come upon the quarter-deck, where he received the Queen's acknowledgment for his attention.

The Mayor and Corporation came in state alongside, but as her Majesty declined seeing any one, they returned to the shore, gratified at having had another opportunity of showing their dutiful attachment to her Majesty.

About this time, one of the boats of the yacht was seen to leave the vessel with Captain Crispin and two gentlemen in plain clothes; they were pulled rapidly to the entrance of the harbour, and landed at Brookhill, the residence of Governor Holdsworth. The party walked up to the house, when Captain Crispin inquired for the Governor, and being informed by the servant that his master was not at home, the Captain said "he wished to show the grounds to his two friends;" this he did, and then crossed in the boat to the Castle, where the party was received by Lieutenant Aynge, of the Royal Staff Corps, the Master Gunner. The Scourge steam-sloop having appeared off the harbour, two guns were fired from the fort to inform her commander that her Majesty was there, and the Scourge soon after joined the squadron. Captain Crispin requested his supposed friend to allow him to make known to Mr. Aynge by whose presence he was honoured a kindness which his Royal Highness Prince Albert instantly granted, to the gratification of the old soldier. The party then embarked, with the intention of calling at Greenfield, the residence of the Hon. Mr. Hare, but finding he was laid up with the gout, they returned on board the Royal yacht. The visitors' book at Brookhill having been given to Captain Crispin, the following entry in their own writing placed beyond a doubt the names of his two incognito friends: –

Aug. 19, 1847. Albert.
E. Charles Prince of Leiningen.

During this time, the Duke of Norfolk and Earl Grey were walking about the town.

At night, the town of Dartmouth was brilliantly illuminated, and from its peculiar situation, on the sides of two hills, having the appearance of a crescent at night, in the centre of which the yacht was moored, her Majesty must have enjoyed one of the most beautiful sights she has, probably, ever seen, as the evening was very dark and calm. Soon after ten o'clock, the lights in the Royal apartments were extinguished.

We have engraved the Royal Squadron entering the harbour, from a sketch by a Correspondent.

CARNARVON CASTLE.

AILSA CRAIG.

HER MAJESTY'S MARINE EXCURSION.

TOWER OF REFUGE, DOUGLAS BAY.

THE BOAT FITTED UP FOR THE PASSAGE OF HER MAJESTY ON THE CRINAN CANAL.

FRIDAY.

At four o'clock, A.M., the squadron weighed, and, leaving Dartmouth, proceeded to the westward.

At Plymouth, between four and five o'clock, the City of Limerick Dublin steamer joined the Royal Steam Squadron, to the eastward of Start Point.

A large ship with two funnels led the van. She was followed by the Royal yacht, Victoria and Albert; behind the Royal yacht, on the starboard quarter, came the Garland, and on the larboard quarter the Black Eagle. The Undine was in the rear of the Garland, and the Fairy followed the Black Eagle. The City of Limerick, with the Company's flag at the main, Ensign aft, and Union Jack at her bow, duly honoured the Royal Squadron as she passed under the sterns of the Garland and Black Eagle, off Prawl Point, a little after five o'clock. There was very little wind. The squadron was at full speed—say 11 to 12 knots and steaming a course W. by N., which would bring them abreast of the Lizard. About six, the Garland put on extra steam, detached herself from the squadron, and steered a more northerly course.

Towards seven o'clock, the squadron was descried from the Breakwater Lighthouse several miles outside the Eddystone, steering for the Lizard. The Royal yacht was a-head, closely followed by the Fairy and Black Eagle. They had outrun the Shearwater and Undine, which were four or five miles astern.

In the meantime, the Squadron anchored in St Mary's Roads, Scilly—and of the Royal Visit here we have been favoured with the following account by a Private Correspondent:

"In consequence of thick weather, the first day's progress of the Royal squadron down Channel was brought to a close at Dartmouth, instead of Falmouth, as had been intended; and the port of Scilly was, accordingly, selected as the resting-place for the second night, Milford being too distant to reach in one day from Dartmouth. The hazy weather prevented the approach of the Royal yachts being observed till they were within a few miles of the Islands on Friday afternoon; and little more than an hour's interval elapsed before the whole squadron passed through St. Mary's Sound, and anchored in the roadstead under a salute, from the garrison.

"Mr. Augustus Smith, who holds these islands under the Duchy of Cornwall, was in attendance at the anchorage to receive her Majesty, and immediately proceeded on board the Royal yacht. The Queen having intimated her intention to land at the principal island of St. Mary's, in the course of the evening, every preparation was made that such short notice would allow, to receive the Royal party with becoming respect, and shortly after five o'clock the first boat, steered by Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, approached the New Pier, which overlooks St. Mary's Pool. Her Majesty and Prince Albert were received at the landing steps by Mr. Augustus Smith, and a party of his visitors, consisting of Mr. Hawes and Lieut. Caroline Fechnil, Mr. and Lady Sophia Tower, Miss Jenkins, Miss [illegible], Lieut. [illegible], as well as by the Chaplain of the Islands, the Rev. J. W. Norris, and Mrs. North; Mr. Blewitt, Magistrate; the officers of the Customs, and the Coast-guard force, under the Inspecting Commander, Mr. Steel, being drawn up as a guard of honour in front of the platform.

"The Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by Prince Leiningen, and attended by Lady Jocelyn, having entered Mr. Smith's carriage, which was waiting on the spot, proceeded slowly along the pier, on one side of which the principal tenants

FINE ARTS.

FINE ARTS.—"PILGRIMS AT THE FOOT OF THE OBELISK OF SIXTUS V. AT ROME."—PAINTED BY PAUL DELAROCHE.

THE Holy Week, observed throughout all Christendom, with more or less religious fervour and solemnity, presents, at Rome, such varied scenes of pilgrim piety, of splendour in sacerdotal ceremonies, of all that pomp and circumstance which the Roman Catholic Church so well knows how to evoke and practise, that, once seen, the traveller can never forget them. Not only from all parts of Italy, but, perhaps, from every nation in Europe, pilgrims flock into the Eternal City to receive the benediction of the Pontiff, given Urbi et Orbi, for Rome and for the world. It need scarcely be added that the City [illegible] from the palace of the Colonnas to the cellars of the Trasteverini. Princes and peasants [illegible] not unfrequently, monarchs and mendicants, are there at that [illegible] from the blind—all who are visited by "the peculiar crimes of disease," in solation, if not cure of maladies [illegible] from the portico of St. Peter's. The scene [illegible] is truly one of the most imposing in the world.

M. Paul Delaroche has just painted one of its episodical scenes with brilliant effect; which we have engraved. It represents a group of Pilgrims at the base of the Obelisk of Sixtus V., at Rome.

Roma! the dawn is breaking o'er thy hills,
In pure effulgence through the starless night
[illegible]on, and the thousand ills
Brought on by craft and crime and foreign might
Thy soul becomes unclouded; the broad light
Of Progress beams upon thy furrow'd brow.
And through a sea of troubles thou shalt fight
Successfully, while Prudence holds the prow.
Soon may the spirit of thine olden fame
Prove thy sons worthy of the Roman name.

had likewise assembled on the pier, and greeted her Majesty with acclamations.

"Queen Victoria is the first English Sovereign, since the remote days of King Athelstan, who has ever landed on these sequestered islands, though Charles II., when Prince of Wales, took refuge here for a few days on his retirement from Pendennis, in Cornwall; when these rocks formed the last stronghold of the Royalists.

"Having driven through the principal street, the Royal party, attended by Mr. Augustus Smith and Mr. Tower, on horseback, ascended the Hugh, or Garrison Hill, by the only road by which it can be approached in a carriage; and, having entered the lines, pursued the drive, which makes the whole circuit of the peninsula surmounted by the Star Castle.

"This drive, which now commodious the chief promenade of the Scillonians, extends for nearly a mile and a half, and commands beautiful views of St. Mary's, as well as of the other islands, and of the several sounds or channels by which the [illegible] are studded and defended. The Royal party, having alighted at the Star Castle, spent some time on the ramparts. The Duke and Duchess of Norfolk, Earl Grey, Sir James Clark, and the rest of the Royal suite, who had ascended the hill on foot, here rejoined her Majesty. The rapid ascent [illegible] exceeded on foot down the steep declivity, which leads directly to the pier, where they re-embarked to return on board the Royal yacht.

"The Squadron remained for the night in the roadstead, the islands around [illegible] their eastern extremity, between St. Martin's Head and the Seven Stones, in the direct course for Milford Haven.

SATURDAY.

The Royal Squadron left the Scilly roads a little after five A.M. At forty-five minutes past three P.M., the Prospero mail-steamer (which had on Friday noon been ordered to lie off St. Anne's Head to await the arrival of the Royal Squadron) signalled the Squadron; and, an hour afterwards, they had entered Milford Haven.

The Queen came on deck, and was heartily greeted by her Welsh subjects; who then cheered for the Prince of Wales, and for the Royal children. [illegible] Lord Lieutenant of the county, and the Sheriff, Mr. William Campbell, of Tilbeschwan; Mr. James Kwing, of Strathleven; Mr. Smollett, M.P. for the county; Mr. Peter Denny, and other gentlemen. Her Majesty appeared in excellent health and spirits, as did the Prince Consort and the Royal children. The Queen was dressed in a white bonnet and shawl, and a dress of [illegible] tan. His Royal Highness Prince Albert wore a black frock coat, white hat, and grey pantaloons. The Royal children excited the marked attention and admiration [illegible]

The Lord Provost, accompanied by Bailie M'Kinlay and Stewart, and Mr. Forbes, Town-clerk, then advanced, and, after having been presented to her Majesty, had the honour of laying before her the address of the Town Council. Her Majesty received the same very graciously, and intimated that an answer would be returned.

The Lord-Lieutenant of Dumbartonshire (Sir J. Colquhoun) and the Sheriff [illegible] from the metropolis which were generally received in person, but that, in the present case, her Majesty had made a special exception in favour of the great manufacturing city of Scotland. The address of the burgh was thereupon left with Lord Grey, to be afterwards delivered to her Majesty.

The Queen remained some little time longer upon the battery, enjoying the very magnificent prospect laid [illegible]

[illegible] o'clock. On her Majesty's arrival on board the Fairy, after the [illegible] Castle, this beautiful steamer proceeded down the Leven to rejoin the squadron. Nearly half an hour was lost in getting over the bar of the river; but, this accomplished, the Fairy quickly regained a station in the main channel, followed by the Hadrian and immediately after the Thetis with the Lord Provost, Magis[illegible]

after the Thetis. The scenes which were successively passed in rejoining the Royal Squadron, combined with the magnificent fleet of steamers which accompanied the Royal progress, were imposing in the extreme. Port Glasgow came first, and the quays, docks, and platforms, with every point at which a view of the river could be obtained, seemed one united mass of living beings, who cheered most heartily her Majesty and Royal Consort, with the Royal children, as they passed. The gratulations of the assembled thousands were, on repeated occasions, most graciously acknowledged by her Majesty, who was herself highly lighted with the reception with which she was greeted. Having passed Port [illegible] and building-yards to greet the Queen of the Isles; as the whole river frontage, from the extreme point of Cartsdyke to Gourock, was lined with spectators. [illegible] thunders of artillery, both from the shore and the ships collected in the river, combined with the cheers of the multitude, formed a scene of surpassing grandeur, such as imagination can only conceive, but of which description fails to convey an adequate impression. [illegible] Among the many beautiful objects [illegible] sang Greenock was the dancing of the Highland fling by a Highlander in full costume, on the paddle-box of the Chieftain, the performance of which amused her Majesty in a very high degree.

Having passed Greenock, the Fairy, with her Majesty on board, proceeded straight for Loch Long, accompanied by several of the river steamers. On arriving at the head of the Loch, the Fairy stopped for only a few minutes, her Majesty remaining on board. The Fairy then slowly crept round the head of the Loch, and continued her course downwards towards the foot of Loch Long, keeping close in by the Arrochar shore, followed closely by the Premier, the tender, Petrel, and Mars. On arriving at the foot of the Loch, the Fairy steered across the mouth of Holy Loch, and passing along by Kirn and Dunoon, which she reached about half-past six P.M., proceeded towards Rothesay, the [illegible] their course homewards.

The visit of her Majesty to Arrochar seemed to have taken the inhabitants [illegible] flags, however, speedily brought them from their houses to welcome the Queen to her Highland lochs and romantic glens.

WEDNESDAY.

To day the squadron started from Rothesay at eight o'clock, and, passing through the Kyles of Bute round the island, and up Loch Fine, entered Loch Gilp. The scenery of the Kyles is soft and beautiful, the land rising gently from the water's edge, clothed with brushwood, and the distant landscape closed in by fine ranges of green hills. The principal objects are Kilmun Church and the Tower near it, the ancient seat of the Bannatynes; Ardlin with its tumuli, supposed to have been erected over some roving Norwegians slain in battle; the Burnt Isles, with their vitrified fort, and the island of St. Colm's, where, in 1685, Archibald, Earl of Argyll, had his military stores taken from him by a naval force in the service of King James.

(From our own Reporter.)

GREENOCK, Tuesday Night.

THE whole of the south-west coast of Scotland is in a ferment. From Ailsa Craig to the Caledonian Canal, nothing is spoken of but the Queen. Even the grouse are losing their attractions in the advent of Royalty, and the snipe and the black-cock are alike allowed to remain unmolested in the corry and on the hill. Everybody is bent on giving the Royal party a real Highland welcome. Musketry cannon that have lain rusty and unused on the battlements of the hundred feudal Castles perched upon every rock and headland along this wild coast, have been furbished up, and put in requisition to thunder out pealing greetings from cape to cape and island to island. Whole swarms of yachts and steamers are hovering about in every bay and every sound. Every village sends forth its quota of tartan-clad men and screaming bagpipes. By day, flags fly and guns roar from the mast-head; and by night, the little fishing-towns lying nestled upon the coast, under the shadows of the vast stretching mountains behind, are brightly illuminated, while bonfires blaze upon every rocky summit in the vicinity to which wood and tar can be conveyed.

Let me try, however, amid all the loyal hurry-scurry, to trace in their due order the principal events and features of the Royal Visit. From other sources you will have received due intimation of the progress of [illegible] Majesty's dominions. Vast preparations were made for the reception [illegible] to the goodly fleet of fighting war in the Clyde, so as to show what in the pleasant little villages skirting the waters of the Frith of Clyde. True, the citizens of St. Mungo were somewhat scandalised at the Queen coming so near them without actually visiting their smoky city; but, upon the principle of Mahomet and the Mountain, if the Queen would not come to them they took care to go to the Queen. Glasgow was eminently out of town on Monday. A great proportion of the shops were shut, and the countless steamers which swarm betwixt the Broomielaw and Arran, as well as many of the large sea-going boats, were put in requisition, not only to get up a grand aquatic demonstration, but to convey the smoke-dried men and women of Glasgow to the fresh breezes of their glorious estuary.

Their sail, however, was all they got for their trouble. After all the [illegible] Monday, at Greenock and Port Glasgow, the shipping [illegible] summer's day were listlessly away, and still no Royal Squadron greeted the sight of the thousands who, from the massive crags of Dumbarton to the last low shelving ridge of the lower Cumbray, were stationed upon [illegible] At last [illegible] convey the expected visitors. Boats of every description—from the sharply-built river steamer to the massive sea-going vessel and the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

rock can be seen at low water. The breadth of this pier is 62 feet by 53 feet and a quarter of an inch. The blocks of stone are seven and eight feet long, by three and four feet in breadth and deepness, and they rise, stone upon stone, until the pier is two hundred and thirty feet high. At the distance of four hundred and sixty feet on each side of this centre pier there rise, near the water's edge, two other piers of the same gigantic breadth and height; while on each side of these two piers, at the distance of 230 feet, there rise two walls. Containing nothing but stones, the wall on our right hand on the Carnarvon shore, does not extend its ponderous bulk far back, for the land is high and bold, and the railway comes along its elevated brow and at once lays hold of the bridge. It is on our left hand, as we proceed towards Anglesea, that we find the forehead and end of a mighty embankment, on which the railway is raised to the level of the bridge. Here, then, are the four spaces before us, across which, in the main tubes, the railway is laid, namely, two spaces on each side of the centre pier of 460 feet each—(let the reader measure 460 feet on a street or on a road, and he will wonder at the vastness of this structure); and two more spaces of 230 feet respectively, at each end. The tubes are eight in number, each of them 30 feet on the exterior side, and 27 feet high in the interior. Each is 14 feet wide, and they are laid in couples parallel to each other. In the whole, with the breadth of the piers and the landward buildings, the length of the bridge is one-third of a mile. In height, the three piers are, as already said, 230 feet. Measuring from low-water mark to the bottom of the tubes, the height is 120 feet, the tubes being 20 feet on the side, and the pier 70 feet above their upper surface. As ornaments to the two walls which rise upon each shore, are four lions, two at each end of the bridge. The lions contain about 3000 cubic feet of stone. They lie couchant, and yet the height of each is 13 feet; the greatest breadth across the body is 9 feet; the length 25 feet; the breadth of each paw 2 feet 4 inches. The tubes are made of plates of iron of various thicknesses, riveted together. The iron increases in thickness as we proceed towards the centre. The roofs of the tubes are formed of cells, and also the floors. These cells are formed of iron plates set on edge, the cells of the roof being within a fraction of 1 foot 9 inches square, and those of the floor being 1 foot 9 inches wide, and 2 feet 3 inches deep. The rails on which the trains run are laid on these cells of the floor. The flat bottoms, the two upright sides, and the flat roof of each tube are formed of plates, the thinnest of which is a quarter of an inch, and the thickest three quarters of an inch. The weight of each of the four long tubes will be about 1300 tons; the weight of each of the four short ones about 600 tons. In the whole there will be at least 7600 tons of iron used. The masonry will cost £200,000. They expect to finish the masonry by August, 1848. It will contain one million and a half cubic feet of stone."

ON HER MAJESTY PRESENTING THE PRINCE OF WALES TO THE WELSH PEOPLE.—AUGUST, 1847.

Loud rose to Heaven the roaring cheers,
Along old Cambria's loyal coast;
Upon the dark the Queen appears,
And on the shore a peaceful Host.
Sons of the Cymri. Every hill,
Cottage, and Castle ring aloud
Heart-greeting, while tears drops fill
Her eyes, with noblest pleasure proud.

But when the Mother brought her Child
Upon the deck, and cried "Behold
Your Prince! The Prince of Wales!"
A wild,
Exulting shout like thunder roll'd
Up to Pimlimmon. Frommanwr
Answered in lusty jubilee,
Sending the shout to Snowdon hoar,
Who peal'd it bravely o'er the sea.

And well may Cambria's heart beat high!
Harry of Monmouth there arose;
And Cressy paled at Edward's cry,
When fled the lilies from the rose.
The blood of Tudor proudly flows,
Commingled in each sounding vein
Of the young Royal Tar, who glows
With pleasure o'er the subject main.

Happy the land, and blest the scene,
Where Prince and liegemen thus may greet;
Where rankling thoughts ne'er intervene
To blight this bond of union sweet.
Where every breast becomes the shield,
Of Her and Her's, 'gainst every foe,
And Peace smiles down on field and fold,
Best boon that Heaven can e'er bestow.—L.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"J. N."—A little more care in the examination of your diagrams before sending them would save all parties trouble.

"Caro-puty."—See the scheme of Problem 185, in the present number.

"Arabus."—The present series of Chess articles in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS began in February, 1845. All the numbers from that period can be obtained in parts at the original price. Your suggestion of selling the Chess Column separately is quite out of the question.

"W. H. B."—It has been attested, over and over again, that the frontispiece Problem of "The Chess Player's Handbook" can be solved in less than the given number of moves. It will be corrected or cancelled in the next edition.

"Jota." Dundee.—A Pawn can give check, and take a superior piece. There is no law between the moves, although there ought to be.

"H. R. and B. B."—Much too simple for publicity.

"Aros" The first edition of "The Chess Player's Handbook" being a very large impression, a second is not likely to be called for yet. Due notice will, doubtless, be given of the republication.

"John Bull."—Sir Mr. Bryan's pamphlet on the great match between England and France.

"J. T." Glasgow." Your solution of 183 is imperfect.

"S. H. W." They shall be examined. In future adopt larger diagrams, and a more explicit notation; the present are not decipherable

Solutions by "J. L," Bodmin; "Styk," "F. P. T.," "G. W. T." "W. P." and "R. T. R." are correct.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM NO. 185.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt takes K Kt P	K to Kt 6th (dis ch) (best)	Kt to B 6th (ch)	K to R 6th
2. K to B 3d (dis ch)	K to K R 6th	P to R 8th, becoming a Q (ch)	K to Kt 7th
3. R to K Kt 3d (ch)	K takes R	7. Kt takes Kt (double ch and Mate)
4. B to K 8th (ch)	K to Kt 8th (best)

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 186.

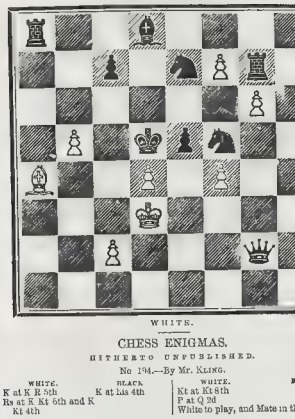
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to her sq (ch)	K takes Q	3 Kt to K 3d (ch)	R takes Kt
2. Q to her 5th (ch)	K takes Q	4. R to Q 4th—Mate.

PROBLEM, NO. 187.

By R. F. HODGSON, Esq., Bengal Civil Service.

White to play and Mate the black King on the identical square he now occupies in five moves.

BLACK



WHITE.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.

No 194.—By Mr. KLING.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at K R 5th	K at his 4th	Kt at Kt 8th
Rs at R 8th and K Kt 4th		P at Q 2d
		White to play, and Mate in three moves.

No. 195. By F. J. D. C.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q Kt 6th	K at Q 5th	Ps at Q Kt 4th and K B 6th
Q at Q Kt 8th	Ps at Q 4th & Q 3d
B at R 8 sq	and K B 2d
Kt at K Kt 5th		White to play, and Mate in four moves

No. 196.—By Mr. C. R. L——E.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q Kt sq	K at Q 4th	Ps at K Kt 4th, Q 3d, B at K Kt 4th
Rs at K Kt 2d & K sq	Q at Q R 8th	and Q R 2d	K at K 4th
B at K R sq	R at K R 6th and Kt at K R 7th & K 4th		Ps at K R 3d, K B 2d, & Q B 3d

White playing first, Mates in four moves.

GAME BETWEEN MESSRS. STAUNTON AND KENNY,

Mr. S. giving the Queen's Rook.

(Ruy Lopez Queen's Knight's Game, 1st Board.)

WHITE (Mr. S.)	BLACK (Mr. K.)	WHITE (Mr. S.)	BLACK (Mr. K.)
1. P to K 4th	Q to K 2d	22. Q takes P (ch)	K to Q sq
2. K Kt to B 3d	K P one	23. R to K R sq	Kt to B 3d
3. Q P to K 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	24. Q to her 8th (ch)	Q to Q sq
4. Q B P one	K Kt to B 3d	25. Q takes Q (c)	R takes Q
5. Q P one	K R P one	26. Kt to Q B 4th	Q Kt P two
6. Castles	K B to K 2d	27. Kt takes Q P	B takes Kt
7. Q B to K 3d	Castles	28. R to K sq	Q B takes K R P (ch) (d)
8. K R P one	Q P two	29. K takes B	B to K 5th
9. P one	K Kt to K sq	30. R to K 4th	K Kt 2 two
10. Q P one	K B P one	31. R to K 6th	K to Kt 2d
11. K B to Q 3d	K B P takes P	32. B to K 4th	R to Q sq
12. Q P takes K P	Q to Q B 2d	33. R to K R 6th (ch)	K to B 2d
13. K R to K sq	K takes Kt	34. R takes Q P	R to K 3d
14. P takes B	Kt takes K P	35. K takes Q R P	R to R 3d
15. Q B to K B 4th	R to Q 3d	36. K to Kt 2d (e)	R to Q 7th
16. B takes Kt	B takes B	37. R to Q Kt 7th (ch)	K to B sq
17. Q K Kt to Sq	Q R P one	38. B to K Kt 6th	R takes P (ch)
18. K R to sq	K to Kt sq	39. K to Kt 3d	K R P one
19. Q B to Kt sq	Q to K 4th (ch)	40. R to B 7th (ch)	K to Kt 2d
20. R to K Kt sq	Q P one (b)
21. K to Kt 2d	Q to K 2d

Winning the Knight, and ultimately the game.

(a) At this juncture, Black assumes a very menacing aspect. With such a position of attack, and a large preponderance of force, he ought not to lose the game.

(b) This appears to have been done without due reflection. He should first have played his Kt to K B's 3d.

(c) With a piece minus this is certainly bold play, but we believe it will be found the best mode of proceeding under the circumstances.

(d) The right move to avoid losing a Pawn

(e) Here the position is one of great difficulty for White, and, play as he may, Black must obtain no embarrassing attack on him

The two following well-played Games are part of a Match now pending at Brighton between Captain Kennedy and a brilliant Amateur of the London Chess Club.

BLACK (Mr. ——)	WHITE (Capt. K.)	BLACK (Mr. ——)	WHITE (Capt. K.)
1. K P two	K P two	20. Q B P two (c)	Q to Q R 4th
2. K Kt to B 3d	Q P two	21. Q takes Q Kt P	Q to Q R 2d
3. P takes P	K P one	22. Q takes Q	Q R takes Q
4. Q to K 2d	K B P two	23. R to Q B 3d	Q P one
5. Q Kt to B 3d	K Kt to B 3d	24. K B P two	P takes P in passing
6. K Kt to K 5th	K B to Q 3d		Kt to Q R 3d
7. Q P two	Castles	25. Kt takes P	Kt to Q Kt 5th
8. Q B to K B 4th	K B to Q Kt 6th	26. K R to K sq	Kt to Q Kt 5th (ch)
9. Q to Q B 4th	K Kt takes P on Q 6th	27. K to Q Kt 3d	K R to Q Kt sq
10. Q B to Q 2d	B takes Q Kt	28. K to Q B 3d	Kt to Q R 7th (ch)
11. B takes B	Q B to K 3d	29. K to Q B 2d	Kt to Q Kt 5th (ch)
12. Castles	Q P one		Kt to Q Kt 5th (ch)
13. Q B to Q Kt 4th	K R to K sq	30. K to Q 2d	P takes P
14. Q to Q B 5th	Q R P two	31. Kt takes P	K R to Q sq
15. Q to Q R 3d	K Kt to Q Kt 5th	32. K to Q B 3d	Kt to Q R 7th (ch)
16. Q B takes Kt (a)	P takes B	33. K to Q Kt 3d	Q R to Q 2d
17. B to Q B 4th	B takes B	34. K takes Kt	R takes Kt
18. Q takes B (ch)	Q to Q sq	35. K takes R	R takes R
19. Q takes P on Q Kt 5th (b)	Q R takes Q R P	36. K to Q Kt 3d	R to Q 7th
		37. Q B P one
		And White surrendered.

(a) A dangerous risk, apparently, to open the battery of the adverse Castle upon his King's quarters.

(b) One again seems doubly hazardous, but the subsequent play shows it could be done with perfect safety.

(c) Black's last few moves are very finely played.

WHITE (Capt. K.)	BLACK (Mr. ——)	WHITE (Capt. K.)	BLACK (Mr. ——)
1. K P two	K P two	21. K R to Kt 2d	K R P one
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3d	22. Kt takes B (ch)	K to R 2d
3. K P one	K Kt to B 3d	23. Q R to R sq	Q to K sq
4. Q P two	P takes P	24. Kt takes doubled P	R R to K R sq
5. K P one	K Kt to Q 4th	25. K P one	Q R takes P
6. K Kt to Q Kt 3d	K Kt to Q Kt 3d	26. R to K 5th	K R P takes R (ch)
7. P takes P	Q P two
8. Q Kt to B 3d	Q B to K Kt 5th	27. R takes P	Q to K B 3d
9. K Kt to Q 5th	K B to K 2d	28. R to K Kt 3d	Q takes Kt
10. Q B to K 3d	Castles	29. P takes R	Q takes P
11. K B takes Q Kt	P takes B	30. Q to Q 3d	R to K sq
12. Q Kt to Q B 3d	K R to Q B 5th	31. R to R 8th (ch)	K to R sq
13. Q to Q B 2d	Q to Q 3d	32. R to Q 4th	Q to K 8th (ch)
14. Castles on K's side	Q B takes Kt	33. K to Kt 2d	Q to Q 7th (ch)
15. P takes B	Q to K R 6th	34. R to K R 4th (ch)	K to Kt sq
16. Kt to K Kt 3d	K to P one	35. R to R 7th (ch)	K to Kt sq
17. Q Kt P one	Kt to Q Kt 3d	36. Q to K B 6th	Q to Q 8th (ch)
18. K R to sq	K R P two	37. K to Kt 3d	Q to Q 7th (ch)
19. K to Kt 2d	Q takes doubled P (ch)	38. K B P one
20. Kt to K B 5th		And Black resigned. (b)

(a) Made in four moves would have been the consequence of Kt's entering R.

(b) The opening of the game is somewhat carelessly played by Captain K merely, but its termination presents grounds of remarkable interest.

CLEVERLY CONTESTED SCOTCH GAMBIT BETWEEN MR. HARRWITZ AND MR. S——S, ONE OF THE STRONGEST PLAYERS OF THE DAY.

WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. S.)	WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. S.)
1. K P two	K P two	18. Q B to B 3d	P to Q R 4th
2. K to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	19. P to K R 3d	Q to Q Kt 6th (d)
3. Q P two	P takes P	20. P to K R 6th	K Kt P one
4. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	21. K to R 2d	Q to Q R 3d
5. Q B P one	K Kt to B 3d	22. Q to K B 2d	K R to B 2d
6. P to K 5th	Q P two	23. Q to K sq	P to Q 3 4th
7. K B to Q Kt 5th	Kt to K 5th	24. Q to K sq	P takes P
8. Kt takes P	Q B to Q 2d	25. P takes P	P takes P
9. Q takes Kt	P takes B	26. Q to Q 2d	K R to Q R 2d
10. Q Kt to Q 2d (a)	Kt takes Kt	27. Q to Q B 2d	P to Q 5th
11. B takes Kt	Castles	28. B to Q Kt sq	B to Q R 3d
12. P to K B 4th	P to K R 4th	29. R takes B	Q takes R
13. Q to K B 3d	Q R to Kt sq	30. K R to Q 3d	Q takes Q (ch)
14. Castles on Q side	B takes R	31. K takes Q	P to Q B 5th (e)
15. P takes B	Q B to K 3d	32. Q B to Q 2d	K R to Q Kt 2d
16. Q R P one	Q to Q B sq	33. Q B to B sq.	K to B sq.
17. P to K R 4th	Q to Q Kt 2d	And wins.

(a) This is not well played. The weak part of Black's game is the position of his Kt, which has no safe escape, it is not advisable, therefore, to relieve him from his embarrassment, by exchanging piece. Q to K R 5th, or Castling, is much better.

(b) A bad effort, as the Q retreats at his leisure.

(c) The decisive move, contemplated as it appears

AN EVANS' GAMBIT BETWEEN THE SAME PLAYERS

WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. S.)	WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. S.)
1. K P two	K P two	11. Q Kt to Q 2d	K Kt to K 2d
2. K Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	12. Q R to Q sq	Castles
3. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	13. Q to Q B 2d	B to K Kt 5th
4. Q Kt P two	B takes P	14. K R to Q sq	B takes Kt
5. Q B P one	B to K 3d	15. Kt takes B	K R to Q sq
6. Castles	Q P one	16. Kt to K 2d	Kt to K Kt 3d
7. Q P two	B to Q Kt 3d	17. Kt to K Kt 4th	Q R to K 2d
8. Q P takes P	P takes P	18. B takes P (ch) (b)	K takes B
9. Q to Q Kt 3d (a)	Q to K 2d	19. Q to Q Kt 3d (ch)	K to K sq
10. B to Q B 3d	Q to K B 2d	White Mates in two moves.

(a) A capital attack may now be got by taking the K B P (ch), and when the King takes the Bishop, taking the R by checking. Without the greatest possible caution on Black's part, this variation will win the game.

(b) Very prettily played.

FORGERY OF A WILL.—A case, involving a serious charge of forgery of a will, has been brought before the magistrates at Bath. Stephen Ford, one of the parties implicated, was examined a day or two since, at Marylebone Police-court, prior to a bail being sent in custody to Bath, for the further investigation of the charge. Four other parties namely, John Ford, John Lewis, Daniel Davis Ford, and Frances Garland, have been examined, and committed, as being agents or accessories to the attempted fraud, which related to the disposal of property, amounting, it is said, to £20,000, and formerly in the possession of the late Mr. Slack, whose will, it was alleged, had been forged. The document in question had been stated to have been found in the house of Mrs. Garland. It was witnessed by John Lewis, John Ford, and Henry Mant. Lewis and Ford had sworn that they had seen Mr. Slack sign the will in the presence of J. S. Manning and Mr. Mant, a solicitor of Bath. Stephen Ford, the father, who claimed largely under the will, attempted to establish it in the Prerogative Court by the testimony of Lewis and John Ford, but in the end this evidence was rebutted. The signature of the supposed testator was proved not to be genuine, and that Jacob Snodley Manning was an imaginary being. The suit was settled, the affidavits of the prisoners rejected, and the Judge of the Prerogative Court pronounced the case to be "one of forgery in Bath, and perjury in London," and that the parties ought to be indicted. The Judge had also ordered probate to be made of the genuine will and codicils. At the examination, evidence was adduced to show that the body of the disallowed will was in the handwriting of Daniel Davis Ford, who was thus joined in the charge with the other parties. The elder Ford was in London at the time; but, having been arrested on a warrant issued by the local magistrates, is now in Bath awaiting his examination.

LITERATURE.

MEMORANDA; OR, CHRONICLES OF THE FOUNDLING HOSPITAL. By JOHN BROWNLOW. Low.

That Tenterden Steeple were the cause of Goodwin Sands does not appear a whit more strange than that in the Foundling Hospital originated the Royal Academy of Arts. The latter we find recorded in the opening pages of these "Chronicles." The Hospital was incorporated in 1739; in a few years the present building was erected; but, as the income of the Charity could not, with propriety, be expended in the decoration of the Hospital, other modes were adopted to generously cave pictures for several of the apartments of the Hospital: these were exhibited, and, in process of time, a regular exhibition, a school, became one of the sights of the metropolis. The pictures proved very attractive; and out of this success grew the first Exhibition of the Royal Academy, in the adel. li, in the year 1760. Thus, within the walls of the Foundling, the curious may contemplate the state of British art previously to the epoch when George III first countenanced the historical talent of West.

The Hospital was founded at a period when the ill-defined and wretched administration of the Poor Laws left the deserted child without other protection than the casual humanity of the passenger; and when, in Mr. Brownlow's words, "lives were lost to the commonwealth by this absence of public feeling, wisdom, and forethought. Men, therefore, of kindly dispositions, joined in this all-regarded work of charity, not because they were insensible of its partially mischievous tendency, but because they conceived that the contemplated salvation of numerous lives to the public was paramount to any evil which might arise from it." Among the earliest "Governors and Guardians" we find William Hogarth, who liberally subscribed his money, and gave his time and talent, towards carrying out the designs of his friend, the worthy Captain Coram, through which, real and permanently the Hospital was established. Hogarth's first artistical aid was the given as the saving of a head-piece to a power of attorney drawn up for the collection of subscriptions towards the Charity; the copper-plate is in the possession of the Hospital, and a copy of it forms one of the illustrations to the volume before us. It further next presented a portrait of Coram, with which Mr. Brownlow, has, also, enriched his volume; though the plate falls short of Mr. Linton's masonry engraving of the head of Coram in the fourth volume of this Journal.

Among the other early artistical patrons, we find Rysbrack, the sculptor; Tayman, the architect; Vanderbank, the painter; Gandon, the architect; Hudson, and Allan Ramsay; and Richard Wilson, the prince of English landscape-painters. They met often at the Hospital, and thus advanced charity and the arts together, for, the exhibitions of pictures, the copper-plate engraving, &c., drew a daily crowd of spectators, in their splendid equipages, and a visit to the Foundling became the most fashionable morning lounge of the reign of George the Second. The grounds in front of the Hospital were the fashionable promenade; and here, two-sided silks, gold-headed canes, and laced three-cornered hats, hoops, and Windsor-soup hats, formed a gay busy for Lamb's Conduit-fields.

Parliament voted large sums of money to the Hospital, upon condition that all children tendered for admission should be received; the number soon increased to several thousands; branch establishments were opened in the country; and one of them (Ackworth, in Yorkshire) was made choice of, in visits of which several of the artist-patrons appeared at the Festival of 1791. Another branch Hospital was at Aylesbury; of this the notorious John Wilkes (M.P. for that borough) was appointed Treasurer; but, when he left the kingdom, in 1764, his accounts were deficient.

Mr Brownlow gives a very interesting Catalogue Raisonnée of the Pictures now at the Hospital, together with a memoir of Coram. He next describes the chapel, with West's embellishments; and Handel's bequest of his oratorio of the "Messiah," with his suggestion for converting the musical service of the chapel into a source of pecuniary profit, which it continues to this day. Dr. Burney attempted to found an "Academy of Music" on this basis, just as an Academy of Arts had been raised; but the Doctor's project failed.

The abuse of the Hospital is of very early date; while Coram, the schemist, having spent all his money in the foundation, left its management in custody. After the interference of Parliament, a basket was hung outside the Hospital gates for the reception of infants, under two months old; and thus, on the first reception day, June 2, 1756, 117 children were given up to the fostering care of the State! Parish officers emptied their workhouses of the infant poor into the Foundling baskets; and even robbed the mother of her newly-born infant, that they might be rid of the burthen of maintaining it. Next, it became a trade to convey children from the country to the Hospital; some never reached that goal, whilst others were stripped of their clothes, and left at the gate, sometimes dead, whom they could be got into the wards! Mr. Brownlow relates that a few years since, an aged Banker in the north of England, received into the Hospital at the above period, was desirous of ascertaining his origin, when all the information afforded by the books of the Establishment was, that he was put into the basket at the gate asked.

Thus, within four years, nearly 15,000 infants were cast on the protection of the public; of this great number, only 4000 lived to be apprenticed out; and, not until Parliament had spent half a million of the public money in this system of fraud and abuse was the grant discontinued; when the Governors left to do what they best could for the Charity.

From this time, the Institution ceased to be a Hospital for Foundlings—as Dryden defines them,

> A race unknown,
> At doors exposed, whom matrons call their own.

Unfortunately, the name has been retained, and hence great misapprehension in the public mind as to the present objects and purposes of the Charity. Lord Brougham has somewhat belittled in France with the absurdity, replied in his ironical manner, "the name alone has been for half a century known amongst us, the thing itself having long since been put down with the consent of Parliament." The present objects of admitting children ensures that they are educated, except the father be a soldier or sailor killed in the service of his country; that the mother have borne a good character previous to her misfortune; and that she is poor, and has no relations able or willing to maintain her child. There are other conditions, enforced by the rigid examination of the Governors; their benevolent object being "to hide the shame of the mother, as well as to preserve the life of the child," and dismiss her from the Hospital with the charge to sin no more. Mr. Brownlow quotes several eloquent defences of the objects of the Hospital; and, among others, Sterne, who preached for the benefit of the Charity, in 1761; and the late Rev. Sydney Smith, who was one of the appointed preachers.

There are, at present, 500 children supported by the Charity, from extreme infancy to the age of fifteen; the Governors have not the privilege of presenting children, after the manner of other establishments, but their election for admission depends upon the proven misery of the case. The general health of the children within the walls of the Hospital is remarkably good. Indeed, the building occupies one of the healthiest sites in London. At an apprentice age, the girls are put out to domestic service, and the boys to trades: their conduct is almost unexceptionably good, the result, doubtless, of their systematic religious and moral training.

The revenue of the Hospital is derived from the improved value of the Lamb's Conduit estate, (95 acres,) which the Governors purchased as a site for the Hospital, in 1741, for the sum of £5350. Your Captain Coram, as we have seen, had no inn ey to endow the Charity with; indeed, he was, at last, a recipient of its funds. The purchase-money for the property was, therefore, collected by benefactions and legacies; and the Charity bought the whole estate, not because they required it, but because the Earl of Salisbury, its owner, would not sell any fractional part of it. As London increased, it appreciated this property; and the ground is now nearly covered with squares and streets of houses, the ground-rents producing an annual income equal to the purchase money! This, with the interest on Stock, benefactions, and the net produce of the chapel, are the present support of the Hospital. The Governors have likewise established a Benevolent Fund, for the relief of aged and destitute persons, who were inmates of the Hospital, when infants. This fund is not solicited from the revenues of the Institution, but wholly supported by subscription, in benevolent furtherance of which Mr. Brownlow has published his very interesting volume of "Memoranda" and "Chronicles;" anecdote, and olden topography.

THE CHILDREN OF THE NEW FOREST. By CAPTAIN MARRYAT, R.N. Hurst and Blackett.

All who remember Captain Marryat's delightful story of "Masterman Ready," published some years since, must allow the Captain to be a first-rate accession to our list of writers for the young. His plain, colloquial, narrative style is congenial with the tastes of youth; he is a capital story-teller, and as good a weaver of plot as sketcher of character; his tone is healthy and elevating, without being stilted: and he does not write down to the capacity of his young reader, but, by the naturalness of his manner, and the simplicity of interest of his plots, entertains and instructs them at the same moment. In short, his books are more like rare sense than written tales

The work before us is but the first volume of a "Juvenile Library," from Captain Marryat's pen; so that the youth of the present generation may expect much delight from the series. "The Children of the New Forest," as the title implies, has a very charming locality: it is a tale of the troublous times of Charles I., and opens with the escape of the King from Hampton Court to Carisbrooke, in the year 1647. The characters are too numerous for us to describe: among them, Joan Armitage, an old Lancaster, who has the care of four fatherless children, of royalist blood, stands out well. The poor old man dies: and the excellent tone of the work may be well illustrated by quoting the following page:—"Constant occupation, and the sudden return of the sweet sleep, both had the effect of restoring the serenity of their (the children's) minds; and, while Humphrey was preparing the paling to fix round the grave of Old Jacob, Alice and Edith collected the wild violets which so profusely adorned the sward, and planted them over and over the grave. Edward also procured all the early flowers he could collect, and assisted his sisters in the task; and thus, in planting it, and putting up the paling, the grave of the old man became their constant work-ground; and, when their labour was done, they would still remain there, and talk over his worth. The Sunday following the burial, the weather being fine and warm, Edward proposed that they should read the sacred service, which had been recited by Old Jacob, at the grave, and not in the cottage, as formerly; and thus they continued afterwards to do, whenever the weather would permit: thus did Old Jacob's resting-place become their church, and overpower them with those feelings of love and devotion which gave efficacy to prayer. As soon as the paling was finished, Humphrey put up a board against the oak tree, with the simple words carved on it, 'Jacob Armitage.'"

The interest taken by the children in the ill-fated King, and their sympathy in his vicissitudes, are admirably portrayed; and there are several episodes, explanations of the positions of parties, which carry out the historical complexion and value of the little work in an educational point of view.

THE "GREAT BRITAIN" STEAM-SHIP.

THE "GREAT BRITAIN" BEGINNING TO RISE.

THE interest attached to the operations in progress to raise the Great Britain Steam-ship, previous to her being floated off, has induced us to despatch our Artist, Mr. James Mahony, to Dundrum, with the view of illustrating the several stages of the great labour, in a series of sketches, which we now present to our readers.

First, of the attempt to raise the stupendous vessel out of the sands. This was made on the 29th ult., by Mr. James Bremner, and his son, Mr. Alexander Bremner, civil engineers, who have favoured us with the following details:—

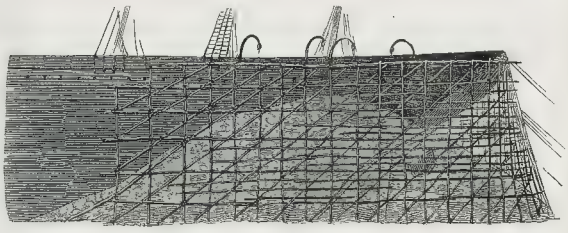
The ship lies on the north side of Dundrum Bay, her head in a north-westerly direction, with some falling towards the south or sea-side. About a mile without, are the rocks called the "Cow and Calf." To the eastward, is St. John's Point, with its Light-house, distant about three miles. At the south side of the Bay is the stupendous Slieve-dona, towering its lofty summit amongst the clouds. Beneath it lies the small town of Newcastle.

The first trial to raise the ship was made under the superintendence of Captain Claxton, whose beneficial watching during the winter, it will be remembered, was of such great service. Having boiler-builders on board, Captain Claxton ordered the upper cargo deck to be tightened, and shored or supported from the deck above; as well as all the coal bunkers tightened. As soon as these preparations were completed, and when the weather and tides became favourable, the ship rose four feet, and was maintained at that height by pulling her to one side, and filling in stones at the other side. Additional attempts of the same kind were made; but the ship being raised to the height described, lost her former buoyancy, and, consequently, could not rise higher.

Mr. James Bremner, C.E., with his son Alexander Bremner, C.E., were then sent for, and they devised and recommended the following scheme:—

First, Twenty large boxes were made, to contain upwards of thirty tons of sand each. Ten boxes were suspended on each side by strong chains, which went over pullies in the upper part of large vertical baulks of timber, the same chain passing through pullies attached to the side of the ship, thus doubling the weight of sand in the boxes, less the friction; and, it should be added, those boxes in the middle of the ship, opposite the engines, had four powers to each, to prevent straining the ship at that part.

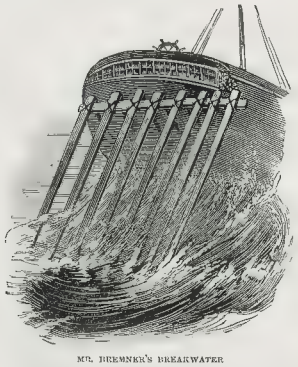
Very powerful levers were put to the fore-end, capable of lifting about 100 tons; and, along the sides opposite the large timbers, formerly on the ship, were also placed levers, capable of lifting about 200 tons each. In addition to this lifting power of boxes and levers, was applied screw-power, capable of lifting 160 tons. These screws were placed, near the hawse-holes, on a stout frame of timber, which was on immense end-wood supports.



ELEVATION OF CAPTAIN CLAXTON'S BREAKWATER.

The levers on the sea side of the ship were ballasted with chains, anchors, and parts of the engine; as also were those on the fore part. The sea had, therefore, little surface to strike against; while the levers on the land side of the ship were ballasted by a large iron boat filled with sand.

THE BOWS OF THE "GREAT BRITAIN."



MR. BREMNER'S BREAKWATER DASHED TO PIECES ON THE 9TH NOVEMBER

When the lifting power was about complete, on the 13th of July (spring tide), it was thought advisable, as the good season was passing, to make the first attempt; when, to the surprise of all on board, the ship lifted so rapidly, that the valves had to be opened to prevent her going up further.

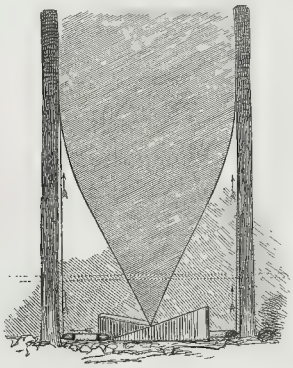
This first trial, it appears, was set about too prematurely; as sufficient preparations had not been made to retain the ship at the required height, consequently, on the receding of the tide, several of the boxes and baulks were injured.

To provide for maintaining the ship at the required height, some thousands of small piles were driven, reaching from the surface of the sand to that of the rock; and on these piles were laid foundations for vertical supports, which, by an ingenious contrivance, were made self-acting, so that as the ship rose the shores placed themselves.

THE "GREAT BRITAIN" STEAM-SHIP.

CUTTING THE TRENCH IN THE SAND

In addition to these shores, were many immense wedges, hauled in at the fore-keel and bilges; stones were also put under her with long shutes from the deck.



SECT. NO. 2.—THE BOWS, SHOWING HOW THE CROSS WEDGES WORK.

The gratifying result of all these preparations was, that, on Thursday, the 29th July, the ship was raised to the required height, so that the boiler-builders could get at the bottom to make it water-tight.

Among Mr. Mahony's Illustrations, the first shows the huge vessel as she appeared when beginning to rise.

The Engraving on the opposite page represents the busy scene of the men cutting a deep trench in the sand, at low water, from the stern of the vessel, out seaward.

To protect the stern of the ship from the gales of last winter, it became necessary to devise some means; and this was done by Messrs. Bremner, constructing a breakwater, which Mr. Mahony has sketched. It was composed of pieces of balk, of from 13 to 17 inches thick, and arranged in the manner shown in the cut; but, scarcely had this work been completed, when a fierce gale, on November 9th, in a moment laid this labour of man's hands prostrate, smashing the beams like so many reeds.

Subsequently, Captain Claxton designed his Breakwater, and submitted it, by order of the Directors, to Mr. Brunel, who approved of it highly; but, at the same time, suggested some important improvements, which were made, and found to answer the purpose. Captain Claxton, in its construction, as is usual in out-of-the-way places, had many difficulties to contend with, and had to try different sorts of timber, but found, in the end, that young beech-trees were preferable for their elasticity; and those persons who saw this Breakwater, when first finished, describe it as an interesting object, undulating with the mighty waves, like the trees of the forest in a gale of wind. It was not only a handsome object, but an exceedingly efficient one, as it protected the ship from many a winter storm, and ultimately became, towards its base, a solid mass: so that its removal had been an exceedingly difficult work. Mr. Mahony has sent two sketches of this Breakwater; one, the elevation, showing its height and length on the ships side, the manner of framing it, as also the portion filled with sand-bags and fagots, denoted by the dotted line; the faint line underneath indicating the stern of the ship; the masts, the portion protected by the Breakwater; and the line from the stern, the cable, &c., to keep her in place.

SECT. NO. 1.—THE BILGE WEDGES, AND HOW WORKED.

The second Illustration of Captain Claxton's Breakwater, at page 122, shows the foundation, with its distance from the Ship, and the means taken for keeping down the fagots at the commencement of the work, by placing all the spare chains, pieces of the ship's engines, and such dead weights as could be obtained from the stores, to the weight of from 70 to 80 tons, before it could be raised eight feet above the level of the foundation. Yet, with all this precaution, Captain Claxton assures us that from 80 to 100 bundles of fagots were washed away during the month of February, when the sea was most violent, and was constantly seen to wash over the ship's funnel. Captain Claxton adds that the Breakwater took above 5000 fascines in its construction. In the Engraving are shown the chains, and the pieces of machinery, and other dead weights: 1, chains and cables, made fast to propeller; 2, lines of ship; 3, sand-bags placed at the bottom of Breakwater and Ship; 4, stones, placed between uprights; 5, fagots; 6, cables, out from Breakwater.

Our Artist has next applied himself to the illustration of the means adopted for lifting the leviathan Ship, 4 dead weight of from 1600 to 1620 tons, and in which the Messrs. Bremner have been so pre-eminently successful. The "means and appliances" are shown in the following Sections:

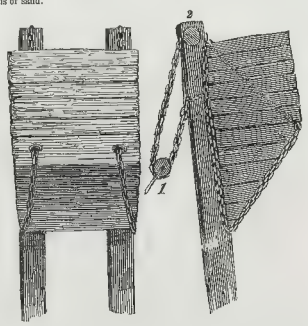
Sect. 1.—Showing the bilge wedges, and how worked. 1, the upright for the box to work on; 2, the Ship's side; 3, the wedge; 4, the rope passing over, at each side of the point; 5, platform for wedge to work on; 6, foundation stones.

Sect. 2.—Close by the Bows of the Ship, showing how the wedges crossed each other, and were worked from above, by a capstan, the arrows bending the upward movement of the rope. The dotted line shows the sand-line, and the basement, the stones driven by Captain Claxton and Mr. Bremner.

Sect. 3.—Means by which the shores raised and placed themselves securely in their proper positions, when the Ship had reached her intended height; all extremely simple in themselves, but, by no means, less ingenious. 1, Ship's side; 2, shore; 3, cleat, made fast to ship's side by two bolts; 4, cleats, to keep the preceding steady; 5, shoot for shore to work in; 6, piles driven home to rock, to secure the the foundation; the arrows marking the motion of the rope, worked by 7, from above.

Sect. 4. Showing the shoot for conducting stones under the Ship's bottom, as well as the rammer: 1, line of Ship's side; 2, upright; 3, shoot; 4, rammer, shod with iron; 5, men casting stones from above, into shoot, the arrows marking the rope's motion for working the rammer; 6, section of the Shoot, by which stones were conveyed under the bottom, and then rammed down, so as to form a foundation for after-work.

Next, are two views of the sand-boxes, no three of which are alike, as they have to be used afterwards as camels, to float the ship. In the Cut is shown how the chains passed through and around the boxes, as well as how they were placed 1, out of one of the ship's portholes—2, end of the balk: each box holds 20 tons of sand.

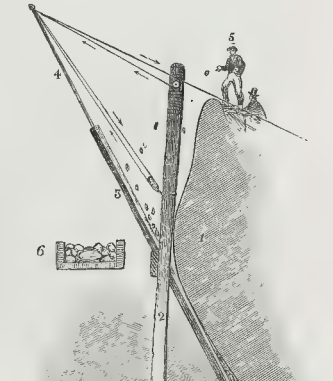


SIDE AND FRONT VIEW OF SAND-BOXES.

Lastly, are the Bows of the Ship, with the remains of the great lever under them, loaded with old anchors and other deadweights; the props fixed around the stern, when raised; and men removing the remains of Captain Claxton's Breakwater.

Our Artist relates that while the ship was rising, the rattling of the chains was very extraordinary. The men (riggers) shown at work in the last sketch, were brought in the Government steamer, Birkenhead, to assist in the great labour; there were 60 of them.

On Monday, the Birkenhead arrived in Kingstown harbour, from Dundrum Bay, and reported that the result of another experiment made on Saturday had



SECT. NO 4.—SHOOT, FOR CONDUCTING STONES UNDER SHIP'S BOTTOM.

SECT. NO. 3.—THE SHORES, AND HOW WORKED, SO AS TO FOLLOW THE RISING OF THE SHIP been unsuccessful, solely because the pumps were not sufficient to keep out the water when the vessel was up. She now lies in the same place; but another attempt will be made, with proved arrangements for pumping.

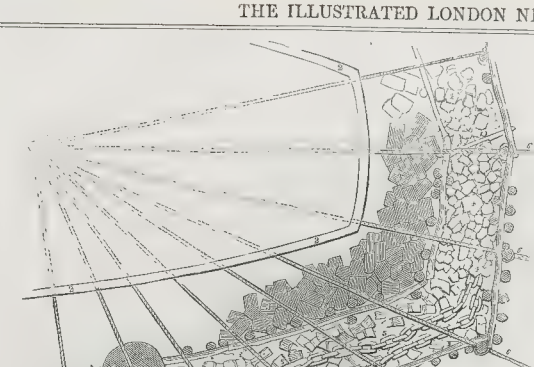
A false report soon reached Liverpool, that the Great Britain was afloat, and on her way to the Mersey; but, a letter from Captain Claxton, dated Dundrum Bay, August 14, 1847, runs thus:—

"No tide, only 12 feet 6; we want 13 feet 6; and tide-table gave it. Every exertion was made both by ourselves and her Majesty's ship. Her Majesty's people stand by us, and her ship returns on the 22nd. I cannot say enough in praise of their exertions. I beg to add, nothing can exceed Messrs. Bremner's exertions (father and son). They have been best this time by the elements. Mr. Bellamy we are extremely lucky in having, and his suggestions are most valuable. He stands by us with 56 men. Her Majesty's ship Birkenhead will be here on the 22d or 23d."

At Liverpool, the opinion is that the vast Ship will not be taken off till the high spring tides of the 27th and 28th of the present month, which will be about three feet higher than those just passed off.

In the meantime, our Illustrations explain the means by which it is hoped the Ship will ere long be floated.



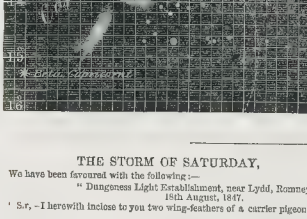
FOUNDATION OF THE BREAKWATER.

It was likewise reported that her Majesty would, in her excursion, visit the Great Britain; and Dundrum being but two hours' steaming from the Isle of Man, obtained credence for the rumour. It will, however, be seen by our Report of the Excursion, that the Royal Visit did not take place.

NEW PLANET.

In the annexed Chart the stars are laid down from Wolfius' map: those encircled by a ring were laid down by Mr. Hind, from actual observation by himself; and, therefore, the above represents the positions of the stars as they appear in the heavens, and among which Mr. Hind discovered the Planet.

The position of the Planet at the time of its discovery is indicated by the triangle encompassing it, and the arrow shows the direction of its motion.



The Planet was found in a search expressly devoted to the discovery of one, in the course of which Mr. Hind has laid down all the stars he saw, and made charts for himself—a work in itself of no little labour.

The places observed by Mr. Hind are as follows:—

Aug. 13th at 9h. 38m. 42s. P.M. Greenwich Time, the Right Ascension was	19h	57m	20·38s.
" " " North Polar Distance was	103°	21′	21·5″
Aug. 15th at 10h. 37m. 24s. " " the Right Ascension was	19h	57m	29·14s
" " " North Polar Distance was	103°	22′	27·4″
Aug. 16th at 9h. 32m. 28s. " " the Right Ascension was	19h	56m	28·39s
" " " North Polar Distance was	103°	29′	14·1″
Aug. 16th at 9h. 0m. 39s. " " the Right Ascension was	19h	55m	47·64s
" " " North Polar Distance was	103°	31′	4·3″

Mr. Bishop and Mr. Hind have fixed upon Iris as the name of the new Planet. J. G.

QUEEN VICTORIA AND ESPARTERO.—Ten or twelve days since Espartero made up his mind to quit England, in consequence of his reduced means, which rendered his taking up his residence in a cheaper country a matter of necessity. Such an intention having come to the knowledge of some of his English friends, they once came forward with offers of assistance, to enable him to remain in London, but which were declined by him. Amongst these friends was Lord Palmerston, whose offers were made, not as Minister, but as a private friend. Her Majesty's attention was also subsequently directed to this fact. The result was, that a yearly pension of £2000 was proposed to be conferred on the Duke of Victory, to enable him to reside in a country where he has met with so much respect and attention, until such time as he should be permitted to return to his country without being subjected to the degrading conditions attempted to be imposed upon him. This, also, was most respectfully declined by him, and from these facts, coupled with the following letter, communicating the gracious intentions of the Queen, it is said these words occur:—"Her Majesty Queen Victoria and her Majesty's Government, animated by sentiments of the most lively friendship towards the Queen Isabella II., would see, with the deepest regret, the first and the most distinguished friend of her Majesty's servants obliged to abandon England, otherwisistan to return to his native country with all the honour and dignity becoming him, and which are his due." The feeling of gratitude that this has awakened in the hearts of the Liberal party in Madrid, it would be difficult to give a just idea of.

THE STORM OF SATURDAY,

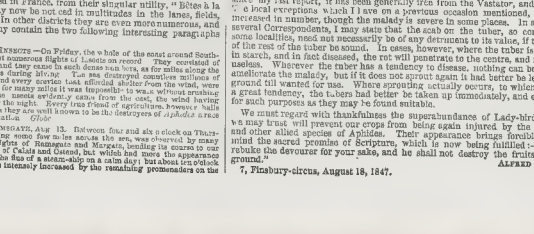
We have been favoured with the following:—

"Dungeness Light Establishment, near Lydd, Romney, Kent, August 14, 1847.

"Sir,—I herewith inclose to you two wing-feathers of a carrier pigeon, which struck this Light-House, on Sunday morning, the 15th instant, in case you should think it worth inserting in your paper. I can only presume that it lost itself in the severe storm of Saturday night.

"I am, Sir, your most obedient servant,

"ARTHUR WATSON, the Principal Officer."



THE POTATO DISEASE—IMPORTANT FLIGHT OF LADY-BIRDS.

THE wonderful and exquisite harmony of creation cannot fail to strike the most casual observer; for, by immutable laws, the balance between plants and animals, and even between the different animal and vegetable bodies themselves, is so preserved that all maintain their relative position and amount. If, from any cause, this balance is disturbed, or this harmony interfered with, it is but for a short period, when order is perfectly resumed. The plague of Aphides which has passed over the realms is a disturbance of the balance of nature; and, from their unusual excess, most vegetable productions have been threatened with destruction. A compensating power, however, has arisen, as countless legions of Lady-birds have appeared, and these have already nearly restored their normal conditions. These strangers, called in France, from their singular utility, "Bêtes à la Vierge," "Bêtes à Dieu," may now be met out in multitudes in the lanes, fields, and hedges round London. In other districts they are even more numerous, and the Globe and Times of Monday contain the two following interesting paragraphs upon the subject.

EXTRAORDINARY FLIGHT OF INSECTS.—On Friday, the whole of the coast around Southend was visited by one of the most numerous flights of insects on record. They consisted of at least five species of lady-bird, and they came in such countless hosts, as for miles along the coast to resemble a swarm of bees during hiving. The sea destroyed countless millions of them, the grass and hedgerows, and every exertion was afforded to further the wind, were nevertheless beneath the tread. The insects evidently came from the east, the wind having veered round to that point during the night. Every true friend of agriculture, however balls of dirt the most injurious to vegetation. Globe

SINGULAR PHENOMENON.—RAMSGATE, Aug. 13. Between four and six o'clock on Thursday evening, a long cloud, reaching some few inches across the sea, was observed by many hundred spectators from the heights of Ramsgate and Margate, bending its course to our southern coast, from the direction of Calais and Ostend, but which had more the appearance of a long column of smoke from the fire of a steam-ship on a calm day; but about ten o'clock in the evening the excitement was intensely increased by the reminding promenaders on the several walks and cliffs of the above places being literally covered with Lady-birds. Then, many of these persons who had been most exposed, on their return to their homes, found themselves not only enveloped with this compact little shell insect, but so regularly dotted on the clothes, that it had the appearance of a scale armour. At an early hour in the morning, the whole of the line of coast was found to be covered with them to the great annoyance of all parties; and in order to give the reader a correct idea of the extent and quantity of these unwelcome settlers, five baskets were swept from the Margate Pier, and nearly the same from that of Ramsgate Harbour. To walk on them might be readily compared to walking on snow on a frosty day. The locality whence they first took flight remains at present unknown. Times

These legions of Lady-birds must have required for food millions of Aphides. These millions of Aphides must have fed upon and damaged millions of plants, but the locality of the damage still remains a mystery unsolved.

With respect to the Potato plant, it affords no small pleasure to record that, since my last report, it has been generally free from the Visitator, and healthy. One local exceptions which I have on a previous occasion mentioned, have not increased in number, though the malady is severe in some places. In answer to several Correspondents, I may state that the scab on the tuber, so common in some localities, need not necessarily be of any detriment to its value, if the tissue of the rest of the tuber be sound. In cases, however, where the tuber is deficient in starch, and in fact diseased, the rot will penetrate to the centre, and render it useless. Wherever the tuber has a tendency to disease, nothing can be more ameliorate the malady, but if it does not sprout again it had better be left in the ground till wanted for use. Where sprouting actually occurs, to which there is a great tendency, the tubers had better be taken up immediately, and employed for such purposes as they may be found suitable.

We must regard with thankfulness the superabundance of Lady-birds, which we may trust will prevent our crops from being again injured by the Visitator and other allied species of Aphides. Their appearance brings forcibly to our mind the sacred promise of Scripture, which is now being fulfilled:—"I will rebuke the devourer for your sake, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground."

ALFRED SMEE.

7, Finsbury-circus, August 18, 1847.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—A very moderate supply of English wheat—chiefly of the present year's growth—has come to hand here this week. Still, however, owing to the large importations from abroad, and the low prices at which American flour is selling, the demand was in a very sluggish state, at in some few instances, a slight decline in the quotations. There was a very large quantity of foreign wheat on offer. Selected qualities were mostly disposed of at full prices, but all other kinds were 1s per quarter lower. The barley trade was in a very sluggish state. Foreign grinding parcels were somewhat cheaper than on Monday. In malt, next to nothing was doing, and large parcels might have been purchased on easier terms. The oat trade was excessively dull, at a fall in value of 1s per quarter. Beans, peas, and Indian corn, as well as flour, were a mere drug.

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 1710; barley, 70; oats, 280 quarters. Irish: wheat, ——; barley ——; oats, —— Foreign: wheat 22,470, barley 4090; oats, 37,010. Flour, 5,030 sacks and 15,870 barrels; and, 2500 quarters.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 56s to 61s; ditto, white, 62s to 65s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 56s to 59s, ditto, white, 61s to 67s; rye, 40s to 43s; grund ng barley, 24s to 29s; distilling, 30s to 32s; malting ditto, —s to —s; Lincoln and Norfolk m lt, 68s to 71s; brown ditto, 64s to 66s; Kingston and Ware, 68s to 72s; chevalier, 72s to 77s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire red ones, 56s to 59s; potato ditto, 52s to 54s. Youghal and Cork, black, 35s to 38s; ditto, white, 39s to 43s; ne k beans, new, 44s to 46s; ditto, old, —s to —s; grey peas, 36s to 38s; maple 38s to 40s; white, —s to —s; harlers, 40s to 45s, per quarter. Town-made flour, 48s to 50s; norfolk, 42s to 46s; Lincoln and Yorkshire, 40s to 42s, per 280lbs. Foreign.—Danzig red wheat, 4 to —s, white, 5 to —s; barley, 2 to —s, oats, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 37s to 39s; Baltic, —s to —s, per barrel

The Seed Market.—A very dull inquiry has been experienced for all kinds of seeds since our last, at last little alteration in the quotations.

Linseed, English, sowing, 50s to 60s; Baltic, crushing, 42s to 43s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 40s to 42s. Rapeseed, 35s to 38s per quarter. Coriander, 18s to 21s per cwt. Brown Mustard-seed, 9s to 10s; white ditto, 8s to 10s. Tares, 5s 6d to 6s 6d per bushel. English Rapeseed, new, £21 to £23, per last of 10 quarters. Linseed cakes, English, £13 0s to £13 10s; ditto, foreign, £9 15s to £ 0 per 1000. Rapeseed cakes, £7 10s to £9 0s per ton. Canary, 60s to 64s, per quarter. English Clover-seed, red, 4 to —; extra, —s to —; white, —s to —; extra, —s to —. Foreign, red, 2 to —; extra, —s to —; white, —s to —; extra, —s per cwt.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread, in the metropolis, are from 8d to 9d; of household ditto, 7d to 7½d per 4lb loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 56s 10d; barley, 40s 7d; oats, 29s 1d; rye, 40s 2d; beans, 54s 9d; peas, 42s 0d

The Six Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 75s 3d; barley, 42s 9d; oats, 32s 6d; rye, 56s 4d; beans, 53s 4d peas, 69s 11d

Teas.—At public sale, 7600 packages of tea have been offered this week. About 4000 found buyers, at a decline in the quotations of gunpowder and hyson of from 2d to 4d per lb. Privately, only a moderate business is doing, as but little alteration in the general figures.

Sugar.—Most kinds of raw sugar, though in large supply, are in good request, at full prices. Brown lumps are selling at 54s, and standard ditto 55s per cwt.

Coffee.—This market is rather inactive. Prices, however, we have no material alteration to notice.

Rice.—All qualities move off slowly, on somewhat easier terms.

Provisions.—On the whole, a good business is doing in Irish butter, yet Cork and Limerick qualities must be considered 1s per cwt. lower. Carlow, Tunnel, and Kilkenny, landed, 90s to 93s; for ships: Cork, 85s to 92s; and Limerick and Waterford, 87s to 89s per cwt. Dutch butter has advanced from 2s to 4s per cwt. Fine brands are quoted at 96s to 98s per cwt. English butter is dull, at barely late rates. Fine Dorset, 98s to 100s; middling do, 94s to 96s; fine Devon, 96s to 98s per cwt; and fresh, 9s to 12s per dozen pounds. Prime bacon is in good request at 70s to 80s; and heavy, 76s to 84s per cwt. Irish bacon are firm at 70s to 72s 6d. Other kinds of provisions, including cheese, are quite as dear as last advised.

Tallow.—The market is in a very dull state, and prices are with difficulty supported. P.Y.C., on the spot, is 48s to 48s 3d; and for forward delivery, 47s per cwt. Town tallow, 45s 6d, net cash

Oils.—There is a moderate business doing in most qualities, at about stationary prices.

Rum.—The article moves off slowly; yet the importers are firm, and will not sell, except at very full prices

Hops (Friday).—Owing to the prevailing damp weather, the market here for all kinds of hops is much lower than of late, and, in some instances, the quotations have an upward tendency. The plantation accounts are not so favourable as last week, and the duty is called to be £180,000 to £185,000

Sussex pockets, 45 10s to £4 5s; Weald of Kent ditto, £4 0s to £5 5s; Mid and East Kent ditto, £5 5s to £7 7s per cwt.

Coals (Friday).—West Hetton, 17s 9d; Brown's Deanery, 17s 9d, Kelloe, 18s 9d; Gosforth, 17s 9d; Redmond, 18s 3d; and Seweard, 18s 6d per ton.

Smithfield (Friday).—Our market is to-day very moderately supplied with beasts as to number, and exceedingly deficient as to quality. On the whole, the beef trade was in a very inactive state, at but little, if any, alteration in prices. There were on sale 220 beasts, 2370 sheep and lambs and 280 calves from Holland and Germany; as also, 120 Scots from Scotland. The supply of sheep was by no means good; and the primest Downs were firm, as early Monday's currencies, and at which a good clearance was effected. Prime Down lambs moved off steadily; otherwise, the lamb trade was heavy, at late rates. Owing to the large supply of calves, the veal trade was dull, and late figures even with difficulty supported. In pigs, next to nothing was doing. Milch cows realised, at from £16 to £18 each, including their small calf

For Hs. to rink the offal:—Coarse and inferior beasts, 2s 2d to 2s 6d; second quality ditto, 2s 8d to 3s 0d; prime large exen, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; prime Scots, &c., 4s 2d to 4s 4d; coarse and inferior sheep, 3s 10d to 4s 2d, second quality ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; prime coarse-woolled ditto, 4s 8d to 4s 10d; prime South Down ditto, 5s 0d to 5s 2d; large coarse calves, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; prime small ditto, 4s 8d to 5s 0d; large hogs, 4s 0d to 4s 6d; neat small porkers, 4s 8d to 4s 10d. Lambs, 5s 6d to 6s 2d. Suckling calves, 18s to 26s; and quarter old store pigs, 16s to 18s each. Beasts, 843; cows, 145; sheep and lambs, 11,940; calves, 683; pigs, 280.

A report ex Lord Leadenhall (Friday).—We had a very inactive trade here this morning, at barely stationary prices.

For Hs. by the carcase:—Inferior beef, 3s 0d to 3s 2d; middling ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; prime large ditto, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; prime small ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; large pork, 3s 4d to 4s 4d; inferior mutton, 3s 10d to 4s 2d; middling ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; prime ditto, 4s 8d to 5s 2d; veal, 3s 10d to 4s 10d; small pork, 4s 8d to 4s 10d; lamb, 4s 10d to 6s 0d ROBT HERBERT

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

Comparative tranquility has reigned in the City during the past week, no new failures having occurred. Money, however, continues as scarce as before, the discount houses allowing five per cent. upon the understanding of a short notice previously to withdrawal. Every new account from the home districts speaks of the abundance of the harvest, while American accounts are equally favourable. The great hindrance to the renewal of business is now attributable to the commencing lines of railway; nor can any more favourable state of things be anticipated, unless legislative interference put some check upon their proceeding.

The English Market opened on M nday without firmness, and a decline of ¼ per cent in Consols was shortly registered, closing at 87¾ to ⅞. The opening price on Tuesday was ⅛ lower, but a rally improved the price to 87⅞, at which quotation a market closed. On Wednesday prices opened more firmly, marking 87¾ to ⅞ for the Account, but a decline of ⅛ occurred previously to closing. Greater animation was perceptible on Thursday, but without any alteration in prices. Exchequer Bills have been at a discount, but have since improved. Bank Stock is firm, without any material variation, the market closing buoyantly at—Three per Cent. Reduced Annuities, 87¾; Three per Cent. Consols Annuities, 87; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent. Annuities, 89; Long Annuities, to expire Jan. 1860, 9; Ditto 30 years, Jan. 5, 1860, 8⅞; India Bonds, £1000, 3 dis.; Ditto under £1,000, 3 dis.; Consols for Account, 87¼; Exchequer Bills, 5p.

Business in the Foreign Market has been on the most limited scale. Portuguese has declined from 27 to 29; Monday's price to 27½, the closing price, the unsettled state of affairs in that country still continuing unfavourable to its financial state. Spanish continues scarcely dealt in, but Mexican slightly advanced on the receipt of the last American news. The other securities have not materially varied. The closing prices are—Chilian Bonds, 6 per Cent., 90; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cent., 57; Ditto, 5 per Cent., 105½; Mexican, Five per Cent., 1846, 18½; Ditto, Account, 18½; Portuguese Bonds, Four per Cent., 27½; Spanish, Five per Cent., 1840, 20½; Ditto, Four per Cent. Certificates, 8½.

The Share Market continues heavy with every appearance of decline. London and Birmingham has receded about £6 per share on the announcement of a reduction of ½ per cent on the half yearly dividend. London, Brighton, and South Coasts have receded, having also reduced the dividend. The market closes with considerable heaviness, at the following prices:—Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Dudley, 16; Bristol and Exeter Thirds, 1; Caledonian, 32½; Eastern Counties, 15½ x.d; Do. Perpetual 8 per Cent, No. 1, ½; Do. York Extension, 6¼; Great Northern, 3½; Ditto, London and York, 1¼; Great Western, 109; Ditto, Half Shares, 60; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 18¼; Ditto, Fifths, 23½; Ditto, New, £17, 9¼; Leeds and Bradford, 92½; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 48¾; London and North Western, 163; Ditto, Fifths, 14½; London and South Western, 59½; Ditto, New, Quarter Shares, 8⅞, 47; Ditto, New, £50, 33½; Ditto, Scrip, £30, 5; Ditto, ditto, £40, 3½, Manchester and Leeds, 92; Do., ½ Shares, 44½; Do., ¼ Shares, 16½; Midland, 118½; Ditto, £40 Shares, 44½; Ditto, £50 Shares, 8½; Midland Consol. Bristol and Birmingham, 6 per cent, 121; Newcastle and Berwick, 26½; Ditto, New, 7½; North British, Quarters, 5½; North Staffordshire, 9½; Preston and Wyre, 3½; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 8½; South Devon, 2½; South Eastern and Dover, 24½; Ditto, No. 1, 19½; South Wales, 9½; West Riding Union, ⅝ dis.; Windsor, Staines, and South Western, 2½ pm.; York and Newcastle, 34½ x. d.; Ditto, Extension, 14½; Ditto, Preference, 10½; York and North Midland, 17 x. d., Ditto, Extension, 3½; Ditto, East and West Riding Extension, 2½; Boulogne and Amiens, 1¼; Dutch Rhenish, 2½; Northern of France, 10½; Paris and Strasbourg, 3½; Tours and Nantes, 2½

SATURDAY MORNING.—The English Market was inanimate yesterday, the previous day's prices forming the current quotations. Consols closed at 87½ to ⅝ for Money, and 87⅞ for Time. In the Foreign and Share Market no event of importance occurred.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 17

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY LORDS-LIEUTENANT.

Royal Gloucestershire Regiment of Hussar Yeomanry: The Right Hon. Charles John Viscount Bernard to be Cornet. Gentlemen Cadets to be Cornets: Gerald Burnaby Gosset, Burnaby Queen's Own Royal Regiment of Staffordshire Yeomanry Cavalry: Lieut. Sir Francis Edward Scott, Bart., to be Major, vice Fenton, who retires. Thomas Dickson Wagster to be Captain, vice Peel. Cornet Robert Garnett to be Lieutenant, vice Webster; Frederick Peel to be Cornet, vice Garnett.

BANKRUPTS

W H TITTLER, Guildford-street, Russell-square, tailor. G GALE, Wimbledon, corn-chandler C LEWIS, late Quadrant, tin-plate manufacturer. T SMITH, Temple, Bristol, timber-merchant. W WEAVE, Manchester, joiner and builder. S TREWICK, Jun., Newcastle-upon-Tyne, draper. R GIBSON, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, bookseller. W J HOLMES and W. PARNELL, Edgbaston, wine-merchants. J. YATES, Reddish, Worcestershire, victualler. E.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS

G and M. HENDERSON, Edinburgh, dry-merchants. A. MACNAIR, Glasgow, commission agent. G MILLER and Co., Glasgow, muslin and lace-manufacturers. ANDERSON BROTHERS, Glasgow, clothiers. J PARIS, Glasgow, bookbinder. J ALEXANDER, Kelso, draper.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 20.

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY LORDS LIEUTENANT.

Duke of Leinster's Own Regiment of Yeomanry Cavalry: Right Hon. Francis Earl of Ellesmere to be Lieutenant-Colonel; R T Dorrell, Esq., to be Major. Troops: Troop J. Redgrave to be Lieutenant; Hon A Egerton to Cornet.

Royal Bucks or King's Own Regiment of Militia: B. Davidson to be Ensign.

2nd Regiment of Royal Bucks Yeomanry Cavalry: H. F. Nash to be Cornet.

ADMIRALTY, AUG 6.

The following promotions have this day taken place, consequent upon the death of Vice-Admiral Randall Robert Litchfield:—

Vice-Admiral of the White James Carthew to be Vice-Admiral of the Red.

Vice-Admiral of the Blue Christopher John Williams Needham to be Vice Admiral of the White

Rear-Admiral of the Red Sir Hugh Pigot, Knt., K.C.B., K.C.H., to be Vice Admiral of the Blue.

Rear-Admiral of the White Hon. George Pocklet to be Rear-Admiral of the Red

Rear-Admiral of the Blue James Murray Gordon to be Rear-Admiral of the White.

Captain Edward Henry Annesley to be Rear-Admiral of the Blue

WHITEHALL, AUGUST 15.

The Lord Chancellor has appointed Robert Christie, the younger, of Bath, in the county of Somerset, Gentleman, to be a Master Extraordinary in the High Court of Chancery.

BANKRUPTS

J. BUNBY, Southampton, brick-maker. C. E. NEATE, Hammersmith, coal and corn-merchant. E. M. TUPPLADELL, and J. CRUDDY, Portsea, woollen-drapers. T. TOVEY, Charing-cross, coal-merchant. J. BIRLEY, Bolton-by-Bowland, cotton-spinner. W. BUSHTON, Marchmont-street, Brunswick-square, grocer. W. ARMSTRONG, Norwich, draper. [illegible] Newcastle-upon-Tyne, grocer. J. STOKE, Dartford, paper-manufacturer. W. RAWSON, Sheffield, wholesale-spirit-merchant. W. GODDALL, Heath, Skircoat, Halifax, [illegible] and H. HATER, Bishop, Chesham, cloth merchants. J. REILLY, Wolverhampton, shoe-[illegible]fordshire, grocer. J. HILLMAN, Worcester, grocer. H. W. ROBERTS, Liverpool, builder. H. WESTON, Manchester, music-seller and pianoforte-maker.

G. ROBERTSON, Glasgow, printer. J. WALKINSHAW, Glasgow, paper-mak[illegible] J. MURRAY, Abernethy, Perthshire, miller. J. MUTRIE and W. MUIRIE, Glasgow [illegible] manufacturers. J. PATRICSON, Alloa, merchant. H. DOIG, Greenock, perfumer.

BIRTHS

In Portland place, the lady of John Bentley, Esq., of a daughter.—At Mulgrave Castle, the Countess of Mulgrave, of a son.—At Sydenham, Mrs. A. Leith Sotheby, of a daughter.—At Leeds House, Dorchester, the lady of George Cartwright, of a daughter.—At Burnham, Somersetshire, the lady of [illegible], M.P., of a son.—At St. Ubes, Portugal, on the 15th ult., the lady of J. M. Gallowe[illegible] of a daughter.—At Spring Park, Addington, Surrey, Mrs. Hewitt Hards, of a son.—In Montagu-square, the lady of Captain Mark Wood, Coldstream Guards, of a s[illegible]

MARRIAGES

At Lyme Regis, D. Lionel Mackinnon, Esq., to Charlotte Lavinia, third daughter of Major-General Dudley Hill, C.B.—At St. George's, Hanover-square, James Morrow, Esq., to Georgiana Ann, second daughter of Thomas Flow, Esq.—At the Savarian Chapel, Warwick-street, Regent-street, Gaetano Gardini, to Annetta, eldest daughter of Signor Tamburini.—At St. Mark's, Kennington, George Wyatt, Esq., to Emily Jane, third daughter of Thomas Percival Bingham, Esq., both of Effingham, Surrey.—Captain Pelham, R.E., to Emily, only daughter of the late Professor Malkus.—At St. Martin's-in-the-Fields Mr. William Gripwood Wake, to Mary, youngest daughter of Mr. John W. Parker.—At Hawkhurst Church, Kent, Mr. H. Farmer, to Selina, eldest daughter of Rev. Susannah Brassey-[illegible], only child of Mrs. Pilkington, of the former place, and of the late Mr. Jas. Brassey-[illegible], of Chelmsford.

DEATHS

At Stirling Castle, N.B., [illegible] Archibald Christie, K.C.H., Deputy Governor, for many years Commandant of Chatham Garrison, and Colonel of the 1st Royal Veteran Battalion—in his [illegible] year.—At Hull, [illegible] Esq., late Robert [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[

SCENE FROM "LA DONNA DEL LAGO," AT THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT-GARDEN.

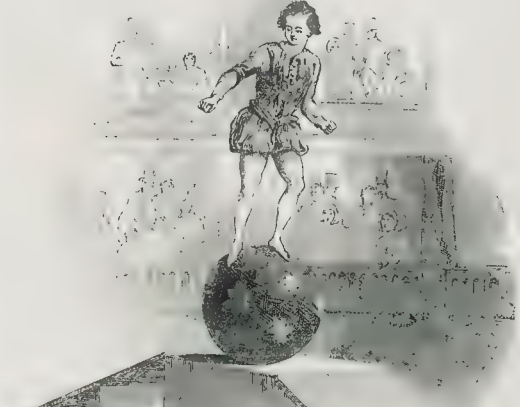
Bertin, who plucks a branch of laurel from a mystic tree overhanging her curtain abode. She conveys them to her coral palace, but, finally, pardons them. Plunkett danced with grace and extraordinary agility, and Cassili's ingenious groupings were much applauded.

On Thursday night Mozart's "Nozze di Figaro" was given with extraordinary enthusiasm. The house was a complete overflow. The encores were for the overture, Marini in his spirited singing of "Non più andrai," Alboni in her divine rendering of "Voi che sapete," Grisi and Tamburini in the duo "Crudel' perche!" and Grisi and Steffanoni in their charming interpretation of "Sull' aria," the letter duo. Marini was also much applauded in "Se vuol ballare," and the air "Aprite un po." He acted with great vivacity. Nothing could be more perfect than Tamburini's finished acting and singing of the Count. Lavia, in the fine tenor song of Basilio, "In quest'anno," richly deserved the plaudits bestowed upon his exertions. Rover's conscientious and artistical Bartolo, and Polonini's capital drunken gardener, contributed to the general amusement. Madame Bellini, in the duo with Grisi, "Via resti servita," was quite up to the mark, and it narrowly escaped an encore; Grisi's vivacity quite delighting the auditory. Madame Steffanoni gave her two airs of "Porgi amore," and "Dove sono," very chastely; with more finish they would have been unexceptionable. Alboni was full of joyousness, and the frolics of the Page, were given with evident abandon. The two stupendous finales were gloriously executed. Grisi, Alboni, Steffanoni, Tamburini, Marini, Rovere, Lavia, &c., were twice called before the curtain; and then an ovation of hearty cheering was bestowed on Costa, the Conductor, who richly merited the distinction.

The Subscription Season will terminate this evening with Rossini's "Semiramide," but on Tuesday, Mozart's "La Donna del Lago," will be given at playhouse prices.

VAUXHALL

The clever boy, Loisset, whose performance in the ring, at Vauxhall Gardens, we noticed a few weeks ago, is here represented in one of his most singular feats that of rolling a ball up and down a sort of bridge by the action of his feet, he standing upon it all the time. We remember, some time back, a man who stood upon a tub in a similar manner, rolling it along under him, and even coming down some stairs on it; but, Loisset's performance is more remarkable inasmuch as the direction in which the ball can be driven is universal. His engagement has now terminated; but he has been succeeded by other wonderful persons of novel accomplishments—the most entertaining being two brothers, who lie on their backs, on a table, and dance two ornamental globes on their feet in the air, changing them from one to the other—spinning them, and whirling them round their legs in a very ludicrous manner.



VAUXHALL GARDENS.—THE BALL FEAT

ADELPHI.

This favourite house has been during the week filled to o'erflowing; the performances keeping up an unbroken round of mirth and laughter. This must be warm work in August; but peal upon peal, nay, scream upon scream, succeed each other. The Irish impudence of Rory O'More provokes the laugh to a simmering point; then comes the broad farce of Miss Woolgar and Mr. Wright, in "How to Settle Accounts with your Laundress," to set the house in a roar, and over they boil, until their handkerchiefs are "wringing-wet;" the green boots and the water-butt continue almost insupportably provocative; the genuine manœuvring of the Laundress, and the impudent swagger of the Tailor, by turns changed to vexation and fright, are capitally sustained; all proving, by the way, the skill of the author in producing, out of materials by no means new, unexpected associations, which are the master-spring of laughter. The concluding piece, "Out on the Sly," is scarcely so droll as its predecessor, though it is a variety of the same class. Both turn upon the contretemps incident to middle life, affording abundant pleasantry on the stage, and, by no means, improbabilities to the audience themselves. This is the philosophy of the Adelphi fun, which keeps so many audiences in distillation, and then sends them home to cool, over "their oysters and their beer," with a better sense of retributive justice, as shadowed forth in broad farce.

As regards the theatrical world remains perfectly stagnant. There are no new features in the bills of those houses still open; nor are any new pieces even underlined. SADLER'S WELLS alone is stirring, and will open on Monday with a play of Shakspeare's, under the direction of Mr. Phelps, as heretofore. Mr. and Mrs. Keeley have been making the inhabitants of the transpontine districts laugh more than is proper this close weather, at the SURREY; and Shakspeare's House, at the SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS, is really a rival, in point of excitement, to the one at Stratford-upon-Avon.

But, though all is so tranquil connected with the theatres, just at present, there will be enough excitement after October; and if people just at present are puzzled where to go on an evening, for dearth of amusement, they will be equally confused by multiplicity when the winter season shall have set in. The HAYMARKET and PRINCESS' will make legitimacy their cheval de bataille; the LYCEUM will go in for comedy and costume; the OLYMPIC and ADELPHI as before, for drama and farce; and M. Jullien will give promenade concerts until close upon Christmas. He has secured Mr. Grieve as his scenic artist; this is a great point, especially where perfection in the mise en scène is intended to be a feature.

MUSIC.

GLOUCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL.—We have great pleasure in being enabled to supply some early details respecting the 124th gathering of the three choirs of Gloucester, Worcester, and Hereford, for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the clergy, in the three dioceses. The meeting will take place on Tuesday, September 21st, and three following days. The stewards are the Marquis of Worcester, the Hon. Captain F. Berkeley, M.P., Sir J. Dean Paul Bart, H. H. Hartley, Esq., J. Ackers, Esq., W. P. Price, Esq., Dr. Ellerton, Dr. Evans, Rev J. N. Proven, Rev. T. Huntingford, and the Rev. F. T. J. Bayley. Mr. Arnott, the organist of the Cathedral and the conductor of the festival, has already engaged the incomparable contralto, Mdlle. Alboni; the great basso, Herr Standigl; and our distinguished English artistes, Miss Dolby, the Misses Williams, Mrs. Wales, Messrs. Lockey, T. Williams, Weiss, &c. On the first morning, in the course of divine service, will be performed Handel's "Dettingen Te Deum." Dr. Boyce's Anthem, "Blessed is he," and one of Handel's Coronation Anthems ordained to act. The second and third Concerts will be wholly miscellaneous. The band will be numerous and complete, principally selected from the orchestra of the Royal Italian Opera, Covent-Garden; besides the local players resident in the three choirs. The chorus will be upwards of 300 voices, a large proportion of them having been chosen from the different choral societies in the metropolis, and the remainder from the various provincial choirs. Handel's "Messiah" and Mendelssohn's "Elijah." Mr. Townshend Smith and Mr. Done, the organists of Hereford and Worcester Cathedrals, will preside at the organ and pianoforte. The fine old organ in the Cathedral has been very considerably enlarged by the introduction of upwards of a thousand additional pipes, giving an immense increase of power. The work has been done by Mr. H. Willis, organ builder, of London. Gloucester having direct railroads from Bristol, Cheltenham, Birmingham, London, &c., now will present to the amateurs in these and adjacent towns admirable facilities for attending the performances.

MUSICAL TOURS.—Two parties will visit the provinces at the close of the season, composed of artists belonging to the Royal Italian Opera: one will comprise Grisi, Signor Mario, and Signor Tamburini; Mr. J. L. Hatton being the accompanyist, and will also be one of the singers: the other consists of Alboni, Mdlle. Corbari, and Signor Rovere (the basso comico); Mr. Lindsay Sloper being the solo pianist. The last mentioned party will be at Ipswich on the 27th, and Bury St. Edmund's on the 28th. The former will visit Cheltenham on the 26th, bath on the 30th, and Bristol on the 31st; Exeter September 1, and Brighton September 3. We understand, after going to other places not yet settled, that these two musical parties will be combined at the close of the tour, at concerts, in Liverpool and Manchester.

THE YOUTHFUL VIOLINIST, ALEXANDER RANCHERATE.—This wonderful child, who plays the violin with his left hand, is a native of Vienna. He made his début at HERTZ'S Rooms, and executed a solo (Mori), a duet (Mayseder), a trio (Beethoven), and a duo serenade, by R. Kuffner, in a style quite wonderful for a boy only eight years of age.

Letters from New York state that Mr. and Mrs. Edward Seguin, accompanied by a tenor, Mr. Arthurson, who studied in Italy, are making profitable musical tours. An engagement was offered to Mr. E. Seguin, and his cara sposa, for high popularity in America.

Mr. Ory, the violinist, and Madame Ory, the pianiste, have left town to pass the season in Brighton. A Morning Concert was given yesterday, at the room of Her Majesty's Theatre, for the benefit of the Choral Department, at which the leading artists sang, but we must defer our notice until next week.

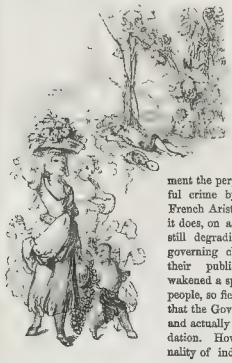
The Fama of Milan reports highly of the singing of Mdlle. Favanti (Miss Edwards) at the Torino Opera House (Teatro d'Angennes), in "Conserenella," Zoraida in the "Barbiere," and Amina in the "Somnambula." This artiste is now in London, but will shortly return to Italy to fulfil her engagements.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand aforesaid.—SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 278.—Vol. XI.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, AUGUST 28, 1847. [Sixpence.

MORALS AND POLITICS.



NO ONE can foresee when a system is rotten from whence the blow will come that is to lay it prostrate. When the forest is dry and withered, the smallest spark may raise the conflagration that is to devour it.

At the present moment the perpetration of a dreadful crime by a member of the French Aristocracy, following, as it does, on a series of lesser, but still degrading, offences in the governing class of France, or their public advocates, has wakened a spirit of hatred in the people, so fierce in its expression, that the Government is alarmed, and actually trembles to its foundation. How is it that the criminality of individuals, which elsewhere does not involve the credit or the policy of the Rulers, does in France so dangerously affect them? Why does the midnight murder of the Rue St. Honoré spread consternation in the Tuileries? There is no doubt that it does so, for the French journals make it the ground of strictures on the general social morality of the upper section of French society. It is no English manifestation of innate hostility, grasping at anything to lower the character of a rival; no Pharasaical assumption on our part of moral superiority, thanking God that we are not as other men or nations; the facts and opinions presented us for comment spring from the midst of the polished and educated section of the French people, and are furnished by Frenchmen themselves.

Disappointment and the bitterness of hopes deceived require very light causes to draw forth violent expressions of them; and that the political change effected by the Revolution of 1830 has not produced the expected results, no one will dispute. From the moment Louis Philippe ascended the throne his first object has been to secure the succession to his dynasty; his next to provide for his family in the narrowest sense of the term, by securing to its different members allowances and dotations. To these two things all else has been sacrificed; all the high and sacred duties of a Sovereign have been neglected. Support of some kind being necessary, and his policy not being such as to win it, it has been purchased by admitting the electors, who are a few thousands, to share the taxes paid by the people, who are thirty-five millions. From the base to the summit it was the same. A sordid, material, bought-and-paid for influence, has been nearly all that authority has rested on. The one single merit that can be ascribed to the French King is, that he has now for the better part of twenty years, restrained a people from war who are intoxicated with the mere name of Glory. For that Europe is indebted to him; but we fear that even this virtue has been the wisdom of selfishness. Peace was a necessity to him and his family policy; but, could he have gained his ends better by war, he would have as little scrupled to sacrifice the lives of a million of Frenchmen as Napoleon himself. He has fostered a war "cry" when it suited him; and in the fever of such a madness, the people blindly allowed him to surround the capital with a line of forts—that were not built against another Holy Alliance.

And now, looking back on almost a generation of the government of the Charter, what do Frenchmen behold? No one internal reform is possible; Ministry after Ministry has risen and fallen, and the efforts of all have been to repress freedom of speech, of action, of progress. The press has directed the public mind almost exclusively to questions of foreign policy, feeding old passions and prejudices to a pitch of mischievous absurdity; all France has hung on what other nations were doing and saying, instead of thinking what it could do itself. A miserable squabble in an island in the Pacific with an English Consular officer, absorbed all energies for something like a year. The idea that France was predominant in every Cabinet of Europe except its own, was flattering to the national pride; and it was told so often and long enough. In fact, France is just in the position of the over-active meddler who, perpetually engrossed by the business of every body else, is only roused to an attention to his own affairs, by finding his trade decaying, his revenue deficient, enormous debts inevitable, and his chief clerks making free with the contents of the till. The Government and its system are to blame for most of this; the Press has been so chained as to have a comparative freedom only in one direction. It was quite free to abuse England, for instance, through all moods and tenses; but if it spoke of internal improvement, political change, or hinted a fault with the existing system, there were seizures of papers, and fine and imprisonment for the "able Editors." The result has been, that its internal affairs have gone from bad to worse, in the hands of men, some of whom are proved to be vulgarly dishonest and corrupt, more of whom are suspected of being so, which is more fatal; they, too, were members of the Peerage, and now another crime darker and more fearful has driven men to ask who and what are these who govern us? Thus a wild, indiscriminating hatred of all the higher ranks of French society seems to rage in the bulk of the people, and every crime that degrades the wealthy, the official and the governing classes, is hailed with a ferocious exultation by the populace. The moral depravity will render the political retribution more easy.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO SCOTLAND.—THE ARRIVAL AT FORT WILLIAM.—(SEE PAGE 138.)

We are now seeing in operation a very old principle. The private character and conduct of men holding, by office or by birth, a political position, have often influenced the destinies of nations: France seems fated to furnish a striking example of it. Can anyone read the history of its Court and Aristocracy, from the reign of Louis XIV. downwards, without seeing that their conduct led to the awful expiation paid by both in the French Revolution? Take the memoirs of the time—and Lords and Noble Dames have furnished abundant materials—and they reveal a system that seems like a Government of madmen, cruel, reckless, heartless, and of inconceivable profligacy. Plunder, corruption, and prostitution recognised, reduced to a system, and carried on under a pompous form and etiquette, can alone describe it. The annals of the French Court, under the Regent Orleans, are absolutely incredible to modern readers; the reign of Louis the Fifteenth did not improve them; and, towards the latter years of his life, the signs of the approaching convulsion were plainly visible. National bankruptcy, famine, mistrust, and a deeply-rooted hate of an Aristocracy that for ages had done nothing but oppress and insult the people, closed in the abyss of a wild, untrained democracy, the fall of a Monarchy, whose foundations were sapped long before, and which it is marvellous should have lasted so long. Under that old régime crimes even worse than this that now shakes France to its centre were perpetrated; as for corruption, the bribe taken by M. Teste is as nothing compared to it; assassination was not uncommon: duels were things of every day—but fighting and murdering were kept distinct: though many sanguinary conflicts are recorded, such a deliberate, cowardly piece of butchery as that of Beauvallon would hardly have been possible—that was reserved to modern refinement and the writers of the Roman Feuilleton. Even in that loose, reckless time, a Viscount might have been trusted on his "word of honour," where your Ecguevilleys cannot be relied on for an oath. Something of courage and chivalry, some redeeming points that old Aristocracy must have had, or men would have hunted them out like vermin generations before they did. It is the grovelling sordidness, the habitual lowness and treachery of the vices of the present race, that disgust and appal.

We are no, therefore, of those who despair of the present, and regret the past; things are bad enough in France, but they are, in the main, incomparably less criminal and corrupt than formerly. We may rely on it, there is no improvement to be got by going back; we believe the truth to be that the Government of France is behind the age, the generation, and the bulk of the people it rules; it stands almost independently of the popular support, and acts as if the people were an antagonist to be crushed. The feeling perhaps is pretty well founded; but what a position for the rulers and theruled to stand in, after seventeen years of order and peace? With all interest sacrificed to a dynasty—with proofs of the most heartless cunning and chicanery in its foreign policy developing themselves every day—with some proved and more suspected corruption in the high test places—it is no wonder a "foul, strange, and unnatural murder," committed by a Duke, should array all pens and tongues against the Aristocracy and the Government it supports. But foreigners, exempt from these political influences, should be careful to guard against a sweeping judgment. We have had our Ferrers Scourtons, and Lovats; but their crimes have never been charged against a class; the political faults of the French Government should not induce us to visit the fearful criminality of the Duc de Praslin on the whole of the French Aristocracy.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

PARIS, August 24.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The coronation of the city of Ferrara by the Austrians has created, as yet very little sensation in our metropolis. Most of the Parisian papers confine themselves to a report of the ceremonial, with a few remarks on the false position of the French and English Cabinets, in consequence of their own late intervention in Portugal. At the present hour, in France, as in England, foreign politics, indeed, seem to have lost a great deal of their importance. In the intermission of our Chambers, the energy of almost all our contemporaries has been wholly employed in keeping up the painful indignation so generally raised by the Cabinets trial, and many fresh revelations to which I need not refer.

Our Cabinet is certainly sunk very low in the public opinion. It is pretty generally admitted that the political genius of our Statesmen consists chiefly in purchasing as many friends as possible, and leaving them at liberty to rob as they like. Be it what it may, for the present, the administrative dilapidations as well as the dearth corn-monop.ists, &c., are completely forgotten. The advocates and opponents of the Cabinet, the rival parties, have joined in one same feeling of consternation and horror. The dreadful murder of the Duchess of Praslin is in every thought, in every mouth, I might add, in every dream.

But less or hasten from the harrowing subject, I will now refer to the fair land of the fine arts. Some time ago a competition had been instituted by the Commission for the restoration of the stained glass windows of the Ste. Chapelle, one of the most precious relics of Gqival architecture now subsisting in Paris. Ten artists have answered this appeal, and a public exhibition of their works has [illegible] in the Ecole des Beaux Arts. Considering [illegible] the specimens exhibited are not very perfect [illegible] of the art. A painter, to succeed in glass, cannot [illegible] of his colours. Almost all the competitors have [illegible] and as it is [illegible] consequence of their [illegible] the artists have not deserved quite so much [illegible] I do the generality of painters, their figures are more or less deficient in individuality and unity of style: however, some two or three competitors have cleverly approached the naïveté and religious character of the ancient glass. On the whole, the exhibition is most interesting as a symptom of a happy change in the spirit of our artists.

Twenty-four Cartoons, by Ingres, have been placed, a fortnight back, in our Luxembourg Gallery. These half-length sketches, representing a series of Saints, of the life size, have served as models for the stained-glass windows of the Sepulchral Chapels at Dreux and Sablonville. In an artistical point of view, they are to be ranked among the best of Ingre's achievements in the Raffaelian style—generally grand in character, and more guiltless of vulgarity and heavy draperies than is usually the case with their author. But there is about them another peculiarity to be pointed out. To the Saints Ferdinand, Amelia, Adelaide, and Helen, the artist has lent the exact likenesses of the principal members of the Royal family.

Last week three new statues, by MM. Ramus and Gatteaux—an "Ann of Austria," a "Catherine de Medici," and another Royal effigy, have been inaugurated in the Luxembourg Gardens, on the pedestals prepared for a set of our most illustrious Queens.

Whilst our Académie de Musique is closed, to elaborate in the dark its new decoration—a splendid toilet, as we have heard—our twenty-five minor theatres are bravely striving to entice the half-bolted public from the allurements of summer gardens and concerts al fresco.

Mr. Planché, your indefatigable dramatist, after translating and adapting so many of our vaudevilles, has been adapted and translated himself at the Porte St. Martin, by the brothers Cogniard. The revenge of the French has name "La Belle aux Cheveux d'Or," viz., "The Fair One with Golden Locks." The Parisian piece, however, glories in a much greater number of scenes and fantastical embellishments. Messrs. Cogniard's paraphrase of Mdme. D'Annoy's tale contains all the main incidents of Mr. Planché's paraphrase of the same tale, with an original conclusion besides. The chief attractions of the play are not in the indeed of its plot; they are in the artistic and theatrical splendour of the scenes, in the Albano-like tableau of the azure grotto and its nymphs, in the costumes and airy grace of the figurantes, who were all of them as elegant as fairies. In fine, the piece is admirably got up: and more fancy, perhaps, has been displayed in this trifle than in any two Royal exhibitions of modern paintings in the Louvre.

Two days ago, in the Courrier Français, the Prince of Joinville was reported to be dangerously ill.

The new directors of the Grand Opera have engaged Verdi to compose an opera, which he has promised for the beginning of winter. Like your Wallace, M. Flan ow, the composer of "Stradella," and "Le Naufrage en Peine," has repaired to Austria, in search of a "public." His new opera, "Magdo," is intended for a Vienna theatre. M. Scribe is positively determined to overwhelm us with his generosities; two more pieces of his muse are talked of for the Francais, two others for the Gymnase, one for the Opéra Comique, and two others besides, the destination of which is not known. In Marseilles, M. De Lemaire has met with a most flattering reception on the part of the inhabitants. An immense crowd has assembled under his windows, and offered him an ex tempore vocal serenade.

M. Hugo, on the contrary, is more asleep than ever under his new dignity. In spite of the alarming cry of Persecution, M. Duchatelet has appealed to the Archæological erudi ion of the Post, relatively to some acts of Vandalism lately accomplished against our historical monuments. M. Victor Hugo got up, and announced that he intended to speak on the subject, in the next session. So much time for preparing his speech,—this is indicative of very little confidence in his audience. M. Castaing, the bold traveller, has arrived in France from a long exploring expedition in Southern America. He is said to have brought with him a rich collection of animals, and all kinds of manufactured products. Among the curiosities of his store, the papers have mentioned a young savage, Calama, belonging to the tribe of the Apinages.

The murder of the Duchess de Praslin, of which we give full particulars elsewhere, appears to absorb public attention to a degree almost unprecedented. The excitement has been increased by the seizure of four papers, in consequence of their comments upon the occurrence. These papers are the Reformé, the Gazette de France, the Union Monarchique, and the Charivari. The latter journal affects to be quite ignorant of the reason why it was seized. There is no doubt, however, that the real reason for the disapprobation of the Government is that the papers have taken the opportunity, when remarking upon this appalling murder, to connect with it indirectly the recent instances of Ministerial corruption in France.

Queen Christina returned to Paris on Monday from Havre.

The medical men officially employed have certified that the state of health of M. Teste requires his immediate removal from the Conciergerie to a maison de santé.

A murder took place in Paris yesterday week, at mid-day, on the clerk of M. Meyer-Spalmer, money-changer, Rue Neuve-Vivienne, No. 26. It appears that the clerk of a German, aged 18, was sitting behind the iron railing which is usually found in such shops, when a well-dressed man, of about 30, entered, and presented a bill of exchange. Whilst the young man was unfolding it, the other stretched forward his hand through the little opening in the grating, and seized on a wooden cup filled with gold, and a handful of bank-notes, with which he attempted to make off. The clerk, however, who perceived the movement, rushed round into the open part of the shop, and seized the thief. The latter then drawing out a poinard-knife stabbed the young man in the hand and forehead. The clerk, however, struggled with him, crying out all the time loudly for help. The clerk, however, contrived to force the weapon from him, and in his turn plunged it into the man's leg, and cut the fingers of his right hand. In the midst of the struggle the knife fell, and the thief stooped to pick it up. The clerk availed himself of the chance, and opening the door, again shouted for help. A servant-girl at the same moment entered the shop from the interior of the house, and the thief, finding himself hard-pressed, made a last effort, and, snatching up the knife, plunged it twice into the abdomen of the unfortunate clerk, who fell to the ground in an expiring state. The murderer then darted towards the Bourse, but was overtaken by a commissionnaire and M. Frischmuth, the proprietor of the baker's shop opposite. On his person were found another poinard-knife and several pieces of gold. The police agent who first came up recognised him as a thief by profession. The unfortunate clerk was taken to the hospital of the Hotel-Dieu, but expired on the way.

SPAIN.

Our Madrid letters, of the 22nd instant, announce the significant fact of the arrival of General Narvaez in that capital. He had been directed by the Queen to undertake the formation of a new Cabinet, and had accepted the duty. General Narvaez is himself to be President of the Council, and, it is thought, Minister of Foreign Affairs. The names of the colleagues are not yet known.

The expectations of a reconciliation between the King and Queen have been completely disappointed. The King, it is said, replied to the overtures of reconciliation made to him by M. Benavides, the Minister of the Interior, that he could not think of returning to the Palace for the next four months.

PORTUGAL.

Our advices from Lisbon, received by the Madrid packet, are to the 16th inst., and are of importance. The Queen exhibited much hesitation and reluctance, to dismiss the Cabral Ministry, but they resigned on the 13th. Her Majesty agreed to appoint the Duke de Fonseca to form a Ministry, but she so fettered him with conditions and restrictions, that he will not be able to accept them. He has made overtures to several persons without effect, as they all make it a sine qua non that the King shall be removed from the command in chief of the army, a measure to which the Queen will not consent.

The Ministerial crisis, therefore, was not over. Before the resignation of the Cabral Ministry, a decree was issued, convoking the Cortes for the 2nd of January next; the elections to commence early in November.

A fire had taken place in the Boa Vista, in Lisbon, at which our squadron had rendered such effective services, as to call forth a letter of thanks from the Queen. A midshipman, named Wilson, belonging to the Jackall, had unhappily perished in the flames.

Fayal, the last of the islands in revolt, had returned to its allegiance on the 27th ult.

THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO

The Sarah Sands, screw steamer, has arrived with New York papers to the 4th inst.

The most contradictory reports continued to be received from the seat of war, and it had not yet been ascertained whether General Pierce had a battle with the Mexicans at National Bridge or not. The skirmish of Colonel de Russey with the Mexicans at Huquetta, and his successful retreat, were confirmed. Santa Anna, according to accounts received from the city of Mexico, was favourably inclined to peace, but many regarded the movements towards peace made by the Mexican Government merely as so many expedients of Santa Anna to gain time. On the part of the United States, it is now known that M. Trist is provided with full powers to make a treaty, that the British Minister to Mexico had tried to bring about a negociation, and had sent his Secretary of Legation from the city of Mexico to General Scott, and it was confidently rumoured that the latter had delayed his advance on the capital in consequence.

The purchase of Cuba, as suggested by the the New York Sun, was still a topic of discussion in the leading journals of New York. It was rumoured that Spain was ready to close the bargain.

The arrival of emigrants at New York was very great. In the month of July there arrived 51,603, which included 17,764 emigrants. The St. John's New Brunswick Herald states that of the emigrants who left last year left Great Britain 4055 died at sea or in quarantine.

The harvest that grain and flour was again considerably lower here had unsettled the market.

THE OVERLAND INDIA MAIL.

The Calcutta Overland Mail of the 2nd inst. has arrived, but it brings hardly any intelligence worth notice.

Disturbances still continued to prevail in the province of Goomsoor, and human sacrifices were about to be renewed there.

Tranquility had not been restored in the States of the Nizam. The plan to establish a bank there had not succeeded.

At Bombay the rains had been remarkable, 42 inches had already fallen on the 3rd ult.; that is more than half the average quantity of the entire average, and there were two months of the monsoon yet remaining. The fall in different parts of the Deccan had not been so great.

Great apprehension was felt respecting the fate of the Cleopatra steamer, which left Bombay on the 14th of April, bound for Singapore. She encountered the frightful hurricane of the 17th, 18th, and 19th of April, and had not since been heard of.

The news from China is not later than that last received.

THE ADMIRALTY SUPERINTENDENTSHIP OF PORTSMOUTH DOCKYARD.—Rear Admiral of the Blue Shirref, has been appointed to succeed Rear Admiral Hyde Parker, C.B., as Superintendent of Portsmouth Dockyard.

DEATH OF COLONEL SIR HENRY GEORGE MACLEOD, K.H.—The above gallant officer expired yesterday week at his residence near Windsor, after a comparatively short illness. Sir Henry served in the army in 1807, and saw much active service with his regiment, the 35th Foot, up to the battle of Waterloo, in which he was severely wounded

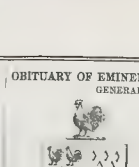
THE COMMAND IN THE PACIFIC.—Rear Admiral Phipps Hornby has been appointed to the Command in the Pacific, to succeed Sir George Seymour, and will hoist his flag in the Asia, 84 guns, at Sheerness

A SEAMAN SENTENCED TO DEATH BY THE COURT-MARTIAL.—A court-martial upon John Conner, seaman of the Agincourt, sat, at Portsmouth, on Wednesday, with Rear-Admiral Hyde Parker, President, and Captains Pasco, Chads, Pinnock, Eden and Warren, members. The charge against the prisoner was, that on the 22nd of May last, while the ship was on the passage from Penang to the Cape of Good Hope, the prisoner struck Mr. Burnaby, naval cadet, while in the execution of his duty. The charge was fully investigated, and when the prisoner received a most excellent character from the captain, commander, and several officers, petty officers, and seamen of the Agincourt, all of whom had known the pri oner for some time. The Court then proceeded to pass sentence upon the prisoner to death by being hanged by the neck, and he was sentenced accordingly, but recommended to mercy on account of his former good character.

ATTEMPTED SUPPRESSION OF ETON RACES.—The inhabitants of Eton and Windsor having subscribed for the purpose of reviving this year the races which formerly took place at Eton, considerable excitement was created in the two towns on Wednesday morning by the appearance of a handbill, signed by the authorities of Eton College, forbidding the sport in the vicinity of the School the South Meadow, which is Lammas land, close to the town, having been fixed upon for the contemplated amusements. The meeting is to take place in another spot.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

GENERAL SIR GEORGE COCKBURN.



THIS veteran soldier and politician died on the 18th inst., at his seat, Shanganagh Castle, near Bray, Ireland. He was the eldest son of George Cockburn, Esq., of Dublin, by Anne, his wife, eldest daughter of Charles Caldwell, Esq., and sister of the late gallant Admiral Sir Benjamin Caldwell, G.C.B. His family claimed to be a branch of the ancient Scottish House of Cockburn, of Cockburn and Ryslaw, now rep esented by Sir William S. R. Cockburn. Bart.

General Cockburn, who had been for a long period on the retired list of the army, was well known for his attachment to Cobbett, and always advocated the principles of reform. The passing of the Reform Bill he commemorated by a column erected on his residence, but this he afterwards swept away, for the Whigs went too slow for him, and he gave in his adhesion to Conservatism and Sir Robert Peel. He died at the age of 82. His military career dated from the year 1781, when he entered the army as Ensign in the 1st Regiment of Foot Guards. At the famous siege of Gibraltar, he acted as Aide-de-Camp to General Elliott, and in 1788 he purchased the Captain-Lieutenancy of the 65th Regiment, then quartered in Dublin, and commanded by Lord Harrington, who was thenceforward a kind friend to him. Shortly after he embarked with the regiment for Canada; but, before sailing, an order to leave a Captain at home to recruit fell on Mr. Cockburn as junior. Passing through the subordinate gradations, he became, in 1793, Lieutenant-Colonel, by purchase, of the 92nd Regiment and attained the rank of Major-General in 1806, when he was placed on the staff in England. In 1810, he joined Sir J. Stuart's army in Sicily, and was present when Murat landed 3000 men near Stephano. Being made Lieutenant-General in 1811, he returned home, and was never employed afterwards, although he made many applications.

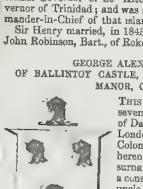
Sir George was born 21st February, 1764, and married 8th March, 1790, his cousin Eliza, eldest daughter of Phineas Hall, Esq., of Clonmel, by whom he had two sons, George and Phineas Charles, and four daughters, the eldest of whom, Catherine, married, in 1817, Capt. Hamilton, R.N.

SIR HENRY GEORGE MACLEOD, KT., K.H.

THE death of this gallant officer, a Colonel in the Army, occurred on the 20th inst., at Bishopsgate, near Windsor. His military services were highly distinguished. For his conduct at the siege of Dantsic he received the Order of St. Wladimir, and in the glorious conflict of Waterloo he had the honour of taking part. At one time, he was Lieutenant-Governor of St. Kitts; became, subsequently, Lieutenant-Governor of Trinidad; and was appointed, eventually, Governor and Commander-in-Chief of that island.

Sir Henry married, in 1848, Henrietta, daughter of the late Rev. Sir John Robinson, Bart., of Rokeby Hall, County Louth.

GEORGE ALEXANDER FULLERTON, ESQ., OF BALLINTOY CASTLE, COUNTY ANTRIM, AND TOCKINGTON MANOR, COUNTY GLOUCESTER.



THIS gentleman died on the 16th inst., in the seventy-second year of his age. He was the son of Dawson Downing, Esq., of Rowsgift, County Londonderry, and great grandson of the famous Colonel John Downing, a distinguished adherent of William III., in the Irish war. The surname of Fullerton he assumed on inheriting a considerable property from his maternal grand-uncle, Alexander Fullerton, of Ballintoy. The family of Downing, the very ancient one it proved, and was settled in the time of Henry VIII. in the county of Essex, the head of the house, Geoffrey Downynge, Esq., of Poles Belcham, being then described as a person of rank and fortune. To the munificence and public spirit of one of his descendants, Sir George Downing, Bart., of East Hatley, the University of Cambridge owes the foundation of Downing College.

Mr. Fullerton, whose decease we record, has left several children. His eldest daughter, Frances, is wife of Sir Andrew Armstrong, Bart., M.P; and his eldest son, Captain Alexander George Fullerton, married, in 1833, Lady Georgiana Leveson Gower, second daughter of the late Earl Granville, a lady well known in the literary world by her popular novels of "Ellen Middleton" and "Grantley Manor."

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

MURDER OF A WOMAN BY HER HUSBAND.

A man named Robert Pilkington was brought up before the magistrates at Little Bolton, Lancashire, on Monday, for the murder of his wife. The facts of the case are these. He had been separated from his wife for some time, on account of his brutal conduct towards her, and she lived with her son, William, who was unmarried, and who kept a farm, called Langshawe Fold Farm, at Heaton. About seven o'clock on Saturday evening, the prisoner came to the farm-house, and asked to be admitted to light his pipe. On his promising his son to go out again as soon as he had done so, the door was unbarred, and he was let in. When he had lighted his pipe, however, he refused to quit the house, and sat down by the fire. Soon after the time came for the farmer and a servant-girl, who lived in the house, to go out with the milk. They had to go in opposite directions. The servant, however, felt unwilling to leave the prisoner alone with his wife, and requested the latter to accompany her. She did so, and, on the return of the two women, they still found the prisoner sitting by the fire. The prisoner then made a few angry observations, and a few words passed between him and his wife. He immediately sprung up, and, snatching a heavy crow-bar, which was used as a poker, struck her a number of blows on the head. The unfortunate woman attempted to take the weapon from him, but he wrested it from her, and struck her a blow on the head, fortunately without producing any serious injury. She rushed out of the house towards those of the nearest neighbours, some few hundred yards in distance, and roused their attention by her screams for help, and telling them that "Robert had killed the old woman." Several of the neighbours ran immediately to the spot. The first was a young man named Edmund Bowman, a cripple, who is apprenticed in Manchester, but his parents living at this spot, and its being Sunday, he was at home. He found the poor creature on the floor, senseless, senseless, and evidently dying. She was lifted up by the head and some water was adopted for her restoration, but without the slightest avail—she yielded her last breath in a few minutes after they entered. Meanwhile the perpetrator of this fiendish act had left the house, and having refused to remain with Bowman when the afternoon down express train from Paddington was coming up at a rate of between sixty and seventy miles per hour. Some persons who were standing near called out to him to stop until the train had passed, but he took no notice, and attempted to cross the rails. His fate was awful; in an instant he was caught under them, and his body was cut in two enormous dists on, and falling on the rails the whole train passed over him. He was literally cut to pieces. There was not a whole bone left in his body, and the fragments were scattered in all directions. The deceased carried a box on his back, which contained upwards of £300 in jewellery. The engine and tender were strewed with watches and trinkets, and a considerable quantity were found on the line and in the adjacent fields. An inquest was held at the Prince of Wales Tavern, Farnworth-road station, next day. The Jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death," and expressed an opinion that the railway company ought to station a policeman at the gate where the accident happened, there being a public road across the line for carriages and horses

TRAGICAL AFFAIR AT EDINBURGH.—An occurrence of a most painful and heartrending character has taken place at Edinburgh. Last Saturday, three young boys, two of them sons of Mr. James Wilson, builder, Gallowgate-street, and the other a son of his brother, Mr. Charles Wilson, were missed. As the rest of the family were down the water, the boys' absence occasioned at first no great uneasiness, as it was supposed that the youngsters, the eldest of whom was about eleven years of age, had set off to join their mother and the rest of the family. As nothing had been heard of them, Mr. Wilson left home with the intention of proceeding to Helensburg, where the family were, to ascertain if the runaways

LAMENTABLE ACCIDENT ON THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY.—One of the most deplorable accidents that has occurred for some time, took place on Thursday evening (last week) at the Challow Marsh crossing on the Great Western Railway, a few miles from the Farringdon Station, whereby Mr. Henry Sinclair, a travelling silversmith and jeweller, met a terrible death. The deceased resided in Pembroke-street, St. Paul's, Bristol He had been on business in Berkshire, and was proceeding to the town, when he met with the accident. He reached the Challow crossing about a quarter before seven o'clock, the precise time the afternoon down express train from Paddington was coming up at a rate of between sixty and seventy miles per hour. Some persons who were standing near called out to him to stop until the train had passed, but he took no notice, and attempted to cross the rails. His fate was awful; in an instant he was caught under them, and his body was cut in two enormous dists on, and falling on the rails the whole train passed over him. He was literally cut to pieces. There was not a whole bone left in his body, and the fragments were scattered in all directions. The deceased carried a box on his back, which contained upwards of £300 in jewellery. The engine and tender were strewed with watches and trinkets, and a considerable quantity were found on the line and in the adjacent fields. An inquest was held at the Prince of Wales Tavern, Farringdon-road station, next day. The Jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death," and expressed an opinion that the railway company ought to station a policeman at the gate where the accident happened, there being a public road across the line for carriages and horses

TRAGICAL AFFAIR AT EDINBURGH.—An occurrence of a most painful and heartrending character has taken place at Edinburgh. Last Saturday, three young boys, two of them sons of Mr. James Wilson, builder, Gallowgate-street, and the other a son of his brother, Mr. Charles Wilson, were missed. As the rest of the family were down the water, the boys' absence occasioned at first no great uneasiness, as it was supposed that the youngsters, the eldest of whom was about eleven years of age, had set off to join their mother and the rest of the family. As nothing had been heard of them, Mr. Wilson left home with the intention of proceeding to Helensburg, where the family were, to ascertain if the runaways were there. He had not, however, been long away, when a carter who take charge of a horse belonging to Mr. Wilson went to the stable for the purpose o procuring some provender for the animal. The provender is kept in a corn-chest a box six feet long and about three deep, with three separate compartments and secured on the outside with an iron hasp, which fits into a staple in the side of the chest. On opening the lid, the man was horror-stricken at finding the three young boys motionless at the bottom of the chest, each occupying one of the compartments. He immediately summoned assistance, and they were taken out, but it was found that two of them, James Wilson, aged eleven, and Charles Wilson, about a year younger, were quite dead, and had been so apparently for a considerable length of time. The youngest, a boy between seven and eight years, showed some signs of life, and by prompt medical attendance he gradually revived, so as to be able to state what had led to the melancholy catastrophe. The brothers and cousin had gone into the closet in search of beans, and while so engaged the lid, which, as has been already stated, is secured on the outside by an iron hasp fitting into a staple, closed on them. It falling, the hasp, as it most unfortunately happened, fitted into the staple, and all the united strength of the poor captives was insufficient to enable them to burst the bands of wood, too truly, proved their tomb. They had endeavoured to support each other's courage as well as they could in the awful situation they were and, before giving up hope, one of them broke the blade of a penknife in the attempt to make an incision through the side of the chest. After they had exhausted themselves by unavailing shouts and cries, which were not heard on earth, they all joined in prayer.

SUICIDE AT CARLISLE.—On the night of yesterday week, a respectably-dressed young gentleman, who had come to Carlisle by some of the evening trains, sojourned at the Railway Hotel. He went to bed about ten o'clock, and ordered the waiter to call him next morning at nine o'clock, which the waiter did, but received no answer, and concluding that the gentleman was asleep. He was called again at eleven, but still no reply, when the door was forced open, and the unfortunate gentleman was found in bed, with his throat most dreadfully cut, with a razor in his hands. At the inner door-post was written on the wall, in ink, and the only paper which was in his possession, likely to lead to a identification, was one which was pinned behind his coat neck, with the name of "Hogarth" or "Hibbert," written upon it. He has not yet been identified. He was a rather dark-looking person, about twenty-five years of age, and fashionably dress :

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE AT HUNGERFORD MARKET.—On Tuesday morning, about ten o'clock, Mrs. Susannah Jackson, aged twenty-six, a highly respectable female, attempted to drown herself in the river at Hungerford. It appears that she was alighted from a Paddington omnibus, she proceeded towards the water-side, and was observed by a bystander about the time in somewhat singular manner, after which she hastened on the pier, and, clasping her hands, she exclaimed, "Oh, my mercy, mercy, Heaven protect my children!" and then plunged into the river The circumstance was noticed by the bystander, who raised an instant alarm, and, after some difficulty, two watermen succeeded in saving her from a watery grave. She had gone a considerable distance, being carried with the tide. The poor creature was then taken in an unconscious state to the Charing Cross Hospital, and placed under the care of Mr. Young, the house-surgeon, and remains in a very precarious state. Mrs. Jackson resides in Great Portland-street.

A CHILD OUT TO PIECES BY ITS MOTHER.—A girl named Steadman, servant in a public-house at Birmingham, has been charged with cutting her own infant child into fragments. From the evidence at the Coroner's inquest it appeared that the prisoner cut the child to pieces in bed. The Jury returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder," and the prisoner will be removed to Warwick gaol for trial at the next spring assizes.

LAMENTABLE ACCIDENT AT GENEVA.—A lamentable event took place last week at Geneva. The Earl of Auriol, Rector of St. Dunstan's in the West, Fleet-street, was on a tour through Switzerland, with his wife and son, a youth of about 17, of the most amiable disposition, their only child. They arrived at Geneva at the beginning of the week, and were planning an excursion on the lake. The morning after their arrival, the youth, with his parents' consent, went out for a stroll before breakfast. Unaware of the peculiar dangers of the place, he got into a boat on the lake, was drawn into the current, hurried down the rapids of the Rhone, and totally lost. He was a youth of great promise, and obtained a scholarship and the theological prize at the Midsummer examination at Christ's College, London, in the present year

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.—An accident, which ended in fatal consequences, occurred on this line of railway on Wednesday afternoon John Hallam, an assistant to the plate-layers, was employed to clear the line of coke that had dropped from the several engines traversing the railway during the morning. Whilst in a stooping position, engine No. 86 came along the railway, and, being dressed, did not perceive that he was kneeling down, when the buffer of the engine. His legs, falling across the rails, were cut off, one a little below the knee, and the other just above the ancle. Deceased was carried to the Railway Inn, where amputation was performed. Deceased ingered about two hours and a half after the operation had been performed, when he expired. The deceased had been twenty-one years in the 39th regiment of infantry, during which period he was engaged in the several actions that took place in India.

FATAL FIGHT BETWEEN TWO BOYS IN POPLAR.—On Wednesday an inquest was held at the Old Commodore public-house, Poplar, before Mr. William Baker, re-pecting the death of Charles Harris, aged eleven years, son of Mr. Harris, of No. 3, Colling's-place, Poplar, who died on Thursday, the 19th instant, from congestion of the brain, produced by injuries he received in a fight with a boy named Edward Carter, the same age as himself, on Tuesday last, for which Joseph Johnson, Joseph Cater, William Newson, and William Aiger, were brought before the magistrates at the Thames Police Court, charged with being present, and aiding and abetting a fight between the above-named boys, which ended in the death of the deceased. On the jury re-assembling on Wednesday, John Ingledon, a boy about ten years of age, was examined. He stated that on Wednesday afternoon, at three o'clock, he was in Poplar-field, playing at cricket with the deceased and several other boys belonging to the Poplar National School. The four men above named were sitting on the ground near where they were playing; they had been there about half an hour when a fight took place on the grass. One of the men picked it up and refused to let Any have it, unless he fought for it. Any selected out the deceased, and they fought for nearly an hour. During the fight the men encouraged a quantity of boys, who had collected encouraged him on. The deceased bled profusely from the nose, and he was knocked down by Any several times. After the fight the men gave him some more beer, and he appeared to be much frightened. The boy died the next morning. The Coroner adjourned the inquiry.

THE MURDER OF THE DUCHESS DE PRASLIN.

We last week announced the frightful murder of the Duchess de Praslin, at Paris, and gave a circumstantial account of the occurrence as it was then known. The details of the crime have since acquired a daily increasing interest. At first the deed was supposed to have been done by some common assassin; but the crime now excites additional horror when the strong suspicion is entertained that it was committed by the Duke de Praslin, the unfortunate lady's husband. We recapitulate from our late publication last week the account of this dreadful crime, and also supply from the French papers a mass of interesting details succeeding it.

The Duke and Duchess of Praslin, when they reside at Paris, occupy, with their numerous family, consisting of nine children, the hotel of Marshal Sebastiani, in the Faubourg St. Honoré, the ministerial residence of Paris, and only a few doors off the British embassy. On Tuesday evening (last week), at nine o'clock, they arrived from the country, with the intention of remaining only a few days at Paris; and, as their sojourn was to be of short duration, they had sent the domestics being absent on leave, their suite consisted only of two or three persons. The Duke and Duchess retired at an early hour to their respective apartments, after having sent the children to bed; and the servants, tired from the day's journey, soon followed their master's example, and, soon after, the hotel was wrapped in silence. At about two in the morning (another account says four), the sound of a bell violently rung in the Duchess' chamber, aroused some of the servants, who hastened to the apartment of his mistress, and tried to open the door. Finding that the door was fastened, he was about to retire, when he heard two or three groans, and, fearing lest the Duchess was taken ill, he burst open the door, and a horrible sight was presented to his view. The Duchess of Praslin was stretched on the floor in a pool of blood, which was flowing rapidly from some deep and large wounds in her neck and throat, and the only signs of life she gave was a rattle in the throat; the hands of the unfortunate lady were dripping with blood, and the impression of a bloody hand upon the bell-rope indicated that she had not pulled the bell till she had been struck by the murderer.

More dead than alive the servant reeled out of the room, and called out for help. The Duke was instantly on the spot, and clasped the body of his murdered wife in his arms. Medical assistance was immediately procured, but, in two hours, she breathed her last.

From the very first moment at which the officers of justice arrived at the hotel, a very great fact was noticed. The apartments occupied by the Duke and Duchess are situated on the ground floor; by an ante-chamber opening on the flight of steps there is a communication at the left with the boudoir; then with the Duchess' bedroom; at the right is the room preceding the bedroom of the Duke, which touches the walls of the Ely-de Bourbon. In examining the floor it was discovered that a bloody trace marked the passage from the bedroom of the Duchess to that of the Duke. At the same time there was received the testimony of a domestic, who, attracted by the cries of the femme-de-chambre, had, after fruitless efforts to open the door of the Duchess' bedroom, gone round the hotel, in order to attempt to arrive in time to render assistance to his unfortunate mistress, by entering at one of the windows opening on the garden. This domestic declared that at the moment at which he arrived in the garden, he perceived a man of the height and appearance of the Duke, who, hearing the noise of his footsteps, withdrew suddenly into the interior of the bedroom, abruptly quitting one of the windows which he had just opened, in order, without doubt, to make it be believed that it was by that means that the murderer had obtained his entrance. Among the objects found in the chamber, in which everything, as we have said, was in disorder, was a pistol loaded with balls, and bearing a percussion cap. This pistol, which has been recognised as belonging to the Duke de Praslin, was not only stained with the blood into which it had fallen, but it bore on the butt-end fragments of flesh, and on the face and skull of the victim there was found the trace of blows which retained the marks of the sharp edges and hollow ridges which had been executed by the workman. In presence of such indications, orders were obliged to be given that the Duke de Praslin should be kept in view, and the magistrates, after receiving from him his declaration as information, addressed questions to him of which the form and gravity were of a nature to make him understand that it was henceforth not merely as a witness that he was called on for explanations. At the same time a search was made in a private lodging, where papers calculated to establish grave charges, were, as we were assured, seized, and where it was at the same time discovered that papers and objects, of which the nature could not be recognised, had been quite recently destroyed by fire. On the clothes which the Duke wore there were numerous stains of blood, which, however, he said he had received in his contact with the body of the unhappy Duchess, which he had pressed in his arms on arriving in her apartment at the moment of the discovery of the crime. It was also established that he hair found between the fingers of the Duchess, and in the pool of blood in which her body lay, was precisely of the same colour, and the same length as that of her husband. The attitude of the Duke during these painful investigations of justice, presented, it is stated, a singular contrast with what it ordinarily was. Small in stature, nervous, energetic, proud, and of extreme irascibility, he could not till then support a contradiction, and would have considered a question an offence; but now he was cast down, depressed, and unable to find a word a protest against the horrible suspicion which seemed to rest upon him. Immaterial facts once ascertained, it remained to seek what causes could have drawn into crime the man who seemed to be designated as the author of it by so many terrible circumstances.

It is stated that the Duke was attached to a young lady, Mdlle. de Luzzi, who, after having occupied during six years the situation of governess of the young children of the Duchess de Praslin, had, about a month ago, been dismissed by the Duchess after one of the most violent scenes, which, however, did not prevent the Duchess from giving her a pension for life.

It was at first generally supposed that this lady was English. This, however, is not he case. She is French, and is granddaughter to the Baron de P —, residing in the Chaussée d'Antin; her father and mother are both dead; her name is Mademoiselle Henriette de Luzzi. Mademoiselle de Luzzi has several names in Laure Desportes; she is twenty-nine years old; her figure is most elegant and distinguished; and her magnificent light hair adds to the sweetness of her features, which are remarkably beautiful. Her cultivated mind, her character, and her superiority as a governess, painter, and musician, had, it is said, yielded her in the Praslin family quite a confidential position, at the same time that they had secured the affection of the young persons whose education she was entrusted with. In her several examinations she has constantly answered with great clearness and propriety. When brought before the magistrates, she underwent a long interrogatory, at the end of which she was conveyed to the Conciergerie, and placed in secret confinement.

It has been ascertained that the wounds inflicted upon the Duchess with a poignard or knife have by no means been mortal, which it is evident that was intimately put to death with the butt end of the pistol which was found in her room —a pistol which the Duke admitted to be his, and which he accounted for being there by saying that when the alarm was given he took it for the purpose of defending the Duchess. The poignard has not been found but it is certain that the Duke threw it into the sink. It has been ascertained that the sheath of the poignard was burnt. The silver mounting upon it were found in the garden, into which they had been thrown from a window by the Duke On searching the Duke, it was found that he carried between his shirt and his braces a cord similar to that which the Duchess' throat was found to present due to the present day in France, was used for the purpose of suspending the powder horn from the shoulder. The explanations given by the Duke for the possession of the cord, and for carrying it in so extraordinary a fashion, are exceedingly confused. The belief now is that he intended to have strangled the Duchess with it had he found her asleep. It was also been ascertained that the bell near the bed was cut by the murderer, so that it could not be rung; and that the unhappy Duchess, in order to give the alarm, had to make her way to the fire-place, where there was another bell. It was in the attempt to reach this latter bell that that fearful death-struggle took place, of which the effects were so afterwards observed; and it is quite credible, though not able to save her life, was able to give the alarm in time to prevent the escape of her murderer.

The Chamber of Peers met on Saturday under the presidency of the Chancellor, the Duke de Pasquier. About 70 members were present. The Minister of Justice read the Royal ordonnance, convoking the assembly as a court of justice to try the Duke de Praslin for the murder of his wife

[It is right to state here, in the proper order of our narrative, that last week the Duke took poison; it was said that he swallowed laudanum; but, from subsequent accounts, it appears that his suicide was effected by arsenic. He was ill for several days, and died in the course of Tuesday afternoon, in the prison of the Luxembourg. His removal caused great excitement. He was examined on Saturday, in the presence of Dr. Andral, Physician to the Chamber of Peers, but the examination did not lead to anything important

The Presse says: "By the side of the Duke was a pistol loaded with ball; but no one knows for what object it was charged, or if he intended using it against his wife. In this last hypothesis, he did not dare to do so, on account of the noise of the report. He certainly struck his wife with the butt-end, to finish her, as has been proved by the marks found on the skull, and that after she had desired to defend his wife against a murderer; but, on its being represented to him that there was no trace left of the flight of this mysterious murderer, he remained silent, and hid his head in his hands. The Duke is embarrassed to explain away the scratches which are perceptible on his right hand, as well as the contusion on the leg. It is generally believed that, as the Duchess was able to ring, she was at first struck in bed, during her sleep, that it was after she had quitted the bed that the decisive blows were given. The hairs left in the hands of the victim, or fallen in the struggle, were brought together by Orfila. At first, it was supposed that the hair in the Duchess' hand, and thrown on the ground, fixed to the floor by the dried blood, were of a different colour, but, when M. Orfila had washed them in water, it was evident that they belonged to the same person, and the idea of different persons being employed in the murder was laid aside. This hair, besides, is altogether similar to that of the husband. Some water tinged with blood was found in a basin. The interrogatory of the Duke has as yet furnished no information respecting the crime. He declares that he knows nothing of the guilty party. The governess is still kept apart at the Conciergerie. She allows that she was much attached to the children, but is being obliged to quit the Duke's family, and separate from the young ladies whose education she had superintended. She explains in this way the language of a letter written by her to the Duke de Praslin, and which was found on her. It is said that some of the Royal family interfered recently to reconcile the Duke and Duchess. The King, the Queen and particularly Madame Adelaide, had a great affection for the Duchess. The Duke, who had been the favourite aid of the Duke of Orleans, was intimate also with the Duke de Nemours, who invited him to all his hunting excursions. They thought the Duke and Duchess reconciled since Mdlle de Luzzi's departure. Marshal Sebastiani, the Duke's uncle, intended to set out for Corsica only when assured that his daughter was reconciled to her husband.

The Pauvre has the following version of the mode in which this horrible crime was effected:—"The Duchess' bed-chamber was lit by a faint night-lamp. The murderer entered quietly, and, armed with a knife, he reached the bed where the Duchess was lying half asleep. The first blow was directed to the neck of the victim, who instantly put her hands to her neck. The murderer then repeated the stroke, and the instrument inflicted a wound on the little finger of Madame de Praslin's right hand. He continued; Madame de Praslin sprang from her bed, half fainting, and attempted to seize the bell-rope, which she could not at first reach, and two marks o a bloody hand are impressed on the bar ginge of the wall near the bell-rope. At last she succeeded in seizing the bell. The monster then, seeing that his blows had failed to produce immediate death, repeated them with savage ferocity; a struggle, hand to hand, took place between him and his unfortunate wife, who was strong, and whose strength must have been considerably increased by despair, and the last thoughts of her father, her children, and of the life that she would not readily part with. She threw down furniture to make a noise; she opposed to the blows, which the victim struck at hazard, several objects which bear traces of the weapon; and, finally, overcome by such violent efforts, she slipped, and fell in her blood under the last blows of her murderer, whose weapon had broken on the struggle. He finished the victim by striking her with the stock of a pistol. At this moment, probably, a knock was heard at the door, and Madame de Praslin uttered the groan which preceded the rattles of death. Then the servants ascended, and the Duchess was no longer able to speak or make any signs; but her eyes were still open, staring, and wild. She was conveyed to her bed, but life was rapidly ebbing, and the consciousness of what was taking place about her appeared to have completely vanished.

The Duke de Praslin sat as a Judge on the trial of M. Teste and General Cubières, and is himself a Chevalier d'Honneur in the household of the Duchess of Orleans.

The following precise details, from the Presse Agricole, written by a person sufficiently well acquainted with the localities, and containing, with some statements that are obviously conjectural, many additional facts, will be read with interest:—

"On arriving at his hotel, the Duke de Praslin went with his two daughters to pay a visit to Mademoiselle de Luzzi. They had completed their studies, and were dismissed; and a few days before the catastrophe she read to the young ladies a letter, in which she stated her feelings of regret at being separated from her dear children, as she called them.

"The Duchess, on hearing of this visit of her husband with her daughters, expressed her high disapprobation.

"At eleven o'clock silence pervaded the hotel, and nothing interrupted it till half-past four in the morning.

"Why did the author of the crime await the dawn? It is explained as follows:—It appears that every night a person employed to clean the apartments and keep them in order, a trustworthy person, sleeps in one of the ante-chambers. A bell of large dimensions is in connection with this room, large enough to arouse the whole house if wished. This man used to leave the hotel every day at day-break. As soon as he was gone the murderer entered the apartment of the Duchess.

"She was asleep; the first stab was aimed at the heart, but the blow missed and struck too low. The Duchess immediately pulled the bell-rope, which sounded the bell in the sleeping room of her femme-de-chambre. The latter, fancying that it was daylight, arose from all her cares during the beginning of the summons. Meantime the murderer was completing the bloody deed. The first movement of the Duchess was to rush towards a door which opened on her alcove into the other apartments; this door was doubtless locked and fastened. Marks of blood show the efforts made by the Duchess to burst it open. A little beyond there are marks of blood on some furniture. The Duchess, then, still avoiding the blows of the assassin, had reached the chimney-piece, where she pulled the bell for her waiting-woman, as also the bell communicating with the ante-chamber. The latter bell aroused one of the men-servants, who, hastily slipping on some article of clothes, rushed towards the sleeping-room of the Duchess and heard her cries. The waiting-woman every night before retiring to rest used to hang up the key of the bed-room in a place appointed for that purpose. This key had been removed. The cries of the Duchess had now nearly ceased, and were replaced by groans. The man-servant then made for the garden, in the hope of getting a view of the assassins. He saw no one, but he thought he beheld the Duke retiring precipitately from the window, which he was about to open. He now returned to the bed-room door, where he was joined by the waiting-woman. The obstacle which had impeded his entrance before had been removed. By whom? The chamber was in the deepest obscurity. The night-lamp had been removed to an adjacent room leading to the Duke's apartment. It was only on procuring lights that they discovered their unfortunate mistress weltering in her blood, which they was flowing from many wounds. Their first impulse was to call for help into the yard, which brought up the concierge and another servant. The Duke came last; his first movement was not, as has been reported, to throw him elf on the body of his wife; on the contrary, he feigned the most singular astonishment. 'But how could this have occurred?' he said: 'it is incredible—it is horrible!' He then assisted the servants in raising the body of the Duchess. Meantime the servants had given information to justice, and a messenger was sent to Inform General Tiource Sebastiani of the horrible event. The General was preparing to attend a review at the Champ de Mars; he immediately threw off his rectinentals, took a cab, and proceeded to the hotel. On beholding the mutilated body of his niece, the General fainted, and was some time before he came to himself again. The Duke remained apparently unmoved. The first step taken by the police on arriving was to guard every issue from the hotel, and allow no one to leave it, and to examine how the assassin had effected an entrance. No traces could be discovered—everything was closed as usual. M. Allard, an experienced police officer, declared at once that the blows were not given by the experienced hand of an ordinary assassin. A pistol loaded with ball was found on the floor, with fragments of flesh adhering to the butt-end; the Duke acknowledged the pistol to be his, and that he had brought it when he heard the cries of the Duchess; but the fragments of flesh induced the officer to cross-question the Duke. He first appeared offended at being questioned, but without asserting his innocence. He had on gloves: he was told to take them off, and the skin on his left hand was considerably lacerated. The thumb upon the palm of the left hand was bitten, and the thigh bore the mark as if from the violent pressure of a hand; there were also marks upon his legs, which might have been caused by stumbling against the furniture. On examining his apartments, some wounding sabres were discovered, in which the silver chasings of a dagger hilt and part of a handkerchief were found. There were also some articles still wet from being recently washed. When stripping, a cord, such as used to suspend powder-horns round the neck, fell from under his waistcoat; it had a noose at the end. On being questioned, he said he could not say why he carried it on his person, and hiding his face in his hands, exclaimed, 'I cannot endure the idea that I have killed my wife!' On examining the room, it was found that the handle of the door in the alcove was unscrewed. It was by this door that the Duchess endeavoured to escape. The Procureur at once placed him in charge of a garde du suresé.

"But two instruments connected with the crime have been discovered, the pistol and the cord. The knife with which the many stabs had been inflicted has not been discovered. In a drawer, however, of a desk which had escaped observation, a dagger has been brought to light. The blade had been recently washed, but there were blood-spots on the hilt. It is still to be ascertained if the blade fits the wounds of the victim."

We have already said that the existence of several wounds on the person of the Duke of Praslin was proved. Independently of those remarked on his hands, one is seen on his arm, and two on his knees. These have been discovered, one on the side and the other on the leg. When called on to explain how those wounds had been occasioned, the Duke, after having at first refused to do so, replied that it was the buckle of his trousers which had rubbed his skin, and that he gave himself a violent blow on the leg the evening before when getting into one of the railway carriages. When asked if he had mentioned these incidents to any one, he replied in the negative, but afterwards said that he had spoken of them to a person of his household. It is also known that after having found in the fireplace the remains of clothing, almost entirely consumed, and on which traces of blood were perceptible, it was discovered that the dressing-gown which the Duke wore was also stained with blood, and that it had been recently washed. The Duke, it is said, admitted this latter fact, but attributed the blood to his having come in contact with the body of the Duchess when he found her expiring; the cause of his washing out the stains of blood was, he said, to spare his children the sight of them.

The remains of the Duchess de Praslin were deposited, on Sunday, in the vaults of the Madeleine, her parish church. On Monday morning, at eight o'clock, a funeral service was celebrated in the same church, amidst the tears and grief of all present. The friends of the unhappy Duchess had joined General Tiburce Sebastiani, the Duke de Coligny, and several members of the Praslin family, and mingled over that tomb, so prematurely and so cruelly opened, their poignant regrets, their despair, and tears. Never was mourning more simple and sincere. What a how for Marshal Sebastiani! At this moment the unfortunate father is still, perhaps, ignorant of the fate of his beloved daughter. His arrival at Paris has been erroneously announced; his family, even, does not know, as we mentioned last week, where the Marshal is, and whether he will receive the fatal intelligence by one of the messengers despatched to him in four different directions, or learn it, unprepared, through the journals, or from the mouth of a stranger.

DEATH OF THE DUKE.

The death of the Duke de Praslin forms the denouement of this truly tragical affair. The Duke's death seems at first somewhat sudden, but the details of it, and the Paris papers of Wednesday announce his death. This event has increased the public dissatisfaction and excitement, and already some of the journals cry out against the authorities, and accuse them of favouritism in the Praslin affair. The cause of the Duke's death has been ascertained. It was with arsenic in a large dose that he poisoned himself, at the moment when he found that the charges against him were accumulating, and he began to render his arrest on him, and prosecution necessary. The severe vomitings which he experienced on Wednesday evening, and in the course of Thursday, appear alone to have retarded the effects of the fatal draught, after being checked on Friday and Saturday, on Sunday resumed its former force. It is stated that since his arrival at the prison all attempts to obtain from him by his weak state any confession or ex. lanation of his motives for the crime have been fruitless. The Duke refused to answer to the questions which were put to him in a vague and evasive way, and at other times said "I know nothing." It is added that he has not had an hour's sleep since the order of arrest first given for his apprehension.

The Duke de Choiseul-Praslin was the chief of the third branch of the ducal house of Choiseul, and the only member of it remaining—the last Duke de Choiseul of the second branch, who died when Governor of the Louvre, having left no male issue. The Duke de Praslin was born in 1804, and he was consequently in his forty-third year. In 1830 he married Fanny, daughter of Horace Sebastiani, now Marshal of France, and of Antoinette-Françoise-Jeanne de Coigny, who died young, and who was the cousin of the fame captive immortalised by the pen of André Chenier. By his marriage he has nine children, six daughters and three sons. The sixth child, who is a boy, is named Gaston-Louis-Philippe de Praslin. The Duke de Praslin was grandson of the Duke de Praslin who was a member of the States-General, and join d the monarchy at the commence of the city of Paris to the invaders. This Duke was created a peer during the Hundred Days, and was exiled at the second Restoration. In 1819 he was recalled by M. Decazes. He died in June, 1841. The estate of Praslin was erected into a duché-pairie in 1762. The Duke had a brother, Count Edgard de Praslin, who was born in 1805, and who married Mdlle Sheikler. He had also three sisters, who are married to persons of the highest nobility of the old monarchy. He was the owner of the chateau and grounds of Vaux near Melun, where he is said to have expended two millions of francs in repairs and embellishments, restoring it to its magnificence in the time of its former owner, Fouquet. The late Duchess was cherished by the poor of the environs of Vaux for her active and extensive benevolence.

THE READING, GUILDFORD, AND REIGATE RAILWAY.

